Introduction

The Federal government is the nation’s largest employer, with over 4 million employees, including more than 2 million Federal civilian employees working across a wide range of activities and job functions to advance critical missions in support of the American people. During the height of the COVID-19 pandemic, over half of these employees continued working in-person for the entire duration due to their job function, providing vital services that the nation relies on, often at risk to their own health. In April 2023, with the end of the public health emergency, OMB released additional guidance through Memorandum M-23-15: Measuring, Monitoring, and Improving Organizational Health and Organizational Performance in the Context of Evolving Agency Work Environments. This OMB memorandum directed agencies to “substantially increase meaningful in-person work at Federal offices, particularly at headquarters and equivalents” where hybrid work is mostly concentrated. Agencies were directed to consider how best to accomplish this given the unique circumstances, missions, and customers of each agency.

Over the past several years, employers across sectors have gained valuable insights into managing flexible work arrangements out of necessity—and the Federal government is no exception. During the pandemic, many agencies expanded their use of telework for the first time since the bipartisan Telework Enhancement Act of 2010. Other agencies have long had more flexible work arrangements, even prior to the COVID-19 pandemic.

As the nation emerged from the COVID-19 pandemic, these flexibilities have been incorporated into American work culture in all sectors and regions. Emerging research continues to demonstrate the value of in-person work to organizational health and organizational performance, at employers in all sectors but with benefits varying by role and team. For example, a recent Gallup study, found that declines in employee engagement were most pronounced among three groups: employees who work exclusively from home, employees who could work virtually but work exclusively on-site, and employees under 35.¹ Organizations with intentionally-designed hybrid work environments did not experience the same declines.

This Administration’s north star is ensuring that Federal agencies are centering organizational and operational decisions on delivering results for the American people. With the end of the public health emergency in early 2023, OMB has worked closely with Federal agencies to drive implementation of increased in-person office presence for the approximately half of the Federal workforce eligible to telework. Federal agencies are moving towards a posture where, on average, telework-eligible teams are working in-person at the office at least half of the time—in addition to the roughly half of federal employees that work entirely in person already. This enables agencies to tailor approaches based on their diverse operational needs while ensuring agencies achieve the benefits of meaningful in-person work for strong teams and organizations. This approach aligns the federal government’s posture to industry while allowing agencies to remaining competitive in the marketplace for talent. Agencies with a balanced posture can invest

As of May 2024, approximately 50 percent of federal workers worked every day in roles that are not eligible for telework, including those who work onsite providing healthcare to our veterans, inspecting our food supply, and managing Federal natural resources. At the same time, telework-eligible personnel spent approximately 60 percent of regular, working hours in-person, at agency-assigned job sites. As CBO noted in a recent report, these numbers indicate that the Federal workforce has telework rates generally in line with the private sector.²

Despite progress, the work continues to ensure Federal agencies have the right operating posture. A key tenet of M-23-15 is continuous evaluation, and OMB expects that agencies will continue to optimize their work environment and telework posture with mission delivery as their north star, even if they have completed initial implementation efforts. Agencies are also expected to ensure employees are complying with telework and performance management policies and to take action in places where individual or work unit performance is negatively impacted. Enclosed in this report are detailed, agency-by-agency rates of in-person work as well as copies of relevant agency telework and work environment policies as of June 2024 to provide additional context on individual agency practices.

While agencies reach more durable, long-term decisions about their telework and work environment posture, they are also considering the impacts of these changes on their real property portfolios. Agencies have undertaken considerable work to dispose of unneeded property, reduce costs, and improve overall utilization of real estate. Federal agencies are required to develop and maintain Real Property Capital Plans, consistent with guidance included in the OMB Circular A-11 Capital Programming Guide, and OMB Memoranda M-20-03 and M-22-14. However, OMB recognized more work needed to be done and also instructed agencies to align these Real Property Capital Plans with enacted funding levels and make appropriate requests in the President's Budget. It is important to note that the average age of Federal facilities is more than 50 years and older buildings are not efficient or optimally configured for modern work and often require significant modification. Many agencies recognized that they had more office space than needed prior to the pandemic and face continued challenges in right-sizing their real property portfolio, including specifically lack of funding from Congress to both reconfigure and consolidate office space to support mission needs. For example, through the appropriations process over the past decade, more than $13 billion in agency rent payments to the GSA Federal Buildings Fund intended predominately for capital construction and repair and alterations, have been redirected thereby limiting resources available to the GSA and its customer agency partners to execute major changes. The President's 2025 Budget proposes funding to optimize the GSA portfolio which would allow GSA to work with agencies to both dispose of unneeded buildings and consolidate into smaller space. Beyond proposals already included in the President's budget awaiting Congressional action, OMB is currently developing occupancy metrics that will require the calculation of average occupancy in federal buildings in the near term.

It is OMB's expectation that all agencies will arrive at intentional, competitive, and durable work environments that set agencies up for success in both the short and long-term, and that they appropriately manage their real property portfolio to support those decisions. It is also OMB's expectation that agencies will continue to prioritize mission delivery as their north star in all decisions they make to best deliver on agencies' vital missions and achieve results for the American people. OMB looks forward to continued collaboration with agencies and Congress in pursuit of this goal and welcomes further engagement on the topics discussed in this report.

Report Structure

Consistent with a joint explanatory statement accompanying the Further Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2024, OMB has prepared this report outlining agency in-person presence, agency telework policies, and real property portfolio management activities. OMB has coordinated with each of the 24 CFO Act agencies to prepare this report and their detailed responses to OMB are enclosed.

To provide the Committee with the requested detail on agency work environments, performance management practices, and real property portfolio management activity, OMB has compiled this report with three sections:

1. Narrative Summary Report – Summarized agency responses and overall government-wide posture on telework, employee performance management, and real property management practices.
2. Detailed Agency Responses (Appendix 1) – Narrative statements on employee performance management (1A) and real property management practices (1B) from each agency.
3. Agency Policies & Documents (Appendix 2) – Full and excerpted documents for each agency, including agency submissions to OMB in January 2024, agency telework policies, and collective bargaining agreements related to telework.

Scope, Definitions, & Key Terms

This document will reference several key terms that may have different meanings to different readers. For the purposes of this document, OMB uses the following definitions:

- Work Environment – Refers to the combination of physical, social, technological, and other factors that govern how and where employees accomplish their work.
- Telework – Refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work.³

- Telework-Eligible – Refers to a position that an agency has determined to be eligible for participation in its telework program, generally meaning that an incumbent could complete some or all of their regular job functions from an alternative worksite other than their assigned duty station.⁴
- Remote Work – Refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee’s position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work and where there is no expectation that they report to a government facility on a regular or recurring basis, meaning that they work from the alternative work site (usually their house) on a full-time basis.
- Regular Hours – Refers to regular (nonovertime) hours that were actually worked during the biweekly pay period, excluding paid leave hours and all other hours within the regular tour during which the employee was excused from duty. Exclude hours paid at an overtime rate.⁵
- In-Person Work – Refers to time during a regular work day spent at an employee’s regular work site or at other locations as needed throughout the day (e.g., meeting with stakeholders at other locations, engaging in field work, etc.). For the purposes of this report, this is defined as time spent not teleworking.

Additionally, OMB notes that the scope of this report is limited to only civilian employees and focuses primarily on the 24 CFO Act agencies, which collectively employ approximately 98% of federal civilian personnel.

Narrative Summary Report

The Federal Government as our Nation's Largest Employer

The Federal government is our nation's largest employer with over 2 million civilian employees spread across every county, deployed around the globe, and working a variety of arrangements every day to deliver for the American people. Virtually every occupation across the economy is represented in the federal workforce—doctors, police officers, machinists, data scientists, customer service representatives, and other common occupations—as well as many that are unique to the federal government like patent examiners and air traffic controllers. There is no 'typical' day for a federal employee and no one-size-fits-all snapshot that captures every particular case.

To maintain this workforce with the critical skills required to support agency missions, the Federal government hires approximately 200,000-300,000 new employees every year. Today, over a quarter of Federal employees have started their roles since the COVID-19 pandemic began in 2020. Our ability to attract and retain top talent on an ongoing basis is essential to the federal government's ability to serve the American people. To accomplish this, like all employers, the Federal government works to be competitive in the marketplace for talent. Agencies have a wide variety of personnel systems, hiring and workplace flexibilities, pay schemes, and other tools to ensure that they are able to staff the right personnel for the right roles, at the right time.

This diversity extends to work environment, where agencies maintain many different postures to best accomplish their work, ranging from situating roving mobile workers in the field to employees working 100% of the time in-person at a secure facility and every conceivable arrangement in between. Agency real estate portfolios follow from these decisions and are similarly composed of many different types of owned and leased facilities in communities all over the country, employed for different uses from manufacturing to scientific research to traditional office work. Even prior to the pandemic, agencies have also long offered telework flexibilities to the approximately half of federal employees that are eligible to telework to improve agency operations and align the federal workplace to market norms across the economy.

Prior to the COVID-19 pandemic, telework and remote work had been slowly growing across government since the passage of the bipartisan Telework Enhancement Act in 2010. Many agencies had telework programs in place prior to 2019 that allowed for both regular telework as well as situational telework in the event of inclement weather or other emergency conditions that made travel to an agency worksite too risky or problematic.

In 2020, the COVID-19 pandemic necessitated the swift move of the Federal workforce to a more hybrid work environment virtually overnight as agencies activated many of these procedures to move their telework-eligible workforce to a maximum telework status. However, approximately half of Federal employees remained at their posts, subject to emerging public health guidance and often at great personal risk to their health, to serve the American people. Like all employers, the Federal government worked to navigate the nexus of evolving public health guidance, employee expectations, mission needs, and other factors while working to ensure seamless service delivery.

In 2021, Executive Order 13991 established the Safer Federal Workforce Task Force to coordinate the Federal government's internal policy in an effort to keep employees safe and their agencies operating during the COVID-19 pandemic. Later that year, this group coordinated to issue OMB Memorandum 21-25, Integrating Planning for A Safe Increased Return of Federal Employees and Contractors to Physical Workplaces with Post-Reentry Personnel Policies and Work Environment, to direct and support agencies as they planned for the reentry of teleworking employees into agency workplaces. Over the course of 2022, most agencies completed initial reentry for these employees and began increasing their in-person presence, consistent with timely safety guidance and local conditions.

With the conclusion of the Public Health Emergency in 2023, OMB took further action directing agencies to “substantially increase meaningful in-person work at Federal offices, particularly at headquarters and equivalents, while still using flexible operational policies as an important tool in talent recruitment and retention” with the issuance of OMB Memorandum 23-15, Measuring, Monitoring, and Improving Organizational Health and Organizational Performance in the Context of Evolving Agency Work Environments. This memo directed agencies to adopt a thoughtful, performance-focused approach to increase in-person presence that balanced the demonstrated value of in-person work with economy-wide changes in work environment after the pandemic. The memo also emphasized that agencies should focus these efforts on optimizing for mission delivery to the American people.

Each agency head has authority to set its own work environment policies, and agencies have made adjustments in response to this guidance. In the months following the release of this memo, OMB worked closely with agencies to monitor implementation and provide support to agencies on areas of common challenge. For example, over the course of 2023, OMB hosted a bi-weekly working group for senior agency leaders tasked with implementation to work through areas of common concern. Topics included managing reenrollment in WMATA commuter benefits, reopening cafeterias, modernizing workspaces, best practices for tracking implementation of workplace postures, and human capital data standards. OMB has committed to helping agencies make the necessary changes to strike the right balance and providing support where needed to remove barriers to implementation.

All 24 CFO Act agencies updated their policies relating to their in-person work requirements and have worked to execute these policy changes. For additional detail on the policies that agencies have communicated to OMB as well as their workforces, please refer to Appendix 2 – Agency Telework Policies & Documents.

Benchmarking Post-Pandemic Work Arrangements

As agencies have worked to adopt policies that best supported their missions, OMB has closely monitored both agency policies as well as what peer employers are doing across the economy to set reasonable goals for agencies that balance flexibility and in-person work. While no-one-size-fits-all policy can apply universally across the government, Federal agencies are moving towards a posture where telework-eligible teams are working in-person at the office at least half of the time, on average.

OMB believes that this target allows agencies to continue to be competitive employers while also making a significant investment in the organizational health of our workforce by enabling collaboration, promoting mentorship and learning, and helping teams to innovate as they tackle problems of ever-increasing complexity. It also mirrors many of the trends we see in the private sector as other employers arrive at a similar posture. For example, as of May 2024, data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) Current Population Survey (CPS) found that, among ‘persons who teleworked or worked at home for pay,’ workers in the private sector and federal government spent a similar percentage of their work week working in person as they did teleworking.⁶ This was further validated by a recent Congressional Budget Office report that found that, while telework by Federal employees spiked to rates nearly identical to the private sector in 2021, Federal employees returned to in-person work at rates comparable to the private sector by 2022.⁷

Additional academic research has further validated this view. As of June 2024, a monthly survey conducted by the University of Chicago, Instituto Tecnológico Autónomo de México, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Stanford University on post-pandemic work arrangements found that, on average, employers planned for approximately 2.2 days per week of telework for their employees⁸—which translates to approximately 56% of time spent in-person, consistent with OMB’s expectation that agencies achieve at least 50% of time in-person for teleworking teams.

In-Person Work Today across the Federal Government

All 24 CFO Act agencies shared time and attendance data with OMB for two two-week pay periods in May 2024: the period that ended on May 4th and the period that ended on May 18th. Because payroll data can fluctuate period-to-period based on exogenous factors that affect employee schedules (e.g., holidays, inclement weather, leave schedules, etc.), OMB has averaged these two pay periods to provide an overview of in-person work across government.

⁷ <https://www.cbo.gov/system/files/2024-04/59970-Compensation.pdf>

⁸ Barrero, Jose Maria, Nicholas Bloom, and Steven J. Davis, 2021. “Why working from home will stick,” National Bureau of Economic Research Working Paper 28731. <https://wfhresearch.com/data/>

- The federal government employed 2.28 million civilian personnel.
- Of these 2.28 million personnel, the majority – 1.2 million or 54% – worked fully on-site, as their jobs require them to be physically present during all working hours.
- The remaining 1.1 million or 46.4% of civilian personnel were telework-eligible.
- Of the total 2.28 million personnel, 228 thousand or 10% of civilian personnel were in remote positions where there was no expectation that they worked in-person on any regular or recurring basis.
- Among all federal employees, excluding remote workers that do not have a work-site to report to, 79.4% of regular, working hours were spent in-person.
- Among the subset of federal workers that are telework-eligible, excluding remote workers, 61.2% of regular, working hours were spent in-person.

While these averages represent a government-wide snapshot of time spent in-person as opposed to telework, there is significant variation agency-to-agency in their progress towards OMB's goal of 50% of time spent in-person among teleworkers.

For a detailed snapshot of agency status, please refer to the Table 1 on the next page.

Notes:

1. The data presented represents averages from two pay periods in April/May, 2024 ending on May 4th and May 18th collected from agency time and attendance systems.
2. Rates of in-person work are calculated by calculating the portion of the total number of regular hours (excluding leave, overtime, and other premium and non-pay hours) that are performed via telework (both situational and recurring) versus those not performed via telework.
3. Due to the need for agencies to combine datasets between HR and Payroll data and different update cycles for those systems, some agencies have slight rounding discrepancies (<0.5%)—for example, the SBA has a discrepancy of approx. 28 FTE between its overall headcount and telework-eligible headcount.
4. Remote employees are a subset of telework-eligible employees and may include employees working under reasonable accommodations, military spouses, domestic employees teleworking overseas, and some number of employees better classified as mobile workers. Some agencies also have large numbers of short-term or surge personnel in remote roles based on unique mission needs (e.g., most of SBA’s remote workers are in temporary disaster roles, NSF’s intermittent experts and consultants (<130 work days/yr.) are remote).

Managing a Hybrid Workforce for Productivity & Performance

Following the passage of the Telework Enhancement Act in 2010 (P.L.111-292), each agency head was directed to establish a telework program, policy framework, and related training program for eligible employees and managers.⁹ As part of this statute, Congress also specifically stipulated in 5 U.S.C. 6503 that agencies must treat teleworkers and non-teleworkers the same for the purposes of “periodic appraisals of job performance of employees; training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees; work requirements; or other acts involving managerial discretion.”

Today, in accordance with this statute, agencies have written policies, including legally binding collective bargaining agreements, in place to govern their telework program and ensure high levels of employee performance. Typically, these agency policies require all teleworking employees to enter into a mutually agreed-upon written telework agreement with their supervisor, on behalf of the agency, that defines baseline expectations for participation in the telework program as well as any regular schedule for telework if applicable. In general, these agreements are re-negotiated or re-evaluated at least annually by supervisors and employees to ensure continued mutual agreement and achievement of program goals. Agencies also have policies governing the frequency and character of mandatory training requirements for employees participating in or managing employees participating in their telework program. In cases where employees violate the terms of their telework agreement or have their agreement otherwise terminated for misconduct or performance issues, agencies are expected to follow internal processes for taking corrective action. For further information about government-wide telework policy as well as OPM’s annual report to Congress on the Status of Telework in the Federal Government, please see <https://www.opm.gov/telework/>.

In addition to their agency-specific telework program, agencies also maintain employee performance management programs in alignment with Title 5 requirements, other applicable authorities, and merit system principles. These programs apply to all employees and are designed to encourage high levels of individual and organizational performance in pursuit of mission goals. Notably, because agencies are specifically prohibited from treating teleworking and non-teleworking employees differently for this purpose,¹⁰ these programs do not distinguish between the two groups. In general, these programs establish an annual performance management cycle based on a performance plan that defines an employee’s goals, key success metrics, and other criteria. These plans are agreed to between supervisors and employees and form the basis of periodic appraisals (e.g., year-end, mid-year) to evaluate performance and provide feedback to employees for the purposes of development. For further information about government-wide performance management practices, please see <https://www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/performance-management/>.

In addition to this summary, OMB collected narrative statements from each of the 24 CFO Act agencies on their approach to managing employee performance and productivity in a hybrid environment that are captured in Appendix 1A - Detailed Agency Responses on Employee Productivity and Performance Management.

Approaches to Real Property Portfolio Management

OMB requested that each CFO Act agency provide a description of its efforts to reduce its office portfolio and to discuss its utilization rate. The responses that the agencies submitted are provided below with light editing to enable the agencies to speak directly to their work in these areas.

With regard to the cost of the government's office portfolio, data in the Federal Real Property Profile (FRPP) show that annual operations and maintenance cost at owned office buildings is $1.993 billion. The annual operations and maintenance cost at leased office buildings is $1.342 billion and annual office lease cost is $4.751 billion. The total annual cost of the owned and leased office portfolio is $8.086 billion.

Data is not currently collected to calculate an average office space utilization rate, but OMB is developing occupancy metrics that will require the calculation of annual average occupancy in the near term.

Office space designated as "underutilized" in the FRPP includes both owned and leased office space. There is 23.280 million square feet of underutilized owned office space with annual operation and maintenance cost of $67.169 million. The portfolio contains .766 million square feet of underutilized leased space with an annual operation and maintenance cost of $.481 million and an annual lease cost of $13.696 million. The total cost of owned and leased office space designated as "underutilized" in FRPP is therefore $81.346 million, approximately one-percent of the total cost of owned and leased office space.

It is important to note that "underutilized" office space is often a required asset in a specific location by one or more agencies. The cost of maintaining an owned asset that has become underutilized due to staff reduction, for example, may be a more cost-effective solution than constructing a smaller building that would be fully utilized or leasing commercial office space (if commercial space available in the required location).

Table 1A. Agency Approaches to Performance Management

Agency	Description
Department of Agriculture	At USDA, performance is not a program or an initiative, but the qualitative and quantitative delivery, by organizations and individuals, of the USDA mission to the public and other stakeholders. Setting clear expectations is the foundation for effective performance management. The USDA performance management program ensures that there is alignment with USDA strategic performance goals and results, cascading from the most senior levels down to individual employees by clearly defining outcome-based performance standards and measures in plans, having accountability at all levels thru timely and ongoing feedback and learning and differentiating between acceptable and unacceptable performance while creating a culture of engagement and recognition for work done well. In accordance with 5 United States Code (U.S.C.) 4302, Establishment of Performance Appraisal Systems, 5 Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) Part 430, Performance Management, and OPM’s approval of the Performance Appraisal System (System), USDA’s Non-Executive Performance Management Program (Program) provides for: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Establishing employee performance plans, including elements and performance standards; 2. Communicating performance plans to employees at the beginning of an appraisal period; 3. Evaluating each employee during the appraisal period on the employee's elements and standards; 4. Recognizing and rewarding employees whose performance so warrants; 5. Assisting employees in improving unacceptable performance; and 6. Reassigning, reducing in grade, or removing employees who continue to have unacceptable performance, but only after an opportunity to demonstrate acceptable performance. The approach to employee performance management does not make any distinction between teleworkers and remote workers.
Department of Commerce	The Department operates several employee performance management systems, including the General Schedule (GS) pay system and two pay-for-performance alternative personnel management systems. Under these performance management systems, managers and organizational leaders are responsible for setting and monitoring performance standards for their assigned employees. Due

	to the diverse nature of the Department’s mission – from examining patent applications to monitoring hurricanes and space weather – managers have flexibility to set and evaluate appropriate metrics for each employee and associated responsibilities. As outlined in the Department’s telework and remote work plan, performance standards for telework-ready employees and remote employees must be the same as performance standards for employees with traditional work arrangements. Expectations for performance, including results for which an employee will be held accountable, are to be clearly addressed in each employee’s performance plan. In addition, the Department provides managers with several tools to assess an employee’s readiness for telework or remote work and each Servicing HR Office employees both a Telework Coordinator or Telework Program Manager and Employee Relations specialists available to assist managers in addressing individual concerns regarding telework, remote work, and performance management. An employee will not be authorized to telework if their performance does not comply with the terms of their telework agreement (5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3)). Per the Department telework and remote work plan, employees will not be authorized to work remotely if their performance does not comply with the terms of their remote work agreement.
Department of Defense	The majority of civilian employees in the Department of Defense are covered by the Defense Civilian Performance Management and Appraisal Program (DPMAP), which is outlined by DoD Instruction 1400.25, Volume 431. This program falls under the approved performance appraisal system that is covered in DoDI 1400.25, DoD Civilian Personnel Management System: Performance Management, Vol 430. DPMAP is composed of a process of planning work and setting expectations, continually monitoring performance, evaluating performance in a summary fashion, and finally recognizing and rewarding good performance. This performance management process applies to all covered employees, regardless of whether the employee is physically present in a government office or working in a telework or remote status. The DPMAP process is flexible and dependent on continuous communication between the supervisor and employee via numerous means/modes of communication (e.g., email, telephone, in-person, MS Teams, etc.). The supervisor and employee are vital to the process of planning and monitoring performance management within the DoD to ensure mission accomplishment. Each step of the DPMAP process represents a continuum of events that must occur at certain points within the cycle. For example, performance plans that set expectations are generally created within the first thirty days of a new performance cycle, progress reviews are required mid cycle, but are encouraged to occur multiple times throughout the cycle. All three mandatory steps of the DPMAP appraisal cycle are easily monitored (which includes appraisals at the end of the performance cycle) through a reporting system imbedded into the MyPerformance Appraisal Tool.

	MyPerformance Appraisal Tool allows DoD Components to track each mandatory step of the appraisal cycle to ensure compliance with the established policy and guidance. From the policy perspective, there is no difference in monitoring performance in employees completing work in person versus employees performing work remotely on an approved telework agreement.
Department of Education	It is ED’s policy to manage employee performance by aligning performance elements to the strategic and organizational plans of ED and each respective Principal Office (PO), focusing on the critical elements/results of the employee’s official work duties, which may be found in source documents such as position descriptions or other written work assignments, communicating clear expectations, providing constructive feedback, and objectively assessing performance against established metrics. The overall goal of the performance management system is to foster a transparent and high-performing workforce geared toward achieving ED’s mission. The performance elements in employee plans cascade from the Senior Executive plans which in turn link to the organizational goals and metrics. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers are treated the same for purposes of: 1) periodic appraisals of job performance of employees; 2) training, rewarding, reassigning promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees; 3) work requirements. Management expectations for performance are addressed in an employee's performance plan, regardless of whether the employee is a teleworker. When an employee participates in telework, expectations related to accountability do not differ by virtue of the telework arrangement. Following clear and consistent performance management principles and techniques results in equitable assessment of performance for all employees. The Deputy Secretary and Performance Improvement Office (PIO) facilitate strategic planning, goal setting, reporting, and monitoring to improve operations and achieve the agency’s mission. To this end, ED measures its organizational performance through a framework that includes planning; internal analysis and review; and reporting. In accordance with Circular A-11 and the framework described above, the Deputy Secretary and PIO hold quarterly data-driven performance review meetings with agency leaders focused on key priorities to drive progress toward achieving their goals. The results of the organization’s annual efforts are found in the FY 2023 Annual Performance Report (APR) and FY 2025 Annual Performance Plan (APP). The APR provides narrative and data on the ED’s progress toward the strategic goals and objectives outlined in its Fiscal Years [FYs] 2022–2026 Strategic Plan, and the APP details the Department’s planned strategies and activities to achieve those strategic goals and objectives.
Department of Energy	The Department has a robust performance management process that is applied equally to non-teleworkers and teleworkers or remote employees. In alignment with the 2010 Telework Enhancement Act, DOE employees—regardless of telework, remote work, or onsite reporting status—are held to the same

	performance standards and expectations tied to organizational performance. Each Departmental Element (DE) is required to develop strong metrics for organizational performance annually. Aligned with each fiscal year, performance plans are required for every DOE employee. All employees must have at least three Critical Elements focused on intended results and provide credible measures to assess whether the intended results were successfully achieved. These Critical Elements must be aligned with their DE’s strategic goals that are set annually to accomplish DOE’s overall mission. During the evaluation process, Rating Officials must hold telework/remote employees to the same performance and assessment standards as non-teleworking employees. All DOE employees, regardless of where they work, are accountable for the results they produce during the performance year, including the quality of the work produced and the timeliness of the work products submitted. Rating Officials are required to accurately assess individual employee performance toward the work unit’s overall performance in achieving organizational goals. DOE has separate telework and remote work agreements each employee and their supervisor must sign before starting. The telework and remote work agreements outline specific employee responsibilities while working at home as well as work expectations and performance. Supervisors can add specific work expectations personalized for each employee if not already outlined in the agreement. Employee participation in either telework or remote work is subject to management approval; management has the discretion to suspend or cancel telework or remote work agreements when doing so is in the best interest of the Department (e.g., employee performance drops below the successful level, adverse impact on the organization’s operation). Upon signing a remote work agreement, the employee’s ability to work remotely becomes a condition of employment. Failing to maintain any condition of employment, including the ability to work remotely, may result in administrative action including removal from Federal service. If management needs to terminate a remote work agreement to address an employee’s performance or conduct issue, any associated expenses to relocate back to an official DOE site are the responsibility of the employee and are not funded by DOE.
Department of Health and Human Services	The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS or Department) takes the performance of its employees seriously. The Department holds all employees accountable for their performance based on a comprehensive and inclusive approach to employee performance management. The same standards apply to all employees regardless of position, including those who work onsite, participate in telework, or work remotely. All employees are held accountable for their performance through well-structured performance management plans and established performance expectations under the Department’s Performance Management Policy, which align with the Department’s strategic priorities. The Department’s Performance Management Policy requires supervisors to include “critical elements” in their employees’ Performance Management Appraisal Plan (PMAP) to ensure employees are focused on delivering results within their organizations and for the American people, irrespective of worksite. As an example, one of the critical

	elements is customer experience, assessed based on feedback received from internal and external customers indicating general satisfaction. Senior executive performance plans are also written and assessed based on OPM standards and competencies that advance a results-driven environment. The performance management cycle includes supervisors and employees collaborating to establish performance expectations, conduct at least one progress review, and participate in an end-of-year assessment. If there are performance issues – regardless of work status – supervisors are expected to address them in accordance with applicable laws, regulations, policies, and bargaining agreements. The Department is committed to continuous improvement and accountability of individual and organizational performance and our performance management system. In fiscal year 2025, HHS plans to utilize and implement OPM’s Performance Appraisal Assessment Tool (PAAT) as one of several tools to ensure the effectiveness of our employee performance management program. The PAAT is an evaluation process conducted by OPM, that assesses the effectiveness of a Department’s Performance Management Program, including areas of strength and opportunities for improvement. Based on the results, the Department will develop and implement an action plan to leverage the strengths identified and address opportunities for improvement. The Department also implements various performance management and employee engagement activities. Annually, the Department provides a training series for “Performance Management Month.” In fiscal year 2024, the Department will provide three trainings to strengthen manager’s and employees' implementation of the performance management process. These trainings include; <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Fostering a Results-Focused and Measurable Performance Culture • Tracking Results that Drive Powerful and Effective Feedback • Emotional Intelligence (EI) for Federal Excellence
Department of Homeland Security	The Department's performance management program aligns individual performance requirements and goals with the supervisor, Component, and Departmental strategic priorities to ensure that DHS is positioned to meets its mission requirements and help each employee accomplish goals identified in his or her individual performance plan. Additionally, supervisors and employees are provided guidance to ensure performance plan goals are SMART—specific, measurable, achievable, realistic and timely. For teleworkers and remote workers alike, a signed telework/remote work agreement and completion of mandatory training are required to take place before an employee is allowed to work from home (5 U.S.C. § 6502 (b)(2) and 5 U.S.C. § 6503). The DHS performance management program promotes continuous performance conversations, engagement activities, and regular coaching and feedback between supervisors and employees throughout the performance period. The Department's mobility program supports employee productivity by enabling seamless access to necessary resources and the ability to conduct business from a variety of devices. Employees can utilize mobile phones,

	tablets, and virtual desktops to access work applications, communicate with colleagues, and perform their duties effectively, regardless of their physical location. This flexibility ensures that teleworkers and remote workers remain connected and productive, aligning with the Department's mission and strategic goals. Additionally, the Department has the ability to monitor how often and how long employees access their computers. Overall, the performance management approach for teleworkers and remote workers is integrated with the same principles applied to in-person employees, ensuring consistency and alignment with Departmental goals.
Department of Housing and Urban Development	employees, supervisory employees, and Senior Level and Senior Executive Service staff all require that critical elements and performance standards have clearly defined performance requirements that are quantifiable, measurable, results-oriented, and tied to the Department's strategic plan. The non-supervisory and supervisory employee performance systems also require several performance elements to reference other agency strategic planning documents, such as organizational operating plans, annual organizational/agency performance plan goals and metrics, and/or budgetary priorities. Performance goals are required to cascade down from the SES executive's plan to their subordinate staff. All HUD performance management systems require annual performance plans with annual ratings and at least one formal mid-cycle progress review in addition to continuous performance monitoring. In accordance with HUD's Flexiplace (Telework/Remote Work) Policy, the performance of telework/remote work participants is evaluated consistent with the applicable HUD performance management system, such that telework/remote work participants are treated the same as non-participants regarding performance management. The primary criteria for telework/remote work approval decisions are the portability of the existing duties of the position and the frequency that the position requires performance of duties in the office, placing mission accomplishment and employee performance in the forefront of eligibility decisions. Employees must be able to fulfill the performance expectations of the essential functions of their positions in order to participate in telework/remote work.
Department of Justice	The Department of Justice's existing overall approach to employee performance management is the same for those who are in-person, telework, and/or remote. DOJ requires on-going engagement and commitment to each phase of the performance management process from individuals at all levels of an agency. Non-supervisory employees, supervisors, and leadership work collectively throughout various phases of the performance management cycle ensuring the successful execution of each step in the performance planning and evaluation process. In addition, DOJ fully utilizes technology to collect performance management data, facilitate effective communication, and collaborate between employees and supervisors who may not be occupying the same physical location.
Department of Labor	In the Department of Labor (DOL), performance assessments are carefully grounded in the clear, measurable expectations outlined in each employee's

	individual performance management plan, rather than the nature of their work arrangement, whether remote or onsite. DOL managers are required to communicate performance expectations on a regular and frequent basis. This approach ensures that employees are always aware of what is expected from them, aligning their daily work with broader organizational goals. Individual performance plans outline the specific levels of required performance. These plans are designed to reflect each employee's role in achieving the DOL's strategic priorities, with clear benchmarks for success at all levels of performance. Given the dynamic nature of work, DOL managers are adept at revising performance expectations in response to changing priorities. This adaptability ensures that employees remain focused and aligned with the Department's current needs. Our technological infrastructure facilitates efficient communication and the effective monitoring of performance in DOL. This encompasses expanded access to government-furnished equipment (GFE), the Microsoft Office Suite, with a heavy emphasis on the requirement to use MS Teams for in-duty status communications, and robust IT support for remote access, thus facilitating an extremely efficient and secure teleworking environment. Fundamentally, this platform fosters an environment where DOL can confidently assert that exceptional performance outcomes and workforce management practices are not only achievable but expected. DOL continues to offer comprehensive trainings focused on telework best practices and managing remote and hybrid teams. Examples of available training include sessions for supervisors on performance management success skills, offers on-demand eLearning performance-related series, including addressing poor performance; and distributes monthly newsletters to the supervisory and non-supervisory workforce to underscore the importance of everyone's role in the performance management process. These communications cover a range of topics, such as performance planning, feedback, accountability, and managing the performance of teleworkers. DOL emphasizes regular communication and engagement in its performance management guidance to agencies, highlighting its commitment to maintaining high performance accountability standards. Other live trainings include a supervisory series that aims to address employee misconduct or to provide leave category refreshers. From robust live events to state-of-the-art on-demand eLearning lectures and microlearning content, DOL's supervisory and non-supervisory employees have access to resources that enable them to thrive and surpass their individual performance expectations, regardless of their onsite or telework work arrangements.
Department of State	EMPLOYEE LEVEL: All employees, whether teleworking or reporting onsite full time, are held to the same performance measures. Per the Department's telework policy codified in 3 FAM 2360: All employees, whether working onsite, teleworking, or remote must be treated equally for purposes of periodic appraisals of job performance, training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, work requirements, removing employees, and other acts involving managerial discretion.

	Supervisors also retain the discretion to cancel, suspend, or modify an employee’s telework arrangement due to employee performance. ENTERPRISE LEVEL: The Department collects enterprise-level key performance indicator (KPI) achievement data from bureaus which self-report progress. Aligned to Strategic Objectives in the Joint Strategic Plan, from 2018-2021 the Department tracked approximately 130 KPIs yearly. Available KPIs data suggest that State and USAID improved their performance by 15% from 2018-2021, based on the number of KPIs that were met or exceeded in each of those years (see table below), with a highest level of reporting at the end of JSP cycle in 2021 (88% of all indicators submitted results). FY 2022 is the first year of reporting on the current 2022-2026 JSP. As data on these KPI’s is reported annually in late spring/early summer, we will be able to compare progress on the Department’s current Strategic Objectives (FY 2022 to FY 2023), beginning in summer of 2024.
Department of the Interior	Telework may be authorized only to the extent that an approved telework arrangement does not diminish employee or organizational performance, and any agreement must be reviewed by the employee’s first-line supervisor to determine whether the proposed agreement is in the best interest of the Department’s mission. The Department continues to refine the telework program by implementing government-wide best practices, providing training to supervisors and employees, and improving our information technology infrastructure. The Department’s current telework policy, Personnel Bulletin 21-07, establishes criteria and procedures under which eligible employees may be authorized to telework and emphasizes that approved telework arrangements cannot diminish employee or organizational performance or impede mission delivery, consistent with the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and OPM Guidelines. DOI recognizes that our current hybrid workforce model may need periodic course adjustments and the Department is committed to finding effective ways to enhance our ability to continually monitor, measure, and evaluate agency performance. The Department establishes the policy, authority, and responsibilities for performance management in 370 Department Manual 430, Performance Management System – the objectives of which is to articulate the expectations of individual and organizational performance, to provide a meaningful process by which employees, including telework and remote work employees, can be recognized for noteworthy contributions to the organization and its mission, and to provide a mechanism to improve performance as necessary. In accomplishing these objectives, individual and organizational goals will be communicated to employees, such that the individual understands how his/her job responsibilities and requirements support the overall strategic mission and goals of DOI, the Bureau/Office, and/or work unit. The individual’s responsibility for accomplishing organizational goals will be identified; performance will be monitored and evaluated; and the rating of record will be used as a basis for

	appropriate personnel actions, including rewarding noteworthy performance and taking action to address unacceptable performance. Performance standards and management expectations for teleworking employees must be the same as the performance standards for non-teleworking employees. Like non-teleworking employees, teleworkers are held accountable for the results they produce. Decisions to deny or terminate a telework agreement must be based on mission-related reasons and what is in the best interest of the agency (e.g., telework arrangement fails to meet organizational needs; employee’s performance does not comply with terms of telework agreement; staffing issues lead to inadequate office coverage)—and not for personal reasons. Performance standards for teleworking employees must be the same as performance standards for non-teleworking employees. Management expectations for performance should be clearly addressed in the employee’s performance plan, and the performance plan should be reviewed to ensure the standards do not create inequities or inconsistencies between teleworking and non-teleworking employees. Like non-teleworking employees, teleworkers are held accountable for the results they produce. Each employee is appraised against their performance standards, regardless of location.
Department of the Treasury	The Department of the Treasury employs a uniform approach to employee performance management without distinguishing between workers whose reporting cadence is entirely onsite, remote workers, or workers who participate in the Department’s telework program. The Department provides specific training for teleworkers on how to contribute as a member of a hybrid team and for supervisors on successfully managing teleworkers.
Department of Transportation	The USDOT’s overall approach to employee performance management for teleworkers and remote workers is the same as employees who work in-person. The supervisor evaluates the employee’s performance by assessing performance metrics against the pre-established elements and standards in the employee’s performance plan. The supervisor assigns a performance rating based on the work performed during the appraisal period. The telework and remote work employees must achieve “Fully Successful” or equivalent to maintain eligibility to telework or work remotely. In FY2023, two DOT employees had their telework arrangement rescinded as a result of poor performance. Concerning achieving results, telework and remote work employees are treated no differently than employees working in-person. The performance elements and standards for teleworkers and remote workers shall remain the same as other workers performing the same or similar duties. In accordance with the FY 2001 DOT Appropriations Act, P.L. 106-346 § 359, 5 U.S.C. § 650 and the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 (Public Law 111-292), 5 U.S.C. Chapter 65, the USDOT has established USDOT policies and bulletins that address managing telework and remote work with appropriate controls for performance accountability.

	focused on serving Veterans, their families, caregivers, and survivors. Employee productively and performance has improved substantially, enabling VA to deliver more benefits to more Veterans than ever before. Employee performance management routines are focused on metrics the measure how we are serving Veterans and meeting our mission. For example, on March 19, 2024 VA reported it has processed its one millionth Veteran benefits claim in fiscal year 2024. VA reached this milestone March 4 — the earliest in VA history and nearly six weeks faster than the previous all-time record (from fiscal year 2023). VA has completed almost 35% more claims than at this point last year. On May 21, 2024 VA announced that Veteran claims pending over 125 days – known as the backlog – has decreased by more than 100,000 claims since December. For Veteran healthcare on May 24, VA released data showing that VA improved wait times for new patient appointments in primary care and mental health care across the VA health care system. For new patients in April 2024, there was an 11% decrease in average wait times for VA primary care and a 7% decrease in average mental health wait times compared to same time last year. These improved wait times come at a time when VA is delivering more care to more Veterans than ever before. Compared to the same time period last year (which was a record-breaking year for appointments), VA completed 11% more new patient appointments – including nearly 13% more new patient mental health appointments. Additionally, more than 400,000 Veterans have enrolled in VA health care over the past year, a 30% increase year-over-year. This is critical because Veterans who come to VA are proven to have better or equal health outcomes, higher satisfaction scores, and trust VA outpatient care at 91.8%. More than 5.4 million Veterans have been screened by VA for toxic exposures: These screenings are a critical step to detecting, understanding, and treating potentially life-threatening health conditions. Of the 5.4 million Veterans who have received the screening, 44% reported at least one potential exposure.
Environmental Protection Agency	Performance management processes are guided by Agency policy and collective bargaining agreements, and are identical for teleworkers, remote workers and those working entirely-in person. EPA has an established, comprehensive system in place to exercise the necessary oversight on performance and progress towards achieving priority programmatic goals. Individual organizations’ performance measures cascade from externally reported long-term and annual performance goals in the Strategic and Annual Performance Plan and are supported by internal measures on regional and headquarters office bowling charts. Headquarters programs and regions engage together each year in establishing regional measures towards achieving programmatic goals. Every regional and headquarters office reports progress on bowling chart measures and conducts business reviews at least quarterly to assess results to date and discuss ways to make continuous improvements. EPA’s senior career leadership conduct quarterly performance reviews regarding overall progress towards long-term performance goals, topics identified as enterprise risks, and

General Services Administration	For more than two decades – across multiple administrations – GSA has promoted workplace flexibility as a tool for enhancing mission delivery. Just prior to the pandemic, nearly 40 percent of GSA’s total work hours were performed through telework or remote work. And, even as workplace flexibility has steadily increased over the past decade, GSA has continued to deliver on its mission – increasing the agency’s output of overall work performed and improving customer satisfaction scores year after year. Indeed, GSA’s two largest service areas (acquisition and real estate) have steadily improved in performance and customer satisfaction over the past decade. And looking at the past four-year period (2019 to 2023), as workforce flexibility increased, many of those metrics are currently at or near an all-time high. Examples include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● The Federal Acquisition Service’s (FAS) Total Acquisition Business Volume increased from $65 billion in FY19 to $102 billion in FY23 – a jump of 57 percent. ● From 2019 to 2023, FAS’s Supplier Satisfaction Scores rose from 3.65 to 3.87 (out of 5). ● The share of Multiple Award Schedule spending awarded to small business climbed from 34.2% in FY19 to 37.1% in FY23. ● The Public Buildings Service (PBS) Total Contract Awards and Modifications increased from $3.3 billion in FY19 to $3.6 billion in FY23. ● Customer Satisfaction with PBS projects (leases and reimbursable work authorizations) reached an all-time high of 88 percent by the end of FY23. In other words, GSA’s organizational metrics reflect the agency’s continued and current success in mission delivery – with high customer satisfaction scores and sustained performance across priority initiatives – while creating additional opportunities for taxpayer savings. And in accordance with OMB M-23-15, GSA Leadership reviews these metrics on a quarterly basis and identifies opportunities for improvement if measures do not meet intended targets.

	As GSA’s customer satisfaction scores have remained strong through the past several years, our work environment metrics, particularly for the agency’s workforce have continued to grow as we have adapted to deliver for partner federal agencies. Highlights include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Enterprise employee engagement scores surged to 85% on the Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey in 2023, earning GSA 2nd out of 26 midsize Federal Agencies on the Best Places to Work Rankings (Partnership for Public Service). • Employee satisfaction scores eclipsed 89% on quarterly workforce pulse surveys when employees were asked about working in GSA’s current hybrid environment. • Retention rates have remained well above 90% for the last several years, consistent with GSA's pre-pandemic levels and stronger than baseline levels across federal government and the private sector. All of this while GSA has consistently applied performance management principles across our workforce guided by GSA’s Associate Performance Plan Appraisal System (APPAS) and Associate Performance Recognition System (APRS), which link individual performance to organizational performance. For all employees, including those who engage in telework or remote work, GSA follows OPM guidance on performance management to set expectations for employees, monitor performance in regular check-ins and mid-year reviews, provide development opportunities, and rate performance. This ensures that employees are meeting individual goals and contributing to organizational performance, meeting customer needs, and driving our mission forward.
National Aeronautics and Space Administration	NASA’s long-standing telework and remote work policies and processes continue to enable a high-performing workforce that delivers the mission of the Agency every day to benefit the Nation. These workforce flexibilities are an important tool for NASA to remain competitive in the modern job market, in a number of areas: 1) Both new hires and current employees, especially our highly skilled, sought-after technical workforce, are increasingly asking for more permanent telework capabilities and other virtual collaboration tools; 2) A hybrid environment increases talent-sharing among NASA Centers and maximizes cross-Center career opportunities without employees having to physically move; and 3) A telework/remote work-enabled workforce allows us to access a greater, more diverse talent pool across the country, including to areas where people previously could not work as a NASA civil servant if there was not a NASA facility nearby. In the same vein, having a geographically dispersed, telework-ready workforce helps maintain readiness and continuity of operations during emergent conditions, such as a regionalized weather emergency or a pandemic, for example. NASA’s Employee Performance Communication System (EPCS) – which covers all employees other than SES, ST, and SL – establishes a systematic

	process for planning, monitoring, developing, assessing, and rewarding performance that contributes to the achievement of the agency’s vision, mission, and goals; creates a strategically linked set of performance expectations for employees; and promotes a performance culture that focuses on two-way communication between employee and supervisor, and holds employees accountable for results. EPCS stresses the continuous nature of performance management (PM), reinforcing to supervisors and employees that PM continues beyond the dedicated activity timelines for performance plans, reviews, and annual ratings. This focus on performance expectations at all levels of the agency applies to employees onsite, teleworking, or fully remote and uses the same performance metrics. During telework and remote work, supervisors are required to ensure their employees are reporting for duty virtually and completing their assigned work on a timely basis. In terms of individual employee performance, NASA does not differentiate performance of employees by whether they are on-site or off-site. Under NASA’s performance management policies, poor performance for any employee, whether on-site, telework or remote, is addressed using the authorities and procedures prescribed by 5 U.S.C. §§ 4301-4315 and OPM’s implementing regulations. Supervisors also are expected to check in with their employees frequently, whether on-site or off-site, to ensure that mission goals and requirements are being met in an accurate and timely manner. Conversations should occur throughout the year to identify opportunities for growth, improvement, and development. If performance issues exist, managers are expected to utilize performance tools and counseling to address those issues as they arise, allowing employees the opportunity to improve performance shortfalls. Supervisors are also encouraged to use feedback during mid-term performance evaluations and year-end performance evaluations to identify opportunities to maximize performance as well as to address any performance shortfalls, to include potentially putting lower-performing employees –regardless of their location – on performance improvement plans. NASA recognizes that we may need periodic course adjustments in this new era of a hybrid work environment. NASA’s senior leaders remain committed to developing new ways to measure and evaluate Agency performance in concert with our new hybrid workforce environment.
National Science Foundation	The National Science Foundation (NSF) uses USA Performance®, a web-based application and automated performance appraisal process, throughout the entire performance rating cycle. This includes developing performance plans, tracking and monitoring employees’ performance, providing feedback and ratings, and electronically signing performance plans, progress reviews, and ratings. The performance management practices and transparency provide a solid foundation for effective telework or remote work. The performance standards apply to all employees regardless of their telework or remote work status. Supervisors manage the workforce by focusing on goals and outcomes rather than physical presence, and they must treat employees consistently regardless of location. Supervisors maintain open lines of communication and provide all employees with objective feedback regarding performance expectations. Any management decision regarding telework and remote work eligibility and

	participation focuses on results-oriented performance management and accountability measurement principles addressed in the employee's performance plan. Employees working remotely or in the office are held accountable for their performance and conduct. Employees adhere to workplace policies and performance expectations regardless of their telework, remote, or onsite work status.
Nuclear Regulatory Commission	Employee performance management requirements for teleworkers and remote workers are the same as those for non-teleworking employees. When an employee participates in telework, performance expectations and accountability do not differ by virtue of the telework arrangement. All employees, teleworkers and non-teleworkers, are expected to comply with MD 10.67, "General Grade Performance Management System"; MD 10.166, "Telework"; and the Collective Bargaining Agreement. Employees are formally evaluated annually based on their individual performance plans which are comprised of elements and standards. Supervisors hold required performance meetings throughout the year (start of year, midyear, end of year) as well as informal meetings in between. The NRC uses the following to track performance across its enterprise: NRC Strategic Plan for FY 2022-2026; Internal Control Plans; the Quarterly Performance Review; and the Annual Performance Plan and Report.
Office of Personnel Management	Our work arrangement efforts have led to continued significant improvements in both organizational health and performance. OPM continues to deliver for the federal workforce while using telework and our operational outcomes show we are improving in critical service delivery areas. For example, in the last two years, we have reduced retirement inventories from 35,000 to 16,000, decreased processing times for retirement claims 87 days to 61 days, and reduced average wait times at the call center by almost 50 percent. OPM went from being ranked sixth (among 24 CFO Act agencies) on GSA's Mission Support Satisfaction survey results in 2021 to being ranked first in 2023. We have developed and issued a number of policies and regulations, and are implementing programs to further support agencies and the workforce. This includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Issuing a final regulation that prohibits the use of previous non-federal salary history in setting pay for federal employment offers. • Issuing a final rule to strengthen the merit-based civil services by implementing strong protections for the nonpartisan civil service. • Issuing a final rule to significantly expand federal opportunities for early career talent and recruit the next generation of government leaders through the Pathways Programs and release guidance to agencies increasing opportunities for internships, fellowships, apprenticeships, and other student and early career programs in the federal government. • Partnering with OMB to release the first ever government-wide Military-Connected Strategic Plan to support agencies in their efforts to recruit, hire, and retain military-connected spouses, caregivers, and survivors within the federal government. • Delivering to Congress a proposal that addresses agencies need for more flexibility in recruiting and retaining cyber talent into the federal government, as well as 13 additional legislative proposals aimed at improving OPM's ability to deliver services to agencies and employees

	as well as establishing processes to enable agencies to better recruit and retain a highly skilled federal workforce. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Building more efficiency into the hiring process by expanding support for governmentwide hiring actions. This includes launching six multi-agency recruitment portals on USAJOBS to support government-wide recruitment and hiring initiatives and establishing a new Hiring Experience (HX) group to drive innovations in hiring and improve the hiring experience for applicants, hiring managers, and HR practitioners. These efforts are already seeing positive outcomes through shared certificate and pooled hiring efforts. • Completing multiple critical milestones and we work towards launching the new Postal Service Health Benefits Program for 1.9 million postal employees and their families in 2025. • Continuing to build on work we have undertaken over the last four years to improve FEHB program integrity, including completion of a Master Enrollment Index to support data queries that will help identify enrollment irregularities in the FEHB and our recently released Benefits Administration Letter requiring that agencies verify a meaningful sample (not less than 10 percent) of family members included in Open Season elections from the prior year, while laying the foundation to modernize the FEHB program to better address some of the root causes of ineligible enrollments. We are proud of the gains we continue to make within our agency, while recruiting, retaining, and developing the workforce we need to deliver on our mission efficiently and effectively. This includes the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Our workforce is more engaged. When comparing our 2023 and 2021 OPM Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey results, OPM’s overall Employee Engagement score increased by three percentage points. Other employee experience and customer-facing measures also increased, including question 37: My organization is successful at accomplishing its mission (+ three percentage points). • The proportion of Millennials in our workforce has risen from 29 percent in 2019 to 35 percent today—this is critical for workforce planning—bringing in early career talent is a priority for any organization not only for longevity planning, but also as a way to bring in fresh perspectives and ideas to the organization. • OPM has seen a significant growth in Pathways Program participation—From FY 2022-FY2023, we saw our intern count nearly doubled (23 to 42 students) and we are steadily increasing the number of Presidential Management Fellows in our organization. • We have also increased the number of military spouses in our organization by 300 percent from FY 2022- FY 2023 (3 people to 12 people). • Partnering with the Workforce Recruitment Program, a referral program that connects federal and private-sector employers with highly motivated college students and recent graduates with disabilities, we have increased the number of hires for Schedule A employees by nearly 40 percent between FY 2021-FY 2023.

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A decrease in attrition rates from 12.5% in FY 2021, to 10.5% in FY 2022, and further to 10% in FY2023, indicates that OPM has effectively utilized telework as one factor to bolster its employee retention efforts. OPM’s overall approach to performance management is applied consistently amongst all agency workers, regardless of telework or remote work status. More specifically, work performed by agency employees, regardless of telework or remote work status, is measurable by results and outcomes in relation to the expectations set forth in their annual performance plan elements and standards. Employee performance is one of the criteria for determining eligibility for telework and remote work. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • In accordance with OPM’s Telework policy (HR Handbook Chapter 368), employees must be performing at the Fully Successful level or above to be eligible for telework. Therefore, if an employee’s performance falls below the Fully Successful level, they maybe temporarily ineligible for telework (routine and unscheduled) and will be provided a timeframe when telework eligibility will be re-evaluated. • In accordance with OPM’s Remote Worker policy (HR Handbook Chapter 369), “if a remote worker's performance level falls below Fully Successful, improvement efforts will first take place at the remote work location or, if available, at an OPM office location within 50 miles of the remote work site. If efforts to improve performance are unsuccessful the employee may be reassigned to an OPM brick and mortar site.”
Small Business Administration	The SBA’s Performance Management Program is designed to improve the Agency’s ability to build and sustain a results-oriented performance culture. Performance expectations are the same regardless of the employee’s location. Work performed by onsite employees, teleworkers, and remote workers is equally measurable in terms of results and outcomes. SBA has two standardized performance plans for General Schedule (GS) and equivalent employees: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Employee/Team Leader Performance Plan. Non-supervisory employees are rated on two common performance elements – Customer Satisfaction and Written Material, when these elements are critical to the position and there is no duplication of any other element. There is also at least one additional job-specific element such as “project management” or “technical expertise.” Team Leader plans may have job-specific critical elements such as “organizational representation” or “people management.” • Supervisor/Manager Performance Plan – Supervisors are rated on their responsibilities to recruit, hire, develop, promote, support, reward, recognize, and retain highly-qualified employees through compliant, efficient and effective human capital management practices; ensure merit system principles prevail in the management of human resources; make assignments in a fair, consistent, and equitable manner; and align and manage work processes, available resources, and technology to meet SBA or organizational strategic goals and objectives.

	The Office of Human Resources Solutions tracks performance management task completion rates for each program office and reports to senior leadership on a bi-weekly basis. Each program office is also assigned a performance management liaison to facilitate the timely completion of performance management tasks. Supervisors and employees receive training on strategies to maximize productivity in a hybrid environment. Additionally, Teleworkers and Remote Workers must complete telework training, and submit an approved agreement which outlines the expectations and terms associated with the respective work arrangement.
Social Security Administration	Accountability and productivity starts with leaders and managers, whose job it is to manage employee performance regardless of work location. Managers are held accountable for their employees’ performance and use performance tools and counseling to address issues—regardless of where the employee works. Employees are held to the same performance standards whether they are teleworking or working in the office. Managers assign work, use workload reports, case clearances, and project deliverables—the same methods for tracking work onsite—when monitoring employees during telework. For some operating units, specific output-based performance indices are monitored routinely via electronic systems to evaluate employee and/or organizational performance. Performance planning and evaluation involves annual expectation discussions, mid-cycle reviews, and end-of-year performance appraisals; all of which involves ongoing communication between supervisors and employees—tying individual performance to the achievement of agency goals—regardless of work location.
U.S. Agency for International Development	USAID’s policies and procedures for measuring employee performance are clearly laid out in Automated Directives System (ADS) chapters on performance management: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● 423 Senior Executive Service; ● 425 Senior Level and Scientific Technical Professional Positions Performance Management System; ● 461 Foreign Service and Senior Foreign Service Performance Management & Development Programs; ● 462 Employee Evaluation Program, Civil Service; ● 463 Foreign Service and Senior Foreign Service Promotion Eligibility Requirements and Procedures; and ● 464 Foreign Service Performance-Based Actions and 489 Performance Based Actions - Civil Service, which establish clear guidelines and policy for performance-based actions to be taken when employees fail to achieve a satisfactory level of performance. These chapters involve employees in improving organizational effectiveness in the accomplishment of the Agency’s mission and goals and apply to employees regardless of whether they are in office, have a hybrid work schedule, or work remotely.

	Performance management is a core component of USAID’s work environment and organizational health and performance efforts in alignment with OMB M-23-15. USAID’s telework, remote work, training, and hours of duty policies and practices integrate with the Agency’s performance management efforts. Accordingly, over the past year USAID accomplished the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Published updates to its Telework and Remote Work Program policy in ADS 405 on July 25, 2023 - which outlines the rules and responsibilities of supervisors and employees who participate in the telework and remote work program;● Required members of its Washington, D.C., direct hire and U.S. Personal Services Contractor (USPSC) workforce to submit new telework agreements by August 18, 2023;● Increased the in-person presence of its workforce in Washington, D.C., to three days per week, on average, by September 24, 2023; and Published minor updates to its Hours of Duty Policy in ADS 479 to support work-life balance by establishing the “Maxiflex” schedule as USAID’s primary flexible work schedule option. This flexibility helps employees balance work-life obligations and accommodate customer service delivery to USAID Missions that operate in different time zones.

Appendix 1B – Detailed Agency Responses on Real Property Portfolio Management

For reference, please find agency responses below, outlining how each agency approaches real property portfolio management.

Table 1B. Agency Approaches to Real Property Portfolio Management

Agency	Description
Department of Agriculture	Effective real property management is critical to making USDA one of the most efficient Departments in the government. USDA strives to ensure the space we maintain is used to fulfill the Department’s mission. USDA balances many priorities in its real property management process. The Department seeks to maintain an affordable portfolio in support of USDA’s strategic goals and its desire to have a modern workplace environment. USDA’s vision for the workplace is one that enables effective mission achievement and quality employee experience that promotes flexibility, sustainability, and safety. The overall goal of space management and utilization is to create a modern workplace, retain and recruit workers, be cost-efficient, and deliver programs and services. To that end, we continue to regularly review our real property assets, utilization rates, and mission requirements and actively seek opportunities for consolidation, co-location, and footprint reduction when and where feasible. A modernized and optimized real property portfolio enables USDA to recruit and retain a diverse workforce. The office remains a critical place to collaborate, maintain connections, access secure resources, perform specialized work that is impractical to be conducted at home, and serves as a place for those who cannot or do not want to work from home. Distributing work nationwide has the potential to advance equity and inclusion allowing USDA to recruit from a larger talent pool reflecting the talents of individuals across America and allowing employees to live where it best suits them. USDA is evaluating its office footprint at priority locations. This analysis includes the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Number of employees assigned to each facility • Daily occupancy rate • Telework data • Own vs. lease assets • Tenant improvement costs

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Cost to reduce footprint or dispose of the asset • Lease conditions (termination rights, etc.) • Impact to local economy USDA has engaged in space optimization efforts beginning with the “Freeze the Footprint” directive and increased with “Reduce the Footprint” (RTF) government policy. Since the 2015 RTF baseline, USDA reduced the targeted footprint from 32,623,506 SF to 30,975,179 SF at the end of fiscal year 2022. USDA is accelerating its space optimization efforts to right-size its real property portfolio as a result of its workplace flexibilities. During FY 2023, USDA reduced the RTF by 915,559 SF. Since the beginning of FY 2024, USDA has already reduced its footprint by over 500,000 SF and identified an additional 1,000,000 SF for reduction over the next several years. Almost 700,000 square feet of the planned reductions are space controlled by GSA. The remaining 300,000 square feet are USDA delegated lease spaces.
Department of Commerce	The Department of Commerce’s land-holding bureaus conduct master planning to identify mission requirements for real property and opportunities for consolidation and disposal. Bureaus with leases or GSA occupancy agreements conduct space studies prior to lease renewal or acquisition to ensure the lease is right-sized to meet current and future mission needs. For office spaces, bureaus have begun to assess and include teleworking patterns when identifying space requirements. The Department’s owned real property portfolio is comprised of significant mission essential facilities such as laboratories, industrial applications, and other institutional asset types. Thirty-one percent of the owned space portfolio is categorized as office. Commerce has effectively disposed of 1.0M square feet (SF) of underutilized space in the past decade and is on target to reduce its overall owned portfolio by an additional 335K SF with 61 assets in the disposal pipeline. GSA occupancy agreement space has significantly reduced from 8.65M SF in 2021 to 7.46M SF in 2023 reflecting a decline of 13.75% overall and 15.10% in office-specific space. Over 1.06M SF of additional GSA occupancy agreement space (office and warehouse) is targeted for disposal in the next several years, the largest of which is a portion of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office Alexandria, VA campus at 764K SF.
Department of Defense	The Department of Defense (DoD) real property strategy ensures that its Components consistently execute sound capital planning practices. DoD seeks to optimize its real property portfolio with a focus on meeting operational mission requirements and effectively implementing the National Defense Strategy. DoD’s extensive portfolio of over 667,000 assets requires deliberate and disciplined capital planning that balances

	acquisition of new assets against maintenance of existing assets and managing risk across the real property life cycle – acquisition, management, and disposal. DoD’s capital planning process comprehensively integrates these life cycle phases, assessing resource requirements and prioritizing to best support operational missions. DoD uses master planning guidance in accordance with UFC 2-100-01 to assist asset management. Master planning requires assessment over a five-year period to properly identify capital asset acquisitions that meet mission requirements. It is DoD policy that real property with no foreseeable military use or that is not economically feasible to repair will be disposed of in accordance with applicable law, policies, guidance, and procedure. For instance, DoD periodically identifies unneeded assets and screens them for other uses within and external to DoD pursuant to 41 CFR 102-75. These efforts permit effective management in terms of asset transfer, and they permit disposal determinations that eliminates excess facilities. DoD has made significant strides to strategically eliminate excess facilities from its property portfolio. Military Departments have implemented various initiatives, such as, a “1 to 1” policy that requires disposal quantity equal to new construction, space reduction goals, and lease terminations. These and other efforts cumulatively allow DoD to properly match resources to facilities that meet mission requirements and promote productivity and cost savings. The vast majority of Department facilities are owned and located on military installations. However, Washington Headquarters Services (WHS) manages the GSA Lease portfolio for the Department within the National Capital Region. Within the last 5 years WHS has terminated 561K square feet of leases and returned 275K square feet of space to GSA to be used by other federal tenants. Within the next five years, WHS plans to further reduce the leased space portfolio by 512K square feet occupied under GSA agreements.
Department of Education	The Department of Education (ED) manages the real estate portfolio through the Facilities and Logistics Services Division (FLSD). FLSD plans and manages the real estate portfolio in accordance with ED policy for space management (Departmental Directive ACSD-OFO-041). Principal Offices (PO) within ED request and justify their space needs to FLSD. All space designs will utilize the open plan concept to the maximum extent possible. The intent of the open plan concept is to maximize workspace effectiveness and promote a collaborative, fair, safe, transparent work environment, efficiently utilize space, improve air quality and illumination, maximize the occupants’ exposure to natural light and promote energy savings. The desired maximum utilization rate is

	150 USF per person, as designed and measured for each respective PO in each building. Any exceptions that exceed 150 USF per person must be approved in writing by the Assistant Secretary for the Office of Finance and Operations, or appropriate designee. ED keeps records of the number of individuals with ED issued HSPD-12 badges who enter most ED occupied spaces each day. This information is used by FLSD when validating space requests from POs. This data is also used to determine the population density of ED space which is an input into planning for future space needs including additional space and space reduction opportunities. Space reduction is achieved in collaboration with the U.S. General Services Administration. All space occupied by ED is GSA space that is occupied under an occupancy agreement. In most cases, ED may release space to GSA as excess with a 120-day notice. When managing the cost of space reductions ED prioritizes space reductions that can achieve the greatest net financial savings. Other considerations include the time to achieve the cost savings and whether the space reduction will reduce commercially leased space in favor of government owned space.
Department of Energy	The Department has taken a deliberate approach to evaluate its space needs to maximize the efficient use of space. Each DOE Departmental Element (DE) with real property assets develops projections for real property acquisition, sustainment, and disposition activities using a long-term mission needs planning process (e.g., NNSA Deep Dives, Office of Science lab planning process). All DOE sites must identify the estimated disposition year of real property assets in DOE’s Facilities Information Management System (FIMS) database. Using this information, the Department assesses if any other DE might have a use for the property before declaring it as excess and disposing of it. For example, to maximize the efficient use of space, the Department has increased the density of its government-owned facilities by terminating leases for private office space in the NCR. The Department set expectations for the use of hoteling spaces for employees with flexible schedules to improve efficiency. As part of the evaluation of space needs, the Department has made significant improvements to its Headquarters facilities to accommodate its needs. Some examples include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Evaluated and modified existing footprint to create additional SCIF space to support expanded requirements; • Added a walk-up “Genius Bar” (i.e., technology lab) to resolve Laptop and Device problems; • Repurposed existing office footprint to support new DEs focused on BIL/IRA implementation;

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Modified existing footprint to install multiple Collaboration Centers with conversational seating, device charging, TV feeds, and options for hybrid meetings; and • Fully implemented an online hoteling space and conference room reservation system. In spring 2023, DOE moved out of 193,000 square feet of leased space, an action which will save the Department $9 million annually. As a result of these actions, the Department has been able to improve its space utilization, save taxpayer dollars, and accommodate the space needs associated with the significant expansion in the Department’s mission. Currently, DOE has approximately three million square feet of buildings it expects to dispose of within the next three years (through 2027). Of those three million square feet, approximately 96,000 square feet are occupancy agreements with GSA.
Department of Health and Human Services	The Department is committed to using our space efficiently and adhering to government-wide policies, including OMB M-20-03, M-21-25, M-22-14, and M-23-15, regarding capital planning and space utilization. The Department has a diverse real property footprint, including office space and space for health care delivery, research and development, and industrial purposes. We also have policies that govern space planning requirements and procedures for making decisions on property planning across our real property footprint. Since 2015, in accordance with OMB M-12-12 Section 3, Reduce the Footprint, HHS has worked to increase the efficient use of our space while reducing its footprint and associated rent and rent-related costs where feasible. The Department’s 21st Century Workplace Space Planning Policy, issued in February 2022, considers the frequency of on-site presence and telework when planning space, and assigns space based on seat counts instead of people counts. The policy assigns a dedicated seat for employees with on-site presence over six days per a two-calendar-week pay period, and assigns a shared seat between two people otherwise, while fully remote employees are excluded from seat counts. Consistent with this policy, the Department is also working on executing projects over the next several fiscal years that will result in reductions in the real estate footprint for the National Capital Region by disposing of and consolidating small and dispersed footprints. The Department develops, maintains, and provides tools and services (e.g., Housing Plan, Space Planning Tool, GSA Workplace Engagements, among others) to internal stakeholders to facilitate footprint analyses, identify underutilized spaces, and capitalize on opportunities to consolidate space. As part of these processes, HHS Divisions must consider expiring leases, employee presence and relocations, occupancy

Department of Homeland Security	The Department acknowledges the necessity to reimagine the workplace, enhance utilization, and ensure capital planning transforms facilities in a way that meets the mission, while reducing sustainment costs. The DHS Secretary has identified facilities and workplace improvements, including reduction to the office footprint, as a strategic Department-wide priority. The DHS Secretary has tasked the DHS Senior Real Property Officer (SRPO) to lead a Department-wide Facilities Transformation initiative. The Department’s organizational structure and real property portfolio is large and complex. The responsibilities of DHS’s SRPO are designated to DHS’s Chief Readiness Support Officer (CRSO). The Office of the Chief Readiness Support Officer (OCRSO) is responsible for providing Departmental strategy, policy, oversight, and coordination of the DHS Components with delegated real property operating authority. There are 12 DHS Components with delegated real property operating authority, all of which have their own SRPO, funding structures, maturities, means, and strategies to deliver their real property programs in line with Departmental policies, which also include the disposition of space. The DHS real property portfolio is spread over 6,000 different locations and consists of more than 55,000 individual property records. It is comprised of more than 100 million square feet of building space, 40,000 structures, and 80,000 acres of land. The portfolio has a variety of mission use types to support the diverse missions of the Department. These include traditional office uses with administrative spaces, but mostly asset predominate uses are mission specific such as port of entry, warehouse, family housing, laboratory, shore facilities, hangers, and many other mission specific uses. Within DHS’s building portfolio, leases through the U.S. General Services Administration (GSA) account for almost half of the Department’s square footage, direct-leased space accounts for about one-tenth of the space, and DHS-owned space accounts for the remaining square footage. Real property is a major cost driver for DHS, at more than $4 billion per year. Of this amount, the average annual allocated resources for acquisitions or improvements are about $1 billion, rental payments are $2 billion, and the remaining fund operations and maintenance activities.

The DHS backlog of repair and recapitalization needs is in excess of $5 billion and growing annually.

The Department is aggressively pursuing the optimization of its space and the release of underutilized property, while ensuring its mission needs are met. Considerable progress has been made toward the production of mature, actionable, enterprise-level data to support evidence-based policy and resource decision-making. This includes a focus on existing and new data on telework, costs, utilization, and workforce location (e.g., data from IT network access, physical access, and self-reported locations). Recent progress includes the DHS Workplace Strategy that OCRSO completed in 2023. This strategy was developed to achieve the strategic objectives outlined by the DHS Secretary and by the DHS Deputy Secretary in the DHS Future of Work (FoW) Strategic Framework. Key criteria considered during the facility review and investment prioritization process included space utilization, mission dependence, lease expirations, and potential lifecycle cost avoided. The DHS Workplace Strategy initiative identified DHS-wide policy updates needed to deliver the strategy. As a result, DHS recently updated its DHS Workplace Standard policy which will further increase utilization and efficiencies. The DHS Workplace Strategy identifies lease efficiency and optimization opportunities that exist across the portfolio but are not delivered due to a lack of upfront capital funding. Capital investments through a new transformation fund are needed in order to reduce leasehold costs and co-locate Components while optimizing space utilization and to deliver more sustainable and resilient facility capacity in support of our mission.

Another example of progress is the DHS National Capital Region (NCR) Real Property Strategy. OCRSO focused attention on the largest major market in the country. DHS has the largest federal real estate footprint in the NCR, with a large and complex portfolio. OCRSO performed a real estate portfolio diagnostic to identify all the real property in the NCR to establish a baseline. Working with DHS Components and GSA, the Department established a consolidation plan that improves operational and cultural synergies while reducing the overall footprint and efficiently using the Department's resources, which has resulted in an action plan which will reduce the DHS HQ DMO's administrative workspace footprint by 25 percent by 2027, based on a 2020 baseline. This plan demonstrates how the footprint will be reduced each year through changes in workforce resources and implementation of capital projects that meet the Office of Management and Budget's M-22-14 requirements and Executive Order 14057 environmental metrics targets. The outcome is a DHS Headquarters-approved plan that centralizes leadership in and around the St. Elizabeths Campus providing high-quality and efficiently planned space. Even though the Department has developed an associated NCR Consolidation Plan, the lack of consistent funding in DHS and

	GSA’s appropriations has greatly impacted consolidation projects around the NCR and specifically at St. Elizabeths throughout its development. GSA, in coordination with DHS, controls the disposition strategy and process for buildings and leases under its control. Attached is a list, provided by GSA, of GSA-controlled facilities and land that are currently on the GSA disposal list in which DHS has equities. DHS has leadership commitment, a clear strategy, appropriate policy requirements and is continuing to mature utilization data capabilities to account for telework and provide compliance monitoring. Significant portfolio optimization and mission unification opportunities have been identified, however, access to upfront investment funding is required to deliver the transformation. A return on investment cannot be achieved unless the upfront investment is made. This includes investment funding for both DHS and GSA.
Department of Housing and Urban Development	We lease all of our facilities from the General Services Administration. Over the last few years, we have worked closely with them to aggressively consolidate space across our portfolio through a combination of relocations and in-place space consolidations. Between fiscal years (FY) 2012 and 2023, we reduced our footprint by 699,863 square feet. In FY 2024, we are projected to reduce space by an additional 15,527 square-feet. Our Capital Planning process includes an annual review of all 70 headquarters and field operating sites. Staffing, attendance, space utilization rate, work schedules, rental costs, design, construction and furnishing and early lease termination costs are assessed during the review to better inform our project short and long-term strategic planning. We’re working closely with GSA to move our offices from private leased space into government owned space. We are also working closely with GSA as we review our headquarters facilities and develop a new Program of Requirements (POR). Our intent is to consolidate all four headquarters satellite offices into the Weaver Building. Our FY 2025-FY2029 Capital Plan focuses on optimizing our space utilization while promoting a healthy working environment, enhancing sustainability, and being good stewards of taxpayer dollars. We anticipate up to a 60 percent reduction in our footprint by 2038. The plan includes Field Office reductions as well as collapsing four Washington D.C. satellite offices into the Weaver Building. The reductions will achieve a more efficient utilization rate and reduce real estate spending, allowing us to redeploy funds to other higher impact needs.

Department of Justice	The Department of Justice (DOJ) owns or leases approximately 124 million square feet (SF) of real estate: 57% owned, 1% direct leased, 42% GSA Occupancy Agreement (GSA OA). The portfolio is comprised of a diverse and highly specialized inventory of assets. Over half the Department’s portfolio consists of Bureau of Prisons (BOP) correctional facilities. Approximately 34 percent consists of law enforcement facilities, which house operational and special use spaces, such as vaults, laboratories, evidence processing areas, training campuses, and intelligence centers. Approximately 52 million SF of the DOJ inventory is within GSA owned or leased space, of which about 35 million SF is categorized as “office.” The Department’s distributed organizational structure dictates the way its real property management activities are organized and carried out; relying on its components with policy leadership, direction and oversight provided by JMD. The broad nature of DOJ’s mission requires assets to be strategically located and operationally ready. Each DOJ component engages in the capital planning process to ensure that its real property inventory is appropriate to its unique mission needs and operations, with particular focus on promoting space efficiency. Assets are evaluated on the ability to efficiently house personnel and operational requirements without excess. The Department requires space and facility efficiency across components by setting an overarching utilization rate (UR) maximum for office space of 100 square feet (SF) per person for law enforcement bureaus and 130 SF per person for other components. Additionally, the Department promotes opportunities for integrated/flexible workspace strategies (e.g., teleworking, hoteling, and shared support spaces). Collocation and sharing of assets are encouraged where appropriate (e.g., training and firearms facilities). For GSA-leased facilities, real property planning processes are typically triggered by approaching lease expiration dates, whereas for owned assets components perform continuous building evaluations and assess new mission requirements to identify needs. Three recent GSA-leased prospectus-level projects in the National Capital Region (NCR) managed by JMD were awarded that reduced the Department’s square footage by approximately 385,000 usable square feet (USF) which will result in an annual rent savings of approximately $25 million. Additionally, over the past five years, the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) has consolidated ten leases in the NCR, totaling approximately 502,000 SF and $23.6 million in annual rent savings. The Office of Justice Programs (OJP) is reducing their footprint by approximately 90,000 SF in their NCR prospectus-level consolidation (GSA OA) this year. The pending prospectus for the Department’s 2 Constitution Square (2CON) facility, which houses JMD offices in the NCR, will result in further footprint reduction of 386,000 USF (GSA OA).

	Currently the Department does not have any owned space targeted for disposal. The Department has the following planned GSA-leased office spaces disposals without succeeding space to replace them in these locations: ATF 10,000 SF in Columbia, SC; FBI 91,000 SF in Kansas City, MO. The United States Trustee Program (USTP) plans to dispose of 190,000 SF of GSA-leased office space over FY 2024 and 2025 in multiple locations across the country.
Department of Labor	DOL submits an annual Real Property Capital Plan to the Office of Management and Budget and Federal Real Property Council which outlines DOL’s approach to real property portfolio planning. This includes identifying underutilized office space for consolidation and disposal. DOL uses an evidence-based approach to the strategic management of our owned and leased assets in accordance with the governing guidance. Over the course of the past year, DOL leadership at the National and Regional levels has been working to identify, prioritize and execute projects aimed at reducing our reliance on leased property in favor of federally owned property. DOL partners with GSA to use Portfolio Consolidation Funds to minimize the upfront costs of space projects; prioritize federal space to reduce moving costs; and provide accurate project cost estimates to support agency budget forecasts. Also important to this initiative is DOL’s FY 2025 proposal for a modernized space project funding model. This new model will provide the flexibility needed for multiagency space consolidation and reliable, multiyear funding to initiate and maintain cost-effective office space project progress from planning and design to agency occupancy.
Department of State	The Department of State developed the Enterprise Location Framework (ELF) to respond to emerging workforce demands and federal mandates to improve domestic space utilization, densification, and the reduction of the agency’s domestic footprint. Even though the Department of State’s building utilization rates are higher compared to other federal agencies (2023 GAO report, Federal Real Property: Agencies Need New Benchmarks to Measure and Shed Underutilized Space (GAO-24-107006), the agency continues to employ strategies to optimize its space use in the domestic footprint. Notably, under the ELF, the Department plans to capitalize on three commercial lease expirations in Washington, D.C. and Northern Virginia and will densify staff from these locations into leased or federally owned facilities that are already within the Department’s domestic portfolio. Returning these three expensive, expiring leased locations will bring the Department an annual financial cost avoidance of $10.8 million and shrink the domestic portfolio by 771,566 rentable square feet. The locations the Department plans to return are all commercial, leased properties; none are under the full custody and control of the government.

	In 2023, the Department updated its space allocation standards to better utilize agency space in a flexible and hybrid environment and to further shrink the overall domestic footprint. The revised standards aim to reduce square footage per person as well as per workstation while increasing mobility and flexibility, leveraging multi-use space and space for collaboration and community, and driving adoption of unassigned, reservable seating to take advantage of workstations that are available due to use of leave, travel, training, or other reasons.
Department of the Interior	For more than a decade, the Department has partnered with the General Services Administration (GSA) to maximize the efficient use of Department-owned, commercially leased, and GSA-provided space. The Department is also taking proactive steps to modernize space requirements as the agency considers Office of Management and Budget policy and guidance. In November of 2022, the Department developed an Enterprise Space Strategy (ESS) and, in partnership with GSA, chartered multiple implementation teams at high-priority locations that are tasked with multiple objectives, including identifying space reduction targets in administrative facilities. The priority locations referenced represent areas with concentrations of administrative functions for multiple bureaus/offices at commercially leased or GSA-Provided office space, such as headquarters or regional/state locations. For each location, the ESS is evaluating opportunities and establishing space reduction targets that align with the bureau mission requirements, workforce management decisions, and broader departmental space management policy. In addition to the focus on priority locations above, DOI requires bureaus to annually revisit overall Reduce the Footprint (RtF) targets, and to reflect these new reduction targets in Five-Year Space Management Plans. Unlike many other Federal agencies, DOI owns most of its real property portfolio of buildings and infrastructure. Many of DOI’s facilities are mixed use and operational in nature and directly support the delivery DOI’s diverse and public facing missions. The teams are focused on consolidating administrative (office) facilities which are primarily provided by GSA or commercial leases. Approximately 65% of DOI’s administrative space fall in these categories. A summary of the Department’s space reduction targets for FY 2024-28 is provided below. <table border="1" data-bbox="467 1619 1414 1843"> <thead> <tr> <th></th> <th>FY 2024</th> <th>FY 2025</th> <th>FY 2026</th> <th>FY 2027</th> <th>FY 2028</th> </tr> </thead> <tbody> <tr> <td>Office Targets (majority is Leased or GSA-Provided) (Net SF Reduction)</td> <td>247,000</td> <td>130,000</td> <td>14,500</td> <td>80,000</td> <td>11,000</td> </tr> </tbody> </table>		FY 2024	FY 2025	FY 2026	FY 2027	FY 2028	Office Targets (majority is Leased or GSA-Provided) (Net SF Reduction)	247,000	130,000	14,500	80,000	11,000

Department of the Treasury	It is the policy of the Department of the Treasury that real property holdings under Treasury control are fully utilized and put to optimum use. Systematic thorough reviews of real property holdings are conducted at least annually to categorize and identify property, which is not needed, is underutilized, or is not being put to its optimal use. Real property identified as not needed is reported and released in accordance with the policies established by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), the General Services Administration (GSA), and Department of the Treasury regulations. The Department has established the Treasury Operations Executive Council (TOEC) which is chaired by the Department’s Senior Real Property Officer (SRPO) and supported by senior level staff subject matter experts from each bureau. The TOEC provides general guidance for efficient space utilization, needs assessments, forecasting and portfolio management and works across organizational lines to increase portfolio efficiency. The TOEC focus areas include review of design standards, best practices, coordination of portfolio changes, evaluating workforce changes and collocation opportunities. Real property needs are evaluated and documented using a Program of Requirements (POR). The POR combines customer preferences such as work patterns, quality levels, with mission requirements such as staff numbers, flexibility and expandability, adjacencies, special equipment, and systems. Treasury has department-wide workspace standards to assist with developing PORs and establishing a more efficient use of real property assets while also providing a work environment that promotes a productive atmosphere for Treasury employees to successfully fulfill their work missions. The workspace standards are a broad policy outlining guidelines consistent with overall Treasury real property objectives while permitting bureaus within Treasury to develop and implement more detailed space applications that best meet their unique needs. The workspace standards establish guidance for office workspace design processes to optimize efficient and effective space utilization without detriment to business functionality. This process considers shared workstations that ensure the optimum amount of dedicated and assigned employee workstations, effective collaborative workspace, telework, and optimizing space utilization. The standards also provide guidance for space allocations, workspace sharing ratios, and support for changing work patterns. Treasury has targeted expiring space assignments in metropolitan areas with multiple posts of duty sites for opportunities to pursue consolidation opportunities where it makes business and financial sense. Treasury’s strategy has utilized space data such as square feet per person, telework participation, hotel workstation seating capacity, and the percentage of

	workstations utilized to identify potential reduction projects, consistent with business operations requirements. Financial analysis is recommended for any expiring lease action when contemplating a replacement, or succeeding lease. A Return on Investment (ROI) assessment is recommended to assist in evaluating different housing and project scenarios from a cost/savings perspective. If the ROI payback period for costs required to reduce space is less than the proposed new lease term, it is recommended that a space reduction project should be proposed for funding consideration coincident with the expiring space requirement. The ideal state for Treasury real estate portfolio is under review as we continue to evaluate new work patterns and practices in the post-pandemic environment. Treasury currently occupies 31.5M square feet (sf), of that 5.7M sf is Treasury-controlled and 25.8M sf is GSA-controlled space. The Department’s Treasury-controlled inventory is fully utilized, and there are currently no planned disposals or space reductions for any Treasury-controlled facilities. Treasury is projecting by the end of FY2027 to relinquish over 800,000 rentable square feet of office space from our GSA-controlled inventory to optimally right size the portfolio consistent with the Department’s mission and essential program needs.
Department of Transportation	The U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) is the federal government’s principal agency for protecting and the development of national transportation policies and programs, that will deliver the world’s leading transportation system, serving the American people and economy through safe, efficient, sustainable, and equitable movement of people and goods. To support the mission of DOT and the lives of all Americans, the department employs a workforce of over 55,000 staff across the Office of Secretary of Transportation (OST), Office of the Inspector General (OIG), and the nine (9) Operating Administrations (OAs) (Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), Federal Highway Administration (FHWA), Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA), Federal Railroad Administration (FRA), Federal Transit Administration (FTA), Great Lakes St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation (GLS), Maritime Administration (MARAD), National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration (PHMSA)). DOT’s real property portfolio consists of different types of real property types (e.g. Land, Building, Structure) and use (office, warehouse, communication systems, navigation/traffic aids, laboratories, etc...). DOT’s staff is predominantly housed in office space throughout the U.S. but is concentrated in the National Capital Region (NCR) in GSA owned buildings. DOT is currently in the middle of a space utilization study for the DOT Coleman-Mineta Headquarters Buildings that will be completed in FY24. Based on its results, the department will pursue strategic consolidations of other DOT occupied leases in the NCR in the coming year. This consolidation effort will need to be implemented over multiple fiscal years as GSA is able to terminate supporting leases for space that DOT occupies in the NCR.

The space study being conducted at the DOT Coleman-Mineta headquarters buildings will incorporate the department's improved office space policy. DOT along with other federal agencies have recognized that ongoing operations and mission support can be performed through a hybrid work environment. Effective April 2024, the department updated its office space design policy for the first time in nearly a decade. The updated space policy calls for a reduction of approximately 21% of usable square feet (USF) per person compared to the previous policy and eliminates the traditional practice of dedicated assigned space for employees who report to the office. The updated space policy will allow DOT the opportunity to further reduce its footprint and significantly reduce rent and rent related costs, as it incorporates modern changes to the workplace. The updated office space design policy will be applicable to domestic office space for DOT HQ buildings, regional, and satellite offices, with a goal to achieve a reduced utilization rate and occupy space in an efficient manner. DOT also utilizes current management tools to support property portfolio planning and identifying underutilized office space. The tools used at the Operating Administration (OA) Level and Department level include: (1) DOT Strategic Plan; (2) OA master plans; (3) Real Property Inventory System (FRAMES); (4) OA Annual Utilization Review; (5) Building Space Utilization Report (BSUR); (6) DOT Five-Year Timelines of Real Property Assets; (7) DOT Real Property Capital Plan; (8) DOT annual budget and performance guidance.

DOT incorporates the updated space policy and portfolio management tools to evaluate properties that can be disposed and/or consolidated on an annual basis. The department was recently involved in a property disposal exchange with GSA and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT). This exchange transaction was property held in the control and custody of DOT and resulted in the design and construction of a new facility and a ~$200M cash equalization payment to the US Treasury. The new facility is now under the control and custody of GSA as other federal agencies occupy space at the new DOT Volpe facility. Alongside with identifying property disposal actions, DOT explores lease and space consolidations. DOT is currently supporting GSA for a prospectus action (PMO-03-KC24), which will allow for a lease extension. This lease extension will allow adequate time for DOT to relocate to another leased location procured by DOT through 49 U.S.C. §106. The lease procured by DOT will result in ~44% reduction in space and a reduction to the usable square feet/person by ~37%. DOT anticipates relocating to the new location upon substantial completion, which is expected by Q1-FY2025.

	In May 2024, Congress passed and the President signed into law a new five-year reauthorization of the Federal Aviation Administration (H.R. 3935). Section 222 of the “Securing Growth and Robust Leadership in American Aviation Act” directs the Secretary to conduct an inventory and review of DOT’s domestic office footprint and provide a report to Congress that proposes opportunities to optimize it by identifying available, unused, or underutilized space. This review of our domestic office footprint will analyze all office space for all operating administrations nationwide, except for the FAA’s operational facilities. As part of this study, DOT will look for ways to optimize our office footprint, including consolidating offices within a reasonable distance and collocating regional or field offices of Operating Administrations. Among other factors, the study will consider current lease arrangements for offices, space adequacy related to the Architectural Barriers and Americans with Disability Acts, and current and projected employee headcount. The department explores these types of opportunities for space reduction on an annual basis utilizing the above referenced office space policy and management tools for property portfolio planning. DOT’s portfolio has seen a reduction in office and warehouse space. Consistent with MPM (Management Procedures Memorandum) 2015-01, DOT has decreased its overall footprint by 11% when compared to the RTF (Reduce the Footprint) baseline.
Department of Veterans Affairs	The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) has a robust real planning process. For the headquarters locations in National Capital Region (NCR), VA space optimization strategies have reduced office space by 16% (~270,000 sf) from 2020 to 2022, which resulted in annual cost savings of $15 million. There are currently seven VACO headquarters locations totaling 1.4 million square feet under GSA Occupancy Agreements. VA is updating strategies and requirements for office space requirements in the NCR to include OMB guidance and VA policies on office presence. Similar space review efforts are taking place nationally, although clinical space still requires a physical presence and in some cases is growing to meet the demands of Veterans. Disposal opportunities are identified at the local level and can be disposed of as contract vehicles allow. Generally VA relies on GSA for office space, and therefore a vast majority of disposals are GSA occupancy agreements.

	is an agency priority and all real property assets are regularly assessed for utilization and capacity. EPA laboratories are evaluated through a master planning process that occurs approximately every five years. Office spaces are continuously assessed for excess space and for opportunities to release underutilized space. The agency’s uniform office space guidelines, which applied to all new and renovated office space, reflect new technologies and aim to reduce space. EPA has developed a space needs analysis to meet the requirements of the Office of Management and Budget’s memorandum M-22-14 and M-21-25 in cooperation with the agency’s Chief Human Capital Officer, Senior Real Property Officer, Chief Information Officer, Chief Financial Officer, and EPA Senior Leadership. EPA’s large scale office portfolio includes its Agency headquarters buildings in Washington, DC and the ten regional offices, totaling 3,182,598 usable square feet, with approximately $180 million in annual lease costs (FY 2025 GSA Base Rent Estimates). EPA proposes to release approximately 20 percent of these leased spaces over the FY 2025-2029 timeline if appropriation levels allow the agency to fund the necessary renovations and relocations. Over the last 10-15 years, EPA has prudently sought opportunities to release or consolidate office space at the end of an occupancy agreement at either GSA-leased or GSA-owned space. For example, in FY 2021, EPA successfully released the 264,935 square foot Potomac Yards facility in Alexandria, VA, resulting in avoidance of over $12 million in annual lease costs.
General Services Administration	The U.S. General Services Administration’s (GSA) unique role as both a provider and consumer of real estate services and solutions has helped guide the transformation of its workplaces over the last decade, and will continue to do so moving forward. GSA’s real estate services cover the full range of activities involved in managing a portfolio of approximately 8,400 owned or leased facilities. As champions and innovators of federal work experiences and environments, we are passionate about ensuring our federal colleagues have facilities that allow them to deliver mission critical services to the American people. In FY23, GSA rolled out a Portfolio Optimization Strategy which involves: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Reducing leased real estate costs • Developing work environments to meet today’s workplace requirements • Divesting of underperforming assets no longer meeting today’s workplace requirements • Reallocating resources to assets that generate higher returns for customers

	As a consumer of GSA owned and leased space, GSA has reduced its footprint by more than 2 million square feet over the past 10 years, avoiding more than $300 million in costs to taxpayers—an achievement that would not have been possible without leveraging workplace flexibility. Within the Washington, DC area specifically, GSA has consolidated all of the agency’s operations into its headquarters building, which has yielded significant operational benefits to the agency—including reducing energy consumption by 50 percent and saving $24 million in rent payments annually. In 2024 and in future years, GSA’s internal real estate portfolio will focus on right-sizing its workplaces. This year the agency plans to vacate leased space, transform, restack, and/or backfill owned space in at least six regional office buildings and its Washington, DC Headquarters. GSA will continue to focus on reinvesting rent savings into improvements to modernize its office space throughout the country.
National Aeronautics and Space Administration	NASA continues to evaluate our Federal footprint as part of our Agency Master Plan efforts. NASA’s footprint encompasses 20 centers and facilities across the country. While NASA has not closed any Government-owned facilities as a direct result of telework, some Centers are exploring ways to better utilize their buildings or to capture utility savings when fewer personnel are on-site. NASA’s real property capital planning approach starts with strategic-level planning and guidance. The most recent NASA Strategic Plan and the Agency Mission Planning Manifest (AMPM), combined with guidance provided via Agency initiatives and other Federal agencies (e.g., the Department of Energy’s guidance on Federal energy requirements and OMB’s Reduce the Footprint program) were key in the development of NASA’s Agency Master Plan (AMP) for real property facilities and physical infrastructure. Through the AMP each real property asset’s mission and condition data is assessed to identify an appropriate future state (sustain, invest, divest (disposal), or outgrant/repurpose). Underutilized low-mission assets are identified for disposal, consolidation, repurposing, or outgranting. The Agency is currently assessing administrative and storage spaces at each center to identify additional consolidation opportunities. The effort aims to optimize administrative space agency-wide to provide the best work environment possible for employees while meeting the Agency’s rightsizing goals and evolving mission needs. Unlike most Federal agencies, NASA owns most of its real property facilities and infrastructure as they are integral to the NASA mission. Currently, all assets that have been identified for divestment/disposal are

	NASA-owned. NASA will continue to interface with GSA as appropriate given the ownership of various facilities; for example, it will coordinate with GSA regarding the future of the NASA Headquarters building in Washington DC, which is GSA-managed. The NASA Headquarters lease expires in August 2028, and the Agency is evaluating the options for its next headquarters building, including leasing, purchasing, and building. Additionally, NASA also is analyzing ways to capture cost savings associated with telework such as decreased utility costs, reduced transit/commuting payments to employees and less travel due to the increase of virtual opportunities for conferences and training. These cost savings, however, have not been fully quantified. One challenge will be developing metrics that can be captured by all agencies in a standardized manner while also recognizing each agency’s unique missions and workforces.
National Science Foundation	NSF’s HQ building in Alexandria, VA accommodates the agency's employees and contractor staff as well as visitors requiring access to the HQ facility. NSF also maintains a small shipping and receiving warehouse in Springfield, VA. Both spaces are under Occupancy Agreements with the General Services Administration. In September of 2023, NSF implemented a new Workspace Management Policy that requires individuals to be on-site at NSF headquarters in Alexandria 5 days per pay period to maintain a permanent assigned workspace. Individuals not assigned a permanent workspace will utilize hoteling or workspace share. In addition, NSF initiated a comprehensive plan to Reimagine the Future of Space. Phase 1 of this process consists of gathering space requirements based on current and projected staffing and realigning space for each directorate and office. This phase will ensure that NSF is utilizing existing space as efficiently as possible while working in a hybrid environment. Phase 2, which begins immediately after a directorate or office has completed Phase 1, consists of working with space specialists and other federal agencies to benchmark and gather data, understand work needs, study staff work habits, validate current-state space use, and discuss future space concepts. Phase 3 of this process will mature from space concepts and data gathering to practical workspace solutions which meet the needs of the mission and the workforce. During Phase 3, NSF will evaluate potential footprint changes based on future requirements.
Nuclear Regulatory Commission	The NRC continually evaluates its real property portfolio for opportunities to improve space utilization and reduce its real property footprint. The agency is actively reducing the gap between the existing number of workstations in comparison to our housing requirements to optimize the utilization of space. As the nature of the workplace changes

	(e.g., increased telework, new technologies, etc.), the agency is reassessing workspace design and workplace strategy while considering mission requirements, actual occupancy, and the correlating utilization rates. Space reductions are being achieved by consolidating in place, releasing marketable blocks of space, changing, and reducing the design of our workstations, and the implementation of hoteling. Examples of this are recent leases through GSA resulting in the significant reduction of the sizes of 3 of the 4 regional locations by approximately half their current or previous sizes by FY 2025, in addition to the release of 4 floors of the Two White Flint North building at NRC’s headquarters from FY 2021 through FY 2025. NRC’s current real property management objective is to reduce the size of the agency’s portfolio by over 30 percent by the end of FY 2025, as compared to the beginning of FY 2020. This reduction equates to over 350,000 useable square feet (USF). By the end of FY 2024, the NRC will have released over 245,000 USF as compared to FY 2020, with plans to release an additional 105,000 USF in FY 2025. As the agency adapts to the hoteling process over the next year, staff will analyze the participation, successes, and challenges before recommending additional space releases in FY 2026 or beyond.
Office of Personnel Management	To implement the President’s Management Agenda (PMA) and recent OMB directives, OPM is reimagining our workplace approach, informed by lessons learned post-pandemic and nationwide workforce and workplace trends (e.g., hybrid work inclusive of onsite work, telework, alternative work schedules, online collaboration, and remote work policies and practices), and integrating these considerations into the next iteration of our capital plan. OPM exercises capital planning that supports mission requirements and the future of work needs. OPM maintains its headquarters in the Theodore Roosevelt Federal Office Building (TRFB) and 17 field offices in locations across the United States, including a cluster of facilities in northwestern Pennsylvania that manage a significant portion of our retirement services workload. One of the field locations is the Federal Executive Institute, a residential training facility providing lodging, meals, and fully equipped on-site classrooms in a campus-like setting that operates 24/7, 340 days a year in Charlottesville, Virginia. OPM does not own any real property or engage in direct leasing; all of OPM’s leasing requirements, which include a blend of Federally- and commercially-owned spaces, are coordinated through the U.S. General Services Administration (GSA). OPM continually evaluates space utilization to maximize efficiencies to support the OPM mission, workforce and, where appropriate, reduce the real estate footprint and associated expense. OPM works closely with

	GSA to assess these considerations. For example, from 2020-2024, OPM reduced nearly 69,000+ sq/ft of field office space within multiple organizations with a cost savings of nearly $1M annually. OPM continues to assist organizations in evaluating their program requirements for space utilization efficiencies. OPM is also currently assisting the Federal Executive Boards in evaluating program requirements for space utilization at all locations to make space decisions.
Small Business Administration	The U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) manages 141 office leases, representing 1.39 million square feet of leased space, and pays approximately $45 million in rent annually for this space. The SBA does not own any real property; all Agency-used space is obtained via occupancy agreements through the General Services Administration and managed by Office of Executive Management, Installation and Support Services. The SBA maintains a significant amount of “surge space” for its disaster response function and provides office space for Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) volunteers. The SBA is currently addressing identified gaps with facility conditions and space utilization to meet mission requirements post-COVID. SBA prioritizes projects that align with the Agency's first strategic goal of ensuring equitable and customer-centric design and delivery of programs to support small businesses. In FY23, the SBA decreased its real estate footprint by 4.6% which exceeded the target of 1%. For FY24, several offices have been identified for potential space reduction and SBA is on target to be able to meet the FY24 reduction target of 3%. The Agency completed its review of the lease portfolio and identified potential offices and locations that are eligible for space reduction or elimination. As leases expire for various field offices, the SBA will evaluate underutilized space to reduce its real estate footprint to meet cost and space reduction objectives. SBA looks at many different factors in prioritizing projects, including, but not limited to, agency priorities, future of work considerations, asset age, effect on agency operations, funding availability, and project readiness, and uses those factors to assign internal rankings of low, medium, and high priority.
Social Security Administration	Our real property portfolio planning, as well as our capital planning process, involves both a top-down and bottom-up approach. The agency’s Senior Real Property Officer, the Office of Facilities and Logistics Management (OFLM), which is organizationally aligned in the Chief Financial Officer’s (CFO) office, administers our national real property program. OFLM develops, manages, and implements our Real Property Capital Plan. OFLM’s placement within the agency’s CFO organization ensures our capital planning process and portfolio requirements are integrated within the agency’s budget process.

	While the capital planning process is centrally developed and managed, our needs assessments that inform our planning begin at the local level. We periodically evaluate our field offices to ensure that their size and location align with workloads. We consider many factors – growing workloads, changing staff levels, changing technology and customer preferences, and shifting demographics and population. These reviews help us identify gaps and options to resolve them. We have memorialized the decision-making processes for regional public facing facilities within the Service Area Review and more recently finalized a documented prioritization process for the agency’s delegated facilities. In addition to our regular space review process, we assess our larger, non-public-facing sites for opportunities to make more efficient use of our space. We look at factors such as lease rates, expiration dates, and utilization rates, both at the non-public facing site and at nearby offices that may be consolidated into the larger, non-public site. These factors represent potential gaps in our utilization of our real property portfolio. Depending on the complexity of the non-public-facing site and potential options, we may also conduct feasibility studies. These studies determine if we can reduce our footprint either by eliminating a lease and consolidating nearby offices into the large, non-public-facing site or making more efficient use of space within the non-public-facing site by consolidating space within the facility and returning the unneeded space to the General Services Administration (GSA). While we are responsible for the operations and maintenance of 17 non-public-facing facilities for which GSA has delegated to us the authority to directly manage, we do not own or have delegated leasing authority for these facilities. In conjunction with evaluating our long-term space needs, we have identified several opportunities over the next several years to reduce space at some of our non-public facing locations. These opportunities correspond to upcoming lease actions or support General Services Administration (GSA) priorities.
U.S. Agency for International Development	As part of USAID’s Washington Real Estate Strategy (WRES) and in response to OMB’s Reduce The Footprint directive (Memorandum M-12-12, Nov. 25, 2016), USAID has consolidated from eight occupied federal buildings to four, with two main headquarters buildings in Washington, DC. In 2015, the General Services Administration (GSA) reported that USAID’s baseline usable square feet (USF) was 909,001. Under the WRES, the Agency began the process of terminating five occupancy agreements in 2020 for the following properties: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • 1717 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC - 26,832 USF • Crystal Park 3, 2231 Crystal Drive, Arlington, Virginia - 42,306 USF

	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• 2 Potomac Yard, 2733 Crystal Drive, Arlington, VA - 70,628 USF• CP3 (Global Health), 2100 Crystal Drive, Arlington, VA - 74,584 USF• Federal Center Plaza II (Original SA-44), 400 C, SW, - - 171,092 USF This reduction totaled 385,442 USF. In December 2025, USAID will terminate its occupancy agreement for its remaining swing space located at 400 C Street, Washington, DC, further reducing the Agency’s footprint by 42,773 USF. USAID will update its Washington Real Property Acquisition and Management policy guidance (Automated Directive System 517) later this year to account for reduced space allocation standards and better utilize space in a hybrid work environment. It will also pilot the use of a corporate space reservation system to manage more effective use of unassigned, reservable seating to take advantage of workstations that are available with those who may be working off-site, on travel, training, or leave.

USDA WORK ENVIRONMENT IMPLEMENTATION DATA CALL January 26, 2024

Current State

In aggregate, telework eligible employees based in our headquarters buildings are spending 65% of their time in person. We track this through a combination of badge swipe data and WebTA entries by employees. To make the WebTA as reliable as possible, we have issued several reminders and new trainings regarding how to enter time and the importance of accounting for all time accurately.

Milestones to Date

As previously reported, on September 10th, 2023, we implemented a new policy for the National Capital Region (NCR). This policy requires that managers and supervisors spend at least 50% of their on-duty time in an office. It also requires that those leaders put in place and observe two core “in-person-collaboration” days per pay period, and that non managers and supervisors observe at least one of those core days. To ensure compliance, the Department’s Labor Relations Officers (LROs) pushed out a formal communication with Mission Areas to make it clear that the expectation is that these core days are officially codified inside of labor agreements to the extent possible. On a national level, we also implemented a policy on August 25, 2023, disallowing any member of the Senior Executive Service (SES) from working remotely.

Facilities

There are many steps we have taken already and will continue to grow to make the day-to-day experience of being in our buildings in the NCR both convenient and pleasant. For one, we expanded our options for onsite dining. We completely revamped our cafeteria to include many international cuisine options as well as a robust salad bar, lunch buffet, smoothie station, and Starbucks coffee. We also expanded hours. The cafeteria is now open from 7:00 am to 3:00 pm daily. To boost business to the cafeteria so that it is a tenable operation, we have opened it up to the public and have seen increased traffic from students and tourists who are visiting the National Mall. The cafeteria is in addition to Dunkin Donuts and two other take-out restaurants in our sub-basement which are also open every day from 7:00 am to 2:00 pm.

The Dr. Gregory L. Parham Medical Unit, located in the South Building, first floor, is a state-of-the-art medical facility with fully functional doctors and nurses. Employees can visit the medical unit to treat minor injuries, receive chronic disease management, refill prescriptions, and get vaccinations and physicals. The Medical unit also offers employees and contractors in the NCR the newest COVID-19 vaccine.

To further support our goal to make in-person work more appealing, we continued and re-marketed our parking policy from the pandemic which permits all employees to park in assigned parking spaces after 9:00 am. This not only encourages parking pass holders to report to the office by 9:00 am, but it also allows employees without parking passes the opportunity to drive to work. After 9:00 am, unused parking spaces become available to non-parking pass holders. At the same time, as budget allows, we are working through some renovations in the Whitten Building to modernize it. Currently, the focus is on our Wing 7 as well as some critical plumbing infrastructure.

“Magnet” Events

As planned, we held several in person events in the NCR in 2023 with great success and have more planned for 2024. In 2023, some of our most popular events had hundreds of in person attendees including: our Christmas Tree lighting ceremony hosted by the Forest Service and the breast cancer walk and Health and Wellness Fair both hosted by our employee led Employee Health and Wellness Council. Some examples of in person events we have coming up in 2024 for which we expect a large in person presence include: the Federal Interagency Military Spouse career fair, the Secretary’s Honor Awards event in our Jefferson Auditorium, and a reprise of our Employee Appreciation Month in May.

Measurement

USDA is building an organizational health dashboard that elevates data and measures related to programmatic key performance indicators and mission support indicators, including retirement rates, hiring separations, Federal viewpoint survey data, and IT Helpdesk response rates. USDA will explore additional variables for future dashboard versions including transit benefit costs, telework agreements, grant/loan processing times, leased and owned space, space utilization rates, and financial metrics such as lapsed funds and unliquidated obligations. The goal of the dashboard is to provide an accessible platform and quick snapshots of organizational health for executive decision-making and policy-making.

1. PURPOSE

- a. This Departmental Regulation (DR) sets forth the authority, policy, and responsibilities for managing the Telework and Remote Work Programs within the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA).
- b. Effective use of telework and remote work enables USDA to recruit and retain a diverse workforce. Telework and remote work also may result in tangible savings in terms of reduced real estate and physical space demands, utilities, and transit subsidy costs.

2. SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS/CANCELLATIONS

- a. This DR supersedes the Step 1 interim telework guidance provided in Secretary Vilsack's memorandum, Building a Model Workplace with Expanded Telework and Work Flexibilities – Our First Steps, dated March 11, 2021, which repealed DR 4080-811-002, USDA Telework Program, dated January 4, 2018.
- b. All USDA organizations must ensure compliance with the provisions of this regulation and applicable labor relations obligations.
- c. Supplemental Guidance. To the extent the implementation of this directive may affect bargaining unit employees' conditions of employment, management must fulfill its statutory labor relations obligations prior to the directive being implemented. Consequently, Mission Areas, agencies, and staff offices may supplement this directive through the collective bargaining process, with the sole exception of an agency demonstrating a compelling need under the Federal Labor Relation Authority's regulation set forth in 5 Code of Federal Regulations \(CFR\) § 2424.50, Illustrative Criteria.

3. SCOPE

- a. This DR applies to all USDA Mission Areas, agencies, staff offices, organizations, and employees.
- b. This DR requires close collaboration from Departmental, Mission Area, agency, and staff office leadership and across all support functions.

4. TELEWORK POLICY

- a. USDA fully supports and promotes the use of telework for and by eligible employees. The USDA Telework Program is designed to fully implement the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and enhance work-life balance for employees.
- b. USDA permits telework up to 8 days per biweekly pay period based on the duties of the position.
- c. A teleworker's official duty station will remain unchanged if they report physically to their employing office worksite location for 2 full workdays or a combination of workday and some form of personal leave each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis. If a holiday falls on a teleworker's day to physically report to the employing office worksite, it is not required to add an alternate day to the employee's requirement to physically report to the employing office worksite for that specific biweekly pay period.

- d. Telework should be used as a strategic tool to recruit and retain a diverse workforce and support employee work-life balance.
- e. Use of telework is a key component of USDA's ability to operate in situations in which working from the official worksite is unsafe or unavailable. Unscheduled telework will be considered and may be authorized or required during inclement weather, emergency situations that involve national security, extended emergencies, or other unique situations as determined by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) or USDA. Mission Area, agencies, and staff offices should incorporate telework into their Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP).
- f. Eligibility
 - (1) All USDA employees, regardless of tenure, grade, job series, title, or supervisory designation are presumed eligible for telework unless prohibited by other exclusionary provisions of this regulation or negotiated as part of a collective bargaining agreement (CBA).
 - (2) Employees occupying a telework eligible position may telework up to 8 days per pay period based on the duties of the position and the amount of onsite activities that must be performed. Employees, in positions ineligible for telework and those performing similar functions will be treated as fairly and equitably as those that telework. All approved telework arrangements must be documented on an Agriculture Department \(AD\) 3018, USDA Telework Agreement form and must conform to any applicable negotiated labor agreement.
 - (3) Positions may be identified as ineligible for telework based only on the following criteria:
 - (a) Position duties require daily physical presence and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an alternate office or location.
 - (b) Position responsibilities require daily access to specialized equipment located at the official worksite and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an alternate office or location.
 - (c) Position activities require daily access to classified materials and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an alternate office or location.
 - (4) Employees may be identified as ineligible for telework based only on the following criteria:
 - (a) Performance. An employee may be found ineligible for telework if their performance falls below fully successful. In such circumstances, supervisors are required to initiate corrective action in accordance with DR 4040-430, Employee Performance and Awards. The employee's eligibility for telework must be reassessed every 12 months from the date the supervisor determined that the performance fell short.

- (b) Conduct. An employee may be found ineligible for telework if the employee was subject to formal disciplinary action, adverse action, or was placed on a leave restriction within the previous 12 months.
- (c) Permanent Ineligibility. As specified in the Telework Enhancement Act, an employee is permanently ineligible for telework if they have been formally disciplined for the following:
 - 1 Violation of 5 CFR Part 2635, Subpart G, Misuse of Position, of the Standards for Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing their official duties; or
 - 2 Absence Without Leave (AWOL). AWOL is a non-pay status that covers an absence from duty that is not approved. Any USDA employee AWOL for 5 or more days in any calendar year is permanently ineligible.
- (d) Temporary Eligibility. In certain circumstances, an agency may temporarily designate the location of the agency worksite for an employee's position (i.e., the place where the employee would normally work, absent a Telework agreement) as the official worksite even though the employee is not able to report at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite. The employee must be expected to return to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite at some point in the future on a regular and recurring basis. It is the responsibility of the employee's immediate supervisor to decide when it no longer is proper to apply the temporary exception. However, if a teleworking employee is not expected to report to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite on a regular and recurring basis in the future, the temporary exception would no longer be applicable. Supervisors must periodically review (at least every 3 months) an employee's temporary full-time telework arrangement to ensure any approved temporary exception continues to apply. A supervisor may waive this requirement on a temporary basis in situations such as:
 - 1 Recovery from an injury or medical condition;
 - 2 Emergency conditions that prevent an employee from commuting to the official worksite, such as a severe weather emergency or public health crisis;

- 3 An extended period of approved absence from work, e.g., paid leave;
 - 4 A period during which the employee is in temporary duty travel status away from the official worksite; or
 - 5 A period during which an employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than a location covered by a Telework agreement.
- (e) Telework should be considered, when appropriate, for reasonable accommodation requests for employees with a disability or for accommodation of religious beliefs. All reasonable accommodation requests, including those for telework, must comply with DR 4300-008, Reasonable Accommodations and Personal Assistance Services for Employees and Applicants with Disabilities.

5. TELEWORK PROCEDURES

a. Telework Participation

- (1) Telework agreements remain in effect until a change is initiated, though it is a good practice for supervisors to review telework agreements with employees on an annual basis. Either management or an employee may initiate a change to a Telework agreement with a minimum of 45 calendar days advance written notification, or as required by the terms of a CBA, except in emergency situations where the timeframe may be shorter.
 - (a) Teleworking employees are expected to perform their duties and responsibilities at an acceptable level of competence. In accordance with the terms and provisions of any applicable CBA, participation in telework may be changed, suspended, or terminated by management if an employee no longer meets the eligibility criteria or performance expectations.
 - (b) Management will provide sufficient written notice if possible, usually at least 45 calendar days, or as required by the terms of a CBA, before changing, suspending, or terminating a Telework agreement to allow the affected employee to make necessary arrangements. The notice will include the reason, effective date, and any appeals or grievance procedures available to the employee. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the employee is not required for the modification or termination to take effect.
 - (c) Changes (e.g., change in position or change requested by management or employee) will require a new or updated Telework agreement to be completed. A new Telework agreement is not needed for temporary changes in position or supervisor (e.g., due to detail, temporary promotion, or assignments of a short duration).

- (2) In accordance with this DR and the terms and provisions of any applicable CBA, management reserves the right to call employees back to the office, even on scheduled telework days, with at least a 24-hour notice.
 - (3) Teleworkers and remote workers may participate in flexible and compressed work schedules or other flexible work arrangements.
 - (4) Telework is voluntary for all USDA employees. At a minimum, every employee must decide either to participate in the telework program or affirmatively opt out of the telework program by completing the AD-3018 form and giving it to their immediate supervisor.
- b. Unscheduled and Emergency Telework
- (1) OPM or USDA authorized officials may announce emergency operating status guidance allowing for unscheduled or required telework beyond that outlined in the OPM early dismissal guidance for weather events.
 - (2) Management may order employees to evacuate from their worksite and perform work from their home, or an alternative location, during inclement weather, public health crisis, or other emergency without regard to whether the employee has a Telework agreement in place at the time the order to evacuate is issued. Departmental and Mission Area, agency, or staff office COOPs should be followed.
 - (3) Employees with a Telework agreement are expected to telework or take other authorized leave (paid or unpaid), paid time off or a combination of both, as approved by the Mission Area, agency, or staff office.
 - (4) Teleworkers generally are ineligible for weather and safety leave when a closure is announced, except in rare circumstances:
 - (a) Weather and safety leave may be granted to a telework-ready employee who, in the Mission Area, agency, or staff office's judgment, could not have reasonably anticipated the severe weather or other emergency condition so did not take home needed equipment or work.
 - (b) Weather and safety leave may be granted to a telework-ready employee who is prevented from safely working at the alternate site because of the severe weather or other emergency event (e.g., electrical power or broadband outage, fire, flooding or heating and cooling failures). In this case, the home or other approved telework site is also affected in such a way that work cannot be safely performed. Employees must communicate with their supervisors as soon as possible when such work disruptions occur. For more detailed guidance relative to weather and safety leave regulations see 5 CFR § 630.1603, Authorization, and OPM's Governmentwide Dismissal and Closure Procedures.

- (c) Teleworkers who are working in the office when an early departure is announced generally may receive weather and safety leave for time required to commute home (excluding the period for an unpaid lunch break. This means that telework participants must complete the remaining hours of their workday (if any) either by teleworking or taking leave (paid or unpaid) or other paid time off once they arrive home.
- c. Time and Attendance (applies to teleworkers and remote workers)
- (1) Employees must follow their Mission Area, agency, or staff office-specific procedures for accurately coding time spent teleworking and working remotely.
 - (2) USDA procedures for requesting and approving overtime, credit hours, and leave apply to all USDA employees, including teleworkers and remote workers.
- d. Safety
- (1) USDA encourages teleworkers and remote workers to be proactive in ensuring a safe alternate worksite and safe work habits.
 - (2) As a remote worker or while teleworking from an alternate worksite, USDA employees may be covered by the following:
 - (a) Federal Tort Claims Act (FTCA), 28 United States Code \(U.S.C.\) §§ 2671-2680, Tort Claims Procedure; and
 - (b) Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA), 5 U.S.C. Chapter 81, Compensation for Work Injuries.
 - (3) Employees are covered by FECA at their alternate worksite if an injury occurs while performing their official duties.
 - (4) If an injury occurs, the employee must notify their supervisor immediately, provide details of the incident or injury, and complete the following Department of Labor (DOL), Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) forms:
 - (a) OSHA, Form 301, Log of Work-Related Injuries and Illnesses; and
 - (b) DOL, FECA Form CA-1, Federal Employee's Notice of Traumatic Injury and Claim for Continuation of Pay/Compensation; or
 - (c) DOL, FECA CA-2 Form(s):
 - 1 Form CA-2, Notice of Occupational Disease and Claim for Compensation; and

2 Form CA-2a, Notice of Recurrence; and

- (d) As applicable, for Federal Employee's Notice of Traumatic Injury and Claim for Continuation of Pay/Compensation (CA-1) situations, employees can access the DOL Employees' Compensation Operations and Management Portal (ECOMP) through the How to File a Form website.
- (5) The Government is not liable for damages to the employee's personal or real property while the employee is teleworking, except to the extent the Government is held liable by the FTCA.
- e. Reasonable Accommodation and Medical Telework
 - (1) An employee seeking to telework or work remotely as a reasonable accommodation is required to follow the policies and procedures outlined in DR 4300-008.
 - (2) It is not a requirement to document or track a Telework agreement or a Mission Area, agency or staff office unique remote work agreement approved for a reasonable accommodation. However, written documentation in another format may be needed to document the efficacy of the organization's reasonable accommodation arrangement with the employee.
- f. Telework Appeals
 - (1) Appeals of the denial of an employee's request to telework are governed by DR 4070-771-001, Administrative Grievance System, or the applicable negotiated grievance procedure for bargaining unit employees.
 - (2) Employees may appeal the following denials of telework:
 - (a) A written decision of ineligibility based on the duties of the position or the employee's suitability for telework;
 - (b) Denial of an employee's request to telework documented by the submission of a Telework agreement;
 - (c) Management termination of an existing Telework agreement; and
 - (d) Denial of an employee's request to telework without a valid business reason yet, the employee is approved for ad hoc telework.

6. REMOTE WORK POLICY

- a. USDA fully supports and promotes remote work arrangements for and by employees occupying remote work eligible positions. The USDA remote work policy as described in this DR is intended to enhance the work-life balance for employees.

- b. OPM permits Mission Areas, agencies, and staff offices to develop their own agency-specific remote work policies and forms and to implement a strategic and comprehensive framework for such policies. While employees and organizations benefit from remote work arrangements, such arrangements are subject to a Mission Area, agency, or staff office's budget, business and operational needs, this DR, and the terms and provisions of any applicable CBA. USDA organizations must create formal remote work agreement forms to document employee requests, approvals and denials of remote work opportunities.
- c. Remote work is an arrangement under which USDA employees are scheduled to perform their position's job duties at an approved alternate worksite, typically the employee's residence. The remote worksite may be within or outside of the local commuting area of the Mission Area, agency, or staff office's worksite. Remote work employees will be expected to work at a designated approved location, typically the employee's residence, on a regular and continuing basis.
- d. Remote work arrangements may be used for a variety of business reasons, including, but not limited to:
 - (1) Retaining high performing employees who must move for personal reasons and would otherwise leave the USDA;
 - (2) Recruiting employees with specialized skills, who may not want or be able to relocate for personal reasons;
 - (3) Achieving Mission Area, agency, or staff office real estate or other business cost reductions;
 - (4) Reducing costs associated with filling vacancies when employees must relocate; and
 - (5) Increasing employee work-life balance, resulting in increased morale.
- e. Remote Work Eligibility. At a minimum, the following conditions or criteria will be considered when a remote work arrangement is requested or when included in a Job Opportunity Announcement (JOA):
 - (1) As part of the ongoing position management processes, each USDA Mission Area, agency, or staff office will review positions to determine eligibility for a remote work arrangement. Eligibility must be determined prior to posting a JOA; and
 - (2) A Mission Area, agency, or staff office must consider:
 - (a) Job duties that only can be performed onsite and the amount of time required to complete such duties in a typical bi-weekly pay period;

- (b) The amount of time required each week to participate in other aspects of the work unit operations such as training, meetings, or collaboration, including collaboration with stakeholders that cannot be conducted virtually;
- (c) The type and frequency of travel associated with the position; and
- (d) Any requirement for accessing classified information.

7. REMOTE WORK PROCEDURES

- a. Although remote employees generally are not expected to report to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite, the supervisor can require the presence of a remote employee at the worksite in certain situations, e.g., random drug testing, training, or an official meeting. Supervisors should provide as much advance notice as possible.
- b. Remote work arrangements should be cost-neutral or low-cost, to the extent practical, after factoring in the net cost savings accrued moving each employee to a remote arrangement. Supervisors should minimize official travel between the remote work location and the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite unless necessary to accomplish mission critical or operational needs or where alternative virtual communication means (e.g., teleconference, virtual meetings) are not suitable or available.
- c. When travel is required, clear communication between the employee and supervisor will ensure an accurate understanding of mutual responsibilities and obligations. When a Mission Area, agency, or staff office authorizes a remote employee to travel to an office worksite for official duty, the agency will pay travel costs consistent with applicable travel regulations and policies.
- d. Remote employees must be treated equitably for appraisals of job performance, training, awards, reassignment, promotions, changes in grade, work requirements, approval of overtime work, flexible and compressed work schedules, and other actions within management's discretion. Remote employees are entitled to receive progress reviews and annual performance appraisals from their supervisors in accordance with USDA's performance management policies.

8. ESTABLISHING OR CHANGING A REMOTE WORK ARRANGEMENT

- a. When creating a JOA, hiring managers must identify:
 - (1) Whether the position is eligible for a telework or remote work arrangement; and

- (2) Whether a remote work arrangement is required for the position. Candidates accepting a position where a remote work arrangement is required must accept the arrangement as a condition of employment.
- b. USDA employees may request to work remotely, to change an existing remote work arrangement, or to terminate their remote work arrangement. Absent urgent circumstances and in accordance with the terms of an applicable CBA, employee requests to change their remote work location or remote work arrangement is limited to once every 6 months. The employee requesting a change must:
 - (1) Discuss the request with their supervisor. Changing the employee's duty station likely will affect the employee in several ways (e.g., locality pay, Reduction-in-Force (RIF) competitive area, bargaining unit status, unemployment compensation). When discussing such requests with the employee, management must address other available workplace flexibilities, including but not limited to, alternative work schedules, details, leave options (e.g., extended leave without pay (LWOP), and shared leave programs.
 - (2) The employee then may submit a request for a remote work arrangement, change to a remote work arrangement, or termination of a remote work arrangement in writing. The request must include the proposed duty station and effective date.
 - c. To the extent the eligibility criteria in Section 6e(2) of this directive are met, supervisors normally will approve requests to set up a remote work arrangement from employees occupying positions that are remote-eligible. Supervisors may consider, however, whether there is a need to limit the geographic location of the duty station for the remote work arrangement due to travel or other mission requirements.
 - d. Supervisory considerations of employee requests to change or terminate a remote work arrangement include:
 - (1) That the proposed creation or change of a remote work arrangement does not negatively affect the Mission Area, agency, or staff office's budget or ability to execute its mission; and
 - (2) Requests to terminate a remote work arrangement may be denied due to space limitations within a Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite.
 - e. Generally, to the extent the eligibility criteria in Section 6e(2) of this directive are present, employees may be considered eligible for a remote work arrangement. However, as with telework, an employee becomes permanently ineligible for a remote work arrangement if they have been formally disciplined for either:
 - (1) A violation of Subpart G, Misuse of Position, of the Standards for Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computing device to include cell phones and tablets or while performing official, Federal Government duties; or

- (2) Absence without leave (AWOL) for 5 or more days in any calendar year.
- f. Performance and Conduct. Employees on remote work arrangements are subject to the same laws, rules, regulations, and policies that address performance deficiencies and employee misconduct.
- g. In USDA, appeals to a denial of a request for a remote work arrangement are governed by DR 4070-771-001 or the applicable negotiated grievance procedure for bargaining unit employees.

9. PAY, HOLIDAY, AND TIME AND ATTENDANCE

- a. The basic rate of pay of a remote employee is determined by the employee's base pay rate, the applicable locality pay rate and any special pay rate associated with the employee's official duty station of record, as recorded on the employee's OPM Standard Form \(SF\)-50, Notification of Personnel Action. For remote employees, the official worksite typically is their residence.
- b. Teleworker and remote workers are required to follow Departmental policies and procedures for requesting and using approved leave. Leave should be requested and approved in accordance with standard leave approval procedures, with leave hours accurately recorded in the time and attendance system.
- c. Mission Areas, agencies, and staff offices generally should not pay relocation expenses related to remote work arrangements such as expenses to relocate to a new official duty station or to return to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite when such arrangements were requested by the employee and is not the result of a directed reassignment.
- d. Remote work employees traveling on official business are eligible for the same travel benefits as non-remote work employees. Supervisors should, whenever possible, minimize official travel for remote employees. Alternate communication technologies should be leveraged to the greatest extent possible to minimize travel unless necessary.
- e. Remote work employees generally will not have an assigned or dedicated workspace at the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite. Performance issues of remote employees will be addressed in accordance with USDA policies, regulations, and applicable CBA provisions. Absent exigent circumstances, supervisors are expected to allow the employee to continue as a remote employee while addressing performance or conduct issues in accordance with USDA policies and in accordance with the terms and provisions of any applicable CBA.

- f. All required training and travel for remote employees as determined by the supervisor (e.g., mandatory participation at meetings or conferences at the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite) will be subject to normal training approval requests, applicable travel regulations, and Mission Area, agency, or staff office funding.
- g. Remote work employees may be eligible for Workers' Compensation benefits for work-related injuries or illnesses sustained while in the performance of duty under FECA, which is administered by the DOL's Office of Workers' Compensation Programs (OWCP). For further information, see 5 U.S.C. 81.

10. DOMESTIC EMPLOYEES TELEWORKING OVERSEAS

- a. Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas (DETO) are overseas work arrangements that allow Federal Executive Branch employees to perform the work requirements and duties of their positions temporarily from approved overseas locations via DETO agreements. Employees have no authorization to telework from a foreign location without approval from USDA and the Department of State (DOS).
- b. USDA employees who may be considered for a DETO are those who are the spouse or domestic partner of a sponsoring Foreign Service Officer, Federal Civil Service employee, Department of Defense (DoD) employee, or uniformed service member assigned overseas. To be considered for a DETO, the USDA employee must be on the U.S. Government orders of the sponsoring individual assigned overseas.
- c. DETO requests will be considered on a case-by-case basis. Employees must consult with the OHRM as early as possible in the process because DOS approval can take from 6 months to a year, if not longer.
- d. Any DETO request must be approved by the applicable Mission Area, agency, or staff office prior to submission to the DOS and must follow the requirements in this DR, the DOS Executive Secretary Memorandum, Requirements for Executive Branch Employees Teleworking in Foreign Locations, dated June 7, 2016, and the DOS Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM), 3 FAM 2370, Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) policy guidance, dated August 11, 2021.
- e. Before approval, the employee must complete a DETO agreement using the DOS DETO agreement form, fulfill any overseas training requirements, and obtain proper documentation (e.g., passports, visas, work permits) to perform work overseas. The completed DETO agreement must be submitted through the employee's supervisory chain of command for approval. Once approved, it must be submitted to the DOS.
- f. A DETO may entail significant costs to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office, the employee, or both. Therefore, prior to approving a DETO agreement, the applicable Mission Area, agency, or staff office must be prepared to address any contingencies or problems with the overseas telework arrangement, including situations when the employee or Mission Area, agency, or staff office may need to terminate the DETO.

- g. Upon approval of a DETO agreement, the approved case must be forwarded to the servicing Human Resource Office to change the employee's duty station to the overseas location. The DOS regulation 3 FAM 2370 governs the availability of overseas allowances, including the termination of locality pay, and other differentials for employees.
- h. DOS policy requirements apply to all employees working under a DETO.

11. ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

- a. The Director, Office of Human Resource Management (OHRM) serving as the USDA Chief Human Capital Officer (CHCO), or designee, will serve as the Telework Management Officer (TMO), as required by the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010. The TMO will:

 - (6) Designate a Telework Program Coordinator to manage the program.
- c. TPCs will:
- (1) Administer the USDA Telework Program for their respective organizations per this DR and all applicable laws, rules, and regulations;
 - (2) Ensure supervisors are aware of the requirement to notify their employees;
 - (3) Ensure all employees are notified of their eligibility to telework and encourage them to annually review or update their Telework agreements or opt-out by selecting the AD-3018 Opt-Out Section check boxes;
 - (4) Notify and provide new employees with a link to or copy of this policy.
 - (5) Ensure supervisors are aware of the requirement to provide written notification and explanation to ineligible employees who are not authorized to participate in the Telework and Remote Work Programs;
 - (6) Ensure supervisors are aware of their responsibility to account for Telework agreements;
 - (7) Ensure supervisors are aware of the requirement that teleworkers who are designated as emergency employees or mission-critical emergency employees are identified as such in their Telework agreements;
 - (8) Ensure managers are aware of the requirement for teleworkers and supervisors to complete required training prior to implementing a Telework arrangement;
 - (9) Coordinate with relevant parties on inventories of available computers, laptops, printers, and other office equipment for use in the Telework Program prior to reporting the property as excess;
 - (10) Promote the appeals process as defined in this DR;
 - (11) Report the required telework program information, as requested by the TMO;

- (12) Maintain all documentation in accordance with National Archives and Records Administration (NARA), General Records Schedule \(GRS\) 22.2, Section 080, Supervisor's personnel files, which requires Telework agreements to be retained for 1 year after the end of the employee's participation in the program;
 - (13) Ensure employees are provided information on the USDA Telework and Remote Work Programs, including eligibility criteria and application procedures;
 - (14) Ensure employees and supervisors accurately record official time spent in telework or remote work status in the time and attendance system.
 - (15) Establish a system to receive feedback from employees about the implementation effectiveness and impact of the Telework and Remote Work Programs; and
 - (16) Encourage supervisors to review Telework agreements with their employees annually.
- d. USDA Supervisors and Managers will:
- (1) Assist the TPC in administering the Telework and Remote Work Programs including providing copies of approved agreements and notices of agreement terminations;
 - (2) Complete the required Telework training in AgLearn or other specified training system;
 - (3) Notify all assigned employees of their eligibility to telework, work remotely, or opt-out;
 - (4) Within 10 business days of receipt of a telework or remote work request, meet with the employee to approve, modify, or deny the request based on the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and this DR. If the request is denied or terminated, provide written justification to the employee and the Mission Area, agency, or staff office TPC;
 - (5) Provide written notification and explanation to employees who are not authorized to participate in the USDA Telework and Remote Work Programs;
 - (6) Review approved Telework agreements for all assigned employees annually;
 - (7) Ensure consistent and fair administration of the Telework and Remote Work Programs policies and procedures in their areas of responsibility;
 - (8) Upon approval of a Telework agreement or Remote Work agreement, establish and communicate clear expectations with employees regarding methods of communication, (i.e., customer service, timeframes for returning phone calls, voicemail messages, and email communication), staff meeting attendance, duty hours, and the accurate coding of telework for time and attendance purposes;

- (9) Evaluate all teleworkers, remote workers and opt-out workers under the same performance management system and afford the same professional opportunities, assignments, and treatment with regards to work projects assigned, periodic appraisal of job performance, awards, recognition, training and developmental opportunities, promotions, and retention incentives as those employees working from organization worksites;
- (10) Ensure a personnel action is effected to document the correct official duty location for each employee approved for remote work. Temporary exceptions may apply as set out in Section 4f(4)(d), Temporary Eligibility, above;
- (11) Resolve telework denial and remote work denial appeals or grievances in a timely manner;
- (12) Ensure compliance with approved telework and remote work agreements in their areas of responsibility; and
- (13) Ensure official time spent teleworking or working remotely is properly documented and recorded in the time and attendance system.

e. Teleworkers and Remote Workers will:

- (1) Follow the conditions of their approved telework or remote work agreements;
- (2) Follow USDA safety requirements and ensure proper security of USDA equipment, information, and materials;
- (3) Provide the same level of support, availability, and accessibility to customers, coworkers, and their supervisor(s) as if working at a USDA official duty location;
- (4) Meet organizational and individual work requirements as established (e.g., customer service, timeframe for returning phone calls, voicemail messages, and email communication), staff meeting attendance, duty hours, and accurately coding time and attendance;
- (5) Complete all applicable mandatory training courses;
- (6) Ensure appropriate arrangements for the care of dependents while teleworking. Telework is not a substitute for dependent care. However, this DR does not preclude a teleworking employee from having a caregiver in the home who provides care to the dependent(s) while the employee teleworks. Also, a dependent may be permitted in the home provided they do not require constant supervision or care (i.e., older child or adolescent) and their presence does not disrupt the ability to telework effectively;

- (7) Ensure the alternate worksite provides adequate connectivity and technology to accomplish work tasks. Employees are expected to provide internet service and other general utility costs at their own expense unless otherwise negotiated within a CBA;
- (8) Acknowledge, in the applicable Telework or organizational remote work agreement forms that they are bound by the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch while teleworking or working remotely; and
- (9) Understand that travel provisions applicable to employees working at an official duty station also apply to teleworkers and remote workers. A teleworker or remote worker who is directed to travel to another worksite (e.g., official duty station) during their regularly scheduled basic tour of duty would have the travel hours credited as hours of work. Similarly, teleworkers who are required to travel to the official duty location after their regularly scheduled telework basic tour of duty to perform irregular or occasional overtime work are entitled to at least 2 hours of overtime pay or compensatory time off (5 CFR § 550.112 \(h\), Call-back overtime work, and 5 CFR 551.401\(e\)).

12. INQUIRIES

Direct all inquiries about this DR to your employing organization's servicing human resources office. Organizational human resource directors or CHCOs will manage all inquiries coming from their employees. Any inquiries that cannot be satisfactorily responded to may be sent to the USDA CHCO for further discussion and resolution.

DEFINITIONS

Alternate Worksite. A work location, other than the official worksite, that satisfies all requisite Federal health and safety laws, rules, and regulations pertaining to the workplace, where an employee performs their official duties. Supervisors may authorize telework from several alternate worksites. Temporary authorizations or changes in the location of designated alternative worksites do not require a new AD-3018, USDA Telework Agreement.

Locality Pay Area. An Office of Management and Budget (OMB) defined metropolitan statistical area or combined statistical area that determines certain location-based pay entitlements based on the employee's official duty station as documented on the employee's SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action.

Mobile Work. Work that is characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in a customer's or other worksite as opposed to a single authorized alternate worksite. Examples include site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management, and work performed while commuting, traveling between worksites, or on Temporary Duty (TDY). Mobile work is not considered telework; however, mobile workers may be eligible to participate in telework, as applicable.

Official Duty Station. For the purposes of this Departmental Regulation, the terms "Duty Station", "Official Duty Station", and "Official Worksite" are synonymous. The official duty station is the management-approved location where employees regularly perform their official duties. If an employee physically reports to the employing Mission Area, agency, or staff office official worksite at least twice in a bi-weekly pay period, the employing Mission Area, agency, or staff office official worksite will be designated as the employee's official duty station. If the employee's work involves recurring travel or the employee's work location varies (mobile work) on a recurring basis, the official worksite is the location where the work activities of the employee's position of record are based, as determined by the employing Mission Area, agency, or staff office, subject to the requirement that the official worksite must be in a locality pay area in which the employee is required to regularly perform work. A Mission Area, agency, or staff office must document an employee's official duty station on the employee's Notification of Personnel Action (Standard Form 50 (SF-50) or equivalent). Once the official duty station has been officially recorded on the SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action (OPM, Guide to Processing Personnel Actions, GPPA, Chapter 23, Change in Duty Station), it cannot be changed without prior approval of the employing Mission Area, agency, or staff office accompanied by processing a formal, documented personnel action.

Opt-Out. A telework-eligible and ready employee who voluntarily declines to participate in the USDA Telework Program. Employees who opt-out must sign and check the voluntary opt-out box on the AD-3018, USDA Telework Agreement.

Remote Work. A workforce flexibility arrangement under which an employee is scheduled to perform work within or outside the local commuting area of their Mission Area, agency, or staff office's worksite and is not required to report to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite on a regular and recurring basis.

Remote Work Arrangement. A work arrangement in which:

- a. The employee performs assigned official duties and other authorized activities at an approved alternate work location, typically the employee's residence, within or outside of the local commuting area of the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite;
- b. On a regular and continuing basis;
- c. Is not required to physically report to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite on any frequent, regular, or recurring basis; and
- d. The approved alternate worksite is, for pay and other purposes, the employee's official duty station, as indicated on the employee's SF-50, per 5 CFR § 531.605, Determining an employee's official worksite.

Remote Work Eligibility. A determination that a position's required duties and tasks can be completed away from the Mission Area, agency, or staff office's worksite with no frequent, regular, or recurring requirement to be physically present at the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite.

Routine Telework. Regularly scheduled telework that occurs no less than 1 day and no more than 8 days (without exception) scheduled per biweekly pay period, on a recurring basis and is part of an approved work schedule.

Situational Telework (also referred to as ad hoc, episodic, unscheduled, and intermittent). Telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked were not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular, telework schedule.

Telework. A work arrangement in which an employee performs and completes official duties and responsibilities from an alternate worksite. Telework may be authorized for an entire duty day or a portion of one. Telework does not include the following:

- a. Work performed while on official travel status;
- b. Work performed while commuting to or from work;
- c. Remote work; or
- d. Mobile work.

Telework Agreement (AD-3018). A written agreement records the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement, as approved by the supervisor.

Telework-Ready. Refers to all eligible employees with an approved telework agreement and who are prepared and equipped to telework. If unable to telework when required, use of paid or unpaid leave may be required.

Teleworker. An eligible employee with an approved telework agreement who performs their official duties at an alternate worksite.

Unscheduled Telework. Telework that is authorized in response to specific duty status announcements issued by OPM or other authorized USDA officials for use during period of inclement weather, a pandemic or public health crisis, or other emergency situations, or with prior supervisory approval, telework used to maintain productivity during short-term disruptions to normal operating procedures.

Chief Human Capital Officer
Office of Human Resources Management

SUBJECT: Change to the Application of the USDA Telework Policy for Managers and Supervisors within the National Capital Region*

In November 2021, U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) revised our telework policy to account for employees' priorities with regard to workplace flexibility and expanded remote work beyond pre-pandemic limitations. These changes made our policy consistent with what it was the last time Secretary Vilsack led the Department, and feedback indicates these changes have helped increase employee morale and improve USDA's status as a competitive employer. At the same time in 2021, USDA instituted a "future of work" working group to plan for a time when COVID-19 would no longer drive where and how we deliver our missions. The working group surveyed employees, assessed our organizational performance, and studied research by outside experts. It became clear that the future of work for USDA would not be a full sudden return to the time when most employees worked in-person, every day, in an office building. Technology, an emerging recognition of the need for better work-life balance, and the expense of a massive and costly real estate portfolio all pointed to the need for a flexible approach, and this approach is one that is still active within USDA--because it has worked.

More than a year later, we are looking to the future and making sure our department is in the strongest possible position to recruit and retain talent, deliver for our stakeholders, and facilitate a positive work environment. The Department's managers and supervisors are fundamental to these goals, and that is why, beginning September 10, 2023, telework eligible managers and supervisors in the National Capital Region (NCR) will report to and work at least 50 percent of their duty time in-person at their government office worksite. This change in the application of the telework policy supports the Department's implementation of Office of Management and Budget's (OMB) M-23-15 Memorandum on Organizational Health and Performance. This instruction will not impact those working under remote work agreements, telework eligible non-managers or non-supervisors, or telework eligible managers or supervisors outside the NCR. This memorandum outlines the changes and describes how USDA will take steps to foster an intentional, inclusive, collaborative workplace where USDA employees want to spend time with their colleagues in person.

INSTRUCTION ON SUPERVISORY TELEWORK PARTICIPATION

- Because most USDA employees across the country are going into the work site almost every day and because USDA employees continue to be incredibly productive, we will maintain our current telework policy for most employees.
- To ensure that managers and supervisors are more consistently available for in person interactions with employees and colleagues and onsite activities, telework eligible managers and supervisors in the NCR are instructed to work at least 50 percent of their duty time per pay period in-person at their government office worksite effective September 10, 2023.
- Mission Area and Agency Leaders will need to ensure that managers and supervisors update their telework agreements in order to implement this instruction by the above date.
- The instruction will not apply to telework eligible non-managers and non-supervisors who may still telework up to 8 days per pay period based on the duties of their position and the amount of onsite activities to be performed, at the discretion of management as reflected in the approved telework agreement.
- In the NCR, Mission Areas, Agencies and Staff Offices are instructed to establish two core days per pay period for Managers and Supervisors and one core day per pay period for all other telework eligible employees at the appropriate organizational level for all participating telework employees to work together in-person at the government office worksite. While determination of how to use these days is largely at the discretion of the organizational leadership, the recommendation is that one day be used at the more granular level for project collaboration and the other be used for Department, Mission Area, or Agency level for leadership engagement. Final implementation of this core day model is subject to all appropriate bargaining unit negotiations, but organizations should plan to implement the core day model in September 2023.
- This instruction does not currently apply to employees who are operating under a remote work arrangement. However, Departmental Administration is conducting an analysis of the efficacy, equity, and advisability of USDA's current remote work policy to determine whether to make future changes.
- The Department is establishing a mechanism to review organizational health and performance on a regular cadence. In December the Department will conduct a data-driven review to determine whether to make further modifications to the telework and remote work policy. USDA will leverage both mission support and mission delivery metrics. This includes, but is not limited to, data related to the workforce recruitment and retention, employee engagement, physical space usage, financial management, and programmatic key performance indicators. After reviewing this data, the Department will consider whether or not an additional rebalancing of policy needs to take place as we look ahead to 2024.
- While this instruction applies only to managers and supervisors in the NCR, we encourage all teleworking employees to increase their in-person presence and remind everyone that meetings, trainings, and priority projects increasingly require in-person collaboration and participation, at the discretion of management.
- These instructions will become effective September 10, 2023. Limited extensions to this date may be considered on a case-by-case basis with supervisor approval and guidance from the Department.

As a reminder, managers and supervisors who have an approved telework agreement must honor it and work in person as defined in the approved telework agreement. It is the responsibility of Mission Area, Agency, and Staff Office leadership to ensure that these instructions are adhered to, and accountability measures are established as needed.

Additionally, any Senior Executive Service (SES) member, or equivalent employees such as Senior Level (SL) or Senior Science Research and Technology Service (SSTS) positions, may only receive permission for remote designation by exception and with approval from their Mission Area or Staff Office leadership and concurrence of Departmental Administration.

In furtherance of the OMB Memorandum M-23-15 dated April 13, 2023, it is USDA's goal to ensure excellent provision of services to our many customers and stakeholders, while also preserving workplace flexibilities for our most valuable resource – our employees. Requiring increased in-person attendance and collaboration by managers and supervisors, encouraging more in-person work by all telework participants, and continuing to establish and monitor performance metrics affords USDA the best chance to be successful.

As we continue to transition in this environment, while meeting our mission needs, please know that we will take all steps possible to make any changes smooth, less disruptive, and as inviting as possible. These include:

- Providing information on how to conveniently obtain available transit subsidies.
- Exploring the feasibility of utilizing available space at alternative sites in Maryland and Virginia, like the George Washington Carver Center or the Riverdale Building, to ease commuting burdens for those living closer to those sites.
- Sponsoring more on-site events that celebrate accomplishments and bring people together; and
- Improving the food options in the worksite.

Please see the attached FAQs that provide more details. We will continue to refine how we implement this instruction to make working in-person more meaningful and more attractive. Please be assured that building and maintaining a high performing work force of dedicated employees and having USDA be a great place to work remains a top priority for the Department.

*National Capital Region is defined in the attached FAQs document.

Dear USDA colleagues,

This summer marks an inflection point for our country. More than has been the case for several years, we are able to make freer choices about how, where, and with whom we spend our time, now that the COVID-19 public health emergency has ended.

Looking back on what we've overcome, I want to extend a special acknowledgement and thanks to the thousands of USDA employees who continued to report to your regular duty stations throughout the pandemic—like inspecting meat and poultry and fighting fires—because the nature of this essential work means that it cannot be done remotely. Those USDA employees were among the many heroes who helped the rest of us get through a tough period. At the same time, those who had no choice but to work remotely continued to perform their duties through unbelievable disruption to your daily lives.

Over the past 30 months, USDA has achieved great things and made transformational changes that will benefit Americans for decades. Regardless of where you work, you have risen to the occasion time after time, day after day.

Because of you, we are delivering our mission.

We now have an opportunity to consider all that the pandemic taught us – about our resilience as a nation, about our individual priorities and values, and about so many of the choices we make. As we look to the future, we must also make sure our department is in the strongest possible position to recruit and retain talent, deliver for our stakeholders, and facilitate a positive work environment.

That's why, as part of a long-term transition as we continue to gain new information about what the future of work looks like for USDA now that the public health emergency has ended, we are announcing some initial workplace changes that primarily will affect managers and supervisors in the National Capital Region.

Beginning September 10, 2023, telework eligible managers and supervisors in the National Capital Region (NCR) will work at least 50 percent of their on-duty time per pay period in-person. USDA leaders, managers and supervisors are instrumental to our organizational success and our workplace environment, and this will ensure they are more consistently available for in-person interactions with employees and colleagues and onsite activities. Additionally in the NCR, Mission Areas, Agencies and Staff Offices will determine two core days per pay period for managers and supervisors and one core day per pay period for all other eligible telework employees at the appropriate organizational level for all participating telework employees to work together in-person at the government office worksite. All employing organizations with potential bargaining obligations should plan accordingly to meet the September 2023 implementation date.

Our Departmental Administration and Office of Budget and Program Analysis teams will spend the remainder of the year refining and deploying metrics to help identify performance standards and organizational health under our current policies, which we will review before determining whether to make further modifications to USDA's telework policy. Through this process we will continue to strive to provide sufficient notice to allow impacted employees time to adjust to future changes and reduce the disruption to new obligations and daily life cadences you may have developed over the past few years.

These updates build on a responsive progression of workplace policy changes that we have put in place over the past two years to account for evolving demands of the pandemic, our strategic priorities, and employee well-being. Effective November 2021, USDA revised the telework policy to account for employees' priority on workplace flexibility and expanded remote work beyond pre-pandemic limitations. These changes made our policy consistent with what it was the last time I was Secretary, and feedback shows they have helped increase employee morale and improve USDA's status as a competitive employer. At the same time, over the past few years, technology and the cultural norms around how we work have changed considerably. To consider these changes, we instituted a future of work working group that prompted planning for a time when COVID-19 would no longer drive where and how we deliver our missions. The working group surveyed employees, assessed our organizational performance, and studied research by outside experts. We found an emerging recognition of the need for better work-life balance, and the expense of a massive and costly real estate portfolio, all pointed to the need for a flexible approach that enables staff to continue to telework with frequency while adding more structure and intentionality to in-person time spent together.

In making the changes announced today, I want to emphasize that our overarching goal is to ensure USDA is a welcoming and competitive workplace that provides excellent service to our many customers and stakeholders. I also acknowledge that there is much difference of opinion about the relative merits and downsides of telework and remote work. Like most large employers, the Federal Government is navigating this issue, and at the direction of the Office of Management and Budget each department is considering how to proceed given their different situations. For now, increasing in-person work by managers and supervisors in the NCR, encouraging more in-person work by all, and continuing to establish and monitor performance metrics gives USDA the best chance to be successful.

Accompanying this message, you will find a memo from USDA's Office of Human Resources which outlines the key points of this policy shift in more detail. You can also find additional details in the FAQs which will be updated as needed to reflect additional incoming questions.

To help address any questions about these changes, feel free to reach out to your Human Resources professionals as usual. In addition, in late July and into August we will schedule a series of Office Hours where you can ask our Human Resources professionals about this instruction. Stay tuned for more details in the days ahead and I hope you will join me in conversation about how we can embrace this change together and find a balance between flexibility and community that meets the moment. Questions can be directed to futureofwork@usda.gov.

Have a great summer and be sure to take time to be with your loved ones.

Sincerely,

Secretary Thomas J. Vilsack

UPDATED CHANGES TO THE APPLICATION OF THE USDA TELEWORK POLICY FOR MANAGERS AND SUPERVISORS IN THE NATIONAL CAPITAL REGION

July 13, 2023

In support of the Department's continued implementation of the Office of Management and Budget's (OMB) Memorandum M-23-15 on Organizational Health and Performance dated April 13, 2023, USDA recognizes the vital role managers and supervisors play in advancing USDA's goals of recruiting and retaining talent, delivering for our stakeholders, and facilitating effective staff engagement and work environment. As such, beginning September 10, 2023, all telework eligible managers and supervisors in the National Capital Region (NCR) will report to and work at least 50 percent of their duty time inperson at their designated Government office worksite. The following Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) are provided to assist impacted personnel and are explicitly limited in application to the aforementioned managers and supervisors.

Q: What is the new instruction for application of the USDA telework policy for the National Capital Region?

A: The new instruction is for telework eligible managers and supervisors located in the NCR and requires these managers and supervisors to report to and work inperson at least 50 percent of their regular working hours each pay period. This is a change from our existing policy, which currently allows telework eligible managers and supervisors in the NCR to telework for up to 8 days per pay period.

Q: Does this new instruction apply to me?

A: This instruction applies to telework eligible managers and supervisors in the NCR. This instruction does not apply if you are a manager or supervisor outside of the NCR or a manager or supervisor with a remote duty station.

Q: How does this instruction define manager?

A: A manager is an individual in a position with duties and responsibilities which require or authorize the individual to formulate, determine, or influence the policies of their operating unit.

Q: How does this instruction define supervisor?

A: A supervisor is an individual who has the authority to hire, direct, assign, promote, reward, transfer, furlough, layoff, recall, suspend, discipline, or remove employees, and otherwise use authority that is not merely routine or clerical in nature but requires the consistent exercise of independent judgment.

Q: What areas are considered located in the National Capital Region?

A: For application of this instruction, the National Capital Region refers to the:

- Whitten Building,
- South Building,
- Yates Building,
- Braddock Place,
- Riverdale
- George Washington Carver Center.

Q: I am a remote worker. Does the new instruction apply to me?

A: No. The new instruction applies to telework eligible managers and supervisors with an agency worksite in the NCR. The policy does not apply to managers and supervisors with an official duty station located outside of the NCR, including remote workers whose SF-50 indicates their home city and state as their official duty station.

Q: When does this new instruction take effect?

A: The new instruction requiring managers and supervisors to report to the agency worksite at least 50 percent of their regular working hours each pay period is effective for Pay Period 19, which begins September 10, 2023.

Q: I am not a manager or supervisor, but I am a teleworker and my agency worksite is located in the National Capital Region. Does the new instruction apply to me?

A: No. At this time, you may still telework up to 8 days each pay period, in accordance with the Departmental Regulation 4080-811-002 on Telework and Remote Work Programs and your approved telework agreement. As a reminder, employees with telework agreements can be required to work in-person as needed, for example if the team is gathering for a mandatory training.

Q: Who do I contact regarding a reasonable accommodation?

A: Please contact your Agency's Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator for information on requesting a reasonable accommodation.

Q: This instruction does not apply to me right now, but will there be changes so it applies to me eventually?

A: In accordance with the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Memorandum M-23-15 dated April 13, 2023, each Mission Area, Agency, and Staff Office is evaluating its current telework policy to determine whether to make further modifications to the telework policy. Any such changes would only occur after engaging in appropriate bargaining or in accordance with current active bargaining agreements, if applicable.

Q: What are the criteria for measuring the assessment over the remainder of the year?

A: USDA will use data and evidence in organizational health and performance discussions. USDA will leverage both mission support and mission delivery metrics. This includes, but is not limited to, metrics related to the workforce (hiring and separations), employee engagement (FEVS results), physical space (leased and owned space use), financial management (financial obligation and outlays), and program key performance indicators (including those reported in USDA's Annual Performance Plan on performance.gov).

Q: Will I have to complete a new telework agreement?

A: If you are approved to telework and you are a manager or supervisor with an agency worksite located in the National Capital Region, then your AD-3018, Telework Agreement form will need to be updated to show that you will report to the agency worksite at least 50 percent of your regular working hours each pay period, if it does not currently meet that policy.

Q: Do I have to report to my current designated worksite to meet the instruction's requirements?

A: Yes, unless otherwise instructed or approved by your supervisor. Changes to worksite location designations are to be determined based on the need for meaningful inperson staff engagement and organizational business requirements.

Q: Will the Telework Departmental Regulation be changed?

A: No. The Office of Human Resources does not anticipate making any changes to the current Departmental Regulation (DR) 4080-811-002 with respect to managers and supervisors in the NCR. The Department will assess whether any future changes to the DR are needed moving forward.

Q: How will this instruction be enforced?

A: Agency Heads are required to report and verify adherence to this instruction.

Q: What will the cafeteria options be in the Whitten and South Buildings?

A: The following food service options are currently available at the South and Whitten Buildings:

- USDA's cafeteria is currently open from 7:00 am to 2:00 pm, Monday through Friday. The Office of Operations is working to implement a new contract which, come September, will allow for a series of pop-up style food stations.
- Claudia's (South Building sub-basement) is open from 7:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m., Monday through Friday.
- The Green Olive (South Building sub-basement) is open from 7:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m., Monday through Friday.
- Dunkin' Sandwich Shop (Whitten basement) is open from 7:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Q: Will I be able to park at the office?

A: At the Headquarters Complex, free employee parking is available to qualifying carpools/vanpools, facility maintenance vehicles, Government vehicles, employees with approved accommodations, Senior Executives, and limited visitor parking.

- Employees with an assigned parking space in the South Building have until 9:00 a.m. Monday–Friday to occupy their assigned space. After 9:00 a.m., all parking spaces (not marked as reserved or handicap) in the South Building Courts 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6 are available on a first-come, first-served basis for any USDA employee or contractor with valid USDA identification.
- For questions about parking availability and qualifications for free parking at USDA Headquarters, contact the Office of Operations (OO) Customer Service/Parking Administration Services at 202-720-PARK (7275) or via e-mail at: parkingunit@usda.gov. They will redirect your inquiries to your Agency Parking Coordinator if necessary. Their office is located on the first floor Room 1052-S, South Building.
- There is motorcycle parking in Court 5 of the South Building, Lot 8 of the Whitten Building and on C Street (outside Court 2).
- There is bicycle parking at the South Building in Court 2 as well as bike boxes at the Whitten Building in Lots 10a and 10b.
- Short-term metered parking is available on Independence Avenue SW, 12th Street SW, C Street SW, and D Street SW.
- There is also a parking garage (The Portals III, 202-479-6872) located at 1201 Maryland Avenue SW, Washington, DC.
- All facilities in the National Capital Region are easily accessible and within walking distance of a metro station, except for the George Washington Carver Center, which is serviced by a shuttle.

Q: WMATA has ongoing issues. Will there be workplace flexibilities to accommodate for that?

A: Please work with your direct supervisor to discuss any temporary flexibilities needed to accommodate a specific issue related to WMATA. Employees are expected to adhere to their approved work schedules and approved telework agreements. The Office of Management and Budget is hosting ongoing conversations on these issues with leadership of WMATA to make them aware of the coming influx of Federal employees.

Q: COVID-19 is not completely gone. How will you ensure our health and safety?

A: USDA will continue operating under the COVID-19 Workplace Safety Plan \(usda.gov\) as required by the Safer Federal Workforce Taskforce.

Q: What health and support services will the Department be providing?

A: For employees located in the National Capital Region, there is the Dr. Gregory Parham Medical Unit in the South Building (Room 1411, first floor, Wing 4). The Medical Unit provides primary care services to include vaccines and flu shots. You may reach them at (202) 720-9522 or use the convenient USDA Medical Unit - Request Appointment - Kareo site to request an appointment.

Q: How does this policy apply to contractors?

A: Contractors will continue to follow the requirements in their contract.

Q: Will the physical spaces be set up to accommodate core days and hybrid meetings?

A: Yes. There are several initiatives underway already that will position us to accommodate more people in the office. For example, the OneNeighborhood Initiative, completed in 2022, provided for the collocation and consolidation of agencies throughout the NCR with the purpose of enhancing communication and collaboration. The initiative required a major investment in infrastructure consisting of upgrading network switches throughout the South and Whitten Buildings allowing plug-and-play with the freedom to move anywhere without losing Wi-Fi connectivity. In addition, with the modernization of the Headquarters facilities, the Department is moving to a new workplace model using 6x6 cubicles and 10x10 private offices. This workplace model was used exclusively in the renovation of the George Washington Carver Center, doubling capacity from 1,000 employees pre-modernization to 2,000 employees post-modernization. The upcoming renovation of Wing 7 will double the capacity from 300 workstations to 600 workstations. We are also exploring the feasibility of utilizing available space at alternative sites, like the George Washington Carver Center or the Riverdale Building, to ease commuting burdens for those living closer to those sites.

Q: Will USDA information technology services and staff be prepared to manage more people in the buildings?

A: Yes, the Digital Infrastructure Services Center (DISC) is staffed 24/7 to address many types of IT service needs. They can be reached at disc.servicedesk@usda.gov, by phone at 888-873-6482 or through the portal.

Q: Is there enough facilities and security staff to handle more people being in the buildings in the NCR?

A: These teams have been fully staffed throughout the pandemic and stand ready to serve you.

Q: Who should I contact if I need clarifying information?

A: You can submit questions to futureofwork@usda.gov or you can speak with your Mission Area Chief Human Capital Officer (CHCO).

TELEWORK

Purpose

Effective use of telework enables the USDA to realize tangible savings in terms of reduced real estate and physical space demands, utilities and transit subsidy costs and enhanced employee recruitment and retention.

The Parties agree to work in accordance with the Departmental Regulation, Telework Program, DR-4080-811-002, dated January 30, 2014, and its successors.

Section 1 - Definitions

A. Definitions:

1. Telework: A work arrangement that allows an employee to perform work, during any part of regular paid hours, at an approved alternative work site, (i.e. home or other location).
2. Core telework: Telework that occurs on a routine, regular and reoccurring basis away from an employee's duty station.
3. Situational telework: Telework that occurs on an as needed basis that is not regular and reoccurring. This type of telework may be used for completing special projects, meeting extraordinary deadlines, continuation of business during emergencies and/or inclement weather.
4. Unscheduled telework: A type of situational telework that is typically used to allow employees on approved telework agreements to work from alternative work sites during periods of inclement weather, emergency situations, or for encouraging productivity needs during other short-term agency needs.

Section 2 - Criteria

A. Eligibility of Employees: Employee participation is voluntary and subject to management approval. An employee is considered suitable for telework if the following four (4) conditions are met:

1. Employee has an existing performance rating of "Fully Successful" or higher;
2. Employee has no misconduct, disciplinary (letter of reprimand through 14-day suspension or less) or adverse action or leave restriction occurring within the preceding 12 months;

3. Employee has never been disciplined for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, from a government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties; and

4. Employee has never been officially disciplined for being absent without permission (AWOL) for five (5) days or more in any calendar year.

B. Written Agreements: Employees are required to obtain the approval of management, in the form of an approved Telework Proposal/Agreement, before engaging in telework.

C. Performance: The supervisor establishes work output requirements, as appropriate, and may require regular status reports. If work output and/or quality requirements are not being met, the employee's telework agreement may be modified or changed by the supervisor. A performance rating of less than "Fully Successful" will be grounds for canceling the employee's Telecommuting Work Proposal/Agreement.

D. Programmatic Changes: If participation in the telework program interferes with organizational and/or programmatic needs, the telework agreement may be cancelled with proper notification.

E. An employee may request telework Monday-Thursday for one (1) day per week.

F. An employee may request up to two (2) days of situational telework based on operational/programmatic needs.

G. If an employee requests leave on their telework day, it must be in accordance with Article 14, Leave.

H. If an employee's application for telework is denied, the employee will be provided specific reason(s) for the denial. The written denial should be provided in a timely manner. The employee is able to grieve the denial through the negotiated grievance process.

NEGOTIATED AGREEMENT ON TELEWORK

Excerpt from the CBA

Florida Antilles, ARS and NFFE Local 1752

ARTICLE 22 - TELEWORK

Section 1. Policy: Employees may participate in the agency's telework program in accordance with ARS Policies and Procedures, P.P. No. 402.5v.2, applicable regulations, law, and the provisions of this Agreement. Management will consider an employee's telework request and both must examine the job requirements. Some jobs can be performed almost 100 percent offsite, but most jobs will require a certain amount of time at the office. Jobs that require the employee to perform daily, hands-on services are not adaptable to telework. Management is responsible for deciding if the position is one that is appropriate for off-site work and for examining both the content of the work and the performance and conduct of the employee is suitable. Management may require an alternative work arrangement in unusual circumstances, such as natural disasters or when working conditions that compromise employee safety.

Section 2. Telework: The term "telework" or "teleworking" refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of his/her position and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work.

Section 3. Eligibility of Employees: Management should begin with a presumption that all positions are appropriate for telework. Employee participation is voluntary and subject to management approval. An employee is considered suitable for telework if the following four conditions are met:

- a) Employee has an existing performance rating of "Fully Successful" or higher.
- b) Employee has no misconduct, disciplinary (such as letter of caution, letter of reprimand through 14-day suspension or less) or adverse action or leave restriction occurring within the preceding twelve (12) months.
- c) Employee has never been disciplined for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, from a government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.
- d) Employee has never been officially disciplined for being absent without permission (AWOL) for five (5) days or more in any calendar year.

Section 4. Written Agreements: Employees are required to obtain the approval of management, in the form of an approved Telework Proposal/Agreement, before working at a telework center, at home or at another approved location on a recurring, scheduled basis.

Section 5. Voluntary Participation: Participation in the telework program is voluntary and is neither an entitlement nor a requirement, except under specific emergency situations as described in the agency's Policies and Procedures, P.P. No. 402.5 v. 2, section 3.3.2 Situational/Unscheduled Work, and section 7.4.6 Unscheduled Telework and Emergency Situations.

Section 6. Salary and Benefits: Salary and benefits will not change if the employee is approved for participation in the telework program.

Section 7. Time and Attendance: The employee will transmit their Time and Attendance Report to their supervisor at the end of the pay period, not later than the Tuesday following the end of the pay period. The supervisor will certify the time and attendance hours worked at the official duty station and the alternate workplace and forward to the proper pay processing organization no later than the Tuesday following the close of the pay period.

Section 8. Leave: Employee must make any request for leave in advance with his/her supervisor or appropriate authorizing official during the scheduled telecommuting work hours in accordance with the provisions of Article 19, Leave.

Section 9. Overtime: Overtime or any other premium pay will be worked only when ordered or approved by the supervisor in advance. Working overtime without such approval may result in termination of this telecommuting privilege and/or other appropriate action.

Section 10. Performance: The supervisor establishes work output requirements, as appropriate, and may require regular status reports. If work output and/or quality requirements are not being met, the employee's telecommuting agreement may be modified or changed by the supervisor. A performance rating of Less than Fully Successful will be grounds for canceling the employee's Telecommuting Work Proposal/Agreement.

Section 11. Programmatic Changes: If participation in the telework program interferes with organizational and/or programmatic needs, the telework agreement may be cancelled with proper notification.

Section 12. Equipment and Supplies: Equipment and supplies will be handled in accordance with ARS Policies and Procedures, P.P. No. 402.5 v. 2.

Section 13. Telework Area: The designated work area should be adequate for the performance of official duties.

Section 14. Alternative Workplace Costs: The Employer will not be responsible for any operating costs that are associated with the employee using his or her home as an alternative work site, for example, home maintenance, insurance, or utilities. However, the employee does not relinquish any entitlement to reimbursement for authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the Government, as provided for by applicable agency policy, regulations, and law.

Section 15. Injury Compensation: Federal Employee's Compensation Act provisions apply to persons performing official duties at the official duty station or the alternate worksite. The supervisor must be notified immediately of any accident or injury that occurs at the alternate worksite. The supervisor or designated official will investigate such a report immediately.

Section 16. Disclosure: Employees are responsible to insure that any government records or data are protected from unauthorized disclosure or damage and comply with requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974.

Section 17. Standards of Conduct: Federal standards of conduct apply to all employees working at an alternative work site.

Section 18. Cancellation: After appropriate advance notice, normally seven (7) days, to the supervisor, the employee may resume working his or her regular schedule at the official duty station. After appropriate advance notice, normally seven (7) days, to the employee of work-related changes or circumstances, the supervisor may require the employee to resume working a regular schedule at the official duty station.

Section 19. Other Actions: Nothing in this agreement precludes the Agency from taking any appropriate disciplinary or adverse action against an employee who fails to comply with the provisions of this agreement.

Section 20. Training: As determined by the Employer, an interactive telework training program will be provided to:

A. employees eligible to participate in the telework program of the agency;

B. all supervisors of teleworkers

Section 21. Security: All employees must have satisfied the most recent annual training requirement, as determined by the Employer, for Information Security Awareness and Personally Identifiable Information and Rules of Behavior training or its successor in order to be approved to telework to ensure that proper safety issues are addressed; the employee must protect government data/documents from unauthorized access or disclosure in accordance with Privacy Act regulations; and protect agency data and the network from unauthorized access.

MOA

National Center of Agricultural Utilization Research, ARS and AFGC Local 3247

Memorandum of Understanding (MOU)- Telework and Remote Work

This Memorandum of Understanding (“MOU”) is entered into between the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), Agricultural Research Service (ARS), National Center for Agricultural Utilization Research (NCAUR), in Peoria, Illinois, hereinafter the “Employer” or “Center”, and the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE), Local 3247, hereinafter the Union or collectively the “Parties”.

General

The ARS (Agency) and the AFGE Local 3247 (Union) jointly recognize the mutual benefits of a flexible workplace program to the Agency and its employees. In recognizing these benefits, both parties also acknowledge the needs of the Agency to accomplish its mission. The Agency fully supports and promotes the use of telework for and by eligible employees.

This MOU is implemented in accordance with the provisions of Departmental Regulation (DR) 4080-811-002. The Telework and Remote Work Programs will be governed by applicable law, government-wide rules and regulations in existence at the time this MOU was signed, and this MOU. Where any Department and/or Agency regulation conflicts with this supplemental Memorandum of Understanding (MOU), this MOU shall govern.

Relevant terminology for telework and remote work is defined in DR 4080-811-002 (Appendix B).

Section 1 - Bargaining Unit Employees (BUEs)

The Parties agree that Bargaining Unit Employees (BUEs) working remotely, if any, will continue to be represented by the Union as long as they continue to report organizationally to the NCAUR, and meet the bargaining unit criteria referenced in the collective bargaining agreement (CBA).

Section 2 - Telework Policy

- A. It is presumed that all NCAUR bargaining unit positions include some portable or administrative duties that could be performed via telework. NCAUR will strive to fully integrate telework into their culture, providing eligible employees the opportunity to telework at least occasionally with supervisory approval.
- B. The Agency permits telework of up to 8 days per biweekly pay period based on the duties of the position. At the discretion of the supervisor, the onsite two (2) day requirement will be considered fulfilled if the employee reports physically to their official USDA worksite on at least two (2) different days for a total of 16 hours each biweekly pay period. Supervisors have the authority to determine when telework is appropriate based on the duties of the position and the amount of onsite activities that must be performed. Telework employees may also use a combination of duty time and some form of personal leave each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to fulfill the amount of time that is required for onsite requirement with supervisory approval.

- C. Regularly scheduled travel time between the telework site and the official USDA worksite will not be considered as hours of work, or entitle any telework employees to any mileage or related travel benefits, unless it meets the exception criterion outlined in the DR (e.g., call back, early departure, directed to travel to another worksite, etc.).
- D. If a Federal holiday falls on a telework employee's day to physically report to the official USDA worksite, it is not required to add an alternate/additional day to the employee's requirement to physically report for that specific biweekly pay period.
- E. Employees are responsible for making sure they meet the minimum requirement for onsite work.
- F. The Agency may allow temporary abeyance of the onsite reporting requirement for telework per Section 4f(4)(d) of the DR 4080-811-002 (November 22, 2021).
- G. Employees, whether teleworking or working from an official worksite, must be treated equitably for job performance, work requirements, and any topic covered by the collective bargaining agreement.
- H. Dependent care: Employees may continue to telework or remote work even when they may also have dependent care responsibilities. Employees should not be engaging in dependent care activities when performing official duties and time taking care of dependents is not paid time. Agencies will continue to provide work flexibilities to support employees, including those with dependent care responsibilities. While telework and remote work should not be approved solely due to dependent care responsibilities, telework and remote work requests may not be denied based on the presence of dependents. Both the supervisor and the employee play important roles in ensuring dependent care responsibilities do not negatively impact work performance.
Supervisors should support those under telework or remote work agreements who are striving to balance work and dependent care responsibilities. Employees under telework and remote work agreements play the most critical role in helping to ensure that work and dependent care responsibilities are successfully managed.

Section 3 - Telework Procedures

- A. The decision to participate in an agency telework program, as described in the Telework Enhancement Act, is voluntary, and left to the employee, assuming the employee has been identified as telework eligible per the criteria in DR 4080-811-002 (November 22, 2021).
- B. At a minimum, every employee must decide either to participate in the telework program or affirmatively opt out of the telework program. Employees who decline to participate in the telework program are not required to complete and submit a telework agreement to their supervisor; however, the employee should notify their supervisor via email that they are opting out of telework. Notwithstanding an employee found to be ineligible pursuant to Section 4. F. (3) of the DR, telework agreements remain in effect until a change is initiated; although, it is a good practice for supervisors to review telework agreements with employees on an annual basis. Either management or an employee may initiate a change to a Telework agreement with a minimum of 45 calendar days advance written notification, except in emergency situations in which the timeframe may be shorter. If the employee initiates this change because of a change in circumstance that results in being unable to telework or needing to telework immediately, the Agency will consider granting this change immediately or may allow an interim arrangement subject to supervisor approval and mission requirements.

- C. A telework-ready employee is an eligible employee who voluntarily participates in an agency telework program and has an approved telework agreement and who is prepared and equipped to telework.
- D. Telework-ready employees will generally be required to work when there is a weather or safety event that prevents reporting to the regular workplace. Employees participating in a telework program must telework, take other leave (paid or unpaid) or paid time off (if allowed by the agency), or a combination of both, unless an exception applies. Telework-ready employees will generally be ineligible for weather and safety leave when a closure is announced except in rare circumstances when one of the exceptions under 5 CFR 630.1605(a)(2) applies. An employee who is not a telework ready employee may ask their supervisor if they can telework during an unscheduled facility closure, but consistent with the Telework Enhancement Act, the employee must be the one to voluntarily make the request. There are other, very rare circumstances under which weather and safety leave may be granted. (See OPM's 2021 Governmentwide Dismissal and Closure Procedures (opm.gov), the DR, or any Agency guidance for more information).
- E. Teleworkers who are working in the office when an early departure is announced generally may receive weather and safety leave for the time required to commute home (excluding the period for an unpaid lunch break).
- F. For inclement weather, NCAUR employees should also refer to the NCAUR Hazardous Weather policy dated 07/19/2017 for building procedures.

Section 4 - Maximized Telework for Emergencies

The Telework Procedure section of this MOU is relevant for the 'normal' Agency telework program. It allows for all telework-ready employees to telework and to be required to telework during a short closure due to inclement weather or power outage, etc. Employees who are not participants of the telework program will not be required to telework during official facility closures of short duration, such as snow days, short power outages or loss of water, etc. Those employees will normally be eligible for Weather and Safety leave or some other administrative type leave for these situations.

All employees, including employees who are not participants in the telework program and do not have a telework agreement in place, may be directed to telework by the Agency in the following situations: COOP activations (5 USC 6504(d)), a pandemic (5 CFR 550.409), physical disasters or military events (5 CFR 550.401-408) or as otherwise provided under the law. These situations are not true “telework” arrangements as they are not triggered by participation in a telework agreement (indeed, the employee’s position may not generally be eligible for telework). An Agency’s ‘normal’ telework policy based on the Telework Enhancement Act’s requirement that employees elect to telework and have a telework agreement in place is superseded by these events. The Agency and supervisors can help prepare for these emergencies by encouraging voluntary telework participation and supporting requests to telework. With a larger percentage of the workforce ready to telework, the Agency will be better prepared in case of an emergency evacuation.

Section 5 - Equipment

- A. When on telework, employees will be provided an Agency issued laptop and the equipment necessary to perform their duties as determined by their supervisor.
- B. Any equipment or other items provided by the Agency remain the property of the government and must be managed and handled in accordance with Government-wide and agency-specific policies and guidance. Employees who have an Agency-issued laptop or mobilephone assigned to them may use such equipment at an alternative work location (for remote employees, at their official USDA duty station) and shall take reasonable safeguards against theft and damage when they do so. All Agency-issued equipment and supplies remain the property of the Agency, and Agency remains responsible for service and maintenance of that equipment.
- C. Additional equipment, including furniture or technology, may be available through the reasonable accommodation process.
- D. The Agency will attempt to make excess equipment available to telework and remote workers without extra costs being incurred by the Agency. Assignment, priority, allowance of amount/type of equipment will be determined by the Agency.
- E. Center employees who telework in accordance with the requirements of DR 4080-811-002 will be provided onsite office space subject to budgetary limitations and mission requirements.

Section 6 - Pay, Attendance and Leave

- A. A teleworking or remote bargaining unit employee will have the same opportunity to obtain overtime, credit time, comp time etc. as employees who are physically located in the official USDA worksite. The governing rules, regulations, the collective bargaining agreement (CBA), and policies concerning attendance, leave, and overtime are unchanged by a bargaining unit employee’s (BUE’s) participation in telework and remote work.

- B. Telework and remote employees may participate in flexible and compressed work schedule or other flexible work arrangements in accordance with Article 10 of the CBA.

Section 7 - Union Notification

The Agency shall notify the Union when employees statuses change from telework to remote or when bargaining unit employees are denied or removed from telework eligibility or remote status.

Section 8 - Remote Work - General

Remote Work may be approved per an employee's request if otherwise deemed eligible as determined by the Agency.

Remote workers should refer to DR4080-811-002 and the associated FAQs Telework and Remote Work for guidance on callback, travel time, travel compensation, and other relevant remote work procedures.

Section 9 - Remote Work - Equipment

- A. When on remote work, employees will be provided an Agency issued laptop and the equipment necessary to perform their duties as determined by their supervisor.
- B. Any equipment or other items provided by the Agency remain the property of the government and must be managed and handled in accordance with Government-wide and agency-specific policies and guidance. Employees who have an Agency-issued laptop or mobile phone assigned to them may use such equipment at an alternative work location (for remote employees, at their official USDA duty station) and shall take reasonable safeguards against theft and damage when they do so. All Agency-issued equipment and supplies remain the property of the Agency, and Agency remains responsible for service and maintenance of that equipment.
- C. Additional equipment, including furniture or technology, may be available through the reasonable accommodation process.
- D. The Agency will attempt to make excess equipment available to telework and remote workers without extra costs being incurred by the Agency. Assignment, priority, allowance of amount/type of equipment will be determined by the Agency.

Section 10 - Additional Resources for Telework/Remote Work

- A. A phone line or work number will be provided to all employees, including teleworkers and remote workers that employees may use to forward their telephone calls to conduct official business. If an employee prefers to use their personal cell number, they may do so.
- B. Remote workers may come into the official worksite to pick up mail and office supplies or request the mail be forwarded to their official duty station of record.

- C. All telework and remote workers are covered under the Federal Workers Compensation program (FECA). Further information can be found in DR4080-811-002 and the NCAUR Accident Incident Reporting Investigation Program procedure document and Near Miss Accident Incident Report Form.
- D. An employee that disagrees with telework/remote work designation may file a grievance in accordance with article 8 of the CBA or contact the Union.

Section 11 - Effective date of the MOU

This MOU will be effective on the date of Agency Head approval or 31 calendar days after it is signed by both Parties, whichever is sooner.

ERS & NIFA Local 3403 Memorandum of Agreement on Telework And Remote Work Arrangements

Definition

1. Official Duty Station: The official duty station is the management-approved location where employees regularly perform their official duties. The Agency must document an employee's official duty station on the employee's Notification of Personnel Action (Standard Form 50 (SF-50) or equivalent). Once the official duty station has been officially recorded on the SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action (OPM, Guide to Processing Personnel Actions, GPPA, Chapter 23, Change in Duty Station), it cannot be changed without prior approval of the employing Mission Area, agency, or staff office accompanied by processing a formal, documented personnel action.
2. Remote Home Office: A work location, other than the official USDA worksite that is normally an employee's residence of record. The remote home office satisfies all requisite Federal health and safety laws, rules, and regulations pertaining to the workplace, where an employee performs their official duties.
3. Official USDA Worksite: A Federal worksite that is occupied and maintained by the Agency. Examples of an official USDA Worksite include but are not limited to: the USDA Headquarters Complex in Washington, DC and the 805 Pennsylvania Ave. location in Kansas City, MO.
4. Telework Employee: An eligible employee with an approved telework agreement who performs a portion of their official duties at an approved location rather than their official duty station on record.
5. Remote Employee: An eligible employee who elects to perform their duties at an alternative location, normally at their residence of record rather than at an official USDA worksite.

Remote Work

1. Bargaining Unit Employees (BUEs) will have up to 45 calendar days to decide whether to accept an offer of a remote work arrangement. BUEs may request an additional 15 days to be approved by the first line supervisor.
 - a. A remote employee will be able to relocate to their desired duty station location at any time during the initial 12-month period.
 - b. After the first 12 months, a remote employee will be able to relocate from their current locality every six months.

2. If a BUE accepts a remote work arrangement, the BUE may change their decision at any time during the first 12 months after the initial acceptance is tenured.
 - a. After the first 12 months of being in a remote work arrangement, a BUE may elect to report to and telework from an official USDA Worksite on a full-time basis every six months, unless extenuating circumstances arise as per directive DR 4080-811-002.
3. The rate of pay for a remote employee is determined by the employee's base pay rate, the applicable locality pay rate and any special pay rate associated with the employee's official duty station of record, as recorded on the employee's OPM Standard Form (SF)-50, Notification of Personnel Action. Remote employees shall not be denied a remote work arrangement based upon the locality pay of their remote home office.
4. If a BUE had reported to the office before the pandemic and accepts an offer of remote work, they will make every effort to collect their personal belongings in the workplace. If extenuating circumstances arise and if requested, the Agency will ship personal items to the BUE's residence of record.
5. A remote employee, except in the event of an emergency, will normally be given 30 working days' notice if they are required to report to an official USDA worksite by their supervisor for more than two (2) business days. If a BUE is required to report for less than two (2) business days, the BUE will normally be given at least 10 working days' notice.
 - a. A remote employee who is required to report to an official USDA worksite outside their local commuting area or 50 miles from the approved official USDA worksite, will be considered to be on official travel for the duration of the time required to be onsite. All costs associated with reporting to the official USDA worksite will be covered in accordance with Federal Travel Regulations.
6. A remote employee who is required to report to an official USDA worksite, will abide by hoteling policies developed by the Department for the duration of the official business.
 - a. The Agency will make every effort to provide BUEs who have to come into an official USDA worksite for an extended period with a dedicated workspace for the duration of their visit, space permitting.
7. Where face-to-face communication is essential for effective participation, the Agency will authorize official travel, pending funding availability and supervisory approval, for remote employees.
8. A remote employee may ask their administrative support personnel to purchase and ship office supplies to their official duty station.
 - a. Such requests will be acted upon within 5 business days.

Telework

1. A Telework employee who reports to an official USDA worksite at least half of the pay period (5 days or 40 hours) will be provided a dedicated workspace, space permitting. A “day” shall consist of a minimum of eight (8) hours in pay status or approved leave (e.g. A BUE who works 4 hours in the office and then takes 4 hours sick leave will be considered to have worked a full day in the office.)
2. Telework employees who telework eight (8) days per pay period will be allowed to report to an official USDA worksite two (2) consecutive days in the same week to fulfill the in-person requirement.
 - a. The Agency will implement a system that will allow telework employees with an opportunity to reserve the same workspace for two (2) consecutive days, space permitting.
 - b. Any management initiated or employee-initiated change to the telework agreement will require 45 calendar days’ notice. Supervisor may consider extenuating circumstances when making a determination.
3. When a telework employee is required to report to their official USDA worksite, which is neither a virtual platform nor the employee's residence, on a day the employee is scheduled for telework, the BUE will be given at least five (5) working days’ notice unless there is an emergent issue. Management will make every attempt to minimize requests for irregular and unscheduled reports to the official USDA worksite when teleworking employees are scheduled to work via a virtual platform.
4. A telework employee will be allowed to request offices supplies for use when teleworking.

Virtual and Telework Duty Stations

1. The Agency will provide remote and telework employees with the following equipment, if requested. Any agency provided technical equipment will be maintained by Agency IT staff and be placed on a defined replacement schedule.
 - a. Cell phone
 - i. ERS BUEs will be provided with a Voice Over Internet Provider (VOIP) number.
 - ii. NIFA BUEs may request a cell phone.
 - b. Laptop with specifications to be determined by job and mission requirements of individual BUE (e.g., for ERS employees determined by a mission need, supervisory approval, and the IT Investment Review Board)
 - c. Docking station compatible with assigned.

- d. ERS and NIFA will provide one (1) docking station to each employee and the employee will determine where the docking station is located, at their home workspace or in the office.
 - e. Monitors
 - i. For ERS and NIFA, up to two (2) external monitors (at least 17”).
Telework employees will determine where the monitors are located, at their home office or at the official USDA worksite.
 - f. Keyboard and mouse
 - g. Headset
 - h. Printer
 - i. For ERS, the Agency will provide a printer for employees who have an approved Reasonable Accommodation.
 - ii. For NIFA, the Agency will provide printers for use at the home office.
 - i. Specialized office furniture, such as a chair, and desk, may be provided for BUEs who have an approved Reasonable Accommodation for such furniture.
 - j. For ERS, the Agency will provide Laptop bags.
2. The Agency will ensure that technical support is available as needed for the Agency issued equipment.
 - a. A BUE will not be disciplined for experiencing a work stoppage due to IT- related matters outside their control, such as connectivity issues.
 3. Virtual or physical monitoring/inspection of a remote home office or telework space by a supervisor will normally require that the BUE and Union receive at least three (3) days notice. During such inspection, the BUE will be entitled to Union representation during the discussion. Nothing in this section would prevent any Federal employee from reporting a potential Hatch Act violation observed during the course of a virtual meeting.

Training and Meetings

1. The Agency will provide training to supervisors for effective management of BUEs under their supervision who are in a telework or remote work status.
2. To encourage inter-agency connection and collaboration with employees located in multiple duty stations (virtual or physical), the Agency will implement the following:
 - a. The Agency may organize face-to-face meetings as they are able, unless travel is restricted due to a national emergency (e.g., pandemic).
 - b. Reimbursement for travel will be authorized for BUEs whose duty station is outside of the local commuting area of the meeting.
3. NIFA will re-institute Science Week, including live participation, national emergency permitting. Travel reimbursement for BUEs whose duty station is outside of this region will be authorized.

Work Life Balance

The Agency may provide voluntary training on how to establish and maintain a remote workplace, how to manage work/life balance, and how to maintain relationships with colleagues while in a remote work status.

Terms

1. This Agreement will be implemented and become effective when it has been approved, ratified, and signed by the parties, including review pursuant to 5 USC 7114(c). The effective date of this agreement shall be the date of approval by the Director, Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM), Office of the Secretary of Agriculture, applies to both Agencies, or on the 31st day after execution of the agreement, if the Director or designee has neither approved nor disapproved the agreement. The duration of this agreement will be for the duration of the directive DR 4080-811-002.
2. If a new agreement has not been executed prior to the expiration of this Agreement, this Agreement shall remain in effect until the new agreement is approved by the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM), or on the 31st day after execution of the new agreement by both parties, whichever is sooner.
3. The current agreement shall remain in effect until the new agreement is executed.

Reopener

This agreement is subject to reopening by mutual consent of the parties concerned and in accordance with Article 38: Mid Term Bargaining of the Parties Collective Bargaining Agreement.

USDA Foreign Agricultural Service

NEGOTIATED AGREEMENT ON TELEWORK Excerpt of CBA (Article 14)

Foreign Agricultural Services & AFSCME

May 2021 (Article 14 renegotiated 2024)

ARTICLE 14: TELEWORK

Section A. General

1. FAS fully supports and promotes telework by eligible employees. The purpose of telework is fundamentally to facilitate the successful completion of the duties, responsibilities, and other authorized activities of an employee's official position from an alternative worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work. Telework should also facilitate the accomplishment of the Agency's mission by contributing to the recruitment of top talent, retention of current employees, and reduction in the costs of office space, absenteeism, and workers compensation, while enabling employees to better manage work and personal or family responsibilities.
2. Participating employees and the Agency are bound by applicable statutory and regulatory requirements, this Agreement, and approved telework agreements.
3. Teleworkers may be permitted to telework up to the maximum number of telework days allowable per pay period as outlined in USDA Departmental Regulation 4080-811-002, dated November 22, 2021. Supervisory decisions as to type and frequency of Telework participation, should be made on an individual, case-by-case basis, determined by the nature of the position, job requirements, and mission criteria, and should involve a discussion between the supervisor and employee. Telework participation shall not diminish performance or agency operations.
4. Employees in positions ineligible for telework/remote work and those performing similar functions will be treated as fairly and equitably as those that telework.
5. A teleworker's official duty station will remain unchanged if they report physically to their employing office worksite location for 2 full workdays or a combination of workday and some form of personal leave each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis.
6. If a holiday falls on a teleworker's day to physically report to the employing office worksite, it is not required to add an alternate day to meet the employee's requirement to physically report to the employing office worksite for that specific biweekly pay period.
7. Use of telework is a key component of FAS's ability to operate in situations in which working from the official worksite is unsafe or unavailable. Unscheduled telework will be considered and may be authorized or required during inclement weather, emergency situations that involve national security, extended emergencies, or other unique situations as determined by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) or USDA.
8. Management and Union representatives may meet to discuss issues related to telework at Union-Management meetings, as provided for under Article 36.

Section B. Definitions

Routine Telework. Regularly scheduled telework that occurs no less than 1 day and no more than 8 days scheduled per biweekly pay period, on a recurring basis and is part of an approved work schedule (see Article 6).

Situational Telework (also referred to as ad hoc, episodic, unscheduled, and intermittent). Telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked were not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular, telework schedule.

Section C. Position Eligibility

1. Except as provided for below in this Section and consistent with the terms of this agreement and USDA Policy, all bargaining unit positions are presumed eligible for telework.
2. Positions may be identified as ineligible for telework based only on the following criteria:
 - a. Position duties require daily physical presence and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an alternate office or location.
 - b. Position responsibilities require daily access to specialized equipment located at the official worksite and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an alternate office or location.
 - c. Position activities require daily access to classified materials and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an alternate office or location.

Section D. Employee Eligibility

1. Except as provided for below in this Section and consistent with the terms of this agreement, applicable law and USDA policy, all bargaining unit employees are presumed eligible for telework.
2. Employees are permanently ineligible for telework for conduct which results in formal disciplinary action as set forth by the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 for the following:
 - a. Violations of subpart G of the Standards for Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or performing official Federal Government duties; or
 - b. Being absent without leave (AWOL) for more than 5 days in any calendar year.

3. Employees may be identified by the Agency as temporarily ineligible for telework (or category of telework), in the event that:
 - a. an employee is absent without leave (AWOL) for more than 5 days in any calendar year, for which no official, formal, disciplinary action was taken,
 - b. telework will contribute to, or has resulted in, diminished individual or organizational performance based on articulated reasons,
 - c. the employee has been placed on a Demonstrated Opportunity Notice, or
 - d. An employee was subject to formal disciplinary or adverse actions, including situations that result in the employee being placed on leave restriction.
4. An employee's temporary ineligibility status will be reviewed and discussed on at least a bi-annual basis to determine whether their eligibility for telework should be restored.
5. In cases where diminished performance is attributable to telework, the Agency will adhere to the requirements outlined within Article 26. Assistance will be provided within the scope of assisting the employee with improving their performance deficiencies.
6. Temporary Eligibility. In certain circumstances, a supervisor may temporarily designate the location of the agency worksite for an employee's position (i.e., the place where the employee would normally work, absent a Telework agreement) as the official worksite even though the employee is not able to report at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite. The employee must be expected to return to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite at some point in the future on a regular and recurring basis. It is the responsibility of the employee's immediate supervisor to decide when it no longer is proper to apply the temporary exception. However, if a teleworking employee is not expected to report to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite on a regular and recurring basis in the future, the temporary exception would no longer be applicable. Supervisors must periodically review (at least every month) an employee's temporary full-time telework arrangement to ensure any approved temporary exception continues to apply. A supervisor may waive this requirement on a temporary basis in situations such as:
 - a. Recovery from an injury or medical condition.
 - b. Emergency conditions that prevent an employee from commuting to the official worksite, such as a severe weather emergency or public health crisis.
 - c. An extended period of approved absence from work, e.g., paid leave.

- d. A period during which the employee is in temporary duty travel status away from the official worksite; or
- e. A period during which an employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than a location covered by a Telework agreement.

Section E. Telework Participation

1. Participation in telework is voluntary except for employees who are designated by the Agency as “emergency personnel” or “mission critical.”
2. All FAS employees who are eligible for telework must complete the telework agreement within the USDA electronic system. The Agreement must be approved by the employee’s first line supervisor, or designee, prior to the employee participating in the telework program. The employee must comply with the agreement’s provisions, including requisite telework training requirements, to retain eligibility. Eligible employees who do not wish to participate must officially communicate their intent to voluntarily opt-out of participation by indicating so on their submitted telework agreement form.
3. The supervisor or designee will respond to a submitted telework agreement form (both for new and modified agreements) within 14 calendar days.
 - a. If an employee’s request to telework is returned to modify the amount of days the employee can telework, based on the in-office requirements, the supervisor or designee must explain their reasoning in writing.
4. All telework eligible employees are also eligible to participate in flexible or compressed work schedules, or other flexible work arrangements in combination with Routine Telework and Situational telework consistent with terms of their telework agreements.
5. An employee participating in routine telework may request to temporarily change their scheduled telework day to another day within a given pay period or participate in situational telework. Such request may be granted as long as the change does not unreasonably interfere with mission, staffing, and/or workload requirements.
6. The employee must submit a new Telework Request form when any of the following occurs:
 - a. The employee is promoted, reassigned, or detailed to a different position.
 - b. The employee or supervisor wishes to modify the original approved telework arrangement, such as the number of telework days, location of Alternative Worksite, etc. (see paragraph 7 of this Section)
 - c. If an employee seeks to discontinue their participation in telework.
7. Employees may be required to re-certify their telework agreement on an annual a way that work cannot be safely performed. Employees must communicate with their supervisors as soon as possible when such work disruptions occur.

- c. Telework program participants working in the office when an early departure is announced generally may receive weather and safety leave only for the amount of time required to commute home. This means that telework program participants must complete the remaining time in their workday by either teleworking or taking leave (paid or unpaid) or other paid time off once they arrive home.

Section G. Miscellaneous Procedures/Policies

1. If a Union Official is on a previously scheduled and approved telework day, the official may perform their representational duties, so long as they have obtained supervisory approval to use Official Time under Article 47.
2. Eligible employees are normally expected to procure and provide internet service at their own expense. The Agency will provide authorized teleworkers, to the extent possible and budget permitting, with the appropriate hardware, software, and ancillary items needed to connect to the FAS network or other networks needed to perform their work duties. Such equipment will be for official use only and the Agency retains ownership.
3. Employees approved for telework must comply with all training, security, and disclosure provisions, including password protection and data encryption, so that the Privacy Act and other security standards are not compromised.
4. The Agency will follow Office of Personnel Management and Department guidelines for determining the official duty station for employees approved for telework.
5. Agency operations and employee performance shall not be diminished by the telework program as required by the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010. Management reserves its rights as it relates to making determinations regarding telework.
6. Rules and practices concerning work schedules; core hours; pay; procedures for requesting and approving compensatory time, credit hours, and leave; and other personnel issues shall be applied equitably to telework and non-telework employees and shall be applied in a manner consistent with the terms of this Article and Agreement. Employees are required to code their telework time into the time and attendance system.
7. Employees approved for telework are covered by the Federal Employees Compensation Act (FECA) and may qualify for payment if injured in the course of performing official duties at the alternative work site. The FECA, 5 USC Chapter 81, provides compensation benefits to federal employees for work-related injuries or illnesses and to their surviving dependents if a work-related injury results in the employee's death. FECA is administered by the Department of Labor, Office of Workers' Compensation Programs (OWCP).

basis to ensure that all information is accurate and up to date and to ensure the agreement is still appropriate, taking into consideration the duties of the position and mission requirements.

8. Telework agreements may be reviewed and/or modified at any time in response to a supervisor's or employee's request. The telework agreement may be changed or terminated by either management or by the employee with a minimum of two weeks advance written notification, except in emergency situations and for documented misconduct.
9. Management reserves the right to require employees in the local commuting area to return to the official duty location on scheduled telework days based on operational requirements. Except in cases of emergency, unknown, or unanticipated needs on the part of the requesting official, employees shall normally be given no less than 2 working days' notice. In these situations, employees may, with supervisory approval, be permitted to telework on a previously scheduled in-office day.
10. Employee performance for teleworkers will be evaluated fairly and equitably using elements and standards developed under the same Agency's performance management program that covers workers at traditional office/duty locations. Telework will not be counted as a factor to adversely affect employees with regard to work assignments, periodic appraisal of job performance, awards, recognition, training and developmental opportunities, promotions and retention incentives.

Section F. Unscheduled and Emergency Telework

1. OPM or Agency authorized officials may announce emergency operating status guidance allowing for unscheduled or required telework beyond that outlined in the OPM early dismissal guidance for weather events.
2. The Agency may order employees to evacuate from their worksite and perform work from their home, or an alternative location, during a public health crisis or other emergency without regard to whether the employee has a Telework agreement in place. Departmental and Mission Area, agency, or staff office COOPs should be followed.
3. Teleworkers generally are ineligible for weather and safety leave when a closure is announced, except in rare circumstances:
 - a. Weather and safety leave may be granted to a telework-ready employee who, in the Agency's judgment, could not have reasonably anticipated the severe weather or other emergency condition so did not take home needed equipment or work.
 - b. Weather and safety leave may be granted to a telework-ready employee who is prevented from safely working at the alternate site because of the severe weather or other emergency event (e.g., electrical power or broadband outage, fire, flooding or heating and cooling failures). In this case, the home or other approved telework site is also affected in such

8. Telework should be considered, when appropriate, for reasonable accommodation requests for employees with a disability or for accommodation of religious beliefs.
9. Employees may file a grievance or complaint regarding any alleged violation concerning matters covered by this Article. Such grievances or complaints shall be filed pursuant to Articles 28 (Prohibited Personnel Practices), 38 (Equal Employment Opportunity) or Article 41 (Grievance Procedures). Appeals of the following are governed by Article 41 of this Agreement.
 - a. Denial of an employee's requested telework schedule, as documented by the submission of a Telework agreement form.
 - b. Involuntary termination of an existing Telework agreement, not related to ineligibility requirements.

ARTICLE 20 TELEWORK & REMOTE WORK ARRANGEMENTS

Section 20.01. General

- 1) Telework and Remote work will be in accordance with applicable law, Departmental Regulation (DR) 4080-811-002 dated November 22, 2021 (hereafter referenced as the DR) and this Agreement. For easy reference, Departmental Regulation 4080-811-002 has been attached as Appendix A to this Agreement.
- 2) Prior to providing NTEU represented employees with their individual position designations, the Agency will provide NTEU with a list of position designations and a 5-calendar day opportunity to comment.
- 3) Definitions:
 - a) Telework: A work arrangement in which an employee performs and completes official duties and responsibilities from an alternate worksite. Telework may be authorized for an entire duty day or a portion of one. Telework does not include the following:
 - i) Work performed while on official travel status;
 - ii) Work performed while commuting to or from work;
 - iii) Remote work; or
 - iv) Mobile work (defined in Appendix B of the DR).
 - b) Remote Work: A workforce flexibility arrangement under which an employee is scheduled to perform work within or outside the local commuting area of their mission area, Agency, or staff office's worksite, and is not required to report to the mission area, Agency, or staff office worksite on a regular and recurring basis.
- 4) The Parties recognize that the use of telework has the potential to improve productivity and morale, improve employee engagement, maintain talent, and to provide the public with greater service. FNS and NTEU jointly recognize the mutual benefits of a flexible workplace program to the Agency and its employees. Balancing work and family responsibilities and meeting environmental, financial, and commuting concerns are among its advantages. Telework or remote work shall not be used to accommodate an employee's needs as a care provider, though it may, however, reduce the number of hours of care necessary due to time saved from not having to commute. In recognizing these benefits, both parties also acknowledge the needs of FNS to accomplish its mission. While FNS employees are presumed eligible for telework, the use of telework and remote work are not entitlements. Telework and remote agreements may be approved when an employee meets the criteria for eligibility established under the DR and this Article.

Section 20.02. Eligibility for Telework

- 1) Pursuant to the DR, the Employer shall provide each employee with notice regarding their position's eligibility for remote work and telework and will notify employees of any changes in their eligibility.

- a) An employee will be eligible to telework up to eight (8) days in a pay period in accordance with Section 4 of the DR.
- b) An employee will be eligible for Remote Work in accordance with Section 6 of the DR.

Section 20.03. Requests for Telework and Remote Work

1) Telework:

- a) A telework-eligible employee who desires to telework must submit a request with all necessary requirements to their supervisor through a proposed Telework Agreement utilizing an AD 3018. Employees may submit a request to participate in telework at any time.
- b) The supervisor may approve an eligible employee's request for telework if they meet the requirements in Section 4 of the DR. (Note: Employees have no authorization, and supervisors may not approve employee's requests to telework from a foreign location without approval from USDA and the Department of State (see Section 10 of the DR)).

2) Remote Work:

- a) A remote work eligible employee who desires to enter into a remote work agreement must submit a request with all necessary requirements to their supervisor utilizing a proposed Remote Work Agreement. Employees may submit a request to participate in remote work at any time.
- b) The supervisor may approve an eligible employee's request for remote work if they meet the requirements in Section 6 of the DR. (Note: Employees have no authorization, and supervisors may not approve employee's requests to remote work from a foreign location without approval from USDA and the Department of State (see Section 10 of the DR)).
- c) Generally, and as determined by the Agency, employees may be considered eligible for a remote work arrangement if their position has been designated remote work eligible. However, on a case-by-case basis, the Agency may deny a requested remote work arrangement. In considering whether to approve or deny an employee's request for a remote work arrangement the Agency, at a minimum, will consider:
 - i) If the employee's duties can be performed at the remote location;
 - ii) The amount of time required each week to participate in other aspects of the work unit operations such as training, meetings, or collaboration, including collaboration with stakeholders that cannot be conducted virtually;
 - iii) The type and frequency of travel associated with the position;
 - iv) Any requirement for accessing classified information; and
 - v) Budget, business, and operational needs of the Agency.
- d) However, as with telework, an employee becomes permanently ineligible for a remote work arrangement if they have been formally disciplined for either:

- i) A violation of Subpart G, Misuse of Position, of the Standards for Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computing device to include cell phones and tablets or while performing official, Federal Government duties; or
- ii) Absence without leave (AWOL) for 5 or more days in any calendar year.

Section 20.04. Telework Agreements

- 1) Telework – All teleworkers must have a current, written Telework Agreement, including those employees desiring to telework on an ad hoc or episodic bases. Variances in the telework schedule as contained in the Telework Agreement are expected but are subject to supervisory approval. Requests for and approval of variances in the regular telework schedule will normally be in writing and may be communicated via e-mail. Upon approval of a request for telework and completion of the required training, the employee and the supervisor will sign an AD 3018 Telework Agreement in accordance with the procedures outlined in this Section and in the DR and this Article.
- 2) Remote Work – All remote workers must have a signed remote work agreement. Upon approval of a request for remote work and completion of the required training, the employee and the supervisor will sign the remote work agreement, in accordance with the procedures outlined in the DR and this Article.
 - a) Remote work arrangement may result in a change in the employee’s duty station in accordance with 5 CFR Part 531.605(d)(1). In the event such change is required under federal rules and regulations, the Employer will document it via a Notification of Personnel Action (Standard Form 50). The Employer will provide the employee with a copy of the completed Standard Form 50 in their electronic official personnel folder.
- 3) The following procedures apply to Telework and Remote Work Agreements:
 - a) As required by the DR and Agency guidance, employees must complete all mandatory training. Employees are authorized up to three (3) hours to complete required and recommended training during their workday
 - b) Supervisors will retain a copy of each executed Telework and Remote Work Agreement for their files and provide copies to the employee. Employees are encouraged to provide a copy to their Union Chapter President.
 - c) If there is a change in position, or if a change in the terms of the agreement articulated in 3(b), such change will require a new or updated telework and/or remote work agreement to be completed.

Section 20.05. Time Frames and Procedures for Review of Telework Requests

- 1) Upon receipt of a request for telework, the supervisor and the employee will meet to discuss and review the request. The supervisor’s decision is to be provided to the employee within ten (10) workdays of the submission of the request. This timeframe may be extended by mutual agreement of the employee and supervisor.

- 2) If disapproved, the employee will be advised in writing with the reason(s) for disapproval. If the disapproval subsequently becomes the subject of arbitration, the parties will clarify all the issues in accordance with Article 51, of the National Agreement. The Union may file a grievance which is eligible for expedited arbitration in accordance with Articles 50 and 51.
- 3) If a request is approved, the specifications of the arrangement will be agreed upon, reduced to writing, and signed by both the supervisor and the employee. Unless otherwise agreed, the employee may begin working at the telework or remote work location starting with the next pay period following approval.

Section 20.06. Other Considerations for Approval of Telework or Remote Work Requests

- 1) The Parties recognize that the approval or disapproval of a telework or remote work agreement is a Management right. Accordingly, all telework, and remote work arrangements are subject to prior supervisory approval in accordance with the DR
- 2) Once a telework request is approved, the Employer reserves the right to make changes in an employee's telework schedule, if it is determined that a change in an employee's telework schedule is necessary for the Employer to accomplish its work. In such event the Employer will follow the procedures set forth in the DR and this Article.

Section 20.07. Telework and Remote Work Operating Principles

- 1) The governing rules, regulations, and policies concerning time and attendance, overtime and leave are unchanged by participation in telework or remote work. Employees will not perform overtime or night work, or earn credit hours, without advance supervisory approval. The provisions for employee breaks addressed in Article 19 continue to apply.
- 2) Injuries that arise in the performance of duty at the approved telework or remote work location are subject to the Federal Employees' Compensation Act.
- 3) Equipment and Work Environment:
 - a) All telework and remote work employees are required to utilize Government Furnished Equipment (GFE), to include peripherals, for official use and authorized purposes only. Participating employees must protect GFE and information, and to use equipment and information only for official government purposes as described in this Agreement and in accordance with procedures established in the Federal Information Resources Management Regulation and related regulations and policies. Budget permitting, the Employer agrees to provide, service, and maintain all approved government furnished equipment and peripherals as necessary for telework and remote workers to fulfill their employment duties and responsibilities.
 - b) The Employer is not responsible for operating costs, home maintenance, or any other incidental costs to the employee (e.g., utilities, or internet costs). Employees on telework and remote work will be provided reasonable and necessary supplies such as paper, ink, toner, etc. for supervisor approved government furnished peripherals. Employees should follow appropriate Agency request procedures to procure office supplies. Incremental utility costs associated with working at an alternate worksite location will not be paid by the Employer. Potential savings to the employee resulting from reduced commuting, meals, etc. may offset any incidental increase in utility expenses. Exceptions apply only where the personal expense directly benefits the Government, e.g., business related long distance or toll calls on the employee's personal phone where alternatives are not made available. Costs associated with the copying of work-related materials, fax charges, express mail, etc., require prior approval and will be reimbursed according to Agency procedures. Employees participating in the telework program should complete duties such as these while at the official duty station, to the extent possible.

- c) The use of GFE for unauthorized official international travel overseas (outside the Continental United States (OCONUS and US Territories)) is considered high risk to the USDA and is not allowed. All telework and remote work employees will comply with the USDA policy for international travel. The Parties agree that USDA furnished mobile devices and removable media that is used domestically shall not be used while on international travel, unless the Employer has documented approval for the use of this equipment. When USDA authorizes such use, the Employer will provide a loaner or burner client device.
- d) For scheduled outages, patches or updates, employees will normally be given a minimum of twenty-four (24) hours' advance notice regarding Management service or maintenance of government-owned property. Such service or maintenance will occur during the employee's normal work hours unless circumstances dictate otherwise. The employee is also responsible for returning Agency-owned equipment to a designated location when any maintenance or repair is required.
 - i) In accordance with DR 3580-004 and FNS 160-4, personally owned devices and third party-controlled devices are prohibited from storing or downloading personally identifiable information (PII).
 - ii) In alignment with USDA and FNS privacy policies, employees must appropriately safeguard personally identifiable information (PII) and report suspected PII breaches as outlined in DR 3505-005, Cybersecurity Incident Management.
 - iii) Employees must comply with the policies outlines in DR 3515-002, which require that employees safeguard PII information from unauthorized disclosure and immediately report damaged, lost, or stolen USDA PII data to the Departments security incident response team as defined in the USDA Incident Response Plan (IRP).
 - iv) Employees must manage and safeguard all USDA records in accordance with National Archives and Records Administration (NARA), USDA, and FNS records management regulations, and policies outlined in Federal Records Act 44 USC § 3301-3314; Federal Records Act 44 USC § 3105; 36 CFR Chapter 12; Presidential Memorandum M19-21; 5 USC § 552; DR 3090-001; DR 3080-001; DR 3099-001; and FNS Instruction 270-1.

- 4) Teleworking and remote work employees must be available and accessible to supervisors, co-workers, and customers at all duty times while performing work at an alternate worksite location. Employees must ensure that incoming calls, voicemails, and emails are handled seamlessly with the same expectations as if they were on-site. Similarly, an employee who teleworks or works remotely will have their work and conduct evaluated the same as employees at the traditional worksite. A supervisor's official relationship with, authority over, and accountability for an employee participating in the Employer's telework or remote work program is no different than their relationship with, authority over, and accountability for employees who are not participating in the telework or remote work program as required by the DR.
- 5) The Employer may require all employees to use a standard set of collaboration tools. These may include, but are not limited to, Microsoft Teams or equivalent instant messaging software, online project management collaboration tools, and conferencing software such as Adobe Connect, Go to Meeting, Zoom, Skype, etc. in order to facilitate communication between locations. The Employer also recognizes that an employee may not always be available to use the collaboration tools for virtual meetings when telework or remote working for issues beyond an employee's control such as, but not limited to, technical issues, power outages, or internet connectivity issues.

The Employer agrees that the purpose of employees using collaboration tools is to perform work duties, complete the Agency mission, and to facilitate more efficient communication for employees who telework and remote work. Except in instances of suspected misconduct, such tools will not be used to store or track employee attendance, location, or work hours.

- 6) If, due to circumstances beyond an employee's control, the employee is unable to work at their telework location, the employee must contact their supervisor to request appropriate leave. When the inability to work arises as a result of a problem at the telework location, the employee must contact their supervisor in a timely manner, typically within thirty (30) minutes absent situations beyond the control of the employee, to request appropriate leave or return to the office.

7) Telework Recall Procedures

- a) Employees participating in telework programs must be accessible and available for recall to their regular offices for work needs that cannot be performed at the alternate worksite location. Examples include training, employee days, special meetings, new work requirements, emergencies, or other business needs of the Employer. These examples are for illustrative purposes and are not meant to be exhaustive.
- b) Management will take full advantage of existing technology to minimize recall.
- c) The Agency will generally provide recalled employees with at least one (1) day of advance notice, except where the employee will be required to travel a significant distance, in which case the Employer will provide notice as far in advance as feasible in light of business needs and commuting challenges.

- d) If an employee is recalled on the same day they are teleworking, travel time to the office is considered duty time. However, in such a situation, travel back home is not considered duty time.
 - e) In the event an employee is recalled to the office on their telework day, the employee will be provided a mutually agreeable equivalent replacement time during which to telework within the pay period, to the extent practicable.
 - f) In situations where the employee is given notice before the recall day, travel to and from the office is not considered duty time.
- 8) If the Employer seeks to modify or terminate an employee's Telework Agreement, the following procedures apply:
- a) The Employer will provide appropriate advance notice of the modification or termination of any agreement to the extent practicable. The notice period will be at least ten (10) workdays in accordance with 5(b) of the DR; and
 - b) Normally, the Employer will provide the employee with a Notice of Termination, in writing, indicating the reason(s) for termination of the Telework Agreement. Employees may provide a copy to their Union Chapter President.
 - c) Termination of an employee's Telework Agreement does not prevent them from reapplying when they once again meet the criteria for telework.
- 9) Grievability: Employer's decisions on telework and remote work participation, recall and modification or termination of Telework Agreements are grievable. Decisions on requested variations in Telework Agreements are not grievable. However, if the employee alleges that a decision regarding a request for such variation is a prohibited personnel practice, the matter is grievable (see Article 50).
- 10) For employees who are approved to be on telework or remote work, the employee will have the option of selecting from work schedules offered in Article 19 of this Agreement.
- 11) Issue Resolution: Agency Managers and Union officials are encouraged to establish creative approaches to provide information and resolve problems regarding telework and/or remote work. Such approaches could include the local Labor-Management Relations Council (LMRC), joint task forces, joint committees, designated technical advisors, etc. Where there are disputes over participation, modification, recall or termination of a formal telework or remote work arrangements, the parties encourage Agency and Union officials to develop alternate dispute resolution methods to resolve such issues.
- 12) Employees scheduled to telework on a Federal holiday may not change their schedule to substitute an "in the office" day for the telework day unless their supervisor grants approval.

Section 20.08. Telework Information

To the extent that the Employer tracks and can report the following information, FNS will provide each Union Chapter President with a telework summary report containing the following information: employee's name; employee's grade; employee's series; employee's division and/or program; the date of the employee's request for telework; the date of approval or denial and reason(s) for any denials; the number of telework days requested; the number of telework days granted; the date of notice of any managerial terminations of telework and the reason(s) for such terminations. These reports will be distributed to NTEU Chapter Presidents on a semi-annual basis.

Section 20.09. Permanent Office Closures or Space Issues

In the event of an office closure or reduction in space, the Employer may permit employees affected by such office closure to enter into a remote work agreement. Employees will be required to execute a Remote Work Agreement consistent with their approved tour of duty forms, the DR, and this Agreement.

Section 20.10. Inclement Weather, Hazardous Conditions or Other Safety Conditions

- 1) Except in rare circumstances teleworkers and remote workers generally are ineligible for weather and safety leave and are expected to remain in duty status when an office closure is announced. Exceptions to this requirement are found in Section 5 (b)(4) of the DR and further described in Article 27 of this Agreement.
- 2) The Employer may require any employee who has a telework or remote work agreement to work during inclement weather, hazardous conditions, or other emergency so long as the condition does not prevent the employee from safely performing the duties at the telework or remote work location.
- 3) The Employer will make reasonable efforts to approve voluntary requests made in anticipation of an inclement weather, hazardous, or emergency condition for employees who have work that can be performed at a telework location. Such approved telework will not count against the employee's maximum number of hours permitted under their telework agreement.
- 4) When the office is closed due to an inclement weather, hazardous, or emergency condition, telework-ready employees who perform unscheduled telework and who do not have sufficient work to fill their full tour of duty shall contact their supervisor who will provide direction on what tasks, assignments, trainings, etc. that the employee can do during the remainder of their tour of duty.
- 5) Employees who are required to work unscheduled telework will not have their previous scheduled telework days changed or cancelled.
- 6) Employees on scheduled annual leave or sick leave, or who have a regular day off on a day of an office closure under this section, are expected to remain in their scheduled status. However, such employees with approved Telework agreements may choose to telework and cancel their previously scheduled leave.

ARTICLE 57: TELEWORK

Section A. General

The Employer fully supports and promotes the use of telework, up to the maximum extent appropriate, for and by eligible employees. Telework should be used as a strategic tool for attracting a diverse pool of potential applicants, qualified candidates, and for retaining valued employees. The appropriateness of the type/category and amount of telework suitable for eligible employees is a determination reserved for the Employer.

1. Telework is a voluntary program that permits employees to work at approved alternative worksites utilizing government issued equipment.
2. Any provision of this article, except the necessity for a telework agreement, may be waived or modified for an employee with an illness or disability. If an employee requests a waiver of any provisions of this Article, his/her telework arrangements will be negotiated on a case-by-case basis.
3. The resources available to support an all-inclusive telework program are subject to the Employer's right to determine its budget (reference 5 USC 7106), and may limit the scope of this program. The Employer will pursue obtaining sufficient equipment to allow for full employee participation in telework. In compliance with the Departmental Regulations (DR) 4080-811-002 (January 30, 2014) excess personal property (computers, laptops, printers, and fax machines) will be earmarked for telework programs prior to being recorded as excess. Any equipment used for telework, must be supported by the Employer.
4. Definitions:

Ad hoc Telework: Telework that occurs on an irregular, non-scheduled basis.

Alternative Worksite: Authorized worksite locations, other than the ODS, that satisfy all requisite federal health and safety laws, rules and regulations pertaining to the workplace, where an employee performs their official duties while teleworking. Supervisors may authorize telework from a number of alternative worksites. Temporary authorizations or changes in the location of designated alternative worksites do not require a new Telework Agreement.

- a. Primary Alternative Worksite. The approved location where the employee normally teleworks.
- b. Secondary Alternative Worksite(s). Any approved worksite(s) other than the primary alternative worksite.

Basic Work Requirement (daily): the number of hours, excluding overtime hours, an employee must work or otherwise account for by leave, credit hours, holiday hours, excused absence, compensatory time off, or time off as an award (see Article 6).

Emergency Situation: An event, incident, or circumstance that interrupts or may compromise normal daily operations at, or travel to/from, an official or alternative worksite. This may include issues of national security, extended emergencies, inclement weather, travel conditions, civil disruptions, public health emergencies, power outages, or other unique situations which result in an official announcement of an operating status authorizing unscheduled telework.

Employee Telework Classifications:

- Ad hoc Teleworker: Employee with an approved telework agreement authorizing telework on an irregular, non-scheduled basis.
- Core Teleworker: Employee with an approved telework agreement authorizing telework on routine, scheduled days.
- Non-teleworker: An employee without an approved telework agreement.
- Telework-ready Employee: All eligible employees with an approved telework agreement who are prepared and equipped to telework. If unable to telework, use of paid or unpaid leave may be requested.
- Unprepared Teleworker: Ad hoc and Core teleworkers not prepared to telework when the Employer authorizes unscheduled telework.

Short-Term Change: A temporary authorized change to the telework arrangement of 60 days or less. Such change will not require a change of the telework agreement or ODS. Examples of short-term changes include, but are not limited to:

- A work assignment wherein efficiencies are gained by the employee temporarily working additional or fewer telework days;
- An emergency, weather event or other unscheduled telework that alters the employee's normal telework schedule;
- Employer directed training;
- Employer directed travel;
- Medical related needs;
- Short term Reasonable Accommodation.

A short-term change may require an employee to:

- Telework more days (up to the full pay period), fewer days, or not at all; and
- Report to the ODS more or less than scheduled.

Telework Agreement: A written document (includes electronic format), submitted by the employee, that outlines the terms and conditions, the category type and frequency of the telework arrangement, and subsequently approved by the supervisor.

Unscheduled Telework: Telework that is authorized or required in response to mission requirements, inclement weather or emergency situations.

Section B. Position Identification

1. The Employer and the Union recognize that there may be differences inherent to the nature of the duties and responsibilities of each position.
2. Positions may be identified as ineligible for telework if the duties of the position do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished at an alternative worksite and require a physical presence, access to specialized equipment located at the ODS, or the handling of classified materials.

Section C. Participation

1. Participation in the telework program is voluntary and it is not an employee entitlement. However, after voluntarily entering into a telework agreement, an employee may be required to telework on unscheduled days.
2. All eligible employees requesting authorization to telework must enter into a telework agreement. Requests and supporting documentation for telework may be submitted at any time to the employee's immediate supervisor.
3. Teleworking employees can participate in the variable week schedule, and must sign in and out in accordance with Article 6.
4. Employees are responsible for personal operating costs, site maintenance, and other incidental costs (e.g., utilities) associated with the use of the alternative worksite; except, as provided for in this agreement. The employee does not relinquish any entitlement to reimbursement for appropriately authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the Employer as provided for by law and regulations.
5. Teleworking employees are covered under the Federal Employees Compensation Act if injured in the course of performing official duties at the alternative worksite.
6. The Employer will not be held liable for damages to the employee's personal or real property during the performance of official duties or while using Employer equipment at the alternative worksite; except, to the extent the Employer is held liable under the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claim Act.

Section D. Employee Qualifications

1. Eligibility. All employees, regardless of tenure, grade, job series or title are presumed eligible for telework.
2. Suitability. An employee suitable for telework is an employee who has demonstrated personal characteristics and qualifications that are well suited to telework, as determined by the supervisor, including at a minimum:
 - a. Demonstrated dependability and the ability to handle responsibility;
 - b. A proven record of high personal motivation;
 - c. The ability to prioritize work effectively and utilize good time management skills; and
 - d. A proven or expected minimum performance rating of "Fully Successful", or equivalent.

The Employer may make exceptions to these provisions on a case-by-case basis.

3. Permanent Ineligibility. An employee is permanently ineligible for telework if the employee has been officially disciplined, as filed in the employee's OPF or e-OPF, for:
 - a. viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties; or
 - b. being absent without permission for more than five (5) days in any calendar year.

If an employee is determined to be permanently ineligible pursuant to this Section D.3, any existing telework agreement may be immediately terminated. If the determination of permanent ineligibility is overturned via an appeals process, the employee will be deemed telework eligible and allowed to resume his/her telework schedule.

4. Denial of Telework. The Employer will not unreasonably deny an employee's telework request. Telework may be denied to ensure adequate on-site staffing at the duty station. If an employee's application is denied, the Employer will state the reasons for the denial in the employee's written notification.

Section E. Telework Agreement

1. The employee's telework agreement must be signed or acknowledged by the employee and approved by the supervisor. A copy or report of approved, denied and/or terminated telework agreements will be provided to the Union upon request.
2. A short-term change to a telework arrangement for medical or personal reasons does not require a new agreement. A permanent change requires a new agreement. All short-term or permanent changes require supervisory approval. Upon request, short term changes of more than 10 workdays will be communicated to the employee in writing.
3. Telework applicants and telework approved employees agree to:
 - a. complete telework training prior to executing a telework agreement.
 - b. report on work activities planned, assignments accomplished, and materials removed from the official worksite, if directed to do so by their supervisor.
 - c. abide by the Employer's standards of conduct while in telework status.
 - d. be as available to the Employer, co-workers and customers by phone, E-mail, voice mail, instant messaging or other communications media during their scheduled daily tour of duty as when working at the ODS. Whenever feasible, teleworking employees must forward their office telephone number to the alternative worksite on days they are teleworking. If an employee's work number cannot be forwarded, the employee must place a voicemail greeting on their office phone to include the telephone number where they can be reached when teleworking.
 - e. permit the Employer to publish, or otherwise make available, the employee's alternative worksite business telephone/fax number and e-mail address. Publication will be limited to official listings wherein other employee information is typically made available.
 - f. allow the Employer to contact them at any time they are on duty at their alternative worksite.
 - g. telework (telework-ready employees) on scheduled or unscheduled days:
 - (1) if the office is closed; or
 - (2) in temporary or emergency situations;except, when the emergency impacts the alternate worksite (see Section H), preventing the employee from working.

- h. be utilized as emergency or mission critical employees at the discretion of the employer.
- i. adopt a proactive approach to ensuring safe alternative worksites and safe work habits.
- j. return all government equipment:
 - (1) within ten workdays of completing or terminating a telework agreement if such equipment is not necessary to perform their duties at the ODS, or
 - (2) prior to separation from the agency.

Failure to do so may subject the employee to disciplinary action.

- k. ensure that government-owned property is used only for authorized purposes. Reasonable care should be used in operating all equipment. The employee is responsible for requesting government-owned or furnished equipment, supplies, and services.
- l. comply with current Federal statutes, Departmental regulations, and FSA policy establishing information security and protection responsibilities and protect all government records and data against unauthorized disclosure, access, mutilation, obliteration and destruction.
- m. make arrangements for dependent care, as necessary, to ensure an uninterrupted tour of duty. On-site children under age ten will require a caretaker/supervision other than the employee.
- n. use a government issued cellular telephone, telephone card, or software when making official long-distance telephone calls from the alternative worksite. In an emergency (e.g. loss of card), employees may be reimbursed for business calls when such calls are required to complete a work assignment.
- o. be seated at the ODS pursuant to Article 54 of this Agreement.

Section F. Program Administration

The parties agree the following conditions apply to telework:

- 1. Priority distribution of telework equipment will be commensurate with the Employer's mission related requirements and security plans. Consideration will be given to the type of equipment the employee needs to accomplish their work. In the event of limited equipment, distribution will be determined by the earliest Service Computation Date (SCD).

2. When multiple incompatible requests for the same telework day(s) are submitted, the employee with the earliest Service Computation Date (SCD) will get their preference.
3. Employees approved to telework may telework a minimum of one day per week. There is no maximum number of days an employee may telework per week; however, teleworking employees must be scheduled to report to the duty station a minimum of three days per pay period. Also, employees may telework on an ad hoc basis with an approved telework agreement.
4. The Employer has the right, normally with one day notice, to direct employees to report to their ODS on scheduled telework days based on operational requirements. The teleworker may request to telework on an alternate day when they are required to report to the ODS on a regular scheduled telework day.

If, prior to signing in for the day, sufficient notice is given to permit the employee to travel to the ODS and arrive prior to the beginning of core time, time spent commuting will not be considered hours of work. When notice to report to the ODS is given after an employee commences work at the alternative worksite, time spent commuting will be considered hours of work.

Mileage to and from the alternative worksite will not be compensated.

5. At the Employers discretion, employees may switch or change their telework day with one day notice.
6. In accordance with the procedures set forth in Article 48, Official time and Union Representatives, employees who have been designated as representatives may use official time, bank time and perform representational duties on behalf of the Union while teleworking. However, Union representatives will not travel on Union related business on official time or bank time, or meet with employees, or other Union representatives, in person while teleworking, except as otherwise provided for in this Agreement.
7. Upon appropriate notice, normally 24 hours and while the employee is on duty, management officials have the right to visit the employee to ensure compliance with their telework agreement (to inspect the home or alternate worksite to ensure that the proposed work space is adequate). The employee may have a Union representative present for a management official's visit (the Union representative is not entitled to mileage).
8. If an employee teleworks because the ODS is closed or they are allowed unscheduled telework, the employee will not be obligated to report to the ODS on an alternate or “make-up” day, unless there is a business-related need requiring the employee’s presence at the ODS.

Section G. Alternative Worksite Provisions

1. Subject to the Employer’s right to determine its budget (reference 5 USC 7106), the Employer will make a good faith effort to provide/install equipment, supplies and services required for employees to participate in teleworking and to perform their duties at an alternative worksite. The government retains ownership and control of all such property. The government will not provide office furnishings such as, but not limited to; desks, chairs, bookcases, file cabinets, credenzas, etc.
2. The employee must provide adequate workspace, lighting, telephone service, power, high-speed internet connectivity (including satellite), and operating smoke alarms.
3. The employee will be required to identify the specific locations of the work area at the primary and all approved secondary alternative worksite(s). The Employer may deny secondary alternative worksites outside of the normal commuting area.
4. The servicing and maintenance of government owned equipment is the responsibility of the Employer.
5. Employees are responsible for compliance with local zoning ordinances and community association rules regarding home offices. The Government/Employer will not be liable for pursuing or obtaining any applicable licenses.

Section H. Emergency Situations

An emergency situation is an event, incident, or circumstance that interrupts or may compromise normal daily operations at, or travel to/from, an official or alternative worksite. This may include issues of national security, extended emergencies, inclement weather, travel conditions, civil disruptions, public health emergencies, power outages, or other unique situations which result in an official announcement of an operating status authorizing unscheduled telework. When the use of unscheduled telework is authorized, telework-ready employees must notify their supervisor of their intent to participate.

1. Office Closure. If the Employer closes the ODS due to an emergency situation, employees scheduled to telework and telework-ready employees will be expected to complete their basic work requirement; except, when the emergency’s impact on the alternate worksite prevents the employee from working.
2. Unanticipated Emergency Situations Occurring Prior to the Regular Workday and the ODS is open:

- a. Scheduled Core and Ad Hoc Teleworkers. Employees scheduled to telework will be expected to complete their basic work requirement.
 - b. Telework-ready Employees. If unscheduled telework is authorized, telework-ready employees may choose to complete their basic work requirement at their alternative worksite in lieu of coming to the ODS.
3. Unanticipated Emergency Situations Occurring During the Workday. If the Employer announces that employees at the ODS will be dismissed early:
 - a. Scheduled Core and Ad Hoc Teleworkers. Teleworking employees will be expected to complete their basic work requirement.
 - b. Telework-ready Employees. If the early dismissal is for one hour or more of their basic work requirement, onsite telework-ready employees may:
 - (1) be directed to complete their basic work requirement at their alternative worksite;
 - (2) request to complete their basic work requirement at their alternative worksite;
 - (3) pursuant to b.(1) or b.(2), be directed/authorized by their supervisor to depart the ODS, prior to the early dismissal time, to commute to their alternative worksite to complete their basic work requirement.
 - c. If a telework-ready employee is directed, or requests to complete their basic work requirement at their alternative worksite, the normal commuting time will not count towards the fulfillment of their basic work requirement. However, excessive commuting time caused by the emergency situation will count towards the employee's basic work requirement (See Article 11.)
4. Potential for Emergency Situations. If the Employer determines there is a potential emergency situation developing (e.g. unfavorable weather forecast), all scheduled teleworkers and telework-ready employees are expected to prepare to telework for the duration of the anticipated event.
5. If the alternative worksite is affected by an emergency that prevents the teleworking employee from working, but the ODS is not, the employee may be required to report to the ODS or to request leave. At the discretion of the Employer, the Employee may be granted an excused absence depending on the circumstances.
6. If both the ODS and alternative worksite are affected by an emergency that prevents the employee from working, or employees are otherwise dismissed early, the employee may, at the discretion of the Employer, be granted an excused absence.

Section I. Termination of Telework Agreement

This Section I. does not apply to employees determined to be permanently ineligible to telework pursuant to Section D.3 of this Article.

1. General. An employee's telework arrangement may be terminated by either management or by the employee; by giving a two-week advance written notice except in emergency situations.
2. Termination by the Employer. An employee's teleworking arrangement may be terminated by management if one of the following occurs:
 - performance or productivity declines; or, if they received a less than fully successful annual performance rating within the past 12 months; such employee may remain ineligible to reapply for up to 12 months from the date of the documented annual performance rating
 - the employee fails to comply with the terms of this Article or their written agreement,
 - the employee is placed on a performance improvement plan (PIP) or sick leave restriction,
 - the employee is officially disciplined, or has an adverse action taken, as filed in the employee's OPF or e-OPF. If the action is due to conduct issues, the employee may remain ineligible for up to 12 months from the date the discipline or adverse action was effectuated, or
 - the arrangement no longer benefits the organization's needs.

Telework agreements will not be terminated in lieu of disciplinary or adverse actions.

3. Notice of Termination. The written notice of termination provided by management will include the specific reasons why the telework arrangement is being terminated. The termination of an employee's telework arrangement pursuant to this section is not a disciplinary action.
4. Reapplication. If the situation precipitating the termination of the employee's telework agreement is corrected, or improves significantly the employee may reapply to participate in telework utilizing the criteria established in this Article.
5. Reinstatement. If the situation precipitating the termination of the employee's telework agreement is overturned via an appeals process, the employee will be deemed telework eligible and allowed to resume his/her telework schedule.

Section J. General Contract Provisions

Grievances under this article will be handled according to Article 42. The parties agree that bargaining matters covered by this Agreement are not appropriate for further negotiation during the life of this Agreement, unless by mutual agreement (see Article 45.)

NEGOTIATED AGREEMENT ON TELEWORK
(Excerpt of CBA)

FPAC-BC Fort Worth TX and AFGE Local 3839

ARTICLE 17 – TELEWORK

17.1 : GENERAL: Telework will be administered in accordance with federal regulations, laws, rules, policies, procedures, and practices including USDA Department Regulation_ DR - 4080-811-002, Telework Program, as amended, and this Agreement.

17.2 : OFFICE COVERAGE: The teleworking employee will coordinate with their supervisor to ensure that there is adequate office coverage.

17.3 : PROTECTING INFORMATION AND EQUIPMENT: Employees are responsible for safekeeping Government materials, documents, and equipment in accordance with Departmental Regulation - DR 4080-811-002 along with other laws, rules, regulations, policies, procedures, and practices, as amended.

ARTICLE 18 – INCLEMENT WEATHER

18.1 : GENERAL: The Agency shall administer weather and safety leave in accordance with applicable laws, rules, regulations, policies, procedures, practices, as amended.

18.2 : UNSCHEDULED LEAVE: Employees are reminded that they have the option to contact their supervisors and request unscheduled leave to remain at home or leave the office early if there is inclement weather and the office is open. Any reference here to the use of leave includes the use of annual leave, comp time/comp travel, credit hours, time off awards or any other type of paid time available to the employee.

If an employee arrives later than the delayed arrival time due to weather, they may flex their schedule, if possible, or use unscheduled leave to make up the difference.

18.3 : TELEWORK: When current and forecasted hazardous weather and road conditions exist in the local commuting area, the Agency recommends employees with approved telework agreements be telework-ready and take their laptops and sufficient work home to provide themselves with the most options during inclement weather.

- A. An employee must have a telework agreement (regular or ad hoc) in place to be permitted to telework during inclement weather.

- B. If inclement weather is forecast, employees with pre-approved telework agreements and who are telework-ready can request approval for unscheduled telework to avoid potentially hazardous road conditions or heavy traffic.

- C. When there is a decision for a delayed arrival, early dismissal or office closure, employees already scheduled to telework that day are expected to work their normal tour of duty at their telework sites. This applies to regular or unscheduled telework. No hazardous weather administrative leave will be granted for pre-scheduled telework. All other employees working at the office/duty station will be granted administrative leave.

- D. If the employee's duty station is closed, the employee is teleworking, and their alternative/telework site is also impacted due to adverse weather and/or power communication outages, the employee can be granted hazardous weather administrative leave in an amount sufficient to complete their scheduled day.

- E. If an employee is working at the duty station when an early dismissal is decided, the employee may, after approval from with their supervisor, choose to leave earlier than the dismissal time and make up the time difference teleworking up to 6:00 P.M. A change of work schedule form is not required. If an employee cannot or chooses not to make up the time difference, they must take leave for the entire time off. For example, a two (2) hour early dismissal is in effect. The employee's normal tour of duty ends at 4:00 P.M. making the early dismissal time 2:00 P.M. The employee decides to leave at 12:00 P.M. They telework from 2:00 P.M. - 4:00 P.M. to make up the difference and record 4:00 P.M. - 6:00 P.M. as "Weather and Safety Leave" on their Time & Attendance.

18.4 : LEAVE SITUATIONS: An employee with pre-approved leave prior to the inclement weather will remain on leave during delayed arrival, early dismissal or office closure situations. They will not be credited for the hazardous weather time.

- A. If an employee is working at the duty station prior to an early dismissal decision or when an early dismissal is decided, the employee may request unscheduled leave to depart earlier than the dismissal time using unscheduled leave. The employee will be charged leave for the entire time and not be credited with the hazardous weather administrative leave.
- B. If an employee planned to use sick leave on a day of a late arrival, early dismissal or office closure decision and the legal basis for that sick leave has been eliminated, the sick leave must be cancelled. For example, an employee is scheduled to use sick leave for a medical appointment and that medical appointment is cancelled. The employee may not remain on sick leave.
- C. If an employee is not telework-ready during times of inclement weather, the office is open, and the employee chooses not to come to the office, the employee must contact their supervisor and request unscheduled leave.
- D. Use Code 66 – “Weather and Safety Leave” or other required code in the automated time and attendance system (currently WebTA) to document the administrative leave for delayed arrival, office closure or early dismissal.

TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK PROGRAMS

MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING

Between the Forest Service and the National Federation of Federal Employees – Forest Service Council

This MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING (MOU) is between the United States Department of Agriculture, Forest Service (Management), and the National Federation of Federal Employees, Forest Service Council (Union), hereafter referred to collectively as “the Parties.” This MOU is a Supplemental Agreement under Article 11 of the 2019 Master Agreement between the Parties, and it documents the Parties’ full and final agreement on the Forest Service Telework and Remote Work Programs.

The Parties agree:

1. IMPLEMENTATION OF USDA DEPARTMENTAL REGULATION

With this MOU, Management has met all bargaining obligations related to the implementation of USDA DR 4080-811-002 (dated November 22, 2021) (USDA DR). The Parties will follow the USDA DR and associated Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) addressing Telework and Remote Work except as modified by the provisions of this MOU. Where there are conflicts between the USDA DR or FAQs and the MOU, the Parties will follow the MOU. Where this MOU is silent on a topic, the Parties will follow the USDA DR and the associated FAQs.

2. DEFINITIONS

The following definitions are taken from USDA DR 4080-811-002 and, in some instances, summarized as follows:

- a. Alternate Worksite. A work location, other than the official worksite, that satisfies all requisite Federal health and safety laws, rules, and regulations pertaining to the workplace, where an employee performs their official duties.
- b. Official Duty Station/Official Worksite. For the purposes of this MOU, the terms “Official Duty Station” and “Official Worksite” are synonymous. The official duty station is the management-approved location where employees regularly perform their official duties.
- c. Routine Telework. Regularly scheduled telework that occurs on a recurring basis and is part of an approved telework schedule.
- d. Situational Telework (also referred to as ad hoc, episodic, unscheduled, and intermittent). Telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked were not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular, telework schedule.
- e. Telework. A work arrangement in which an employee performs and completes official duties and responsibilities from an alternate worksite. Telework may be authorized for an entire duty day or a portion of one. Telework does not include the following: work performed while on official travel status; work performed at another USDA office; work performed while commuting to or from work; remote work; or mobile work.
- f. Unscheduled Telework. Telework that is authorized in response to specific duty status announcements issued by Office of Personnel Management (OPM) or authorized USDA officials for use during period of inclement weather or other emergency situations, or with prior supervisory approval, telework used to maintain productivity during short-term disruptions to normal operating procedures.

TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK PROGRAMS

MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING

Between the Forest Service and the National Federation of Federal Employees – Forest Service Council

- g. Remote Work. A workforce flexibility arrangement under which an employee is scheduled to perform work within or outside the local commuting area of their Mission Area, agency, or staff office's worksite and is not required to report to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite on a regular and recurring basis.
- h. Remote Work Agreement. The Remote Work Agreement documents, in writing, the remote work arrangements that a supervisor approves for their remote work eligible employee.
- i. Remote Work Arrangement. A work arrangement in which:
 - 1. The employee performs assigned official duties and other authorized activities at an approved alternate work location, typically the employee's residence, within or outside of the local commuting area of the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite;
 - 2. On a regular and continuing basis;
 - 3. Is not required to physically report to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite on any frequent, regular, or recurring basis; and
 - 4. The approved alternate worksite is, for pay and other purposes, the employee's official duty station, as indicated on the employee's SF-50, per 5 CFR §531.605, "Determining an employee's official worksite."

3. TELEWORK

- a. Management will make telework eligibility determinations and telework frequency determinations in a fair and equitable manner.
- b. Telework Participation– Employee participation in the telework program is voluntary except in emergency situations as described in Sections 3.m. and 3.n. of this MOU.
- c. Official Duty Station - A teleworker's official duty station will remain unchanged if the employee reports physically to their official worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis for a total of two full workdays (e.g. 16 hours for employees on an 8 hour/day work schedule, 18 hours for employees on a 5/4/9 work schedule, or 20 hours for employees on a 4/10 work schedule). If a holiday falls on a teleworker's day to work onsite or the teleworker takes leave on a scheduled onsite day, it is not required to add an alternate day or equivalent hours to the employee's requirement to physically report to the official worksite for that specific biweekly pay period.
- d. As long as the duty station requirements in 3.c. are met, and based on the duties of their position, eligible employees may be authorized to telework a portion of their workday on every day of the pay period.
- e. In accordance with 5 CFR §531.605(d)(2), Management may make an exception to the twice-in-a-pay-period standard in 3.c. in appropriate situations of a temporary nature, such as the following:
 - 1. The employee is in temporary duty travel status away from the official worksite.

TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK PROGRAMS

MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING

Between the Forest Service and the National Federation of Federal Employees – Forest Service Council

2. The employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than a location covered by their Telework Agreement.
3. The employee is recovering from an injury or medical condition or is experiencing a temporary personal hardship approved under Article 42 of the Master Agreement.
4. The employee is affected by an emergency (e.g. safety and health emergencies) which temporarily prevents them from commuting to their official worksite.
5. The employee has an extended approved absence from work (e.g., on paid leave).

NOTE: For a temporary exception to apply, the employee must be expected to return to the official worksite on a regular and recurring basis in the future. Temporary exceptions must be reviewed by Management at least once every 3 months and should generally not exceed 6 months.

- f. Management may call employees back to the office, even on scheduled telework days, as far in advance as possible, but generally no less than 48-hour notice unless there is an emergency. If Management is unable to give advance notice and employee is called into the official worksite on a scheduled telework day, the employee may be granted duty time for the time that the employee spends traveling from the alternate worksite to the official worksite subject to applicable travel regulations. This paragraph does not apply to general callback of employees following extended telework due to emergencies.
- g. Telework Eligibility – The Parties agree the following provisions apply to Management’s telework eligibility determinations:
 1. All employees, regardless of tenure, grade, job series, title, or supervisory designation are presumed eligible for some amount of telework (subject to supervisory approval) unless prohibited by other exclusionary provisions of the USDA DR, by the Telework Enhancement Act, or this MOU.
 2. Most positions are eligible for telework unless the positions do not have any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an alternate worksite and one of the following applies:
 - i. Position duties require daily physical presence;
 - ii. Position responsibilities require daily access to specialized equipment located at the official worksite; or
 - iii. Position activities require daily access to classified or other sensitive materials.
 3. Employee Temporary Eligibility: Supervisors may provide employees who are in positions that are not normally eligible to telework the option of teleworking on a temporary basis under the following circumstances:
 - i. Recovery from an injury or medical condition;
 - ii. Emergency conditions that prevent an employee from commuting to and working at the official worksite, such as a weather emergency or public health crisis; or

TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK PROGRAMS

MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING

Between the Forest Service and the National Federation of Federal Employees – Forest Service Council

- iii. The employee has an approved personal hardship request under Article 42 of the Master Agreement.
 4. Employee Ineligibility based on Performance or Conduct. There may be situations where Management deems a position eligible for telework but the employee occupying the position is not eligible. Management may identify employees as ineligible for telework based only on the following criteria:
 - i. Performance. The employee's performance is below fully successful. In such circumstances, supervisors are required to initiate corrective action in accordance with USDA DR 4040-430.
 - ii. Conduct. An employee may be found ineligible for telework if the employee was subject to formal disciplinary action, adverse action, or was placed on a leave restriction within the previous 12 months. Management will make these conduct-based ineligibility determinations on a case-by-case basis.
 5. Employee Permanent Ineligibility. An employee is permanently ineligible for telework for misconduct specified in the Telework Enhancement Act.
- h. Telework Agreements:
1. All approved telework arrangements must be documented on a Telework Agreement using the automated form in use by the Agency.
 2. The Parties have developed a mutually-agreeable Telework Agreement form that is consistent with this MOU. Management will seek the Union's input on changes to the Telework Agreement form and the Parties will ensure changes are consistent with this MOU.
 3. Telework Agreements remain in effect until a change is initiated. Employees will not be required to recertify Telework Agreements annually.
 4. Permanent changes (e.g., change in position, supervisor, or change requested by management or employee) will require a new or updated Telework Agreement to be completed. For situations when an employee gets a new supervisor but remains in the same position with the same duties, a new agreement is required, but Management will continue to offer the same telework terms (type of telework, number of days or equivalent hours) unless there is a business need to alter the terms or the employee requests a change.
 5. A new Telework Agreement is not required for temporary changes in position or supervisor (e.g., due to detail, temporary promotion, or assignments of a short duration).
 6. With supervisory approval, employees on approved Telework Agreements may make short term changes (less than 30 days) or perform situational telework on days they are not scheduled to telework. In these situations, an employee will not be required to complete an additional agreement documenting the situational telework or short-term change.
- i. Eligibility Notification and Initiating a Telework Agreement
1. Supervisors will notify employees of their eligibility to telework by initiating a Telework Agreement within 90 days of an employee starting a new position. This notification will include the employee's Continuity of Operations Plan Status to identify if their position is

MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING

Between the Forest Service and the National Federation of Federal Employees – Forest Service Council

Emergency Essential or Mission Critical. Eligible employees will respond by completing the agreement to request telework, or to opt out of telework. Where an employee requests telework arrangements in the agreement, their supervisor will respond to approve, modify, or deny the request within 10 working days.

2. Where an employee has not heard from their supervisor on their telework eligibility, the employee may submit a request to their supervisor. Within 10 working days of receiving the employee's request to telework, Management will review the request and initiate the notification outlined in Section 3.i.1.
- j. Modifying a Telework Agreement.
1. Management may change, suspend, or terminate an employee's Telework Agreement in accordance with Section 3.l. of this MOU. The employee will be given a minimum of 45 days advance written notice, except in emergency situations where the time frame may be shorter. The notice will include the reason, as described in Section 3.l. of this MOU, effective date, and any appeals/grievance procedures available to the employee. Where possible, employees who request a hardship accommodation under Article 42 of the Master Agreement to continue to telework may be permitted to continue teleworking until the hardship process is completed, unless the reason for the management-directed change is due to the employee's performance or conduct.
 2. Employees requesting a change should give as much advance notice as possible, generally at least 7 days in advance, when they want to modify or terminate their Telework Agreement. Management may delay the agreement modification if space considerations necessitate a delay.
- k. Subject to local negotiations, employees who telework 3 or more days per week may be required to share desks or office space under normal operating conditions and absent employee health and safety concerns.
- l. When denying, terminating, or modifying (e.g. changes in type of telework and/or frequency of telework) an employee's Telework Agreement, the supervisor will demonstrate and document one of the following:
1. Changes in employee or position eligibility in accordance with Section 3.g. of this MOU;
 2. Continuation of telework will interfere the employee's ability to attain or return to a fully successful performance level; or
 3. Other business need to alter the terms of the Telework Agreement.
- m. Short term Unscheduled and Emergency Telework
1. Provisions related to performing telework during short term office closures (for example, weather-related closures) are covered under Section 5.b of the USDA DR and by Article 20 of the Master Agreement. Generally, employees with Telework Agreements are not eligible to receive Weather and Safety Leave. Consistent with Article 20 and in accordance with 5 USC §6329(c), employees will be granted weather and safety leave when weather or other safety-related conditions prevent them from safely traveling to or safely performing work at their normal worksite, their telework site, or other approved location.

2. Employees under approved Telework Agreements who are working in the office when an early departure is announced due to weather or safety generally may receive weather and safety leave for the amount of time required to commute home, if they complete the remaining time (if any) in their workday either by teleworking or taking leave or other paid time off once they arrive home.
- n. Extended telework due to emergencies.
1. Under 5 USC §7106(a)(2)(D), and in accordance with applicable laws, Management has the authority to take whatever actions may be necessary to carry out the Agency mission during emergencies. The Parties understand that this authority includes but is not limited to ordering employees to telework for extended periods of time even in the absence of a Telework Agreement.
 2. Upon request, the Union at the appropriate level will be provided with the emergency policy or authority which is being relied upon to direct emergency telework.
 3. When Management orders employees to telework due to major emergencies such as a major health emergency, significant damage to a facility making it unusable, or other long-term disruption of the work at the traditional worksite, employees in positions that normally would not be eligible to telework may be provided weather and safety leave if Management does not provide any other form of work (including temporary telework eligibility under Section 3.g.3.ii. above).
 4. Equipment for emergency telework will be provided as described in Section 3.r. below.
 5. The Parties agree that provisions specific to the nature of the emergency that requires extended telework may be negotiated, as appropriate, when such an emergency exists.
- o. Dependent Care - Teleworkers are not prohibited from teleworking while dependents are present at their telework location. However, employees may not use duty time for providing dependent care or any purpose other than official duties. Time used to care for dependents may be accounted for by using breaks, meal periods, appropriate leave, or flexing hours.
- p. Telework Grievances - Employees may file grievances related to telework in accordance with Article 9 of the Master Agreement. Nothing in the USDA DR is intended to modify the agreed upon grievance procedures found in Article 9 of the Master Agreement.
- q. Time, Attendance, Performance, Safety—
1. Supervisors may authorize teleworking employees to participate in flexible and compressed work schedules or other flexible work arrangements, similar to the way that non-teleworkers may participate in these alternative work schedules.
 2. Management will evaluate all teleworkers and non-teleworkers under the same employee performance management system and affording the same professional opportunities, assignments, and treatment with regard to work projects assigned, appraisal of job performance, awards, recognition, training and development opportunities, promotions, and retention incentives. This includes work requirements such as reporting on accomplishments and tasks completed during the workday.

3. In-person meetings between the supervisor or other representatives of the Forest Service and the employee will typically occur at the official duty station.
 4. Employees are required to follow Forest Service procedures for accurately coding time spent teleworking (currently, in Paycheck8, use Descriptor Code '11' for Routine telework and '17' for Situational telework).
 5. When teleworking, an employee is required to work from their approved alternate worksite as specified in their Telework Agreement. Supervisors may authorize telework from several alternate worksites. Temporary authorizations for changes in the location of designated alternate worksites do not require a new Telework Agreement.
 6. Safety – Management will provide guidance to employees regarding establishing ergonomically safe workstations at telework locations.
- r. Government Furnished Equipment for Telework
1. Management will provide support for any USDA-furnished device and service employees use while teleworking.
 2. USDA DR 3170-001, Section 5.b. allows for one computer and one phone per person. When feasible, the computer will be a laptop so it can be used at both the official and alternate worksites. Management will approve replacement of desktop computers with laptops, when possible, to facilitate a mobile and telework-ready workforce.
 3. Employees who telework must keep Government property and information safe, secure, and separated from their personal property and information.
 4. Management and employees are responsible for ensuring the government furnished equipment is documented either on the Telework Agreement or other Forest Service documentation.
 5. Management may authorize government equipment for employee use at the alternate worksite, including surplus ergonomic equipment (for example, chairs, standing desks), subject to equipment availability and budget.
 6. Employees who are required to telework in emergency situations will be provided with the necessary government furnished equipment (GFE) to adequately perform their tasks at an alternate worksite. Additionally, consistent with 5 CFR §550.409(b), in emergency situations Management may grant additional special allowance payments, based on a case-by-case analysis, to offset the added expenses incidental to performing work from home (or an alternative location mutually agreeable to Management and the employee).
- s. In August and in February during the first year after implementation of this MOU, Management will provide the Union with data related to Telework Agreements for bargaining unit employees. Data provided for each Forest, Station, Job Corps Center, Washington Office Staff, and Law Enforcement, will include:
- i. The total number of employees (bargaining unit and non-bargaining unit) on the unit.

MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING

Between the Forest Service and the National Federation of Federal Employees – Forest Service Council

- ii. The total number of employees with Routine Telework Agreements for 5 or more days per pay period.
 - iii. The total number of employees with Routine Telework Agreements for 1-4 days per pay period.
 - iv. The total number of employees with Situational Telework Agreements.
- t. Upon request, and consistent with the Privacy Act, the Union at the National Level will be provided copies of reports provided to the USDA as required by the Telework Enhancement Act.

4. REMOTE WORK

- a. Parties will follow the USDA DR as it relates to remote eligibility. Additionally, in considering employee requests and subsequent approvals or denials, Management will follow the criteria and procedures in the USDA DR.
- b. To bring Forest Service terminology into alignment with the USDA DR, positions previously referred to as Virtual will now be referred to as Remote.
- c. Upon request, but no more often than twice per year, the Union at the national level will be provided a list of bargaining unit positions that are remote eligible and a sanitized list (no PII) of bargaining unit employees that have approved Remote Work Arrangements (including duty station location and organizational level).
- d. Positions that require access to confidential documents will not be automatically excluded from consideration as remote-eligible.
- e. Management will base any geographic limitations on remote work arrangements on business needs such as travel requirements and other mission requirements.
- f. The details of the remote work arrangement will be in accordance with government law and regulation and must be discussed with the employee. The arrangement will be documented through a written Remote Work Agreement. At a minimum, the Agreement will specify:
 - 1. Official duty station;
 - 2. Procedures for any government supplied equipment;
 - 3. Arrangements for storage of government vehicles, if appropriate;
 - 4. Travel reimbursements in accordance with the USDA DR and Federal Travel Regulations.
- g. Employees may request to work remotely, to change an existing Remote Work Agreement, or terminate an existing Remote Work Agreement following the procedures in Section 8.b. of the USDA DR. Additionally:
 - 1. When there is a change in supervisor and not a change in duties, a new agreement is not required, however the supervisor and employee will discuss the terms. Management will continue to offer the same remote terms unless there is a business need to alter the terms and in such cases a new agreement will be required and all relevant procedures in the USDA DR will be followed.

TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK PROGRAMS

MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING

Between the Forest Service and the National Federation of Federal Employees – Forest Service Council

2. An employee requesting a change must discuss the request with their supervisor. In addition to the items set out in the USDA DR, employees may consider addressing the need for the request, the benefits to the employee and any potential benefits to the Agency.
 3. Where Management denies an employee's request for remote work arrangement, Management will provide the written rationale for the denial in accordance with the USDA DR, including Section 6.e.2., within 28 days of the employee's request.
 4. The Parties will follow the DR for employee requests to terminate remote arrangements. Management may deny an employee's request to terminate a Remote Work Arrangement due to business needs outlined in the USDA DR, including office space limitations. If the requested location cannot be accommodated, Management will work interactively with the employee to identify and consider other options. See USDA DR for process and timeframes. Management will not be responsible for any costs related to voluntary relocations.
- h. If Management terminates a remote work arrangement based on a change in the requirements of a position, Management will provide the employee with reasonable notice (generally up to 90 days) and process a change of duty station as appropriate. In these circumstances, unless otherwise agreed to when the remote work arrangement was approved, Management will authorize travel reimbursements in accordance with Federal Travel Regulations.
- i. Government Furnished Equipment for Remote Work
1. Management will provide support for any USDA-furnished device and service employees use while remote working.
 2. USDA DR 3170-001, Section 5.b. allows for one computer and one phone per person. When feasible, the computer will be a laptop so it can be used both at the remote worksite and while on official travel. These allowances do not prevent management from supplying the employee with any additional devices for their work (e.g. extra monitors, tablets, personal data recorders, etc.).
 3. Employees who work remotely must keep Government property and information safe, secure, and separated from their personal property and information.
 4. Management and employees are responsible for ensuring the government furnished equipment is documented either on the Remote Work Agreement or other Forest Service documentation.
 5. Management may authorize government equipment for employee use at their duty station, including surplus ergonomic equipment (for example, chairs, standing desks), subject to equipment availability and budget.
 6. Employees who are required to work remotely in emergency situations will be provided with the necessary government furnished equipment (GFE) to adequately perform their tasks at an alternate worksite when their duty station is negatively impacted by the emergency. Additionally, consistent with 5 CFR §550.409, in emergency situations Management may grant additional special allowance payments, based on a case-by-case analysis, to offset the added expenses incidental to performing work at an alternative location, away from their duty station, and mutually agreeable to Management and the employee.

7. Employees who work remotely will not be responsible for mailing/postage costs associated with their work as preapproved by their supervisor and subject to law and regulation.
8. Management will provide necessary office supplies to employees working remotely upon request and subject to Agency policy. Any shipping costs associated with requested office supplies/government furnished equipment will be paid by Management.

- j. Where a position has been designated remote eligible and requires the use of a government-owned vehicle (GOV), Management will assist employees to identify and arrange a storage location at a nearby government location.
- k. Remote employees will be treated equitably as set out in Section 7.d. of the USDA DR. This includes equitable treatment for wellness and fire assignments.
- l. Consistent with Article 20 of the Master Agreement and in accordance with 5 USC 6329c, employees will be granted weather and safety leave when weather or other safety-related conditions prevent them from safely performing work at their duty station or safely traveling to and performing their work at another approved location.
- m. Supervisors will consider opportunities for informal virtual engagement with and between employees.
- n. The Parties have developed a mutually-agreeable Remote Work Agreement template that is consistent with this MOU. Management will seek the Union's input on changes to the Remote Work Agreement template and the Parties will ensure changes are consistent with this MOU.
- o. Remote Work Agreements remain in effect until a change is initiated. Employees will not be required to recertify Agreements annually.
- p. Remote Work Grievances - Employees may file grievances related to remote work in accordance with Article 9 of the Master Agreement. Nothing in the USDA DR is intended to modify the agreed upon grievance procedures found in Article 9 of the Master Agreement.

5. INITIAL NOTIFICATION OF TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK ELIGIBILITY

- a. Management will notify employees whether their positions are eligible for remote work or telework as soon as possible but no fewer than 45 days before the employee is expected to return to the physical workplace. Union will have an opportunity to review the draft notification and provide input.
- b. Supervisors will notify employees of their eligibility to telework by initiating a Telework Agreement prior to requiring that the employee return to the physical workplace.

- c. Employees who enter into remote work arrangements, and prior to entering into a Remote Work Agreement, will have up to 90 days to sign a Remote Work Agreement from the date the remote work arrangement goes into effect.

6. IMPLEMENTATION, EFFECTIVE DATE, AND MODIFICATIONS

- a. A Human Resources Update will be sent to all employees providing a link to the MOU.
- b. This MOU becomes effective on the date of final approval by the Agency Head or that date on which the thirty-day time limit for Agency Head Review expires, whichever is earlier.

NEGOTIATED AGREEMENT ON TELEWORK (MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING)

Telework & Remote Work Programs MOU Between the Monongahela National Forest and the National Association of Government Employees (NAGE) R4-88
June 16, 2022

TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK PROGRAMS

MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING

Between the Monongahela National Forest and the National Association of Government Employees R4-88

This MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING (MOU) is between the United States Department of Agriculture, Forest Service, Monongahela National Forest (Management), and the National Association of Government Employees (NAGE), R4-88 (Union), hereafter referred to collectively as “the Parties.” This MOU is an appendix under Article 4 of the 2019 Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA) between the Parties, and it documents the Parties’ full and final agreement on the Agency’s implementation of Forest Service Telework and Remote Work Programs.

The Parties agree:

1. IMPLEMENTATION OF USDA DEPARTMENTAL REGULATION

With this MOU, Management has met all bargaining obligations related to the implementation of USDA DR 4080-811-002 (dated November 22, 2021) (USDA DR). The Parties will follow the USDA DR and associated Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) addressing Telework and Remote Work except as modified by the provisions of this MOU. Where there are conflicts between the USDA DR or FAQs and the MOU, the Parties will follow the MOU. Where this MOU is silent on a topic, the Parties will follow the USDA DR and the associated FAQs.

2. DEFINITIONS

The following definitions are taken from USDA DR 4080-811-002 and, in some instances, summarized as follows:

- a. Alternate Worksite. A work location, other than the official worksite, that satisfies all requisite Federal health and safety laws, rules, and regulations pertaining to the workplace, where an employee performs their official duties.
- b. Official Duty Station/Official Worksite. For the purposes of this MOU, the terms “Official Duty Station” and “Official Worksite” are synonymous. The official duty station is the management-approved location where employees regularly perform their official duties.
- c. Routine Telework. Regularly scheduled telework that occurs on a recurring basis and is part of an approved telework schedule.
- d. Situational Telework (also referred to as ad hoc, episodic, unscheduled, and intermittent). Telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked were not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular, telework schedule.
- e. Telework. A work arrangement in which an employee performs and completes official duties and responsibilities from an alternate worksite. Telework may be authorized for an entire duty day or a portion of one. Telework does not include the following: work performed while on official travel status; work performed at another USDA office; work performed while commuting to or from work; remote work; or mobile work.
- f. Unscheduled Telework. Telework that is authorized in response to specific duty status announcements issued by Office of Personnel Management (OPM) or authorized USDA officials for use during period of inclement weather or other emergency situations, or with prior supervisory approval, telework used to maintain productivity during short-term disruptions to normal operating procedures.

MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING

Between the Monongahela National Forest and the National Association of Government Employees R4-88

3. TELEWORK

- a. Management will make telework eligibility determinations and telework frequency determinations in a fair and equitable manner.
- b. Telework Participation– Employee participation in the telework program is voluntary except in emergency situations as described in Sections 3.m. and 3.n. of this MOU.
- c. Official Duty Station - A teleworker's official duty station will remain unchanged if the employee reports physically to their official worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis for a total of two full workdays (e.g. 16 hours for employees on an 8 hour/day work schedule, 18 hours for employees on a 5/4/9 work schedule, or 20 hours for employees on a 4/10 work schedule). If a holiday falls on a teleworker's day to work onsite or the teleworker takes leave on a scheduled onsite day, it is not required to add an alternate day or equivalent hours to the employee's requirement to physically report to the official worksite for that specific biweekly pay period.
- d. As long as the duty station requirements in 3.c. are met, and based on the duties of their position, eligible employees may be authorized to telework a portion of their workday on every day of the pay period.
- e. In accordance with 5 CFR §531.605(d)(2), Management may make an exception to the twice-in-a-pay-period standard in 3.c. in appropriate situations of a temporary nature, such as the following:
 1. The employee is in temporary duty travel status away from the official worksite.
 2. The employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than a location covered by their Telework Agreement.
 3. The employee is recovering from an injury or medical condition or is experiencing a temporary personal hardship or reasonable accommodation request approval under Article 6 Section 11 and/or Article 9 Section 8 of the Parties' CBA.
 4. The employee is affected by an emergency (e.g. safety and health emergencies) which temporarily prevents them from commuting to their official worksite.
 5. The employee has an extended approved absence from work (e.g., on paid leave).

NOTE: For a temporary exception to apply, the employee must be expected to return to the official worksite on a regular and recurring basis in the future. Temporary exceptions must be reviewed by Management at least once every 3 months and should generally not exceed 6 months.

- f. Management may call employees back to the office, even on scheduled telework days, as far in advance as possible, but generally no less than 48-hour notice unless there is an emergency. If Management is unable to give advance notice and employee is called into the official worksite on a scheduled telework day, the employee may be granted duty time for the time that the employee spends traveling from the alternate worksite to the official worksite subject to applicable travel regulations. This paragraph does not apply to general callback of employees following extended telework due to emergencies.

TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK PROGRAMS

MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING

Between the Monongahela National Forest and the National Association of Government Employees R4-88

- g. Telework Eligibility – The Parties agree the following provisions apply to Management’s telework eligibility determinations:
1. All employees, regardless of tenure, grade, job series, title, or supervisory designation are presumed eligible for some amount of telework (subject to supervisory approval) unless prohibited by other exclusionary provisions of the USDA DR, by the Telework Enhancement Act, or this MOU.
 2. Most positions are eligible for telework unless the positions do not have any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an alternate worksite and one of the following applies:
 - i. Position duties require daily physical presence;
 - ii. Position responsibilities require daily access to specialized equipment located at the official worksite; or
 - iii. Position activities require daily access to classified or other sensitive materials.
 3. Employee Temporary Eligibility: Supervisors may provide employees who are in positions that are not normally eligible to telework the option of teleworking on a temporary basis under the following circumstances:
 - i. Recovery from an injury or medical condition;
 - ii. Emergency conditions that prevent an employee from commuting to and working at the official worksite, such as a weather emergency or public health crisis; or
 - iii. The employee has an approved personal hardship or reasonable accommodation request under Article 6 Section 11 and/or Article 9 Section 8 of the Parties’ CBA.
 4. Employee Ineligibility based on Performance or Conduct. There may be situations where Management deems a position eligible for telework but the employee occupying the position is not eligible. Management may identify employees as ineligible for telework based only on the following criteria:
 - i. Performance. The employee’s performance is below fully successful. In such circumstances, supervisors are required to initiate corrective action in accordance with USDA DR 4040-430.
 - ii. Conduct. An employee may be found ineligible for telework if the employee was subject to formal disciplinary action, adverse action, or was placed on a leave restriction within the previous 12 months. Management will make these conduct-based ineligibility determinations on a case-by-case basis.
 5. Employee Permanent Ineligibility. An employee is permanently ineligible for telework for misconduct specified in the Telework Enhancement Act.
- h. Telework Agreements:

TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK PROGRAMS

MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING

Between the Monongahela National Forest and the National Association of Government Employees R4-88

1. All approved telework arrangements must be documented on a Telework Agreement using the automated form in use by the Agency.
 2. The Parties have mutually agreed to adopt the Telework agreement form referenced in NFFE's Telework and Remote Work Programs MOU. Management will seek the Union's input on changes to the Telework Agreement form and the Parties will ensure changes are consistent with this MOU.
 3. Telework Agreements remain in effect until a change is initiated. Employees will not be required to recertify Telework Agreements annually.
 4. Permanent changes (e.g., change in position, supervisor, or change requested by management or employee) will require a new or updated Telework Agreement to be completed. For situations when an employee gets a new supervisor but remains in the same position with the same duties, a new agreement is required, but Management will continue to offer the same telework terms (type of telework, number of days or equivalent hours) unless there is a business need to alter the terms or the employee requests a change.
 5. A new Telework Agreement is not required for temporary changes in position or supervisor (e.g., due to detail, temporary promotion, or assignments of a short duration).
 6. With supervisory approval, employees on approved Telework Agreements may make short term changes (less than 30 days) or perform situational telework on days they are not scheduled to telework. In these situations, an employee will not be required to complete an additional agreement documenting the situational telework or short-term change.
- i. Eligibility Notification and Initiating a Telework Agreement
1. Supervisors will notify employees of their eligibility to telework by initiating a Telework Agreement within 90 days of an employee starting a new position. This notification will include the employee's Continuity of Operations Plan Status to identify if their position is Emergency Essential or Mission Critical. Eligible employees will respond by completing the agreement to request telework, or to opt out of telework. Where an employee requests telework arrangements in the agreement, their supervisor will respond to approve, modify, or deny the request within 10 working days.
 2. Where an employee has not heard from their supervisor on their telework eligibility, the employee may submit a request to their second line supervisor. Within 10 working days of receiving the employee's request to telework, Management will review the request and initiate the notification outlined in Section 3.i.1 above.
- j. Modifying a Telework Agreement.
1. Management may change, suspend, or terminate an employee's Telework Agreement in accordance with Section 3.I. of this MOU. The employee will be given a minimum of 45 days advance written notice, except in emergency situations where the time frame may be shorter. The notice will include the reason, as described in Section 3.I. of this MOU, effective date, and any appeals/grievance procedures available to the employee. Where possible, employees who request a personal hardship or reasonable accommodation under Article 6 Section 11 and/or Article 9

TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK PROGRAMS

MEMORANDUM of UNDERSTANDING

Between the Monongahela National Forest and the National Association of Government Employees R4-88

Section 8 of the Parties' CBA to continue to telework may be permitted to continue teleworking until the personal hardship or reasonable accommodation request process is completed, unless the reason for the management-directed change is due to the employee's performance or conduct.

2. Employees requesting a change should give as much advance notice as possible, generally at least 7 days in advance, when they want to modify or terminate their Telework Agreement. Management may delay the agreement modification if space considerations necessitate a delay.
- k. Subject to local negotiations, employees who telework 3 or more days per week may be required to share desks or office space under normal operating conditions with the exception of employees who have health and/or safety concerns.
- l. When denying, terminating, or modifying (e.g. changes in type of telework and/or frequency of telework) an employee's Telework Agreement, the supervisor will demonstrate and document one of the following:
 1. Changes in employee or position eligibility in accordance with Section 3.g. of this MOU;
 2. Continuation of telework will interfere the employee's ability to attain or return to a fully successful performance level; or
 3. Other business needs to alter the terms of the Telework Agreement.
- m. Short term Unscheduled and Emergency Telework
 1. Provisions related to performing telework during short term office closures (for example, weather-related closures) are covered under Section 5.b of the USDA DR and by Article 15 of the Parties' CBA. Generally, employees with Telework Agreements are not eligible to receive Weather and Safety Leave. Consistent with Article 15 and in accordance with 5 USC §6329(c), employees will be granted weather and safety leave when weather or other safety-related conditions prevent them from safely traveling to or safely performing work at their normal worksite, their telework site, or other approved location.
 2. Employees under approved Telework Agreements who are working in the office when an early departure is announced due to weather or safety generally may receive weather and safety leave for the amount of time required to commute home, if they complete the remaining time (if any) in their workday either by teleworking or taking leave or other paid time off once they arrive home.
- n. Extended telework due to emergencies.
 1. Under 5 USC §7106(a)(2)(D), and in accordance with applicable laws, Management has the authority to take whatever actions may be necessary to carry out the Agency mission during emergencies. The Parties understand that this authority includes but is not limited to ordering employees to telework for extended periods of time even in the absence of a Telework Agreement.
 2. Upon request, the Union at the appropriate level will be provided with the emergency policy or authority which is being relied upon to direct emergency telework.

3. When Management orders employees to telework due to major emergencies such as a major health emergency, significant damage to a facility making it unusable, or other long-term disruption of the work at the traditional worksite, employees in positions that normally would not be eligible to telework may be provided weather and safety leave if Management does not provide any other form of work (including temporary telework eligibility under Section 3.g.3.ii. above).
 4. Equipment for emergency telework will be provided as described in Section 3.r. below.
 5. The Parties agree that provisions specific to the nature of the emergency that requires extended telework may be negotiated, as appropriate, when such an emergency exists.
- o. Dependent Care - Teleworkers are not prohibited from teleworking while dependents are present at their telework location. However, employees may not use duty time for providing dependent care or any purpose other than official duties. Time used to care for dependents may be accounted for by using breaks, meal periods, appropriate leave, or flexing hours.
- p. Telework Grievances - Employees may file grievances related to telework in accordance with Article 32 of the Parties' CBA. Nothing in the USDA DR is intended to modify the agreed upon grievance procedures found in Article 32 of the Parties' CBA.
- q. Time, Attendance, Performance, Safety-
1. Supervisors may authorize teleworking employees to participate in flexible and compressed work schedules or other flexible work arrangements, similar to the way that non-teleworkers may participate in these alternative work schedules.
 2. Management will evaluate all teleworkers and non-teleworkers under the same employee performance management system and affording the same professional opportunities, assignments, and treatment with regard to work projects assigned, appraisal of job performance, awards, recognition, training and development opportunities, promotions, and retention incentives. This includes work requirements such as reporting on accomplishments and tasks completed during the workday.
 3. In-person meetings between the supervisor or other representatives of the Forest Service and the employee will typically occur at the official duty station or at a designated location agreed to by both parties.
 4. Employees are required to follow Forest Service procedures for accurately coding time spent teleworking (currently, in Paycheck8, use Descriptor Code '11' for Routine telework and '17' for Situational telework).
 5. When teleworking, an employee is required to work from their approved alternate worksite as specified in their Telework Agreement. Supervisors may authorize telework from several alternate worksites. Temporary authorizations for changes in the location of designated alternate worksites do not require a new Telework Agreement but will require prior supervisor's approval.

6. Safety – Management will provide guidance to employees regarding establishing ergonomically safe workstations at telework locations.
- r. Government Furnished Equipment for Telework
1. Management will provide support for any USDA-furnished device and service employees use while teleworking.
 2. USDA DR 3170-001, Section 5.b. allows for one computer and one phone per person, subject to equipment availability and budget. When feasible, the computer will be a laptop so it can be used at both the official and alternate worksites. Management will approve replacement of desktop computers with laptops, when possible, to facilitate a mobile and telework-ready workforce.
 3. Employees who telework must keep Government property and information safe, secure, and separated from their personal property and information.
 4. Management and employees are responsible for ensuring the government furnished equipment is documented either on the Telework Agreement or other Forest Service documentation.
 5. Management may authorize government equipment for employee use at the alternate worksite, including surplus ergonomic equipment (for example, chairs, standing desks), subject to equipment availability and budget.

(CBA Excerpt)

July 15, 2003

ARTICLE 10 – FLEXIPLACE

SECTION 1: General

The employer supports a flexible workplace policy for employees who desire to work off-site for part of the pay period and whose work is appropriate to such an arrangement and where such an arrangement will benefit the government. It is the Agency's policy to provide management with the option to allow eligible employees to work at an alternative workplace for part of the workweek. Flexiplace is a program that permits employees to voluntarily work at approved locations remote to their official duty station (ODS).

- A. Intermittent Flexiplace - Intermittent flexiplace describes a work schedule that does not follow a regular weekly schedule. It can include any of the following situations:
 - 1) Short-term (one time work assignment)
 - 2) Periodic (occasional work assignment up to 3 days a month)
 - 3) Recurring (a regular work assignment occurring less than 4 days per month)
- B. Long Term Flexiplace - Long-term flexiplace describes a flexiplace work schedule that generally includes one (1) day or more a week at the flexiplace site.
- C. Official Duty Station – The city, town, county in which the employee normally works. This is the place where the employee's desk or the place where the employee normally performs his or her duties.
- D. Teleworker – An employee who works at an alternative work location (i.e. home, telecenter, or other satellite work location) on a regular and reoccurring schedule for a minimum of one day per pay period and with a written agreement.
- E. Teleworking – (Also known as flexiplace, flexible workplace, and telecommuting). Performance of official duties at an alternative work site (i.e. home, telecenter, or other satellite work location) which is not the employee's official duty work station.
- F. Telework Agreement – A written agreement, completed and signed by an employee and appropriate official(s) in his or her mission area/agency/staff office that outlines the terms and conditions of the telework (flexiplace) arrangement.

SECTION 2: Identifying Potential Positions

The employer will identify positions suitable for Flexiplace. Positions identified for Flexiplace depend on the specific nature of the work being performed, not the job series and title.

- A. The following guidelines will be used to identify appropriate work assignments for flexiplace:
 - 1) Tasks and work activities that are portable, do not depend on the employee being at the traditional work site, and are conducive to supervisory oversight at the alternative worksite.
 - 2) The work must be able to be completed away from the official duty station without adversely affecting the workload of other employees, office coverage, customer service, or other mission of the work unit.
- B. The types of work suitable for flexiplace depend on specific job function. However, jobs that require the following types of skills may be considered good candidates for flexiplace.
 - 1) Requires writing such as data analysis, reviewing voluminous documents, writing decisions or reports.
 - 2) Includes computer-oriented tasks such as programming, data entry, or word processing.
- C. Positions not generally eligible for telework are those positions involving tasks that are not suitable to be performed away from the traditional worksite, including tasks that:
 - 1) Require the employee to have daily face-to-face contact with the supervisor, colleagues, clients, or the general public in order to perform his or her job effectively, which cannot otherwise be achieved via e-mail, telephone, fax, or similar electronic means
 - 2) Are part of trainee or probationary positions.

SECTION 3: Qualifications

Flexiplace is a management option rather than an employee benefit and does not change the terms and conditions of appointment. Even if the type of work being performed is suitable for approval of a flexiplace arrangement, the Employer must determine if the employee possesses the qualifications and attributes necessary to participate in flexiplace. Such qualifications and attributes include or evidenced by, but not limited to, the following items:

- A. The employee must have achieved a "results achieved" (or fully successful) rating and there is no reasonable cause to believe this level of performance will drop. Management can waive this requirement on a case-by-case basis.
- B. Has not received any disciplinary or adverse action in the previous two (2) or three (3) years as appropriate.
- C. As a guide, the employee has demonstrated organizational skills, motivation, independence, self-discipline, dependability, is a self-starter requiring minimal supervision, and have the knowledge, skills, and abilities to work independently.
- D. The employee is willing to sign and abide by a written agreement which requires participation in training and evaluation sessions.
- E. The employee has satisfied adequate homework station requirements, including the availability of equipment and provisions for protecting the confidentiality of data.
- F. The employee is not currently on sick leave restriction.

SECTION 4: Application Procedure

- A. Employees desiring to participate in flexiplace must submit an application on a form supplied by the Employer. The Employer may deny an application to telecommute solely to maintain sufficient staff at the official duty station.
- B. If an application is approved, the employee will be required to sign a telecommuting agreement (Exhibit 1) that will include a trial period of not less than 30 days.

SECTION 5: Participation

- A. Flexiplace is voluntary. However, the Employer may require employees to work at the flexiplace site in case of emergency situations.
- B. If multiple employees are determined to be eligible to telecommute necessitating the denial or alteration of some requests, the employees will be given an opportunity to work out the conflict. If the employees are unable to resolve the conflict, their Service Computation Date (SCD) will be the "tie-breaker", with the earliest SCD receiving preference.
- C. Flexiplace employees are bound by the Employer's standards of conduct while in flexiplace status.

SECTION 6: Supervisor and Employee Agreement

The Flexiplace Work Agreement is the written document signed by the flexiplace employee and their supervisor, outlining details of the flexiplace program and the responsibilities of the employee and supervisor. The elements of this policy statement shall be incorporated into each Agreement.

- A. Before beginning off-site work, employees and supervisors must understand their responsibilities and the details of the program.
- B. The primary concern of supervisors is assuring the work of the unit is accomplished. The overall interests of the office must take precedence over working off-site. One person's off-site work should not adversely affect the performance of other employees or put a burden on staff remaining in the office. Not only should an equitable distribution of workload be maintained, but also methods should be instituted to ensure that office employees do not have to handle the flexiplace employee's work.
- C. Management approval will be at the first line supervisor's level with second line supervisory concurrence.
- D. Employee participation in the flexiplace program may be contingent upon available financial resources.
- E. Duration - flexiplace agreements can be for any period of time up to and including one year. The agreement should be re-signed if the agreement is extended past twelve months.

SECTION 7: Administration

- A. Work Schedule - Rules concerning work schedules, overtime, pay, leave, core hours and other personnel issues apply to flexiplace employees as they do to on-site employees.

- B. The Flexiplace Work Agreement documents the initial work schedule and should be updated to reflect changes in work schedules. In addition to regularly scheduled on-site days, employees are responsible for attending meetings or other on-site events; reasonable notice, generally not less than 24-hours, of such events will be given to employees who are not scheduled to be in the office on those days.
- C. For a long term flexiplace agreement as defined in Section 1, the initial agreement will require the employee to work at the official duty station a minimum of two (2) days per workweek. After the initial flexiplace agreement, at the discretion of the Supervisor, this may be waived on a case-by-case basis.
- D. Hours of Work. Pursuant to Article 9 (Hours of Duty), teleworking employees can participate in the variable week schedule while at the remote site. Supervisors will continue to certify time and attendance for flexiplace employees. Employees are required to maintain T&A logs for periods covered at the Flexiplace site. The employee is responsible for submitting their T&A log in accordance with office practice, unless it is beyond the employee's control.

SECTION 8: Position Descriptions and Performance Standards

- A. Established position descriptions will apply to flexiplace employees. Performance standards for flexiplace employees will be results-oriented and will describe the quantity and quality of expected work products and the method of evaluation. Generally, the same performance standards will apply to both flexiplace employees and on-site employees who perform the same tasks, with adjustments for unique circumstances encountered.
- B. In order to evaluate job performance as well as to certify time and attendance, supervisors will establish clearly defined work assignments and expectations. Work performance should be evaluated according to:
 - 1) Existing quantity and quality expectations.
 - 2) Existing expectations monitored through periodic progress reports by the telecommuter.
 - 3) Other appropriate measures to assure the employee is accomplishing the assigned tasks within the established job position.

SECTION 9: Temporary Changes to Flexiplace/Teleworking Agreements.

The Employer has the right to direct employees to report to their ODS due to special circumstances, including, but not limited to, office assignments, meetings, and/or training. If due to equipment and/or service failure, the employee may be required to report to the ODS. If circumstances warrant, appropriate arrangements will be made between the Employer and the employee in determining travel and hours of work.

SECTION 10: Level of Access

As a minimum level of accessibility, teleworking employees are expected to be as available to the Employer, co-workers and customers by telephone, E-mail, voice mail or other communications media during their scheduled daily tour of duty as when working at the ODS. The Employer has the right to publish, or otherwise make available, the employee's remote site business telephone/fax number and e-mail address. Publication will be limited to official listings wherein other employee information is typically made available. The Employer may call the employee at anytime their electronic sign-in sheet shows them to be on duty. The Employer may, on occasion, visit the employee at the remote work site. Such unannounced visits will occur while the employee is on duty.

SECTION 11: Flexiplace Site Provisions

- A. Subject to the Employer's right to determine its budget (reference 5 USC 7106), the Employer will make a good faith effort to provide/install equipment, supplies and services required for employees to participate in flexiplace and to perform their duties at the remote work site. The Employer retains ownership and control of all such property. The Employer will not provide office furnishings such as, but not limited to; desks, chairs, bookcases, file cabinets, credenzas, etc. Employees must ensure that government-owned property is used only for authorized purposes. The employee is responsible for requesting Employer-owned or furnished equipment, supplies, and services. Within ten workdays of completing or terminating a flexiplace/teleworking agreement, or prior to separation from the - agency, the employee must return all Employer equipment and request termination of telephone service. Failure to do so may subject the employee to disciplinary action and the employee will be responsible for any service or disconnect charges from the date flexiplace ended.

- B. As circumstances change and it becomes economically feasible and appropriate, the Agency may provide additional assistance in maintaining the flexiplace site.
 - C. With Employer approval, employees may use their own compatible equipment consistent with Employer network requirements and the availability of technical support and services. In addition to being compatible, employee-owned equipment must be of a like or better quality than the equipment in use by the general employee population at the ODS. The servicing and maintenance of employee-owned equipment is the responsibility of the employee. Employee-owned software used for official business must be of the same make and version as that in use by the Employer at the ODS.
 - D. The employee must provide adequate workspace, lighting, residential telephone service, power, and smoke alarms. The employee will be required to identify the specific location of the work area at the remote work site and self-certify as to the adequacy and safety of the remote work site.
 - E. Employees must comply with all security measures and disclosure provisions, including password protection and data encryption so that the Privacy Act or other security standards are not compromised. Employees may not remove, or transfer by any means, sensitive material from their ODS to the remote work site without prior approval.
 - F. Employees must protect all government records and data against unauthorized disclosure, access, mutilation, obliteration and destruction. E-mail sent to the ODS with attachments must contain the following statement, "This e-mail was generated from a remote work site. Attachments must be scanned for viruses prior to opening." Computer files transferred from the remote work site to the ODS by any other method must be scanned for viruses.
 - G. Employees must ensure that government provided equipment and property is used only for authorized purposes. Reasonable care should be used in operating all equipment. The servicing and maintenance of government owned equipment is the responsibility of the Employer.
 - H. The flexiplace employee's work site must meet acceptable standards for the safety of the employee and the security of data and any Government loaned equipment. A self-certification safety inspection form (Exhibit 2) or on-site inspection (normally within 24 hours notice) may be used to meet this requirement.
 - I. It is the employee's responsibility to determine, and comply with, any local zoning restrictions. Employee is responsible for any costs of working at home that arise from local zoning requirements, insurance coverages, business use permits and/or variances.

SECTION 12: Miscellaneous Conditions

- A. Dependent Care. Flexiplace is not a substitute for day care. Flexiplace employees may not have a dependent in the home during work hours unless an in-home care provider is present. The employee will make arrangements for dependent care, as necessary, to ensure an uninterrupted tour of duty. Older children, age 12 and older, may be in the home during duty hours, as long as care is not required by the employee.
- B. Personal Expenses. The Employer will not be responsible for personal operating costs, site maintenance, or any other incidental costs (e.g., utilities) associated with the use of the remote work site, except as provide for in this agreement. The employee does not relinquish any entitlement to reimbursement for appropriately authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the Employer as provided for by law and regulations.
- C. Long-distance Telephone Calls. Teleworking employees should use a government telephone card when making official long-distance telephone calls from the remote work site. Use of the card for other than official purposes may result in disciplinary action and termination of the teleworking agreement. In an emergency (e.g. loss of card), employees may be reimbursed for business calls when such calls are required to complete a work assignment.
- D. Liability for Damages - The Employer will not be held liable for damages to the employee's personal or real property during the performance of official duties or while using Employer equipment at the alternative work site, except to the extent the Employer is held liable under the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claim Act.

- E. Workers' Compensation Act - Flexiplace employees are covered by the Federal Employees Compensation Act and may qualify for payment for on-the-job injury or occupational illness.
- F. Emergencies/Administrative Leave/Early Dismissal
 - 1) If the remote work site is affected by an emergency that prevents the employee from working, but the ODS is not, the employee may be required to report to the ODS or to request leave. At the discretion of the Employer, the Employee may be granted an excused absence depending on the circumstances.
 - 2) If both the ODS and remote work site are affected by an emergency that prevents the employee from working, or employees are otherwise dismissed early, the employee may, at the discretion of the Employer, be granted an excused absence.

SECTION 12: Duration

An employee's involvement in the flexiplace program is voluntary and may be discontinued by the employee or the supervisor at any time with appropriate notice (normally 2 weeks). Management may remove an employee from the program if performance declines, the employee violates the terms of the flexiplace agreement or the program no longer benefits the organization's needs, without advance notice.

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT

This Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) is between the AFGE Local #571 and USDA, Texas Farm Service Agency.

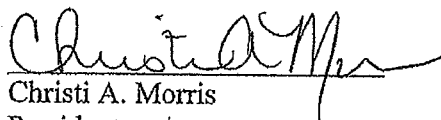

This MOA serves to codify negotiations between the parties for the implementation of the requirements of the Telework Enhancement Act.

The parties agree that Telework will not be approved on a regularly scheduled, recurring basis for any Bargaining Unit Members. Telework may occasionally be approved on a highly limited basis to address Ad-Hoc situations, which are deemed appropriate by the employee's supervisor.

It is the opinion of the parties that employees of the USDA, Texas Farm Service Agency have assigned duties, which require daily contact with other people and that only highly-limited Ad-Hoc and situational approvals may be deemed appropriate for approval. It is further the concern of the parties that the assigned duties of the employees of the Texas Farm Service Agency require the extensive use of privileged and Personally Identifiable Information (PII), which does not lend itself to the portability needs of the Telework Enhancement Act. When removed to offsite locations, providing adequate security for that information is of concern.

ARTICLE 17 – TELEWORK

17.1: GENERAL: Telework will be administered in accordance with federal regulations, laws, rules, policies, procedures, and practices including USDA Department Regulation DR - 4080-811-002, Telework Program, as amended, and this Agreement.

17.2: OFFICE COVERAGE: The teleworking employee will coordinate with their supervisor to ensure that there is adequate office coverage.

17.3: PROTECTING INFORMATION AND EQUIPMENT: Employees are responsible for safekeeping Government materials, documents, and equipment in accordance with Departmental Regulation - DR 4080-811-002 along with other laws, rules, regulations, policies, procedures, and practices, as amended.

ARTICLE 18 – INCLEMENT WEATHER

18.1: GENERAL: The Agency shall administer weather and safety leave in accordance with applicable laws, rules, regulations, policies, procedures, practices, as amended.

18.2: UNSCHEDULED LEAVE: Employees are reminded that they have the option to contact their supervisors and request unscheduled leave to remain at home or leave the office early if there is inclement weather and the office is open. Any reference here to the use of leave includes the use of annual leave, comp time/comp travel, credit hours, time off awards or any other type of paid time available to the employee.

If an employee arrives later than the delayed arrival time due to weather, they may flex their schedule, if possible, or use unscheduled leave to make up the difference.

18.3: TELEWORK: When current and forecasted hazardous weather and road conditions exist in the local commuting area, the Agency recommends employees with approved telework agreements be telework-ready and take their laptops and sufficient work home to provide themselves with the most options during inclement weather.

- A. An employee must have a telework agreement (regular or ad hoc) in place to be permitted to telework during inclement weather.

- B. If inclement weather is forecast, employees with pre-approved telework agreements and who are telework-ready can request approval for unscheduled telework to avoid potentially hazardous road conditions or heavy traffic.

- C. When there is a decision for a delayed arrival, early dismissal or office closure, employees already scheduled to telework that day are expected to work their normal tour of duty at their telework sites. This applies to regular or unscheduled telework. No hazardous weather administrative leave will be granted for pre-scheduled telework. All other employees working at the office/duty station will be granted administrative leave.

- D. If the employee's duty station is closed, the employee is teleworking, and their alternative/telework site is also impacted due to adverse weather and/or power communication outages, the employee can be granted hazardous weather administrative leave in an amount sufficient to complete their scheduled day.

- E. If an employee is working at the duty station when an early dismissal is decided, the employee may, after approval from with their supervisor, choose to leave earlier than the dismissal time and make up the time difference teleworking up to 6:00 P.M. A change of work schedule form is not required. If an employee cannot or chooses not to make up the time difference, they must take leave for the entire time off. For example, a two (2) hour early dismissal is in effect. The employee's normal tour of duty ends at 4:00 P.M. making the early dismissal time 2:00 P.M. The employee decides to leave at 12:00 P.M. They telework from 2:00 P.M. - 4:00 P.M. to make up the difference and record 4:00 P.M. - 6:00 P.M. as "Weather and Safety Leave" on their Time & Attendance.

18.4: LEAVE SITUATIONS: An employee with pre-approved leave prior to the inclement weather will remain on leave during delayed arrival, early dismissal or office closure situations. They will not be credited for the hazardous weather time.

- A. If an employee is working at the duty station prior to an early dismissal decision or when an early dismissal is decided, the employee may request unscheduled leave to depart earlier than the dismissal time using unscheduled leave. The employee will be charged leave for the entire time and not be credited with the hazardous weather administrative leave.
- B. If an employee planned to use sick leave on a day of a late arrival, early dismissal or office closure decision and the legal basis for that sick leave has been eliminated, the sick leave must be cancelled. For example, an employee is scheduled to use sick leave for a medical appointment and that medical appointment is cancelled. The employee may not remain on sick leave.
- C. If an employee is not telework-ready during times of inclement weather, the office is open, and the employee chooses not to come to the office, the employee must contact their supervisor and request unscheduled leave.
- D. Use Code 66 – “Weather and Safety Leave” or other required code in the automated time and attendance system (currently WebTA) to document the administrative leave for delayed arrival, office closure or early dismissal.

Legacy Standalone Agreement (applies to employees realigned from

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING

THIS MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING (“M.O.U.”) is between the United States Department of Agriculture, Forest Service (“the Agency”), and the National Federation of Federal Employees, Forest Service Council (“the Union”), collectively “the Parties,” concerning implementation of USDA DR 4080-811-002 Telework Program, dated January 4, 2018 (“the Telework DR”) for bargaining-unit employees represented by the Union (“employees”).

1. Intent. The intent of the Parties is to establish procedures for the implementation of the Telework DR and appropriate arrangements for employees who are adversely impacted by it. Nothing in this M.O.U. affects the negotiated terms and conditions of the Master Agreement between the Parties, dated December 6, 2016 (“the M.A.”).
2. Virtual Employees. In accordance with its terms, the Telework DR does not apply to virtual employees. Virtual employees are those who have been identified by Management in accordance with the Article 4, Section 22, of the M.A., and as clarified in the Annotations for that section. Affected employees who believe they were hired or assigned into virtual positions before December 6, 2016, may request a review to determine if they should be identified as virtual as provided in Article 4, Section 22.
 - a. Requests for review under this section must:
 - i. be submitted in writing to the employee’s first-line supervisor within 30 days of the effective date of this MOU;
 - ii. explain the basis for claiming to be a virtual employee; and
 - iii. provide any supporting documentation to be considered (such as vacancy announcement, position description, confirmation letter, time-and-attendance records, performance appraisals, email correspondence with the hiring manager or supervisor, statements from other employees, etc.).
 - b. The employee may have Union representation during any discussions between the employee and the Agency related to the request for review. The role of the Union representative is to help the employee understand the process and explain the supporting evidence.
 - c. The Agency will respond to the employee in writing within 60 days of receipt of the employee’s request. The response will provide the rationale for the Agency’s decision. If the employee disagrees with the Agency’s decision, the employee may grieve it in accordance with the provisions of Article 9 of the M.A.
 - d. If the Agency determines that the employee’s position is not virtual, the employee will be directed to report to the official duty station/primary worksite unless there are exigent circumstances. The reporting date should be established after discussion with the employee, but will be not less than 30 nor more than 180 days from the date of the decision. If exigent circumstances exist, the Agency may make other arrangements, including designating the employee's position as virtual for as long as the employee remains the incumbent in the position.

3. Requests for Reassignment. Any request for an employee to be reassigned as virtual within the employee's current position, other than as a reasonable accommodation for a qualified disability, will follow the provisions of the M.A. at Article 4.14 Requests for Reassignment or Article 42 Personal Hardship, as applicable. In addition to the applicable M.A. provisions, the request should address such factors as the impact to the Agency for salary costs due to locality pay, transportation and per diem costs for anticipated travel between the virtual worksite and an agency worksite, transfer-of-station costs, and recent efforts to recruit and retain quality candidates for the employee's position.
4. Alternate Agency Offices. On a case-by-case basis, an employee may be allowed to work on a regular and recurring basis from a designated Alternate Agency Office away from the employee's official duty station/primary worksite. In accordance with its terms, the Telework DR does not apply to work performed from an Alternate Agency Office.
 - a. An Alternate Agency Office may be one owned or leased by the Agency or by one of the Agency's partners or cooperating agencies and organizations, such as another federal, state, or local agency or a non-governmental or non-profit organization. An Alternate Agency Office does not include an employee's personal residence or other approved location used primarily for the employee's convenience.
 - b. An employee may request to work from an Alternate Agency Office by submitting a request in writing to the employee's supervisor. The request must identify the Alternate Agency Office and point of contact, explain the justification for requesting the arrangement, and propose a schedule for working there (e.g., 100 percent, Tuesdays and Thursdays, etc.). The Agency will respond in writing within 30 days of receipt.
 - c. An employee does not have a right to work from an Alternate Agency Office. Any arrangement to work from an Alternate Agency Office is subject to agreement of the employee, the employee's supervisor, and the authorized designee of the Alternate Agency Office. The agreement may continue as long as it remains satisfactory to all of them. Notice of termination should be provided at least 10 days in advance.
 - d. Upon termination of the arrangement, the employee must report to the employee's official duty station/primary worksite.
5. Space Availability Restrictions. Regions and Stations will develop procedures for recommending approval of requests to telework more than two days a pay period to address space availability restrictions, as provided in the Telework DR. Those procedures should be developed with the collaborative involvement of the Union at the appropriate level, as provided Article 8.3 of the M.A.

- a. The criteria for recommending exceptions will be based on such factors as the nature of the work, the workload, and the suitability of the work for more frequent telework. No preference will be given to managers and supervisors over bargaining-unit employees solely on the basis of their status as managers or supervisors.
 - b. Requests for exceptions must:
 - i. be submitted in writing to the employee's first-line supervisor;
 - ii. explain the basis for requesting exception; and
 - iii. provide any supporting documentation to be considered.
 - c. The employee may have Union representation during any discussions between the employee and the Agency related to the request for exception. The role of the Union representative is to help the employee understand the process and explain the evidence supporting the employee's request.
 - d. Upon request, the Union at the appropriate level will be allowed to provide input to the Regional Forester or Station Director before a determination is made on whether or not to recommend that the Chief approve the employee's request for exception.
 - e. The Agency will respond to the employee in writing within 60 days of receipt of the employee's request.
6. Exceptions Claimed as Condition of Acceptance. An employee who claims authorization to telework more than one day per week/two days per pay period on the basis of a prior agreement or understanding reached with the hiring manager or supervisor at the time of acceptance of the offer of employment must assert that claim within 30 days of the effective date of this M.O.U.
- a. The employee's claim must:
 - i. be submitted in writing to the employee's first-line supervisor;
 - ii. explain the basis for claiming exception; and
 - iii. provide any supporting documentation to be considered (such as vacancy announcement, position description, confirmation letter, time-and-attendance records, performance appraisals, email correspondence with the hiring manager or supervisor, statements from other employees, etc.).
 - b. The employee may have Union representation during any discussions between the employee and the Agency related to the employee's claim. The role of the Union representative is to help the employee understand the process and explain the supporting evidence.

- c. The Agency will respond to the employee in writing within 60 days of receipt of the employee's claim. The response will provide the rationale for the Agency's decision. If the employee disagrees with the Agency's decision, the employee may grieve it in accordance with the provisions of Article 9 of the M.A.
 - d. If the Agency determines the existence of a valid prior agreement, it will remain in effect according to its terms, unless inconsistent with law, rule, or government-wide regulation.
 - e. If the Agency determines that no valid prior agreement or understanding exists, the employee will be required to comply with the Telework DR within 30 days unless there are exigent circumstances. If exigent circumstances exist, the Agency and employee should discuss alternatives, such as extending the required compliance date to allow reasonable time for the employee to make necessary personal arrangements, allowing work from an Alternate Office Location, or designating the employee's position as virtual for as long as the employee remains the incumbent in the position.
7. Employees on Flexible Work Schedules. Bargaining-unit employees on Flexible Work Schedules may, with supervisory approval, also telework additional hours (to meet their basic work requirement of 80 hours biweekly or to earn credit hours) on days when they work in the office. On those days, employees are expected to work the majority of their hours in the office. Except under exigent circumstances, employees will not be approved to telework more than a total of 12 hours in any workweek.
 8. All procedures and arrangements implemented pursuant to this M.O.U. must be consistent with applicable laws, rules, government regulations, and provisions of the M.A.
 9. As soon as practical upon implementation of this M.O.U. jointly developed information will be made available to all employees to offer clarification of policy and intent of this M.O.U. When practical, presentations should be held in conjunction with other scheduled meetings, such as forest leadership team meetings and district safety meetings. When face-to-face meeting is not practical, training can also be provided using other formats that allow for interactive dialog including, but not limited to, video teleconferencing, electronic meetings, or other appropriate technology.
 10. Upon the effective date of this M.O.U., the Parties' prior agreement in the Forest Service Manual, Section 6161 –Telework, is terminated.
 11. This M.O.U. is a Supplemental Agreement under Article 11 of the Master Agreement between the Forest Service and the Forest Service Council of the National Federation of Federal Employees. It is subject to Agency Head Review in accordance with the Federal Labor-Management Relations Statute (the Statute).
 12. This M.O.U. becomes effective on the date of its approval on Agency Head Review or upon expiration of the time provided in the Statute for Agency Head approval or disapproval. It will remain in effect in accordance with its terms unless and until USDA DR 4080-811-002 Telework Program, dated January 4, 2018, is amended, superseded, or rescinded by the Department of Agriculture.

Memorandum of Understanding

- 13. Either Party may request to re-open this M.O.U. to address changing conditions.
- 14. The Parties stipulate that the signatories below have the authority to bind their respective Party to the terms and conditions as agreed herein.

Article 48. TELEWORK

Section 1. Authority and Purpose.

- a. Authority. In accordance with the Telework Enhancement Act, 5 U.S.C. § 6501 et seq. (Telework Enhancement Act), U.S. Office of Personnel Management 2021 Guide to Telework and Remote Work in the Federal Government, and Telework and Remote Work Programs DR 4080-811-002, this Article establishes the Agency’s telework program.
- b. Purpose. Telework is an arrangement in which an employee, under a written telework agreement, is scheduled to perform their work at an alternative Agency-approved worksite other than the Official Worksite. An employee’s participation in the Agency’s telework program is voluntary. This Article addresses Routine Telework and Situational Telework. Generally, employees covered by this Article are expected to report to their Official Worksite at least two full workdays in a biweekly pay period. The ability of the Agency to require employees to work at an Alternative Worksite in connection with a COOP or a pandemic health crisis under 5 C.F.R. § 550.409 is covered by Article 32—Agency Emergency Action. Telework does not include any part of work done while on official travel. Travel is covered by Article 23—Travel.
- c. Benefits. After two decades of telework experience at OGC, the Parties recognize that the telework program has maintained employee productivity and improved employee morale and job satisfaction and anticipate that it will continue to do so. Telework is not a substitute for adequate dependent care, as specified in Section 7(e) below. The Parties agree that it can be a valuable flexibility to employees with caregiving responsibilities, by eliminating time required to commute and expanding employees’ options in arranging dependent care.

Section 2. Definitions.

- a. Alternative Worksite (“AWS”). An Alternative Worksite or AWS is an Agency-approved worksite location other than the Official Worksite where an employee performs their official duties. An AWS is one that satisfies all requisite Federal health and safety laws, rules, and regulations pertaining to the workplace and the requirements of this Agreement. Employees may have multiple approved AWS but must at all times provide their supervisor timely prior notice of the approved AWS at which they plan to work. It is the employee’s responsibility to ensure that their Alternative Worksites have high speed broadband internet access or secure Wi-Fi access capable of supporting use of USDA’s VPN and applications with the same functionality, privacy, security, and access as if they were at the Official Worksite.
- b. Official Worksite. The Official Worksite is the location of an employee’s duty station as documented on an employee’s Standard Form 50. At their election, supervisors may designate alternate facilities (e.g., client offices or other Federal facilities) as additional Official Worksites for purposes of an employee's requirement to report to the Official Worksite at least two full workdays each pay period.

- c. Opt-Out. A telework-eligible employee who voluntarily declines to participate in the Agency's telework program. Opt-Outs must sign and check the voluntary Opt-Out box on the Telework Agreement.
- d. Portable Work. Work that can be performed with equal efficiency and effectiveness with respect to quality, quantity, timeliness, and other aspects of accomplishing OGC's mission at either the employee's Official Worksite or at an AWS. The Agency is not obligated to change an employee's regular assignments, duties, or the way the assignments are performed to make work qualify as Portable Work.
- e. Routine Telework. Telework that, as more fully described in Section 4 below, occurs as part of an ongoing schedule specified in a Telework Agreement.
- f. Situational Telework. Telework that, as more fully described in Section 5 below, is approved on a case-by-case basis and the hours worked and/or AWS are not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular telework schedule as set forth in a Routine Telework Agreement.
- g. Telework Agreement. The attached Departmental Form AD-3018 and addendum (and addenda or successors thereto) as completed by the employee and agreed to by the employee's supervisor.
- h. Telework Program Coordinator (TPC). The Agency official responsible for promoting the use of telework for and by OGC employees and for administering OGC's telework program pursuant to this Agreement.
- i. Telework-Ready Employee. Any employee who has a Telework Agreement authorizing telework.

Section 3. Employees Ineligible for Telework.

- a. General. The Parties agree that an employee may be deemed ineligible for telework based on one or more of the following criteria, and as specified in this Section.
- b. Position. Ineligibility based on the employee's position.
 - i. An employee may be deemed ineligible if the employee's position has been identified, pursuant to this Section, as ineligible for telework and the employee's daily official duties, responsibilities, or actions are consistent with the employee's designated position. The Agency may identify a position as ineligible for telework based only on the following criteria:

- A. Position duties require daily physical presence at the official worksite and do not include Portable Work that can be accomplished from an AWS.
 - B. Position responsibilities require daily access to specialized equipment located at the official worksite and do not include Portable Work that can be accomplished from an AWS.
 - C. Position activities require daily access to classified materials and do not include Portable Work that can be accomplished from an AWS.
- ii. Determination of telework eligibility based on an employee's position should be based on job functions, and not managerial preference. Telework eligibility should be based on equitable, function-based criteria.
 - iii. As of the Effective Date of this Agreement, the Parties agree that there are no positions within OGC that have been identified as ineligible for telework. The eligibility of a position for telework does not preclude the Agency from requiring that work that is not Portable Work be performed at the Official Worksite.
 - iv. In the event the Agency determines that an existing position, or a newly created position, should be categorized as telework ineligible based on the criteria set forth above in this section, the Agency shall notify the Union President. In such instances, the position categorization is grievable by the Union President and/or employee, if applicable, pursuant to Article 14—Grievances and Arbitration.
- c. Ineligibility Based on the Employee's Performance.
 - i. An employee may be found temporarily ineligible for telework if their performance falls below fully successful.
 - ii. In such circumstances, supervisors are required to initiate corrective action in accordance with Article 40—Evaluation of Employee Performance.
 - iii. The employee's eligibility for telework must be reassessed every 12 months from the date the supervisor documented less than fully successful performance to the employee.
- d. Ineligibility Based on the Employee's Conduct.
 - i. An employee may be found temporarily ineligible for telework if the employee was subject to formal disciplinary action, adverse action, or was placed on a leave restriction within the previous 12 months in accordance with Article 42—Disciplinary and Adverse Actions.
 - ii. The employee's eligibility for telework must be reassessed every 12 months from the date the supervisor documented the employee's conduct leading to ineligibility.

e. Temporary Ineligibility.

- i. An employee may temporarily be ineligible for telework if the employee's duties, responsibilities, or activities change and, for a discrete period of time, the employee is performing work that is telework ineligible based on the criteria set forth above in this section.
- ii. Examples of temporary ineligibility include an employee on a detail or temporary assignment or assigned to assist with a special project.
- iii. The parties agree that any such temporary changes shall be for employee development or for achieving Agency operational or business needs that cannot be performed away from the Official Worksite and not as a form of discipline, punishment, or retaliation against the employee. The parties further agree that this temporary ineligibility provision is without prejudice to Agency rights specified in Section 7.d., below.
- iv. Any employee who is determined to be temporarily ineligible for telework pursuant to this Article will automatically return to being telework eligible without further action by that employee once the employee's duties, responsibilities, or activities return to normal.

f. Permanent Ineligibility. As specified in the Telework Enhancement Act, an employee is permanently ineligible for telework if they have been formally disciplined for the following:

- i. Violation of 5 CFR Part 2635, Subpart G, Misuse of Position, of the Standards for Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing their official duties; or
- ii. Absence Without Leave (AWOL). AWOL is a non-pay status that covers an absence from duty that is not approved. Any USDA employee AWOL for five or more days in any calendar year is permanently ineligible.

Section 4. Routine Telework.

- a. Eligibility. Except with respect to any employees that are ineligible as of the effective date of this Agreement, all employees, regardless of tenure, grade, job series, or title, are eligible for Routine Telework.
- b. Routine Telework. Employees, other than those holding positions ineligible for telework as specified in section 3 above, may request Routine Telework for up to eight days in a pay period, but regardless of schedule, must report to the Official Worksite at least two full workdays a pay period unless their scheduled office day is excused because it falls on a Federal holiday or the employee uses approved leave. Employees must document their telework arrangements on a Telework Agreement.

- c. Schedule. Every Telework Agreement for Routine Telework must have the Regular/Recurring Telework box checked and must identify the regularly scheduled day or days when the employee intends to telework from an AWS, their schedule for each day, and their AWS for each day. Employees with Routine Telework Agreements are automatically subject to Unscheduled Telework orders.
 - i. Telework may be authorized for an entire day or a portion of a day provided that time spent commuting to or from the Agency's office during a partial telework day shall not count as duty time worked that day.
 - ii. Supervisors may approve telework from more than one AWS so long as each AWS meets the requirements of the Telework Agreement and this Agreement, and the employee provides prior notice to their supervisor of any changes to the AWS where they plan to work.
- d. Approval. Within 10 business days of receipt of a telework request, as documented on a completed and signed Telework Agreement:
 - i. The employee's supervisor must meet with the employee to approve, modify, or deny the request.
 - ii. If a request is approved, the supervisor who approved the request must, within the same 10-day period, provide copies of the approved/signed Telework Agreement to the employee, the Agency's TPC, and the Union President.
 - iii. If a request is denied, the supervisor who denied the request must, within the same 10-day period, provide a written justification to the employee, with copies to the Agency's TPC and the Union President.
 - iv. If a request is modified and the employee does not agree to the modification, then the supervisor who proposed the modification must, within the same 10-day period, provide a written justification to the employee, with copies to the Agency's TPC and the Union President. The employee shall then have 10 days after receipt of the written justification to provide a written response to employee's supervisor, with copies to the Union President and the Agency's TPC, outlining the employee's disagreement with the modification.
 - v. To the greatest extent practicable, a telework request, as documented by the employee on a completed and signed Telework Agreement, shall be approved as submitted unless:
 - A. the request is for Routine Telework and does not provide for two full work days at the Official Worksite per pay period;

- B. the Agency has identified in writing work that can only be performed by the requesting employee at the Official Worksite on the day or days that the employee has requested telework;
 - C. the Agency determines that productivity or level of services furnished to the public, costs of Agency operations, or Agency operational needs require a different Telework Agreement and the Agency provides in writing an explanation of the specific loss of productivity or level of services, or increased costs, or detriment to Agency operational needs presented by the employee's proposed Telework Agreement and how those concerns are addressed by the Agency's proposed Telework Agreement;
 - D. the employee is ineligible for telework based on one of the criteria set forth in Section 3 above; or
 - E. the Agency determines that the Official Worksite cannot accommodate the employee's presence in the office on their requested days to report, except that the Agency must still provide workspace at an Official Worksite for Opt-Outs.
- vi. A telework request shall not be denied or modified on the grounds of ensuring that a minimum number of employees are physically present at the Official Worksite on one or more days unless Agency operational needs that cannot be performed away from the Official Worksite require a minimum number of employees to be physically present, or "in office" days have been scheduled in accordance with subsection 4(d)(vii) below.
- vii. "In Office" Days. OGC offices, Divisions, or working groups may desire to establish regular or recurring days when all employees are physically present at the Official Worksite. Supervisors may modify Routine Telework requests or existing schedules in a Telework Agreement to accommodate a designated "in office" day that generally will occur no more frequently than once every 30 days and require employees to be at the Official Worksite on those days. Supervisors shall make every effort to designate "in office" days on a predictable schedule and will provide employees with as much notice as is practicable for any "in office" day that is called outside the employee's schedule. If an "in office" day called outside the schedule conflicts with an employee's regularly scheduled telework day, the employee shall be permitted to telework on another day in the same pay period in lieu of their regularly scheduled day subject to supervisory approval.
- viii. If a request is denied or modified and the employee does not agree to the denial or modification, then within 10 business days of the denial or modification, the employee and the supervisor shall meet to discuss the differences and attempt to resolve them informally. The employee has the right to have a Union representative present when meeting with the supervisor. This 10-day period may be extended when agreed to in writing by the employee and the supervisor. At the conclusion of this 10-day period, or extension, if any, if an agreement is not reached, the employee may pursue the remedy process outlined in Article 14—Grievances and Arbitration.

e. Scheduled Telework and Scheduled Office Days.

- i. Although a teleworking employee is expected to report to the Official Worksite at least two full workdays as defined in Article 44—Hours of Work in a biweekly pay period, if a Federal holiday falls on an employee’s scheduled office day, the employee is not required to report to the Official Worksite on a scheduled telework day in order to make up for the office day that fell on a holiday.
- ii. If an employee takes approved leave to be absent for all or part of a scheduled office day, the employee is not required to report to the Official Worksite on a scheduled telework day in order to make up for the office day where the employee was absent for all or part of the day.
- iii. If an employee with a Telework Agreement desires to switch scheduled telework days and scheduled office days in a pay period, the employee should request the switch as far in advance as practicable. The employee’s supervisor should allow the switch unless the Official Worksite cannot accommodate the employee’s presence in the office on the proposed switch day or Agency business or operational needs that cannot be performed away from the Official Worksite require the employee to be in the office on their regularly scheduled office day.

Section 5. Situational Telework

- a. Situational Telework. Situational Telework is telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis where the hours worked and/or the AWS are not part of a previously approved Telework Agreement for Routine Telework. The subsets of Situational Telework are: Ad Hoc Telework, Temporary Telework, and Unscheduled Telework. An employee may be approved for Routine Telework, Situational Telework or both. Telework Agreements for Situational Telework are subject to all the requirements and procedures for eligibility, approval, denial, modification, etc. as are set forth elsewhere in this Article including Sections 3 and 4 above.
- b. Situational Telework Agreements. Every Telework Agreement for Situational Telework must have the Situational Telework box checked and must identify the anticipated AWS. Employees with Ad Hoc or Temporary Telework Agreements are automatically subject to Unscheduled Telework orders.
 - i. Ad Hoc Telework: Employees may desire, for specific periods of time in response to specific events, to have the flexibility to telework from approved Alternative Worksites without committing to a regular and recurring schedule of Routine Telework, or the flexibility to supplement their Telework Agreement for Routine Telework of less than 8 days a pay period with additional days of telework up to a maximum of 8 days a pay period. An employee approved for both Routine and Ad Hoc Telework may not telework more than eight days a pay period.

- A. Process: Employees should submit a Telework Agreement, check the box for Situational Telework, and identify the Alternative Worksites that are expected to be utilized. Employees should request permission in writing as far in advance as practicable from their supervisor for each instance of Ad Hoc Telework and identify their work schedule and Alternative Worksite.
- B. Examples: Ad Hoc Telework may accommodate a variety of employee and Agency priorities including but not limited to:
 - 1) Work/life balance needs (e.g., medical appointments, parent/teacher conferences, etc.) when commuting to the Official Worksite before or after such events is impractical or inefficient.
 - 2) An employee on annual leave who wishes to perform Agency work while on leave (for example an employee who needs to respond to litigation or client deadlines while on leave) in accordance with Article 49—Leave.
 - 3) An employee who has a mild illness that would not interfere with work performance or productivity (e.g., common cold).
 - 4) An employee who has a dependent at home due to a mild illness or school closure and whose caregiving responsibilities do not interfere with the employee’s work performance or productivity while working at the AWS.
 - 5) An employee needs to spend focused time on a specific task and the AWS provides a less distracting setting than the Official Worksite.
 - 6) An employee desires to telework as an exception to their regular routine.
- ii. Temporary Telework. In certain circumstances, an employee may request a Temporary Telework arrangement. Under this arrangement, the employee’s Official Worksite designation remains unchanged and there is a temporary exception to the requirement that teleworkers report to the Official Worksite at least two full workdays a pay period. The employee must be expected to return to the Official Worksite at some point in the near future on a regular and recurring basis. After the initial approval period, any subsequent request(s) and approval(s) for an extension of the arrangement must be made as soon as possible before the end of the initial approval period to ensure the temporary exception continues to apply. It is the responsibility of the employee’s supervisor to decide when it no longer is proper to apply the temporary exception. It is the employee’s responsibility to comply with any tax or pay consequences that could result from a Temporary Telework arrangement.

A. Examples. Temporary Telework may be approved for a variety of circumstances not limited to:

- 1) Recovery from an injury or medical condition or attending to the recovery of a family member;
- 2) Conditions that prevent commuting to the worksite, such as ongoing severe weather, a public health crisis, or planned or unplanned disruptions in public transportation;
- 3) Extended approved absences from work due to use of leave;
- 4) The employee is on a detail or extended work travel away from the Official Worksite; or
- 5) Family or personal reasons that allow for accomplishing Portable Work but prevent regular reporting to the Official Worksite for reasons beyond the employee's control.

B. In addition to the examples above, an employee may request a temporary exception to waive the requirement to report to the Official Worksite for up to any five scheduled office days in a leave year but no more than three scheduled office days may be waived in a row.

iii. Unscheduled Telework.

A. OPM or USDA authorized officials may announce operating status guidance allowing for unscheduled telework.

B. Employees with a Telework Agreement (for Routine or Situational Telework) are expected to telework or take other authorized leave (paid or unpaid), or a combination of both, as approved by the supervisor for weather or other events under subsection 5(b)(iii)(A) above. Telework performed outside the schedule of the Telework Agreement for weather or other events is regarded as Unscheduled Telework.

C. Teleworkers generally are ineligible for Weather and Safety Leave when a closure is announced, except in rare and infrequent circumstances:

- 1) Weather and Safety Leave may be granted to a Telework-Ready Employee who, in the supervisor's judgment, could not have reasonably anticipated the severe weather or other condition so did not take needed equipment or work with them. Supervisors may direct employees to prepare for such events by taking any necessary equipment and work home with them.

- 2) Weather and Safety Leave may be granted to a Telework-Ready Employee who is prevented from safely working at the AWS because of severe weather or other event (e.g., electrical power or broadband outage, fire, flooding, or heating and cooling failures). Employees must communicate with their supervisors as soon as possible when such work disruptions occur and may be required to return to the Official Worksite or another agreed-upon location.
- 3) Teleworkers who are working in an Agency office or other Official Worksite when an early departure is announced for inclement weather or other event generally may receive Weather and Safety Leave for time required to commute home (excluding the period for an unpaid lunch break). This means that telework participants must complete the remaining hours of their workday (if any) either by teleworking or taking leave (paid or unpaid) once they arrive home.

iv. Ongoing Emergency Telework

- A. OPM or USDA authorized officials may announce emergency operating status in response to a pandemic, public health crisis, or other ongoing emergency situation under 5 C.F.R. § 550.409 and order employees to evacuate from their worksite and perform work from their home or an alternative location without regard to whether the employee has a Telework Agreement in place at the time the order to evacuate is issued.
- B. In instances in which the Secretary or General Counsel activates the COOP for the Department or Agency, or in which there is activation of a COOP for the Federal workforce by the White House or OPM, the COOP supersedes this Article. See Article 32—Agency Emergency Actions.

Section 6. Provisions Applicable to All Telework

- a. Flexible Work Arrangements/Credit Hours. Teleworkers may participate in all flexible and compressed work schedules or other flexible work arrangements available to Agency employees under Article 44—Hours of Work so long as the schedules and work arrangements comply with the requirements of Section 4 above. For example, an employee working a schedule of 4/10 hour days each week may telework up to 6 days a pay period with 2 scheduled office days and 2 days off. Teleworkers may earn and use Credit Hours in accordance with Articles 44—Hours of Work and 49—Leave.
- b. Changes/Termination of Existing Approved Telework Agreements. Approved Telework Agreements remain in effect until a change is initiated by the employee, the supervisor, or unless the employee becomes temporarily or permanently ineligible for telework as specified in Section 3 above. An employee who wishes to change or terminate their approved Telework Agreement should submit a new Telework Agreement to their supervisor at least 14 days before the requested effective date of the new telework arrangement. The time periods identified in Section 4(d) above (Approval) shall apply to any request to change or terminate an existing approved Telework Agreement.

- c. Call-Back to Office. The Agency reserves the right to call employees back to the Official Worksite, even on scheduled telework days, in accordance with the following procedures:
 - i. Supervisors should minimize instances of disruption to approved telework schedules unless necessary to accomplish business or operational needs where alternative virtual communication means (e.g., teleconference, virtual meetings) are not suitable or available. In those circumstances, teleworking employees working at an AWS may be recalled to the Official Worksite on a scheduled telework day.
 - ii. An employee may not be recalled to the Official Worksite as a form of discipline, punishment, or retaliation against the employee.
 - iii. The supervisor should notify affected employee(s) as soon as possible if they are subject to a recall to the Official Worksite, generally at least 24 hours in advance.
 - iv. Employees shall leave the AWS and return to the Official Worksite if requested under this section. If return to the Official Worksite is not possible, the employee may continue to work from the AWS only with agreement of the supervisor, otherwise the employee must request leave. Employees returning to the Official Worksite if requested under this section generally should be permitted to take a replacement telework day that pay period or the following pay period.
- d. Equitable Treatment. Supervisors shall evaluate all teleworkers and Opt-Outs under the same performance management system and afford them the same professional opportunities, assignments, and treatment with regard to work projects assigned, performance appraisals, awards, recognition, training and developmental opportunities, promotions, and retention incentives.

Section 7. Employee's Telework Responsibilities

- a. General. Telework is official work time and a tool for accomplishing work. While teleworking, all workplace policies remain in place, including work start/end times, rules regarding time and attendance, and employee expectations concerning performance and conduct. Teleworking employees shall provide the same level of support, availability, and accessibility to clients, coworkers, and their supervisor(s) as if working at the Official Worksite, including organizational and individual work requirements (e.g., client service, timeframe for returning phone calls, voicemail messages, and email communication), staff meeting attendance, duty hours, and accurately coding time and attendance; and complete all applicable mandatory training courses. Teleworking employees will follow USDA safety requirements and ensure proper security of USDA equipment, information, and materials at the AWS.

- b. Outages and Disruptions. Employees are responsible for communicating to their supervisor in a timely fashion any power, heating, air conditioning, internet, or telephone outages, or other similar disruptions to the AWS, other than de minimis outages or disruptions. In the event of outages or disruptions to the AWS, the employee shall continue performing Agency work that may be carried out during the outage. When an outage or disruption exceeds 30 minutes and the employee is unable to continue performing Agency work during the outage, employees shall discuss with their supervisor the need to charge leave or take administrative leave, based on whether the outage or disruption was localized or widespread through the region. In such situations, the employee may, in lieu of charging leave, utilize schedule flexibilities and resume teleworking later on the day in question (within the hours of work), provided the outage or disruption ends later in the day and provided the employee has the approval of their supervisor. The employee may also commute to the Official Worksite, provided the employee has the approval of their supervisor and discussed the need to charge leave and/or utilize schedule flexibilities for the time required to commute to the Official Worksite.
- c. Government Furnished Equipment. The employee shall take reasonable safeguards to protect government furnished equipment from theft and damage while commuting between the AWS and Official Worksite and follow the requirements of Article 21—Workplace Technology and Equipment while teleworking.
- d. Telework Training/Self-Certification. Employees shall complete required USDA employee telework training and submit the Telework Agreement to their Supervisor.
- e. Dependent Care. Employees shall ensure all necessary dependent/elder care arrangements are maintained and do not interfere with the employee’s work while working at the AWS. If caregiving responsibilities would interfere with an employee’s work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWS, the employee must arrange for other care or request leave or work schedule adjustments for those periods when the employee is not able to work due to caregiving responsibilities.
- f. Compliance with Other Requirements. Employees shall ensure compliance with the USDA’s and the Agency’s information technology policies and procedures; comply with Agency policies and the provisions of this Agreement regarding pay, work schedules, time reporting code requirements, leave requests, and other administrative requirements in the same manner as employees working at their Official Worksite; and maintain information and document security and confidentiality in accordance with Agency, Departmental, and Federal Government-wide requirements.
- g. Safe Workplace/Injury. Employees shall ensure that the AWS is safe and allows for safe work habits. If an injury occurs to the employee at the AWS while performing official duties, the employee shall immediately notify their supervisor, providing details of the incident or injury in accordance with Article 34—Federal Employees’ Compensation Act. The employee shall also complete any necessary Department of Labor, Occupational Safety and Health Administration forms as provided by the Agency in accordance with Article 34.

Section 8. Agency's Telework Responsibilities

- a. Data. Upon request, the Agency shall provide telework participation data to the Union President, including documented approvals and disapprovals as provided in this Article, whenever such data is compiled.
- b. Injuries. The Agency shall assist the employee in determining whether the employee is covered by the Federal Tort Claims Act (FTCA), Federal Employees' Compensation Act, and/or any other relevant law or regulation in accordance with Article 34—Federal Employees' Compensation Act. The Agency shall also provide the employee with any necessary forms to document the injury or incident and assist the employee in completing these forms, such as those specified by the Department of Labor, Occupational Safety and Health Administration accordance with Article 34. However, neither the Agency, Department, nor United States is liable for damages to the employee's personal or real property while the employee is teleworking, except to the extent the Government is held liable by the FTCA or any other applicable law or regulation.
- c. Telework Program Coordinator. Within 30 days of the effective date of this Agreement, the Agency shall make an announcement to all employees identifying the Agency's TPC. This information shall also be posted on the Employee Information Page as provided in Article 17—Provision of Information and Employee Information Page. The Agency shall update this announcement whenever the Agency's TPC is replaced. The Agency's TPC will administer the telework program and promote its use as follows:
 - i. Ensure all employees are notified of their eligibility to telework and encourage them to annually review or update their Telework Agreements or Opt-Out by selecting the appropriate box on their Telework Agreement;
 - ii. Notify and provide new employees with a link to or copy of this Article and include training on telework in the Agency onboarding process covered in Article 50—Onboarding;
 - iii. Ensure supervisors are aware of their responsibilities set forth in subsection 8(d) below;
 - iv. Ensure managers are aware of the requirement for teleworkers and supervisors to complete required training prior to implementing a telework arrangement;
 - v. Coordinate with relevant parties on inventories of available computers, laptops, mobile phones, printers, and other office equipment for use in the telework program prior to reporting the property as excess;

- vi. Ensure employees and supervisors accurately record duty time spent in telework status in the time and attendance system;
 - vii. Encourage supervisors to review Telework Agreements with their employees annually; and
 - viii. Upon request, the Agency will meet with the Union to discuss its reports to OHRM on OGC's telework program.
- d. Supervisors. OGC supervisors shall:
- i. Notify all assigned employees of their eligibility to telework, or opt out;
 - ii. Follow procedures and timeframes set forth in this Article for responding to and otherwise processing any telework work request, including making a good faith effort to resolve any telework work request denials or proposed modifications in a timely manner;
 - iii. Provide written notification and explanation to any employee who is not eligible to participate in telework under this Article;
 - iv. Ensure consistent and fair administration of this Article in their areas of responsibility; and
 - v. Upon approval of a Telework Agreement, establish and communicate clear expectations with employees regarding methods of communication (i.e., client service, timeframes for returning phone calls, voice mail messages, and email communications), staff meeting attendance, duty hours, and the accurate coding of telework for time and attendance purposes.

Office of Hearings and Appeals

NEGOTIATED AGREEMENT ON TELEWORK

Article 23 – “Telework” (Amended 5/25/2022)

OHA AND AFSCME COUNCIL 20, LOCAL 3020

July 24, 2019

ARTICLE 23 - TELEWORK PROGRAM

23.1 GENERAL

- A. The CBA applies to bargaining-unit employees (“Employees”) of the Office of Hearings and Appeals (“OHA” or “Agency”), which includes the National Appeals Division (“NAD”), the Office of Administrative Law Judges (“OALJ”), and the Office of the Judicial Officer (“OJO”).
- B. The Agency fully supports and promotes the use of telework by Employees as appropriate based on the duties of an Employee’s position and the efficiency and efficacy of accomplishing the mission. Telework may produce tangible savings and other benefits to the Employees and the Agency, but an Employee’s use of telework must be balanced to ensure it does not impede the Agency’s mission or its duty to provide quality customer service. The Agency’s policy is to provide Management with the option to allow Employees in eligible positions to work at alternate worksites, as described in this Article.
- C. For the purposes of this Article, the term “telework” refers to the performance of the duties of a position at an approved, alternate worksite. Telework does not include work performed while on official travel status, performed while commuting, or remote work. The term “remote work” refers to an arrangement where an Employee is scheduled to perform work at an approved alternate worksite, typically the Employee’s residence, on a regular and recurring basis.
- D. This Article does not apply to NAD Administrative Judges who establish residence-based offices per CBA Article 26.

23.2 ELIGIBILITY FOR TELEWORK

- A. All Employees, regardless of tenure, grade, job series, or job title are presumed eligible for telework unless prohibited by the provisions of this CBA. Management will notify all bargaining unit Employees of their eligibility to telework or opt out of telework.
- B. Newly hired Employees are eligible for telework after ninety (90) days of fully successful performance, subject to the eligibility criteria discussed herein.
- C. Telework is voluntary. Each Employee must either opt to telework or affirmatively opt out of telework by completing a Telework Agreement (form AD-3018 (Nov. 2021) (new Appendix F)) and submitting it to their immediate supervisor(s). Employees who participate in telework must complete all required telework training and evaluations.
- D. Management will consider providing telework as a reasonable accommodation for disabilities, medical conditions, religious beliefs, and other circumstances as appropriate. An Employee who seeks telework as a reasonable accommodation will follow the policies and procedures outlined in DR 4300-008 (entitled Reasonable Accommodations and Personal Assistance Services for Employees and Applicants with Disabilities), as amended or replaced.

- E. To remain eligible for telework, Employees must perform the duties of their position, as specified by their annual performance plans, at a fully successful level. While teleworking, Employees will (1) provide the same level of support, availability, and accessibility to customers, coworkers, and their supervisors as at the official worksite and (2) meet established organizational and individual work requirements, including deadlines for submitting work product; timeframes for returning phone calls, voicemail messages, and emails; attendance at staff meetings; and adherence to approved work schedules.
- F. Employees who telework must not adversely affect the performance or add to the workload of other Employees. While teleworking, Employees must adhere to the most recent Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch.
- G. Management will ensure an equitable distribution of the workload between Employees who telework and Employees who work at the official worksite.
- H. Employees who participate in telework should ensure their alternate worksites protect the confidentiality of data and the safety and security of Government equipment. Each Employee should ensure the alternate worksite has adequate internet access.
- I. Budget permitting, Management will provide the necessary computer equipment and supplies to enable Employees who participate in telework to accomplish the requirements of their performance plans.
- J. Management will ensure consistent and fair administration of telework policies and procedures. Upon approval of a Telework Agreement, direct supervisors will establish and communicate clear expectations regarding Employee responsibilities while teleworking, including guidelines for submitting work assignments; responding to phone calls, voicemail messages, and emails; attending staff meetings; complying with approved work schedules; and recording time and attendance.

23.3 INELIGIBILITY FOR TELEWORK

- A. Positions may be identified as ineligible for telework based only on the following criteria:
 - (1) Position duties require daily physical presence at the official worksite and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an approved, alternate worksite; or

- (2) Position duties require daily access to specialized equipment located at the official worksite and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an approved, alternate worksite; or
- (3) Position duties require daily access to classified materials and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an approved, alternate worksite.

B. Employees may be identified as ineligible for telework based only on the following criteria:

- (1) Performance. An Employee may be found ineligible for telework if the Employee is placed on a Demonstration Opportunity in accordance with DR 4040-430 (entitled Employee Performance and Awards) or receives a less than fully successful performance rating. The Employee's eligibility for telework must be reassessed at least every twelve (12) months from the date of the documented performance rating or start of the Demonstration Opportunity, as elected by the Employee's supervisor.

Except in rare circumstances, an Employee will not be removed from telework for a single infraction of the Telework Agreement, and supervisors and Employees will make a bona-fide effort to work out specific problems before any decision is made to remove the Employee from telework. Decisions to remove the Employee from the telework program shall be memorialized in writing and shall contain the reasons for such action. Employees shall be provided the notice at least forty-five (45) days before such action is taken.

- (2) Conduct. An Employee may be found ineligible for telework if the Employee was subject to formal disciplinary action, adverse action, or was placed on a leave restriction within the previous twelve (12) months.

C. An Employee is permanently ineligible for telework if they have been formally disciplined for the following:

- (1) Violation of 5 CFR § 2635, Subpart G, for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing their official duties; or
- (2) Being absent without leave for more than five (5) days in any calendar year. Absent without leave is a non-pay status that covers an absence from duty that is not approved.

23.4 TELEWORK AGREEMENTS

A. Telework Agreements remain in effect until a change is initiated although supervisors should annually review telework agreements with Employees.

(1) As an alternative to initiating corrective action under DR 4040-430 (Employee Performance and Awards), a supervisor may, once during a twelve (12)-month period, temporarily modify an Employee's Telework Agreement for up to sixty (60) days in an effort to address performance or conduct problems. The Employee's supervisor shall provide the Employee written notice at least seven (7) calendar days prior to the modification.

(2) To initiate a more permanent change to a Telework Agreement, Management or an Employee must provide written notice at least forty-five (45) days before the change, except in certain situations as discussed in subsection 23.5(D) of this Article. Before Management modifies, suspends, or terminates a Telework Agreement, Management will provide the Employee written notice, usually at least forty-five (45) days in advance. The notice must specify the reason and effective date of the change, any appeals or grievance procedures available to the Employee, and the corrective action(s) the Employee must take to regain eligibility for telework. The modification, suspension, or termination will take effect even if an Employee does not consent to or acknowledge the change via signature. A permanent change in an Employee's position or a modification requested by Management or an Employee will require the Employee to complete a new Telework Agreement.

B. Management may require Employees to report to the official worksite on scheduled telework days, and absent exigent circumstances, Management will provide written notice at least one workday prior to the time the Employee is required to report.

23.5 TELEWORK SCHEDULES

A. An Employee who teleworks may participate in flexible and compressed work schedules or other flexible work arrangements.

B. An Employee occupying a telework-eligible position may telework up to eight (8) days per pay period based on the duties of the position and the amount of on-site activities that must be performed.

C. If the day an Employee is scheduled to report to the official worksite is a holiday or other non-workday, or if the Employee is on leave, the Employee is not required to report to the official worksite on an alternate day or otherwise make up for the day the Employee did not report to the official worksite.

- D. In certain circumstances, the Agency may temporarily excuse an Employee from reporting to the official worksite and allow the Employee to telework full time. The Employee must be expected to return to the official worksite at some point in the future on a regular and recurring basis. It is the responsibility of the Employee's immediate supervisor to decide when the temporary exception should no longer apply. Supervisors must regularly review an Employee's temporary, full-time telework agreement to ensure any approved temporary exception continues to apply. A supervisor may grant a temporary exception to allow an Employee to telework full-time in situations that prevent the Employee from commuting to the official worksite, including but not limited to severe weather or a public-health crisis, or where the Employee is recovering from an injury or medical condition; on an extended period of approved absence from work; on temporary duty travel status; or temporarily detailed to work at a location other than a location covered by a Telework Agreement. During the time an Employee is on temporary, full-time telework, the Employee's duty station will remain the official worksite.

23.6 ADMINISTRATIVE POLICIES

- A. Dependent Care. Telework is not a substitute for day care. Employees who telework will make appropriate arrangement(s) for the care of any dependent(s) during the time the Employee is scheduled to telework. The Employee may allow a caregiver in the home to care for the dependent(s) during the time the Employee is scheduled to telework, provided that this arrangement does not prevent an employee from performing the duties of the Employee's position. Dependent(s) who do not require intensive supervision may be unsupervised while the Employee is teleworking, provided that the presence of the dependent(s) does not disrupt the Employee's ability to effectively perform the duties of the Employee's position.
- B. Unscheduled & Emergency Telework. Telework is incorporated into the Agency's continuity of operations plan ("COOP") to ensure mission essential functions continue to be performed during a wide range of emergencies, including localized acts of nature, accidents, and technological or attack-related emergencies. OPM, USDA, or Agency officials may announce an emergency operating status that allows for unscheduled or required telework beyond that outlined in the OPM early dismissal guidance for weather events. When this occurs:
- (1) Management may require Employees to evacuate the official worksite and telework during inclement weather, a public health crisis, or other emergency without regard to whether the Employee has a Telework Agreement in place. Management and Employees must follow departmental, agency, or official worksite COOPs.

- (2) Employees who are approved to telework and have signed a Telework Agreement are expected to telework to perform and maintain Agency functions during emergency situations or take authorized leave (paid or unpaid), paid time off, or a combination of both, as approved by Management.
- (3) Employees who telework generally are ineligible for weather and safety leave except in unusual circumstances. Weather and safety leave may be granted to a telework-ready Employee who did not take home the necessary equipment or work materials because, in Management's judgment, the Employee could not have reasonably anticipated the severe weather or other emergency condition. Weather and safety leave also may be granted to a telework-ready Employee who is prevented from safely working at the alternate site due to a severe weather or other emergency event (e.g., electrical power or broadband outage, fire, flooding, or heating and cooling failures). When any such work disruption occurs, the Employee must communicate with a supervisor as soon as possible. Telework-ready Employees who are working at the official worksite when an early departure is announced generally may receive weather and safety leave for time required to safely commute to their approved, alternate worksite. Once the Employee arrives at the approved, alternate worksite, the Employee must telework the remaining hours remaining of their workday (if any) or take leave (paid or unpaid) or other paid time off.

C. Official Duty Station. The official duty station of an Employee who teleworks will remain unchanged if the Employee reports in person to the official worksite on at least two (2) workdays, or a combination of work hours and paid or unpaid leave, each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis. Entitlement to locality-based comparability payments, special salary rates, travel allowances, and relocation expenses is based on the official duty station.

D. Evaluations, Opportunities, and Awards. Management will ensure supervisors are held accountable for evaluating all teleworking and non-teleworking Employees equitably under the same performance management system and without regard to the number of days an Employee teleworks. Management will provide all Employees the same professional opportunities, developmental opportunities, training, assignments, and treatment about work projects assigned. Management will ensure all Employees receive equitable consideration for performance awards, cash awards, promotions, retention incentives, and other recognition.

E. Time & Attendance. Employees must follow specific Agency procedures for accurately coding the time they perform official duties while teleworking.

F. Safety & Workers' Compensation. The Agency encourages Employees who telework to adopt a proactive approach to ensuring safe alternate worksites and safe work habits. It is the Employee's responsibility to maintain a safe home office or alternate worksite.

While teleworking at an approved, alternate worksite, Employees are covered, as specified, by the Federal Tort Claims Act, 28 U.S.C. § 171, and Federal Employees' Compensation Act, 5 U.S.C. § 81. If an Employee is injured during the performance of official duties, the Employee must notify a supervisor immediately, provide details of the incident or injury, and complete Department of Labor Form CA-1, Federal Notice of Traumatic Injury and Claim for Continuation of Pay/Compensation.

G. Work Schedule, Overtime Pay, Leave, & Other Personnel Issues. Employees who telework are covered by the same rules on pay, work schedules, overtime, leave, core hours, and other personnel issues as all other Employees.

23.7 GRIEVANCES.

Appeals of a denial of an Employee's request for telework are governed by Article 19 (Negotiated Grievance Procedure) or Article 27 (Equal Employment Opportunity) of this Agreement.

ARTICLE 26 –
TELEWORK PROGRAM

26-1 DEFINITIONS.

- a. Alternative Work Site. A work location, other than the official worksite, that satisfies all requisite Federal health and safety laws, rules, and regulations pertaining to the workplace, where an employee performs his/her official duties. Supervisors may authorize telework from several alternate worksites. Temporary authorizations or changes in the location of designated alternative worksites do not require a new AD-3018, USDA Telework Agreement though must be communicated to the supervisor.
- b. Official Duty Station. The official duty station is the management-approved location where employees regularly perform their official duties. If an employee physically reports to the official worksite at least twice in a bi-weekly pay period, that worksite will be designated as the employee's official duty station.
 1. A teleworker's official duty station will remain unchanged as long as he/she reports to the assigned, traditional office at least two (2) days each biweekly pay period.
 2. Approvals for short term, full-time telework arrangements for medical or other personal reasons do not require a change of official duty station. In these situations, the employee must be expected to return to the worksite at some point in the future on a regular and recurring basis. It is the responsibility of the employee's immediate supervisor to decide when it no longer is proper to apply the temporary exception.
- c. Telework. A work arrangement in which an employee performs and completes official duties and responsibilities from an alternative worksite. Telework may be authorized for an entire duty day or a portion of one. Telework does not include the following:
 1. Work performed while on official travel status;
 2. Work performed while commuting to or from work;
 3. Remote work; or
 4. Mobile work.
- d. Telework Agreement (AD-3018). The written agreement that records the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement, as approved by the supervisor.
- e. Unscheduled Telework. Telework that is authorized in response to specific duty status announcements issued by the Office of Personnel Management or other authorized Agency officials for use during periods of inclement weather, a pandemic or public health crisis, or other emergency situations, or with prior supervisory approval, telework used to maintain productivity during short-term disruptions to normal operating procedures. 55

26-2 ELIGIBILITY.

- a. All positions are presumed eligible for telework with the exceptions listed below. b. Positions may be identified as ineligible for telework when position duties require daily physical presence and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an alternative office or location. c. Employees may be identified as ineligible for telework, based on the following criteria: 1. Performance. An employee is ineligible for telework if he/she has received a less than fully successful performance rating within the past twelve (12) months. The employee may remain ineligible for up to twelve (12) months from the date of the documented performance rating or start of the opportunity to demonstrate acceptable performance, at the discretion of the employee's supervisor. 2. Conduct. An employee is ineligible for telework due to conduct issues resulting in official, formal disciplinary action, as filed in the employee's Official Personnel Folder (OPF) as a matter of personnel record and may remain ineligible for up to twelve (12) months from the date that the discipline was effectuated. 3. Permanent Ineligibility. As specified in the Telework Enhancement Act, an employee is permanently ineligible for telework if they have been formally disciplined for the following: i. Absence Without Leave (AWOL) for 5 or more days in any calendar year; or ii. Violation of 5 CFR 2635, Subpart G, Misuse of Position, of the Standards for Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing their official duties. d. Telework may be limited for new employees while being trained.

26-3 PARTICIPATION. Participation in the program requires an approved Telework Agreement. An agreement may be modified, suspended or terminated by the employee or by the supervisor at any time with appropriate notice.

26-4 UNSCHEDULED AND EMERGENCY TELEWORK.

1. OPM or USDA authorized officials may announce emergency operating status guidance allowing for unscheduled or required telework beyond that outlined in the OPM early dismissal guidance for weather events.
2. The Employer may order employees to evacuate from their worksite and perform work from their home, or an alternative location, during inclement weather, public health crisis, or other emergency without regard to whether the employee has a Telework Agreement in place at the time the order to evacuate is issued.
3. Employees with a Telework Agreement are expected to telework or take other authorized leave (paid or unpaid), paid time off or a combination of both, as approved by the Employer.
4. Teleworkers generally are ineligible for weather and safety leave when a closure is announced, except in rare circumstances: i. Weather and safety leave may be granted to a telework-ready employee who, in the Employer's judgment, could not have reasonably anticipated the severe weather or other emergency condition so did not take home needed equipment or work. ii. Weather and safety leave may be granted to a telework-ready employee who is prevented from safely working at the alternate site because of the severe weather or other emergency event (e.g., electrical power or broadband outage, fire, flooding or heating and cooling failures). In this case, the home or other approved telework site is also affected in such a way that work cannot be safely performed. Employees must communicate with their supervisors as soon as possible when such work disruptions occur. iii. Teleworkers who are working in the office when an early departure is announced generally may receive weather and safety leave for time required to commute home, excluding the period for an unpaid lunch break. This means that telework participants must complete the remaining hours of their workday, if any, either by teleworking or taking leave, (paid or unpaid) or other paid time off once they arrive home.

26-5 GRIEVABILITY. The determination of eligibility or the telework application process may be grieved in accordance with Article 8, Grievance Procedure.

26-6 DUTY HOURS FOR TELEWORKING EMPLOYEES. The Employer will give appropriate weight to employee personal hardships related to duty hours and work schedules upon request. Duty hours and work schedules while teleworking will be consistent with RD Instruction 2051-F, Subpart F, Hours of Duty, and Article 19, Workweek/Schedules.

26-7 EQUIPMENT. Government owned computers will be provided to employees participating in the telework program. All computer equipment use must comply with Agency policies and this Agreement. The Employer is responsible for the maintenance, repair and replacement of Government-owned equipment. Teleworking employees will be provided with a work laptop, access to a VPN connection, one headset, and Cisco Jabber or alternative.

26-8 WORKERS COMPENSATION AND OTHER LIABILITIES. Employees are covered by the Federal Employees Compensation Act at the alternative worksite as long as the injury occurred while performing their official duties and in the designated work area identified on the Telework Agreement. If an injury occurs, the employee must notify the supervisor immediately, provide details of the accident or injury, and complete Department of Labor Form CA-1, Federal Employee's Notice of Traumatic Injury and Claim for Continuation of Pay Compensation. The Government is not liable for damages to the employees' personal or real property while the employee is teleworking, except to the extent the government is held liable by the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Military and Civilian Employee's Claims Act.

26-9 DEPENDENT CARE. Telework is not a substitute for dependent care. Dependents may be permitted in the home provided they do not require constant supervision or care (i.e., older children or adolescents) and their presence does not disrupt the ability to telework effectively.

Rural Development
NEGOTIATED AGREEMENT ON TELEWORK
Standalone Agreement

Montana and AFGE Local 1585
12/01/21

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT

The undersigned Parties, AFGE Local 1585 and Montana Rural Development agree that the following represents the full and complete resolution of the “Rural Development Return to Work Re-entry Plan” dated February 17, 2022, and associated telework procedures.

1. Per DR-4080, Telework is defined as follows: Telework. A work arrangement in which an employee performs and completes official duties and responsibilities from an alternate worksite. Telework may be authorized for an entire duty day or a portion of one. Telework does not include the following: a. Work performed while on official travel status; b. Work performed while commuting to or from work; c. Remote work; or d. Mobile work. For purposes of this Agreement, Non-Telework means all work not performed at an alternate worksite, including but not limited to travel, inspections, audits, outreach, leave, office coverage as noted in (2) below, in-person meetings, etc., as defined in Position Descriptions and by Supervisors. As we move past pandemic conditions, staff may choose to telework up to two days per week, with the remaining three days per week being non-telework activities. Staff will make every effort to fulfill the above non-teleworking duties as needed each week. Employees may adapt their telework schedules based upon duties required, with Supervisor approval, and the overall metric compliance will be based on an annual review and averaging of telework vs. non-telework days.

2. Office coverage policies should be implemented with fairness in mind – all employees share responsibility for office coverage. In attempting to balance the need to have RD offices open some or all days of the week with opportunities for telework, the specific parameters will vary by office, as determined through conversations between management, supervisors, and office staff to achieve the following: a. A two-person office must have at least one employee in the office 2 days a week. b. A three-person office must have at least one employee in the office 3 days a week. c. A four-person office must have at least one employee in the office 4 days a week. d. A 5+-person office must have at least one employee in the office 5 days a week. The Union will be invited to these meetings. A spreadsheet will be developed, the Montana RD Office Coverage Tracker, which will be used as a tool to help determine the schedule for each office. Per the CBA, otherwise unresolvable disputes between employees over the schedule will be decided based upon seniority using SCD for leave.

3. Within three days of signing of this MOA, Employees will be sent their Notice to Return to Work by August 1st, and AD-3018 Telework Agreement Form to revise per (1) above. By July 22, 2022, the office coverage discussions noted in (2) must be complete and revised Telework Agreements to implement the plans completed by all employees. Beginning August 1, 2022, employees will implement the office coverage plans and revised telework agreements will go into effect. 4. DR-4080 and Telework Agreements between staff and Management specify telework eligibility criteria, including remaining fully successful in terms of performance.

Telework

This article supplements USDA Departmental Regulation 4080-811-002, “Telework Program” (dated January 30, 2014) (hereinafter “USDA DR”), and is not intended to alter its substance or application but to clarify and educate. Employees who telework or are interested in teleworking should study both the USDA DR and this article.

Section 1 - Purpose

Teleworking permits employees to work voluntarily at approved Alternative Worksite (AWkSs) as defined in the USDA DR other than their Official Duty Station/Worksites (ODS) when the duties of the employees’ positions are such that they can be performed from AWkSs. This Article applies to Core (Regular/Recurring) and Situational/ad hoc/Unscheduled Telework Agreements. (see USDA DR @ § 5-a, b, c, g, j, and 1; and § 7-c-(1))

Section 2 - References

Conditions of employment related to telework for bargaining unit employees shall be governed solely by the provisions of law, Government-wide regulations, the USDA DR, and this Agreement. Any issue not addressed directly by this Article shall be governed by USDA DR. (see USDA DR @ § 2)

Section 3 - Special Instructions [reserved]

Section 4 - Policy

- A. The Agency shall apply Telework policies fairly and equitably. (see USDA DR @ § 6)
- B. This Agreement and all governing directives shall apply to employees in telework status just as they apply to on-site (i.e., on-ODS) employees. The Agency may not impose any additional requirements on telework employees that the Agency does not impose on its on-site employees. (see USDA DR @ § 4-g and q)
- C. All telework eligible employees may participate in flexible or compressed work schedules, or other flexible work arrangements (including Maxiflex) in combination with Core (Regular/Recurring) and Situational/ad hoc/Unscheduled telework, consistent with terms of their Telework Agreements. (see USDA DR @ § 7-a-(4))
- D. The Agency shall treat telework days as regular workdays. During their scheduled daily tours of duty, teleworking employees shall be as available to the Agency's supervisors, 2017-2020 Collective Bargaining Agreement 061

between AFGE Local 622 and USDA Rural Development - Indiana

their coworkers, and Agency customers as are those employees who are on-site. (see USDA DR @ § 4-q; and § 6-i-(3))

E. The Agency shall presume that all positions are eligible for participation in the Telework Program unless it determines the position is unsuitable for teleworking and provides the Union with a written explanation. (see USDA DR @ § 4-b)

F. Any employee has the right to discontinue his/her involvement in the Telework Program at any time. (see USDA DR @ § 4-f)

G. When an employee no longer meets the eligibility criteria or performance obligations for teleworking, the Agency may amend, alter, adjust, cancel, reschedule, suspend, or terminate that employee's participation in the Telework Program at any time with a reasonable notice. (see 22-7-T-2 below and also USDA DR @ § 7-a-(1)-(a))

H. A Telework Agreement does not alter the terms and conditions of the appointment including, e.g., an employee's salary, benefits, individual rights, or obligations. The Agency shall base all pay, leave, and travel entitlements on the employee's ODS. The Telework Agreement may not affect other conditions of employment. (see USDA DR @
§ 5-g and k)

I. All deviations from the normal telework arrangements must be requested and approved by supervisors/designees in advance. (see USDA DR @ § 5-1-(2))

J. A mutually agreed-to short-term change of less than thirty (30) calendar days to a telework arrangement does not require a new Telework Agreement, but must be recorded by a written exchange between the employee and his/her supervisor. (see USDA DR @
§ 5-b)

K. Employees who are teleworking should ensure the existence of appropriate arrangements for the care of others (e.g., children and/or seniors) and/or pets present at the AWkS while the employee teleworks. Others who are capable of caring for themselves may be present at the AWkS provided their presence does not disrupt the employee's effective teleworking. If the Agency finds that a teleworking employee (i) has present at the AWkS others and/or pets needing constant supervision or care but (ii) has not made appropriate arrangements for their care, the Agency may remove that employee from the telework program until he/she is compliant. If at any time an employee is tending for another and/or a pet and is therefore not performing official duties, the employee must charge leave or make up the time as appropriate. (see USDA DR @ § 6-i-(7))

Section 5 - Definitions [reserved]

between AFGE Local 622 and USDA Rural Development - Indiana

Section 6 - Responsibilities

A. The Agency shall give each employee a list in writing of: (i) all organizational and individual work requirements for his/her respective workplace and/or position; and (ii) all identified connectivity requirements and technologies approved for telework under this telework program. (see USDA DR @ § 6-i-(4)&(8); see also 22-7-H-1 below)

B. Employees must properly record all telework hours on the Agency's approved Time and Attendance recording system. (see USDA DR @ § 6-i-(6); and § 7-c)

Section 7 - Procedures

- A. Employees may request to Telework on a Core (Regular/Recurring) or Situational/ad hoc/Unscheduled basis. (see USDA DR @ § 5-a and c)
- B. Employees may submit to their respective supervisors their original applications to telework along with any supporting documentation at any time. (see USDA DR @ § 7-a)
- C. Before the Agency may approve an employee's telework request, the employee must meet all eligibility requirements, and properly complete and submit all required forms and documentation. (see USDA DR @ § 4-f)
- D. Before a supervisor approves/disapproves an employee's Telework request, he/she shall meet with the employee to discuss the relevant considerations (i.e., changing circumstances, resources, operational needs/capabilities/commitments, and reasonably expected employee performance) in order to assist the supervisor in determining the number of days per week he/she will authorize. (see USDA DR @ § 4-g)
- E. In the event of multiple employee requests for telework schedules which conflict so that one or more requests must be disapproved, the Agency shall resolve such conflicts on the basis of the requesting employees' greater/greatest: (i) continuous USDA seniority; then (ii) General Schedule grade/step level; then (iii) federal government service as measured by Service Computation Date for Leave; then (iv) continuous seniority in Rural Development agencies. (see USDA DR @ § 4-g)
- F. Within two (2) weeks after receiving a written request to telework, the Agency shall provide a copy of an approved or denied Telework Agreement to the employee and the Human Resources (HR) Office. (see USDA DR @ § 4-g)
- G. Once the Agency approves an employee's telework schedule, another employee may not "bump" that employee from his/her scheduled telework day. (see USDA DR @ § 4-g)
- H. Equipment (see USDA DR @ § 6-i-(8))
1. The Agency shall identify the equipment and services to be provided by the teleworking employee and Agency respectively (see 22-6-A above).
- 2017-2020 Collective Bargaining Agreement 063
between AFGE Local 622 and USDA Rural Development - Indiana
2. The Agency or the employee may process employee-initiated trouble tickets for equipment malfunctions. If the Agency cannot remedy the problem remotely, the employee must bring the malfunctioning equipment to the office for repair.
 3. In order to telework from an AWkS, the employee must be able to connect securely to any USDA systems that are necessary for the employee to perform his/her duties and responsibilities.
- I. On a case-by-case basis, employees with approved Core (Regular/Recurring) schedules may agree with their supervisors to change those schedules in order to meet ad hoc requests. (see USDA DR @ § 7-b; and § 7-b-(2))
- J. If circumstances occur that prevent an otherwise telework-ready employee from teleworking on a workday when he/she was required or expected to telework, the employee shall notify his/her immediate supervisor or designee that he/she is having technical difficulties. (NOTE: such "circumstances" include, e.g., the unavailability or inaccessibility of specialized equipment necessary for teleworking, power outages, interference with internet connectivity.) If the employee has not regained connectivity within one (1) hour after giving such notice, the Agency shall offer the employee the option of: (i) coming to the work site; and/or (ii) using accumulated leave, compensatory or other accrued time, or credit hours for the remainder of the workday; and/or

(iii) performing work that does not require connectivity. Whenever an employee comes to work on a previously scheduled telework day under such circumstances, the Agency shall consider the employee's commute time to the ODS as duty time. (see USDA DR @ § 7-b-(6))

K. Teleworking when there is an event of either office closure (i.e., an office does not open, opens late, or closes early) or of the employee's permitted flexible presence (i.e., employees are permitted to arrive late at an office that is already open or are permitted to depart early from an office that is not-yet closed). (see USDA DR @ § 5-l-(1); § 7-b-(5); and "Telework Agreement", Form AD-3018)

1. When the event is unexpected because of inclement weather or a national security or other emergency:

a. Those employees who are telework-ready and have Core (Regular/Recurring) Telework Agreements shall telework if the event falls on a workday the employee is regularly scheduled to telework.

b. Those employees who are telework-ready and have Situational/ad hoc/Unscheduled Telework Agreements shall telework if the event falls on a workday for which the employee previously obtained their supervisor's ad hoc approval to telework.

c. Any employee on a Telework Agreement who obtains specific supervisory ad hoc approval may telework.

2017-2020 Collective Bargaining Agreement 064

between AFGE Local 622 and USDA Rural Development - Indiana

2. When it was reasonable to anticipate the possibility of the event (e.g., because a storm was widely predicted in the broadcast media, or because the Agency sent a "heads-up" advisory to employees):

a. All those employees who are telework-ready and have Telework Agreements shall complete their Tour of Duty by, as appropriate, teleworking at the AWkS and/or using accrued leave/credit hours and/or working at the ODS. If the employee is unable to complete his/her Tour of Duty by 6 p.m., he/she may use accrued leave/credit hours.

b. If, during such an event, an employee with a Telework Agreement who is not prepared to telework shall complete their Tour of Duty by, as appropriate, using accrued leave/credit hours and/or working at the ODS. The employee shall personally notify his/her immediate supervisor or designee of his/her actions. If the employee is unable to complete his/her Tour of Duty by 6 p.m., he/she may use accrued leave/credit hours.

c. Telework-ready employees who are affected by an emergency condition (e.g., power or service outage or because of equipment failure) that render them unable to accomplish Agency work at the AWkS will be treated the same as employees affected by the event who do not have a Telework Agreement. Employees in this situation shall: (i) personally notify his/her immediate supervisor or designee of that fact; and (ii) identify the specific effect of the outage.

d. In any such situation where the Agency directs an employee to report to the ODS when the employee would otherwise not have reported, the employee's time driving to the ODS shall be compensable as duty time.

(See 22-7-N below.)

L. When the Agency of its own accord authorizes teleworking by eligible employees at a time for which the employee had not previously requested and been authorized to telework, those employees who intend to telework must notify their supervisors by: (i) email; or (ii) a personal telephone call; or (iii) if neither emailing nor telephoning is successful, voicemail. (see USDA DR @ § 4-l; and § 4-m)

M. When the Agency requires an employee to report to the ODS:

1. If the employee is teleworking and is required to report in an emergency operational exigency in order to perform work at the ODS, the Agency shall:

(i) give the employee reasonable advance notice; (ii) permit the employee up to two (2) hours to report; and (iii) treat the time required for the employee to travel to the ODS as compensable. (see USDA DR @ § 6-i-10)

2. If the employee is approved for Core (Regular/Recurring) telework and is required to report on one of his/her scheduled telework days, the employee may request and the supervisor/designee may approve an alternate telework day in that week. If the employee is unable to request approval for an alternate telework day

between AFGE Local 622 and USDA Rural Development - Indiana

in that week because he/she was required to report on-site at the end of the employee's scheduled workweek, the employee may request and the supervisor/designee may approve an alternate telework day in the next week.

When the employee takes the alternate telework day in the next week and that week is in a new pay period, he/she must code the time he/she teleworks on the alternate telework day as Situational/ad hoc/Unscheduled Telework. (see USDA DR @ § 7-c-(2))

N. The teleworking employee and attendance at an event to be held at the ODS at a day/hour during the employee's scheduled teleworking (see USDA DR @ § 5-l-(2)):

1. If the employee's attendance is voluntary and the employee wishes to attend, the employee may choose not to telework that workday. If the employee requests to change from teleworking that particular workday to teleworking another workday in the pay period, the supervisor may at his/her discretion, approve or deny the request.

2. If the employee's attendance is mandatory (i.e., he/she is required to attend), the employee may choose not to telework that workday. If the employee requests to change from teleworking that particular workday to teleworking another workday in the pay period, the supervisor shall, absent a valid mission need, approve the request.

O. When an employee with an approved Telework Agreement moves to a different position, the supervisor of that new position shall review the employee's current already-approved Telework Agreement and approve or deny the employee's telework schedule as permitted by the USDA DR. (see USDA DR @ § 4-g)

P. When an employee is recovering from an injury or illness and the medical condition does not preclude the employee from teleworking, the employee may request additional teleworking as a "reasonable accommodation" under the procedures appropriate for making such a request. (see USDA DR @ § 4-i)

Q. If a supervisor anticipates that critical work needs are likely to preclude any of the employees under his/her direction from teleworking during any part of the work year, the supervisor shall notify those employees of the likely dates of that period as far in advance as is reasonably possible. (see USDA DR @ § 7-a-1-(b))

R. Teleworking employees may request Union representation while at their AWkS. However, a Union representative shall not leave his/her current duty station to handle the issue. (see USDA DR @ § 6-i-(11))

S. Terminating an employee's participation in the Telework Program. (see USDA DR @ § 7-1-a)

1. Any employee who wishes to terminate his/her involvement in the Telework Program may do so by submitting a written request to do so to his/her supervisor/designee.

2017-2020 Collective Bargaining Agreement 066

between AFGE Local 622 and USDA Rural Development - Indiana

2. Before the Agency terminates/suspends an employee's participation in the Telework Program: (i) the supervisor and employee shall attempt to work out any specific problems; and (ii) the Agency shall give the employee written notice at least two (2) weeks in advance, unless shortening the advance notice is justified by an emergency. This notice shall indicate the reason(s) for the termination/suspension. Unless otherwise indicated, the employee may re-apply to participate in the Telework Program after thirty (30) calendar days provided the reason for the termination/suspension no longer exists. If the Agency terminates/suspends the employee's participation because of mission-related reasons, the employee may ask for reconsideration of the termination/suspension when the mission-related reasons change or end. Article 21 - Telework and Remote Work

21.1 General Provisions

The Telework Program shall be governed by the terms of this Article. The Employer fully supports and promotes the broadest possible use of telework by eligible employees. Effective use of telework enables the Employer to realize tangible savings in terms of reduced real estate and physical space demands, utilities, and transit subsidy costs. Telework and other workplace flexibilities also enhance employee recruitment and retention.

21.2 Definitions

A. Alternative Worksite. A worksite location, other than the traditional office that satisfies all requisite Federal health and safety laws, rules and regulations pertaining to the workplace, where an employee performs their official duties. Supervisors may authorize telework from several alternative worksites. Temporary authorizations or changes in the location of designated alternative worksites do not require a new AD-3018, USDA Telework Agreement.

B. Classified Materials. Information which, for reasons of national security, is specifically designated by a United States Government Agency for limited or restricted dissemination or distribution.

C. Hoteling. Shared office space in an Agency location designed for use by teleworkers.

D. Locality Pay Area. An Office of Management and Budget defined metropolitan statistical area or combined statistical area that determines certain location-based pay entitlements based on the employee's official duty station as documented on the employee's SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action.

E. Mobile Work. Work that is characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in a customer's or other worksite as opposed to a single authorized alternative worksite. Examples include site audits, site inspections investigations, property management, and work performed while commuting, traveling between worksites, or on Temporary Duty (TDY). Mobile work is not considered telework; however, mobile workers may be eligible to participate in telework, as applicable.

F. Official Duty Station (ODS)/Official Worksite. The ODS or official worksite is the management- approved location where employees regularly perform their official duties. If the employee's work involves recurring travel or the employee's work location varies on a recurring basis, the official worksite is the location where the work activities of the employee's position of record are based, as determined by the employing agency, subject to the requirement that the official worksite must be in a locality pay area in which the employee is required to regularly perform work. The Employer must document an employee's official worksite on the employee's Notification of Personnel Action (Standard Form 50 or equivalent).

G. Opt-Out. A telework-eligible employee who voluntarily declines to participate in the Telework Program. Employees who opt-out must sign and check the voluntary opt-out box on the AD- 3018, Telework Agreement.

H. Remote Work. A workforce flexibility arrangement under which an employee is scheduled to perform work within or outside the local commuting area of their Employer's worksite and is not required to report to the Employer's worksite on a regular and recurring basis.

I. Remote Work Arrangement. A work arrangement in which:

1. The employee performs assigned official duties and other authorized activities at an approved alternate work location, typically the employee's residence, within or outside of the local commuting area of the Employer's worksite;
2. On a regular and continuing basis;
3. Is not required to physically report to the Employer's worksite on any frequent, regular, or recurring basis; and
4. The approved alternate worksite is, for pay and other purposes, the employee's official duty station, as indicated on the employee's SF-50, per 5 CFR 531.605, Determining an employee's official worksite.

J. Remote Work Eligibility. A determination that a position's required duties and tasks can be completed away from the Employer's worksite with no frequent, regular, or recurring requirement to be physically present at the Employer's worksite.

K. Routine Telework. (also referred to as core telework). Regularly scheduled telework that occurs no less than one day and no more than eight (8) days (without exception) scheduled per biweekly pay period, on a recurring basis and is part of an approved work schedule.

L. Situational Telework. (also referred to as ad hoc, episodic, unscheduled, and intermittent). Telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked were not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular, telework schedule.

M. Telework. A work arrangement in which an employee performs and completes official duties and responsibilities from an alternative worksite. Telework may be authorized for an entire duty day or a portion of one. Telework does not include the following: 1. Work performed while on official travel status; 2. Work performed while commuting to/from work; 3. Mobile work; or 4. Remote work.

N. Telework Agreement (AD-3018). A written agreement that outlines the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement as approved by the supervisor.

O. Teleworker. An eligible employee with an approved Telework Agreement who performs their official duties at an alternative worksite.

P. Telework-Ready. Refers to all eligible employees with an approved Telework Agreement and who are prepared and equipped to telework. If unable to telework when required, use of paid or unpaid leave may be requested.

Q. Unscheduled Telework. Telework that is authorized in response to specific duty status announcements issued by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) or other authorized Agency officials for use during periods of inclement weather, a pandemic or public health crisis, or other emergency situations, or with prior supervisory approval, telework used to maintain productivity during short-term disruptions to normal operating procedures.

21.3 Telework Policy

A. The Employer fully supports and promotes the use of telework, up to the maximum extent appropriate, for and by eligible employees. The Telework Program is designed to fully implement the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and enhance work/life balance for employees. Telework should be used as a strategic tool for attracting a diverse pool of potential applicants, qualified candidates, and for retaining valued employees.

B. Employees may request to telework up to eight (8) days per pay period. The appropriateness of the type and amount of telework suitable for eligible employees is a determination reserved for Agency management. Supervisory decisions as to type and frequency of telework participation should be made on an individual, case-by-case basis, determined by the nature of the position, job requirements, and mission criteria, and should involve a discussion between the supervisor and employee.

C. All approved telework arrangements must be documented on an AD 3018, USDA Telework Agreement form.

D. A teleworker's official duty station will remain unchanged if they report physically to their employing office worksite location for two (2) full workdays or a combination of workday and some form of personal leave each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis. The two (2) full workdays may be consecutive days in the same week. If a holiday falls on a teleworker's day to physically report to the employing office worksite, it is not required to add an alternate day to the employee's requirement to physically report to the employing office worksite for that specific biweekly pay period. The Employer shall ensure that employee personnel records correctly reflect the employee's ODS.

E. Telework should be used as a strategic tool to recruit and retain a diverse workforce and support employee work-life balance.

F. Use of telework is a key component of the Employer's ability to operate in situations in which working from the official worksite is unsafe or unavailable. Unscheduled telework will be considered and may be authorized or required during inclement weather, emergency situations that involve national security, extended emergencies, or other unique situations as determined by the OPM or the Employer. Agency offices should incorporate telework into their Continuity of Operations Plan.

G. Eligibility

1. All employees, regardless of tenure, grade, job series, title, or supervisory designation are presumed eligible for telework, unless prohibited by other exclusionary provisions in Section 21.3 G 5 below.

2. Employees in positions ineligible for telework and those performing similar functions will be treated as fairly and equitably as those that telework.

3. Positions may be identified as ineligible for telework based only on the following criteria:

a. Position duties require daily physical presence and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an alternate office or location.

b. Position responsibilities require daily access to specialized equipment located at the official worksite and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an alternate office or location.

c. Position activities require daily access to classified materials and do not include any portable or administrative work that can be accomplished from an alternate office or location. 4. If the Employer determines that a position is ineligible for teleworking, it shall provide the Union with a written explanation. 5. Employees may be identified as ineligible for telework based only on the following criteria: a. Performance. An employee is ineligible for telework if they received a less than fully successful performance rating within the past twelve (12) months and may remain ineligible for up to twelve (12) months from the date of the documented performance rating. b. Conduct. An employee is ineligible for telework due to conduct issues resulting in official, formal disciplinary action, as filed in the employee's Official Personnel File (OPF) as a matter of personnel record and may remain ineligible for up to twelve (12) months from the date that the discipline was effectuated. c. Permanent Ineligibility. As specified in the Telework Enhancement Act, an employee is permanently ineligible for telework if they have been formally disciplined for the following: 1. Violation of 5 CFR 2635, Subpart G, Misuse of Position, of the Standards for Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing their official duties; or 2. Absence Without Leave (AWOL). AWOL is a non-pay status that covers an absence from duty that is not approved. Any employee AWOL for five (5) or more days in any calendar year is permanently ineligible. 6. Temporary Eligibility. In certain circumstances, the Employer may temporarily designate the location of the Agency worksite for an employee's position (i.e., the place where the employee would normally work, absent a Telework Agreement) as the official worksite even though the employee is not able to report at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to the Employer's worksite. The employee must be expected to return to the Employer's worksite at some point in the future on a regular and recurring basis. It is the responsibility of the employee's immediate supervisor to decide when it no longer is proper to apply the temporary exception. However, if a teleworking employee is not expected to report to the Employer's worksite on a regular and recurring basis in the future, the temporary exception would no longer be applicable. Supervisors must periodically review (at least every three(3) months) an employee's temporary full-time telework arrangement to ensure any approved temporary exception continues to apply. A supervisor may waive this requirement on a temporary basis in situations such as: a. Recovery from an injury or medical condition; b. Emergency conditions that prevent an employee from commuting to the official worksite, such as a severe weather emergency or public health crisis; c. An extended period of approved absence from work, e.g., paid leave;

d. A period during which the employee is in temporary duty travel status away from the official worksite; or

e. A period during which an employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than a location covered by a Telework Agreement.

H. Supervisors always have flexibility to approve additional or in lieu of telework days.

21.4 Telework Procedures

A. Telework Participation

1. Telework Agreements remain in effect until a change is initiated, though it is a good practice for supervisors to review Telework Agreements with employees on an annual basis. Either management or an employee may initiate a change to a Telework Agreement with a minimum of forty-five (45) calendar days advance written notification, except in emergency situations where the timeframe may be shorter.

a. Teleworking employees are expected to perform their duties and responsibilities at the fully successful performance level. In accordance with the terms and provisions of this Article, participation in telework may be changed, suspended, or terminated by management if an employee no longer meets the eligibility criteria or performance expectations.

b. Before the Employer modifies/terminates/suspends an employee's participation in the Telework Program: the supervisor and employee shall attempt to work out any specific problems; and the Employer shall give the employee written notice at least forty-five (45) calendar days in advance, unless shortening the advance notice is justified by an emergency. This notice shall indicate the reason(s) for the modification/termination/suspension. Obtaining the signature of the employee as evidence of their consent or acknowledgement is not required for the modification/termination/suspension to take effect.

c. Unless otherwise indicated, the employee may re-apply to participate in the Telework Program after thirty (30) calendar days provided the reason for the modification/termination/suspension no longer exists. If the Employer modifies/terminates/suspends the employee's participation because of mission-related reasons, the employee may ask for reconsideration of the modification/ termination/suspension when the mission-related reasons change or end.

2. Management reserves the right, normally with at least one day notice, to require employees to return to the ODS location for imperative mission related purposes, even on scheduled telework days. Emergency situations may require a shorter timeframe. Management will make every attempt to minimize requests to call employees back to the office when employees are scheduled to telework. When the Employer requires an employee to report to the ODS on the employee's routine telework day, the employee may request an alternate telework day. The Employer shall, absent a valid mission need, approve the request for an alternate telework day. The alternate telework day must be coded as Telework – Other.

3. Teleworkers and remote workers may participate in flexible and compressed work schedules, or other flexible work arrangements. Teleworkers shall be permitted to swap or change their scheduled telework days with prior supervisory approval. 4. Changes (e.g., change in position or change requested by management or employee) will require a new or updated Telework Agreement to be completed. When an employee with an approved Telework Agreement moves to a different position, the employee shall request a new Telework Agreement, except in cases of reorganizations or realignments where the position remains essentially the same. A new Telework Agreement is not needed for temporary changes in position or supervisor (e.g., due to detail, temporary promotion, or assignments of a short duration). 5. Employees must report the number of participation days in the Routine Telework Agreement, so their Transit Subsidy reflects the correct amount. 6. Telework is voluntary for all employees. At a minimum, every employee must decide either to participate in the telework program or affirmatively opt out of the telework program by completing the AD-3018 form and giving it to their immediate supervisor. Employees with a Routine Telework Agreement shall be presumed to be eligible also for Situational/ Unscheduled telework. B. Unscheduled and Emergency Telework 1. OPM or Agency authorized officials may announce emergency operating status guidance allowing for unscheduled or required telework beyond that outlined in the OPM early dismissal guidance for weather events. 2. Employees with Telework Agreements in place may choose to participate in unscheduled telework as indicated by OPM or the Agency, without supervisory approval. However, employees who make this choice must inform their supervisors of their intent to telework and telework status by email, phone, or voicemail. Employees with a Telework Agreement are expected to telework or take other authorized leave (e.g., administrative leave, annual leave, leave without pay), paid time off, or a combination of both, as approved by the Agency office. 3. Teleworkers who are working in the office when an early departure is announced generally may receive weather and safety leave for time required to commute home (excluding the period for an unpaid lunch break). This means that telework participants must complete the remaining hours of their workday (if any) either by teleworking or taking leave (paid or unpaid) or other paid time off once they arrive home. 4. When Federal offices are closed due to weather or other emergency conditions, in order to maintain the continuity of the Employer's operations: a. All telework-ready employees (see Section 21.2 P above) may be required to work at their alternative worksites, except an employee shall be excused if: i. they are prevented from safely teleworking by an act of God (i.e., natural disasters such as earthquakes, floods, and snowstorms), terrorist attack or other similar circumstance not in the employee's control that prevents working safely; and ii. either (A) the occurrence of such condition(s) could not, in the Agency's judgement, reasonably be anticipated, or (B) the employee is prevented from safely teleworking despite having taken reasonable steps within their control to prepare to telework (e.g., by taking home the needed equipment and/or work) and is otherwise unable to perform productive work at their telework site.

iii. an employee prevented from traveling to or performing work at an approved location, due to circumstances arising from one or more of the circumstances in (i) above, is prevented from safely teleworking.

b. Employees who do not have Telework Agreements and were otherwise scheduled to report to the closed Federal office shall not be required to work but shall be excused. Different provisions may apply to employees who do not have a Telework Agreement but are designated as emergency or mission-critical emergency employees.

5. When federal offices are not closed, if technical difficulties (including, e.g., the unavailability or inaccessibility of specialized equipment necessary for teleworking, power outages, and interference with internet connectivity) prevent an otherwise telework-ready employee from teleworking at/on a time/day when they were required or expected to do so, the employee will contact their supervisor or designee to determine an appropriate course of action which may include work that can still be conducted offline, appropriate leave, or return to the office.

6. If on a day that an employee is teleworking, the Employer directs an employee to report to the ODS, the employee's time driving from their approved telework site to the ODS shall be compensable as duty time.

C. Time and Attendance (applies to teleworkers and remote workers)

1. Employees must follow this Agreement for accurately coding time spent teleworking and working remotely.

2. Agency procedures for requesting and approving overtime, credit hours, and leave apply to all employees, including teleworkers and remote workers and are governed by this Agreement.

D. Safety

1. Teleworkers and remote workers are encouraged to be proactive in ensuring a safe alternate worksite and safe work habits.

2. As a remote worker or while teleworking from an alternate worksite, employees may be covered by the following:

a. Federal Tort Claims Act (FTCA), 28 United States Code (USC) 2671- 2680, Tort Claims Procedure; and

b. Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA), 5 USC Chapter 81, Compensation for Work Injuries.

3. Employees are covered by FECA at their alternate worksite if an injury occurs while performing their official duties. 4. If an injury occurs, the employee must notify their supervisor immediately, provide details of the incident or injury, and complete the following Department of Labor (DOL), Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) forms: a. OSHA, Form 301, Log of Work-Related Injuries and Illnesses; and b. DOL, FECA Form CA-1, Federal Employee's Notice of Traumatic Injury and Claim for Continuation of Pay/Compensation; or c. DOL, FECA CA-2 Form(s): i. Form CA-2, Notice of Occupational Disease and Claim for Compensation; and ii. Form CA-2a, Notice of Recurrence; and d. As applicable, for Federal Employee's Notice of Traumatic Injury and Claim for Continuation of Pay/Compensation (CA-1) situations, employees can access the DOL Employees' Compensation Operations and Management Portal (ECOMP) through the How to File a Form website. 5. The Government is not liable for damages to the employee's personal or real property while the employee is teleworking, except to the extent the Government is held liable by the FTCA. E. Reasonable Accommodation and Medical Telework 1. Telework should be considered for reasonable accommodation requests for employees with a disability or for accommodation of religious beliefs. All reasonable accommodation requests, including those for telework, must comply with DR 4300-008, Reasonable Accommodations and Personal Assistance Services for Employees and Applicants with Disabilities, OPM and Government-wide regulations, and this Article. The determination as to whether an employee may be granted the accommodation requested should be made through a flexible interactive process between the Employer and the employee. 2. Employees seeking long-term (exceeding 6 months) or permanent telework as a Reasonable Accommodation should follow the rules and procedures outlined in DR 4300-008, Reasonable Accommodations and Personal Assistance Services for Employees and Applicants with Disabilities. 3. Any employee who seeks an appropriate short-term (6 months or less) telework arrangement because of temporary medical issues should submit a normal telework request and engage in a flexible interactive process with the Employer to determine the scope of the employee's capabilities, etc. Telework may also be combined with annual or sick leave during recovery or on days of recurring medical appointments. 4. It is not a requirement to document or track a Telework Agreement or an Agency office unique remote work agreement approved for a reasonable accommodation. However, written documentation in another format may be needed to document the efficacy of the organization's reasonable accommodation arrangement with the employee.

F. Telework Appeals

1. Appeals of a telework participation denial will be governed by the procedures of Article 18, Negotiated Grievance Procedure, and Article 19, Arbitration.
2. Employees may appeal the following denials of telework:
 - a. A written decision of ineligibility based on the duties of the position or the employee's suitability for telework;
 - b. Denial of an employee's request to telework documented by the submission of a Telework Agreement;
 - c. Management termination of an existing Telework Agreement; and
 - d. Denial of an employee's request to telework without a valid business reason, yet the employee is approved for situational telework.

21.5 Remote Work Policy

A. The Employer fully supports and promotes remote work arrangements for and by employees occupying remote work eligible positions. The Employer's remote work policy is intended to enhance the work-life balance for employees.

B. Remote work is an arrangement under which employees are scheduled to perform their position's job duties at an approved alternate worksite, typically the employee's residence. The remote worksite may be within or outside of the local commuting area of the Employer's worksite. Remote work employees will be expected to work at a designated approved location, typically the employee's residence, on a regular and continuing basis.

C. Remote work arrangements may be used for a variety of business reasons, including, but not limited to:

1. Retaining high performing employees who must move for personal reasons and would otherwise leave the Agency;
2. Recruiting employees with specialized skills, who may not want or be able to relocate for personal reasons;
3. Achieving Agency office real estate or other business cost reductions;
4. Reducing costs associated with filling vacancies when employees must relocate; and
5. Increasing employee work-life balance, resulting in increased morale.

D. Remote Work Eligibility. At a minimum, the following conditions or criteria will be considered when a remote work arrangement is requested or when included in a Job Opportunity Announcement (JOA) for merit promotion vacancies for bargaining unit positions:

1. As part of the ongoing position management processes, the Employer will review positions to determine eligibility for a remote work arrangement. Eligibility must be determined prior to posting a JOA; and

2. The Employer must consider:

- a. Job duties that only can be performed onsite and the amount of time required to complete such duties in a typical bi-weekly pay period;
- b. The amount of time required each week to participate in other aspects of the work unit operations such as training, meetings, or collaboration, including collaboration with stakeholders that cannot be conducted virtually;
- c. The type and frequency of travel associated with the position; and
- d. Any requirement for accessing classified information.

E. Remote work arrangements will be approved based upon a specific work location and will not include a requirement for the employee to remain within the local commuting area. Changes to official duty stations/remote work arrangements require supervisory approval.

21.6 Remote Work Procedures

A. Remote work arrangements should be cost-neutral or low-cost, to the extent practical, after factoring in the net cost savings accrued moving each employee to a remote arrangement. B. Although remote employees generally are not expected to report to the Agency worksite, the supervisor can require the presence of a remote employee at the worksite in certain situations, e.g., random drug testing, training, or an official meeting. C. Supervisors should minimize official travel between the remote work location and the Agency worksite unless necessary to accomplish mission critical needs or where alternative virtual communication means (e.g., teleconference, virtual meetings) are not available. D. When travel is required, clear communication between the employee and supervisor will ensure an accurate understanding of mutual responsibilities and obligations. When an Agency office authorizes a remote employee to travel to an office worksite for official duty, the Agency will pay travel costs consistent with the Federal Travel Regulations and other applicable Federal laws and Government-wide rules and regulations. E. Remote employees must be treated equitably for appraisals of job performance, training, awards, reassignment, promotions, changes in grade, work requirements, approval of overtime work, flexible and compressed work schedules, and other actions within management's discretion. Remote employees are entitled to receive progress reviews and annual performance appraisals from their supervisors in accordance with the Employer's performance management policies. F. Remote employees who are required by their supervisor to report to an Agency worksite will be: 1. given as much advanced notice as possible, normally at least three (3) business days, less if a mission critical need requires it. This provision does not apply to drug testing; 2. considered to be in official travel status, if traveling from outside the local commuting area on a travel authorization, for the duration of the visit; 3. reimbursed for travel expenses associated with reporting to the office, (e.g., parking, mileage, tolls), if traveling within the local commuting area. If the employee is not in the local commuting area, they will be provided a travel authorization, and 4. provided with a dedicated workspace, if one is available, for the duration of the visit. (Remote work employees generally will not have a permanently assigned workspace at the Agency worksite.)

21.7 Establishment or Changing a Remote Work Arrangement

A. When creating a JOA for merit promotion announcements for bargaining unit positions, hiring managers must identify: 1. Whether the position is eligible for a telework or remote work arrangement; and 2. Whether a remote work arrangement is required for the position. Candidates accepting a position where a remote work arrangement is required must accept the arrangement as a condition of employment. B. Employees may request to work remotely, to change an existing remote work arrangement, or to terminate their remote work arrangement. Absent urgent circumstances, employee requests to change their remote work location or remote work arrangement are limited to once every six (6) months. The employee requesting a change must: 1. Discuss the request with their supervisor. Changing the employee's duty station likely will affect the employee in several ways (e.g., locality pay, Reduction-in- Force competitive area, bargaining unit status, unemployment compensation). When discussing such requests with the employee, management must address other available workplace flexibilities, including but not limited to, alternative work schedules, details, leave options (e.g., extended leave without pay, and shared leave programs). 2. The employee then may submit a request for a remote work arrangement, change to a remote work arrangement, or termination of a remote work arrangement in writing. The request must include the proposed duty station and effective date. C. To the extent the eligibility criteria in Section 21.5 D 2 of this Article are met, supervisors shall normally approve requests to set up a remote work arrangement from employees occupying positions that are remote-eligible. Normally employees shall not be denied a remote work arrangement based upon the locality pay of the remote worksite. If denied, the Employer will provide a written justification to the employee. D. Supervisory considerations of employee requests to change or terminate a remote work arrangement include: 1. That the proposed creation or change of a remote work arrangement does not negatively affect the Employer's budget or ability to execute its mission; and 2. Requests to terminate a remote work arrangement may be denied due to space limitations within an Employer worksite. E. Generally, to the extent the eligibility criteria in Section 21.5 D 2 of this Article are present, employees may be considered eligible for a remote work arrangement. However, as with telework, an employee becomes permanently ineligible for a remote work arrangement if they have been formally disciplined for either:

1. A violation of Subpart G, Misuse of Position, of the Standards for Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computing device to include cell phones and tablets or while performing official, Federal Government duties; or

2. AWOL for five (5) or more days in any calendar year.

F. Performance and Conduct. Employees on remote work arrangements are subject to the same laws, rules, regulations, and policies that address performance deficiencies and employee misconduct.

G. Appeals to a denial of a request for a remote work arrangement are governed by Article 18, Negotiated Grievance Procedure, and Article 19, Arbitration.

H. Employees approved to work remotely will be permitted to pack any personal items located in the Agency workspace on duty time, if applicable.

21.8 Pay, Holiday, and Time and Attendance

A. The basic rate of pay of a remote employee is determined by the employee's base pay rate, the applicable locality pay rate and any special pay rate associated with the employee's official duty station of record, as recorded on the employee's OPM Standard Form (SF)-50, Notification of Personnel Action. For remote employees, the official worksite typically is their residence.

B. Teleworker and remote workers are required to follow the procedures in this Agreement for requesting and using approved leave.

C. The Employer generally should not pay relocation expenses related to remote work arrangements such as expenses to relocate to a new official duty station or to return to the Agency office worksite when such arrangements were requested by the employee and is not the result of a directed reassignment.

D. Remote work employees traveling on official business are eligible for the same travel benefits as non-remote work employees. Supervisors should, whenever possible, minimize official travel for remote employees. Alternate communication technologies should be leveraged to the greatest extent possible to minimize travel unless necessary.

E. All required training and travel for remote employees as determined by the supervisor (e.g., mandatory participation at meetings or conferences at the Agency office worksite) will be subject to normal training approval requests, applicable travel regulations, and funding.

F. Remote work employees may be eligible for Workers' Compensation benefits for work-related injuries or illnesses sustained while in the performance of duty under FECA, which is administered by the DOL's Office of Workers' Compensation Programs (OWCP). For further information, see 5 USC 81.

21.9 Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas

A. Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas (DETO) are overseas work arrangements that allow Federal Executive Branch employees to perform the work requirements and duties of their positions temporarily from approved overseas locations via DETO agreements. Employees have no authorization to telework from a foreign location without approval from USDA and the Department of State (DOS).

B. Employees who may be considered for a DETO are those who are the spouse or domestic partner of a sponsoring Foreign Service Officer, Federal Civil Service employee, Department of Defense employee, or uniformed service member assigned overseas. To be considered for a DETO, the employee must be on the U.S. Government orders of the sponsoring individual assigned overseas.

C. DETO requests will be considered on a case-by-case basis. Employees must consult with the OHRM as early as possible in the process because DOS approval can take from six (6) months to a year, if not longer.

D. Any DETO request must be approved by the applicable Agency office prior to submission to the DOS and must follow the requirements in Departmental Regulation 4080-811-002, Telework and Remote Work Programs, the DOS Executive Secretary Memorandum, Requirements for Executive Branch Employees Teleworking in Foreign Locations, dated June 7, 2016, and the DOS Foreign Affairs Manual, 3 FAM 2370, Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) policy guidance, dated August 11, 2021.

E. Before approval, the employee must complete a DETO agreement using the DOS DETO agreement form, fulfill any overseas training requirements, and obtain proper documentation (e.g., passports, visas, work permits) to perform work overseas. The completed DETO agreement must be submitted through the employee's supervisory chain of command for approval. Once approved, it must be submitted to the DOS.

F. A DETO may entail significant costs to the Employer the employee, or both. Therefore, prior to approving a DETO agreement, the Employer must be prepared to address any contingencies or problems with the overseas telework arrangement, including situations when the employee or the Employer may need to terminate the DETO.

G. Upon approval of a DETO agreement, the approved case must be forwarded to the servicing Human Resource Office to change the employee's duty station to the overseas location. The DOS regulation 3 FAM 2370 governs the availability of overseas allowances, including the termination of locality pay, and other differentials for employees.

H. DOS policy requirements apply to all employees working under a DETO.

21.10 Roles and Responsibilities

A. The Employer shall:

1. Promote the Telework and Remote Work Programs and give all eligible employees the opportunity to participate in telework or remote work arrangements;
2. Determine the suitability of positions for remote work arrangements;
3. Administer Telework and Remote Work Programs in accordance with this Agreement;
4. Incorporate information about the availability of telework, remote work, and related policies into new employee orientation and other training programs;
5. Evaluate all teleworkers, remote workers, and non-teleworkers under the same employee performance management system and afford the same professional opportunities, assignments, and treatment about work projects assigned, appraisal of job performance, awards, recognition, training and developmental opportunities, promotions, and retention incentives;
6. Provide the following equipment to teleworkers and remote workers:
 - a. One laptop or workstation with Jabber or successor;
 - b. One keyboard and mouse;
 - c. One docking station; and
 - d. One monitor at their ODS. Additional equipment (e.g., printer, scanner, cell phone, headset) may be provided if duties require such equipment.
7. Designate a Telework Program Coordinator (TPC) to manage the program;
8. Ensure all employees are notified of their eligibility to telework and encourage them to annually review or update their Telework Agreements or opt-out by selecting the AD- 3018 Opt-Out Section check boxes;
9. Ensure supervisors are aware of the requirement that teleworkers who are designated as emergency employees or mission-critical emergency employees are identified as such in their Telework Agreements;
10. Ensure managers are aware of the requirement for teleworkers to complete required training prior to implementing a Telework arrangement;
11. Coordinate with relevant parties on inventories of available computers, laptops, printers, and other office equipment for use in the Telework Program prior to reporting the property as excess; 12. Report the required telework program information, as requested by the Department; 13. Maintain all documentation in accordance with National Archives and Records Administration, General Records Schedule 22.2, Section 080, Supervisor's personnel files, which requires Telework Agreements to be retained for one year after the end of the employee's participation in the program; 14. Ensure employees are provided information on the Employer's Telework and Remote Work Programs, including eligibility criteria and application procedures; 15. Establish a system to receive feedback from employees about the implementation effectiveness and impact of the Telework and Remote Work Programs;

16. Provide copies of approved agreements and notices of agreement terminations in a timely manner;

17. Notify all assigned employees of their eligibility to telework, work remotely, or opt-out. Require each eligible new employee to request a new or updated Telework Agreement, remote work arrangement, or Opt-Out statement within ninety (90) calendar days of the arrival of the new employee. Require and account for Telework Agreements or Opt-Out Statements from all eligible employees.

18. Within ten (10) business days of receipt of a telework or remote work request, meet with the employee to approve, modify, or deny the request based on the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and this Article. If the request is denied or terminated, provide written justification to the employee, the Agency TPC and the Union;

19. Provide written notification and explanation to employees who are not authorized to participate in the Telework and Remote Work Programs.

20. Review approved Telework Agreements with all assigned employees annually;

21. Ensure consistent and fair administration of the Telework and Remote Work Programs policies and procedures;

22. Upon approval of a Telework Agreement, Remote Work Agreement, or Opt-out arrangement, establish and communicate reasonable and clear expectations with employees regarding methods of communication, (i.e., customer service, time frame for returning phone calls, voicemail messages, and email communication), staff meeting attendance, duty hours, and the accurate coding of telework for time and attendance purposes;

23. Ensure a personnel action is effected to document the correct official duty location for each employee approved for remote work. Temporary exceptions may apply as set out in Section 21.3 G 6, Temporary Eligibility, above;

24. Resolve telework denial and remote work denial appeals or grievances in a timely manner and in accordance with this Agreement;

25. Ensure compliance with approved telework and remote work agreements;

26. Ensure remote employees are provided office supplies from approved sources as appropriate. Reimbursement for office supplies will only occur if a request has been submitted and is pre-approved by the immediate supervisor before the purchase is made;

27. Promote and cooperate with employees and the Union in following the appeal procedures of Article 18, Negotiated Grievance Procedure, and Article 19, Arbitration, to resolve appeals of telework participation denials. Examples of employee appeals include but are not limited to:

- i. A written decision of ineligibility based on the duties of the position and/or the employee's suitability for telework;
- ii. Denial of a Telework Agreement, when an employee has been notified that they are eligible to telework;

- iii. Management termination of an existing Telework Agreement;
- iv. Frequent denials of individual requests to telework when approved for an ad hoc Telework Agreement, without valid business reasons.

B. Employees shall:

1. Follow the conditions of their approved telework or remote work agreements;
2. Follow the Employer's safety requirements and ensure proper security of Agency equipment, information, and materials;
3. Provide the same level of support, availability, and accessibility to customers, coworkers, and their supervisor(s) as if working at an Agency official duty location;
4. Meet all organizational and individual work requirements as established (e.g., customer service, time frame for returning phone calls, voicemail messages, and email communication), staff meeting attendance, duty hours, and the accurately coding time and attendance;
5. Complete all applicable mandatory training courses;
6. Ensure appropriate arrangements for the care of dependents while teleworking. Telework is not a substitute for dependent care. However, this Article does not preclude a teleworking employee from having a caregiver in the home who provides care to the dependent(s) while the employee teleworks. Also, a dependent may be permitted in the home provided they do not require constant supervision or care (i.e., older child or adolescent) and their presence does not disrupt the ability to telework effectively;
7. Ensure the alternate worksite provides adequate connectivity and technology to accomplish work tasks. Employees are expected to provide internet service and other general utility costs at their own expense, however, in cases involving extenuating circumstances, the Agency may explore other temporary connectivity options.
8. Acknowledge, in the applicable Telework or organizational remote work agreement forms that they are bound by the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch while teleworking or working remotely;
9. Understand that travel provisions applicable to employees working at an official duty station also apply to teleworkers and remote workers. A teleworker or remote worker who is directed to travel to another worksite (e.g., official duty station) during their regularly scheduled basic tour of duty would have the travel hours credited as hours of work. Similarly, teleworkers who are required to travel to the official duty location after their regularly scheduled telework basic tour of duty to perform irregular or occasional overtime work are entitled to at least two (2) hours of overtime pay or compensatory time off (5 CFR 550.112 (h), Call-back overtime work, and 5 CFR 551.401(e)); and
10. For remote employees, work with IT support to resolve malfunctions of Agency-supplied equipment. Employees will notify their supervisor of any work stoppage and discuss a work plan which, based upon the circumstances, may include alternative work assignments and/or administrative leave. An employee who experiences a work stoppage through no fault of their own due to a malfunction of Agency-supplied equipment will not be disciplined for the stoppage. Agency equipment may be shipped to/from the employee's residence or travel to an Agency worksite may be required.

Rural Development
NEGOTIATED AGREEMENT ON TELEWORK
Standalone Agreement

RD Business Center and AFGE Local 3354

PREAMBLE:

This Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) supplements the Labor-Management Relations Collective Bargaining Agreements (CBAs) between the Union and the Agency applying to the Business Center (BC) professional and non-professional units, so that this MOA, the CBAs, and applicable laws, rules, regulations, policies, and procedures, as amended, cover all aspects of the Telework and Remote Work Program by providing:

- (1) Procedures the Agency's management officials shall observe in exercising rights recognized by § 7106 of the Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute; and
- (2) Appropriate arrangements for employees affected by any exercise of such rights.

SECTION I - THIS MOA, PRIOR AGREEMENTS, AND AGENCY DIRECTIVES

- (A) This MOA replaces all previous Telework MOAs in their entirety.
- (B) Teleworking in the BC shall be governed by this MOA and USDA's Departmental Regulation 4080-811-002, "Telework and Remote Work Program" (the DR).
- (C) In the event the Department of Agriculture issues any new or revised DR to govern Telework and Remote Work, this MOA shall govern rather than the DR whenever there is a conflict between them.

SECTION II - SHARED UNDERSTANDINGS

- (A) The BC Telework Program begins with the premise that all positions are presumed suitable for Telework, unless the Agency determines the position unsuitable for Telework. Such determinations must be supportable by written justification, and must:
 - (1) Require that, on a daily basis, an employee be physically present at the office worksite; and

(2) The assigned work cannot be performed from an alternative worksite.

(B) Employees may request to telework on a Core (Regular/Recurring) or Situational/Non-Scheduled (i.e., episodic) basis. On a case-by-case basis, the employee and the supervisor may mutually agree to change the established schedule of the employee to meet Situational/Non-Scheduled or episodic requests.

(C) Time spent in a Telework status include overtime and credit hours, and all time and requests must be accounted for and reported in the same manner as if the employee reported for duty at the Official Duty Station (ODS).

(D) Within the BC, teleworking shall be offered to all eligible positions in which all, or substantially all, critical element duties are portable. Any work that requires Personally Identifiable Information (PII)/Sensitive Security Information (SSI) shall adhere to the Rural Development “Government Furnished Information Technology Equipment for Use within and outside of USDA facilities” policy and RD Instruction 2033-A, “Management of Rural Development Records”.

(E) When consistent with business needs and approved by their supervisors, Teleworkers and Remote Workers may participate in Flexible/Compressed work schedules or other flexible work arrangements. A teleworker must report physically to their employing office worksite location for two (2) full workdays or a combination of workday and some form of personal leave each biweekly pay period (PP) on a regular and recurring basis.

SECTION III - ELIGIBILITY TO TELEWORK

In order to participate in the BC Telework Program, employees must satisfy all of the requirements established by applicable laws, rules, regulations, policies, and procedures, as amended, and:

(A) Must have high speed internet connection for use at their alternate worksite; and

(B) Must have an appropriate specific work location which is safe, comfortable, and free from distractions; and

(C) Must not be under an Opportunity to Improve Notice; and

(D) Must not have received an Absent Without Official Leave (AWOL) charge exceeding eight (8) hours within the last six (6) months. If an employee has received an AWOL charge exceeding eight (8) hours, he/she shall not participate in the Telework Program for six (6) months from the date the employee receives his/her ninth (9th) hour of AWOL. If the employee receives an AWOL charge of four (4) hours or more at any time during the employee’s six (6) month preclusion period, the employee shall not participate in the Telework Program for an additional six (6) months from the date he/she receives the AWOL charge.

(E) An employee may be found ineligible for telework temporarily if the employee was subject to formal disciplinary action, adverse action, or was placed on a leave restriction within the previous six (6) months, but may reapply for telework when the action or restriction has been completed and six (6) months have passed provided the employee has not been subject to further disciplinary action or restriction.

SECTION IV - PROCEDURES FOR THE AGENCY TO APPROVE APPLICANTS TO TELEWORK

(A) If there are conflicting Telework schedule requests, the Agency shall grant employee requests by seniority, with the most senior employees receiving schedule approvals before other employees. The Agency shall use the employee's Retirement Service Computation Date to rank employees by seniority.

(B) In certain temporary situations, such as when an employee is recovering from an injury or illness, and where the medical condition does not preclude the employee from teleworking, the Agency may permit the employee to telework provided the employee submits a Medical Certificate from his/her Health Care Provider. The Medical Certificate shall be written on the official letterhead of the Health Care Provider, and shall contain, but is not limited to, the following information:

- (1) Statement that the employee is under the Doctor's care; and
- (2) Work limitations that may impact any employee's functions; and
- (3) The expected duration of the absence; and
- (4) A statement regarding the amount of time in each day the employee may Telework; and
- (5) The name, address, telephone number, and original signature of the Health Care Provider.

(C) Nothing in this MOA shall diminish any statutory right of an employee to telework.

SECTION V - THE CONDITIONS OF TELEWORKING

(A) Exercising its best judgment taking into account BC's business/mission-related priorities and other similar considerations, and in compliance with this MOA, the Contract, and all applicable laws, rules, regulations, policies, and procedures, as amended, including especially RD's December 17, 2021 "Government Furnished Information Technology Equipment for Use within and outside of USDA facilities" policy, the Agency shall provide government-owned laptops and supplies for teleworking employees to use when teleworking. The Agency retains ownership and control of all such property. teleworking employees shall be responsible for transporting such property between their ODSs and their Telework locations, and for complying with all requirements for checking such property in and out of the BC.

(B) The supplies provided by BC shall be those basic expendable office supplies routinely used in the BC workplace.

(C) Limit on right of individual employees to telework. Employees chosen to telework have the right to apply for a Telework Agreement (TA) permitting them to telework up to eight (8) days/PP.

(D) With the advance approval of their supervisors and when needed for business reasons:

(1) Employees with an approved TA may telework after normal business hours or on weekends.

(2) When a normally scheduled Telework day falls on a holiday, employees with an approved TA may request a Situational/Non-Scheduled Telework day, in lieu of their regularly scheduled Telework day in order to telework on a different day within the same PP.

(3) When a normally scheduled teleworker's day to physically report to the employing office worksite falls on a holiday, it is not required to add an alternate day to the employee's requirement to physically report to the employing office worksite for that specific biweekly PP unless the supervisor identifies a business need for the employee to report.

(4) Employees with an approved TA may telework additional days provided they do not exceed eight (8) days/PP.

(5) All employees may be authorized to work Situational/Non-Scheduled telework in response to specific duty status announcements issued by OPM or authorized USDA officials during periods of inclement weather or other emergency situations, or to maintain productivity during short-term situations.

(E) The BC has the right to direct that any teleworking employee report to his/her ODS on his/her scheduled teleworking day in order to meet operational needs.

Notice to report shall normally be given one (1) day in advance. When he/she is required to report to the traditional worksite on a regularly scheduled Telework day, the employee may request to work an additional Situational/Non-Scheduled day. The supervisor shall approve/disapprove the request based on business considerations. When the Agency requires an employee to be present on a day when the employee is already teleworking, that employee shall receive no more than two (2) hours to arrive at his/her ODS. Such travel time shall be compensable as hours of work. Mileage for a privately-owned vehicle between the ODS and Telework site shall not be reimbursable.

(F) Employees must sign into and maintain connectivity. Such connectivity must occur through the use of an Agency-approved instant communicator and virtual telephone or similar technology. Teleworking employees are expected to be as available to the Employer, co-workers and customers by phone, government E-mail (use of personal email to perform duties is not authorized), instant communicator (e.g., Microsoft Teams), voicemail or other communications media during their scheduled daily tour of duty as when they work at their normal ODS. The Employer may contact the employee at any time he/she is on duty at the Telework site.

(G) The Agency shall not be liable for any violation of a local zoning ordinance or community association rule.

(H) All Teleworkers must recertify their TAs annually during the month of June and, if applicable, update their TAs. Upon renewal, and based on business needs, the Agency reserves the right to amend or adjust the employee's Telework schedule.

(I) When an employee with an approved Telework schedule transfers from the schedule-approving authority of one supervisor to that of another, the new supervisor may schedule the employee's Telework schedule considering the desires of the employee, Telework schedules by other employees in the new organizational unit, and the requirements of the organization. If the Agency may accommodate the employee's original Telework schedule in the new organization without disruption to the existing Telework schedule of the other employees, or negatively affecting workload or other business considerations, etc., the Agency may consider the accommodation.

(J) Employees shall have up to fifteen (15) minutes from the time they begin their login procedure to notify their supervisors of their telework start time, and again within five (5) minutes of their end of tour of duty time. If the employee has difficulty logging into the system, the employee must immediately notify his/her supervisor/designee by telephone of such difficulty.

SECTION VI - TERMINATING PARTICIPATION IN TELEWORK

(A) When the Agency terminates a TA, where practical the Agency must provide the employee a written documented explanation and allow him/her at least seven (7) calendar days advance notice, to allow the employee an opportunity to arrange transportation to commute to the work site on those days that were his/her terminated Telework days.

SECTION VII - OFFICE CLOSURES/INTERRUPTED SERVICE

(A) Employees with a TA shall telework during inclement weather office closures. Employees should anticipate inclement weather and be telework ready.

(B) If an employee is unable to adequately perform his/her duties or responsibilities while in Telework status, the employee must immediately notify his/her immediate supervisor or designee by telephone.

(C) If there is a disruption of services at the Telework site and the employee cannot continue due to loss of contact with the work site, the employee must notify his/her immediate supervisor or designee that he/she is having technical difficulties. The employee shall have one (1) hour from that notice to regain connectivity. If at the end of that one (1) hour the employee has not regained connectivity, the Agency shall offer the employee the option of coming to the work site, or requesting leave for the remainder of the workday.

(D) Although the Agency shall not normally consider an employee's commute time to and from the traditional work site as duty time, whenever an employee must come to work on a previously scheduled Telework day, if the return to work is due to USDA technical difficulties the Agency shall consider up to two (2) hours of the employee's commute time to the traditional work site as duty time.

SECTION VIII - BLOCK OUT

Supervisors shall identify those Teleworking employees with critical work needs which may preclude them from teleworking at certain times during the work year.

SECTION IX - REMOTE WORK POLICY

(A) Remote Work Defined: Remote Work is an arrangement under which USDA employees are scheduled to perform their position's job duties at an approved alternate worksite, typically the employee's residence. The remote worksite may be within or outside of the local commuting area of the Mission Area, agency, or staff office's worksite. Remote Work employees are expected to work at a designated approved location, typically the employee's residence, on a regular and continuing basis.

(B) Remote Work Procedures:

(1) Although remote employees generally are not expected to report to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite, the supervisor has the right to direct that a Remote Work employee report to an alternate work site in order to meet business needs.

(a) Notice to report shall normally be given one (1) day in advance.

(b) When the Agency requires an employee with an ODS within the local commuting area to be present at an alternate work site on the same day, that employee shall receive no more than two (2) hours to arrive unless the supervisor finds and approves a need for additional time. Such travel time shall be compensable as hours of work.

(2) Remote work arrangements should be cost-neutral or low-cost, to the extent practical, after factoring in the net cost savings accrued moving each employee to a remote arrangement. Supervisors should minimize official travel between the remote work location and the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite unless necessary to accomplish mission-critical or operational needs or where alternative virtual communication means (e.g., teleconference, virtual meetings) are not suitable or available.

(3) When travel is required, clear communication between the employee and supervisor will ensure an accurate understanding of mutual responsibilities and obligations. When a Mission Area, agency, or staff office authorizes a remote employee to travel to an office worksite for official duty, the agency will pay travel costs consistent with applicable travel regulations and policies.

(4) Remote employees must be treated equitably for appraisals of job performance, training, awards, reassignment, promotions, changes in grade, work requirements, approval of overtime work, flexible and compressed work schedules, and other actions within management's discretion. Remote employees are entitled to receive progress reviews and annual performance appraisals from their supervisors in accordance with USDA's performance management policies.

(C) Establishing or Changing a Remote Work Arrangement

(1) When creating a Job Opportunity Announcement (JOA), the Agency shall, in accordance with DR 4080-811-002, identify:

(a) Whether the position is eligible for a Telework or Remote Work arrangement; and

(b) Whether a Remote Work arrangement is required for the position.

Candidates accepting a position where a Remote Work arrangement is required must accept the arrangement as a condition of employment.

(2) USDA employees may request to work remotely, to change an existing remote work arrangement, or to terminate their remote work arrangement. Absent urgent circumstances and in accordance with the terms of an applicable CBA, employee requests to change their remote work location or remote work arrangement is limited to once every 6 months. The employee requesting a change must:

(a) Discuss the request with their supervisor. Changing the employee's duty station likely will affect the employee in several ways (e.g., locality pay, Reduction-in-Force (RIF) competitive area, bargaining unit status, unemployment compensation). When discussing such requests with the employee, management must address other available workplace flexibilities, including but not limited to, alternative work schedules, details, leave options (e.g., extended leave without pay (LWOP), and shared leave programs.

(b) The employee then may submit a request for a remote work arrangement, change to a remote work arrangement, or termination of a remote work arrangement in writing. The request must include the proposed duty station and effective date.

(3) To the extent the eligibility criteria in DR 4080-811-002 are met, supervisors normally will approve requests to set up a remote work arrangement from employees occupying positions that are remote-eligible. Supervisors may consider, however, whether there is a need to limit the geographic location of the duty station for the remote work arrangement due to travel or other mission requirements.

(4) Supervisory considerations of employee requests to change or terminate a remote work arrangement include:

(a) That the proposed creation or change of a remote work arrangement does not negatively affect the Mission Area, agency, or staff office's budget or ability to execute its mission; and

(b) Requests to terminate a remote work arrangement may be denied due to space limitations within a Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite.

(5) Generally, to the extent the eligibility criteria in DR 4080-811-002 are present, employees may be considered eligible for a Remote Work arrangement. However, an employee becomes permanently ineligible for a Remote Work arrangement if they have been formally disciplined for either:

(a) A violation of Subpart G, Misuse of Position, of the Standards for Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computing device to include cell phones and tablets or while performing official, Federal Government duties; or

(b) Absence without leave (AWOL) for five (5) or more days in any calendar year.

(6) Performance and Conduct. Employees on remote work arrangements are subject to the same laws, rules, regulations, and policies that address performance deficiencies and employee misconduct.

(7) In USDA, appeals to a denial of a request for a remote work arrangement are governed by the Negotiated Grievance Procedure of the applicable CBA.

(D) Pay, Holiday, and Time and Attendance

(1) The basic rate of pay of a remote employee is determined by the employee's base pay rate, the applicable locality pay rate and any special pay rate associated with the employee's ODS of record, as recorded on the employee's OPM Standard Form (SF)-50, Notification of Personnel Action. For remote employees, the official worksite typically is their residence.

(2) Teleworkers and Remote Workers are required to follow Departmental policies and procedures for requesting and using approved leave. Leave should be requested and approved in accordance with standard leave approval procedures, with leave hours accurately recorded in the time and attendance system.

(3) Mission Areas, agencies, and staff offices generally should not pay relocation expenses related to remote work arrangements such as expenses to relocate to a new ODS or to return to the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite when such arrangements were requested by the employee and are not the result of a directed reassignment.

(4) Remote work employees traveling on official business are eligible for the same travel benefits as non-remote work employees. Supervisors should, whenever possible, minimize official travel for remote employees. Alternate communication technologies should be leveraged to the greatest extent possible to minimize travel unless necessary.

(5) Remote work employees generally will not have an assigned or dedicated workspace at the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite. Performance issues of remote employees will be addressed in accordance with USDA policies, regulations, and applicable CBA provisions. Absent exigent circumstances, supervisors are expected to allow the employee to continue as a remote employee while addressing performance or conduct issues in accordance with USDA policies and in accordance with the terms and provisions of any applicable CBA.

(6) All required training and travel for remote employees as determined by the supervisor (e.g., mandatory participation at meetings or conferences at the Mission Area, agency, or staff office worksite) will be subject to normal training approval requests, applicable travel regulations, and Mission Area, agency, or staff office funding.

(7) Remote work employees may be eligible for Workers' Compensation benefits for work-related injuries or illnesses sustained while in the performance of duty under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act which is administered by the U.S. Department of Labor's Office of Workers' Compensation Programs (OWCP). For further information, see 5 U.S.C. 81.

(E) Roles and Responsibilities

Teleworkers and Remote Workers shall:

(1) Follow the conditions of their approved TA or Remote Work agreement;

(2) Follow USDA safety requirements and ensure proper security of USDA equipment, information, and materials;

(3) Provide the same level of support, availability, and accessibility to customers, coworkers, and their supervisor(s) as if working at a USDA official duty location;

(4) Meet organizational and individual work requirements as established (e.g., customer service, time frame for returning phone calls, voicemail messages, and email communication), staff meeting attendance, duty hours, and accurately coding time and attendance;

(5) Complete all applicable mandatory training courses;

(6) Ensure appropriate arrangements for the care of dependents while teleworking. Telework or Remote Work is not a substitute for dependent care.

However, an employee is not precluded from having a caregiver in the home who provides care to the dependent(s) while the employee works. Also, a dependent may be permitted in the home provided they do not require constant supervision or care (i.e., older child or adolescent) and their presence does not disrupt the ability to work effectively;

- (7) Ensure the alternate worksite provides adequate connectivity and technology to accomplish work tasks. Employees are expected to provide internet service and other general utility costs at their own expense;
- (8) Acknowledge, in the applicable TA or organizational Remote Work agreement form that they are bound by the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch while teleworking or working remotely; and
- (9) Understand that travel provisions applicable to employees working at an ODS also apply to Teleworkers and Remote Workers. A Teleworker or Remote Worker who is directed to travel to another worksite (e.g., ODS) during their regularly scheduled basic tour of duty would have the travel hours credited as hours of work. Similarly, Teleworkers who are required to travel to the official duty location after their regularly scheduled telework basic tour of duty to perform irregular or occasional overtime work are entitled to at least two (2) hours of overtime pay or compensatory time off (5 CFR § 550.112 (h), Call-back overtime work, and 5 CFR 551.401(e)).

NEGOTIATED AGREEMENT ON TELEWORK
(Standalone Agreement)

RMA and NFFE Local 858

March 3, 2022

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN THE NATIONAL FEDERATION OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEES (NFFE) LOCAL 858 (“UNION”)
AND RISK MANAGEMENT AGENCY (RMA) KANSAS CITY (“AGENCY”)

This Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) represents the agreement between the Parties named above regarding the Agency’s implementation of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), Departmental Regulation 4080-811-002, Telework and Remote Work Programs, with the effective date of November 22, 2021 (DR 4080-811-002). This MOU supersedes all previous agreements and past practices in conflict with DR 4080-811-002 and the provisions of this MOU.

1. Purpose:

The purpose of this MOU is to rescind Article XXVI of the Parties’ Negotiated Agreement with the effective date of February 3, 2012, and adopt the provisions of DR 4080-811-002 in its entirety, which expands telework options to permit eligible employees to telework up to eight (8) days per bi-weekly pay period and to implement the USDA Remote Work Program for eligible employees, based on the duties of their position, with the certain additional provisions that follow.

2. Additional Provisions:

- A. Within thirty (30) calendar days of the effective date of this MOU, the Agency will inform employees in writing whether their position is eligible for telework, remote work and/or both. Based on the duties of the employee’s position:

Telework options may include:

- (1) Eligible for telework up to eight (8) days per pay period.
- (2) Eligible for telework up to a specified number of days per pay period as identified by the supervisor.
- (3) Eligible for situational or ad hoc telework.
- (4) Not eligible for telework for the reason(s) per 4.f(3) and 4.f(4) of DR 4080-811-002

Remote Work options may include:

- (1) Eligible for remote work.
- (2) Eligible for remote work with specified limitation(s) that will be identified by the supervisor).

- (3) Ineligible for remote work for the reason(s) per 8.c, 8.d, and 8.e of DR 4080-811-002

Note: All remote work eligible positions are also deemed to be eligible for telework. Employees that do not elect remote work but do elect telework, will work directly with their supervisor to establish their individual telework plan.

- B. The position eligibility notification document provided to each employee will inform the employee as to their eligibility for remote work (and eligibility for telework if the employee's position is not eligible for remote work) and will include the supervisor's explanation of the reason for ineligibility (if applicable) or remote work limitations (if applicable).
- C. RMA personnel assigned to a Regional Office or Regional Compliance Office are limited to having a remote duty location that is within the respective Regional Office's or Regional Compliance Office's geographic States or Territory Served service area (see below).
- Regional Office, Jackson, Mississippi: States Served: Arkansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Tennessee.
 - Regional Office, Raleigh, North Carolina: States Served: Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Virginia, and West Virginia.
 - Central Regional Compliance Office, Kansas City, Missouri: States Served: Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, and Nebraska.
 - Eastern Regional Compliance Office, Raleigh, North Carolina: States/Territory Served: Alabama, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Puerto Rico, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Vermont, Virginia, and West Virginia.

Note: There is a general geographic, INCONUS restriction. Any employee requests for a remote work location in Alaska, Hawaii, or Puerto Rico will be considered on a case-by-case basis and the request must be approved by the Associate Administrator.

- D. Within thirty (30) calendar days following receipt of the notice advising an employee of their position's eligibility for telework and/or remote work, the employee will complete an electronic Telework and/or Remote Work Request in the Telework Management System (TMS) (or successor telework/remote work management system) and attach their election form for their supervisor's review and approval. If the employee does not elect to participate in the Telework or Remote Work Program, when initially offered, there is no restriction as to when an employee may make a future request to participate.

- E. Within ten (10) business days after receiving an employee's Telework and/or Remote Work Request, the supervisor will review the information and approve or disapprove the employee's request in TMS. If the election is disapproved or modified, the supervisor will provide a written explanation as to the reason(s) for the denial or modification.
- F. In the event an employee wishes to increase the number of days in the office, the request for telework agreement change will be given with a minimum of forty-five (45) calendar days advance written notification. The supervisor will review the request and advise the employee in writing as to the final determination.
- G. In the event an employee who is teleworking on a regular and recurring basis wishes to discontinue their participation in the Telework Program and work in the office, a dedicated workspace may be delayed based on space limitations. And if there are multiple dedicated workspace requests pending, the requests will be considered on a first come first serve basis.
- H. Employees may request to work remotely, to change an existing remote work arrangement, or to terminate their remote work arrangement. Absent urgent circumstances, (e.g., a major quality of life issue such as illness of a family member, spouse needing to move to obtain or maintain a job, etc.), the employee's ability to request a change to their remote work location or remote work arrangement is limited to once every six (6) months. The employee's request to start, change or terminate remote work arrangement must be in writing. The request must include the proposed duty station, effective date and when applicable, the associated quality of life circumstance. Supervisors must render a written decision on an employee's request for a voluntary change within two (2) pay periods.
- I. RMA will not maintain vacant or unused space in a USDA facility for the purpose of accommodating employee requests to terminate a remote work arrangement. When on an occasional basis a remote employee is required by the supervisor to report to an office worksite location, the remote employee will be provided access to office hoteling space. Employee requests to terminate a remote work arrangement may be denied due to space limitations. If an employee's voluntary change to their remote work arrangement is approved and the change includes a return to the office worksite, when workspace is available, the employee will be allowed to return to the office worksite on a first come first serve basis.
- J. Employee requests to start, change, or terminate telework or remote work arrangements must be in writing. The request must include the proposed effective date. For remote work, the request must also include the proposed duty location or for requests to return to a RMA office location, the request must include the proposed office worksite to which the employee would like to return.

- K. Telework and remote work employees will be available during scheduled work hours by telephone, email, and other applicable agency-approved technology and communication methods (e.g., Microsoft Teams) to communicate with their supervisor and complete their work and to be as accessible as they would be in an official agency worksite. Barring exigent circumstances (e.g., childcare, already scheduled medical appointments, etc.) employees will be required to change their normal schedule when notified by a supervisor twenty- four (24) hours in advance of meetings or training that fall outside of their normal tour of duty. Supervisors will make every effort to give employees as much notice as possible.
- L. When the Agency requires a remote employee to travel to an office worksite for official duty, the agency will pay travel costs consistent with applicable travel regulations and policies.
- M. Employees who telework three (3) or more days per week and remote work employees who are required by the Agency to report to an office worksite on occasional basis will use office hoteling space (office hoteling space features a shared office workspace environment) when working from their office worksite location. Employees who telework two (2) or fewer days per week will be assigned a dedicated workspace at their office worksite location.
- N. Employees are required to accurately record their time worked and leave hours in the time and attendance system.
- O. Telework and remote work employees will be provided with the necessary computer equipment to complete their work assignments. Provided that the items are on hand, remote work employees may request and receive permission to relocate government furnished items (such as sit/stand desks, chairs, docking station, two (2) computer monitors, keyboard, mouse, etc.) from the office worksite location to the remote employee's approved alternate worksite (typically the employee's residence). Unless specifically authorized and approved by RMA Management, telework and remote work employees will not be provided office equipment (e.g., printers, scanners, etc.)

Note: Remote employees are responsible to take reasonable care of any government furnished equipment and/or government furnished item(s) that they use in their approved alternate worksite. And upon leaving RMA and or upon termination of the remote work arrangement, remote employee must return the government furnished equipment and/or government furnished item(s) to the designated office worksite location.

- P. Telework and remote work employees will be responsible for providing an appropriate workspace and furnishing at their alternate worksite location unless the employee has requested and received approval for some form of specialized equipment or furnishing through the reasonable accommodation process.
- Q. RMA will not be responsible for reimbursing telework and remote work employees for any costs that are associated with the employee using their home residence as a telework or remote work site (e.g., home Internet service, office equipment, maintenance, insurance, utilities, etc.). Telework and remote employees will pay any additional expenses associated with working at the alternate worksite.
- R. The Agency will provide telework or remote work employees with routine supplies and materials needed to complete their work assignments at their alternate worksite.
- S. With the Associate Administrator's concurrence, a limited amount of administrative leave may be granted to a remote work employee who is prevented from working due to emergency circumstances that are beyond the employee's control (such as an internet or power outage at their official worksite – usually the employee's residence) and as a result the employee does not have any work that can be completed and/or they cannot safely travel to an alternate worksite that will allow them to continue working.

This MOU will take effect upon Agency Head approval or on the thirty-first (31st) calendar day after execution, whichever comes first. This MOU will terminate and become null and void upon the expiration date of DR 4080-811-002 "Telework and Remote Work Programs" (effective November 22, 2021), or when superseded by the implementation of a new CBA, whichever comes first.

Department of Commerce
Supplemental Documents

January 2024 Submission

(1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

- The Department’s headquarters employees perform approximately half their work hours in person each pay period, and the Department expects headquarters in-person work hours to average above 50% in the coming year. Note: Since October 2023, the pay period average for in person work hours is ~47%, which is slightly depressed due to the volume of end-of-year leave logged; this rate excludes BEA, Census, and USPTO because an overwhelming majority of employees telework on a full-time basis either due to Suitland, MD facility construction (BEA and Census) or congressionally authorized telework programs (USPTO).
- Since March 2022, the Department has operated with a baseline of at least six days expected in the office per pay period. The Department has a formal process for bureaus to request special considerations for additional telework flexibility. Requests must be limited and contain recruitment and retention related justifications, metrics, and information about longstanding work practices, including negotiated union commitments.
- In the next 6 weeks, the Deputy Secretary and senior leadership will assess the performance of current policies and special considerations (variations).

(2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

- Senior leadership will consider updates to the Department’s overarching Telework and Remote Work Plan, (published in December 2021, with additional guidance issued in April 2022).
 - In particular, the Deputy Secretary and senior leadership will reassess variation waivers for special considerations granted between April 2022 and December 2023. Continued approval for variations from the telework baseline described above will only be considered if the requesting bureau provides documented metrics to support the variation request and senior Department leadership assesses there to be a mission-critical need for approval. Metrics must demonstrate mission delivery risk when justifying exceptions relating to critical recruitment and retention issues, workspace availability concerns, or for telework practices that were established prior to the COVID-19 pandemic.
 - Senior leadership will continue to balance the criticality of meaningful in-person interactions with the need to consider mission-driven work arrangement flexibilities to recruit and retain: 1) in demand technical skillsets, such as those implementing landmark legislation; and 2) non-public facing administrative occupations where interagency competition is steep and other agencies sometimes exercise special compensation authority.
 - New requests for variances from the baseline guidance will be thoroughly reviewed and only issued if the criteria described above are met.

- The Deputy Secretary and Senior Leadership will continuously monitor compliance and implementation of current policies.
- Additionally, as part of comprehensive future space planning, the Department is modifying its main HQ building with five pilot alternative work environments to increase in-person collaboration opportunities. The new space will be functional by mid-2024.

(3) Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

- The Department will add a monthly review of implementation of telework policies to the Department Management Council, which consists of the senior career leadership in the Department and is led by the Deputy Secretary.
- The Department's senior leadership continues to monitor work environment policies and data, including via Deputy Secretary briefings. Managers are responsible for ensuring compliance with telework agreements and Department leadership are expected to communicate expectations for in-person work hours with bureaus and component offices.
- Every 3 months, the Department reminds all employee and supervisors of appropriate timecard coding practices to continue to increase the accuracy of data.
- In bi-weekly meetings of the Department's Performance Excellence Council, our performance and customer experience community continue to monitor existing mission delivery performance measures, including those reported via Performance.gov; additionally, these experts consider additional methods for tracking organizational health and organizational performance.

I. SCOPE

This telework and remote work policy applies to all Department of Commerce (DOC) employees except for those employed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Commissioned Officer Corps (Title 5, United States Code (U.S.C.) §§ 2105 and 2101(1) and (3)).

II. PURPOSE

The policy provides broad DOC-wide policy guidance and direction for bureaus/operating units (OU) to use when designing, developing, and administering their specific telework and remote work implementation plan(s). The policy promotes: (1) recruiting and retaining the best possible workforce; (2) continuing operations during emergency conditions (such as in a pandemic); (3) reducing management costs related to employee turnover and absenteeism; (4) reducing real estate and transit costs; and (5) enhancing work/life balance by allowing employees to better manage their work and personal obligations.

III. COVERAGE

The policy covers the workplace flexibility arrangement of telework and remote work.

IV. EXCLUDED

Excluded from the policy is work performed while on temporary duty (TDY); mobile work, as defined in this policy; arrangements requested/approved through Department Administrative Order (DAO) 215-10, "Reasonable Accommodation Policy"; and work performed at an alternative location due to an evacuation order.

V. LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS

This policy is in effect when signed by the Director, Office of Human Resources Management and Chief Human Capital Officer (Director). The policy does not modify any telework past practice or collective bargaining agreement (CBA) between a bureau/OU and its union(s) consistent with Federal law or Government-wide rule or regulation. In bureaus/OUTs where a labor organization (union) represents employees, management is obligated to notify the union, and upon request, negotiate over impact and implementation (I&I) of the policy, as required by law.

VI. THE TELEWORK ENHANCEMENT ACT of 2010

On December 9, 2010, President Obama signed Public Law 111-292, the Telework Enhancement Act \(Act\) of 2010. Telework is defined and authorized by the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, which is now codified within 5 U.S.C. Chapter 65. The Act expands participation in telework and is a key factor in the Federal Government's ability to achieve greater flexibility in managing its workforce using telework. It requires agencies to establish a policy under which eligible employees may be authorized to telework; to determine the telework eligibility for all employees of the agency; and to notify all employees of their eligibility. The Act outlines three preconditions for participation: the employee (1) is deemed eligible, (2) is trained in telework, and (3) has an approved written telework agreement.

The Act makes a distinction between “eligibility” and “participation.” To participate, an employee must first be identified as eligible. An employee is assumed eligible under the Act unless: (1) they have been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year. The days do not have to be consecutive, just within the same year. The offense could have occurred at any time during their employment with the Federal Government. (See footnote 1 in Section VIII for definition of Officially Disciplined); (2) the employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties (see 5 U.S.C. §§ 6502\(a\)\(2\)\(A\) and \(B\)); or (3) the employee's performance does not comply with the terms of the telework agreement between management and the employee (see 5 U.S.C. § 6502\(b\)\(3\)).

An employee can meet the eligibility criteria in accordance with the Act, but the duties of their position may not be conducive or appropriate for teleworking. In such cases, the employee is not eligible to telework based upon the duties of their current position.

Note: Although remote work (as defined in the policy) is not considered to be telework within the meaning of the Act, the Department has determined that remote workers must meet the eligibility requirements for telework under the Act to work remotely.

VII. DEFINITIONS

Act of God – An act of God means an act of nature, including hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, wildfires, earthquakes, landslides, snowstorms, and avalanches (Title 5, Code of Federal Regulations \(CFR\) § 630.1602).

Approving Official – Designated by the head of each bureau/OU, the official authorized to approve individual telework agreements. In some cases, the approving official and the supervisor are the same person.

Alternative Worksite – Is generally considered an employee's approved telework site, or for a remote worker, the approved remote site (e.g. an employee's residence).

Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) – Overseas work arrangement where a Federal executive branch employee temporarily performs the work requirements and duties of their domestic Civil Service or Foreign Service (FS) position from an approved overseas location via a DETO Agreement. Employees have no authorization to telework from a foreign location without an approved DETO Agreement. DETO agreements are not needed for U.S. territories or possessions; however, the employee’s locality pay changes.

Eligible to Telework – All employees are considered eligible to telework, unless: (1) the employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year (5 U.S.C. § 6502(a)(2)(A)) (there are no exceptions); (2) the employee has been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties (5 U.S.C. § 6502(a)(2)(B)) (there are no exceptions); or (3) the employee’s performance does not comply with the terms of the telework agreement between the supervisor and the employee (5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3)).

ERG Member – Emergency Relocation Group member. A person (including alternates) who may be required to work during a Continuity of Operations (COOP) exercise or activation where they may report to an alternative site, or may be required to perform duties through telework, in order to perform agency essential function or other COOP required function(s).

Essential Functions – Functions that enable the Federal Government to provide vital services, exercise civil authority, maintain the safety and well-being of the general populace, and sustain the industrial/economic base in an emergency.

Evacuation Order – An agency may order one or more employees to evacuate their worksite and work from their homes (or alternative location mutually agreeable to the agency and employee) during a pandemic health crisis without regard to whether the agency and employee have a telework agreement in place when the order to evacuate is issued (Title 5, CFR § 550.409\(a\)). Under these circumstances, an agency may designate the employee’s home (or alternative location mutually agreeable to the agency and employee) as a safe haven, and provide evacuation payments to the employee. An agency must compute the evacuation payments, and determine the time period during which such payments will be made (Title 5, CFR § 550.404). An evacuated employee at a safe haven may be assigned to perform any work considered necessary or required to be performed during the evacuation period without regard to the employee’s grade/band, level, or title. The employee must have the necessary knowledge and skills to perform the assigned work. Failure or refusal to perform assigned work can be a basis for terminating evacuation payments, and disciplinary action. An evacuation order can be issued for up to 180 days and reissued if the situation still warrants one.

Hoteling – A telework arrangement in which employees are not assigned permanent space in their designated traditional worksite, but share offices and conference space as necessary when working at the traditional worksite. Such space is assigned by reservation, much like a hotel. Bureaus/OUs should consider using hoteling or other office sharing arrangement for employees who telework 4 days a week or more in a pay period.

Mobile Worker – An employee who, by the nature of their duties, do not have a designated traditional physical worksite, and typically use their home as their duty station. Due to the nature of their work, they are not considered telework-ready employees.

Note: This is different from ‘hoteling’ arrangements, in which frequent teleworkers use shared space when they are working at their designated traditional worksite.

Official Duty Station (aka Official Worksite) – It is the bureau/OU worksite for most employees, including a teleworker. For a remote worker, the official worksite is the alternative worksite to which the bureau/OU and the employee agreed (e.g. the employee’s residence). The official worksite is generally the location of the employee’s duty station as documented on an employee’s Standard Form (SF) 50, Notice of Personnel Action. The location of an employee’s position of record where the employee regularly performs their duties.

If the employee’s work involves recurring travel or their work location varies on a recurring basis, the duty station is the location where the work activities of the employee’s position of record are based. An employee’s official duty station determines the appropriate locality pay area for pay purposes for General Schedule or equivalent employees. It also impacts other expenses such as relocation and travel expenses under the Federal Travel Regulations (FTR), as well as local travel expenses.

Official Time – As defined in and authorized by Title 5, United States Code \(U.S.C.\) § 7131.

Operating Status Announcements – Are generally issued when weather or other emergency conditions prevent Federal employees from safely traveling to or safely performing work at an approved work location (5 U.S.C. 6329c\(b\)). The inability to safely travel to an approved work location may result in “closure” of a Federal office (i.e., closed to the public and non-emergency employees) for the full day or authorization of a delayed arrival. Authorization of early departure may be based on unsafe conditions at the work location or unsafe travel conditions affecting travel from the work location, both of which make it unsafe for the employee to continue to perform work at the location. Depending on the conditions that affect a workday, the various operating status announcements have different procedures and application to an employee’s workday.

Regular/Recurring Telework – Telework occurs as part of an ongoing regular schedule such that the employee typically teleworks on the same day(s) and works at the traditional worksite on the other days during each biweekly pay period. Employees must receive supervisor/manager approval for the schedule (and any modifications to it), but do not need to obtain additional separate approval for each day they telework.

Remote Worker – An alternative work arrangement by which an employee is scheduled to perform the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite (e.g., home, other alternative location) other than the employee’s traditional worksite, either within or outside of the locality pay area of the traditional worksite and does NOT physically report to the traditional worksite twice each bi-weekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis. The employee’s official duty station must be changed to the alternative worksite for pay purposes, relocation expenses, travel expenses, etc., and must be documented on the employee's SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, even if the alternative worksite is within the same locality pay area as the traditional worksite.

Note: All remote work outside the U.S. requires approval from the Department of State, Chief of Mission. See "DETO" definition.

Situational Telework – Approved telework performed on an occasional, one-time, or irregular basis. An employee may be approved to telework on a situational basis (not regular/recurring), but must have successfully completed the required DOC telework training or approved bureau/OU specific training via the Commerce Learning Center \(CLC\) or other system capable of tracking when employees have successfully completed the course. An employee must have a telework agreement in place before participating. "Unscheduled telework" is a specific form of situational telework. (See "Unscheduled Telework" definition)

Telework – Official definition in 5 U.S.C. § 6501(3), "The term 'telework' or 'teleworking' refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work." The employee must be scheduled to physically report to the bureau/OU traditional worksite at least twice each bi-weekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis. The employee must physically report to the traditional worksite unless excused by their supervisor for legitimate reasons (e.g., approved leave, meeting at an offsite location). The duty station of the employee remains the duty station of the traditional worksite.

Telework Agreement – A signed written agreement between the employee and their supervisor/manager which provides the terms of the telework arrangement and contains the requirements under Section XIII of this policy.

Telework Eligible Position – A position is an eligible position unless the official duties require on a daily basis (every workday) the direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the head of the bureau/OU; or the employee performs on-site activities that cannot be performed at an alternative worksite.

Telework-Ready Employee – An employee who occupies a telework-eligible position and has completed the required telework training; has a signed individual telework agreement; and has the necessary equipment, etc. at the alternative worksite to perform the duties and responsibilities of their position during their period of telework. This includes employees under a regular/recurring agreement and those under a situational agreement.

Temporary Duty (TDY) Location – A place, away from an employees' official duty station, where the employee is authorized to travel.

Traditional Worksite (aka agency worksite, regular worksite) – The official bureau/OU physical location where work activities are based, generally considered a centralized location of an employee's assigned organization. This is the physical location where the employee would work absent a telework or remote work arrangement.

Traditional Workers – Individuals who do not have a voluntary telework agreement and perform the duties and responsibilities of their position at the traditional worksite.

Unscheduled Telework – Is a form of “situational” telework in which eligible telework-ready employees may telework when an operating status announcement includes “unscheduled telework.” Employees must follow their bureau/operating unit’s policies and procedures (including required notification of the employee's supervisor) and subject to any applicable collective bargaining requirements (as consistent with law).

VIII. POLICY

The DOC recognizes that a well-managed, widely used telework program has the potential to lead to benefits such as: (1) improved marketability (as a more competitive and inclusive employer); (2) reduced commuting time (that can contribute to an improved quality of work/life balance); (3) cost savings (in areas such as recruitment and retention of employees); and (4) an improved Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP). The DOC supports and encourages telework as a major element in its efforts to reduce its facility space requirements, thereby reducing its energy consumption, greenhouse gas emissions, surface ozone, rent, and other operating costs.

The DOC telework policy allows for remote work, but emphasizes it is not an employee’s right to remote work even if the duties/responsibilities of their position are conducive for this type of arrangement. Supervisors/managers need to consider equity in the office, bureau/OU, and the DOC as a whole. Supervisors/managers need to consider the current and future financial impact of a different locality pay area on pay, possible relocation expenses under the FTR if the remote work arrangement is not successful, and travel expenses under FTR when a remote worker is required to report to the traditional worksite to attend meetings, team-building sessions, conferences, etc.

Close and ongoing communications between employees and management in all aspects of telework/remote work are essential for a successful work arrangement. The policy acknowledges that the employees and management are equally responsible for contributing to the success of the specific telework/remote work agreement.

The policy gives bureaus/OUTs maximum flexibility to support telework on a day-to-day basis and in periods where the traditional worksite is unavailable or less available to part of the workforce. The policy allows for remote work, but cautions supervisors/managers on approving it solely on the portability of the duties and responsibilities of the position. Decisions must be made holistically, considering equity among employees, economic impact to the traditional worksite area, and current and future financial obligations and risks.

A. General Policy

Participation in telework and remote work is open to all eligible employees without regard to race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy and gender identity), national origin, political affiliation, sexual orientation, marital status, disability, genetic information, age, membership in an employee organization, parental status, military service, or other non-merit factors.

It is DOC policy to allow eligible employees to work at alternative worksites (i.e., home, or other approved location) in lieu of their traditional worksite during an agreed upon regular/recurring time of their regular tour of duty, or on a situational basis, if the employee's duties are conducive for teleworking/remote working, and the employee has an approved telework/remote work agreement in place. Supervisors/managers are encouraged to support telework for eligible employees of at least 4 days each biweekly pay period.

Employees who telework must physically report to the traditional worksite on a regular/recurring basis at least twice each biweekly pay period to maintain the duty station of the traditional worksite for pay purposes etc., even if their alternative worksite is within the locality pay area of the traditional worksite.

To carry out this policy to the maximum extent, the bureaus/OUs must establish a Telework Implementation Plan (Plan) consistent with this policy, and have the option to include remote work. The plan must be filed with the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM). If a bureau/OU Plan is not filed, the bureau/OU will be considered as operating under the DOC Telework and Remote Work Plan.

An employee's decision to telework or remote work is voluntary unless it is a condition of employment (i.e., the employee is designated as an "emergency employee"), or is required to perform an agency essential function or other required function(s) as part of a COOP team, or is issued an evacuation order. In these instances, an employee may be required to work at home or at another approved alternative worksite.

B. Types of Telework

There are two types of telework: (1) routine telework in which telework occurs as part of an ongoing, regular schedule; and (2) situational telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked are not part of a previously approved regular/recurring telework schedule. This situational telework includes "unscheduled telework" in which DOC office(s) are open but under an "Unscheduled Telework" operating status announcement by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) or other appropriate authority.

Teleworkers must be scheduled to physically report to the traditional worksite on a regular/recurring basis at least twice each biweekly pay period regardless of whether their alternative worksite is within or not within the locality pay area. The employee must physically report to the traditional worksite unless excused by their supervisor for legitimate reasons (e.g., approved leave, meeting at an offsite location).

C. Eligibility

All DOC employees (except USPTO and NOAA Commissioned Officer Corps) who meet the definition of "employee" as defined in 5 U.S.C. § 2105 are covered by the policy, in accordance with the Act.

Exceptions. Employees who occupy positions for which telework/remote work is permitted may telework/remote work under this policy, unless they fall within the following categories:

1. The employee has been officially disciplined¹ for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year. The days do not have to be consecutive, just within the same year. The offense could have occurred at any time during an employee's employment with the Federal Government.
2. The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties² (see 5 U.S.C. §§ 6502(a)(2)(A) and (B));
3. The performance of the employee does not comply with the terms of the telework/remote work agreement between the supervisor and that employee³ (5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3)).

Precluded Due to the Nature of Work of the Position. While employees may be eligible because they meet the above requirements, they may be precluded from teleworking/remote working if the official duties of the position require on a daily basis (i.e., every workday):

1. Direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the agency head.
2. On-site activity that cannot be handled at an alternative worksite; or
3. Being a mobile worker (not eligible for telework due to the nature of their work).

D. Teleworking/Remote Working and Care for Elders, Children, or Other Dependents

If the elders, children, or other dependents residing with a teleworking/remote working employee can care for themselves for part of the workday, then their presence at the alternative worksite would not interfere with the employee performing their duties and responsibilities.

Teleworking/remote working employees who are responsible for caring for dependents at their home or other alternative worksite should coordinate with their supervisors to establish flexible schedules, to request appropriate leave, or to otherwise account for time spent engaging in dependent care.

¹ Definition of Officially Disciplined – A disciplinary action resulting in placement of a document in an employee's Official Personnel Folder (OPF); the ban on telework participation remains in effect as long as the document stays in an employee's OPF. A suspension or termination related to the items mentioned in PL 111-292 resulting in a document (SF-50) that permanently remains in the OPF would result in a permanent ban in telework participation.

² There are no exceptions for VIII.C.a.1 or VIII.C.a.2., above.

³ The length of this prohibition is up to the approving official.

E. Teleworkers, Remote Workers, Traditional Workers Are Treated the Same for Certain Purposes

1. Periodic appraisals of job performance of employees.
2. Training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees.
3. Work requirements; and
4. Other acts involving managerial discretion.

F. Performance Standards

Performance standards for telework-ready employees and remote workers must be the same as performance standards for traditional work employees. Expectations for performance should be clearly addressed in each employee's performance plan, and the performance plan should be reviewed to ensure the standards do not create inequities or inconsistencies between telework-ready/remote workers and traditional work employees. All employees are held accountable for the results they produce.

G. Performance of Teleworkers/Remote Workers

An employee will not be authorized to telework if their performance does not comply with the terms of the telework agreement (5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3)). While remote work is not specifically covered under 5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3), it is the policy of the Department that employees will not be authorized to remote work if their performance does not comply with the terms of their remote work agreement.

H. Remote Work

Remote work is not an entitlement, even if the duties of the position are conducive to this type of arrangement. These employees have received approval from their bureau/OU to perform the duties of their position at an alternative worksite (i.e., their home) 100 percent of the time without a requirement to physically report to the traditional worksite at least twice each bi-weekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis each pay period. The alternative worksite location becomes their official duty station for locality pay purposes, travel expenses, relocation expenses, etc., and must be documented on the employee's SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, even if the alternative worksite is within the locality pay area of the traditional worksite.

1. Approval Process. Bureaus/OU have authority to determine the review and approval process. However, it is recommended that policies make clear the criteria by which remote work arrangements will be evaluated and approved/disapproved to avoid claims of favoritism or unfair or inequitable practices. In the absence of a bureau/OU remote work policy, the bureau/OU must have the approving official be no lower than the first level senior executive service employee in the employee's chain of command.

It is recommended that bureau/OUTs consult with the Office of General Counsel (OGC) regarding remote work agreements when the alternative worksite is outside of the local commuting area of the traditional worksite, to ensure proper language is contained in the agreement to protect the Department if there is a need to terminate the remote work agreement.

Below are some items to consider in the review process:

- What is the percentage of the workforce that can reasonably work remotely without impact to mission or customer service?
- How will a remote work arrangement benefit the employee, the team, the organization, and the manager?
- How will remote workers communicate work progress on an ongoing basis to their supervisor, team members and other stakeholders?
- Are there work processes that need to be revised to incorporate remote work arrangements effectively?
- How will remote workers continue to access the resources they need to do their job?
- What support will employees need to meet job expectations in a remote work environment?
- How will managers interact with remote employees to ascertain whether employees are accomplishing their work at an acceptable level?
- What is the potential impact of the organization's physical footprint and plans for accommodating long-term fluctuations in the numbers of remote workers?
- What are the budgetary implications of a potential change of locality pay (i.e., locality payments, special rate supplements, and non-foreign area cost-of-living allowances)?
- What is the frequency with which remote workers will be required to visit the traditional worksite, and what are the budgetary implications of the associated travel costs (travel expenses under the Federal Travel Regulation (FTR) for employees working outside of the locality pay area, as well as reimbursement for local travel for employees working within the locality pay area but 50 miles or more away from the traditional worksite)?
Note: OPM recommends bringing remote workers into the traditional worksite at least biannually in order to build camaraderie, commitment to the mission, and productive communication among employees.
- What is the plan for accommodating remote workers with on-site workstations on those occasions when they are required to visit the traditional worksite;
- What are the budgetary (and associated mission-impacting) implications of potentially having to pay an employee's relocation expenses should management terminate the remote work arrangement?
- What is the proximity and access to a sensitive compartmented information facility (SCIF), as applicable?
- What is the proximity to an approved drug testing facility, as applicable?

2. Changing the Alternative Worksite. Remote workers may not change their alternative worksite without prior approval from their supervisor/manager. A change in worksite could require a change of duty station, which is a personnel action, requiring supervisory approval and documentation. An employee cannot independently change their duty station or enter into a remote work status simply by moving out of the local commuting area.

3. Providing Equipment. If the Job Opportunity Announcement (JOA) specified that the work would be performed remotely, then the bureau/OU must provide the employee with the equipment needed to effectively perform the duties of the position. If the bureau/OU is permitting remote work at the employee's request, the bureau/OU has the latitude to decide what equipment to offer; and it should be documented in the agreement.
4. Relocation Expenses. While the bureau/OU is generally not required to cover relocation expenses for employee-driven requests to work remotely on a full-time basis, relocation reimbursement may apply if the bureau/OU chooses to relocate the employee back to the traditional worksite. Responsibility for relocation expenses should be covered in the remote agreement, especially if the arrangement was initiated at the employee's request. It is recommended that the bureau/OU consult with the OGC about the payment of relocation expenses and the responsibility thereof, when the remote work agreement is terminated
5. Severance Pay. Remote work agreements should address severance pay. If a separated employee otherwise meets the conditions for severance pay eligibility in 5 CFR § 550.704, they may be entitled to severance pay as computed under 5 CFR § 550.707 unless the bureau/OU and employee enter into a written agreement in advance that provides otherwise. When a remote work arrangement is initiated at the request of an employee for personal reasons, it is recommended that the bureau/OU consult with the OGC regarding severance pay language in the agreement.
6. Travel/Relocation (General Services Administration). Remote work agreements should address travel/relocation expenses. Federal Travel/Relocation policies and regulations fall under the purview of the General Services Administration. Bureaus/OUTs must be aware that remote workers may be entitled to receive travel and relocation benefits under the Federal Travel Regulation (FTR), CFR 41, Chapters 300-304, depending on their location. Local travel costs, are not under the authority of the FTR and are provided under DOC Travel Policy.

When remote work is initiated at the employee's request to accommodate their personal circumstances it is recommended that the bureau/OU consult with the OGC about the payment of relocation expenses and the responsibility thereof, when the remote work agreement is terminated.

The FTR defines official station as:

Official station—An area defined by the agency that includes the location where the employee regularly performs their duties or an invitational traveler's home or regular place of business (see §301-1.2). The area may be a mileage radius around a particular point, a geographic boundary, or any other definite domain, provided no part of the area is more than 50 miles from where the employee regularly performs their duties or from an invitational traveler's home or regular place of business. If the employee's work involves recurring travel or varies on a recurring basis, the location where the work activities of the employee's position of record are based is considered the regular place of work.

7. Compensatory Time Off for Travel. Remote work agreements should address compensatory time off for travel. Employees who are officially ordered to travel away from their official worksite may be afforded compensatory time off for travel, in accordance with applicable law and regulations, based upon the approved travel itinerary.
8. Coding Time & Attendance (T&A). Remote work is not telework; therefore, is not coded as telework on a T&A record.

I. Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas

On June 7, 2016, the Department of State (DOS) distributed an Executive Secretary Memorandum, "Requirements for Executive Branch Employees Teleworking in Foreign Locations," known as a DETO (Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas) Agreement. Specifically, unless exempted by Presidential directive or legislation, Executive Branch Federal employees conducting official U.S. Government business in foreign countries are subject to the DOS's Chief of Mission authority, and their presence at an overseas post must be preapproved from the Chief of Mission. Employees have no authorization to work from a foreign location without an approved DETO Agreement and Official Chief of Mission approval. DETO agreements are not needed for U.S. territories and possessions; however, the employee's locality pay changes.

There are two types of DETOs: 1) Sponsored DETO – when a DOC employee is on U.S. Government orders of a spouse or partner; 2) Individual DETO – when a DOC employee is NOT on a U.S. Government order of a spouse or partner.

It is DOC policy that only Sponsored DETO Agreements will be considered, and the DETO must not incur any additional costs to the bureau/OU than it would otherwise cost for the employee to work at their normal location. Individual DETOs are not authorized. Before submitting a request for a Sponsored DETO to the DOS, the request must be approved by the Office of the Chief Information Officer (OCIO), the Office of Security (OSY), Employment and Labor Law Division/Office of the General Counsel, and OHRM.

Once DOC approvals are provided, the Head of the Bureau/OU must submit a request to the Director, requesting the DETO be submitted to the DOS for approval, along with the DOC approvals, the signed DETO Agreement, and the employee's position description or statement of duties. OHRM will draft a memo to the Executive Director of the DOS Regional Bureau. Upon approval of the Executive Director of the DOS Regional Bureau, the DOS will send the request to the Chief of Mission. Only after Chief of Mission approval, the employee submits a request through either the NSDD38 electronic system (for DETOs of 1 year or more), or through the e-country clearance system (for DETOs of less than 1 year).

The overseas duty station (overseas alternative worksite) must be documented on their SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action. Locality pay is only for the lower 48 states and Washington, D.C., plus Alaska, Hawaii, and the U.S. territories and possessions. DETO employees are not eligible for locality pay; they receive their appropriate GS/equivalent base pay. They are also not eligible for danger pay, or any other pay entitlements that a non-DETO employee would receive if assigned to the same overseas area.

The Department of State's policy that can be used as a guide is 3 Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM) 2370.

J. Pay and Leave

1. Locality Pay. An employee's locality rate of pay is based on the employee's official duty station (aka official worksite) and is determined in accordance with 5 CFR § 531.604\(b\). The bureau/OU must determine and designate the official duty station for an employee covered by a telework or remote work agreement using the criteria in VIII. N., below.
2. Premium Pay. The same premium pay rules apply to employees when they telework and remote work as when they work at the traditional worksite.

Telework-ready and remote work employees who perform work while under an Operating Status of closed, delayed arrival, early departure, etc. are not entitled to receive overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time off in lieu of overtime payment for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours.

3. Leave. The same leave regulations apply to employees when they telework and remote work as when they work at the traditional worksite. Employees must follow the same procedures as traditional work employees for requesting and obtaining leave approval, in compliance with their office procedures, or the terms of an applicable CBA.

K. Weather and Safety Leave

OPM's weather and safety leave regulations, implementing the provision of 5 U.S.C. § 6329c, the Administrative Leave Act of 2016, section (b), "Leave for Weather and Safety Issues," states that all telework program participants will be ineligible for weather and safety leave when a closure is announced except in rare circumstances when one of the exceptions under 5 CFR § 630.1605\(a\)\(2\) is applicable. Since the rationale for teleworkers is the same for remote workers the following applies:

1. Bureaus/OUs cannot provide weather and safety leave to a telework-ready or a remote worker who is able to continue working safely at an approved alternative worksite during severe weather or other emergency situations. Generally, telework-ready and remote work employees will not receive weather and safety leave, since they are not usually prevented from performing work at an approved location due to a weather or other safety-related emergency.

2. Written agreements must indicate, in accordance with bureau/OU policy and any applicable CBAs, that telework-ready and remote work employees are required to work from their alternative worksite, if their alternative worksite is their home, when their traditional worksite is closed by other than Federal law/Executive order. Telework-ready and remote work employees must follow their written agreements.
3. On a case-by-case basis, the supervisor should excuse a telework-ready or remote work employee from duty without charge to paid personal leave or loss of pay during an emergency, if the employee is prevented from working when: (1) the emergency adversely affects the alternative worksite (e.g., disruption of electricity, or network connection problems that prevent telework); or (2) the telework-ready or remote work employee's duties are such that they cannot continue to work without contact with individuals at the traditional worksite, and those individuals are not present.
4. If the telework-ready or remote work employee faces a personal reason that prevents them from working successfully at the alternative worksite, the employee may request the appropriate leave (annual, sick, compensatory, credit hours, compensatory time for travel). The employee also may request to change their alternative work schedule, if applicable.
5. Systems are to be in place to support telework/remote work in an emergency, including a communication process to notify COOP personnel, emergency, and non-emergency employees of the activation of the bureau/OU's emergency plan, and the bureau/OU's "operating status" during the emergency.
6. As with traditional worksite employees, telework and remote work employees may not receive weather and safety leave for hours during which they are on other preapproved leave (paid or unpaid) or paid time off (5 CFR 630.1606\(c\)).

L. Operating Status Announcement and Telework/Remote Work

In the Washington, D.C. area, OPM-issued operating status announcements apply to employees working in all executive agencies with offices located inside the Washington Capital Beltway. Employees working in offices located outside of the Washington Capital Beltway must follow the operating status announcements issued by their bureau/OU. While Federal Executive Boards (FEBs) do not cover the entire United States, FEBs are currently located in 28 metropolitan areas that are major centers of Federal activity. In these areas, the FEB provides up-to-date, accurate, and consistent information so Federal field office heads can make informed decisions on operating status announcements for their employees in those areas.

1. Unscheduled Telework. This type of telework allows telework-ready employees to work from home or at an approved alternative location upon notification to their supervisor in accordance with the terms of the written agreement, and/or applicable CBA.

2. Federal/DOC Offices Are Closed. Telework-ready employees working from home must work when Federal/DOC offices in their local commuting area are closed (other than for Federal holidays or holidays declared by Executive order), even if it is not the employee's regularly scheduled telework day. Telework-ready also includes employees under a situational telework agreement. However, on a case-by-case basis, weather and safety leave may be provided if the employee is unable to continue working. (See Section VIII.K.3 above.)
3. Early Dismissal/Delayed Arrival. Teleworkers working from their homes, are not dismissed from duty for any part of the workday. However, on a case-by-case basis, supervisors may grant weather and safety leave for all or part of the day if the employee is unable to continue working. (See Section VIII.K.3 above.)

Note: Remote workers must work from their alternative worksite during any of the above operating announcements, unless their duties are such that they cannot continue to work without contact with individuals at the traditional worksite, and those individuals are not present. Remote workers must discuss other possible work duties with their supervisors and receive approval for weather and safety leave.

M. Emergency at the Alternative Worksite

When an emergency affects only the alternative worksite for a major portion of the workday, the telework-ready employee may be expected to report to the traditional worksite, or to another approved alternative worksite, or request approval of paid personal leave, as applicable (i.e., annual, compensatory time, compensatory time off for travel, credit hours, etc.). However, on a case-by-case basis, the supervisor may grant an appropriate form of excused absence if the employee is unable to continue working. (See Section VIII.K.3.) The supervisor may also grant an appropriate form of excused absence if the remote worker is unable to continue working.

N. The Official Duty Station

The location of an employee's position of record where the employee regularly performs their duties. If the employee's work involves recurring travel or their work location varies on a recurring basis, the duty station is the location where the work activities of the employee's position of record are based, as approved by their supervisor/manager. An employee's official duty station determines the appropriate locality pay area for pay purposes for General Schedule or equivalent employees (Title 5, CFR § 531.605). It also impacts other expenses such as relocation and travel expenses under the FTR.

1. Documentation. The official duty station must be documented on the employee's SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action.
2. Temporary Details. There is no change to the official duty station for employees temporarily detailed to a position in a different location without a change in the permanent position of record. They maintain the locality pay area of the permanent position of record. For additional information on official duty stations, please see http://www.opm.gov/oca/pay/html/Official_Duty_Station.asp.

O. Determining the Official Duty Station

The official duty station is the location of the traditional worksite as long as the employee is scheduled to physically report to the bureau/OU traditional worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis. The employee must physically report to the traditional worksite unless excused by their supervisor for legitimate reasons (e.g., approved leave, meeting at an offsite location).

1. The official duty station is the alternative worksite (i.e., home or other alternative worksite) if the employee does NOT meet the requirement above and report at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis to the traditional worksite, unless excused by their supervisor for a legitimate reason. This is true even if the alternative worksite is within the same locality pay area.

When an employee does not meet the requirement above and report to the traditional worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis, unless excused by their supervisor for a legitimate reason, the employee is not a teleworker, they are a remote worker.

2. In the case of an employee whose work location varies on a recurring basis, the employee does not need to report at least twice each bi-weekly pay period at the traditional worksite as long as the employee is regularly performing work within the locality pay area for the traditional worksite.

Note: Employees occupying Senior Executive Service (SES) positions, Senior Level (SL) positions, and Scientific or Professional (ST) positions do not receive locality pay. Therefore, there are no pay implications if these employees work the entire 80 hours of the pay period in a different locality pay area than their official duty station. They continue to receive the same pay.

P. Exception to a Change in the Duty Station Rule for a Temporary Situation

In certain temporary situations, a bureau/OU may continue to designate the location of the traditional worksite as the official duty station of a teleworker, even though the employee is not able to report to the traditional worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis.

Note: The fact that an employee may receive lesser pay or benefits if the official duty station is changed to the temporary worksite location is not a basis or justification for using this exception.

The intent of this exception is to address temporary situations in which an employee is expected to return to their regular worksite when the temporary situation or agreed upon time period has concluded.

In making these determinations, supervisors/managers need to consider pay equity between the employee receiving this exception and other employees who are working in the same locality pay area as either their traditional worksite location or their permanent alternative worksite location. The temporary exception should generally be used only in cases where: (1) the employee is expected to return to their regular worksite (i.e. telework location, remote work location, traditional worksite) in the near future, or (2) the employee is expected to continue working at the temporary worksite but will be able to report to the regular worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis in the near future. Examples of appropriate temporary situations include:

- Recovery from an injury or medical condition;
- Emergencies that prevent an employee from regularly commuting to the traditional worksite or working at their alternative worksite, such as in a severe weather emergency or a pandemic health crisis. (For instance, in the aftermath of a hurricane or flood, an employee may be forced to temporarily relocate, making commuting to the regular worksite twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis not possible. If the employing bureau/OU sets up telework arrangements for the employee, a temporary exception to the twice-a-pay-period requirement would be appropriate.);
- An extended period of approved absence from work (e.g., paid leave);
- A period in which the employee is in TDY status away from their regular worksite; or
- A period during which the employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than their regular worksite.

Q. Establishing the Work Schedule

Work schedules identify the days and times an employee will work while teleworking or remote working in the same manner as identified for working at the traditional worksite. Normally, telework and remote work schedules parallel those at the traditional worksite; however, they can differ to meet the needs of the organization and participating employees' needs. Work schedules may also include fixed times during the day for supervisor–employee telephone conversations, team meetings, etc. that may be helpful to ensure ongoing communication, and should be similar to the basic level of interaction with those at the traditional worksite. For additional information on hours of duty, please visit DOC's "Alternative work schedules."

IX. THE BUREAU/OPERATING UNIT TELEWORK IMPLEMENTATION PLAN

Prior to implementing a bureau/OU telework program, the bureau/OU must submit a Telework Implementation Plan (Plan) to OHRM for compliance review/approval. If a bureau/OU Plan is not filed, the bureau/OU will be considered as operating under this DOC Telework and Remote Work Plan.

Each bureau/OU Plan must:

1. Indicate that the Telework Assessment Tool (See Appendix A) is a tool for use by the appropriate management official and the employee in helping to determine the appropriateness of the employee teleworking. It should be provided to employees prior to their submission of a request to telework.

2. Indicate that the duration of the written agreement is to be established by the employee and the approving official. The agreement must include the duration of the individual telework agreement.
3. Encourage supervisors/managers to permit telework-ready employees to telework on a regular/recurring and/or situational basis for at least 4 days per biweekly pay period. Each situation must be evaluated on the unique facts of the situation.
4. Indicate procedures for notifying each employee of their eligibility or ineligibility to telework. All employees are assumed eligible to telework unless they fall under one of the three statutory bars to telework or are determined to be precluded from teleworking due to the nature of their position. Such determinations must be made position-by-position, based on the duties of the position and the needs of the service.
5. Advise employees that agreeing to an individual telework agreement is voluntary unless telework is a condition of employment (emergency or COOP designation). Note: There are situations when an employee without a telework agreement may be required to work from an alternative worksite (e.g., home) such as under evacuation orders⁴. This is not considered telework under the terms of this policy. Under an evacuation order, the employee may be required to do any work for which the employee is qualified.
6. Require the agreement to provide that an employee may not be authorized to telework if their performance does not comply with the terms of the agreement between the approving official and themselves.
7. Require the agreement to stipulate that the employee must be performing at the Fully Successful (or equivalent) level or better to telework. This can be assumed to be true for employees without a DOC rating of record; however, once they receive a rating of record, the Fully Successful or equivalent level or better must be met to continue teleworking.
8. Advise telework-ready employees they are required to work when their traditional worksite is closed for reasons other than a Federal holiday or Executive order, even if it is not their regular telework day.
9. Establish policies for addressing requests from employees to become remote workers, and governing the conditions of that arrangement.
10. Establish a communications process to notify employees designated as COOP emergency relocation group (ERG) members or “emergency” personnel about telework flexibilities.
11. Establish and include a process for approving telework or remote work arrangements (e.g., applications, approval levels, timelines for approval/denial, training requirements, and written agreements).

12. Identify process for changing/modifying telework arrangements (schedules or locations).
13. Require the employee to successfully complete the required training prior to approval of their written agreement.
14. Bureaus/OUTs may use Telework Fundamentals for Managers and/or Fundamentals for Employees as the required training. Bureaus/OUTs may also develop their own interactive telework training programs consistent with Department policy. The programs must permit the tracking of all students who take the course by showing when the course was taken, the name of the student, and the date of successful completion. Although prior clearance and approval are not required, the bureau/OU must submit the program to OHRM for oversight purposes.
15. Require an employee wishing to telework to sign an agreement that includes all the mandatory requirements listed in XIII.A and any other conditions agreed to by the supervisor and employee, or consistent with the terms of an applicable CBA. Describe the process for obtaining authorization and the level of authorization required for the expenditure of funds to cover expenses associated with approved telework arrangements.
16. State that telework-ready and remote work employees will receive the same treatment and opportunities as traditional work employees (e.g., work assignments, awards and recognition, development opportunities, promotions, etc.).
17. Require that all hours teleworked be recorded under the appropriate telework category each pay period in the designated T&A system.
18. Include a process for providing orientation and training for new telework-ready employees and their supervisors regarding policy, bureau/OU specific programs, and their responsibilities.
19. Specify how to contact the bureau/OU telework coordinator.
20. Include language indicating that all employees designated as “emergency” or with COOP responsibility, must have an approved individual telework agreement.
21. Include bureau/OU information technology (IT) and cybersecurity guidelines.
22. Establish procedures for administering and evaluating the telework program.

X. ACCOMMODATIONS FOR EMPLOYEES WITH DISABILITIES

It is important to distinguish between ordinary requests to telework and requests from persons with disabilities for reasonable accommodation. Approving officials/supervisors should consult DAO 215-10, “Reasonable Accommodation Policy,” and the Disability Program Manager as part of the interactive process established by the Rehabilitation Act, in order to fully understand supervisors' responsibilities under the law.

As governed by Section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 791 et. seq., the Rehabilitation Act and DAO 215-10, the determination as to whether an employee may be granted telework as a reasonable accommodation due to a disability should be made through the Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator, the employee's first-line supervisor, and the employee.

XI. MANDATORY TELEWORK TRAINING

A. Approving Officials Complete Telework Training

All approving officials must successfully complete the appropriate DOC-approved training programs prior to approving a written telework agreement.

B. Employees Complete Telework Training

All employees who want to telework must successfully complete the appropriate DOC-approved training before approval of their written agreement. Upon successful completion of the training, the employee must provide proof of successful completion of the course to their approving official.

C. Employees Complete Security Training

All employees are required to complete all mandatory IT security training, including the annual training.

XII. PREPARING FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TELEWORK/REMOTE WORK AGREEMENT

The following actions are to be taken when establishing a written agreement:

A. Employee Submits a Completed Telework/Remote Work Agreement

The interested employee submits a completed telework/remote agreement and telework safety checklist in accordance with their bureau/OU policy or the terms of an applicable CBA. (See Appendix B, "Telework Request/Agreement," Appendix C, "Remote Work Agreement," for a sample templates, and Appendix D, "Safety Checklist (telework and remote work)."

B. Employee and Supervisor Discuss Proposed Telework/Remote Agreement

The employee and supervisor/manager discuss the proposed agreement and communications (phone calls, emails, virtual meetings, etc.) between the employee and supervisor/manager.

Supervisors may utilize Appendix E, “Telework Agreement – Supervisor Checklist,” and Appendix F, “Remote Worker Agreement – Supervisor Checklist.”

XIII. INDIVIDUAL TELEWORK AGREEMENTS⁵

The written agreement provides the framework for the discussion that needs to take place between the employee and the supervisor/manager before the employee signs the agreement.

A. Mandatory Requirements

1. Indicate the duration of the agreement in the written agreement.
2. All written agreements must contain a notice clearly informing the employee they are required to telework whenever their traditional worksite is closed (other than for Federal holidays or Executive orders), even if it is not their regularly scheduled telework day.
3. All written agreements must contain notification that when the appropriate authority announces, “Unscheduled Leave” or “Unscheduled Telework,” telework-ready employees may elect either option by notifying their supervisor consistent with the employee’s written agreement or the terms of an applicable CBA. Employees are to be reminded that if they elect to perform unexpected telework, they must have a sufficient amount of work to complete in their period of telework. If the employee does not have enough work, they may either take unscheduled leave for the entire workday or use unscheduled leave to account for hours not worked.
4. The agreement must provide that an employee is not authorized to telework if their performance does not comply with the terms of the written telework agreement.
5. The purpose of the telework may not be to perform official time.⁶ The employee must first be performing management-assigned duties before any official time request can be considered. The agreement must set forth the expectations, i.e., management-assigned work, agreed upon by management and the employee, so the employee has prior knowledge of these expectations.
6. Management may find it necessary to require a non-emergency, telework-ready employee to report for an assignment that requires presence at the worksite (e.g., providing a presentation or performing administrative duties at a pre-scheduled conference). This should not be a last-minute surprise, but a special work circumstance that both the supervisor and employee know about, discuss, and plan in advance as the special work requires.

⁵ Please see Section VIII.H. “Remote Work” for guidance on remote work agreements as well as Appendix C, “Remote Work Agreement,” Appendix D, “Safety Checklist (Telework and Remote work),” and Appendix F, “Remote Worker Agreement – Supervisory Checklist.”

⁶ See Section VII, Definitions, “Official Time.”

Note: Management will be required to compensate “remote” workers for their travel, even when their alternative worksite is within the locality pay area of the traditional worksite, if their alternative worksite is more than 50 miles from the traditional worksite

7. Days may be specified or flexible due to business necessity or an employee’s request. Hours to be worked are to be annotated and in accordance with the traditional worksite reporting times.
8. Clarify any assumptions regarding work locations (e.g., if expected to work from home only) as well as frequency and modes of communication (e.g., email vs. telephone, core hours for contact, speed of returning calls).
9. Be clear if the employee is designated as an “emergency employee” or part of COOP and expected to work during a COOP event such as a national or local emergency, or a COOP exercise. All COOP and ERG members must have a telework agreement on file and be prepared to telework at any time.
10. Outline any additional requirements (technology, specific software, data security, etc.)

B. Modifications and Termination

1. Telework is a workplace flexibility (unless designated as a condition of employment), not a legal right and does not change the terms and conditions of employment. The operational needs of the bureau/OU are paramount; employees who telework do not have an automatic right to continue to telework. In accordance with the Act, an employee may not be authorized to continue teleworking if their performance does not comply with the terms of the written agreement between the approving official and the employee.

Note: It is recommended that the bureau/OU consult with the OGC about the payment of relocation expenses and the responsibility thereof, prior to the termination of a remote work agreement, as applicable.

2. Management shall provide sufficient notice, when feasible, before modifying or terminating a written agreement to allow the affected employee to make necessary arrangements. The reason for termination must be documented, signed by the approving official, and provided to the employee. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect.
3. The employee may request to modify the current agreement (e.g., change the regular teleworking day) by submitting a new Telework Application/Agreement and Modification of Telework Agreement with only the requested change indicated.

XIV. TERMINATION OF AGREEMENTS AND APPEALS PROCESS

A. Telework and Remote Requests and Agreements May Be Denied or Terminated

Telework and remote work requests and agreements may be terminated or denied by the approving official in accordance with the terms of an applicable CBA and as long as the denial or termination decision is based on operational needs, conduct, or performance in accordance with the law and any applicable CBAs, not personal reasons or mere managerial preferences. (See Appendix G, “Optional Telework Termination Form”)

B. Immediate Denial

The approving official must immediately deny or terminate telework agreements as applicable, if the employee fails to be eligible due to 5 U.S.C. §§ 6502(A)(2) or (B)(3). It is also the policy of the Department to apply the same eligibility criteria to remote workers; therefore, the approving official must immediately deny or terminate a remote work agreement, as applicable, if the employee fails to meet the eligibility requirements described in 5 U.S.C. §§6502(A)(2) or (B)(3).

C. Written Justification

The approving official must provide written justification to the affected employee, to include information about when or if the employee would be eligible to reapply, and if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve their chance of future approval. Approving officials are to provide employees, and maintain copies of, signed written denials or terminations of telework agreements.

D. Termination by the Employee

An employee may terminate their written telework agreement by written notice to the approving official. The employee may terminate their written remote work agreement in accordance with the terms of the agreement.

E. Administrative Grievance Procedures

Telework-ready and remote employees not covered by a negotiated grievance procedure must use the administrative grievance procedure in DAO 202-771, “Administrative Grievance Procedure,” to appeal issues relating to their telework/remote work status or other telework/remote work matters.

F. Negotiated Grievance Procedure (NGP)

Employees covered by an NGP that does not specifically exclude this matter must use the applicable NGP.

G. Discrimination

Employees who believe they are the victims of prohibited discrimination may utilize the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's complaint procedures or the applicable negotiated grievance procedures (NGP), as appropriate.

XV. PROGRAM OVERSIGHT AND RESPONSIBILITIES

A. Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM)

OHRM is responsible for oversight of the Department of Commerce Telework and Remote Work Plan and for any reporting requirements to OPM. OHRM will review and monitor the various plans to ensure consistency across the bureaus/OUTs with implementing the program.

B. Bureau/Operating Unit (OU)

Each bureau/OU is responsible for the development, funding, administration (including providing a designated Telework Coordinator), operation, and evaluation of its telework Plan. The evaluation should be accomplished in collaboration with the exclusive representative, if any. Each bureau/OU will develop a telework Plan consistent with this broad DOC Telework and Remote Work Plan and submit it to OHRM for compliance review/approval. When a bureau/OU lacks a telework Plan, the bureau/OU will be covered under the DOC's Telework and Remote Work Plan.

C. Supervisors/Managers

Supervisors/managers are responsible for the overall management and success of teleworking/remote working, if applicable, in their work units, including day-to-day operations. They are encouraged to permit employees to telework on a regular/recurring and/or situational basis for at least 4 days per biweekly pay period when requested by eligible employees. Supervisors/managers may also approve remote work requests in accordance with the terms of this DOC Telework and Remote Work Plan and the applicable bureau/OU Implementation Plan. Each request must be evaluated on the unique facts of the situation, the duties of the position, the needs of the office, budget implications, etc. Telework-ready and remote work employees and their approving officials are responsible for annually reviewing the written agreement to ensure it is current. The date of the review must be documented.

D. Telework Managing Officer (TMO)

The TMO shall be an SES official of the DOC with direct access to the Secretary of Commerce, and who has policy and program oversight of the DOC-wide telework program. The TMO serves as an advisor for DOC leadership.

E. Telework Program Manager (TPM)

The TPM shall be located in OHRM, and is a resource for Telework Coordinators, supervisors, approving officials, and employees. The TPM is responsible for responding to all inquiries from bureaus/OUs, and from other organizations such as OPM and the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). The TPM will maintain and forward data from all bureaus/OUs to the TMO, including an explanation of whether or not the bureau/OU is working satisfactorily toward the requirements detailed in this policy and, if not, what actions are being taken to identify and eliminate barriers to maximizing telework.

F. Telework Coordinators (TC)

The TCs provide bureau/OU policy and procedural guidance as well as advice and assistance to their bureau/OU-level personnel tasked with policy and implementation plan development. In addition, they work with senior-level managers in establishing and obtaining bureau/OU telework goals, objectives, and reporting requirements. The TC will, in partnership with the approving official and the exclusive representative, if applicable, establish a procedure for notifying each employee of their eligibility or ineligibility to telework, and coordinate a process for approving and tracking telework and remote work arrangements. The TC will answer questions and provide guidance to employees and supervisors as well as an orientation for new teleworkers.

The TCs will develop and maintain a reporting system that captures telework and remote work participation, terminations, and denials. The TCs are responsible for providing the following information to the TPM upon request:

1. The degree of participation by employees of each bureau/OU during the period covered by the report.
2. The method for gathering telework/remote work data in each bureau/OU.
3. The reasons for positive or negative variations in telework participation if the total number of employees teleworking is 10 percent higher or lower than in the previous year of the reporting activity.
4. The bureau/OU goal for increasing telework participation if applicable.
5. An explanation of whether a bureau/OU met its established goal(s) for the last reporting period and, if not, what actions are being taken to identify and eliminate barriers.
6. An assessment of progress made in meeting participation rate goal(s) and other telework goal(s) (i.e., the impact of telework on recruitment and retention, performance, etc.).
7. A description of best practices, if applicable.
8. A central file of all approved written agreements for the bureau/OU.

XVI. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

The bureau/OUs, via their TC, are required to respond to TPM requests for a variety of reporting requirements/initiatives. Below is information that might be requested, though it is not inclusive.

1. The degree of participation by employees of each bureau/OU teleworking during the period covered by the report.
2. The method for gathering telework data in each bureau/OU.
3. The reasons for positive or negative variation in telework participation if the number of bureau/OU employees teleworking is 10 percent higher or lower than in the previous year.
4. The bureau/OU goal for increasing telework participation to the extent practicable or necessary.
5. An explanation of whether or not a bureau/OU met its goals for the last reporting period and, if not, what actions are being taken to identify and eliminate barriers.
6. An assessment of the progress made in meeting bureau/OU participation-rate goals and other goals related to telework, such as the impact of telework on emergency readiness, energy use, recruitment and retention, performance, productivity, and employee attitudes and opinions regarding telework.
7. Best practices in the bureau/OU.

XVII. IT SECURITY REQUIREMENTS FOR TELEWORK-READY EMPLOYEES

Telework-ready and remote work employees must abide by the IT security requirements conveyed in the Commerce Information Technology Security Program Policy, Commerce Information Technology Requirements, Frequently Asked Questions, and IT Security Policy memos. The Telework/Remote Work Agreement signed by the employee and their supervisor may describe additional security requirements. DOC IT security documentation can be found at: http://home.commerce.gov/CIO/ITSITnew/IT_Security_Program_Documentation.html

Telework-ready and remote work employees must abide by bureau/OU-specified IT security requirements. Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that employees agree to comply with all existing IT security requirements and to ensure that employees are accountable.

XVIII. POLICY ON INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY SECURITY

The DOC's CIO is responsible for issuing and maintaining IT and eGov policies and minimum implementation standards, including remote access and safeguarding of sensitive information. These policies and minimum implementation standards outline responsibilities of bureau/OU CIOs as well as teleworkers/remote workers to enable an effective working environment for the employee and the protection of DOC systems from undue risk. Operating unit CIOs, with the support of their IT security officers, are responsible for establishing teleworking IT security procedures specific to their bureau/OU and providing secure telecommuting resources and operational controls commensurate with the sensitivity of the data processed (along with policies and minimum implementation standards provided by the CIO). The DOC's policy on remote access is at

https://connection.commerce.gov/sites/connection.commerce.gov/files/media/files/2014/citr-008_remote_access.pdf

Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready and remote work employees agree to comply with all existing security policies and procedures, including IT security. Telework-ready employees also agree that their responsibilities, described in Section 3.3.9 of the DOC's "IT Security Policy and Minimum Implementation Standards," remain in effect while on telework/remote work status. Other pertinent bureau/OU policies on IT security may also exist; supervisors are responsible for ensuring that employees agree to follow all applicable policies.

The workplace and workstation must be set up to accomplish secure information processing, including the proper storage of Sensitive Information in both electronic and paper form. The telework-ready and remote work employee, following bureau/OU policies, must minimize security vulnerabilities to the workstation and the DOC network.

XIX. PROTECTING THE SECURITY AND CONFIDENTIALITY OF RECORDS

All telework-ready and remote work employees must ensure that records subject to the Privacy Act of 1974, or which have sensitive Personally Identifiable Information (PII) or Business Identifiable Information (BII), are not disclosed to anyone except those who have been authorized access to such information to perform their duties. Bureaus/OUTs must ensure that appropriate physical, administrative, and technical safeguards are used to protect the security and confidentiality of such records.

A. Disclosure of Records from an Agency System of Records

1. Telework-ready and remote work employees are responsible for ensuring that their disclosure of a record (information) from any agency system of record complies with the Privacy Act of 1974.
2. The Privacy Act of 1974 defines a 'system of records' as a group of any records under the control of any agency from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or by some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particular assigned to the individual. Department of Commerce system of record notices (SORNs) are posted at <http://www.gpo.gov/fdsys/browse/collection.action?collectionCode=PAI&browsePath=2005&isCollapsed=false&leafLevelBrowse=false&yrcord=0>.
3. The Privacy Act of 1974 prohibits the disclosure of a record (information) from an agency system of record that is not identified as a routine use in that system's SORN, does not comply with an exemption identified in the SORN, or does not comply with 1 of the 12 exceptions to the non-disclosure-(to third parties)-without-consent rule.

4. A Privacy Act incident occurs when an officer or employee of the agency, who by virtue of their employment or official position, has possession of or access to agency records that contain individually identifiable information, the disclosure of which is prohibited by 5 U.S.C. § 552a (or regulations established thereunder), and discloses the material in any manner to any person or agency not entitled to receive it. Knowing misuse or release of information protected by the Privacy Act of 1974 can subject an employee to fines and/or criminal sanctions.
5. Telework-ready and remote work employees must immediately report a suspected or confirmed Privacy Act incident to their bureau/OU privacy officer or the Computer Incident Response Team (CIRT) and immediate supervisor.

B. Proper Handling of PII and BII

1. Telework-ready and remote work employees are responsible for the safeguarding of PII and BII.
2. PII is information that can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, such as name, social security number, biometric records, etc., alone, or when combined with other personal or identifying information, which is linked or linkable to a specific individual, such as date and place of birth, mother's maiden name, etc. Sensitive PII, if lost, compromised, or disclosed without authorization, could result in substantial harm, embarrassment, inconvenience, or unfairness to an individual.
3. Types of PII considered sensitive when associated with an individual are: social security number (including truncated form), place of birth, date of birth, mother's maiden name, biometric information, medical information (except brief references to absences from work), personal financial information, credit card or purchase card account numbers, passport numbers, potentially sensitive employment information (e.g., personnel ratings, disciplinary actions, and results of background investigations), criminal history, and any information that may stigmatize or adversely affect an individual. The DOC's IT Privacy Policy provides that breaches of sensitive PII are subject to notification/reporting requirements.
4. When deciding whether PII is sensitive or non-sensitive, it is important to consider the type of information, obligations, or expectations regarding the protection of information, risk (probability and consequences) of loss or compromise of information, and context of information. Context is particularly important. The same types of information can be sensitive or non-sensitive depending upon the context. For example, a list of names and phone numbers for the Department softball roster is very different from a list of names and phone numbers for individuals being treated for an infectious disease. It is important to use good judgment when deciding whether PII is sensitive or non-sensitive. When in doubt, treat PII as sensitive.

5. The Department's policy states that if sensitive PII must be electronically transmitted, it must be protected by secure methodologies such as encryption, Public Key Infrastructure, or secure socket layers. Federal Information Processing Standards (FIPS) Publication 140-2, "Security Requirements for Cryptographic Modules" provides the standard to which encryption methodologies must conform. The transmission of sensitive PII, even if protected by secure means, must be kept to a minimum. Check with your bureau/OU's Office of the Chief Information Officer to determine methods or services they are using to support the electronic transmission of sensitive PII.
6. In addition to sensitive PII, telework-ready and remote work employees must ensure the safeguarding of BII. BII is information that is defined in the Freedom of Information Act as "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person [that is] privileged or confidential." "Commercial" is not confined to records that reveal "basic commercial operations" but includes any records (information) in which the submitter has a "commercial interest" and can include information submitted by a non-profit entity. Terms for BII that must be protected from disclosure include "confidential business information," "confidential commercial information," and "proprietary information."
7. Sensitive PII and BII can be stored on Government systems only, and saved, stored, or hosted only on DOC-authorized equipment (including contractor-owned equipment or a system that is approved to be used as a Government system). Computers that are personally-owned may not be used to save, store, or host sensitive PII and BII that is collected or maintained by the Department.
8. Sensitive PII and BII must be sent encrypted as an email attachment and encrypted on mobile computers, media (e.g., CDs, DVDs, USB drives), and devices (e.g., laptops, hard drives). When faxing sensitive PII and BII, an advisory statement about the contents must be included on the cover sheet, and the recipient must be notified immediately before and after transmission. Exception: According to the Commerce Acquisition Manual (CAM) 1313.301, cardholders shall not transmit credit card information over a facsimile machine. When mailing sensitive PII and BII, it must be physically secured when in transit. Do not mail or send by courier sensitive PII and BII on CDs, DVDs, hard drives, flash drives, USB drives, floppy disks, or other removable media unless the data is encrypted. Sensitive PII and BII must be sealed in an opaque envelop or container and mailed using First Class or Priority Mail, or a commercial delivery service (e.g., Federal Express or DHL). Appropriate methods must be used to destroy sensitive paper PII and BII (e.g., shredding, using a burn bag) and securely delete sensitive electronic PII and BII (e.g., empty the Windows recycle bin).
9. Telework-ready employees, remote work employees, and supervisors are responsible for complying with all bureau/OU guidelines on reporting PII and BII incidents. The OMB Memorandum M-07-16 defines a PII incident as the loss of control, compromise, unauthorized disclosure, unauthorized acquisition, unauthorized access, or any similar term referring to situations where persons other than authorized users, and for other than authorized purpose(s), have access or potential access to PII, whether physical or electronic. All employees, including telework-ready and remote work employees must immediately report a suspected or confirmed PII and BII incident to their bureau/OU privacy officer or CIRT and immediate supervisor.

XX. PRIVACY ACT, SENSITIVE, AND HIGHLY SENSITIVE INFORMATION

A. Decisions on Proper Use and Handling of Sensitive Information.

These decisions will be made by the approving official who permits the employee to work at home or another alternative worksite. A telework/remote work agreement will be signed by the employee and their approving official that contains the specific data types allowed to be accessed. Information is generally categorized into the following groups: Non-Sensitive Information; Sensitive Information; and Classified National Security Information.

B. Physical Security Standards

The physical security standard for PII and other Sensitive and Administratively Controlled Information must be addressed prior to allowing telework. Chapter 35 of the OSY Security Manual provides minimum physical security standards for the office environment that are also applicable during telework/remote work. At a minimum, Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI), including PII, should be afforded protection to prevent unauthorized access of the information.

C. Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI) Registry

The National Archives and Records Administration's CUI Office developed the CUI Registry, which allows anyone to access the Safeguarding and Dissemination requirements for CUI that must be afforded to information like PII (privacy) and other unclassified information. The registry may not be all inclusive, as only those categories of unclassified information that have a law, regulation, or Government-wide policy governing dissemination and/or safeguarding are provided. Therefore, any Sensitive and Administratively Controlled Information in hard-copy form that does not fall within the parameters of the manual, or the registry, should be brought to the attention of the Information and Personnel Security Division of the OSY.

Teleworkers, remote workers, and supervisors should visit <http://www.archives.gov/cui/registry/category-list.html> prior to allowing hard copy PII and other administratively controlled information outside the workplace for telework/remote work purposes.

Controlled Unclassified Information, established by Executive Order 13556, is legally protected and covered under the Sensitive Information category.

D. Highly Sensitive Information

This information is subject to the most stringent security and access control rules, such as courier authorization, hand-to-hand transmission, or agency-specific rules not included in the DOC Telework and Remote Work Plan. Classified information that requires Secret or Top Secret security clearances for protecting national security information is included in this category. Classified information (Confidential, Secret, or Top Secret) may only be transmitted or removed from official worksites by classified networks or authorized official couriers. This type of information may not be used or accessed in any manner by teleworkers or remote workers.

XXI. EMERGENCY EMPLOYEES AND COOP TEAM MEMBERS

Employees designated as an “emergency” employee and those designated as a COOP ERG or other COOP team member may be required to report to the traditional worksite, an alternative worksite, or telework from home, based on the nature of the emergency.

These employees may be required to telework during emergency closures or other emergencies, including pandemics and for COOP exercises, on any day, even if that day is not a regular telework day or a day with specific approval for situational/episodic telework. COOP team members may also be required to perform duties outside of their usual or customary duties to ensure continuation of agency-essential missions or activities.

If an employee is designated as an “emergency” employee, or COOP ERG, or other member, the supervisor, along with the employee, should make advance and/or situational decisions as to whether the employee must physically report for duty at the traditional worksite, or may work from home or another approved alternative worksite.

For example, if the purpose of the employee reporting for duty at the traditional worksite is to provide policy guidance or to notify specific individuals of emergency requirements, this could be accomplished from home, provided the employee has access to the resources necessary to perform the required services. However, in some cases, the only way to obtain the services of the employee may be through telework from an alternative worksite.

For example, if inclement weather or other emergency situation results in a transportation shutdown, but phone lines remain working, the employee may be able to work from home rather than reporting to the traditional worksite or alternative site (i.e., the COOP site).

During any period that the DOC is operating under a designated COOP event, including an exercise, the COOP plan shall supersede any telework policy (Public Law 111-292 Section 6504(d)(2)).

APPENDIX A: TELEWORK ASSESSMENT TOOL

The decision to telework should be based on the ability of an employee to work in a setting that may be in his/her home or a Federal facility other than the regular office, without immediate supervision. The following tool is to be used by the supervisor as a basis for discussing the option and appropriateness of telework for a particular employee. Employees are also required to use the assessment tool to help in determining if telework is suitable for their positions.

Please rate yourself or your employee, using the following scale:

5 – Always 4 – Usually 3 – Sometimes 2 – Rarely 1 – Never

1. Employee works without regular monitoring/supervision.
2. Employee is comfortable working alone.
3. Employee independently identifies required work products.
4. Employee successfully plans work production schedule.
5. Employee communicates hindrances to successful completion of a task or project in sufficient time to allow for alterations that improve the opportunity for success.
6. Employee is knowledgeable about your organization's procedures/policies.
7. Employee is fully aware of Department information technology security.
8. Employee meets deadlines.
9. If telework will be in the employee's residence, the residence has an appropriate work environment.
10. Employee is willing to provide his/her own equipment if Government-furnished equipment is not available.
11. Employee is computer literate.
12. Employee has successfully completed the appropriate Commerce online teleworking training course.

APPENDIX B: TELEWORK REQUEST/AGREEMENT

The below telework agreement is a basic template that can be tailored to meet bureau/operating unit (OU) needs. Generally, a telework agreement would include things like:

- a listing of the bureau/OU policies on telework, including any applicable collective bargaining unit agreement, and a signature indicating understanding and agreement to abide by those policies
- a listing of telework work schedules
- technology used to facilitate the telework
- any other policy provision or aspect of the agreement that the organization, the manager, or the employee feels should be put in writing

APPENDIX D: SAFETY CHECKLIST (Telework and Remote Work) – HOME WORK SPACE

Participating employees may use the following checklist to assist them in a survey of the overall safety and adequacy of their alternative worksite. The following are only recommendations, and do not encompass every situation that may be encountered. Employees are encouraged to obtain professional assistance with issues concerning appropriate electrical service and circuit capacity for residential worksites.

- Practice a fire evacuation plan for use in the event of an emergency.
- Check your smoke detectors regularly and replace batteries once a year.
- Always have a working fire extinguisher conveniently located in your home, and check the charge regularly.
- Computers can be heavy. Always place them on sturdy, level, well maintained furniture.
- Use a sturdy chair that provides good support and can be adjusted.
- Choose office chairs that provide good supporting backrests and allow adjustments to fit you comfortably.
- Locate your computer to eliminate noticeable glare from windows and lighting. Place computer monitor at height that is comfortable and does not require neck or back strain. Locate computer keyboards at heights that do not require wrist strain or place the keyboard on an adjustable surface.
- Install sufficient lighting in locations that reduce glare at the work surface.
- Arrange file cabinets so that open drawers do not block aisles.
- Be sure to leave aisle space where possible to reduce tripping hazards.
- Always make sure electrical equipment is connected to grounded outlets.
- Avoid fire hazards by never overloading electrical circuits.
- Inspect and repair carpeting with frayed edges or loose seams. Avoid using throw rugs that can cause tripping hazards in your work space.
- Locate computers, phones and other electrical equipment in a manner that keeps power cords out of walkways.
- Keep your work area clean and avoid clutter, which can cause fire and tripping hazards.
- Do not allow non-government employees to operate or repair government owned equipment.
- Always keep government files and information in a secure place and do not advertise your home office to strangers.
- Always use proper lifting techniques when moving or lifting heavy equipment and furniture.
- Always report accidents and injuries immediately to your supervisor.

Telework Guidelines

Voluntary Participation. The employee voluntarily agrees to work at the agency-approved telework site indicated above and agrees to follow all applicable policies and procedures. This is a flexibility that may be used by management to accomplish work needs. However, an employee may not be forced to enter into a telework agreement.

Official Worksite. In accordance with 5 CFR 531.605, the official worksite for a General Schedule teleworker remains the location of the agency worksite (i.e., the agency worksite where they would normally work, not the telework location) The employee generally should be scheduled to be at the agency worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis. See HR Handbook for guidance on remote workers for employees who do not report to an agency worksite on a regular basis (change of official worksite may affect pay, RIF competitive area, travel reimbursement, and/or unemployment compensation).

Official Duties. The employee will perform official duties only at the agency worksite or agency-approved telework site (i.e., alternative worksite). The employee may not conduct personal business while in official duty status at the telework site.

Time and Attendance. The employee will follow established office procedures for requesting and obtaining approval of leave. The supervisor must certify biweekly time and attendance for hours worked at the agency worksite and the telework site.

Overtime. Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that teleworkers perform overtime work only for additional work for which compensation for overtime payments or compensatory time off (as appropriate) is warranted. Employees not covered (i.e., exempt) from the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) are only compensated for overtime work under the appropriate statutory and regulatory authorities when that work is ordered or approved in advance, in writing, by the supervisor. Supervisors should closely monitor teleworkers who are FLSA non-exempt (i.e., covered) employees to ensure that suffered or permitted overtime work is either prohibited or minimized.

Equipment. The employee is responsible for protecting any Government furnished equipment (GFE), and use of such equipment is governed by the Policy on Personal Use of Government Office Equipment. [Bureau/OU Name] will maintain and service GFE. The employee may be required to bring the equipment into the agency worksite for service.

Liability. The Government will not be liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property while the employee is working at the approved alternative worksite, except to the extent the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act is applicable.

Telework Site. The employee will provide a work area adequate for performance of official duties. The employee agrees to review workspace that is located in a personal residence for conformance with the suggested safety checklist. The Government will not be responsible for any operating costs that are associated with the employee using their personal residence as a telework site (e.g., home maintenance, insurance, or utilities). However, the employee does not relinquish any entitlement to reimbursement for authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the Government, as provided by statute and implementing regulations. When authorized and approved in advance, the Government will be responsible for costs associated with ordinary and authorized use of a workstation in a tele-center.

Injury Compensation. The employee may file a claim under Federal Employees' Compensation Act if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the official worksite or the telework site. The employee must notify the supervisor immediately of any accident or injury that occurs at the telework site. The supervisor will investigate such a report immediately.

Work Assignments. The employee will complete all assigned work according to procedures mutually agreed upon by the employee and the supervisor and according to guidelines and standards in the employee's performance plan. The supervisor and employee will agree on terms of reporting work progress and accomplishments from the telework site in accordance with the guidelines and standards in the employee's performance plan.

Performance. Employees who are performing at less than the Fully Successful level are not eligible to telework. Teleworkers will be evaluated pursuant to the same performance standards that would apply if they were not teleworking.

Disclosure. The employee will protect Government records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. 552a.

Classified Information. Classified information may not be taken to or accessed at telework sites.

Sensitive and Personally Identifiable Information (PII). Privacy Act, PII and sensitive non-classified data may be taken to telework sites only with supervisory approval and if required precautions are taken to protect the data. The employee will protect Privacy Act, PII, and sensitive non-classified data from unauthorized disclosure.

Standards of Conduct. The employee agrees they are bound by [AGENCY] standards of conduct while working at the telework site.

Cancellation. After appropriate notice to the supervisor, the employee may terminate the telework arrangements. After appropriate notice to the employee, the supervisor may terminate the telework arrangements.

Computer Use. All employees using wireless connections to access the network remotely must adhere to the “[Bureau/OU] Wireless Access Policy” posted on the internal intranet website. External wireless access points are not managed, maintained, or monitored by [Bureau/OU] and are not considered trustworthy. All communications, transactions, or connections to an [AGENCY] resource over the internet or through a wireless access point must be conducted via an encrypted method such as Citrix, Cisco AnyConnect, VPN, or other access as [Bureau/OU] may designate.

Transit Subsidy. Telework does not change an employee’s eligibility to participate in the Transit Subsidy Program. Employees must be mindful of the requirements under the transit subsidy program and any impact that reduced commuting costs may have on the amount of subsidy they are entitled to receive. Employees have an obligation to notify the agency of any reduction in use of transit as a result of telework to enable the agency to adjust the subsidy.

Waste, Fraud, and Abuse. All employees have a responsibility to report waste, fraud, and abuse within the Agency to the Office of the Inspector General (OIG).

APPENDIX F: REMOTE WORKER AGREEMENT – SUPERVISOR CHECKLIST

Supervisors must use this checklist to ensure that remote work requirements are met and that covered employees understand the policies and procedures of the remote work program. A Remote Worker Agreement is not final until the checklist is complete. After an item is completed, list the date on the line next to it.

Checklist Item	Date Completed
1. Remote Guidelines have been explained to the employee and signed by supervisor and employee (attached).

5. The provisions governing changes to the terms and conditions of the remote work agreement have been explained to the employee, including that they must receive the supervisor’s approval in advance of any changes to the location of the duty station (i.e., remote work site). Failure to obtain management approval may result in termination of the remote work agreement.

Remote Worker Guidelines

Applicability. The Remote Worker Policy applies to current and future remote workers. A remote work arrangement may be initiated by an employee for the convenience of the employee or by the agency.

Duty Station. All pay and travel entitlements are based on the official worksite.

Salary and Benefits. Approving a remote worksite may affect pay, RIF competitive area, travel reimbursement, and/or unemployment compensation.

Official Worksite. In accordance with 5 CFR 531.605, the official worksite is the location where the General Schedule employee regularly performs their duties. If the employee is not scheduled to report to the agency worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis (i.e., is a remote worker), the employee’s official worksite for location-based pay purposes is the alternative work location under the remote work agreement.

Official Duties. The employee will perform only official duties at the official remote worksite. The employee may not conduct personal business while in official duty status at the remote site.

Time and Attendance. The employee will follow established office procedures for requesting and obtaining approval of leave. The supervisor must certify biweekly time and attendance for hours worked at the remote worksite.

Work Schedule. Work schedule (AWS or fixed) will follow established Agency/office procedures for setting, requesting and approval of available work schedule options. Identified work schedule ensures supervisor, co-workers, customers, etc., can interact with remote employee during the identified work schedule timeframes.

Overtime. Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that remote workers work overtime only when the supervisor authorizes and intends to make overtime payment (including compensatory time off, as appropriate). Both Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) exempt and non-exempt employees must be paid overtime (or compensatory time, under certain circumstances) when overtime hours are ordered and approved in advance in writing by a supervisor with the authority to authorize overtime. Employees agree that failure to obtain proper prior approval for overtime work may result in supervisor taking appropriate action to address.

APPENDIX G: OPTIONAL TELEWORK TERMINATION FORM

The telework option is a privilege and not an employee right. As such, it falls under the supervisor’s discretion to determine how work should be accomplished with the organization. Termination of the telework agreement can be either voluntary or involuntary.

INFORMATION MEMORANDUM FOR DEPARTMENT LEADERSHIP ON RETURN TO OFFICE

FROM: Don Graves, Deputy Secretary of Commerce

DATE: Tuesday, March 22, 2022

RE: DOC Return to Office

The purpose of this memorandum is to provide background and guidance for the Department regarding Return to Office following two years of maximum telework. This guidance is intended to help the Department usher in a new future of work for our employees. It recognizes both the desire for expanded use of telework (when compared to pre-pandemic levels) and the need for in-person engagement in most positions. It proposes a hybrid workplace environment that allows for flexibility and answers the President's call in his State of the Union address for the Federal workforce to return to in-person work.

GUIDANCE AND BEST PRACTICES

After extensive consultation with bureaus, review of White House and Office of Management and Budget guidance, and market research, we are implementing a Department-wide baseline telework best practice of up to two days of routine (regularly scheduled) telework per week, with additional flexibilities as discussed in more detail below. All bureaus are required to submit updated telework policies for review and approval prior to implementation to the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM) and no later than May 25, 2022. Variations from the best practice guidance for classes of positions or an entire bureau, office, or unit will be accepted but must be documented and approved, as outlined in Attachment 1.

TRANSITION FROM MAXIMUM TELEWORK

Returning to working in our office facilities after two years of maximum telework will be an adjustment for our workforce. We recognize that it will take time to finalize and implement updated policies that are consistent with this best practice guidance, so we've built in a 60-day transition period to permit both the resolution of internal issues, such as requests for variance, and external issues, such as child-care, public transportation, and other challenges. During this initial period, employees with existing telework or remote work agreements should coordinate with their supervisors and, with supervisory approval, adhere to those agreements, irrespective of whether the agreements exceed the Department-wide baseline.¹ Telework-eligible employees without current telework agreements in place may, with supervisory approval, engage in routine telework up to the baseline guidance of two days per week (as well as situational telework in response to child-care, transportation, and other challenges), even as they work with their supervisors to put new agreements in place. The new agreements may be based on the Department-wide baseline or an approved variance. At the end of the 60-day transition period, all teleworking employees must have an approved telework agreement in place in order to perform either routine or situational telework.

EXPECTATIONS

This hybrid operating posture is designed to help us retain and motivate our employees by providing flexibility to a workforce changed by the pandemic. It envisions a Department of Commerce that embraces the many benefits of in-person engagement and teambuilding, while maintaining advantages of a virtual environment, such as improved work-life balance due to lack of commute. A detailed overview of expectations, requirements, and process for requesting a variance is included in Attachment 1.

It is not our intention that bureaus with more robust pre-pandemic telework programs roll-back already well-conceived and well-performing programs or to prohibit more robust post-pandemic policies for those bureaus that did not have pre-existing programs. On the contrary, bureaus considering variances should look to the experiences and successes of those bureaus with robust pre-pandemic telework programs for insight and best practices. This baseline guidance is intended to ensure that variations from the baseline are equitable, consistent, and follow a thoughtful, deliberate, and data-driven approach to the implementation of new work schedules.

Finally, our return to office, like the global pandemic itself, is unprecedented and will involve different challenges for different offices and different employees. No guidance can anticipate and account for every question or challenge that may arise. I encourage you to continue your close engagement with the experts from Office of the Secretary and Office of the General Counsel who have helped guide us through the last two years, and I know that they stand ready to join you and your leadership teams to help answer your questions and ensure a successful transition.

- (2) Timeline and Due Dates

ATTACHMENT 1: DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE RETURN TO BUILDING GUIDANCE

	Best Practice Guidance
Regularly-scheduled telework	For telework-eligible employees, supervisors should consider 2 days per week (and up to 4 days a pay period) of routine telework the baseline.
Position eligibility	Position descriptions must be reviewed against established standards to determine both telework eligibility and the extent to which an employee’s work that can be performed off-site without impact to mission. Bureaus that have not yet begun (or in some instances completed) this process should do so immediately. This work must be completed no later than May 25, 2022, and prior to entering into new telework or remote work agreements with employees. Any request for variance from telework baseline above should include documentation from the bureau reflecting their standards for review and specific determinations organized by job series or type. OHRM will be providing a template for use by all bureaus initiating such requests.
Individual eligibility	Ideally, teleworking employees will have no documented history of discipline or less than satisfactory performance. (Note that certain acts of misconduct—e.g., absence without leave; reviewing, downloading, exchanging pornography from a Government computer or while performing official duty, render an employee telework ineligible as a matter of law).
Bureau telework policies	Bureaus should submit updated telework policies to OHRM for review no later than May 25, 2022. Bureaus that do not have approved telework policies are subject to general Department-wide policy. While individual unit heads may be given some level of discretion to enact a bureau’s telework policy, the policy itself should be set at the bureau head level, and ultimately it is the bureau head who is responsible for ensuring the implementation and success of the bureau’s policy.
Individual telework agreements	Upon return to the traditional office, employees with existing telework or remote work agreements should coordinate with their supervisors and, with supervisory approval, adhere to those agreements, irrespective of whether the agreements exceed the Department-wide baseline (Existing telework agreements (signed prior to March 20, 2022) that exceed the baseline guidance of 2 days per week will be subject to review under the variance procedures below the next time they are scheduled for renewal but not more than one year from the date the existing agreement was signed). Telework-eligible employees without current telework agreements in place may, with supervisory approval, engage in routine telework up to the baseline guidance of two days per week, even as they work with their supervisors to put new agreements in place. Those agreements may be based on the Department-wide

	baseline or an approved variance. During the 60-day transition period—and beyond—employees continue to be eligible for situational telework in response to such things as mass transit limitations, dependent care challenges, etc. All teleworking employees must have a signed telework agreement in place no later than June 25, 2022, in order to engage in either routine or situational telework following the conclusion of the 60-day transitional period.
Coverage	Each office will be expected to maintain an on-site presence each workday. Adequate office coverage must be factored into determinations with respect to how many days a week or pay period any individual employee may work. Where supervisors or managers are working off-site, there must be an on-site deputy or equivalent to ensure adequate coverage and supervision. In determining what percentage of a workforce might work off-site at any given time, bureaus should evaluate their overall capacity for hybrid meetings.
Core days	Bureaus are encouraged to establish one or more core days and to be intentional about how they take advantage of the value of those in-person opportunities.
Technology	At minimum offices should ensure: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • They have a clearly articulated policy of the minimum connectivity required to support telework. All teleworking employees must have a sufficient Internet connection and equipment to ensure generally uninterrupted audio/video participation in remote meetings and the ability to simultaneously, send, receive, and share documents. Some employees—based upon the nature of their work—may require more robust Internet connections to download larger files. • Technologies are in place to permit full integration and accessibility needs of on-site and teleworking employees in hybrid meetings. At the very least, bureaus need sufficient conference room facilities to permit an increase in hybrid meetings. • To the extent they have not already done so, bureaus should begin to conduct requirements gathering to determine priorities for both the types and amounts of technology-upgrades they will need before expanding their hybrid footprint. Preliminary determinations and a detailed action plan, including milestones, for necessary changes should be completed within 30 days of this guidance. This work should be performed in coordination with ongoing building readiness efforts led by the Office of Facilities and Environmental Quality, Office of the CFO/ASA. • To the extent a bureau discovers that technology issues will affect its ability to implement reintegration by the date noticed by the Department, the bureau must, within 30 days of this guidance, report that impediment to the Office of the Deputy Secretary, along with a plan for remedying those issues and an alternative reintegration plan for approval.

	Bureau CIOs must be responsive to all requests from the Department’s Chief Information Officer to verify capabilities and identify areas of need.
Facilities	Particularly when considering approval of telework with greater frequency than contemplated by this baseline guidance, offices must conduct an impact analysis on their facility needs, understanding at what point they should turn to shared workspaces or hoteling. These decisions must be made deliberately and from a fully-informed position, as the release of office space—either to the Department or to GSA—will have potential budgetary impacts and be difficult to undo if the desires of the workforce or the needs of the Department change. To the extent they have not already begun this work, bureaus should initiate this evaluation immediately and continue it over the transition period. Within 6 months of organizations returning to their traditional office, bureaus should provide to the CFO/ASA a written assessment of the impacts of increased telework and hybrid work. This requirement applies to all bureaus and organizations within the Department.
Variations from the baseline guidance	Variations from the baseline guidance must be approved by Deputy Secretary after review and approval by the relevant bureau-head and submission to the Office of Human Resources Management. Variations may be requested for facilities, organizations or classes of jobs. (As detailed below, individual variations may be approved at the bureau-head level; that authority may not be delegated). As an initial matter, variations will be approved: 1) where existing collective bargaining agreements conflict with the baseline guidance; and 2) where bureaus are already in the process of reducing their existing footprint, resulting in the need for increased telework; and 3) where existing telework agreements allow telework days in excess of the baseline guidance (This last category in particular will be subject to full review under these procedures the next time an agreement is scheduled for renewal but not more than one year from the date the agreement was signed). Subsequent requests for variation: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Should include a determination that the duties of the position permit objective measures of employee productivity (e.g., patent applications examined, export success stories logged). Requests for variation should include the specific metrics used in making such a determination. • May be used for critical, hard-to-recruit positions, where a determination has been made by the bureau head that local recruiting cannot support hiring demands (particularly for temporary and term positions). Such determinations must be based upon available data, such as a recruitment records, as opposed to anecdotal evidence. • May be used as a retention tool when a determination has been made by the bureau head that: 1) the position is appropriate for expanded telework; 2) the individual employee will be successful (based upon documented superior performance); 3) approval will not impede the organization’s

	ability to maintain a regular, in-person presence in the traditional workplace; and 4) retention of the employee in question will serve the organization’s mission more effectively than attempting to backfill that position with a new hire. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Bureaus should consider the same factors they would for a retention incentive for an individual employee when submitting their justification. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Employment trends and labor market factors. • The quality and availability of the potential sources of that possess the competencies required for the position. • The success of recent efforts to recruit candidates and retain employees with competencies similar to those possessed by the employee for positions similar to the position held by the employee. • Special or unique competencies required for the position; • Efforts to use other non-pay authorities; • The desirability of the duties, work or organizational environment, or geographic location of the position; • The extent to which the employee's departure would affect the agency's ability to carry out an activity, perform a function, or complete a project that the agency deems essential to its mission; and • Salaries typically paid outside the Federal Government. • Must include an analysis of not only the position’s telework eligibility but also the business-related bases for granting telework days in excess of the baseline. These might include: the competitiveness for recruiting and retaining talent for a position (particularly in areas, such as IT and acquisitions, and other high-demand fields); the need for organizational efficiency; and an employee’s individual circumstances.
Variation approval process	Within 10 days of the publication of this guidance, each of the Department’s Principal Human Resources Managers (PHRMs) must assign one employee to serve on a variation review committee tasked with assisting OHRM with reviewing requests for variations from the bureaus and making a recommendation to the Office of the Deputy Secretary with regard to approval or disapproval. The review committee will be chaired by the Director, OHRM, or her designee. Review committee members may not participate in the review of variations requests assigning from their own bureaus or organizational units. (The Director, OHRM, may disband the review committee upon her determination that the volume of variation requests is sufficiently light to permit timely review without the assistance of the committee). Requests for variation will be reviewed within 30 days of submission to the OHRM. Bureaus with pending requests for variation should follow the baseline

	telework guidance consider up to 4 days per bi-weekly pay period and no more than 2 days per week. Variations for individual employees may be approved at the bureau-head level without Departmental concurrence. This authority may not be delegated below the bureau-head level. Bureaus may not grant individual variances to more than 5% of their workforce. Bureaus must document and retain the bases for granting individual variances. Any bureau that has granted individual variances to more than 3% of its workforce must notify the Director, OHRM, in writing and, upon request provide documentation of its process for approving individual variances for review. The Deputy Secretary may suspend or revoke the authority of bureau heads to grant individual variances at any time.
Remote work (distinct from telework; full-time work outside the local commuting area)	Instances of remote work should be rare and mission-driven. Requests for fully remote work for an organization, facility, or class of jobs—in order to promote recruitment or retention—should follow the same approval process as variations from the baseline telework guidance above and should be evaluated using all of the factors for such variations, as well as the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • An important consideration in evaluating any request for remote work is the potential impact to the organization if the employee is unsuccessful. The cost of requiring relocation back to the traditional workplace is likely to be borne by the employer and can exceed $100,000. Bureaus must account for the financial risk inherent in approving a remote work agreement, particularly, as a recruitment tool, where the employee lacks a documented performance history with the Department. • Individual remote work agreements must be approved by the servicing HR office and OGC and are subject to annual review. (Existing remote work agreements will remain in effect but are subject to review when next up for renewal but no later than one year from the date they were originally signed). • Ideally, remote work agreements would benefit both the employee and the bureau. Whether there is value in having staff in the proposed remote location should always be factored into the bureau’s decision-making. • Bureaus considering an expansion of remote work opportunities beyond pre-pandemic levels should limit that expansion for the first 6 months while assessing the impact.

I. SCOPE

This telework and remote work policy applies to all Department of Commerce (DOC) employees except for those employed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO) and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Commissioned Officer Corps (Title 5, United States Code (U.S.C.) §§ 2105 and 2101(1) and (3)).

II. PURPOSE

The policy provides broad DOC-wide policy guidance and direction for bureaus/operating units (OU) to use when designing, developing, and administering their specific telework and remote work implementation plan(s). The policy promotes: (1) recruiting and retaining the best possible workforce; (2) continuing operations during emergency conditions (such as in a pandemic); (3) reducing management costs related to employee turnover and absenteeism; (4) reducing real estate and transit costs; and (5) enhancing work/life balance by allowing employees to better manage their work and personal obligations.

III. COVERAGE

The policy covers the workplace flexibility arrangement of telework and remote work.

IV. EXCLUDED

Excluded from the policy is work performed while on temporary duty (TDY); mobile work, as defined in this policy; arrangements requested/approved through Department Administrative Order (DAO) 215-10, "Reasonable Accommodation Policy"; and work performed at an alternative location due to an evacuation order.

V. LABOR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS

This policy is in effect when signed by the Director, Office of Human Resources Management and Chief Human Capital Officer (Director). The policy does not modify any telework past practice or collective bargaining agreement (CBA) between a bureau/OU and its union(s) consistent with Federal law or Government-wide rule or regulation. In bureaus/OUTs where a labor organization (union) represents employees, management is obligated to notify the union, and upon request, negotiate over impact and implementation (I&I) of the policy, as required by law.

VI. THE TELEWORK ENHANCEMENT ACT of 2010

On December 9, 2010, President Obama signed Public Law 111-292, the Telework Enhancement Act \(Act\) of 2010. Telework is defined and authorized by the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, which is now codified within 5 U.S.C. Chapter 65. The Act expands participation in telework and is a key factor in the Federal Government's ability to achieve greater flexibility in managing its workforce using telework. It requires agencies to establish a policy under which eligible employees may be authorized to telework; to determine the telework eligibility for all employees of the agency; and to notify all employees of their eligibility. The Act outlines three preconditions for participation: the employee (1) is deemed eligible, (2) is trained in telework, and (3) has an approved written telework agreement.

The Act makes a distinction between “eligibility” and “participation.” To participate, an employee must first be identified as eligible. An employee is assumed eligible under the Act unless: (1) they have been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year. The days do not have to be consecutive, just within the same year. The offense could have occurred at any time during their employment with the Federal Government. (See footnote 1 in Section VIII for definition of Officially Disciplined); (2) the employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties (see 5 U.S.C. §§ 6502\(a\)\(2\)\(A\) and \(B\)); or (3) the employee's performance does not comply with the terms of the telework agreement between management and the employee (see 5 U.S.C. § 6502\(b\)\(3\)).

An employee can meet the eligibility criteria in accordance with the Act, but the duties of their position may not be conducive or appropriate for teleworking. In such cases, the employee is not eligible to telework based upon the duties of their current position.

Note: Although remote work (as defined in the policy) is not considered to be telework within the meaning of the Act, the Department has determined that remote workers must meet the eligibility requirements for telework under the Act to work remotely.

VII. DEFINITIONS

Act of God – An act of God means an act of nature, including hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, wildfires, earthquakes, landslides, snowstorms, and avalanches (Title 5, Code of Federal Regulations \(CFR\) § 630.1602).

Approving Official – Designated by the head of each bureau/OU, the official authorized to approve individual telework agreements. In some cases, the approving official and the supervisor are the same person.

Alternative Worksite – Is generally considered an employee's approved telework site, or for a remote worker, the approved remote site (e.g. an employee's residence).

Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) – Overseas work arrangement where a Federal executive branch employee temporarily performs the work requirements and duties of their domestic Civil Service or Foreign Service (FS) position from an approved overseas location via a DETO Agreement. Employees have no authorization to telework from a foreign location without an approved DETO Agreement. DETO agreements are not needed for U.S. territories or possessions; however, the employee’s locality pay changes.

Eligible to Telework – All employees are considered eligible to telework, unless: (1) the employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year (5 U.S.C. § 6502(a)(2)(A)) (there are no exceptions); (2) the employee has been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties (5 U.S.C. § 6502(a)(2)(B)) (there are no exceptions); or (3) the employee’s performance does not comply with the terms of the telework agreement between the supervisor and the employee (5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3)).

ERG Member – Emergency Relocation Group member. A person (including alternates) who may be required to work during a Continuity of Operations (COOP) exercise or activation where they may report to an alternative site, or may be required to perform duties through telework, in order to perform agency essential function or other COOP required function(s).

Essential Functions – Functions that enable the Federal Government to provide vital services, exercise civil authority, maintain the safety and well-being of the general populace, and sustain the industrial/economic base in an emergency.

Evacuation Order – An agency may order one or more employees to evacuate their worksite and work from their homes (or alternative location mutually agreeable to the agency and employee) during a pandemic health crisis without regard to whether the agency and employee have a telework agreement in place when the order to evacuate is issued (Title 5, CFR § 550.409\(a\)). Under these circumstances, an agency may designate the employee’s home (or alternative location mutually agreeable to the agency and employee) as a safe haven, and provide evacuation payments to the employee. An agency must compute the evacuation payments, and determine the time period during which such payments will be made (Title 5, CFR § 550.404). An evacuated employee at a safe haven may be assigned to perform any work considered necessary or required to be performed during the evacuation period without regard to the employee’s grade/band, level, or title. The employee must have the necessary knowledge and skills to perform the assigned work. Failure or refusal to perform assigned work can be a basis for terminating evacuation payments, and disciplinary action. An evacuation order can be issued for up to 180 days and reissued if the situation still warrants one.

Hoteling – A telework arrangement in which employees are not assigned permanent space in their designated traditional worksite, but share offices and conference space as necessary when working at the traditional worksite. Such space is assigned by reservation, much like a hotel. Bureaus/OUs should consider using hoteling or other office sharing arrangement for employees who telework 4 days a week or more in a pay period.

Mobile Worker – An employee who, by the nature of their duties, do not have a designated traditional physical worksite, and typically use their home as their duty station. Due to the nature of their work, they are not considered telework-ready employees.

Note: This is different from ‘hoteling’ arrangements, in which frequent teleworkers use shared space when they are working at their designated traditional worksite.

Official Duty Station (aka Official Worksite) – It is the bureau/OU worksite for most employees, including a teleworker. For a remote worker, the official worksite is the alternative worksite to which the bureau/OU and the employee agreed (e.g. the employee’s residence). The official worksite is generally the location of the employee’s duty station as documented on an employee’s Standard Form (SF) 50, Notice of Personnel Action. The location of an employee’s position of record where the employee regularly performs their duties.

If the employee’s work involves recurring travel or their work location varies on a recurring basis, the duty station is the location where the work activities of the employee’s position of record are based. An employee’s official duty station determines the appropriate locality pay area for pay purposes for General Schedule or equivalent employees. It also impacts other expenses such as relocation and travel expenses under the Federal Travel Regulations (FTR), as well as local travel expenses.

Official Time – As defined in and authorized by Title 5, United States Code \(U.S.C.\) § 7131.

Operating Status Announcements – Are generally issued when weather or other emergency conditions prevent Federal employees from safely traveling to or safely performing work at an approved work location (5 U.S.C. 6329c\(b\)). The inability to safely travel to an approved work location may result in “closure” of a Federal office (i.e., closed to the public and non-emergency employees) for the full day or authorization of a delayed arrival. Authorization of early departure may be based on unsafe conditions at the work location or unsafe travel conditions affecting travel from the work location, both of which make it unsafe for the employee to continue to perform work at the location. Depending on the conditions that affect a workday, the various operating status announcements have different procedures and application to an employee’s workday.

Regular/Recurring Telework – Telework occurs as part of an ongoing regular schedule such that the employee typically teleworks on the same day(s) and works at the traditional worksite on the other days during each biweekly pay period. Employees must receive supervisor/manager approval for the schedule (and any modifications to it), but do not need to obtain additional separate approval for each day they telework.

Remote Worker – An alternative work arrangement by which an employee is scheduled to perform the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite (e.g., home, other alternative location) other than the employee’s traditional worksite, either within or outside of the locality pay area of the traditional worksite and does NOT physically report to the traditional worksite twice each bi-weekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis. The employee’s official duty station must be changed to the alternative worksite for pay purposes, relocation expenses, travel expenses, etc., and must be documented on the employee's SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, even if the alternative worksite is within the same locality pay area as the traditional worksite.

Note: All remote work outside the U.S. requires approval from the Department of State, Chief of Mission. See "DETO" definition.

Situational Telework – Approved telework performed on an occasional, one-time, or irregular basis. An employee may be approved to telework on a situational basis (not regular/recurring), but must have successfully completed the required DOC telework training or approved bureau/OU specific training via the Commerce Learning Center \(CLC\) or other system capable of tracking when employees have successfully completed the course. An employee must have a telework agreement in place before participating. "Unscheduled telework" is a specific form of situational telework. (See "Unscheduled Telework" definition)

Telework – Official definition in 5 U.S.C. § 6501(3), "The term 'telework' or 'teleworking' refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work." The employee must be scheduled to physically report to the bureau/OU traditional worksite at least twice each bi-weekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis. The employee must physically report to the traditional worksite unless excused by their supervisor for legitimate reasons (e.g., approved leave, meeting at an offsite location). The duty station of the employee remains the duty station of the traditional worksite.

Telework Agreement – A signed written agreement between the employee and their supervisor/manager which provides the terms of the telework arrangement and contains the requirements under Section XIII of this policy.

Telework Eligible Position – A position is an eligible position unless the official duties require on a daily basis (every workday) the direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the head of the bureau/OU; or the employee performs on-site activities that cannot be performed at an alternative worksite.

Telework-Ready Employee – An employee who occupies a telework-eligible position and has completed the required telework training; has a signed individual telework agreement; and has the necessary equipment, etc. at the alternative worksite to perform the duties and responsibilities of their position during their period of telework. This includes employees under a regular/recurring agreement and those under a situational agreement.

Temporary Duty (TDY) Location – A place, away from an employees' official duty station, where the employee is authorized to travel.

Traditional Worksite (aka agency worksite, regular worksite) – The official bureau/OU physical location where work activities are based, generally considered a centralized location of an employee's assigned organization. This is the physical location where the employee would work absent a telework or remote work arrangement.

Traditional Workers – Individuals who do not have a voluntary telework agreement and perform the duties and responsibilities of their position at the traditional worksite.

Unscheduled Telework – Is a form of “situational” telework in which eligible telework-ready employees may telework when an operating status announcement includes “unscheduled telework.” Employees must follow their bureau/operating unit’s policies and procedures (including required notification of the employee's supervisor) and subject to any applicable collective bargaining requirements (as consistent with law).

VIII. POLICY

The DOC recognizes that a well-managed, widely used telework program has the potential to lead to benefits such as: (1) improved marketability (as a more competitive and inclusive employer); (2) reduced commuting time (that can contribute to an improved quality of work/life balance); (3) cost savings (in areas such as recruitment and retention of employees); and (4) an improved Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP). The DOC supports and encourages telework as a major element in its efforts to reduce its facility space requirements, thereby reducing its energy consumption, greenhouse gas emissions, surface ozone, rent, and other operating costs.

The DOC telework policy allows for remote work, but emphasizes it is not an employee’s right to remote work even if the duties/responsibilities of their position are conducive for this type of arrangement. Supervisors/managers need to consider equity in the office, bureau/OU, and the DOC as a whole. Supervisors/managers need to consider the current and future financial impact of a different locality pay area on pay, possible relocation expenses under the FTR if the remote work arrangement is not successful, and travel expenses under FTR when a remote worker is required to report to the traditional worksite to attend meetings, team-building sessions, conferences, etc.

Close and ongoing communications between employees and management in all aspects of telework/remote work are essential for a successful work arrangement. The policy acknowledges that the employees and management are equally responsible for contributing to the success of the specific telework/remote work agreement.

The policy gives bureaus/OUTs maximum flexibility to support telework on a day-to-day basis and in periods where the traditional worksite is unavailable or less available to part of the workforce. The policy allows for remote work, but cautions supervisors/managers on approving it solely on the portability of the duties and responsibilities of the position. Decisions must be made holistically, considering equity among employees, economic impact to the traditional worksite area, and current and future financial obligations and risks.

A. General Policy

Participation in telework and remote work is open to all eligible employees without regard to race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy and gender identity), national origin, political affiliation, sexual orientation, marital status, disability, genetic information, age, membership in an employee organization, parental status, military service, or other non-merit factors.

It is DOC policy to allow eligible employees to work at alternative worksites (i.e., home, or other approved location) in lieu of their traditional worksite during an agreed upon regular/recurring time of their regular tour of duty, or on a situational basis, if the employee's duties are conducive for teleworking/remote working, and the employee has an approved telework/remote work agreement in place. Supervisors/managers are encouraged to support telework for eligible employees of at least 4 days each biweekly pay period.

Employees who telework must physically report to the traditional worksite on a regular/recurring basis at least twice each biweekly pay period to maintain the duty station of the traditional worksite for pay purposes etc., even if their alternative worksite is within the locality pay area of the traditional worksite.

To carry out this policy to the maximum extent, the bureaus/OUs must establish a Telework Implementation Plan (Plan) consistent with this policy, and have the option to include remote work. The plan must be filed with the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM). If a bureau/OU Plan is not filed, the bureau/OU will be considered as operating under the DOC Telework and Remote Work Plan.

An employee's decision to telework or remote work is voluntary unless it is a condition of employment (i.e., the employee is designated as an "emergency employee"), or is required to perform an agency essential function or other required function(s) as part of a COOP team, or is issued an evacuation order. In these instances, an employee may be required to work at home or at another approved alternative worksite.

B. Types of Telework

There are two types of telework: (1) routine telework in which telework occurs as part of an ongoing, regular schedule; and (2) situational telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked are not part of a previously approved regular/recurring telework schedule. This situational telework includes "unscheduled telework" in which DOC office(s) are open but under an "Unscheduled Telework" operating status announcement by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) or other appropriate authority.

Teleworkers must be scheduled to physically report to the traditional worksite on a regular/recurring basis at least twice each biweekly pay period regardless of whether their alternative worksite is within or not within the locality pay area. The employee must physically report to the traditional worksite unless excused by their supervisor for legitimate reasons (e.g., approved leave, meeting at an offsite location).

C. Eligibility

All DOC employees (except USPTO and NOAA Commissioned Officer Corps) who meet the definition of "employee" as defined in 5 U.S.C. § 2105 are covered by the policy, in accordance with the Act.

Exceptions. Employees who occupy positions for which telework/remote work is permitted may telework/remote work under this policy, unless they fall within the following categories:

1. The employee has been officially disciplined¹ for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year. The days do not have to be consecutive, just within the same year. The offense could have occurred at any time during an employee's employment with the Federal Government.
2. The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties² (see 5 U.S.C. §§ 6502(a)(2)(A) and (B));
3. The performance of the employee does not comply with the terms of the telework/remote work agreement between the supervisor and that employee³ (5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3)).

Precluded Due to the Nature of Work of the Position. While employees may be eligible because they meet the above requirements, they may be precluded from teleworking/remote working if the official duties of the position require on a daily basis (i.e., every workday):

1. Direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the agency head.
2. On-site activity that cannot be handled at an alternative worksite; or
3. Being a mobile worker (not eligible for telework due to the nature of their work).

D. Teleworking/Remote Working and Care for Elders, Children, or Other Dependents

If the elders, children, or other dependents residing with a teleworking/remote working employee can care for themselves for part of the workday, then their presence at the alternative worksite would not interfere with the employee performing their duties and responsibilities.

Teleworking/remote working employees who are responsible for caring for dependents at their home or other alternative worksite should coordinate with their supervisors to establish flexible schedules, to request appropriate leave, or to otherwise account for time spent engaging in dependent care.

¹ Definition of Officially Disciplined – A disciplinary action resulting in placement of a document in an employee's Official Personnel Folder (OPF); the ban on telework participation remains in effect as long as the document stays in an employee's OPF. A suspension or termination related to the items mentioned in PL 111-292 resulting in a document (SF-50) that permanently remains in the OPF would result in a permanent ban in telework participation.

² There are no exceptions for VIII.C.a.1 or VIII.C.a.2., above.

³ The length of this prohibition is up to the approving official.

E. Teleworkers, Remote Workers, Traditional Workers Are Treated the Same for Certain Purposes

1. Periodic appraisals of job performance of employees.
2. Training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees.
3. Work requirements; and
4. Other acts involving managerial discretion.

F. Performance Standards

Performance standards for telework-ready employees and remote workers must be the same as performance standards for traditional work employees. Expectations for performance should be clearly addressed in each employee's performance plan, and the performance plan should be reviewed to ensure the standards do not create inequities or inconsistencies between telework-ready/remote workers and traditional work employees. All employees are held accountable for the results they produce.

G. Performance of Teleworkers/Remote Workers

An employee will not be authorized to telework if their performance does not comply with the terms of the telework agreement (5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3)). While remote work is not specifically covered under 5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3), it is the policy of the Department that employees will not be authorized to remote work if their performance does not comply with the terms of their remote work agreement.

H. Remote Work

Remote work is not an entitlement, even if the duties of the position are conducive to this type of arrangement. These employees have received approval from their bureau/OU to perform the duties of their position at an alternative worksite (i.e., their home) 100 percent of the time without a requirement to physically report to the traditional worksite at least twice each bi-weekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis each pay period. The alternative worksite location becomes their official duty station for locality pay purposes, travel expenses, relocation expenses, etc., and must be documented on the employee's SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, even if the alternative worksite is within the locality pay area of the traditional worksite.

1. Approval Process. Bureaus/OU have authority to determine the review and approval process. However, it is recommended that policies make clear the criteria by which remote work arrangements will be evaluated and approved/disapproved to avoid claims of favoritism or unfair or inequitable practices. In the absence of a bureau/OU remote work policy, the bureau/OU must have the approving official be no lower than the first level senior executive service employee in the employee's chain of command.

It is recommended that bureau/OUTs consult with the Office of General Counsel (OGC) regarding remote work agreements when the alternative worksite is outside of the local commuting area of the traditional worksite, to ensure proper language is contained in the agreement to protect the Department if there is a need to terminate the remote work agreement.

Below are some items to consider in the review process:

- What is the percentage of the workforce that can reasonably work remotely without impact to mission or customer service?
- How will a remote work arrangement benefit the employee, the team, the organization, and the manager?
- How will remote workers communicate work progress on an ongoing basis to their supervisor, team members and other stakeholders?
- Are there work processes that need to be revised to incorporate remote work arrangements effectively?
- How will remote workers continue to access the resources they need to do their job?
- What support will employees need to meet job expectations in a remote work environment?
- How will managers interact with remote employees to ascertain whether employees are accomplishing their work at an acceptable level?
- What is the potential impact of the organization's physical footprint and plans for accommodating long-term fluctuations in the numbers of remote workers?
- What are the budgetary implications of a potential change of locality pay (i.e., locality payments, special rate supplements, and non-foreign area cost-of-living allowances)?
- What is the frequency with which remote workers will be required to visit the traditional worksite, and what are the budgetary implications of the associated travel costs (travel expenses under the Federal Travel Regulation (FTR) for employees working outside of the locality pay area, as well as reimbursement for local travel for employees working within the locality pay area but 50 miles or more away from the traditional worksite)?
Note: OPM recommends bringing remote workers into the traditional worksite at least biannually in order to build camaraderie, commitment to the mission, and productive communication among employees.
- What is the plan for accommodating remote workers with on-site workstations on those occasions when they are required to visit the traditional worksite;
- What are the budgetary (and associated mission-impacting) implications of potentially having to pay an employee's relocation expenses should management terminate the remote work arrangement?
- What is the proximity and access to a sensitive compartmented information facility (SCIF), as applicable?
- What is the proximity to an approved drug testing facility, as applicable?

2. Changing the Alternative Worksite. Remote workers may not change their alternative worksite without prior approval from their supervisor/manager. A change in worksite could require a change of duty station, which is a personnel action, requiring supervisory approval and documentation. An employee cannot independently change their duty station or enter into a remote work status simply by moving out of the local commuting area.

3. Providing Equipment. If the Job Opportunity Announcement (JOA) specified that the work would be performed remotely, then the bureau/OU must provide the employee with the equipment needed to effectively perform the duties of the position. If the bureau/OU is permitting remote work at the employee's request, the bureau/OU has the latitude to decide what equipment to offer; and it should be documented in the agreement.
4. Relocation Expenses. While the bureau/OU is generally not required to cover relocation expenses for employee-driven requests to work remotely on a full-time basis, relocation reimbursement may apply if the bureau/OU chooses to relocate the employee back to the traditional worksite. Responsibility for relocation expenses should be covered in the remote agreement, especially if the arrangement was initiated at the employee's request. It is recommended that the bureau/OU consult with the OGC about the payment of relocation expenses and the responsibility thereof, when the remote work agreement is terminated
5. Severance Pay. Remote work agreements should address severance pay. If a separated employee otherwise meets the conditions for severance pay eligibility in 5 CFR § 550.704, they may be entitled to severance pay as computed under 5 CFR § 550.707 unless the bureau/OU and employee enter into a written agreement in advance that provides otherwise. When a remote work arrangement is initiated at the request of an employee for personal reasons, it is recommended that the bureau/OU consult with the OGC regarding severance pay language in the agreement.
6. Travel/Relocation (General Services Administration). Remote work agreements should address travel/relocation expenses. Federal Travel/Relocation policies and regulations fall under the purview of the General Services Administration. Bureaus/OUTs must be aware that remote workers may be entitled to receive travel and relocation benefits under the Federal Travel Regulation (FTR), CFR 41, Chapters 300-304, depending on their location. Local travel costs, are not under the authority of the FTR and are provided under DOC Travel Policy.

When remote work is initiated at the employee's request to accommodate their personal circumstances it is recommended that the bureau/OU consult with the OGC about the payment of relocation expenses and the responsibility thereof, when the remote work agreement is terminated.

The FTR defines official station as:

Official station—An area defined by the agency that includes the location where the employee regularly performs their duties or an invitational traveler's home or regular place of business (see §301-1.2). The area may be a mileage radius around a particular point, a geographic boundary, or any other definite domain, provided no part of the area is more than 50 miles from where the employee regularly performs their duties or from an invitational traveler's home or regular place of business. If the employee's work involves recurring travel or varies on a recurring basis, the location where the work activities of the employee's position of record are based is considered the regular place of work.

7. Compensatory Time Off for Travel. Remote work agreements should address compensatory time off for travel. Employees who are officially ordered to travel away from their official worksite may be afforded compensatory time off for travel, in accordance with applicable law and regulations, based upon the approved travel itinerary.
8. Coding Time & Attendance (T&A). Remote work is not telework; therefore, is not coded as telework on a T&A record.

I. Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas

On June 7, 2016, the Department of State (DOS) distributed an Executive Secretary Memorandum, "Requirements for Executive Branch Employees Teleworking in Foreign Locations," known as a DETO (Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas) Agreement. Specifically, unless exempted by Presidential directive or legislation, Executive Branch Federal employees conducting official U.S. Government business in foreign countries are subject to the DOS's Chief of Mission authority, and their presence at an overseas post must be preapproved from the Chief of Mission. Employees have no authorization to work from a foreign location without an approved DETO Agreement and Official Chief of Mission approval. DETO agreements are not needed for U.S. territories and possessions; however, the employee's locality pay changes.

There are two types of DETOs: 1) Sponsored DETO – when a DOC employee is on U.S. Government orders of a spouse or partner; 2) Individual DETO – when a DOC employee is NOT on a U.S. Government order of a spouse or partner.

It is DOC policy that only Sponsored DETO Agreements will be considered, and the DETO must not incur any additional costs to the bureau/OU than it would otherwise cost for the employee to work at their normal location. Individual DETOs are not authorized. Before submitting a request for a Sponsored DETO to the DOS, the request must be approved by the Office of the Chief Information Officer (OCIO), the Office of Security (OSY), Employment and Labor Law Division/Office of the General Counsel, and OHRM.

Once DOC approvals are provided, the Head of the Bureau/OU must submit a request to the Director, requesting the DETO be submitted to the DOS for approval, along with the DOC approvals, the signed DETO Agreement, and the employee's position description or statement of duties. OHRM will draft a memo to the Executive Director of the DOS Regional Bureau. Upon approval of the Executive Director of the DOS Regional Bureau, the DOS will send the request to the Chief of Mission. Only after Chief of Mission approval, the employee submits a request through either the NSDD38 electronic system (for DETOs of 1 year or more), or through the e-country clearance system (for DETOs of less than 1 year).

The overseas duty station (overseas alternative worksite) must be documented on their SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action. Locality pay is only for the lower 48 states and Washington, D.C., plus Alaska, Hawaii, and the U.S. territories and possessions. DETO employees are not eligible for locality pay; they receive their appropriate GS/equivalent base pay. They are also not eligible for danger pay, or any other pay entitlements that a non-DETO employee would receive if assigned to the same overseas area.

The Department of State's policy that can be used as a guide is 3 Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM) 2370.

J. Pay and Leave

1. Locality Pay. An employee's locality rate of pay is based on the employee's official duty station (aka official worksite) and is determined in accordance with 5 CFR § 531.604\(b\). The bureau/OU must determine and designate the official duty station for an employee covered by a telework or remote work agreement using the criteria in VIII. N., below.
2. Premium Pay. The same premium pay rules apply to employees when they telework and remote work as when they work at the traditional worksite.

Telework-ready and remote work employees who perform work while under an Operating Status of closed, delayed arrival, early departure, etc. are not entitled to receive overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time off in lieu of overtime payment for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours.

3. Leave. The same leave regulations apply to employees when they telework and remote work as when they work at the traditional worksite. Employees must follow the same procedures as traditional work employees for requesting and obtaining leave approval, in compliance with their office procedures, or the terms of an applicable CBA.

K. Weather and Safety Leave

OPM's weather and safety leave regulations, implementing the provision of 5 U.S.C. § 6329c, the Administrative Leave Act of 2016, section (b), "Leave for Weather and Safety Issues," states that all telework program participants will be ineligible for weather and safety leave when a closure is announced except in rare circumstances when one of the exceptions under 5 CFR § 630.1605\(a\)\(2\) is applicable. Since the rationale for teleworkers is the same for remote workers the following applies:

1. Bureaus/OUs cannot provide weather and safety leave to a telework-ready or a remote worker who is able to continue working safely at an approved alternative worksite during severe weather or other emergency situations. Generally, telework-ready and remote work employees will not receive weather and safety leave, since they are not usually prevented from performing work at an approved location due to a weather or other safety-related emergency.

2. Written agreements must indicate, in accordance with bureau/OU policy and any applicable CBAs, that telework-ready and remote work employees are required to work from their alternative worksite, if their alternative worksite is their home, when their traditional worksite is closed by other than Federal law/Executive order. Telework-ready and remote work employees must follow their written agreements.
3. On a case-by-case basis, the supervisor should excuse a telework-ready or remote work employee from duty without charge to paid personal leave or loss of pay during an emergency, if the employee is prevented from working when: (1) the emergency adversely affects the alternative worksite (e.g., disruption of electricity, or network connection problems that prevent telework); or (2) the telework-ready or remote work employee's duties are such that they cannot continue to work without contact with individuals at the traditional worksite, and those individuals are not present.
4. If the telework-ready or remote work employee faces a personal reason that prevents them from working successfully at the alternative worksite, the employee may request the appropriate leave (annual, sick, compensatory, credit hours, compensatory time for travel). The employee also may request to change their alternative work schedule, if applicable.
5. Systems are to be in place to support telework/remote work in an emergency, including a communication process to notify COOP personnel, emergency, and non-emergency employees of the activation of the bureau/OU's emergency plan, and the bureau/OU's "operating status" during the emergency.
6. As with traditional worksite employees, telework and remote work employees may not receive weather and safety leave for hours during which they are on other preapproved leave (paid or unpaid) or paid time off (5 CFR 630.1606\(c\)).

L. Operating Status Announcement and Telework/Remote Work

In the Washington, D.C. area, OPM-issued operating status announcements apply to employees working in all executive agencies with offices located inside the Washington Capital Beltway. Employees working in offices located outside of the Washington Capital Beltway must follow the operating status announcements issued by their bureau/OU. While Federal Executive Boards (FEBs) do not cover the entire United States, FEBs are currently located in 28 metropolitan areas that are major centers of Federal activity. In these areas, the FEB provides up-to-date, accurate, and consistent information so Federal field office heads can make informed decisions on operating status announcements for their employees in those areas.

1. Unscheduled Telework. This type of telework allows telework-ready employees to work from home or at an approved alternative location upon notification to their supervisor in accordance with the terms of the written agreement, and/or applicable CBA.

2. Federal/DOC Offices Are Closed. Telework-ready employees working from home must work when Federal/DOC offices in their local commuting area are closed (other than for Federal holidays or holidays declared by Executive order), even if it is not the employee's regularly scheduled telework day. Telework-ready also includes employees under a situational telework agreement. However, on a case-by-case basis, weather and safety leave may be provided if the employee is unable to continue working. (See Section VIII.K.3 above.)
3. Early Dismissal/Delayed Arrival. Teleworkers working from their homes, are not dismissed from duty for any part of the workday. However, on a case-by-case basis, supervisors may grant weather and safety leave for all or part of the day if the employee is unable to continue working. (See Section VIII.K.3 above.)

Note: Remote workers must work from their alternative worksite during any of the above operating announcements, unless their duties are such that they cannot continue to work without contact with individuals at the traditional worksite, and those individuals are not present. Remote workers must discuss other possible work duties with their supervisors and receive approval for weather and safety leave.

M. Emergency at the Alternative Worksite

When an emergency affects only the alternative worksite for a major portion of the workday, the telework-ready employee may be expected to report to the traditional worksite, or to another approved alternative worksite, or request approval of paid personal leave, as applicable (i.e., annual, compensatory time, compensatory time off for travel, credit hours, etc.). However, on a case-by-case basis, the supervisor may grant an appropriate form of excused absence if the employee is unable to continue working. (See Section VIII.K.3.) The supervisor may also grant an appropriate form of excused absence if the remote worker is unable to continue working.

N. The Official Duty Station

The location of an employee's position of record where the employee regularly performs their duties. If the employee's work involves recurring travel or their work location varies on a recurring basis, the duty station is the location where the work activities of the employee's position of record are based, as approved by their supervisor/manager. An employee's official duty station determines the appropriate locality pay area for pay purposes for General Schedule or equivalent employees (Title 5, CFR § 531.605). It also impacts other expenses such as relocation and travel expenses under the FTR.

1. Documentation. The official duty station must be documented on the employee's SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action.
2. Temporary Details. There is no change to the official duty station for employees temporarily detailed to a position in a different location without a change in the permanent position of record. They maintain the locality pay area of the permanent position of record. For additional information on official duty stations, please see http://www.opm.gov/oca/pay/html/Official_Duty_Station.asp.

O. Determining the Official Duty Station

The official duty station is the location of the traditional worksite as long as the employee is scheduled to physically report to the bureau/OU traditional worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis. The employee must physically report to the traditional worksite unless excused by their supervisor for legitimate reasons (e.g., approved leave, meeting at an offsite location).

1. The official duty station is the alternative worksite (i.e., home or other alternative worksite) if the employee does NOT meet the requirement above and report at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis to the traditional worksite, unless excused by their supervisor for a legitimate reason. This is true even if the alternative worksite is within the same locality pay area.

When an employee does not meet the requirement above and report to the traditional worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis, unless excused by their supervisor for a legitimate reason, the employee is not a teleworker, they are a remote worker.

2. In the case of an employee whose work location varies on a recurring basis, the employee does not need to report at least twice each bi-weekly pay period at the traditional worksite as long as the employee is regularly performing work within the locality pay area for the traditional worksite.

Note: Employees occupying Senior Executive Service (SES) positions, Senior Level (SL) positions, and Scientific or Professional (ST) positions do not receive locality pay. Therefore, there are no pay implications if these employees work the entire 80 hours of the pay period in a different locality pay area than their official duty station. They continue to receive the same pay.

P. Exception to a Change in the Duty Station Rule for a Temporary Situation

In certain temporary situations, a bureau/OU may continue to designate the location of the traditional worksite as the official duty station of a teleworker, even though the employee is not able to report to the traditional worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis.

Note: The fact that an employee may receive lesser pay or benefits if the official duty station is changed to the temporary worksite location is not a basis or justification for using this exception.

The intent of this exception is to address temporary situations in which an employee is expected to return to their regular worksite when the temporary situation or agreed upon time period has concluded.

In making these determinations, supervisors/managers need to consider pay equity between the employee receiving this exception and other employees who are working in the same locality pay area as either their traditional worksite location or their permanent alternative worksite location. The temporary exception should generally be used only in cases where: (1) the employee is expected to return to their regular worksite (i.e. telework location, remote work location, traditional worksite) in the near future, or (2) the employee is expected to continue working at the temporary worksite but will be able to report to the regular worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis in the near future. Examples of appropriate temporary situations include:

- Recovery from an injury or medical condition;
- Emergencies that prevent an employee from regularly commuting to the traditional worksite or working at their alternative worksite, such as in a severe weather emergency or a pandemic health crisis. (For instance, in the aftermath of a hurricane or flood, an employee may be forced to temporarily relocate, making commuting to the regular worksite twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis not possible. If the employing bureau/OU sets up telework arrangements for the employee, a temporary exception to the twice-a-pay-period requirement would be appropriate.);
- An extended period of approved absence from work (e.g., paid leave);
- A period in which the employee is in TDY status away from their regular worksite; or
- A period during which the employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than their regular worksite.

Q. Establishing the Work Schedule

Work schedules identify the days and times an employee will work while teleworking or remote working in the same manner as identified for working at the traditional worksite. Normally, telework and remote work schedules parallel those at the traditional worksite; however, they can differ to meet the needs of the organization and participating employees' needs. Work schedules may also include fixed times during the day for supervisor–employee telephone conversations, team meetings, etc. that may be helpful to ensure ongoing communication, and should be similar to the basic level of interaction with those at the traditional worksite. For additional information on hours of duty, please visit DOC's "Alternative work schedules."

IX. THE BUREAU/OPERATING UNIT TELEWORK IMPLEMENTATION PLAN

Prior to implementing a bureau/OU telework program, the bureau/OU must submit a Telework Implementation Plan (Plan) to OHRM for compliance review/approval. If a bureau/OU Plan is not filed, the bureau/OU will be considered as operating under this DOC Telework and Remote Work Plan.

Each bureau/OU Plan must:

1. Indicate that the Telework Assessment Tool (See Appendix A) is a tool for use by the appropriate management official and the employee in helping to determine the appropriateness of the employee teleworking. It should be provided to employees prior to their submission of a request to telework.

2. Indicate that the duration of the written agreement is to be established by the employee and the approving official. The agreement must include the duration of the individual telework agreement.
3. Encourage supervisors/managers to permit telework-ready employees to telework on a regular/recurring and/or situational basis for at least 4 days per biweekly pay period. Each situation must be evaluated on the unique facts of the situation.
4. Indicate procedures for notifying each employee of their eligibility or ineligibility to telework. All employees are assumed eligible to telework unless they fall under one of the three statutory bars to telework or are determined to be precluded from teleworking due to the nature of their position. Such determinations must be made position-by-position, based on the duties of the position and the needs of the service.
5. Advise employees that agreeing to an individual telework agreement is voluntary unless telework is a condition of employment (emergency or COOP designation). Note: There are situations when an employee without a telework agreement may be required to work from an alternative worksite (e.g., home) such as under evacuation orders⁴. This is not considered telework under the terms of this policy. Under an evacuation order, the employee may be required to do any work for which the employee is qualified.
6. Require the agreement to provide that an employee may not be authorized to telework if their performance does not comply with the terms of the agreement between the approving official and themselves.
7. Require the agreement to stipulate that the employee must be performing at the Fully Successful (or equivalent) level or better to telework. This can be assumed to be true for employees without a DOC rating of record; however, once they receive a rating of record, the Fully Successful or equivalent level or better must be met to continue teleworking.
8. Advise telework-ready employees they are required to work when their traditional worksite is closed for reasons other than a Federal holiday or Executive order, even if it is not their regular telework day.
9. Establish policies for addressing requests from employees to become remote workers, and governing the conditions of that arrangement.
10. Establish a communications process to notify employees designated as COOP emergency relocation group (ERG) members or “emergency” personnel about telework flexibilities.
11. Establish and include a process for approving telework or remote work arrangements (e.g., applications, approval levels, timelines for approval/denial, training requirements, and written agreements).

12. Identify process for changing/modifying telework arrangements (schedules or locations).
13. Require the employee to successfully complete the required training prior to approval of their written agreement.
14. Bureaus/OUTs may use Telework Fundamentals for Managers and/or Fundamentals for Employees as the required training. Bureaus/OUTs may also develop their own interactive telework training programs consistent with Department policy. The programs must permit the tracking of all students who take the course by showing when the course was taken, the name of the student, and the date of successful completion. Although prior clearance and approval are not required, the bureau/OU must submit the program to OHRM for oversight purposes.
15. Require an employee wishing to telework to sign an agreement that includes all the mandatory requirements listed in XIII.A and any other conditions agreed to by the supervisor and employee, or consistent with the terms of an applicable CBA. Describe the process for obtaining authorization and the level of authorization required for the expenditure of funds to cover expenses associated with approved telework arrangements.
16. State that telework-ready and remote work employees will receive the same treatment and opportunities as traditional work employees (e.g., work assignments, awards and recognition, development opportunities, promotions, etc.).
17. Require that all hours teleworked be recorded under the appropriate telework category each pay period in the designated T&A system.
18. Include a process for providing orientation and training for new telework-ready employees and their supervisors regarding policy, bureau/OU specific programs, and their responsibilities.
19. Specify how to contact the bureau/OU telework coordinator.
20. Include language indicating that all employees designated as “emergency” or with COOP responsibility, must have an approved individual telework agreement.
21. Include bureau/OU information technology (IT) and cybersecurity guidelines.
22. Establish procedures for administering and evaluating the telework program.

X. ACCOMMODATIONS FOR EMPLOYEES WITH DISABILITIES

It is important to distinguish between ordinary requests to telework and requests from persons with disabilities for reasonable accommodation. Approving officials/supervisors should consult DAO 215-10, “Reasonable Accommodation Policy,” and the Disability Program Manager as part of the interactive process established by the Rehabilitation Act, in order to fully understand supervisors' responsibilities under the law.

As governed by Section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 791 et. seq., the Rehabilitation Act and DAO 215-10, the determination as to whether an employee may be granted telework as a reasonable accommodation due to a disability should be made through the Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator, the employee's first-line supervisor, and the employee.

XI. MANDATORY TELEWORK TRAINING

A. Approving Officials Complete Telework Training

All approving officials must successfully complete the appropriate DOC-approved training programs prior to approving a written telework agreement.

B. Employees Complete Telework Training

All employees who want to telework must successfully complete the appropriate DOC-approved training before approval of their written agreement. Upon successful completion of the training, the employee must provide proof of successful completion of the course to their approving official.

C. Employees Complete Security Training

All employees are required to complete all mandatory IT security training, including the annual training.

XII. PREPARING FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TELEWORK/REMOTE WORK AGREEMENT

The following actions are to be taken when establishing a written agreement:

A. Employee Submits a Completed Telework/Remote Work Agreement

The interested employee submits a completed telework/remote agreement and telework safety checklist in accordance with their bureau/OU policy or the terms of an applicable CBA. (See Appendix B, "Telework Request/Agreement," Appendix C, "Remote Work Agreement," for a sample templates, and Appendix D, "Safety Checklist (telework and remote work)."

B. Employee and Supervisor Discuss Proposed Telework/Remote Agreement

The employee and supervisor/manager discuss the proposed agreement and communications (phone calls, emails, virtual meetings, etc.) between the employee and supervisor/manager.

Supervisors may utilize Appendix E, “Telework Agreement – Supervisor Checklist,” and Appendix F, “Remote Worker Agreement – Supervisor Checklist.”

XIII. INDIVIDUAL TELEWORK AGREEMENTS⁵

The written agreement provides the framework for the discussion that needs to take place between the employee and the supervisor/manager before the employee signs the agreement.

A. Mandatory Requirements

1. Indicate the duration of the agreement in the written agreement.
2. All written agreements must contain a notice clearly informing the employee they are required to telework whenever their traditional worksite is closed (other than for Federal holidays or Executive orders), even if it is not their regularly scheduled telework day.
3. All written agreements must contain notification that when the appropriate authority announces, “Unscheduled Leave” or “Unscheduled Telework,” telework-ready employees may elect either option by notifying their supervisor consistent with the employee’s written agreement or the terms of an applicable CBA. Employees are to be reminded that if they elect to perform unexpected telework, they must have a sufficient amount of work to complete in their period of telework. If the employee does not have enough work, they may either take unscheduled leave for the entire workday or use unscheduled leave to account for hours not worked.
4. The agreement must provide that an employee is not authorized to telework if their performance does not comply with the terms of the written telework agreement.
5. The purpose of the telework may not be to perform official time.⁶ The employee must first be performing management-assigned duties before any official time request can be considered. The agreement must set forth the expectations, i.e., management-assigned work, agreed upon by management and the employee, so the employee has prior knowledge of these expectations.
6. Management may find it necessary to require a non-emergency, telework-ready employee to report for an assignment that requires presence at the worksite (e.g., providing a presentation or performing administrative duties at a pre-scheduled conference). This should not be a last-minute surprise, but a special work circumstance that both the supervisor and employee know about, discuss, and plan in advance as the special work requires.

⁵ Please see Section VIII.H. “Remote Work” for guidance on remote work agreements as well as Appendix C, “Remote Work Agreement,” Appendix D, “Safety Checklist (Telework and Remote work),” and Appendix F, “Remote Worker Agreement – Supervisory Checklist.”

⁶ See Section VII, Definitions, “Official Time.”

Note: Management will be required to compensate “remote” workers for their travel, even when their alternative worksite is within the locality pay area of the traditional worksite, if their alternative worksite is more than 50 miles from the traditional worksite

7. Days may be specified or flexible due to business necessity or an employee’s request. Hours to be worked are to be annotated and in accordance with the traditional worksite reporting times.
8. Clarify any assumptions regarding work locations (e.g., if expected to work from home only) as well as frequency and modes of communication (e.g., email vs. telephone, core hours for contact, speed of returning calls).
9. Be clear if the employee is designated as an “emergency employee” or part of COOP and expected to work during a COOP event such as a national or local emergency, or a COOP exercise. All COOP and ERG members must have a telework agreement on file and be prepared to telework at any time.
10. Outline any additional requirements (technology, specific software, data security, etc.)

B. Modifications and Termination

1. Telework is a workplace flexibility (unless designated as a condition of employment), not a legal right and does not change the terms and conditions of employment. The operational needs of the bureau/OU are paramount; employees who telework do not have an automatic right to continue to telework. In accordance with the Act, an employee may not be authorized to continue teleworking if their performance does not comply with the terms of the written agreement between the approving official and the employee.

Note: It is recommended that the bureau/OU consult with the OGC about the payment of relocation expenses and the responsibility thereof, prior to the termination of a remote work agreement, as applicable.

2. Management shall provide sufficient notice, when feasible, before modifying or terminating a written agreement to allow the affected employee to make necessary arrangements. The reason for termination must be documented, signed by the approving official, and provided to the employee. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect.
3. The employee may request to modify the current agreement (e.g., change the regular teleworking day) by submitting a new Telework Application/Agreement and Modification of Telework Agreement with only the requested change indicated.

XIV. TERMINATION OF AGREEMENTS AND APPEALS PROCESS

A. Telework and Remote Requests and Agreements May Be Denied or Terminated

Telework and remote work requests and agreements may be terminated or denied by the approving official in accordance with the terms of an applicable CBA and as long as the denial or termination decision is based on operational needs, conduct, or performance in accordance with the law and any applicable CBAs, not personal reasons or mere managerial preferences. (See Appendix G, “Optional Telework Termination Form”)

B. Immediate Denial

The approving official must immediately deny or terminate telework agreements as applicable, if the employee fails to be eligible due to 5 U.S.C. §§ 6502(A)(2) or (B)(3). It is also the policy of the Department to apply the same eligibility criteria to remote workers; therefore, the approving official must immediately deny or terminate a remote work agreement, as applicable, if the employee fails to meet the eligibility requirements described in 5 U.S.C. §§6502(A)(2) or (B)(3).

C. Written Justification

The approving official must provide written justification to the affected employee, to include information about when or if the employee would be eligible to reapply, and if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve their chance of future approval. Approving officials are to provide employees, and maintain copies of, signed written denials or terminations of telework agreements.

D. Termination by the Employee

An employee may terminate their written telework agreement by written notice to the approving official. The employee may terminate their written remote work agreement in accordance with the terms of the agreement.

E. Administrative Grievance Procedures

Telework-ready and remote employees not covered by a negotiated grievance procedure must use the administrative grievance procedure in DAO 202-771, “Administrative Grievance Procedure,” to appeal issues relating to their telework/remote work status or other telework/remote work matters.

F. Negotiated Grievance Procedure (NGP)

Employees covered by an NGP that does not specifically exclude this matter must use the applicable NGP.

G. Discrimination

Employees who believe they are the victims of prohibited discrimination may utilize the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's complaint procedures or the applicable negotiated grievance procedures (NGP), as appropriate.

XV. PROGRAM OVERSIGHT AND RESPONSIBILITIES

A. Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM)

OHRM is responsible for oversight of the Department of Commerce Telework and Remote Work Plan and for any reporting requirements to OPM. OHRM will review and monitor the various plans to ensure consistency across the bureaus/OU's with implementing the program.

B. Bureau/Operating Unit (OU)

Each bureau/OU is responsible for the development, funding, administration (including providing a designated Telework Coordinator), operation, and evaluation of its telework Plan. The evaluation should be accomplished in collaboration with the exclusive representative, if any. Each bureau/OU will develop a telework Plan consistent with this broad DOC Telework and Remote Work Plan and submit it to OHRM for compliance review/approval. When a bureau/OU lacks a telework Plan, the bureau/OU will be covered under the DOC's Telework and Remote Work Plan.

C. Supervisors/Managers

Supervisors/managers are responsible for the overall management and success of teleworking/remote working, if applicable, in their work units, including day-to-day operations. They are encouraged to permit employees to telework on a regular/recurring and/or situational basis for at least 4 days per biweekly pay period when requested by eligible employees. Supervisors/managers may also approve remote work requests in accordance with the terms of this DOC Telework and Remote Work Plan and the applicable bureau/OU Implementation Plan. Each request must be evaluated on the unique facts of the situation, the duties of the position, the needs of the office, budget implications, etc. Telework-ready and remote work employees and their approving officials are responsible for annually reviewing the written agreement to ensure it is current. The date of the review must be documented.

D. Telework Managing Officer (TMO)

The TMO shall be an SES official of the DOC with direct access to the Secretary of Commerce, and who has policy and program oversight of the DOC-wide telework program. The TMO serves as an advisor for DOC leadership.

E. Telework Program Manager (TPM)

The TPM shall be located in OHRM, and is a resource for Telework Coordinators, supervisors, approving officials, and employees. The TPM is responsible for responding to all inquiries from bureaus/OUs, and from other organizations such as OPM and the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). The TPM will maintain and forward data from all bureaus/OUs to the TMO, including an explanation of whether or not the bureau/OU is working satisfactorily toward the requirements detailed in this policy and, if not, what actions are being taken to identify and eliminate barriers to maximizing telework.

F. Telework Coordinators (TC)

The TCs provide bureau/OU policy and procedural guidance as well as advice and assistance to their bureau/OU-level personnel tasked with policy and implementation plan development. In addition, they work with senior-level managers in establishing and obtaining bureau/OU telework goals, objectives, and reporting requirements. The TC will, in partnership with the approving official and the exclusive representative, if applicable, establish a procedure for notifying each employee of their eligibility or ineligibility to telework, and coordinate a process for approving and tracking telework and remote work arrangements. The TC will answer questions and provide guidance to employees and supervisors as well as an orientation for new teleworkers.

The TCs will develop and maintain a reporting system that captures telework and remote work participation, terminations, and denials. The TCs are responsible for providing the following information to the TPM upon request:

1. The degree of participation by employees of each bureau/OU during the period covered by the report.
2. The method for gathering telework/remote work data in each bureau/OU.
3. The reasons for positive or negative variations in telework participation if the total number of employees teleworking is 10 percent higher or lower than in the previous year of the reporting activity.
4. The bureau/OU goal for increasing telework participation if applicable.
5. An explanation of whether a bureau/OU met its established goal(s) for the last reporting period and, if not, what actions are being taken to identify and eliminate barriers.
6. An assessment of progress made in meeting participation rate goal(s) and other telework goal(s) (i.e., the impact of telework on recruitment and retention, performance, etc.).
7. A description of best practices, if applicable.
8. A central file of all approved written agreements for the bureau/OU.

XVI. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

The bureau/OUTs, via their TC, are required to respond to TPM requests for a variety of reporting requirements/initiatives. Below is information that might be requested, though it is not inclusive.

1. The degree of participation by employees of each bureau/OU teleworking during the period covered by the report.
2. The method for gathering telework data in each bureau/OU.
3. The reasons for positive or negative variation in telework participation if the number of bureau/OU employees teleworking is 10 percent higher or lower than in the previous year.
4. The bureau/OU goal for increasing telework participation to the extent practicable or necessary.
5. An explanation of whether or not a bureau/OU met its goals for the last reporting period and, if not, what actions are being taken to identify and eliminate barriers.
6. An assessment of the progress made in meeting bureau/OU participation-rate goals and other goals related to telework, such as the impact of telework on emergency readiness, energy use, recruitment and retention, performance, productivity, and employee attitudes and opinions regarding telework.
7. Best practices in the bureau/OU.

XVII. IT SECURITY REQUIREMENTS FOR TELEWORK-READY EMPLOYEES

Telework-ready and remote work employees must abide by the IT security requirements conveyed in the Commerce Information Technology Security Program Policy, Commerce Information Technology Requirements, Frequently Asked Questions, and IT Security Policy memos. The Telework/Remote Work Agreement signed by the employee and their supervisor may describe additional security requirements. DOC IT security documentation can be found at: http://home.commerce.gov/CIO/ITSITnew/IT_Security_Program_Documentation.html

Telework-ready and remote work employees must abide by bureau/OU-specified IT security requirements. Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that employees agree to comply with all existing IT security requirements and to ensure that employees are accountable.

XVIII. POLICY ON INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY SECURITY

The DOC's CIO is responsible for issuing and maintaining IT and eGov policies and minimum implementation standards, including remote access and safeguarding of sensitive information. These policies and minimum implementation standards outline responsibilities of bureau/OU CIOs as well as teleworkers/remote workers to enable an effective working environment for the employee and the protection of DOC systems from undue risk. Operating unit CIOs, with the support of their IT security officers, are responsible for establishing teleworking IT security procedures specific to their bureau/OU and providing secure telecommuting resources and operational controls commensurate with the sensitivity of the data processed (along with policies and minimum implementation standards provided by the CIO). The DOC's policy on remote access is at

https://connection.commerce.gov/sites/connection.commerce.gov/files/media/files/2014/citr-008_remote_access.pdf

Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready and remote work employees agree to comply with all existing security policies and procedures, including IT security. Telework-ready employees also agree that their responsibilities, described in Section 3.3.9 of the DOC's "IT Security Policy and Minimum Implementation Standards," remain in effect while on telework/remote work status. Other pertinent bureau/OU policies on IT security may also exist; supervisors are responsible for ensuring that employees agree to follow all applicable policies.

The workplace and workstation must be set up to accomplish secure information processing, including the proper storage of Sensitive Information in both electronic and paper form. The telework-ready and remote work employee, following bureau/OU policies, must minimize security vulnerabilities to the workstation and the DOC network.

XIX. PROTECTING THE SECURITY AND CONFIDENTIALITY OF RECORDS

All telework-ready and remote work employees must ensure that records subject to the Privacy Act of 1974, or which have sensitive Personally Identifiable Information (PII) or Business Identifiable Information (BII), are not disclosed to anyone except those who have been authorized access to such information to perform their duties. Bureaus/OUTs must ensure that appropriate physical, administrative, and technical safeguards are used to protect the security and confidentiality of such records.

A. Disclosure of Records from an Agency System of Records

1. Telework-ready and remote work employees are responsible for ensuring that their disclosure of a record (information) from any agency system of record complies with the Privacy Act of 1974.
2. The Privacy Act of 1974 defines a 'system of records' as a group of any records under the control of any agency from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or by some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particular assigned to the individual. Department of Commerce system of record notices (SORNs) are posted at <http://www.gpo.gov/fdsys/browse/collection.action?collectionCode=PAI&browsePath=2005&isCollapsed=false&leafLevelBrowse=false&yord=0>.
3. The Privacy Act of 1974 prohibits the disclosure of a record (information) from an agency system of record that is not identified as a routine use in that system's SORN, does not comply with an exemption identified in the SORN, or does not comply with 1 of the 12 exceptions to the non-disclosure-(to third parties)-without-consent rule.

4. A Privacy Act incident occurs when an officer or employee of the agency, who by virtue of their employment or official position, has possession of or access to agency records that contain individually identifiable information, the disclosure of which is prohibited by 5 U.S.C. § 552a (or regulations established thereunder), and discloses the material in any manner to any person or agency not entitled to receive it. Knowing misuse or release of information protected by the Privacy Act of 1974 can subject an employee to fines and/or criminal sanctions.
5. Telework-ready and remote work employees must immediately report a suspected or confirmed Privacy Act incident to their bureau/OU privacy officer or the Computer Incident Response Team (CIRT) and immediate supervisor.

B. Proper Handling of PII and BII

1. Telework-ready and remote work employees are responsible for the safeguarding of PII and BII.
2. PII is information that can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, such as name, social security number, biometric records, etc., alone, or when combined with other personal or identifying information, which is linked or linkable to a specific individual, such as date and place of birth, mother's maiden name, etc. Sensitive PII, if lost, compromised, or disclosed without authorization, could result in substantial harm, embarrassment, inconvenience, or unfairness to an individual.
3. Types of PII considered sensitive when associated with an individual are: social security number (including truncated form), place of birth, date of birth, mother's maiden name, biometric information, medical information (except brief references to absences from work), personal financial information, credit card or purchase card account numbers, passport numbers, potentially sensitive employment information (e.g., personnel ratings, disciplinary actions, and results of background investigations), criminal history, and any information that may stigmatize or adversely affect an individual. The DOC's IT Privacy Policy provides that breaches of sensitive PII are subject to notification/reporting requirements.
4. When deciding whether PII is sensitive or non-sensitive, it is important to consider the type of information, obligations, or expectations regarding the protection of information, risk (probability and consequences) of loss or compromise of information, and context of information. Context is particularly important. The same types of information can be sensitive or non-sensitive depending upon the context. For example, a list of names and phone numbers for the Department softball roster is very different from a list of names and phone numbers for individuals being treated for an infectious disease. It is important to use good judgment when deciding whether PII is sensitive or non-sensitive. When in doubt, treat PII as sensitive.

5. The Department's policy states that if sensitive PII must be electronically transmitted, it must be protected by secure methodologies such as encryption, Public Key Infrastructure, or secure socket layers. Federal Information Processing Standards (FIPS) Publication 140-2, "Security Requirements for Cryptographic Modules" provides the standard to which encryption methodologies must conform. The transmission of sensitive PII, even if protected by secure means, must be kept to a minimum. Check with your bureau/OU's Office of the Chief Information Officer to determine methods or services they are using to support the electronic transmission of sensitive PII.
6. In addition to sensitive PII, telework-ready and remote work employees must ensure the safeguarding of BII. BII is information that is defined in the Freedom of Information Act as "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person [that is] privileged or confidential." "Commercial" is not confined to records that reveal "basic commercial operations" but includes any records (information) in which the submitter has a "commercial interest" and can include information submitted by a non-profit entity. Terms for BII that must be protected from disclosure include "confidential business information," "confidential commercial information," and "proprietary information."
7. Sensitive PII and BII can be stored on Government systems only, and saved, stored, or hosted only on DOC-authorized equipment (including contractor-owned equipment or a system that is approved to be used as a Government system). Computers that are personally-owned may not be used to save, store, or host sensitive PII and BII that is collected or maintained by the Department.
8. Sensitive PII and BII must be sent encrypted as an email attachment and encrypted on mobile computers, media (e.g., CDs, DVDs, USB drives), and devices (e.g., laptops, hard drives). When faxing sensitive PII and BII, an advisory statement about the contents must be included on the cover sheet, and the recipient must be notified immediately before and after transmission. Exception: According to the Commerce Acquisition Manual (CAM) 1313.301, cardholders shall not transmit credit card information over a facsimile machine. When mailing sensitive PII and BII, it must be physically secured when in transit. Do not mail or send by courier sensitive PII and BII on CDs, DVDs, hard drives, flash drives, USB drives, floppy disks, or other removable media unless the data is encrypted. Sensitive PII and BII must be sealed in an opaque envelop or container and mailed using First Class or Priority Mail, or a commercial delivery service (e.g., Federal Express or DHL). Appropriate methods must be used to destroy sensitive paper PII and BII (e.g., shredding, using a burn bag) and securely delete sensitive electronic PII and BII (e.g., empty the Windows recycle bin).
9. Telework-ready employees, remote work employees, and supervisors are responsible for complying with all bureau/OU guidelines on reporting PII and BII incidents. The OMB Memorandum M-07-16 defines a PII incident as the loss of control, compromise, unauthorized disclosure, unauthorized acquisition, unauthorized access, or any similar term referring to situations where persons other than authorized users, and for other than authorized purpose(s), have access or potential access to PII, whether physical or electronic. All employees, including telework-ready and remote work employees must immediately report a suspected or confirmed PII and BII incident to their bureau/OU privacy officer or CIRT and immediate supervisor.

XX. PRIVACY ACT, SENSITIVE, AND HIGHLY SENSITIVE INFORMATION

A. Decisions on Proper Use and Handling of Sensitive Information.

These decisions will be made by the approving official who permits the employee to work at home or another alternative worksite. A telework/remote work agreement will be signed by the employee and their approving official that contains the specific data types allowed to be accessed. Information is generally categorized into the following groups: Non-Sensitive Information; Sensitive Information; and Classified National Security Information.

B. Physical Security Standards

The physical security standard for PII and other Sensitive and Administratively Controlled Information must be addressed prior to allowing telework. Chapter 35 of the OSY Security Manual provides minimum physical security standards for the office environment that are also applicable during telework/remote work. At a minimum, Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI), including PII, should be afforded protection to prevent unauthorized access of the information.

C. Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI) Registry

The National Archives and Records Administration's CUI Office developed the CUI Registry, which allows anyone to access the Safeguarding and Dissemination requirements for CUI that must be afforded to information like PII (privacy) and other unclassified information. The registry may not be all inclusive, as only those categories of unclassified information that have a law, regulation, or Government-wide policy governing dissemination and/or safeguarding are provided. Therefore, any Sensitive and Administratively Controlled Information in hard-copy form that does not fall within the parameters of the manual, or the registry, should be brought to the attention of the Information and Personnel Security Division of the OSY.

Teleworkers, remote workers, and supervisors should visit <http://www.archives.gov/cui/registry/category-list.html> prior to allowing hard copy PII and other administratively controlled information outside the workplace for telework/remote work purposes.

Controlled Unclassified Information, established by Executive Order 13556, is legally protected and covered under the Sensitive Information category.

D. Highly Sensitive Information

This information is subject to the most stringent security and access control rules, such as courier authorization, hand-to-hand transmission, or agency-specific rules not included in the DOC Telework and Remote Work Plan. Classified information that requires Secret or Top Secret security clearances for protecting national security information is included in this category. Classified information (Confidential, Secret, or Top Secret) may only be transmitted or removed from official worksites by classified networks or authorized official couriers. This type of information may not be used or accessed in any manner by teleworkers or remote workers.

XXI. EMERGENCY EMPLOYEES AND COOP TEAM MEMBERS

Employees designated as an “emergency” employee and those designated as a COOP ERG or other COOP team member may be required to report to the traditional worksite, an alternative worksite, or telework from home, based on the nature of the emergency.

These employees may be required to telework during emergency closures or other emergencies, including pandemics and for COOP exercises, on any day, even if that day is not a regular telework day or a day with specific approval for situational/episodic telework. COOP team members may also be required to perform duties outside of their usual or customary duties to ensure continuation of agency-essential missions or activities.

If an employee is designated as an “emergency” employee, or COOP ERG, or other member, the supervisor, along with the employee, should make advance and/or situational decisions as to whether the employee must physically report for duty at the traditional worksite, or may work from home or another approved alternative worksite.

For example, if the purpose of the employee reporting for duty at the traditional worksite is to provide policy guidance or to notify specific individuals of emergency requirements, this could be accomplished from home, provided the employee has access to the resources necessary to perform the required services. However, in some cases, the only way to obtain the services of the employee may be through telework from an alternative worksite.

For example, if inclement weather or other emergency situation results in a transportation shutdown, but phone lines remain working, the employee may be able to work from home rather than reporting to the traditional worksite or alternative site (i.e., the COOP site).

During any period that the DOC is operating under a designated COOP event, including an exercise, the COOP plan shall supersede any telework policy (Public Law 111-292 Section 6504(d)(2)).

APPENDIX A: TELEWORK ASSESSMENT TOOL

The decision to telework should be based on the ability of an employee to work in a setting that may be in his/her home or a Federal facility other than the regular office, without immediate supervision. The following tool is to be used by the supervisor as a basis for discussing the option and appropriateness of telework for a particular employee. Employees are also required to use the assessment tool to help in determining if telework is suitable for their positions.

Please rate yourself or your employee, using the following scale:

5 – Always 4 – Usually 3 – Sometimes 2 – Rarely 1 – Never

1. Employee works without regular monitoring/supervision.
2. Employee is comfortable working alone.
3. Employee independently identifies required work products.
4. Employee successfully plans work production schedule.
5. Employee communicates hindrances to successful completion of a task or project in sufficient time to allow for alterations that improve the opportunity for success.
6. Employee is knowledgeable about your organization's procedures/policies.
7. Employee is fully aware of Department information technology security.
8. Employee meets deadlines.
9. If telework will be in the employee's residence, the residence has an appropriate work environment.
10. Employee is willing to provide his/her own equipment if Government-furnished equipment is not available.
11. Employee is computer literate.
12. Employee has successfully completed the appropriate Commerce online teleworking training course.

APPENDIX B: TELEWORK REQUEST/AGREEMENT

The below telework agreement is a basic template that can be tailored to meet bureau/operating unit (OU) needs. Generally, a telework agreement would include things like:

APPENDIX D: SAFETY CHECKLIST (Telework and Remote Work) – HOME WORK SPACE

Participating employees may use the following checklist to assist them in a survey of the overall safety and adequacy of their alternative worksite. The following are only recommendations, and do not encompass every situation that may be encountered. Employees are encouraged to obtain professional assistance with issues concerning appropriate electrical service and circuit capacity for residential worksites.

- Practice a fire evacuation plan for use in the event of an emergency.
- Check your smoke detectors regularly and replace batteries once a year.
- Always have a working fire extinguisher conveniently located in your home, and check the charge regularly.
- Computers can be heavy. Always place them on sturdy, level, well maintained furniture.
- Use a sturdy chair that provides good support and can be adjusted.
- Choose office chairs that provide good supporting backrests and allow adjustments to fit you comfortably.
- Locate your computer to eliminate noticeable glare from windows and lighting. Place computer monitor at height that is comfortable and does not require neck or back strain. Locate computer keyboards at heights that do not require wrist strain or place the keyboard on an adjustable surface.
- Install sufficient lighting in locations that reduce glare at the work surface.
- Arrange file cabinets so that open drawers do not block aisles.
- Be sure to leave aisle space where possible to reduce tripping hazards.
- Always make sure electrical equipment is connected to grounded outlets.
- Avoid fire hazards by never overloading electrical circuits.
- Inspect and repair carpeting with frayed edges or loose seams. Avoid using throw rugs that can cause tripping hazards in your work space.
- Locate computers, phones and other electrical equipment in a manner that keeps power cords out of walkways.
- Keep your work area clean and avoid clutter, which can cause fire and tripping hazards.
- Do not allow non-government employees to operate or repair government owned equipment.
- Always keep government files and information in a secure place and do not advertise your home office to strangers.
- Always use proper lifting techniques when moving or lifting heavy equipment and furniture.
- Always report accidents and injuries immediately to your supervisor.

APPENDIX E: TELEWORK AGREEMENT – SUPERVISOR CHECKLIST

Supervisors must use this checklist to ensure that telework requirements are met and that covered employees understand the policies and procedures of the telework program. The Telework Agreement is not final until the checklist items are complete. After an item is completed, list the date on the line next to it.

Telework Guidelines

Voluntary Participation. The employee voluntarily agrees to work at the agency-approved telework site indicated above and agrees to follow all applicable policies and procedures. This is a flexibility that may be used by management to accomplish work needs. However, an employee may not be forced to enter into a telework agreement.

Official Worksite. In accordance with 5 CFR 531.605, the official worksite for a General Schedule teleworker remains the location of the agency worksite (i.e., the agency worksite where they would normally work, not the telework location) The employee generally should be scheduled to be at the agency worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis. See HR Handbook for guidance on remote workers for employees who do not report to an agency worksite on a regular basis (change of official worksite may affect pay, RIF competitive area, travel reimbursement, and/or unemployment compensation).

Official Duties. The employee will perform official duties only at the agency worksite or agency-approved telework site (i.e., alternative worksite). The employee may not conduct personal business while in official duty status at the telework site.

Time and Attendance. The employee will follow established office procedures for requesting and obtaining approval of leave. The supervisor must certify biweekly time and attendance for hours worked at the agency worksite and the telework site.

Overtime. Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that teleworkers perform overtime work only for additional work for which compensation for overtime payments or compensatory time off (as appropriate) is warranted. Employees not covered (i.e., exempt) from the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) are only compensated for overtime work under the appropriate statutory and regulatory authorities when that work is ordered or approved in advance, in writing, by the supervisor. Supervisors should closely monitor teleworkers who are FLSA non-exempt (i.e., covered) employees to ensure that suffered or permitted overtime work is either prohibited or minimized.

Equipment. The employee is responsible for protecting any Government furnished equipment (GFE), and use of such equipment is governed by the Policy on Personal Use of Government Office Equipment. [Bureau/OU Name] will maintain and service GFE. The employee may be required to bring the equipment into the agency worksite for service.

Liability. The Government will not be liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property while the employee is working at the approved alternative worksite, except to the extent the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act is applicable.

Telework Site. The employee will provide a work area adequate for performance of official duties. The employee agrees to review workspace that is located in a personal residence for conformance with the suggested safety checklist. The Government will not be responsible for any operating costs that are associated with the employee using their personal residence as a telework site (e.g., home maintenance, insurance, or utilities). However, the employee does not relinquish any entitlement to reimbursement for authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the Government, as provided by statute and implementing regulations. When authorized and approved in advance, the Government will be responsible for costs associated with ordinary and authorized use of a workstation in a tele-center.

Injury Compensation. The employee may file a claim under Federal Employees' Compensation Act if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the official worksite or the telework site. The employee must notify the supervisor immediately of any accident or injury that occurs at the telework site. The supervisor will investigate such a report immediately.

Work Assignments. The employee will complete all assigned work according to procedures mutually agreed upon by the employee and the supervisor and according to guidelines and standards in the employee's performance plan. The supervisor and employee will agree on terms of reporting work progress and accomplishments from the telework site in accordance with the guidelines and standards in the employee's performance plan.

Performance. Employees who are performing at less than the Fully Successful level are not eligible to telework. Teleworkers will be evaluated pursuant to the same performance standards that would apply if they were not teleworking.

Disclosure. The employee will protect Government records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. 552a.

Classified Information. Classified information may not be taken to or accessed at telework sites.

Sensitive and Personally Identifiable Information (PII). Privacy Act, PII and sensitive non-classified data may be taken to telework sites only with supervisory approval and if required precautions are taken to protect the data. The employee will protect Privacy Act, PII, and sensitive non-classified data from unauthorized disclosure.

Standards of Conduct. The employee agrees they are bound by [AGENCY] standards of conduct while working at the telework site.

Cancellation. After appropriate notice to the supervisor, the employee may terminate the telework arrangements. After appropriate notice to the employee, the supervisor may terminate the telework arrangements.

Computer Use. All employees using wireless connections to access the network remotely must adhere to the “[Bureau/OU] Wireless Access Policy” posted on the internal intranet website. External wireless access points are not managed, maintained, or monitored by [Bureau/OU] and are not considered trustworthy. All communications, transactions, or connections to an [AGENCY] resource over the internet or through a wireless access point must be conducted via an encrypted method such as Citrix, Cisco AnyConnect, VPN, or other access as [Bureau/OU] may designate.

Transit Subsidy. Telework does not change an employee’s eligibility to participate in the Transit Subsidy Program. Employees must be mindful of the requirements under the transit subsidy program and any impact that reduced commuting costs may have on the amount of subsidy they are entitled to receive. Employees have an obligation to notify the agency of any reduction in use of transit as a result of telework to enable the agency to adjust the subsidy.

Waste, Fraud, and Abuse. All employees have a responsibility to report waste, fraud, and abuse within the Agency to the Office of the Inspector General (OIG).

APPENDIX F: REMOTE WORKER AGREEMENT – SUPERVISOR CHECKLIST

Supervisors must use this checklist to ensure that remote work requirements are met and that covered employees understand the policies and procedures of the remote work program. A Remote Worker Agreement is not final until the checklist is complete. After an item is completed, list the date on the line next to it.

Checklist Item	Date Completed
1. Remote Guidelines have been explained to the employee and signed by supervisor and employee (attached).
2. The provisions governing premium pay have been explained to the employee including that they must receive the supervisor’s approval in advance of working overtime.
3. Performance expectations have been discussed with the employee. Performance Standards are in place and have been signed.
4. Policies and procedures covering classified, secure and privacy data including PII have been explained to the employee.
5. The provisions governing changes to the terms and conditions of the remote work agreement have been explained to the employee, including that they must receive the supervisor’s approval in advance of any changes to the location of the duty station (i.e., remote work site). Failure to obtain management approval may result in termination of the remote work agreement.
6. The employee has been given and signed the Safety Checklist, which identifies safety and adequacy issues that employees should consider when working from home (attached).

Also, identify any Government equipment/property that will be provided for the remote site below, as applicable:

Item	Yes	No

Remote Worker Guidelines

Applicability. The Remote Worker Policy applies to current and future remote workers. A remote work arrangement may be initiated by an employee for the convenience of the employee or by the agency.

Duty Station. All pay and travel entitlements are based on the official worksite.

Salary and Benefits. Approving a remote worksite may affect pay, RIF competitive area, travel reimbursement, and/or unemployment compensation.

Official Worksite. In accordance with 5 CFR 531.605, the official worksite is the location where the General Schedule employee regularly performs their duties. If the employee is not scheduled to report to the agency worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis (i.e., is a remote worker), the employee’s official worksite for location-based pay purposes is the alternative work location under the remote work agreement.

Official Duties. The employee will perform only official duties at the official remote worksite. The employee may not conduct personal business while in official duty status at the remote site.

Time and Attendance. The employee will follow established office procedures for requesting and obtaining approval of leave. The supervisor must certify biweekly time and attendance for hours worked at the remote worksite.

Work Schedule. Work schedule (AWS or fixed) will follow established Agency/office procedures for setting, requesting and approval of available work schedule options. Identified work schedule ensures supervisor, co-workers, customers, etc., can interact with remote employee during the identified work schedule timeframes.

Overtime. Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that remote workers work overtime only when the supervisor authorizes and intends to make overtime payment (including compensatory time off, as appropriate). Both Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) exempt and non-exempt employees must be paid overtime (or compensatory time, under certain circumstances) when overtime hours are ordered and approved in advance in writing by a supervisor with the authority to authorize overtime. Employees agree that failure to obtain proper prior approval for overtime work may result in supervisor taking appropriate action to address.

APPENDIX G: OPTIONAL TELEWORK TERMINATION FORM

The telework option is a privilege and not an employee right. As such, it falls under the supervisor’s discretion to determine how work should be accomplished with the organization. Termination of the telework agreement can be either voluntary or involuntary.

This is notification that the telework agreement, which was signed on _____ is no longer in effect and is hereby terminated.

Termination is based on (check one):

Voluntary Withdrawal

Involuntary Withdrawal

If telework is involuntarily terminated, the decision is based on:

Requirements of the current work assignment

Reassignment or change in duties

Failure to maintain employee eligibility standards

Breach in Information Technology Security policies and/or procedures

Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

I. INTRODUCTION

Telework is a flexible work arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position and other authorized activities from an approved alternative worksite other than the employee's designated traditional Federal workplace.

Telework is a workplace flexibility management option to facilitate the timely and effective accomplishment of the work of the office. An employee's decision to elect to telework is entirely voluntary (unless the employee is designated an "emergency" employee or is designated as a member of the Emergency Response Group).

The NOAA Telework Implementation Plan is consistent with the provisions of the Telework Enhancement Act \(Act\) of 2010 \(Public Law 111-292, October 9, 2010\), the Department of Commerce Telework Plan \(August 2021\), and the Office of Personnel Management's (OPM's) policies contained in their Guide to Telework in the Federal Government, Governmentwide Dismissal and Closure Procedures \(November 2018\), and OPM's Additional Guidance on Post-Reentry Personnel Policies and Work Environment.

The law and policies are intended to promote:

- Recruiting and retaining the best possible workforce;
- Continuing operations during emergency conditions (including pandemic health crises);
- Reducing costs related to employee turnover and absenteeism;
- Reducing real estate and transit costs; and
- Enhancing work-life balance by allowing employees to better manage their work and personal obligations.

NOAA and the Department of Commerce (DOC) recognize that a well-managed, widely used telework program has the potential to lead to benefits such as:

- Improved marketability (as a more competitive and inclusive employer);
- Reduced commuting time (that can contribute to an improved quality of work/life balance);
- Cost savings (in areas such as recruitment and retention of employees); and
- An improved Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP).

NOAA supports and encourages telework as a major element in its efforts to reduce its facility space requirements, thereby reducing its energy consumption, greenhouse gas emissions, surface ozone, rent, and other operating costs.

The operational needs of NOAA supersede an employee's desire to telework. In addressing any application for telework, including an application to continue, modify, or terminate an employee telework arrangement, management will consider the following:

- Operational needs and work requirements of the organizational unit,
- Duties of the position, and,
- Employee conduct, performance, and capacity or demonstrated ability to telework.

While approval is at the sole discretion of the supervisor, it may not be based on mere managerial preference. The aforementioned criteria will be reviewed using the NOAA

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment. Employees do not have an entitlement to telework, nor do employees who currently telework have an automatic right to continue teleworking.

DOC encourages participation at a rate of at least four (4) days per pay period for all supervisory and non-supervisory employees with sufficient amounts of portable work. Where a position is not suitable for significant amounts of telework, supervisors are encouraged to use telework as a means for greater flexibility to the extent possible.

5 U.S.C. § 6329c - Administrative Leave Act

III. DEFINITIONS

Agency Worksite – The location from which work would have been performed had the employee not entered into a telework or remote work arrangement. For teleworkers, this is the same as the traditional worksite.

Alternative Worksite – The employee's residence, or a location other than the traditional worksite which has been approved by the manager/supervisor for the performance of the employee's official duties. For purposes of telework, the alternative worksite is considered an official Government worksite.

Approving Official – The immediate supervisor, unless an office has issued a standard operating procedure requiring approval at a high level.

Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) – Overseas work arrangement where a Federal Executive branch employee performs the work requirements and duties of their domestic Civil Service or Foreign Service (FS) position from an approved overseas location via a DETO Agreement. Employees have no authorization to telework from a foreign location without an approved DETO Agreement. DETO agreements are not needed for U.S. territories or possessions.

Eligible Employee – All employees are considered eligible to telework unless:

- 1.) the employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five (5) days in any calendar year (there are no exceptions); or
- 2.) the employee has been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties (there are no exceptions), or

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

- 3.) the employee’s performance does not comply with the terms of the written agreement between the approving official and the employee (see Telework Agreement).

Eligible Position – See Position Suitability.

Emergency Response Group (ERG) Member – A person assigned responsibility to report to an alternate site, be on call, or serve as backup, as required, performing agency-essential functions or other continuity of operations-related duties.

Essential Functions – Functions that enable the Federal Government to provide vital services, exercise civil authority, maintain the safety and well-being of the general populace, and sustain the industrial/economic base in an emergency.

Evacuation Pay and Special Allowances – Consistent with NOAA Administrative Order (NAO) 202-1110, during a pandemic health crisis or other emergency situation, the NOAA Administrator may:

- 1) order one or more employees to evacuate their worksite and provide them with evacuation pay and special allowances; or
- 2) Approve evacuation pay and special allowances to an employee or employees in receipt of an evacuation order from a State, Local, or Federal authority.

An employee in receipt of evacuation pay may be required to work from a “safe haven” (usually their homes or an alternative location mutually agreeable to the agency and employee) without regard to whether the agency and employee have a telework agreement in place when the order to evacuate is issued. An evacuated employee at a safe haven may be assigned to perform any work considered necessary or required to be performed during the evacuation period without regard to the employee’s grade/band, level, or title. The employee must have the necessary knowledge and skills to perform the assigned work. Failure or refusal to perform assigned work within the employee’s knowledge, and skill level, except when the failure is due to circumstances beyond the employee’s control related to the evacuation, can be a basis for disciplinary action and termination of evacuation pay.

Hoteling – Telework arrangement in which employees are not assigned permanent space in their designated traditional worksite, but share offices and conference space as necessary when working at the traditional worksite. Such space is assigned by reservation, much like a hotel. NOAA encourages Line and Staff Offices to establish hoteling and space sharing arrangements for all employees who telework three (3) or more days per week.

Mobile Workers – Employees who, by the nature of their duties, do not have a designated traditional agency worksite, and they typically use their home as their duty station. Due to the nature of their work, they are not considered telework-ready employees. Note: This is different from ‘hoteling’ arrangements, in which frequent telework-ready employees use shared space when they are working at their designated traditional worksite.

Official Duty Station – Location of an employee’s position of record where the employee regularly performs their duties (i.e., normally this means the location at which the employee works for the majority of their working time). If the employee's work involves recurring travel or their work location varies on a recurring basis, the duty station is the location where the work activities of the employee's position of record are based, as determined by the manager/supervisor. An employee's official duty station determines the appropriate locality area for pay purposes for General Schedule or equivalent employees as well as entitlement to travel and relocation expenses under the Federal Travel Regulations (FTR).

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan

Officially Disciplined – A disciplinary action that results in the placement of a document in an employee's official personnel file (OPF); the bar on telework participation remains in effect as long as the document stays in an employee's OPF. A suspension or termination related to the items mentioned in the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, Public Law 111-292 that results in a document (Standard Form (SF)50) that permanently remains in the OPF would result in permanent prohibition in telework participation.

Position Suitability – A position is suitable for telework unless the official duties require on a daily basis (every workday) the direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the head of the bureau/operating unit; or the performance of on-site activities that cannot be performed at an alternative worksite.

Routine Telework – Telework that occurs as part of an ongoing regular/recurring schedule such that the employee typically teleworks on the same day(s) during each biweekly pay period or a series of pay periods.

Remote Worker (Within the USA and its Territories) – An alternative work arrangement by which an employee is scheduled to perform the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite (e.g., home, other alternative location) other than the employee's traditional worksite, either within or outside of the locality pay area of the traditional worksite and is not scheduled to report to the traditional worksite at least twice on a regular/recurring basis each pay period. The duty station must be changed to the alternative worksite for pay purposes, relocation expenses, travel expenses, etc., and must be documented on the employee's SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, even if the alternative worksite is within the same locality pay area as the traditional worksite. Remote work is not considered to be Telework under the Telework Enhancement Act.

Remote work guidance based on OPM guidance (including already provided OPM guidance that may form the basis of pilot programs) will be provided in a separate policy. Note: For Remote Work outside of the USA, see Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO).

Situational Telework – Telework performed on an ad hoc, occasional, episodic, one-time, or irregular basis, including Unscheduled Telework, and modifications to an employee's Routine Telework schedule.

Telework – Telework, known as “telecommuting,” refers to a paid, flexible workplace arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite, and is scheduled to report to the traditional worksite at least twice each pay period on a regular/recurring basis. The official duty station remains the traditional worksite.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

Telework Agreement – A signed written agreement between the employee and their supervisor/manager which provides the terms of the telework arrangement and contain the requirements under Section XII of this policy. NOAA considers all telework agreements to encompass both the written application/agreement form, any addendums and additions to the form, as well as the employee’s Performance Plan.

Telework-Ready Employee – An employee who occupies a position suitable to telework and has:

- Completed the required one-time telework training for employees via the Commerce Learning Center (CLC);
- A signed individual telework agreement;
- The required technological necessities to telework (i.e., Computer, internet access, electricity, telephone, etc.);
 - Note: the Telework Agreement should specify the necessary equipment and whether it will be provided by the government or the employee.
- A safe and appropriate approved alternative work site.
- Has sufficient work that can be completed at the alternative work site.

Temporary Duty (TDY) Location – A place, away from an employees’ official duty station, where the employee is authorized to travel. Employees on TDY may be permitted to telework consistent with their agreements. Note: Employees on TDY in foreign locations are not considered to be DETOs, but must receive permission from their manager/supervisor before engaging in telework activities; consideration should be given to potential security issues associated with remotely accessing government systems in the foreign location.

Traditional Worksite – See Agency Worksite.

Unscheduled Telework – A subset of Situational Telework that is available in response to an office closure, weather, or safety event. This type of telework is authorized by OPM or an appropriate agency official in response to an appropriate event or condition effecting an employee’s duty station.

IV. TELEWORK STRATEGIES

- A. Agreeing to Telework. An employee’s decision to telework is voluntary unless telework is a condition of employment (i.e., the employee is designated an “emergency employee”) or is required to continue Government operations in times of emergency (i.e., while in receipt of Evacuation Pay, as a member of the ERG, or as part of the COOP). In these instances, an employee may be required to work at home, or at another approved alternative worksite.
- B. Types of Telework. It is NOAA’s policy to allow eligible employees to work at alternative work sites away from their official duty stations, consistent with the needs of their office, during their regular tour of duty. Employees may be approved for Routine and/or Situational Telework.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

C. Telework Conditions

1. Routine Telework schedules and use of Situational Telework must be approved by an approving official (i.e., supervisor) and may not be changed without prior approval.
2. Employees approved for Routine Telework may be granted Situational Telework when business or personal needs require a short-term change to the telework arrangement, such as switching a scheduled telework day with a day the employee would otherwise report to the agency worksite or adding additional telework days. See “Temporary Telework Arrangements” below for additional details.
3. An employee’s use of telework does not adversely affect their option to use an alternative (flexible or compressed) work schedules.
4. Unscheduled Telework does not require advance approval. When OPM makes an announcement of “Unscheduled Telework” and it is not the employee’s regularly scheduled telework day, the employee may choose to perform unscheduled telework in lieu of reporting to the agency worksite. The employee’s decision is not subject to prior approval by the supervisor. However, the employee must notify their supervisor in accordance with the applicable procedures of the office.
5. In rare circumstances, management may find it necessary to require a teleworking employee to report for an assignment that requires presence at the worksite (e.g., providing a presentation or performing administrative duties at a pre-scheduled conference) on their scheduled telework day. This should not be a last-minute request, but a special work circumstance that both the supervisor and employee know about, discuss, and plan in advance as the special work requires.
6. Communications systems and procedures to conduct telework are to be in place to support telework in an emergency, including a communication process to notify ERG personnel, emergency, and non-emergency employees of the activation of the agency’s emergency plan, and the agency’s operating status during the emergency.
7. All employees designated as “emergency,” as members of the ERG, or have responsibility during activation of the COOP, must have an approved individual telework agreement. Note: Employees required to telework only as a result of emergency or ERG responsibility are not required to telework on a regular, unscheduled, or ad hoc basis and will not be subject to telework requirements during office closures. Their individual telework agreement should specify whether they elect to telework outside of their emergency

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

requirements (and are therefore subject to the normal telework requirements therein).

8. Time and Travel Conditions:
 - a. An employee who is required to travel between their traditional worksite and alternative worksite after the beginning of their work day is considered to be working during the travel, unless Weather and Safety Leave is warranted (See OPM's Governmentwide dismissal and closure procedures for guidance.).
 - b. To reduce government liability and maximize productivity, managers should avoid requiring or permitting employees to travel from their alternative worksite to an agency worksite during the work day. If the requirement to report to the worksite is known prior to the day that the employee is required to report to the worksite, employees should instead be directed to report for a full day of work at the agency worksite. At an employee's request, managers may permit employees to travel from their traditional worksite to their telework location to complete their work day; this travel must be accomplished on personal time (e.g., lunch or during flexible bands) or on approved personal leave.
 - c. Telework-ready employees scheduled to telework during their regular tour of duty on a day when their office is closed (or when other employees are dismissed early) are not entitled to receive overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time off in lieu of overtime payment for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours.
 - d. Employees voluntarily participating in the telework program are required to telework when offices are closed as a result of a weather or safety incident. Employees may be granted personal leave in lieu of teleworking or may be excused from teleworking consistent with the guidance provided in Section VII below.
 - e. All time teleworked in a pay period will be recorded per instructions in the appropriate time and attendance system.

- D. Maximum Amount of Telework. The maximum number of days an employee (including part-time employees) may perform routine or situational telework during a pay period is left to the discretion of the approving official, except that an employee must be regularly scheduled to report to the agency worksite at least twice per pay period on a recurring basis.

The twice per pay period requirement is irrespective of the number of hours spent performing work at the agency worksite; therefore, an employee on an Alternative Work Schedule may spend fewer than 16 hours each pay period at the agency worksite, as long as they have reported on two separate work days.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

The approving official's determination must be based on the employee's readiness to telework, the functions of the position, and the operational needs and work requirements of the organizational unit, not mere managerial preference.

An employee may be permitted to telework in excess of this maximum situationally or temporarily as long as there is a reasonable expectation that such employee will return to their routine telework arrangement in the foreseeable future. While there is no specific time limit on these situations, as durations increase supervisors must ensure the circumstances clearly support the temporary nature of the arrangement. See "Temporary Arrangements" in Section XIII for additional details.

E. Teleworking and Care of Elders, Children, and other Dependents.

If alternative caregivers are available (i.e., spouse, babysitter, etc.), or the dependents are able to care for themselves for part or all of the workday (such as older children), then their presence at the worksite would not interfere with the employee performing their duties; therefore, telework in these circumstances may be performed while dependents are at the telework location. Employees should coordinate with their supervisors to use flexible schedules, appropriate leave, or other arrangements to account for their time spent engaging in dependent care.

The above guidance also applies in the event of an office closure that results from a weather or safety emergency that also impacts the availability of dependent care (i.e., schools and/or care facilities are closed or inaccessible). However, if these circumstances significantly diminish an employees' ability to perform agency work, or if the supervisor or a Line or Staff Office policy bars telework in a given dependent care situation, the employee will not be considered telework-ready and therefore must be granted Weather and Safety Leave.

F. Teleworkers and Non-Teleworkers Shall be Treated the Same for Certain Purposes:

1. Periodic appraisals of job performance of employees;
2. Training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reduction in grade, retaining, and removing employees;
3. Work requirements; and
4. Other acts involving managerial discretion.

Note: While managers may require that teleworking employees be available for telephonic or video meetings and respond within reasonable periods of time to impromptu meeting requests (as they would expect of employees in the office), managers may not require employees to keep their video or telephone conferencing channels open for prolonged periods of time to facilitate spot checking of work.

G. Training Requirements. All employees interested in teleworking must successfully complete the required telework training for employees via the CLC before they may be approved to telework.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

The approving official for individual telework agreements must have completed the required telework training for managers via the CLC before they can approve any individual telework agreements.

V. ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA

- A. Non-Discrimination. Participation in telework is open to all eligible employees without regard to race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy and gender identity), national origin, political affiliation, sexual orientation, marital status, disability, genetic information, age, membership in an employee organization, retaliation, parental status, military service, or other non-merit factors.
- B. Employee Eligibility. All NOAA employees are initially considered eligible to telework subject to the following statutory exclusions:
- a. The employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without leave (AWOL) for more than five (5) days in any calendar year; or
 - b. The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties; or
 - c. The employee's performance at the time they request to telework is at least "Fully Successful" or the equivalent (a rating of 55 under Commerce Alternative Personnel System (CAPS)) and the performance of the employee does not comply with the terms of the telework agreement. Note: The duration of a performance-based exclusion is at the discretion of the employee's supervisor; supervisors need not exclude employees until they receive a formal performance review and may permit an employee to telework when they feel their performance has reached the "Fully Successful" level.

If an employee is determined to be ineligible to telework due to these exclusions, the employee will receive a written determination from the approving official within 10 working days of the employee's request to telework.

- C. Position Suitability. The employee is not eligible if the employee's position requires the employee to perform the following types of work on a daily basis (every work day)
- a. Direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the agency head;
 - b. On-site activity that cannot be handled remotely or at an alternative worksite; or
 - c. The employee is a mobile worker (not eligible due to the nature of work)
- These determinations must be made position-by-position, based on the duties of the position and the needs of the service.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

VI. ACCOMMODATIONS FOR EMPLOYEES WITH DISABILITIES

It is important to distinguish between ordinary requests to telework and requests from persons with disabilities for reasonable accommodation. Approving officials/supervisors should consult Department Administrative Order (DAO) 215-10, "Reasonable Accommodation Policy," and the Office of Human Capital Services (OHCS) as part of the interactive process established by the Rehabilitation Act, in order to fully understand supervisors' responsibilities under the law.

As governed by Section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 791 et. seq., the Rehabilitation Act and DAO 215-10, the determination as to whether an employee may be granted telework as a reasonable accommodation due to a disability should be made through the Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator, the employee's first-line supervisor, and the employee.

VII. EXCUSED FROM TELEWORKING

The supervisor, on a case-by-case basis, should excuse a telework-ready employee from duty without charge to paid personal leave or loss of pay during an emergency situation if the employee is prevented from performing work at an approved location due to: (1) an act of God; (2) a terrorist attack; or (3) another condition that prevents the employee from performing work at an approved location. Examples of the latter situation include:

- A. (1) the emergency situation adversely affects the telework site (e.g., disruption of electricity, or network connection problems that prevent telework); or
(2) the telework-ready employee's duties are such that they cannot continue to work without contact with the regular worksite during an emergency situation, and those individuals are not present.
- B. If the telework-ready employee faces a personal hardship that prevents them from working successfully at the telework site, the employee may request the appropriate leave (annual, sick, compensatory, credit hours, compensatory time for travel, weather/safety leave, administrative leave, etc.). The employee may also switch to an alternative work schedule day off, or use "flexing" consistent with the employee's alternative work schedule, if any.

Note: Under certain circumstances, the employee's personal hardship may be a result of weather or safety conditions that permit the supervisor to grant weather/safety leave, such as the need to prepare the home for severe weather, clear snow or ice from the primary egress, or make repairs to damage that threatens the safety of the employee. Supervisors are encouraged to consult with OHCS in determining whether to grant Weather and Safety Leave under these circumstances.

VIII. PERFORMANCE STANDARDS

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

Performance standards for telework-ready employees must be the same as performance standards for non-telework-ready employees. Expectations for performance should be clearly addressed in each employee's performance plan. The performance plan should be reviewed to ensure the standards do not create inequities or inconsistencies between telework-ready and non-telework-ready employees. Like non-telework-ready employees, telework-ready employees are held accountable for the results they produce. Resources for performance management are available from OPM at <https://www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/performance-management/>; and OHCS's performance management resources portal at <https://sites.google.com/noaa.gov/ohcs/policy-procedures/performance-management>.

IX. ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

A. NOAA/OHCS Telework Program Manager (TPM)

1. Develop, review and update the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan.
2. Maintain a list of the primary telework coordinators (TCs) for each line and staff office.
3. Establish procedures for evaluating the telework program.
4. Provide telework reports, with input from line/staff office TCs, as required by the DOC.
5. Provide advice and assistance to line and staff office TCs on the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan, including working with senior-level managers in establishing and obtaining office telework goals, objectives, and reporting requirements.
6. Answer telework-related questions and providing guidance to the NOAA line/staff office TCs.
7. Develop and conduct telework training to approving officials, managers, supervisors and the Line/Staff Office TCs.
8. Develop a catalog of best practices and lessons learned.
9. Develop and maintain an online telework portal of information.

B. Approving Officials. Approving officials are responsible for the overall management and success of teleworking within their offices, including day-to-day operations. Telework-ready employees and their approving officials are responsible for reviewing the individual telework agreement at least annually to ensure that it is current. The date of the review must be documented.

C. NOAA Line/Staff Office Telework Coordinators (TCs)

1. In consultation with the OHCS TPM:
 - a. Conduct training sessions for their assigned line/staff office to supplement the orientation training provided to all new employees. The training session will provide orientation and training for telework-ready employees and their supervisors regarding the implementation plan and their responsibilities; and
 - b. Provide NOAA procedural program guidance to management and telework-ready employees.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

2. Maintain a central file of all approved individual telework agreements for the personnel in their line/staff office as well as a record of all written denials or terminations;
3. Answer telework-related questions and provide guidance to the employees within their line/staff offices;
4. Develop and implement a reporting system capturing telework participation, hours teleworked (from the time and attendance (WebTA) system), terminations, and denials; and
5. Response to requests for reports consistent with Section XV below.

X. PREPARING FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TELEWORK AGREEMENT

The following actions should be taken when establishing an individual telework agreement:

- A. The employee completes the NOAA Supervisor’s/Manager’s Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool (See Appendix B).
- B. The employee completes the “Telework Application/Agreement and Modification of Telework Agreement” (See Appendix A) and submits it to their supervisor along with the certificate showing successful completion of the required telework training for employees via the CLC.
- C. The employee completes the Telework Safety Checklist (See Appendix C).
- D. The employee and supervisor discuss the expectations in the proposed telework agreement, including the performance levels required of the employee and the results of the NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool.
- E. If the supervisor is not the approving official, the supervisor will forward the telework agreement to the approving official with their recommendations.

XI. TELEWORK AGREEMENTS

A. Duration of Telework Agreements

1. Approving Officials should determine the duration of the telework agreement. Telework agreements may be considered indefinite and do not require an expiration date. Approving Officials are encouraged to regularly review telework agreements with participants and make adjustments, including terminations, when requested by employees or determined to be necessary by management. All agreements must be reviewed at least annually. NOAA suggests these reviews be completed during the employee’s annual or semi-annual performance management reviews.
2. An employee may not telework if they do not have a current approved telework agreement in place.
3. In accordance with 5 U.S.C. § 6502\(b\)\(3\), an employee is not authorized to continue teleworking if the performance of that employee does not comply with the terms of the written telework agreement between the approving official and the employee (see “B” below).

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

B. Modification and Termination of Telework Agreement. The operational needs of NOAA supersede an employee’s desire to telework. In addressing any application for telework, including an application to continue teleworking, or in making a decision to modify or terminate an employee telework arrangement, management will first consider the operational needs and work requirements of the organizational unit, the duties of the position, and, through the NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment, the employee’s conduct, performance, and capacity or demonstrated ability to telework. While approval is at the sole discretion of the supervisor, it may not be based on mere managerial preference. Employees do not have an entitlement to telework. Nor do employees who currently telework have an automatic right to continue teleworking.

1. Modification

i. Management Directed Modification

1. Management may modify the agreement at any time to address the operational needs of the work unit, employee performance or conduct, or to comply with law and policy.
2. The approving official must provide written documentation supporting the modification, including the reason for modification, to the affected employee. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect.
3. Management must provide the employee with at least ten (10) working days’ advance notice prior to implementing the modification to allow the employee to make necessary arrangements. In establishing the implementation date, management should consider the nature of the arrangements the employee must make, particularly in situations where the employee had been performing significant amounts of routine telework.

ii. Employee Modification Request

1. An employee may request to modify the current telework agreement (e.g., change the regular teleworking day) by submitting a new “Telework Application / Agreement and Modification of Telework Agreement” (check “Modification”) to the employee’s supervisor with the requested changes highlighted;
2. The supervisor and employee shall discuss the employee’s requested modifications within five (5) working days of submission;
3. If the supervisor is not the approving official, the supervisor will forward the request to the approving official with their recommendations within five (5) working days;

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

4. The approving official will issue a final, written decision to the employee and supervisor within seven (7) working days of receiving the supervisor's recommendation.

2. Termination

- i. There is no mandatory waiting period following termination prior to submitting a new request to telework.
- ii. Employee Termination
An employee may terminate the telework agreement at any time, for any reason, without the need to provide advanced notice, by providing the approving official with written notice of a decision to terminate their written telework agreement. While employees are not required to provide advanced notice, they should notify their managers promptly and prior to executing their termination.
- iii. Management Directed Termination
 1. Management may terminate the agreement at any time to address the operational needs of the work unit, employee performance or conduct, or to comply with law and policy.
 2. The approving official must provide written documentation supporting the termination, including the reason for termination, to the affected employee. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect
 3. Management must provide the employee with at least ten (10) working days advance notice prior to implementing the termination to allow the employee to make necessary arrangements. In establishing the implementation date, management should consider the nature of the arrangements the employee must make, particularly in situations where the employee had been performing significant amounts of routine telework.

C. Appeals

Non-bargaining unit employees must use the procedures in DAO 202-771, "Administrative Grievance Procedure" to appeal issues relating to their request to telework, modification to an existing telework agreement, and management directed terminations of telework agreements.

Bargaining unit employees should use the negotiated grievance procedure and/or follow the process outlined in their collective bargaining agreement unless telework related issues have been excluded from their agreement.

In following the administrative grievance process, the official making the final decision on appeals will issue a written decision on an employee's appeal of the denial

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

of their request within 10 working days of the request being received by the deciding official. If the deciding official disapproves the request, they must provide written justification to the employee indicating when or if the employee would be eligible to reapply, and if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve their chance of future approval. Deciding officials are to provide employees copies of signed written denials or terminations of telework agreements.

- D. Discrimination. Employees who believe they are the victims of prohibited discrimination must use the procedures in DAO 215-9, “Filing Discrimination Complaints,” to appeal the alleged discrimination, or may use the negotiated grievance procedure.

XII. ESTABLISHING THE WORK SCHEDULE

Work schedules identify the days and times an employee will telework. Normally, telework schedules parallel those at the traditional worksite; however, they can differ to meet the needs of the organization and participating employees’ needs. Work schedules may also include fixed times during the day for manager/supervisor/employee telephone conversations, which may be helpful to ensure ongoing communication. For additional information on hours of duty, please visit:

- <https://www.commerce.gov/hr/practitioners/leave-policies/hours-of-duty-and-work-schedules>.
- <https://sites.google.com/noaa.gov/ohcs/employee-resources/manager-resources/manager-resource-guide/hours-of-duty-and-work-schedules>.

XIII. DETERMINING THE OFFICIAL DUTY STATION

The official duty station is the location of the traditional worksite as long as the employee is scheduled to physically reports to the traditional work site at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis. If management were to approve an arrangement through which this criterion is not met, the telework location becomes the official duty station (and the employee is considered a Remote Worker).

Note: If a teleworking employee with a varying work location works at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis in the same locality pay area in which the traditional worksite is located, the employee does not have to report twice each pay period to the official worksite to maintain the locality payment for that area. For example, an employee who is required to perform duties at two or more separate agency worksites within a given locality pay area may meet the twice per pay period reporting requirement by visiting any two agency worksites each pay period.

A. Temporary Telework Arrangements

1. There is no change in official duty station for employees on Detail or TDY.
2. In certain temporary situations, NOAA may continue to designate the location of the traditional worksite as the official duty station, even though the

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

employee is not able to report to the traditional worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/ recurring basis. The intent of this exception is to address temporary situations in which an employee is expected to return to their regular worksite when the temporary situation or agreed upon time period has concluded. Such situations may include, but are not limited to:

- a. Recovery from an injury or illness;
 - b. Emergencies, including severe weather and pandemic health crises;
 - c. Extended periods of approved absence mixed with telework;
 - d. TDY and Details.
3. Supervisors must approve these arrangements in writing, such as by email, and the approval must include:
- a. The location from which the employee will be teleworking (if different from their normal telework location);
 - b. When the temporary arrangement will begin;
 - c. The expected duration of the temporary arrangement;

XIV. PREMIUM PAY AND LEAVE

- A. Pay. An employee's locality rate of pay is based on the employee's official duty station, and is determined in accordance with 5 CFR 531.604. The line/staff office must determine and designate the official duty station for an employee covered by a telework agreement using the criteria above.
- B. Premium Pay. The same premium pay rules apply to employees when they telework as when they are working at the traditional worksite.
- C. Leave and Work Scheduling Flexibilities. Telework-ready employees are governed by the same procedures as non-telework-ready employees for requesting and obtaining leave approval. Telework arrangements should have no impact on alternative work schedules and vice versa.

XV. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

The line/staff offices, via their Telework Coordinator, are required to respond to requests from the OHCS Telework Program Manager for a variety of reporting requirements/initiatives. Below is information that may be requested, although it is not all-inclusive.

1. The degree of participation by employees of each line/staff office teleworking during the period covered by the report;
2. The method for gathering telework data in each line/staff office;
3. The reasons for positive or negative variations in telework participation if the total number of employees' teleworking is 10 percent higher or lower than the previous year in the line/staff office;
4. The line/staff office goal for increasing telework participation to the extent practicable or necessary;

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

5. An explanation of whether or not a line/staff office met its goals for the last reporting period and, if not, what actions are being taken to identify and eliminate barriers;
6. An assessment of the progress made in meeting line/staff office participation-rate goals and other goals related to telework, such as the impact of telework on emergency readiness, energy use, recruitment and retention, performance, productivity, and employee attitudes and opinions regarding telework; and
7. Best practices in the line/staff office.

XVI. INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY (IT) SECURITY REQUIREMENTS FOR TELEWORK-READY EMPLOYEES

Telework-ready employees must abide by the IT security requirements conveyed in the DOC IT Security Program Policy \(ITSP\), Commerce IT Requirements (CITRs), Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) and IT Security Policy memos. A complete list of DOC IT security documentation can be accessed at:

http://home.commerce.gov/CIO/ITSITnew/IT_Security_Program_Documentation.html.

In addition to the requirements above, telework-ready employees must abide by the IT security requirements conveyed in the NOAA IT Security Policy (ITSP), NOAA's Computer Incident Response Team Requirements (N-CITR), and IT Security Policies. The Telework Agreement signed by the telework-ready employee and their supervisor may describe additional security requirements. A complete list of NOAA IT security documentation can be accessed at: <https://sites.google.com/noaa.gov/csd>.

Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to comply with all existing IT security requirements and to ensure employees are held accountable to them.

XVII. PROTECTING THE SECURITY AND CONFIDENTIALITY OF RECORDS

All telework-ready employees must ensure that records subject to the Privacy Act of 1974, or which have sensitive Personally Identifiable Information (PII) or Business Identifiable Information (BII), are not disclosed to anyone except those who have been authorized access to such information to perform their duties. Bureaus/Operating Units (OUs) must ensure that appropriate physical, administrative, and technical safeguards are used to protect the security and confidentiality of such records.

A. Disclosure of Records from an Agency System of Records

1. Telework-ready employees are responsible for ensuring that their disclosure of a record (information) from any agency system of record complies with the Privacy Act of 1974.
2. The Privacy Act of 1974 defines a 'system of records' as a group of any records under the control of any agency from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or by some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particular assigned to the individual. DOC system of record notices (SORNs) are posted at:

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

<http://www.gpo.gov/fdsys/browse/collection.action?collectionCode=PAI&browsePath=2005&isCollapsed=false&leafLevelBrowse=false&ycord=0>.

3. The Privacy Act of 1974 prohibits the disclosure of a record (information) from an agency system of record that is not identified as a routine use in that system's SORN, does not comply with an exemption identified in the SORN, or does not comply with one of the 12 exceptions to the non-disclosure-(to third parties)-without-consent rule.
4. A Privacy Act incident occurs when an officer or employee of the agency, who by virtue of their employment or official position, has possession of or access to agency records that contain individually identifiable information, the disclosure of which is prohibited by 5 U.S.C. § 552a (or regulations established thereunder), and discloses the material in any manner to any person or agency not entitled to receive it. Knowing misuse or release of information protected by the Privacy Act of 1974 can subject an employee to fines and/or criminal sanctions.
5. Telework-ready employees must immediately report a suspected or confirmed Privacy Act incident to their bureau/OU privacy officer or the Computer Incident Response Team (CIRT) and immediate supervisor.

B. Proper Handling of PII and BII

1. Telework-ready employees are responsible for the safeguarding of PII and BII.
2. PII is information that can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, such as name, social security number, biometric records, etc., alone, or when combined with other personal or identifying information, which is linked or linkable to a specific individual, such as date and place of birth, mother's maiden name, etc. Sensitive PII, if lost, compromised, or disclosed without authorization, could result in substantial harm, embarrassment, inconvenience, or unfairness to an individual.
3. Types of PII considered sensitive when associated with an individual are: social security number (including truncated form), place of birth, date of birth, mother's maiden name, biometric information, medical information (except brief references to absences from work), personal financial information, credit card or purchase card account numbers, passport numbers, potentially sensitive employment information (e.g., personnel ratings, disciplinary actions, and results of background investigations), criminal history, and any information that may stigmatize or adversely affect an individual. The DOC's IT Privacy Policy provides that breaches of sensitive PII are subject to notification/reporting requirements.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

4. When deciding whether PII is sensitive or non-sensitive, it is important to consider the type of information, obligations, or expectations regarding the protection of information, risk (probability and consequences) of loss or compromise of information, and context of information. Context is particularly important. The same types of information can be sensitive or non-sensitive depending upon the context. For example, a list of names and phone numbers for the Department softball roster is very different from a list of names and phone numbers for individuals being treated for an infectious disease. It is important to use good judgment when deciding whether PII is sensitive or non-sensitive. When in doubt, treat PII as sensitive.
5. The Department's policy states that if sensitive PII must be electronically transmitted, it must be protected by secure methodologies such as encryption, Public Key Infrastructure, or secure socket layers. Federal Information Processing Standards (FIPS) Publication 140-2, "Security Requirements for Cryptographic Modules" provides the standard to which encryption methodologies must conform. The transmission of sensitive PII, even if protected by secure means, must be kept to a minimum. Check with your bureau/OU's Office of the Chief Information Officer to determine methods or services they are using to support the electronic transmission of sensitive PII.
6. In addition to sensitive PII, telework-ready employees must ensure the safeguarding of BII. BII is information that is defined in the Freedom of Information Act as "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person [that is] privileged or confidential." "Commercial" is not confined to records that reveal "basic commercial operations" but includes any records (information) in which the submitter has a "commercial interest" and can include information submitted by a non-profit entity. Terms for BII that must be protected from disclosure include "confidential business information," "confidential commercial information," and "proprietary information."
7. Sensitive PII and BII can be stored on Government systems only, and saved, stored, or hosted only on DOC-authorized equipment (including contractor-owned equipment or a system that is approved to be used as a Government system). Computers that are personally-owned may not be used to save, store, or host sensitive PII and BII that is collected or maintained by the Department.
8. Sensitive PII and BII must be sent encrypted as an email attachment and encrypted on mobile computers, media (e.g., CDs, DVDs, USB drives), and devices (e.g., laptops, hard drives). When faxing sensitive PII and BII, an advisory statement about the contents must be included on the cover sheet, and the recipient must be notified immediately before and after transmission. Exception: According to the Commerce Acquisition Manual (CAM) 1313.301, cardholders shall not transmit credit card information over a facsimile machine. When mailing sensitive PII and BII, it must be physically secured when in transit. Do not mail or send by courier sensitive PII and BII on CDs, DVDs, hard drives, flash drives, USB drives, floppy disks, or other removable media unless the data is encrypted. Sensitive PII and BII must be sealed in an opaque envelop or container and mailed using First Class or Priority Mail, or a commercial delivery service (e.g., Federal Express or DHL). Appropriate methods must be used to destroy sensitive paper PII and BII (e.g., shredding, using a burn bag) and securely delete sensitive electronic PII and BII (e.g., empty the Windows recycle bin).

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

9. Telework-ready employees and supervisors are responsible for complying with all Bureau/OU guidelines on reporting PII and BII incidents. The Office of Management and Budget Memorandum M-07-16 defines a PII incident as the loss of control, compromise, unauthorized disclosure, unauthorized acquisition, unauthorized access, or any similar term referring to situations where persons other than authorized users, and for other than authorized purpose(s), have access or potential access to PII, whether physical or electronic. Telework-ready employees must immediately report a suspected or confirmed PII and BII incident to their bureau/OU privacy officer or CIRT and immediate supervisor.

XVIII. PRIVACY ACT, SENSITIVE, AND HIGHLY SENSITIVE INFORMATION

A. Decisions on Proper Use and Handling of Sensitive Information

These decisions will be made by the approving official who permits the employee to work at home or another alternative worksite. A telework agreement will be signed by the employee and their approving official that contains the specific data types allowed to be accessed. Information is generally categorized into the following groups: Non-Sensitive Information; Sensitive Information; and Classified National Security Information.

B. Physical Security Standards

The physical security standard for PII and other Sensitive and Administratively Controlled Information must be addressed prior to allowing telework. Chapter 35 of the Office of Security's (OSY's) Security Manual provides minimum physical security standards for the office environment that are also applicable during telework. At a minimum, Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI), including PII, should be afforded protection to prevent unauthorized access of the information.

C. Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI) Registry

The National Archives and Records Administration's CUI Office developed the CUI Registry, which allows anyone to access the Safeguarding and Dissemination requirements for CUI that must be afforded to information like PII (privacy) and other unclassified information. The registry may not be all inclusive, as only those categories of unclassified information that have a law, regulation, or Government-wide policy governing dissemination and/or safeguarding are provided. Therefore, any Sensitive and Administratively Controlled Information in hard-copy form that does not

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

fall within the parameters of the manual, or the registry, should be brought to the attention of the Information and Personnel Security Division of the OSY.

Teleworkers and supervisors should visit <http://www.archives.gov/cui/registry/category-list.html> prior to allowing hard copy PII and other administratively controlled information outside the workplace for telework purposes.

CUI, established by Executive Order 13556, is legally protected and covered under the Sensitive Information category.

D. Highly Sensitive Information

This information is subject to the most stringent security and access control rules, such as courier authorization, hand-to-hand transmission, or agency-specific rules not included in the DOC telework policy. Classified information that requires Secret or Top Secret security clearances for protecting national security information is included in this category. Classified information (Confidential, Secret, or Top Secret) may only be transmitted or removed from official worksites by classified networks or authorized official couriers. This type of information may not be used or accessed in any manner by teleworkers.

XIX. TELEWORK IT SECURITY POLICY

The Department's Chief Information Officer (CIO) is responsible for issuing and maintaining IT and eGov policies and minimum implementation standards, including remote access and safeguarding sensitive information. These policies and minimum implementation standards outline responsibilities of bureau/operating unit CIOs/ACIOs and teleworkers to enable an effective working environment for the teleworker and the protection of Department systems from undue risk. Operating unit CIOs/ACIOs, with the support of their IT security officers, are responsible for establishing teleworking IT security procedures specific to their operating unit and providing secure telecommuting resources and operational controls commensurate with the sensitivity of the data processed and with policies and minimum implementation standards provided by the Department's CIO. The Department's policy on remote access is accessible via intranet at:

https://connection.commerce.gov/sites/connection.commerce.gov/files/media/files/2014/citr-008_remote_access.pdf.

Managers/supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to comply with all existing security policies and procedures, including IT security. Telework-ready employees also agree that their responsibilities, described in Section 3.3.9 of the Department's "IT Security Policy and Minimum Implementation Standards," remain in effect while on telework status. Other pertinent bureau or operating unit policies on IT security may also exist; managers/supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to follow all applicable policies.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

The workplace and workstation must be set up to accomplish secure information processing, including the proper storage of Sensitive Information in both electronic and paper form. The telework-ready employee, following bureau/operating unit policies, must minimize security vulnerabilities to the workstation and the Departmental network.

XX. TELEWORKING DURING EMERGENCY SITUATIONS/INCLEMENT WEATHER

- A. Unscheduled Telework. This type of telework option allows telework-ready employees to work from home or at an approved alternative location upon notification to their supervisor in accordance with the office policies.

- B. Federal/Departmental Offices Are Closed. Employees must telework consistent with law and their telework agreements when Federal/Departmental offices in their local commuting area are closed. Excused absences (utilizing Weather and Safety Leave or administrative leave) may be granted on a case-by-case basis for telework-ready employees in the above situations that may include but are not limited to: power outages, damaged/un-inhabitable alternative work sites, dependent care issues, or state/local laws. (See section VII, “Excused from Teleworking”, for more details.).

- C. Early Dismissal/Delayed Arrival. When an early dismissal/delayed arrival is announced or provided as a result of an emergency situation or inclement weather, those who are teleworking are not dismissed from duty for any part of the workday. However, managers/supervisors may grant Weather and Safety Leave on a case-by-case basis, if the employee is unable to begin or continue teleworking. Teleworking employees are permitted to take advantage of early dismissals granted by management or the President in relation to a holiday, recognition of a special circumstance, and similar occasions.

- D. Emergency at the Alternative Worksite. When an emergency affects only the alternative worksite for a major portion of the workday, the employee is expected to report to the traditional worksite, an approved alternative telework site, or request supervisory approval of applicable paid personal leave (i.e., annual, compensatory time, compensatory time off for travel, credit hours, etc.). Note: Consistent with OPM guidance, an employee required to travel between an alternate worksite and a traditional worksite as a result of a weather or safety issue must be granted Weather and Safety Leave for the duration of their commute between duty stations.

However, on a case-by-case basis, the manager/supervisor may excuse, without charge to paid personal leave or loss of pay, a telework employee from duty during an emergency if: (1) the emergency adversely affects the telework site; (2) the telework-ready employee is unable to access another alternative telework site; (3) the telework-ready employee is unable to access the traditional worksite within a reasonable period of time; and (4) the telework-ready employee’s duties are such that they cannot continue to work without contact with the traditional worksite. (See section VII, “Excused from Teleworking”, for more details.).

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

XXI. TELEWORK AND THE CONTINUITY OF OPERATIONS PLAN (COOP)

If an employee occupies a position deemed essential or serves as an ERG member (these designations may vary based on the nature of the emergency) for inclement weather or natural or man-made emergencies, they may be required to report to work.

If an employee is an ERG member for COOP purposes, management, along with the employee and supervisor, should make advance and/or situational decisions as to whether the employee must physically report for duty or may work from home or an alternative worksite. For example, if the purpose of the employee reporting for duty at the traditional worksite is to provide policy guidance or to notify specific individuals of emergency requirements, this may be able to be accomplished from home, provided the employee has access to the resources necessary to perform the required services. However, in some cases, the only way to obtain the services of the employee may be through telework from an alternative worksite. For example, if inclement weather or other emergency situation results in a transportation shutdown, but phone lines remain working, the employee may be able to work from home rather than reporting to the traditional worksite or COOP site.

Employees designated as COOP Team Members may be required to telework during emergency closures or other emergencies, including pandemics and for COOP exercises, on any day, even if that day is not a regular telework day or a day with specific approval for situational/episodic telework. Telework-ready employees may also be required to perform duties outside of their usual or customary duties to ensure continuation of agency-essential mission or activities.

During any period that the Department is operating under COOP, that plan shall supersede any telework policy (Public Law 111-292 Section 6504(d)(2)).

I acknowledge that I will not be authorized to telework if my performance does not comply with the terms of my telework agreement. Failure to comply may also result in disciplinary action.

I understand that I must perform at the Fully Successful or higher (or equivalent) level in order to telework.

I certify that I have completed an approved interactive telework training program authorized by my bureau, the Telework Safety Checklist, and the Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool, if applicable.

I understand that, unless this agreement is for COOP/Emergency purposes only, I am required to telework during office closures for weather and safety events unless granted Weather and Safety or Administrative leave by my supervisor, or electing to take unscheduled leave (if offered).

I understand that that I may be required to report for an assignment that requires presence at the worksite (e.g., providing a presentation or performing administrative duties at a pre-scheduled conference) on my scheduled telework day.

When unscheduled leave or telework is announced by the appropriate authorities, I understand that the election is mine but I must notify my supervisor. I am aware that, in rare situations, management may require me (a “non-emergency” employee) to report for an assignment that requires my presence, and management has discussed this with me in advance of the situation giving rise to unscheduled leave/telework.

I understand that I may not care for children, elders, or other dependents while I am in a duty status and teleworking. As described in the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan, in these situations, I must request the appropriate leave (paid or unpaid) from my supervisor, utilize the flexibility available under my Flexible Work Schedule to stop working (if applicable), or request a change in my Work Schedule.

I understand that I must abide by the IT Security requirements conveyed in the Commerce Information Technology Security Program Policy (ITSP), Commerce Information Technology Requirements (CITRs), Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs), and IT Security Policy memos.

Alternate Worksite Costs – The employee understands that the Government will not be responsible for any operating costs associated with the use of the employee’s home as an alternate worksite, for example, home maintenance, insurance, or utilities. The employee also understands that any entitlement to reimbursement for authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the Government, as provided for by statute or regulation, is not relinquished by this agreement.

Liability – The applicant understands that the Government will not be held liable for damages to their personal or real property while they are working at the approved alternate worksite, except to the extent the Government is held liable under the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act and the Federal Tort Claims Act.

Injury Compensation – The applicant understands that they are covered under the Federal Employees Compensation Act if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the alternate worksite. The applicant agrees to notify his/her supervisor immediately of any accident or injury that occurs at the alternate workplace and to complete any required forms. The supervisor agrees to investigate such a report as soon as possible.

Disclosure – The applicant agrees to protect Government records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. § 552(a), and those outlined in sections XVII - XX of the DOC Telework Policy and Sections XVII – XIX of the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan (October 2021).

XXIII. APPENDIX B: NOAA TELEWORK ELIGIBILITY AND READINESS
ASSESSMENT TOOL

NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool

Note: This assessment should focus on the attributes of the employee rather than the suitability of the functions of the position for telework. The amount of telework that is suitable for a position should be established using the telework suitability tool.

The decision to permit an employee to telework, and how much telework to approve, should be based on the ability of an employee to work in a setting away from their customers and coworkers, either in their home or at another Federal facility, without on-site supervision. The following tool is to be used by the supervisor as a basis for discussing whether and how much telework is appropriate for a particular employee. The employee and the supervisor may complete the assessment together or separately and should discuss any discrepancies.

Lower scores in any assessment area are not necessarily disqualifying for telework, but may influence the amount of telework the supervisor approves and/or may require significant discussion, planning, or the addition of specific items/metrics in the telework agreement to ensure success. The supervisor may wish to utilize short-term telework agreements which expire after a few months to gauge the employee's readiness for telework.

Statutory Eligibility:

If any of the below boxes are checked, the employee is ineligible for telework and their application must be denied.

- The employee has been officially disciplined for being Absent Without Leave (AWOL) for more than 5 days in any calendar year and the record of such discipline remains in the eOPF.
- The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties [Public Law 111-292, 6502(a)(2)(A)(B)] and the record of such discipline remains in the eOPF.
- The employee's current performance is below the Fully Successful (or equivalent) level.

Notes:

1. Disciplinary actions that are not reflected in the eOPF are not considered "official."
 2. Disciplinary records such as Letters of Reprimand, which are removed from the eOPF after a period of time, are only disqualifying while they are present in the eOPF.
 3. An employee's performance may change throughout the year. If an employee's performance has previously been less than Fully Successful, but they have since improved, they are no longer ineligible.

Glossary of Terms

The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 grants the United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO, Office or Agency) unique authority to allow employees working remotely¹ to relocate outside the local USPTO commuting area for their convenience, in exchange for a limited waiver of the right to travel expenses. 5 U.S.C. §§ 5711(f), (g). This authorization was piloted through 2020, and is now a permanent program known as the Telework Enhancement Act Program (TEAP). These operating procedures (Operating Procedures) set forth the framework for TEAP.

1. Joint Oversight Committee

Top of Doc

- a. Committee: In accordance with 5 U.S.C. § 5711(f)(4), the Operating Procedures have been developed by a USPTO Telework Oversight Committee. The Committee consists of representatives from USPTO management and each of its three bargaining units: 1) National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 243; 2) National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 245; and 3) the Patent Office Professional Association.
- b. Meetings: The Committee will meet on a semi-annual basis, or as otherwise needed on an ad hoc basis. Any of the unions or management may call for an ad hoc meeting. During these meetings, at least one member of two of the three bargaining units must be present, as well as at least one management official from both Patents and Trademarks.
- c. Modifying Operating Procedures: Any management or labor representative may propose modification to the Operating Procedures. Modification must be agreed upon by consensus of all parties, unless the impacted employees are confined to a single union or are non-bargaining unit employees (including supervisors). In the event that management and a single union wish to modify part of these Operating Procedures as applicable only to that union, they may do so via a supplemental memorandum of understanding (MOU). These may be referred to as “bilateral” agreements, and should be read in conjunction with these Operating Procedures. As early in the process as practicable and no later than when a tentative agreement has been reached, these agreements will be shared with the rest of the Committee for fair and full consideration. If other unions or business units wish to implement similar change(s), the Committee will consider making the change(s) applicable to all participants. Additionally, either a union or business unit may initiate separate discussions on their behalf if they feel their union or business unit would benefit from the same or similar agreement. Parties are expected to provide explanations of their reasoning related to their decisions
- d. If management determines to change these Operating Procedures as applicable only to non-bargaining unit employees, it may do so by notifying the impacted employees and issuing a management memorandum to be read in conjunction with these Operating Procedures. Management will share these changes with the Committee, and the unions may ask that the terms be incorporated into these operating procedures for all participants.

¹ Remote work is defined as performing assigned duties at an approved alternate worksite for five (5) days per week without a minimum reporting requirement to a USPTO Office. A participant's

2. Relationships to Existing Agreements

Top of Doc

Existing collective bargaining agreements remain in effect except for provisions that are specifically contradicted by these procedures. These Operating Procedures are intended to work in conjunction with the applicable, underlying telework program policies that apply for each Business Unit, and are not a replacement for a primary telework policy.

3. Eligibility and Participation

Top of Doc

Participation in TEAP is voluntary, and, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 5711(f)(3)(C), it must be for reasons of the employee's convenience.

- a. Eligibility. In order to apply to participate in TEAP, an employee must meet all of the following criteria:
 - i. Be eligible for remote telework under the relevant underlying telework program that would apply in the employee's business unit.
 - ii. Be in a position designated as TEAP-eligible by management. The Agency will not convert TEAP-eligible positions to ineligible before bargaining to the extent required by law.
 - iii. Voluntarily change their official duty station to a location outside of a 50-mile radius from the USPTO Headquarters, and within the United States and Puerto Rico.
 - iv. Waive the right to reimbursement for travel expenses for a certain number of trips identified in these Operating Procedures.
 - v. Have regular job responsibilities that do not include extended and/or multiple periods of time at the office that are expected to add up to greater than 5 days per fiscal year. The Agency determines whether this is the case based on individual job duties.
- b. Program Size :
 - i. For employees in a bargaining unit, there is no limit to the number of employees that may participate in TEAP if they are otherwise eligible.
 - ii. For employees not in a bargaining unit, the Agency will determine how many employees may participate.

4. TEAP Application Process

Top of Doc

- a. The centralized on-line process for all applicants is available on the intranet. The process includes:
 - i. Orientation to TEAP;

- ii. Submission of an application in the Enterprise Telework Information System² (ETIS) (see paragraph c below);
 - iii. Signing of an agreement with an attestation and a waiver of reimbursement of travel expenses by the applicant, using the ETIS;
 - iv. Approval by the Agency;
 - v. Change of the official duty station.
- b. Application timing:
- i. Applications may be submitted at any time.
 - ii. There will be a monthly review and approval. Closing for each application period will be midnight on the second Saturday of each month.
 - iii. Applicants will be notified of the status of their application within the two weeks after the second Saturday of each month. If the application is denied, the reason for the denial will be provided to the employee.
 - iv. Employees will begin participation after the Personnel Action Request (PAR) has been issued and notice of approval is received.
- c. Application process:
- i. Before applying, the employee must be eligible as described in Section 3.a above and live outside the 50-mile radius of the USPTO Headquarters, or plan to move outside the 50-mile radius of USPTO Headquarters within one month of TEAP approval. If the employee has not relocated outside the 50-mile radius, the employee must notify the Agency and will be converted from TEAP.
 - ii. Interested employees should submit a TEAP application using the ETIS.
 - iii. If, upon review of the application documents, the employee is not approved because information is missing or not clear, the employee will have one week to perfect the submission. The submission will be promptly reviewed and if the submission has been appropriately corrected, the employee will be promptly notified that he/she has been approved to participate on TEAP. If the submission is reviewed and is not approved because the employee does not meet the eligibility requirements, the employee cannot participate in TEAP, but may reapply when the employee meets eligibility requirements.
 - iv. A participant may withdraw at any time by providing notice to their business unit's telework coordinator, supervisor, and withdrawing their application and/or agreement in ETIS. For further detail see section 9.

²When used in this document, ETIS refers to the current system for on-line applications, known as the Enterprise Telework Information System, and any replacement tool serving this purpose.

5. Worksites

Top of Doc

a. Definitions:

- i. USPTO worksite is defined here as a workspace located in a USPTO physical location, such as the headquarters in Alexandria, Virginia, a Regional Office, or any other space maintained by the USPTO.
- ii. Alternate worksite is an approved telework worksite that is not a USPTO worksite. Approval must be sought in advance of use of an alternate worksite. Alternate worksites must meet requirements for internet service, security, and safety. An airport, coffee shop, or other unsecured public area are not approved alternate worksites. A teleworking employee may have both a primary alternate worksite (i.e., the principal telework location, likely an employee's home) and one or more secondary alternate worksites. Participants are responsible for alerting management and making an address change in ETIS if the intended stay at a secondary alternate worksite exceeds 6 months cumulatively within a calendar year. (See Section 8.)
- iii. A temporary alternate worksite is a location where the employee requests to telework in emergency and exigent circumstances (e.g., weather and safety evacuation, service outages, emergency personal circumstances) and when on mandatory work travel (i.e., hotel or temporary location where employee is staying).

- b. Requirements: Generally, employees may work from secondary alternate worksites after receiving advance approval. In cases of emergency or exigent circumstances, employees may work from temporary alternate worksites as long as they have provided notice to their supervisors at the soonest reasonable opportunity. TEAP employees should refer to the terms of their underlying remote telework program to determine any more specific rules related to working from secondary and temporary alternate worksites.

When a participant is unable to work at their primary alternate worksite due to a local system outage or equipment failure and it is reasonable to do so, an employee may:

- i flex,
- ii take leave,
- iii work at a secondary or temporary alternate worksite, or
- iv come into a USPTO worksite (See Section 15 for process of using Regional Office workspace as a temporary alternate worksite)—

NOTE: If the employee chooses to come into a USPTO worksite it will be considered a voluntary trip. If an employee is granted non-production time or adjustments with approval, the employee may not also work at a temporary alternate worksite or work from a USPTO worksite.

6. Relocation Expenses

Top of Doc

Since participation is voluntary, no employee relocation expenses will be paid to participants. However, relocation expenses may be paid due to a change in position when paying the expenses is in the interest of the government and in accordance with government-wide regulations.

7. Official Duty Station and Employee Benefits

Top

- a. Official Duty Station: When an employee begins participating in TEAP, the employee's official duty station will be the city, town, county, and state of the primary alternate worksite for which the employee is approved to telework.
- b. Impact on Employee Pay: Participation in this program may impact an employee's pay, due to differences in locality pay. Information on locality pay is available by checking the relevant pay tables found at <http://www.opm.gov>.
- c. Benefits
 - i. Employees will be able to change their health benefits carrier, by contacting the Office of Human Resources (OHR) if they relocate to an area outside of their current health benefits carrier coverage area. Employees are reminded that they are responsible for confirming that the health benefits plan they have selected provides coverage in their telework locations. OHR staff are available for assistance with changing your health care provider. Questions regarding your benefits, compensation or personnel action processing may be directed to HumanResources_USPTO@uspto.gov or telephone at 571-272-6000.
 - ii. All other benefits will remain the same unless there is a change in salary due to locality pay adjustments for the new area. If the pay is adjusted, affected employees' life insurance amounts will be adjusted, and their high-three average salaries could be affected. Thrift Savings Plan (TSP) totals will also be affected by a change in pay if deductions are drawn on a percentage basis.
- d. State Taxes
 - i. Employees should consult their tax advisor for specific tax information.
 - ii. The impact on employee's state taxes will depend on the tax codes of the employee's states of residence.
 - iii. Employees will be required to submit new state tax forms for their states of residence. State tax forms should be accessible online along with each state's rules and regulations.
 - iv. For more information visit the TEAP FAQs.

8. Moving to a Different Official Duty Station While on TEAP

Top of Doc

- a. When an employee decides to move to a different primary alternate worksite (including if an employee decides to make a secondary alternate worksite their primary alternate worksite) while on TEAP, it may change their Official Duty Station, and the following must be completed:
 - i. An employee must send a notice to the employee's supervisor and business unit telework coordinator with the effective date of the change. This must be submitted to the supervisor at least two full bi-weeks before the effective date of the move.
 - ii. The employee's supervisor must submit a Personnel Action Request (PAR) to the Office of Human Resources (OHR) within the first full bi-week after receipt of the change of official duty station. The PAR must include the change in the employee's official duty station including new address, city, county, and state.
 - iii. OHR will process the change of official duty station PAR within the first full bi-week after receipt.
- b. Since the move is voluntary, no employee relocation expenses will be paid to participants. (See Section 6.)
- c. A TEAP participant who relocates from outside the fifty mile radius of the USPTO Headquarters to an address within the fifty mile radius may either return to work at the USPTO Headquarters, convert to the fifty mile radius option, or convert to another appropriate telework option.

9. Withdrawal from TEAP

Top of Doc

- a. When an employee decides to withdraw from TEAP, the following must be completed:
 - i. The employee must send a notice to the employee's supervisor and business unit telework coordinator with the effective date of the change. This must be submitted to the supervisor at least two full bi-weeks before the effective date of the withdrawal.
 - ii. The employee's supervisor will submit a PAR to the Office of Human Resources (OHR) within the first full bi-week after receipt of the withdrawal notice. The PAR will include the change in the employee's official duty station: to Alexandria, Virginia; upon request and subject to available space, to the Regional Office from which the employee was working immediately before joining TEAP; or, another appropriate location if the employee signs up for a different telework program.
 - iii. OHR will process the withdrawal PAR within the first full bi-week after receipt.

- iv. The employee will consult with his/her supervisor regarding the need for an office or workspace at USPTO Headquarters or Regional Office, if applicable.

10. IT Availability

Top of Doc

- a. Work schedules remain the same as in the employee's underlying telework and other collective bargaining agreements, but currently, IT systems are not available 24 hours a day/7 days a week due to systems maintenance periods.
- b. During USPTO IT system maintenance hours, systems may have limited or no availability.

11. Office Supplies and Equipment

Top of Doc

- a. Printer supplies will be shipped to employees. Employees will be initially supplied with a standard amount of toner and paper that should last for one year. Employees will request subsequent replacement shipments.
- b. Employees may pick up small office supplies at USPTO Headquarters while on a trip there.
- c. Employees will comply with USPTO instructions, as outlined in their underlying telework program, regarding the return or removal of work materials and equipment.
- d. Employees will ensure that only authorized personnel access USPTO equipment and materials.

12. Use of Technology in Lieu of Travel

Top of Doc

The office will provide reasonable technological or other alternatives when possible before requiring participant travel. The office will strive to improve engagement through technological means and voluntary in-person events in lieu of mandatory travel.

13. Travel Requirements

Top of Doc

The Telework Enhancement Act authorized the USPTO to establish a reasonable maximum number of occasional visits before employees are eligible for reimbursement of any approved travel expenses. A high level decision-making process will be used when trips are required as set forth herein. The intent is to bring employees back as few times as possible. The purposes for trips will be combined where possible to reduce travel.

Travel orders will be issued for all mandatory trips (whether employee or Agency paid). The employee's time for travel will be compensated based on the most efficient manner of travel as defined by Federal travel regulations. Employees will record this time as regular duty hours for travel or as compensatory time for travel.

- a. Mandatory Employee Paid Trips
 - i. Management may require a maximum number of mandatory employee-paid trips to the USPTO per fiscal year as defined in Section 13.d. Management will ensure that reasonable technological or other alternatives to employee travel are used before requiring employee travel (including teleconferencing, videoconferencing, or internet-based technologies).

ii. Cancellation of mandatory employee-paid trips will be handled in the following manner:

- (1) If an employee is already at or en route to the USPTO before the trip is cancelled, it will count as an employee-paid trip.
- (2) If the trip is cancelled at three weeks or less prior to the expected event date, the employee will take action to avoid travel expenses.
 - (a) If all travel expenses can be avoided, it does not count as an employee-paid trip.
 - (b) If the employee cannot avoid some travel expenses or transfer the expenses to a future trip, the trip will count as an employee-paid trip.
- (3) If cancellation notice is given more than three weeks before the event, it does not count as a trip regardless of expenses incurred. All efforts will be made to give notice of cancellation as far out in advance as possible.

b. Mandatory Agency Paid Trips

- i. Management determines location of mandatory activity. For all TEAP participants this location will be USPTO facilities or another designated work location within the geographic limitations of the TEAP program.
- ii. After the maximum number of mandatory employee-paid trips to the USPTO per fiscal year as defined in Section 13.d, management will pay for travel expenses.

c. Notice to Employees

- i. The Agency has a goal of 4 weeks' notice, but at least 3 weeks' notice will be provided prior to the date on which the employee must report for the purpose of a mandatory employee-paid trip.
- ii. If less than 3 weeks' notice is provided, Agency will pay for the cost of that mandatory trip.
- iii. No less than 48 hours' notice will be given for any mandatory trip.

d. TEAP participants will have a maximum number of mandatory employee-paid trips and days in office per fiscal year.

- i. Definition for "program trip days" in the office: For purposes of TEAP, program trip days in the office shall be all days on which the Agency is requiring the participant to be present at a USPTO office and any day(s) within the same trip between events in which the employee's in person attendance is required. An example of the latter situation would be an all-hands meeting on Tuesday afternoon, followed by mandatory in-person training on Thursday. This trip would count as three program trip days towards meeting the limit that the participant is responsible for covering expenses.

- (1) If the purpose of the trip can be met by traveling to a USPTO Regional Office, days spent at the Regional Office shall also count towards the maximum number of days.
- (2) Travel days, even if the employee does work at the Agency, do not count unless the employee travels on the day of an event for which the participant's presence is required at the USPTO.

ii. Number of Mandatory Employee-Paid Trips: For all TEAP participants, mandatory employee-paid trips to a USPTO office, or another location designated by the Agency, will be limited to one (1) trip per fiscal year, if necessary. After a TEAP participant has made an employee-paid trip, any remaining trips that fiscal year will be Agency-paid trips as per Section 13.b above.

- (1) The maximum number of employee-paid days for employee trips will total 5 calendar days. In any single trip, only days spent for the purpose of the required mandatory employee-paid trip and any intervening days count towards this number of days. If the total number of days for the mandatory employee-paid trip exceeds five (5) days, the Agency will pay appropriate per diem for days in excess of five (5) days.

e. Mandatory Days for Mandatory Trips

i. Normally trips of multiple days will fall within Monday through Friday of the same week excluding holidays.

- (1) Mandatory activities will be conducted Monday through Friday between 8:00 am and 6:00 pm Eastern time.
- (2) Program trip days do not include any days solely attributed to travel.

f. Authority to Determine Need for Mandatory Employee-Paid Trips

i. Decisions to require a mandatory employee-paid trip may only be made by management and subject to Section 12 herein, and will be made at the following organizational levels or higher (or equivalent positions if titles change):

- (1) Patents – Deputy Commissioners
- (2) Trademarks – Deputy Commissioners
- (3) Office of the Chief Administrative Officer (OCAO) – CAO or Deputy CAO
- (4) Office of the Chief Financial Officer (OCFO) – CFO or Deputy CFO
- (5) Office of the Information Officer (OCIO) – CIO or Deputy CIO
- (6) Office of General Counsel (OGC) – GC or Deputy GC
- (7) Office of Policy and International Affairs (OPIA) – Director or Deputy Director
- (8) Office of the Chief Communications Officer (OCCO) – Director or Deputy Director
- (9) Office of Equal Employment Opportunity and Diversity (OEEOD) – Director or Deputy Director
- (10) Patent Trial and Appeal Board – Chief Judge or Deputy Chief Judge

(11) Trademark Trial and Appeal Board - TTAB Chief Judge or Deputy Chief Judge

- ii. Notification will be sent to the affected union(s) that the Agency requires a mandatory employee-paid trip. The notification to the unions will be sent at least one week prior to when the employee(s) is/are notified. The notification to the union(s) will include the purpose for the trip and an explanation regarding the Office's attempts to use technological alternatives in lieu of requiring travel and all reasons that physical attendance is required. The Office will work with the union(s) to resolve any issues that are brought to its attention when requiring attendance.

g. Voluntary Trips

- i. A voluntary trip is defined as discretionary on the part of the employee and visitation/travel is not required by the Office. No travel orders will be made for this type of trip and no travel time will be provided. Voluntary trips may include:

- (1) Voluntary details and/or voluntary work assignments.

- (2) Emergencies such as hurricanes or flooding.

- ii. There are no limits to the number of voluntary trips. Employees are responsible for notifying their supervisor before beginning work and making arrangements for office space at the location. Management approval would be given for a defined period before the participant would report back to their official duty station/official work site.

- h. The Agency expects that TEAP participants will generally attend on-campus events virtually, unless otherwise required to attend in person. Where practical, the Agency will open on-campus events to TEAP participants if they wish to attend in person as part of a voluntary trip.

14. Work Spaces for TEAP Participants during Mandatory Trips Top of Doc

- a. For trips back to USPTO Headquarters during time periods before and after a mandatory event, the returning employee has the option to:
 - i. Work in Agency-provided space, if available;
 - ii. Work at a local area hotel in the room in which they're staying, in a private residence, or another location that is private and secure upon receiving approval (i.e., a temporary alternate worksite);
 - iii. Flex or take leave.
- b. It is recognized that the Agency has limited space to accommodate large numbers of employees returning to events. Management will make every attempt to identify and communicate available work space to employees returning to USPTO Headquarters. If possible, work spaces identified throughout campus will utilize a reservation system.

- i. Some space will be available for teleworkers at USPTO Headquarters to do regular work. Examples include:
 - (1) Regular hoteling space
 - (2) PTA training space or other training space, if available
 - (3) Conference rooms/auditorium

- c. Extended breaks between mandatory events during one day should be avoided when possible.

- d. When possible, events requiring travel should allow the employee the opportunity to have at least 8 work hours without having to utilize a temporary alternate worksite or on campus location for non-event related work.

15. Regional Office Workspace as a Temporary Alternate Worksite Top of Doc

TEAP participants and other teleworkers may work in a Regional Office as a temporary alternate worksite. Available space will be limited to hoteling offices and collaboration space. Employees must request to work in any Regional Office at least five days in advance to reserve an available hoteling office. The request must go to the employee's supervisor and the Regional Office director or designee. Regional Office management will approve requests based on available hoteling space. Exceptions will be made for exigent circumstances such as a severe weather event.

The following glossary of terms used in the TEAP Operating Procedures is provided to aid employees in understanding wording with which they may not be familiar. The descriptions herein apply to the TEAP Operating Procedures despite the fact that they may have other meanings outside of that document. As appropriate, references to the relevant sections of the Operating Procedures are provided.

- Alternate worksite is defined as a location away from a USPTO worksite, that is approved by the Agency and designated by the participant as the location they will use to perform some or all their official USPTO-assigned duties. The alternate worksite must be located in the United States (currently defined as the fifty states and the District of Columbia) and Puerto Rico. All alternate worksites, whether primary, secondary, or temporary, must comply with USPTO policies regarding physical and IT security. An airport, coffee shop, or other unsecured public area is not an approved temporary alternate worksite.
- Business Unit - A “business unit” is the part of the USPTO in which you work. For example, the business unit of patent examiners is “Patents.” Note that this is not restricted by Art Unit, etc. Members of the National Treasury Union Chapter 243 bargaining unit are in a variety of business units. Any employee who is unsure of his/her business unit should contact their supervisor. The business units are:
 - Office of the Commissioner for Patents
 - Office of the Commissioner for Trademarks
 - Office of the Chief Administrative Officer (OCAO)
 - Office of the Chief Financial Officer (OCFO)
 - Office of the Information Officer (OCIO)
 - Office of General Counsel (OGC)
 - Office of the Under Secretary
 - Office of Policy and International Affairs (OPIA)
 - Office of the Chief Communications Officer (OCCO)
 - Office of Equal Employment Opportunity and Diversity (OEEOD)
 - Patent Trial and Appeal Board (PTAB)
 - Trademarks Trial and Appeal Board (TTAB)
- Mandatory Trip - Pursuant to the TEAP, any participant may be required to travel to the USPTO Headquarters in Alexandria, Virginia or another location designated by the agency. The Office has the authority to issue this requirement and such a visit is referred to as a mandatory trip. The decision to declare a mandatory trip where the participant will have to pay all travel expenses will be made at a high level within individual business units.

- Mandatory Employee-Paid Trip - This is a trip when an employee participating in the TEAP is directed to travel by the Agency and will need to pay for all transportation costs and potentially lodging, meals and incidental expenses. All participants in the TEAP will waive any claims for travel expenses for employee- paid trips. Employee-paid trips are limited to the number set forth in the Operating procedures. TEAP participants making a mandatory employee-paid trip will be travelling on regular duty hours or travel compensatory time, not their own time.
- Mandatory Agency-Paid Trip - Mandatory Agency-paid trips are required trips after the maximum number of mandatory employee-paid trips has been reached, or when less than three weeks notice has been given. As the language suggests, the Office will pay the transportation costs and potentially lodging, meals and incidental expenses, and the travel time, of any employee engaged in such travel.
- Official Duty Station - the city/town and state in which an employee's official worksite is located. For purposes of this program, the official duty station will always be in the United States (currently defined as the 50 United States, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico). An employee's official duty station is the location that is documented on the employee's most recent SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action.
- Primary alternate worksite is the principal telework location where the participant designates that either all or a majority of assigned duties will be performed (typically the employee's home). This is also the basis for determining an official duty station under TEAP.
- Program Trip Days - For purposes of the TEAP, a program trip day is any day the Office requires a participant to be present at the USPTO Headquarters or other designated location and any day(s) within the same trip between events in which the employee's in-person attendance is required. An example of the latter situation would be an all- hands meeting on Tuesday afternoon, followed by mandatory in-person training on Thursday. This trip would count as three program trip days towards meeting the limit that the participant is responsible for covering expenses. Travel days, even if the employee does work at the Office, do not count unless the employee travels on the day of an event for which the participant's presence is required at the USPTO.
- Secondary Alternate Worksite is an authorized telework location that is not the primary alternate worksite where an employee may work for up to six (6) months.
- TEAP stands for the "Telework Enhancement Act Program."
- Temporary Alternate Worksite is a location where the employee requests to telework in emergency and exigent circumstances (e.g., weather and safety evacuation, service outages, emergency personal circumstances) and when on mandatory work travel (i.e., hotel or temporary location where employee is staying).
- Telework Oversight Committee - The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 provides that the USPTO must establish an "oversight committee comprising an equal number of members representing management and labor, including representatives from each collective bargaining unit." This Telework Oversight Committee was formed in early 2011 and has formulated the Operating Procedures for the TEAPP.

- USPTO worksite is defined here as a workspace located in a USPTO physical location, such as the headquarters in Alexandria, Virginia, a Regional Office, or any other space maintained by the USPTO.
 - USPTO Headquarters is the USPTO main campus in Alexandria, Virginia. If the USPTO changes the location of its primary physical operations (e.g., as a result of change in leased space), then USPTO Headquarters will be understood to be the successor location.

DEFINITIONS

ACT OF GOD. An act of God means an act of nature, including hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, wildfires, earthquakes, landslides, snowstorms, and avalanches (Title 5, Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) 630.1602).

Agency worksite. The regular worksite for the employee's position of record; the physical address or place where the employee would work if not teleworking. Refers to an official federal agency location where work activities are based, generally considered a centralized location of an employee's assigned organization. The term regular worksite is also used to describe agency worksite. (Example available in 5 CFR 531.605(d).)

Alternative worksite. A worksite other than the agency worksite, typically the employee's residence (primary) or secondary worksite, that supports work and provides appropriate information technology (IT) connectivity and security precautions in support of telework. The alternative worksite has been approved by the second-level supervisor for the performance of the employee's official duties. For purposes of telework, the alternative worksite is considered an official government worksite. The intent is that the secondary worksite is not to be used for teleworking more than the primary worksite.

Continuity of Operations (COOP) Emergency Employee. A COOP employee (federal) is assigned responsibility to report to an alternative worksite, as required, to perform the Census Bureau's Mission Essential Functions or other COOP related operations. This category of emergency employees includes the Emergency Relocation Group (ERG) and Emergency Command Team. The Census Bureau often refers to COOP Emergency Employees as CEEs. COOP designation is different from the designation of essential employee; refer to the definitions for "essential employee" and "essential function."

Commuting area. Pursuant to 5 CFR 550.703, commuting area is defined as the geographic area surrounding a worksite that encompasses the localities where people live (within 150 miles of the respective Census Bureau office) and reasonably can be expected to travel back and forth daily to work.

Eligible position. A position is an eligible position when at least some of the duties can be performed remotely or the position description (PD) indicates telework eligibility. The amount and frequency of telework should consider the official duties that require routine work such as the direct handling of secure materials or the employee performs on-site activities that cannot be handled at an alternative worksite.

Emergency situation. An event, incident, or circumstance that interrupts or compromises operations at, or travel to or from, the agency or alternative worksite. May include a range of situations including, but not limited to, civil disruptions, inclement weather and associated travel conditions, national security situations, natural disaster, public health emergencies, power outages, unusual traffic situations, water main breaks, or other incidents where access to the agency or alternative worksite is compromised. Emergency situations include but are not limited to those that result in an official announcement of an operating status under which unscheduled telework is allowed, as defined by the U.S. Office of Personnel Management (OPM), Federal Executive Board, or regional director.

Essential employee. An employee who occupies a position that has been determined to be critical to operations in dismissal or closure situations.

Essential function. Functions that enable the federal government to provide vital services, exercise civil authority, maintain the safety and well-being of the general populace, and sustain the industrial or economic base in an emergency.

Evacuation order. An agency may order one or more employees to evacuate their worksite and work from their homes (or alternative location mutually agreeable to the agency and employee) during a pandemic health crisis without regard to whether the agency and employee have a telework agreement in place when the order to evacuate is issued (Title 5, CFR § 550.409(a)). Under these circumstances, an agency may designate the employee's home (or alternative location mutually agreeable to the agency and employee) as a safe haven, and provide evacuation payments to the employee. An agency must compute the evacuation payments, and determine the time period during which such payments will be made (Title 5, CFR § 550.404). An evacuated employee at a safe haven may be assigned to perform any work considered necessary or required to be performed during the evacuation period without regard to the employee's grade/band, level, or title. The employee must have the necessary knowledge and skills to perform the assigned work. Failure or refusal to perform assigned work can be a basis for terminating evacuation payments, and disciplinary action. An evacuation order can be issued for up to 180 days and reissued if the situation still warrants one.

Exigent conditions. Conditions that exist that are determined to be inherently unsafe or such that normal work activities will be disrupted substantially for 4 or more hours and alternative arrangements for work to continue are deemed necessary.

Hoteling. A method of office management in which workers dynamically schedule their use of workspaces such as desks, cubicles, and offices. It is an alternative approach to the more traditional method of permanently assigned seating. Hoteling is reservation-based unassigned seating; employees reserve a workspace before they come to work in a Census Bureau office.

Legally protected information. Information collected or available under any law or regulation that restricts access for confidentiality reasons, including Titles 5 (including the Privacy Act of 1974), 13, 26, 42, and the Confidential Information Protection and Statistical Efficiency Act.

Locality pay. An employee's locality rate of pay is based on the employee's official duty station and is determined in accordance with 5 CFR § 531.604(b). The bureau/operating unit must determine and designate the official duty station for an employee covered by a telework agreement using the criteria in Section 5 Duty Station/Official Worksite.

Mobile workers. Employees who, by the nature of their duties, do not have a designated worksite, and typically use their homes as their duty station, for example, field representatives and field supervisors. Due to the nature of their work, mobile workers are not considered telework ready employees. Note: This is different from "hoteling" arrangements, in which frequent teleworkers use shared space when they are working at their designated official worksite.

Official worksite/duty station. Pursuant to the OPM definition and as set forth in 5 CFR 531.605, the official worksite is the location where the employee regularly performs their official work duties. Changes in an employee's official worksite may affect employee pay and travel funding responsibilities and must be processed by the servicing Human Resources Office. Designation of the official worksite must be determined on a case-by-case basis using the following considerations:

- Employee:
 - Scheduled to physically report at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis.
 - Not scheduled to report at least twice each biweekly pay period to the agency worksite (includes remote workers).

- Scheduled to report to varied work locations on a recurring basis (mobile work), and who does not report at least twice each biweekly pay period to the agency worksite.
 - Official worksite/duty station:
 - Agency worksite for the employee's position—the place where the employee would normally work if not teleworking.
 - Alternative worksite (except in certain temporary duty situations).
 - Agency worksite, as long as the employee is performing work within the same geographic area (established for the purpose of a given pay entitlement) as the agency worksite.

Officially disciplined. A disciplinary action that results in the placement of a document in an employee's official personnel file (OPF); the bar on telework participation remains in effect as long as the document stays in an employee's OPF. A suspension or termination related to the items mentioned in Public Law 111-292 (codified in 5 U.S.C. Chapter 65) that results in a document (Standard Form (SF) 50) that permanently remains in the OPF would result in permanent prohibition in telework participation.

Official time. Authorized by Title 5, United States Code (U.S.C.) § 7131.

Official timekeeping system. WebTA is the web-based time and labor solution that simplifies timekeeping with online functionality that allows employees to request leave and premium pay. The system allows Census Bureau employees and/or timekeepers to input and validate time/fund code and supervisors to approve leave requests and to certify timecards online, all in one system.

Personally Identifiable Information (PII). PII is information that can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, either alone or when combined with other information. Because there are many different types of information that can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, the term PII is necessarily broad. The definition of PII is not anchored to any single category of information or technology. Rather, it requires a case-by-case assessment of the specific risk that an individual can be identified using information that is linked or linkable to said individual. In performing this assessment, it is important to recognize that information that is not PII can become PII whenever additional information is made publicly available—in any medium and from any source—that, when combined with other information to identify a specific individual, could be used to identify an individual (e.g., Social Security number, name, date of birth, home address, home e-mail, etc.).

Routine telework (recurring telework). Telework performed as part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular schedule. Instances of routine telework must be approved by the supervisor and recorded in the official timekeeping system.

Second-level supervisor. The second-level supervisor authorized to approve, deny, or terminate telework agreements. At the division chief level or higher, the first-level supervisor and second-level supervisor may be the same person. This person must have successfully completed required management training before rendering a decision on telework applications.

Situational telework (ad hoc, episodic, or unscheduled). Telework that is approved on a case-by-case, occasional, one-time, or irregular basis, where the hours worked are not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular telework schedule. Examples include telework to accommodate scheduling issues such as special work assignments or appointments away from the office. Situational telework is sometimes referred to as episodic, intermittent, unscheduled, or ad-hoc telework. This type of telework requires an approved telework agreement. Instances of situational telework must be approved by the supervisor and recorded appropriately in official timekeeping system.

Supervisor. A person directly responsible for the employee and their performance.

Temporary Alternate Duty Station (TADS). An arrangement which may be appropriate for employees with serious medical conditions or to care for an immediate family member (spouse, son, daughter, or parent of the employee) with a serious medical condition, of a temporary nature (Article 23.14 of the Collective Bargaining Agreement). Immediate family members and serious medical conditions are defined in accordance with 5 CFR § 630, Subpart L, available at <www.govinfo.gov/content/pkg/CFR-2014-title5-vol1/pdf/CFR-2014-title5-vol1-sec630-1202.pdf>.

Telework. A workplace flexibility arrangement under which employees perform the duties and responsibilities of their positions, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite (e.g., home, other approved alternative location) other than the official worksite from which the employee would otherwise work (5 U.S.C. § 6501(3)), and reports to the official worksite on a regular/recurring basis of at least twice per biweekly pay period. The duty station of the employee remains the duty station of the official worksite.

Telework does not include:

- Any part of the work performed while on official travel (travel regulations take precedence over telework).
- Work performed while commuting to and from a worksite.
- Mobile work (including work performed by field representatives).

Telework agreement. The telework agreement is the documented agreement which provides the framework, expectations, terms, conditions, and responsibilities by which an employee (who has met the requirements to apply for telework) completes, agrees to with management, and submits for approval or denial.

Telework-ready employee. An employee who has completed the required telework training, has an approved telework (either regular/recurring, or situational) agreement, and has the required necessities at the alternative worksite to perform the duties and responsibilities of their position during their period of telework.

Unscheduled telework. A form of situational telework that allows telework-ready employees to telework without previous supervisory approval in response to specific announcements by OPM or other appropriate authority. This type of telework requires notification to your supervisor prior to teleworking.

1. INTRODUCTION

This telework policy issues and transmits the U.S. Census Bureau's policy governing the use of workforce mobility and telework, and supersedes all previous telework policies, including past practices, in place throughout the Census Bureau.

Based on the provisions of Public Law No. 111-292, known as the Telework Enhancement Act (TEA) of 2010. Telework is defined and authorized by the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, which is now codified within 5 United States Code (U.S.C) Chapter 65. This policy provides guidelines for implementation of telework within the Census Bureau.

Note: This policy applies to all Census Bureau employees. It does not apply to employees who are contractors. Contractors should consult with their company's project manager and/or human resources manager regarding their telework policy/guidelines. The use of telework by Census Bureau employees is restricted to the United States and its territories and possessions with the exception of Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas (DETO).

The Census Bureau recognizes workforce mobility (telework) as an overarching term describing the ability of employees to perform work both within and outside the agency worksite as defined in this telework policy. The Census Bureau continues to support telework to the maximum extent possible that is consistent with the business needs of the organization and that will fully enable the Census Bureau to achieve its mission.

Workforce mobility, including telework, is critical to:

- Performance-based business outcomes for individuals, work teams, and organizations.
- Continuity planning.
- Expanded recruitment and retention.
- Employee engagement and work/life balance.

This policy is designed to facilitate agency, organizational, and individual performance by providing the structure needed for effective telework for the Census Bureau. Successful telework requires communication and collaboration between employees, their supervisors, and affected work groups. Each is responsible for successful implementation and related performance outcomes. Organizations must ensure compliance with the provisions of this policy, support of agency guidelines, and fulfillment of applicable labor relations obligations.

Note: Telework is a tool to support effective accomplishment of assigned work. It is not an employee's entitlement or right.

Program Level Evaluation

Consistent with the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 (P.L. 111-292), now codified in 5 U.S.C. Chapter 65, and the Department of Commerce (DOC) Telework and Remote Work Plan (December 2021), the Census Bureau is required to answer Office of Personnel Management (OPM) and DOC calls for data on telework.

The Census Bureau will respond to requests from the chief human capital officer and telework managing officer of the DOC, the DOC telework program manager, and the OPM.

These reports, including participation and frequency of telework, will be shared with the Census Bureau's Labor Management Council.

2. RESPONSIBILITIES

Telework Program Manager (TPM)

The TPM is responsible for:

- Administering the Telework Program.
- Collaborating with stakeholders, as appropriate, on telework policy and process changes.
- Providing telework advocacy.
- Developing and providing support to implement policy related to telework programs.
- Providing expertise and guidance to leadership.
- Serving as a resource for managers and employees on telework matters.
- Serving as a point of contact with the OPM and providing advocacy, implementation support, and data collection on implementation of this policy at the agency level.

Human Resources Division (HRD)

The HRD is responsible for:

- Ensuring that all Census Bureau employees (new and current) and supervisors are aware of the opportunity for telework and the parameters for implementing telework as outlined in this policy.
- Providing guidance, support, and evaluation to support fair and consistent implementation of this policy.
- Identifying and providing training for employees and supervisors.
- Preparing and submitting annual reports to OPM regarding telework as required.
- Conducting periodic accountability reviews of telework to analyze use, policy compliance, and the degree to which telework is supporting agency requirements.
- Maintaining telework data and records.

Employees

Employees are responsible for:

- Discussing the desire to telework and related schedule with your supervisor before submitting your initial Telework Agreement.
- Following the rules of employee conduct consistent with the Office of Government Ethics' Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch (5 CFR Part 2635) while teleworking at the approved alternative worksite.
- Adhering to the terms of the approved telework agreement.
- Successfully completing required telework training and submitting the telework agreement in the Census Human Resources Information System (CHRIS).
- Submitting updated telework agreements in the CHRIS system when relevant changes occur during the agreement period (including change in supervisor, position, and employee eligibility).
- Safeguarding all sensitive and titled data (including PII, Title 13, Title 26, and Title 5) in accordance with Office of Management and Budget (OMB) M-06-19 and Census Bureau policies.
- Ensuring the telework location provides adequate internet connectivity that is compatible with your Government Furnished Equipment (GFE). The telework location should also provide an acceptable level of privacy appropriate to the sensitivity of the work performed and security to prevent loss or theft of equipment and information.
- Contacting IT support if there is a repeated issue with sound, video, messaging, or other communication capabilities on GFE.

- Appropriately using telework as a tool to accomplish work pursuant to their performance plans and assigned tasks.
 - Meeting individual, team, and organizational requirements including, but not limited to, all requirements regarding communication, accessibility, and collaboration as required by the supervisor.
 - Using appropriate communication tools regardless of whether employees telework. Individual work groups are encouraged to consider the types of communication tools (meetings, text, chat, e-mail, video, etc.) that work best in support of individual and organizational performance, utilizing the many tools available to Census Bureau employees. The use of video can be a valuable way to strengthen engagement in meetings, build collegial relationships, and maintain focus while working in virtual teams. Examples of these meetings can include (onboarding, performance, discipline related, branch/division, and/or presentations). Employees collaborating in virtual spaces (whether teleworking or on site) may be required to use their video. Managers are encouraged to make this clear in advance of the meeting. Employees who are reluctant to use video, whether for general or circumstantial reasons, may utilize background filters to minimize any privacy or personal concerns, or discuss their preferences /concerns with their supervisor. It is expected that supervisors will use reasonable discretion in these cases.
 - Reporting to the agency worksite (or other required location), as required by management and pursuant to agency needs, for all or part of the workday during which they would otherwise telework.
 - Notifying the supervisor for instances of cancelled or interrupted plans to telework. Such instances do not constitute a termination of that telework day (long term) or entitle the employee to a “replacement” or “in lieu of” telework day. Employees and supervisors can determine alternate plans on a case-by-case basis.
 - Discussing with the supervisor and agreeing on how much advance notice will be needed to report to the agency worksite, prior to approval of the telework agreement. The discussion should consider individual circumstances, including travel distance, commute time, and all available means of transportation (including public transit).
 - Understanding and acting in accordance with the Census Bureau’s Dismissal and Closure Procedures, including:
 - Being familiar with operating status announcements.
 - Preparing and planning, including taking necessary equipment, such as laptop, to the alternative worksite when severe weather or other emergency situations can be anticipated.
 - Notifying supervisor of work status when an operating status announcement is made by the OPM, Federal Executive Board, or regional authority.
 - Accurately reporting telework type and hours worked in the official timekeeping system.
 - Ensuring that their individual application for transit subsidy benefits accurately reflects their work schedule, including telework. Applications must reflect anticipated telework days and not include requests for transit subsidy benefits for those days.
 - Working with supervisors to ensure that telework does not place a hardship or extra workload on other employees.
 - Following established office practices, agency policies, and laws for requesting and obtaining approval of leave, overtime, or any change to the work schedule.
 - Keeping primary (permanent home address) and alternative worksite address current in the telework agreement in CHRIS; a permanent address change requires resubmission of the telework agreement for approval.

- Coordinating with the supervisor to establish flexible schedules, request appropriate leave, or otherwise account for time spent engaging in dependent care if responsible for caring for dependents.
 - If the elders, children, or other dependents residing with a teleworking employee can care for themselves for part of the workday, then their presence at the telework location should not interfere with the employee performing his/her telework.
 - When federal offices are closed or there is an unscheduled telework status, an employee who is required to telework may request periods of personal leave during the workday (thus removing themselves from a duty status) to care for an elder, a child, or a dependent.
 - Obtaining supervisory approval to extend their workday outside of business hours within their respective time zone before working outside business hours.
 - For positions that require working during designated time frames during the day to provide support to customers in other time zones, this flexibility may be limited by management.
 - Scheduling hoteling space in advance of working at a Census Bureau worksite.
 - Union representatives: Adhering to the telework policy and the Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA) while performing union activities at the approved alternative worksite. Union representatives are authorized to perform union representational activities while teleworking based on their eligibility under the Telework Enhancement Act.
 - Discussing the feasibility of telework with your employee before an initial telework agreement is submitted. The Telework Assessment Tool, available at <<https://uscensus.sharepoint.com/sites/CensusCentral/SitePages/Telework--Important-Documents.aspx>>, is a helpful tool.
 - Engaging employees in discussion when considering individual, team, and organizational performance requirements while making telework participation, scheduling, and frequency decisions based on appropriate business needs.
 - Preparing a plan, in collaboration with the employee, for returning the employee to telework eligibility or participation when telework is denied or suspended for an otherwise eligible employee on a temporary basis.
 - Ensuring that all interested employees successfully complete required telework training and submit a telework agreement in the CHRIS system.
 - Reviewing telework agreements at the beginning of each performance year or as appropriate based on relevant changes.
 - Reviewing and approving requests from employees regarding the primary and secondary alternative worksites.
 - Reviewing and discussing submitted telework agreements with employees within 5 business days of employee submission.
 - Making recommendations to the second-level supervisor regarding telework participation, schedules, and frequency. Upon denial, provide explanation to the employee and in the CHRIS telework agreement.
 - Treating all employees (whether teleworking or not) the same in actions involving managerial discretion, including but not limited to:
 - Periodic appraisals of job performance of employees.
 - Training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees.

Supervisors

Supervisors are responsible for:

- Completing the required management telework training course in the Commerce Learning Center prior to making any telework decision.

- Equitable distribution of work assignments among employees with the same position descriptions.
 - Work schedules.
 - Work requirements.
 - Other acts involving managerial discretion.
 - Using appropriate communication tools regardless of whether employees telework. Individual work groups are encouraged to consider the types of communication tools (meetings, text, chat, e-mail, video, etc.) that work best in support of individual and organizational performance, utilizing the many tools available to Census Bureau employees. The use of video can be a valuable way to strengthen engagement in meetings, build collegial relationships, and maintain focus while working in virtual teams. Examples of these meetings can include (onboarding, performance, discipline related, branch/division, and/or presentations). Employees collaborating in virtual spaces (whether teleworking or on site) may be required to use their video. Managers are encouraged to make this clear in advance of the meeting. Employees who are reluctant to use video, whether for general or circumstantial reasons, may utilize background filters to minimize any privacy or personal concerns, or discuss their preferences /concerns with their supervisor. It is expected that supervisors will use reasonable discretion in these cases.
 - Reviewing time and attendance information submitted by employees or timekeepers to ensure accuracy, including correct coding of telework participation (routine vs. situational), certifying timesheets with telework, ensuring that the employee has an approved telework agreement in place.
 - Communicating to the employee the possibility that management may find it necessary to require a nonemergency, telework-ready employee to report for an assignment that requires presence at the agency worksite. This should be a special work circumstance that both the supervisor and employee know about, discuss, and plan. Where possible, every attempt should be made to minimize these interruptions. For example, utilizing teleconferencing or videoconferencing when available.

Second-Level Supervisor

The second-level supervisor is responsible for making a determination (approve, deny, or terminate) for telework applications within 15 business days from the submission date.

3. ELIGIBILITY

Employees are eligible to telework pursuant to organizational business needs, without diminished individual, team, or organizational performance, with the exceptions outlined below. Supervisors should make telework determinations based on appropriate business needs. The TEA makes a clear distinction between eligibility and participation.

An employee is eligible to telework unless one or more of the following exceptions apply:

- The employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year.¹ The days do not have to be consecutive, just within the same year. The offense could have occurred at any time during their employment with the federal government.
- The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a federal government computer or while performing official federal government duties.² (5 U.S.C. §§ 6502(a)(2)(A) and (B)).

- The employee's performance does not comply with the terms of the written telework agreement between the supervisor and the employee.³ (5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3)).
- The employee is a mobile worker.
- The position is deemed ineligible to telework and this is documented in the position description.

All Census Bureau job announcements must indicate whether the position is eligible for telework.

² This offense renders the employee permanently ineligible to telework.

³ The length of ineligibility in this case is up to the second-level supervisor.

4. TERMS OF TELEWORK PARTICIPATION

Employees are not required to telework. Telework is voluntary except in certain emergency situations. Eligible employees may:

- Choose to telework.
- Decline to telework (except in specific emergency situations such as weather-related office closures or if the employee occupies a designated essential position).
- Select the alternative worksite(s) from which to telework.
- Be required to telework in the event of an emergency or other unforeseen situation that prevents access to the agency worksite.

Telework may not be conducive for employees who are unable to: (1) perform without close supervision, (2) prioritize work effectively, and (3) manage time appropriately. The appropriateness of telework and the frequency of telework is a decision made by the supervisor based on the business need and a discussion between the supervisor and the employee. To facilitate this discussion, the supervisor and employee may utilize the Telework Assessment Tool available at <https://uscensus.sharepoint.com/sites/CensusCentral/SitePages/Telework--Important-Documents.aspx>. Supervisors are responsible for making decisions regarding employee work schedules that are consistent with individual performance, team, and organizational work requirements. This includes alternate work schedules (AWS) and telework schedules and frequency.

Telework is official work time (hours of duty) and is not to be used for any purposes other than performance of official duties.

Timekeeping

Telework hours must be documented correctly, using the appropriate telework code in the official timekeeping system. For timekeeping purposes, employees are required to designate individual instances of telework participation as routine or situational at the primary or secondary alternative worksite.

5. DUTY STATION/OFFICIAL WORKSITE

Designation of Official Duty Station

The official duty station is the location of an employee's position of record where the employee regularly performs their duties. If the employee's work involves recurring travel or their work location varies on a recurring basis, the duty station is the location where the work activities of the employee's position of record are based, as approved by their supervisor/manager. An employee's official duty station determines the appropriate locality pay area for pay purposes for General Schedule or equivalent employees (Title 5, CFR § 531.605, available at <www.ecfr.gov/current/title-5/chapter-I/subchapter-B/part-531/subpart-F/section-531.605>). It also impacts other expenses, such as relocation and travel expenses, under the Federal Travel Regulations (FTR).

- The official duty station must be documented on the employee's SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action.
- There is no change to the official duty station for employees temporarily detailed to a position in a different location without a change in the permanent position of record. They maintain the locality pay area of the permanent position of record. For additional information on official duty stations, refer to <www.opm.gov/oca/pay/html/official_duty_station.asp>.

Determining the Official Worksite Station

The official duty station is the location of the official worksite where the employee physically reports to the official worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis. The official duty station is the telework location (i.e., home or other alternative worksite) if the employee does NOT report at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis to the official worksite. This is true even if the alternative worksite is within the same locality pay area as the official worksite.

Pay During Telework Arrangement

- If a telework employee with a varying work location works at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis in the same locality pay area where the official worksite is located, the employee does not have to report twice each biweekly pay period to the official worksite to maintain the locality payment for that area.
- Per diem (5 U.S.C. § 5702) employees traveling on official business has been interpreted to say that in circumstances where the official worksite is reassigned to the telework location, trips to the main worksite are "official business" and the employee is entitled to travel reimbursement.
- Reassignment of official worksite may have implications for a Reduction in Force (RIF) as the new location may be a different competitive area than the original worksite. More information about RIFs is available on OPM's website.

Note: Employees in the Senior Executive Service (SES) do not receive locality pay. Therefore, there are no pay implications if the SES employee works the entire 80 hours of the pay period in a different locality pay area than their official duty station. That employee would continue to receive the same pay.

Exception to a Change in the Duty Station Rule for a Temporary Telework Arrangement

In certain temporary situations, a bureau/operating unit may continue to designate the location of the official worksite as the official duty station of a teleworker, even though the employee is not able to report to the official worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis.

Note: The fact that an employee may receive lesser pay or benefits if the official duty station is changed to the temporary worksite location is not a basis or justification for using this exception.

The intent of this exception is to address temporary arrangements in which an employee is expected to return to their official worksite when the temporary arrangement or agreed upon period has concluded.

In making these determinations, supervisors need to consider pay equity between the employee receiving this exception and other employees who are working in the same locality pay area as either their official worksite location or their permanent alternative worksite location.

The temporary exception should generally be used only in cases where: (1) the employee is expected to return to their alternative worksite (i.e., telework location, official worksite) in the near future or (2) the employee is expected to continue working at the temporary worksite but will be able to report to the alternative or official worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis in the near future.

Examples of appropriate temporary situations include:

- Recovery from an injury or medical condition.
- Emergencies that prevent an employee from regularly commuting to the official worksite or working at their alternative worksite, such as in a severe weather emergency or a pandemic health crisis. (For instance, in the aftermath of a hurricane or flood, an employee may be forced to temporarily relocate, making commuting to the official worksite twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/recurring basis not possible. If the employing bureau/operating unit sets up telework arrangements for the employee, a temporary exception to the twice-a-pay-period requirement would be appropriate.)

- An extended period of approved absence from work (e.g., paid leave).
- A period in which the employee is in Temporary Duty (TDY) status away from their alternative or official worksite.
- A period during which the employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than their alternative or official worksite.

Reporting to the Official Duty Station From an Alternative Worksite While Teleworking

Travel to/from an alternative worksite to the official duty station is considered nonduty status and is not counted towards work time. In cases where an employee who has already started the telework day at the alternative worksite then must report to the office or agency worksite (e.g., to attend an emergency meeting), the employee will not be charged personal leave for the commute into the official duty station. Where possible, every attempt should be made to minimize these interruptions, for example utilizing teleconferencing or videoconferencing when available.

6. TELEWORK PLANS

An employee on a flexible, alternate, or compressed work schedule may telework; however, pursuant to work needs, limitations on telework days may apply. Work requirements should be the primary factor in determining the frequency of telework for an employee. Supervisors should approve the maximum requested telework days unless there is a sound business reason not to approve it. The approved maximum telework schedule days does not include days of unscheduled telework or telework during a federal office closure when announced by OPM or other jurisdictional authorities.

Under special circumstances associated with or affecting work requirements, a teleworker may request a temporary increase in telework frequency (but not longer than 30 days), consistent with work requirements, deadlines, and other factors. Such requests require the support and timely approval of the teleworker's division chief/regional director/National Processing Center (NPC) director.

Employees who wish to extend their telework days beyond the approved maximum for medical reasons should contact the HRD's Reasonable Accommodation Branch (RAB). Employees who would like to submit a request for a Temporary Alternative Duty Station (TADS) arrangement should contact HRD's Employee Relations Branch (ERB) to seek assistance. TADS guidance is provided in the Accommodation/Flexibilities section below.

After reviewing the telework plans available, submit a new telework agreement or update the current agreement. Any changes to a telework plan selection or alternative worksite require resubmission of the telework agreement. Significant changes should not occur more than three times per year unless there are extenuating circumstances.

An annual review and reauthorization of all telework agreements is required. The review and renewal period begins 60 days prior to the expiration of the agreement, typically November 30. In some rare cases, the review, renewal, and expiration of agreements may be required at other times.

Telework Up to 8 Days, in Office at Least 2 Days Per Pay Period

Employees may request to telework up to 8 days, schedule dependent, per pay period; employees must physically report to the official duty station a minimum of 2 days per pay period. Supervisors should apply equitable, function-based criteria to determine the number of days an employee may telework, not managerial preference per se. The 2-day requirement to physically report to the office can occur on any day(s) of the pay period; the reporting days can change based on the employee's schedule and work requirements. Telework and onsite workdays are coordinated in accordance with work requirements.

The requirement to physically report to the official duty station may be substituted for approved leave no more than 6 pay periods per year; additional occurrences may result in locality pay adjustment. Otherwise, if an employee is unable to physically report on planned in office days, their schedule should be modified to enable them to report on alternate day(s) or termination of the telework agreement may result. This does not apply to employees that are approved for a reasonable accommodation/TADS/temporary exception.

- Employees are not eligible for local travel reimbursement for reporting to the office.
- Employees may be eligible for the Transit Benefits Program. Please consult the Transportation Subsidy Program coordinator at headquarters or NPC for more information.
- Changes require approval from the first- and second-level supervisors. The second-level supervisor has final approving authority for telework plans.

7. ACCOMMODATION/FLEXIBILITIES

Reasonable Accommodation

It is important to distinguish between general employee requests to telework and requests to telework from employees with disabilities for reasonable accommodation. The first- and/or second-level supervisors should consult Department Administrative Order (DAO) 215-10, Reasonable Accommodation Policy, the Collective Bargaining Agreement, and the HRD RAB as part of the interactive process established by the Rehabilitation Act in order to fully understand supervisors' responsibilities under the law.

As governed by Section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 791 et. seq., the Rehabilitation Act and DAO 215-10, the determination as to whether an employee may be granted telework as a reasonable accommodation due to a disability should be made through the Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator, the employee's first-line supervisor, and the employee.

TADS Arrangement for Serious Medical Conditions of a Temporary Nature

A TADS arrangement may be appropriate for employees with serious medical conditions or to care for an immediate family member (spouse, child, or parent of the employee) with a serious medical condition of a temporary nature. Immediate family members and serious medical conditions are defined in accordance with 5 CFR § 630, Subpart L. The following set forth the parameters and guidelines of a TADS arrangement:

“The arrangement is for a period of no more than 3 months. However, on rare occasions, the initial period may be extended, but is under no circumstance ever to exceed 6 months. If the medical condition and/or the barriers/limitations are expected to exceed 6 months, upon becoming aware, the employee should immediately seek an accommodation through the Reasonable Accommodations Branch at 301-763-4060 or <hrd.accommodations@census.gov>.”

Criteria

- The employee must have an updated and approved telework agreement in CHRIS.
- The employee may only telework from their approved alternate telework location (i.e., primary residence), unless a second alternate approved worksite is approved within the telework agreement.
- The TADS request approval must be granted by the HRD prior to the employee being permitted to work under a TADS arrangement. A decision will be made on a request no later than 10 working days after all appropriate documentation (i.e., request memo and supporting medical documentation) has been received by the servicing employee relations office. Requests for NPC or Tucson employees should be sent to the Employee and Labor Relations (ELR) section, Human Resources Branch at NPC, and all others to the ERB at headquarters. The immediate supervisor should work with the employee to utilize the appropriate leave options available to the employee while the TADS request is being processed.

Employee procedures:

1. Inform supervisor of his/her request to work from a temporary alternate duty station.
2. Obtain the applicable TADS medical questionnaire from the ERB intranet site at <<https://uscensus.sharepoint.com/sites/HRD/ERB/employeerelations/Pages/Temporary-Alternate-Duty-Station-Requests.aspx>>, or by contacting the ERB at 301-763-3701. For NPC and Tucson, call 812-218-3321.
3. Provide the servicing employee relations office with the completed medical questionnaire.

Supervisory procedures:

1. Confer with the servicing employee relations office regarding medical need and duration, if necessary.
2. Informs the division chief (of the employee requesting TADS) of the request.
3. If supported, provide a written memorandum, which is to be signed by their respective division chief and addressed to the chief of ERB at headquarters or the chief of the Human Resources Branch (HRB) at NPC, where applicable:
 - Employee's name, title, and grade.
 - Brief reason for request (example: medical reasons).
 - Duration of TADS arrangement.
 - Confirmation that there is enough work for the employee to do at the approved telework location.
 - General description of the type of work the employee will be performing.
 - A statement that a supervisor will monitor the daily work of the employee, along with the supervisor's name.
 - Confirmation that the employee has completed the required telework training and has an approved telework agreement in the CHRIS, along with access to the Virtual Desktop Infrastructure (VDI) or the Virtual Private Network (VPN).

- Confirmation that any Title 5, 13, 15, or 26 data or personally identifiable information (PII) will be accessed only via the Census Bureau's network and in accordance with the current telework policy, Chief Information Officer (CIO) policy, and IT security policy.

Final Decision

The ERB chief at headquarters or the HRB chief at NPC will review the request and provide a written decision to the requesting division chief, who will in turn be responsible for notifying the supervisor and employee. A copy of the decision will be provided to the HRD chief.

Documents

Complete details and required documents needed for this request are available from the ERB at <https://uscensus.sharepoint.com/sites/HRD/ERB/employeerelations/Pages/Temporary-Alternate-Duty-Station-Requests.aspx>.

For questions and/or concerns regarding TADS, please contact the servicing employee relations office, either ERB (headquarters) at 301-763-3701 or the ELR section (NPC) at 812-218-3321.

8. TELEWORK AGREEMENT

All employees must have a telework agreement approved in CHRIS by the employee's first- and second-level supervisor before they can begin to telework. Telework agreement determination should be completed within 15 business days from submission date.

Telework agreements must reflect a current agreement between the employee and the respective supervisor.

The telework agreement must be renewed at the beginning of the performance year and approved consistent with the employee's current summary rating of record. Supervisors are also encouraged to discuss telework participation during progress reviews.

In addition to the annual update, there are many other changes that require updating an existing telework agreement to include a change in position, change in organization, change in supervisor, and change in any other item captured in the online telework agreement at <https://uscensus.sharepoint.com/sites/CensusCentral/SitePages/Telework--Important-Documents.aspx>. For more details, visit the Telework SharePoint site at <https://uscensus.sharepoint.com/sites/CensusCentral/SitePages/Telework.aspx>.

9. TERMINATION OF TELEWORK

Termination Process

Prior to terminating an agreement, the supervisor will notify the employee of the concerns and plans to terminate the agreement. The second-level supervisor updates the approval status in the CHRIS system. After a termination for cause, the employee will be eligible to reapply to the program after a period of 90 days unless the employee has permanently lost eligibility to participate. This period will be utilized by the employee's supervisor to assess the employee's work assignments, improved performance or conduct, and the employee's ability to adhere to the terms of the telework agreement. The supervisor and the employee will work together to address the areas of concern.

Voluntary Termination

Termination or requests to change to a different telework schedule option normally requires at least 30 days' notice. Termination may require an update to the employee's official duty station and the assignment of a seating location within the agency worksite.

Involuntary Termination

The involuntary termination of the telework agreement must occur in the CHRIS system using the telework involuntary termination process. The first- or second-level supervisor should consult the telework program manager if the reason for involuntary termination does not fall in the following list. The second-level supervisor must include the reason the agreement is being terminated. Reasons (which may not be all-inclusive) a second-level supervisor can involuntarily terminate a telework agreement include:

- The employee continues to show a pattern of failing to adhere to the requirements specified in the individual telework agreement after the supervisor has discussed the issue with the teleworker.
- The employee violates confidentiality rules and laws.
- The employee has demonstrated an established pattern of inability to work effectively from an alternative worksite without diminished performance. Diminished performance includes reduced work production, nonresponsiveness to telephone calls, or nonavailability.
- The employee fails to correct identified safety problems related to the alternative worksite.
- Conditions have changed so that the employee's work can be done only at the agency's worksite.
- The employee is officially disciplined for being absent without leave for more than 5 days in any calendar year (this involuntary termination is permanent).
- The employee is officially disciplined for violation of the Office of Government Ethics' Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch (5 CFR Part 2635) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography on a government computer or while performing official government duties (this involuntary termination is permanent).
- The Census Bureau's inability to support costs of telework due to budgetary concerns.
- Failure to report telework hours regularly on the employee's timesheet (routine or situational telework).

10. SAFEGUARDING AND ACCESSING INFORMATION DURING TELEWORK

Instructions on safeguarding and accessing information can be found in DS007: Safeguarding and Managing Information at <<https://uscensus.sharepoint.com/sites/policyportal/Policy%20Repository/DS007.pdf>>.

Generally, Census Bureau employees should telework on government-issued equipment using Virtual Private Network (VPN) or through the VDI on government-issued or personally owned equipment. Keeping the agency's information on our network helps us meet our data stewardship and federal recordkeeping obligations.

Staff are prohibited from accessing Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI), including Title 13 information, Title 26 information, and Sensitive PII except on a Census Bureau-issued laptop via VPN or through VDI on personally owned equipment. Staff may access Uncontrolled Unclassified Information (UUI), including some forms of administratively restricted information such as draft or predecisional documents, on other Census Bureau-issued devices such as smartphones or tablets.

Staff are prohibited from sending CUI to personal accounts, uploading it to file sharing sites, downloading it onto personally owned devices or removable media, or in any other way extracting it from the Census Bureau's IT network for telework.

Staff are further prohibited from printing all documents, or otherwise creating hardcopies including handwritten notes of CUI at the telework site or removing hardcopies of this information from secure Census Bureau facilities for the purposes of telework. This benefits the Census Bureau not only from a data stewardship perspective, but also from an environmental perspective. The Census Bureau is considered a green environment and encourages all staff to be working paperless as much as possible.

Staff are responsible for securing their telework space to ensure CUI is not shared with unauthorized individuals including family members or others in the household. Staff should take the following steps to secure their workspace:

- Ensure their computer monitor is not visible to others in the household or from an exterior window where someone may look in.
- Ensure their workstation and other devices are locked when unattended.
- Ensure others cannot overhear work conversations where sensitive information may be discussed.

Staff must report any confirmed or suspected data security incident, PII incident, or unauthorized disclosure of CUI to the Census Bureau Computer Incident Response Team and their immediate supervisors within 1 hour of discovery at 301-763-3333 or 866-300-7063.

Information safeguarding and reporting requirements at the Census Bureau are governed by DS007: Safeguarding and Managing Information. Refer to this policy at <<https://uscensus.sharepoint.com/sites/policyportal/Policy%20Repository/DS007.pdf>> or the Data Stewardship Awareness Training for more information.

11. TELEWORK DURING OPERATIONAL STATUS CHANGE

The Census Bureau's dismissal and closure procedures are consistent with OPM's Governmentwide Dismissal and Closure Procedures available at <www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/pay-leave/reference-materials/handbooks/dcdismisal.pdf>. Census Bureau employees are responsible for following guidance disseminated during an emergency situation.

Telework-ready employees are required, when there is an announcement of an operating status under which federal offices are closed, to work or notify their supervisor of their intent to request appropriate leave or approval to adjust their work schedule.

Operating status announcements are generally issued when weather or other emergency conditions prevent federal employees from safely traveling to or safely performing work at an approved work location (5 U.S.C. 6329c(b)). The inability to safely travel to an approved work location may result in "closure" of a federal office (i.e., closed to the public and nonemergency employees) for the full day or authorization of a delayed arrival. Authorization of early departure may be based on unsafe conditions at the work location or unsafe travel conditions affecting travel from the work location, both of which make it unsafe for the employee to continue to perform work at the location. Depending on the conditions that affect a workday, the various operating status announcements have different procedures and application to an employee's workday.

In the Washington, DC, area, OPM-issued operating status announcements apply to employees working in all executive agencies with offices located inside the Washington Capital Beltway. Employees working in offices located outside of the Washington Capital Beltway must follow the operating status announcements issued by their bureau/operating unit. While Federal Executive Boards (FEBs) do not cover the entire United States, FEBs are currently located in 28 metropolitan areas that are major centers of federal activity. In these areas, the FEB provides up-to-date, accurate, and consistent information so federal field office heads can make informed decisions on operating status announcements for their employees in those areas.

Unscheduled Telework

It is government policy that unscheduled telework is authorized to the maximum extent possible to continue work operations during periods of inclement weather or other emergencies without compromising the safety of employees and the public. This type of telework is permitted when authorized by OPM or some other appropriate authority. Unscheduled telework allows telework-ready employees to work from home or at an approved alternative worksite upon notification to their supervisors in accordance with the office policies or the terms of an applicable collective bargaining agreement.

OPM has incorporated the unscheduled telework option into various operating statuses.

Facility Emergencies

Telework for exigent conditions can also be approved for telework-ready employees in specific short-term, emergency situations that affect employees' ability to conduct work. These very unusual situations could include but are not necessarily limited to the following:

- Uncontrolled gas leak in the vicinity of the building that prevents entry to the facility.
- Local police action that prevents entry to the facility.
- Terrorist activity or imminent threat of terrorist action that is not tied to a national or regional.

Emergency Limited to One or More Census Bureau Facilities

In the event of an emergency at a Census Bureau facility where the building (or a portion thereof) is deprived of electricity, network connectivity, adequate lighting, temperature controls, or other similar factors (for example, a water main break), the division chief or equivalent can approve telework for telework-ready employees.

Federal Offices Are Closed

When OPM or other authority announces the federal government is operating under a Federal Offices Are Closed status, employees must telework consistent with their telework agreements when federal or departmental offices in their local commuting area are closed. Excused absences may be granted on a case-by-case basis for telework-ready employees in the above situation only if the employee or group of employees is prevented from safely traveling to or performing work at an approved location due to: (1) an act of God, (2) a terrorist attack, or (3) another condition that prevents the employee or group of employees from safely traveling to or performing work at an approved location. More information on Weather and Safety Leave is available at <<https://uscensus.sharepoint.com/sites/HRD/Policy,Development,Performance/HR%20Policy/Pages/Types-of-Leave.aspx>>.

Telework may not be used to care for elders, children, or other dependents while in an official duty status. If the elders, children, or other dependents can care for themselves, then their presence at the telework location would not interfere with the employee's performance of telework duties. When federal offices are closed, a teleworker may request periods of personal leave during the workday (thus removing themselves from a duty status) to care for an elder, child, or dependent.

When federal offices are closed, the employee may notify the supervisor that the employee is voluntarily extending the workday (without receiving pay premium night differential), as long as it was by employee request. An employee who voluntarily requests to extend the workday beyond the established business hours is not entitled to night differential.

Excused absences can be granted to an employee on a case-by-case basis by the manager or the supervisor without charge to paid personal leave or loss of pay during an emergency if: (1) the emergency adversely affects the alternative worksite (e.g., disruption of electricity or network connection problems that prevent telework),

(2) the telework-ready employee is unable to access another alternative worksite, (3) the telework-ready employee's duties are such that the employee cannot continue to work without contact with their Census Bureau office.

Emergency at the Alternative Worksite

When an emergency affects only the alternative worksite, teleworkers will notify their supervisors within 30 minutes and seek guidance. If the emergency affects the alternative worksite and impacts the employee's ability to perform official duties for an extended amount of time or what could be a major portion of the workday, the employee, with concurrence of the supervisor, is expected to report to the agency worksite or approved secondary alternative worksite. Alternatively, the employee may request supervisory approval of paid personal leave as applicable (i.e., annual, compensatory time, compensatory time off for travel, leave without pay, credit hours, etc.). Supervisors may approve administrative leave, if applicable, only if the employee or group of employees is prevented from safely traveling to or performing work at an approved location due to: (1) an act of God, (2) a terrorist attack, or (3) another condition that prevents the employee or group of employees from safely traveling to or performing work at an approved location.

On a case-by-case basis, the Census Bureau may excuse a telework employee from duty during an emergency (only when consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 6329c), without charge to personal leave or loss of pay if:

- The emergency adversely affects (e.g., disruption of electricity or network connection problems that prevent telework) the alternative worksite.
- The teleworker is unable to access the alternative worksite.
- The teleworker's duties are such that the employee cannot continue to work without contact with the official worksite.

12. CONTINUITY OF OPERATIONS PLAN (COOP)

The Census Bureau is fully dedicated to leveraging telework capabilities to augment, when feasible, continuity and emergency efforts. The use of telework shall be situation-specific in accordance with the Census Bureau's COOP. Due to the nature of Census Bureau's mission, certain functions must be performed in disaster areas or at dedicated continuity facilities. All COOP Emergency Relocation Group (ERG) members, Devolution Emergency Response Group (DERG) members, and Essential Employees must have an approved telework agreement and be prepared to telework at any time.

These employees may be required to telework during emergency closures or other emergencies, including pandemics and for COOP exercises, on any day, even if that day is not a regular telework day or a day with specific approval for situational/episodic telework. COOP team members may also be required to perform duties outside of their usual or customary duties to ensure continuation of agency-essential missions or activities.

During any period that the DOC is operating under a designated COOP event, including an exercise, the COOP plan shall supersede any telework policy (Public Law 111-292 Section 6504(d)(2)).

Note: There are situations when an employee without a telework agreement may be required to work from an alternative worksite (e.g., home) such as under evacuation orders. This is not considered telework under the terms of this policy. Under an evacuation order, the employee may be required to do any work for which the employee is qualified.

13. SAFETY

The proposed alternative worksite or secondary approved alternative worksite requires compliance with the safety requirements as outlined in the Telework Safety Checklist. When teleworking, the condition, safety, and security of the alternative worksite are the responsibility of the teleworker. Teleworkers are strongly encouraged to evaluate the space to ensure that it is safe and appropriate for the intended teleworking activity. Employees must notify their supervisor immediately of any accident or injury that occur while teleworking at the alternative worksite and must complete any required forms.

While in the act of performing official duties at an alternative worksite, teleworkers may depend on the facts covered by the:

- Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act of 1964, as amended (31 U.S.C. 3721).
- Federal Tort Claims Act (28 U.S.C. 2671-2680).
- Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA), 5 U.S.C. Chapter 81.

14. IT EQUIPMENT AND REQUIREMENTS

Census Bureau employees have a continuing responsibility to safeguard government property and are responsible for the care, security, and effective utilization of the government property, including computers and related equipment they use to perform official duties (see 5 C.F.R. §§ 2635.101(b)(9) and 2635.704(a)). Employees are also responsible and accountable for reading, understanding, and complying with Census Bureau Incident Response procedures.

The Office of the Chief Information Officer (OCIO) will not provide equipment installation outside an agency worksite. Teleworkers will be provided with installation instructions and all required software will be installed at an agency worksite (or by remote control) by Census Bureau IT support staff. If additional maintenance or repair is required, the teleworker may be required to bring the agency-provided equipment to an agency worksite or ship the product as directed by the Census Bureau IT Service Desk to a location where an IT technician can provide complete support of the device.

Employees may use personally owned laptops, personal computers (PCs), or smart devices to remotely connect to the Census Bureau's network. Employees using non-Census Bureau provided equipment are responsible for its service and maintenance. The IT Service Desk will provide only basic connectivity support and will not troubleshoot or repair non-Census Bureau provided equipment.

Teleworkers whose positions require access to the Census Bureau network are expected to personally provide internet service at the alternative worksite. If high-speed internet service is not available at the alternative worksite, and lack of availability would adversely affect the employee's ability to perform the job, telework will not be an option. "Tethering" (connecting a computer to a cell phone to access the internet using the cellular network) is acceptable on an occasional, ad-hoc basis, but not as a daily/regular means of accessing the internet.

15. DISPUTES

For technical guidance on the policy, contact the Telework Program Management Office at 301-763-2900 or the Human Resources Policy Branch at 301-763-4072.

Informal Dispute

Any dispute related to the Census Bureau's Telework Program should be dealt with informally whenever possible. However, this is not required. Informal assistance is available through the Office of the Ombuds at 301-763-4824 or <<https://uscensus.sharepoint.com/sites/director/ombuds/SitePages/Home.aspx>>.

Formal Dispute

A bargaining unit employee may raise a dispute under Article 12, Negotiated Grievance Procedure of the CBA, or by contacting their appropriate local union office. A nonbargaining unit employee may file an administrative grievance under the DAO 202-771, Administrative Grievance Procedure.

I. SCOPE

The provisions of this document apply to all bargaining unit employees of the Economic Development Administration (EDA). All participation in telework arrangements is voluntary, except for those employees designated as “emergency,” those employees who are part of Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP) operations, or otherwise required to telework as a condition of employment.

II. BACKGROUND

Telework refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of his/her position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite (e.g., home) other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work. This definition includes what is generally referred to as remote work but does not include any part of work done while on official travel or mobile work.

The EDA Telework Policy follows the Department of Commerce Telework Plan (August 2021), and the provisions of the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010. OPM policy states the official worksite for an employee covered by a telework agreement is the location of the regular worksite for the employee's position (i.e., the place where the employee would normally work absent a telework agreement), as long as the employee is scheduled to report physically at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to the regular worksite

The purpose of this EDA Telework Program is to promote: (1) recruiting and retaining the best possible workforce; (2) continuing operations during emergency conditions; (3) successful management effectiveness by reducing management costs related to employee turnover and absenteeism; (4) reducing real estate and transit costs; and (5) enhancing work/life balance by allowing employees to better manage their work and family obligations.

EDA recognizes that a well-managed telework program has the potential to lead to such benefits as improved marketability (as a more competitive and inclusive employer); reduced commuting time that can contribute to an improved quality of work/life balance; cost savings in such areas as recruitment and retention of employees; and an improved COOP. In addition to the benefits of reduced commuting time and costs that accrue to employees, and more effective accomplishment of EDA's mission, EDA supports telework as a major element in its efforts to reduce its facility space requirements, thereby reducing its energy consumption, greenhouse gas emissions, surface ozone, rent, and other operating costs.

This program recognizes and supports the need for improved communication between the employee and his/her management on all aspects of the applicable telework arrangements for the employee and for the organization. In addition, this program recognizes that the employee and management are equally responsible for contributing to the success of telework.

III. TYPES OF TELEWORK

There are two types of telework: (1) routine telework in which telework occurs as part of an ongoing, regular schedule; and (2) situational telework that includes ad hoc telework (which is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked are not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular telework schedule), and unscheduled telework in which Federal/ Department offices are open but under an announcement of “Unscheduled Telework” by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) or other appropriate authority.

IV. DEFINITIONS

ACT OF GOD – An act of God means an act of nature, including hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, wildfires, earthquakes, landslides, snowstorms, and avalanches (Title 5, Code of Federal Regulations \(CFR\) § 630.1602).

AD HOC TELEWORK – Approved telework performed on an occasional, one-time, or irregular basis; it includes “situational” and “unscheduled telework.” An employee may be approved to telework on an ad hoc basis (not regular/recurring), but must have successfully completed the required DOC telework training or approved bureau/OU specific training via the Commerce Learning Center \(CLC\) or other system capable of tracking when employees have successfully completed the course. An employee must have a telework agreement in place before participating.

APPROVING OFFICIAL – The official authorized to approve individual telework agreements. In some cases, the approving official and the supervisor may be the same person.

ALTERNATIVE WORKSITE – The employee’s residence or another location other than the employee’s traditional worksite that has been approved by the approving official for the performance of the employee’s official duties. For purposes of telework, the alternate worksite is considered an official Government worksite.

CONTINUITY OF OPERATIONS PROGRAM (COOP) – Initiative that ensures that Federal Government departments and agencies are able to continue operation of their essential functions under a broad range of circumstances including all-hazard emergencies as well as natural, man-made, and technological threats and national security emergencies

DOMESTIC EMPLOYEE TELEWORKING OVERSEAS (DETO) – Overseas work arrangement where a Federal executive branch employee temporarily performs the work requirements and duties of their domestic Civil Service or Foreign Service (FS) position from an approved overseas location via a DETO Agreement. Employees have no authorization to telework from a foreign location without an approved DETO Agreement. DETO agreements are not needed for U.S. territories or possessions; however, the employee’s locality pay changes.

ELIGIBLE TO TELEWORK – All employees are considered eligible to telework unless: (1) the employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year (5 U.S.C. § 6502(a)(2)(A)) (there are no exceptions); (2) the employee has been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties (5 U.S.C. § 6502(a)(2)(B)) (there are no exceptions); or (3) the employee’s performance does not comply with the terms of the written agreement between the supervisor and the employee (5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3)).

ELIGIBLE POSITION – A position is an eligible position unless the official duties require on a daily basis (every workday) the direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the head of the bureau/operating unit; or the employee performs on-site activities that cannot be handled at an alternate worksite.

ERG MEMBER – Emergency Response Group member. A person (including alternates) who may be required to work during a Continuity of Operations (COOP) exercise or activation where they may report to an alternative site, or may be required to perform duties through telework, in order to perform agency essential function or other COOP required function(s).

ESSENTIAL FUNCTIONS – Functions that enable the Federal Government to provide vital services, exercise civil authority, maintain the safety and well-being of the general populace, and sustain the industrial/economic base in an emergency.

EVACUATION ORDER – An agency may order one or more employees to evacuate their worksite and work from their homes (or alternative location mutually agreeable to the agency and employee) during a pandemic health crisis without regard to whether the agency and employee have a telework agreement in place when the order to evacuate is issued (Title 5, CFR § 550.409\(a\)). Under these circumstances, an agency may designate the employee’s home (or alternative location mutually agreeable to the agency and employee) as a safe haven and provide evacuation payments to the employee. An agency must compute the evacuation payments, and determine the time period during which such payments will be made (Title 5, CFR § 550.404). An evacuated employee at a safe haven may be assigned to perform any work considered necessary or required to be performed during the evacuation period without regard to the employee’s grade/band, level, or title. The employee must have the necessary knowledge and skills to perform the assigned work. Failure or refusal to perform assigned work can be a basis for terminating evacuation payments, and disciplinary action. An evacuation order can be issued for up to 180 days and reissued if the situation still warrants one.

HOTELING – A telework arrangement in which employees are not assigned permanent space in their designated traditional worksite but share offices and conference space as necessary when working at the traditional worksite. Such space is assigned by reservation, much like a hotel. Bureaus/OU's should consider using hoteling or other office sharing arrangement for employees who telework 4 days a week or more in a pay period.

MOBILE WORKERS – An employee who, by the nature of their duties, do not have a designated traditional physical worksite, and typically use their home as their duty station. Due to the nature of their work, they are not considered telework-ready employees.

Note: This is different from 'hoteling' arrangements, in which frequent teleworkers use shared space when they are working at their designated traditional worksite.

OFFICIAL DUTY STATION – The location of an employee's position of record where the employee regularly performs his or her duties. If the employee's work involves recurring travel or their work location varies on a recurring basis, the duty station is the location where the work activities of the employee's position of record are based, as determined by the approving official. An employee's official duty station determines the appropriate locality area for pay purposes for General Schedule or equivalent employees. It also impacts other expenses such as relocation and travel expenses under the Federal Travel Regulations (FTR).

OFFICIAL TIME – Authorized by Title 5, United States Code \(U.S.C.\) § 7131.

REGULAR/RECURRING TELEWORK – Telework that is performed on the same day(s) of the week on the employee's regularly scheduled tour of duty.

Telework occurs as part of an ongoing regular schedule such that the employee typically teleworks on the same day(s) and works at the traditional worksite on the other days during each biweekly pay period. Employees must receive supervisor/manager approval for the schedule (and any modifications to it), but do not need to obtain additional separate approval for each day they telework.

REMOTE WORKER – An alternative work arrangement by which an employee is scheduled to perform the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite (e.g., home, other alternative location) other than the employee's traditional worksite, either within or outside of the locality pay area of the traditional worksite and does NOT report to the traditional worksite on a regular/recurring basis each pay period. The duty station must be changed to the alternative worksite for pay purposes, relocation expenses, travel expenses, etc., and must be documented on the employee's SF-50 Notification of Personnel Action, even if the alternative worksite is within the same locality pay area as the traditional worksite., Note: Remote teleworking outside the United States in a foreign country requires approval from the Office of the Chief Information Officer, the Office of Security, the Office of Human Resources Management and the Department of State.

SITUATIONAL TELEWORK – Includes ad hoc telework as well as "unscheduled telework." It does NOT include regular/recurring telework.

TELEWORK – Also known as "telecommuting," it refers to a workplace flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite (e.g., home, other approved alternative location) other than the traditional worksite from which the employee would otherwise work (5 U.S.C. § 6501\(3\)), and reports to the traditional worksite on a regular/recurring basis of at least twice per biweekly pay period. The duty station of the employee remains the duty station of the traditional worksite.

TELEWORK-READY EMPLOYEE – An employee who has completed the Telework Fundamentals for Employees via the Commerce Learning Center; has a signed individual telework (either regular/recurring or ad hoc) agreement; and has the required necessities to work their planned period of telework. Telework-ready employees, similar to all employees, may also be required to perform duties outside of their usual or customary duties to ensure continuation of agency-essential missions or activities.

TRADITIONAL WORKSITE – The physical location where the employee would work absent a telework arrangement.

VIII. POLICY

The DOC recognizes that a well-managed, widely used telework program has the potential to lead to benefits such as: (1) improved marketability (as a more competitive and inclusive employer); (2) reduced commuting time (that can contribute to an improved quality of work/life balance); (3) cost savings (in areas such as recruitment and retention of employees); and (4) an improved Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP). The DOC supports and encourages telework as a major element in its efforts to reduce its facility space requirements, thereby reducing its energy consumption, greenhouse gas emissions, surface ozone, rent, and other operating costs.

The DOC telework policy allows for remote work, but emphasizes it is not an employee's right to remote work even if the duties/responsibilities of their position are conducive for this type of arrangement.

Close and ongoing communications between employees and management in all aspects of telework are essential for a successful work arrangement. The policy acknowledges that the employees and management are equally responsible for contributing to the success of the specific telework agreement.

The policy gives bureaus/OU's maximum flexibility to support telework on a day-to-day basis and in periods where the traditional worksite is unavailable or less available to part of the workforce.

A. General Policy

Participation in telework is open to all eligible employees without regard to race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy and gender identity), national origin, political affiliation, sexual orientation, marital status, disability, genetic information, age, membership in an employee organization, parental status, military service, or other non-merit factors.

It is DOC policy to allow eligible employees to work at alternative worksites (i.e., home, or other approved location) in lieu of their traditional worksite during an agreed upon regular/recurring time of their regular tour of duty, or on an ad hoc/situational basis, if the employee meets the Act's eligibility criteria, the duties are conducive for teleworking, and the employee has an approved telework agreement in place. Supervisors/managers are encouraged to support telework for eligible employees of at least 4 days per biweekly pay period.

Employees who telework must report to the traditional worksite on a regular/recurring basis of at least twice each biweekly pay period to maintain the duty station of the traditional physical worksite for pay purposes etc., even if their alternative worksite is within the locality pay area of the traditional worksite.

To carry out this policy to the maximum extent, the bureaus/OU's must establish a Telework Implementation Plan (Plan) consistent with this policy, and file that Plan with the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM). If a bureau/OU Plan is not filed, the bureau/OU will be considered as operating under the DOC policy.

An employee's decision to telework is voluntary unless telework is a condition of employment (i.e., the employee is designated as an "emergency employee"), or is required to perform an agency essential function or other required function(s) as part of a COOP team, or is issued an evacuation order. In these instances, an employee may be required to work at home or at another approved alternative worksite.

To carry out this policy to the maximum extent, the bureaus/OU's must establish a Telework Implementation Plan (Plan) consistent with this policy, and file that Plan with the Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM). If a bureau/OU Plan is not filed, the bureau/OU will be considered as operating under the DOC policy.

An employee's decision to telework is voluntary unless telework is a condition of employment (i.e., the employee is designated as an "emergency employee"), or is required to perform an agency essential function or other required function(s) as part of a COOP team, or is issued an evacuation order. In these instances, an employee may be required to work at home or at another approved alternative worksite.

V. POLICY

- A. An employee may not be authorized to telework if the performance of that employee does not comply with the terms of the written agreement between the agency manager and the employee.
- B. All eligible employees of EDA who meet the definition of "employee" as defined in 5 U.S.C. § 2105 are covered by the policy, in accordance with the Telework Enhancement Act (the Act). Eligible employees may work at alternate work sites in lieu of their traditional worksite during an agreed upon regular/recurring time of their regular workweek, or on an ad hoc basis; the duties of the position are conducive for teleworking; and the employee has an approved individual telework agreement in place.
- C. An employee's decision to telework is voluntary unless telework is a condition of employment (i.e., the employee is designated an "emergency employee") or is required to continue Government operations in times of emergency (like for COOP). In these instances, an employee may be required to work at home or at another approved alternate worksite.
- D. The approving official will determine the number of regular/recurring telework days that an employee can work per week. Normally, employees who telework will work the same hours they work in the regular office. Work schedules and hours of duty may be changed with the supervisor's approval and in accordance with established procedures. If the employee's telework schedule conflicts with organizational requirements, the needs of the organization will take precedence over a signed telework agreement.
- E. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers shall be treated the same for certain purposes:
1) periodic appraisals of job performance of employees; 2) training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees; 3) work requirements; and 4) other acts involving managerial discretion.
- F. EDA telework policy allows for remote work as defined above under "Definitions." Management has authority to make the determination if the position qualifies for remote work.
- G. EDA recognizes that some employees will decide not to telework at all, while others will choose to telework only on a limited ad hoc basis, and others will telework to the maximum extent possible.

To accommodate employees desiring to telework, EDA offers two types of telework.

1. Situational telework

- a. Includes employees not on a routine telework schedule.
- b. No prior supervisory approval required for unscheduled telework under an OPM or other appropriate authority announcement. However, the employee must notify his/her supervisor in accordance with the terms of the written agreement.
- c. Approval for situational telework. The employee must obtain supervisory approval before performing ad hoc telework.
- d. Sufficient work. The employee is responsible for ensuring he/she has sufficient work for the period of his/her teleworking
- e. Offices are closed. The employee must telework when his/her office is closed for reasons other than Federal law or Executive Order.
- f. Employee may switch to routine telework at any time with supervisory approval, and the individual agreement will reflect the change.

2. Routine (regular/recurring) telework

- a. Includes all employees on a routine (regular/recurring) telework schedule.
- c. Employee obtains approval before ad hoc telework. The employee must obtain supervisory approval before performing ad hoc telework.
- d. No prior supervisory approval required for unscheduled telework under an OPM or other appropriate authority announcement. However, employees must notify his/her supervisor in accordance with the terms of the written agreement.
- e. Sufficient work. The employee is responsible for ensuring that he/she has sufficient work for the period of telework scheduled to be performed.
- f. Offices are closed. The employee must telework when his/her office is closed for reasons other than Federal law or Executive Order.

I. Teleworking

1. Written agreements must indicate that telework-ready employees are required to telework from home or an alternate worksite when their office is closed for other than Federal law/Executive Order. Telework-ready employees must follow their written agreements.
2. Excused absences are permitted only if the employee is prevented from safely performing work at an approved location due to
 - (1) an act of God;
 - (2) a terrorist attack; or
 - (3) another condition that prevents the employee from performing work at an approved location such (a) the emergency adversely affects the telework site (e.g., disruption of electricity, or network connection problems that prevent telework); or (b) the telework-ready employee's duties are such that he/she cannot continue to work without contact with the regular worksite.
3. If the telework-ready employee faces a personal reason that prevents him/her from working successfully at the telework site, following a discussion with their supervisor, the employee may request the appropriate leave (annual, sick, compensatory, credit hours, compensatory time for travel). The employee may also request to change their alternative work schedule, if applicable. The bargaining unit employee may also report to the traditional worksite if it is open, to complete their regularly scheduled tour of duty, and request appropriate leave.
4. Systems are to be in place to support telework in an emergency, including a communication process to notify COOP personnel, emergency, and non-emergency employees of the activation of the agency's emergency plan, and the agency's operating status during the emergency.
5. Telework-ready employees scheduled to telework during their regular tour of duty on a day when their office is closed (or when other employees are dismissed early) are not entitled to receive overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time off in lieu of overtime payment for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours.
6. In an emergency requiring the closure of EDA facilities, telework-ready employees required to work when the office is closed must telework from an approved worksite. If the employee does not have access to portable work or an appropriate worksite is not available, the supervisor may excuse a telework-ready employee from duty without charge to paid personal leave or loss of pay during an emergency situation.
7. All time teleworked in a pay period will be recorded per instructions in the appropriate time and attendance system.
8. All employees designated as "emergency" or with COOP responsibility must have an approved individual telework agreement.

- J. Performance Standards. Performance standards for telework-ready employees must be the same as performance standards for non-telework-ready employees. Expectations for performance should be clearly addressed in each employee's performance plan, and the performance plan should be reviewed to ensure the standards do not create inequities or inconsistencies between telework-ready and non-telework-ready employees. Like non-telework-ready employees, telework-ready employees are held accountable for the results they produce. Resources for performance management are available from OPM at www.opm.gov/perform.

VI. ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA

Participation in telework is open to all eligible employees without regard to race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy and gender identity), national origin, political affiliation, sexual orientation, marital status, disability, genetic information, age, membership in an employee organization, retaliation, parental status, military service, or other non-merit factors.

- A. Employees Exceptions. Employees who occupy positions for which telework is conducive may telework under this policy as per the Act, unless they fall within the following exceptions:
 - a. The employee has been officially disciplined¹ for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year (5 U.S.C. § 6502(a)(2)(A)).
 - b. The employee has been officially disciplined² for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.³
 - c. The performance of the employee does not comply with the terms of the written agreement between the supervisor and that employee (5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3)).⁴
- B. Precluded Due to Nature of Work of Position. While an employee may be eligible because they are not excluded based on the above, they may be precluded from teleworking if the official duties of the position require on a daily basis (every workday) require:
 - a. Direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the agency head;
 - b. On-site activity that cannot be handled remotely or at an alternate worksite; or
 - c. Being a mobile worker (not eligible for telework due to the nature of their work).

VII. TELEWORKING AND CARE FOR ELDERS, CHILDREN, OR OTHER DEPENDENTS

If the elders, children, or other dependents residing with a teleworking employee can care for themselves for part of the workday, then their presence at the alternative worksite would not interfere with the employee performing their duties and responsibilities. Teleworking employees who are responsible for caring for dependents at their home or other alternative worksite should coordinate with their supervisors to establish flexible schedules, to request appropriate leave, or to otherwise account for time spent engaging in dependent care.

VIII. ACCOMODATIONS FOR EMPLOYEES WITH DISABILITIES

It is important to distinguish between ordinary requests to telework and requests from persons with disabilities for reasonable accommodation. Approving officials/supervisors should consult Department Administrative Order (DAO) 215-10, "Reasonable Accommodation Policy," and the Disability Program Manager as part of the interactive process established by the Rehabilitation Act, in order to fully understand supervisors' responsibilities under the law.

As governed by Section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 791 et seq., the Rehabilitation Act and DAO 215-10, the determination as to whether an employee may be granted telework as a reasonable accommodation due to a disability should be made through the Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator, the employee's first-line supervisor, and the employee.

¹ Definition of Officially Disciplined – A disciplinary action that results in the placement of a document in an employee's official personnel file (OPF); the bar on telework participation remains in effect as long as the document stays in an employee's OPF. A suspension or termination related to the items mentioned in Public Law 111-292 that results in a document (Standard Form 50) that permanently remains in the OPF would result in permanent prohibition in telework participation.

³ There are no exceptions for A1 or A2

⁴ The length of this prohibition is up to the approving official.

IX. ESTABLISHING THE WORK SCHEDULE

Work schedules identify the days and times an employee will work while teleworking. Normally, telework schedules parallel those at the traditional worksite; however, they can differ to meet the needs of the organization and participating employees' needs. Work schedules may also include fixed times during the day for supervisor/employee telephone conversations, which may be helpful to ensure ongoing communication. For additional information on hours of duty, please visit http://hr.commerce.gov/Practitioners/CompensationAndLeave/DEV01_006627.

X. PROGRAM OVERSIGHT AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Telework refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of his/her position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite (e.g., home) other than the employee's traditional worksite. This definition includes what is generally referred to as remote work but does not include any part of work done while on official travel or mobile work.

- A. The OHRM is responsible for oversight of the Department Telework Program and for any reporting requirements to OPM. OHRM will review and monitor the various plans to ensure consistency across the bureaus/operating units with implementing the program.
- B. EDA is responsible for the development, funding, administration (including providing a designated telework coordinator), operation, and the evaluation of its policy and telework implementation plan.
- C. Supervisors are responsible for the overall management and success of teleworking within their work units, including day-to-day operations. Supervisors are encouraged to endorse regular telework taking into account the needs of the organization when requested by eligible employees (for exceptions see V.D). Telework-ready employees and their approving officials are responsible for annually reviewing the written agreement to ensure that it is current. The date of the review must be documented.
- D. Telework Coordinator (TC) conducts oversight over the EDA telework program, provides bureau policy and procedural program guidance, and ensures that all employees have access to telework information. The TC will: 1) provide advice and assistance to EDA personnel tasked with policy and implementation plan development, including working with senior-level managers in establishing and obtaining bureau telework goals, objectives, and reporting requirements; 2) in partnership with the approving official, establish a procedure for notifying each employee of a change in his/her eligibility or ineligibility to telework, and coordinate a process for approving and tracking telework arrangements; 3) answer questions and provide guidance to employees and supervisors as well as an orientation for new teleworkers; 4) develop and implement a reporting system capturing telework participation, hours teleworked, terminations, and denials; 5) maintain a central file of all approved agreements for the bureau; and 6) investigate any allegations of impropriety in regard to teleworking employees and report findings to the EDA Assistant Secretary or the Department as appropriate.

EDA's TC is required to respond to requests from the DOC Telework Program Manager (TPM) for a variety of reporting requirements/initiatives. Below is information that may be requested, although it is not all-inclusive.

- The degree of participation by employees of the bureau/operating unit teleworking during the period covered by the report;
- The method for gathering telework data in the bureau/operating units;
- The reasons for positive or negative variations in telework participation if the total number of employees teleworking is 10 percent higher or lower than the previous year in the bureau/operating units;
- The bureau goal for increasing telework participation to the extent practicable or necessary;
- An explanation of whether or not the bureau met its goals for the last reporting period and, if not, what actions are being taken to identify and eliminate barriers;
- An assessment of the progress made in meeting bureau's participation rate goals and other goals related to telework, such as the impact of telework on emergency readiness, energy use, recruitment and retention, performance, productivity, and employee attitudes and opinions regarding telework; and
- Best practices in the bureau.

The TC for EDA is a position in the Office of Finance and Management Services designated by the Chief Financial Officer/Chief Administrative Officer.

XI. MANDATORY TELEWORK TRAINING

- A. All approving officials must successfully complete the required Telework Fundamentals for Employees for Managers course via the Commerce Learning Center \(CLC\) and print a certificate of training completion prior to approving a written agreement.
- B. All employees who desire to telework must successfully complete the required Telework Fundamentals for Employees course via the CLC before submission of their request to telework. Upon successful completion of the course, the employee must print a certificate of training completion and provide a copy to his/her approving official. Training is not required for renewal of a written agreement.
- C. All employees are also required to complete IT Security and Awareness Training on an annual basis.

XII. TELEWORK AGREEMENT PROCESS

The “Telework Assessment Tool” is a tool for use by the appropriate management official and the employee in helping to determine the appropriateness of the employee teleworking. The tool should be provided to employees prior to their submission of a request to telework. The employee and appropriate management official may choose to discuss results of the tool prior to the actual submission of a request by the employee. The initial discussion between the requesting employee and his/her supervisor should take place within 10 work days of receipt of the assessment tool.

If work is deemed to be portable and an arrangement is reached, the employee is required to complete the online telework training before submitting the agreement for approval and the employee begins to work from an alternate work location. A final decision by the supervisor must be made within 15 work days of receipt of the telework application packet (Appendix A, B, C and training completion certificate).

- A. The telework agreement will include the following mandatory requirements:
 - 1) Term of the agreement: The initial telework agreement will be situational unless entered into in conjunction with the annual review period. The annual review period will take place from November 1 to December 31 and result in a telework agreement that initiates with the first pay period of the upcoming calendar year.
 - 2) Type of telework and plan: The agreement will specify whether the agreement is for routine or situational telework. The agreement will indicate the employee selection of a Routine agreement any time during the term of agreement.
 - 3) Schedule: Situational and/or routine (i.e., recurring days) may be specified or flexible due to business necessity. Hours to be worked will be annotated and will comport with regular worksite reporting times.
 - 4) Requirements: The agreement will outline any requirements that support the arrangement (e.g., technology, software, data security).
 - 5) Expectations: The agreement must set forth the expectations agreed upon by management and the employee so the employee has prior knowledge of these expectations. Expectations may include, but are not limited to, external and internal customer service, workflow continuity, advancing work product, and attention to operational challenges, etc.

In rare circumstances, management may find it necessary to require a non-emergency, telework-ready employee to report for an assignment that requires presence at the worksite (e.g. providing a presentation or performing administrative duties at a prescheduled conference).

- 6) Compressed work schedule: Telework agreements will have no impact on an employee’s choice to participate in a compressed work week schedule. An employee’s absence from the office for a compressed work schedule day off may be considered by a supervisor in determining how many telework days are permitted and on which days of the week.

- 7) Expectations for emergency telework: Layout any special conditions or requirements that would be associated with the COOP and other emergency function or when weather emergencies require the closure of an EDA facility.
 - 8) Office suitability: Employee safety and protection from hazards continue to be a high priority, even in an alternative workplace. The employee must complete the self-certification safety checklist (Appendix C) for the proposed space and submit the checklist with the telework agreement application. If the employee's checklist indicates unsafe condition(s) exist at the telework site, the employee must take the necessary corrective actions and resubmit the checklist in order for telework to be approved. Similar to employee workspace on-site, an employee's alternate workspace is available for management's access.
 - 9) The written agreement must provide that an employee may not be authorized to telework if the performance of that employee does not comply with the terms of the written agreement between the approving official and the employee (5 U.S.C. § 6502(b)(3)).
 - 10) All written agreements must contain notification that when the appropriate authority announces, "Unscheduled Leave" or "Unscheduled Telework," due to office closure, telework-ready employees may elect either option by notifying their supervisor consistent with the employee's written agreement. Employees are to be reminded that if they elect to perform unexpected telework, they must have enough work to complete in their period of telework. If the employee does not have enough work, they may either take unscheduled leave for the entire workday or use unscheduled leave to account for hours not worked.
- B. Approved telework packet. A copy of the complete approved application packet (Appendix A, B, and C), including the training completion certificate, must be provided to: a) employee for their records; and b) TC for review, tracking and recordkeeping purposes.
- C. Modification and Termination
- 1) Telework is a workplace flexibility (unless it is actually designated as a condition of employment), not a legal right, and does not change the terms and conditions of employment. The operational needs of the bureau are paramount and employees who telework do not have an automatic right to continue to telework. In accordance with the Act, an employee may not be authorized to continue teleworking if the performance of that employee does not comply with the terms of the written agreement between the approving official and the employee.
 - 2) Management shall provide sufficient notice, when feasible, before modifying or terminating a written agreement to allow the affected employee to make necessary arrangements. The reason for termination must be documented, signed by the approving official, and provided to the affected employee. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect.
 - 3) The employee may request to modify the current agreement (e.g., change the regular teleworking day) by submitting a new "Telework Application/Agreement and Modification of Telework Agreement" (check "Modification") with only the requested change indicated. Approval/Disapproval decisions will be provided within 15 work days.
 - 4) An employee on routine telework may request a switch to situational telework (or vice versa) at any time.

XIII. TERMINATION OF AGREEMENTS AND APPEALS PROCESS

- A. Telework requests and agreements may be terminated or denied by management as long as the denial or termination decision is based on operational needs, conduct, or performance in accordance with the law, not personal reasons.
- B. The approving official must deny or immediately terminate the agreement, as applicable, if the employee fails to be eligible to telework due to 5 U.S.C. §§ 6502 \(a\)\(2\) or 6502\(b\)\(3\).
- C. Approving officials must provide written justification to the affected employee to include information about when or if the employee would be eligible to reapply, and if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve his/her chance of future approval. Supervisors are to provide employees, and maintain copies of, signed written denials or terminations of telework agreements. In addition, a copy must be provided to the central file, maintained by the Telework Coordinator.

- D. An employee may terminate his/her written agreement by written notice to the approving official. A copy of the written notice must be added to the central file.
- E. Telework-ready employees wanting to appeal a supervisor's decision, must use the administrative grievance procedure in the Collective Bargaining Agreement, Article 7 "Grievance Procedure," to appeal issues relating to their request to telework, modification to an existing telework agreement, and termination of a telework agreement.
- F. Employees who believe they are the victims of prohibited discrimination should contact the Equal Employment Office office within 45 days of the allegedly discriminatory action.

XIV. THE OFFICIAL DUTY STATION

- A. The location of an employee's position of record where the employee regularly performs his or her duties, or if the employee's work involves recurring travel or their work location varies on a recurring basis, the duty station is the location where the work activities of the employee's position of record are based, as determined by their approving official. An employee's official duty station determines the appropriate locality area for pay purposes (5 CFR 531.605).
- B. The official duty station must be documented on the employee's Notification of Personnel Action (SF-50) or equivalent.
- C. For employees temporarily detailed to a position in a different location without a change in the position of record, the official duty station and associated pay entitlements are not affected. For additional information on official duty stations, please see http://www.opm.gov/oca/pay/html/Official_Duty_Station.asp.

XV. DETERMINING THE OFFICIAL DUTY STATION

- A. Pay During Telework Agreements
 - 1) When traditional worksite and telework site are within the same locality pay area, the official duty station is the location of the traditional worksite.
 - 2) When traditional worksite and the telework site are NOT within the same locality pay area:
 - a. The official duty station is the location of the traditional worksite as long as the employee physically reports to the traditional work site at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis.
 - b. The official duty station is the telework location (i.e., home or other alternate worksite) if the employee does NOT report at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to the traditional worksite.
 - 3) If a telework employee with a varying work location works at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis in the same locality pay area in which the traditional worksite is located, the employee does not have to report twice each pay period to the official worksite to maintain the locality payment for that area.

Note: Senior Executive Service (SES) employees do not receive locality pay. Therefore, there are no pay implications if the SES employee works the entire 80 hours of the pay period in a different pay locality area than his/her official duty station. That employee would continue to receive the same pay.

- B. Pay During Temporary Telework Arrangements
 - 1) The intent of this exception is to address certain situations where the employee is retaining a residence in the commuting area for the traditional worksite but is temporarily unable to report to the worksite for reasons beyond the employee's control (e.g., on a special assignment or working while recuperating from an operation).

- 2) One key consideration is the need to preserve equity between telework-ready and non-telework-ready employees. Also, the temporary exception should generally be used only in cases where: (1) the employee is expected to stop teleworking and return to work at the traditional worksite in the near future, or (2) the employee is expected to continue teleworking but will be able to report in the near future to the traditional worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis.

XVI. PAY AND LEAVE

- A. An employee's locality rate of pay is based on the employee's official duty station, and is determined in accordance with 5 CFR 531.604(b). The bureau/operating unit must determine and designate the official duty station for an employee covered by a telework agreement using the criteria above.
- B. The same premium pay rules apply to employees when they telework as when they are working at the traditional worksite.
- C. Telework-ready employees are governed by the same procedures as non-telework-ready employees for requesting and obtaining leave approval. See the Department's website at Leave Policies. For additional information on leave administration, please visit <http://www.opm.gov/oca/leave/index.asp>.

For additional information on pay administration, premium pay, and work scheduling, please visit <https://www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/pay-leave/pay-administration/fact-sheets/premium-pay-title-5/>.

XVII. IT SECURITY REQUIREMENTS FOR TELEWORK-READY EMPLOYEES

Telework-ready employees must abide by the IT security requirements conveyed in the Commerce Information Technology Security Program Policy, Commerce Information Technology Requirements, Frequently Asked Questions, and IT Security Policy memos. The Telework Agreement signed by the telework-ready employee and their supervisor may describe additional security requirements. DOC IT security documentation can be found at: http://home.commerce.gov/CIO/ITSITnew/IT_Security_Program_Documentation.html

Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to comply with all existing IT security requirements and to ensure employees are accountable. Antivirus software must be loaded and maintained on the alternate worksite computer.

XVIII. GOVERNMENT FURNISHED EQUIPMENT (GFE)

Under the DOC policy, EDA is allowed but not required to furnish equipment in support of telework, including computers and other electronic tools (e.g., virtual private network (VPN)). EDA will review requests for supporting equipment on a case-by-case basis. The bureau will not provide phone lines, internet access or monthly payments on behalf of employees.

EDA supports a more mobile workforce by using laptop computers supported by docking stations. The laptops may be transported from the worksite to an alternate location with relative ease. EDA will provide desktop support through the Office of the Secretary, IT Service Desk to teleworking employees in regards to connections into the centralized system via remote access tools.

Teleworkers who need access to EDA's centralized IT business systems must be able to access systems remotely.

EDA may deny requests for special equipment or fob-based encryption devices that enable authentication if insufficient workload of a sensitive nature does not justify the cost. However, EDA encourages supervisors to work with staff to identify alternative access options or structure assignments for the telework days that do not require access to the centralized computer system.

XIX. PROTECTING THE SECURITY AND CONFIDENTIALITY OF RECORDS

All telework-ready employees must ensure that records subject to the Privacy Act of 1974, or which have sensitive Personally Identifiable Information (PII) or Business Identifiable Information (BII), are not disclosed to anyone except those who have been authorized access to such information to perform their duties. Bureaus/OUs must ensure that appropriate physical, administrative, and technical safeguards are used to protect the security and confidentiality of such records.

A. Disclosure of Records from an Agency System of Records

1. Telework-ready employees are responsible for ensuring that their disclosure of a record (information) from any agency system of record complies with the Privacy Act of 1974.
2. The Privacy Act of 1974 defines a ‘system of records’ as a group of any records under the control of any agency from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or by some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particular assigned to the individual. Department of Commerce system of record notices (SORNs) are posted at <http://www.gpo.gov/fdsys/browse/collection.action?collectionCode=PAI&browsePath=2005&isCollapsed=false&leafLevelBrowse=false&ycord=0>.
3. The Privacy Act of 1974 prohibits the disclosure of a record (information) from an agency system of record that is not identified as a routine use in that system’s SORN, does not comply with an exemption identified in the SORN, or does not comply with 1 of the 12 exceptions to the non-disclosure-(to third parties)-without-consent rule.
4. A Privacy Act incident occurs when an officer or employee of the agency, who by virtue of their employment or official position, has possession of or access to agency records that contain individually identifiable information, the disclosure of which is prohibited by 5 U.S.C. § 552a (or regulations established thereunder), and discloses the material in any manner to any person or agency not entitled to receive it. Knowing misuse or release of information protected by the Privacy Act of 1974 can subject an employee to fines and/or criminal sanctions.
5. Telework-ready employees must immediately report a suspected or confirmed Privacy Act incident to their bureau/OU privacy officer or the Computer Incident Response Team (CIRT) and immediate supervisor.

B. Proper Handling of PII and BII

1. Telework-ready employees are responsible for the safeguarding of PII and BII.
2. PII is information that can be used to distinguish or trace an individual’s identity, such as name, social security number, biometric records, etc., alone, or when combined with other personal or identifying information, which is linked or linkable to a specific individual, such as date and place of birth, mother’s maiden name, etc. Sensitive PII, if lost, compromised, or disclosed without authorization, could result in substantial harm, embarrassment, inconvenience, or unfairness to an individual.
3. Types of PII considered sensitive when associated with an individual are: social security number (including truncated form), place of birth, date of birth, mother’s maiden name, biometric information, medical information (except brief references to absences from work), personal financial information, credit card or purchase card account numbers, passport numbers, potentially sensitive employment information (e.g., personnel ratings, disciplinary actions, and results of background investigations), criminal history, and any information that may stigmatize or adversely affect an individual. The DOC’s IT Privacy Policy provides that breaches of sensitive PII are subject to notification/reporting requirements.

4. When deciding whether PII is sensitive or non-sensitive, it is important to consider the type of information, obligations, or expectations regarding the protection of information, risk (probability and consequences) of loss or compromise of information, and context of information. Context is particularly important. The same types of information can be sensitive or non-sensitive depending upon the context. For example, a list of names and phone numbers for the Department softball roster is very different from a list of names and phone numbers for individuals being treated for an infectious disease. It is important to use good judgment when deciding whether PII is sensitive or non-sensitive. When in doubt, treat PII as sensitive.
5. The Department's policy states that if sensitive PII must be electronically transmitted, it must be protected by secure methodologies such as encryption, Public Key Infrastructure, or secure socket layers. Federal Information Processing Standards (FIPS) Publication 140-2, "Security Requirements for Cryptographic Modules" provides the standard to which encryption methodologies must conform. The transmission of sensitive PII, even if protected by secure means, must be kept to a minimum. Check with your bureau/OU's Office of the Chief Information Officer to determine methods or services they are using to support the electronic transmission of sensitive PII.
6. In addition to sensitive PII, telework-ready employees must ensure the safeguarding of BII. BII is information that is defined in the Freedom of Information Act as "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person [that is] privileged or confidential." "Commercial" is not confined to records that reveal "basic commercial operations" but includes any records (information) in which the submitter has a "commercial interest" and can include information submitted by a non-profit entity. Terms for BII that must be protected from disclosure include "confidential business information," "confidential commercial information," and "proprietary information."
7. Sensitive PII and BII can be stored on Government systems only, and saved, stored, or hosted only on DOC-authorized equipment (including contractor-owned equipment or a system that is approved to be used as a Government system). Computers that are personally-owned may not be used to save, store, or host sensitive PII and BII that is collected or maintained by the Department.
8. Sensitive PII and BII must be sent encrypted as an email attachment and encrypted on mobile computers, media (e.g., CDs, DVDs, USB drives), and devices (e.g., laptops, hard drives). When faxing sensitive PII and BII, an advisory statement about the contents must be included on the cover sheet, and the recipient must be notified immediately before and after transmission. Exception: According to the Commerce Acquisition Manual (CAM) 1313.301, cardholders shall not transmit credit card information over a facsimile machine. When mailing sensitive PII and BII, it must be physically secured when in transit. Do not mail or send by courier sensitive PII and BII on CDs, DVDs, hard drives, flash drives, USB drives, floppy disks, or other removable media unless the data is encrypted. Sensitive PII and BII must be sealed in an opaque envelop or container and mailed using First Class or Priority Mail, or a commercial delivery service (e.g., Federal Express or DHL). Appropriate methods must be used to destroy sensitive paper PII and BII (e.g., shredding, using a burn bag) and securely delete sensitive electronic PII and BII (e.g., empty the Windows recycle bin).
9. Telework-ready employees and supervisors are responsible for complying with all bureau/OU guidelines on reporting PII and BII incidents. The OMB Memorandum M-07-16 defines a PII incident as the loss of control, compromise, unauthorized disclosure, unauthorized acquisition, unauthorized access, or any similar term referring to situations where persons other than authorized users, and for other than authorized purpose(s), have access or potential access to PII, whether physical or electronic. Telework-ready employees must immediately report a suspected or confirmed PII and BII incident to their bureau/OU privacy officer or CIRT and immediate supervisor.

XX. PRIVACY ACT, SENSITIVE, AND HIGHLY SENSITIVE INFORMATION REQUIREMENTS FOR TELEWORK-READY EMPLOYEES

- A. Decisions on the proper use and handling of Sensitive Information will be made by the approving official who permits the employee to work at home or at an alternate worksite. A telework agreement will be signed by the telework-ready employee and his/her approving official that contains the specific data types allowed to be accessed. Information is generally categorized into the following groups: Non-Sensitive Information; Sensitive Information; and Classified National Security Information.
- B. The physical security standards for PII and other Sensitive and Administratively Controlled Information must be addressed prior to allowing telework. Chapter 35 of the OSY Security Manual provides minimum physical security standards for the office environment that are also applicable during telework. At a minimum, Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI), including PII, should be afforded protection to prevent unauthorized access to the information.
- C. Controlled Unclassified Information (CIU) Registry. The National Archives and Records Administration's (NARA) CUI Office developed the CUI Registry that allows anyone to access the Safeguarding and Dissemination requirements for CUI that must be afforded to information like PII (Privacy) and other unclassified information. The registry may not be all inclusive, as only those categories of unclassified information that have a law, regulation, or government-wide policy governing dissemination and/or safeguarding are provided. Therefore, any Sensitive and Administratively Controlled Information in hard-copy form that does not fall within the parameters of the manual or the registry should be brought to the attention of the Information and Personnel Security Division of OSY.

Teleworkers and Supervisors should visit <http://www.archives.gov/cui/registry/category-list.html> prior to allowing hard copy PII and other administratively controlled information outside the workplace for telework purposes.

Controlled Unclassified Information, Title 13, Title 26, and Title 35, U.S.C. Information, which are legally protected, are covered under the Sensitive Information category.

- D. Highly Sensitive Information. This information is subject to the most stringent security and access control rules, such as courier authorization, hand-to-hand transmission, or agency-specific rules not included in the Department telework policy/handbook. Classified information that requires Secret or Top Secret security clearances for protecting national security information is included in this category. Classified information (Confidential, Secret, or Top Secret) may only be transmitted or removed from official worksites by classified networks or authorized official couriers. This type of information may not be used or accessed in any manner by teleworkers.

XXI. TELEWORK INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY SECURITY POLICY

The Department's Chief Information Officer (CIO) is responsible for issuing and maintaining information technology (IT) and eGov policies and minimum implementation standards, including remote access and safeguarding sensitive information. These policies and minimum implementation standards outline responsibilities of bureau/operating unit CIOs as well as teleworkers to enable an effective working environment for the teleworker and the protection of Department systems from undue risk. The Department's policy on remote access is accessible via intranet at http://home.commerce.gov/CIO/ITSITnew/IT_Security_Program_Documentation.html.

Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to comply with all existing security policies and procedures, including IT security. Telework-ready employees also agree that their responsibilities, described in Section 3.3.9 of the Department's "IT Security Policy and Minimum Implementation Standards," remain in effect while on telework status. Other pertinent bureau or operating unit policies on IT security may also exist; supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to follow all applicable IT policies.

The workplace and workstation must be set up to accomplish secure information processing, including the proper storage of Sensitive Information in both electronic and paper form. The telework-ready employee, following IT policies, must minimize security vulnerabilities to the workstation and the Departmental network.

XXII. EMERGENCY EMPLOYEES AND COOP TEAM MEMBERS

Employees designated as an “emergency” employee and those designated as a COOP ERG or other COOP team member may be required to report to the traditional worksite, an alternative work site, or telework from home, based on the nature of the emergency.

These employees may be required to telework during emergency closures or other emergencies, including pandemics and for COOP exercises, on any day, even if that day is not a regular telework day or a day with specific approval for situational/episodic telework. COOP team members may also be required to perform duties outside of their usual or customary duties to ensure continuation of agency-essential missions or activities.

If an employee is designated as an “emergency” employee, or COOP ERG, or other member, the supervisor, along with the employee, should make advance and/or situational decisions as to whether the employee must physically report for duty at the traditional worksite, or may work from home or another approved alternative worksite.

For example, if the purpose of the employee reporting for duty at the traditional worksite is to provide policy guidance or to notify specific individuals of emergency requirements, this could be accomplished from home, provided the employee has access to the resources necessary to perform the required services. However, in some cases, the only way to obtain the services of the employee may be through telework from an alternative worksite.

For example, if inclement weather or other emergency situation results in a transportation shutdown, but phone lines remain working, the employee may be able to work from home rather than reporting to the traditional worksite or alternative site (i.e., the COOP site).

During any period that the DOC is operating under a designated COOP event, including an exercise, the COOP plan shall supersede any telework policy (Public Law 111-292 Section 6504(d)(2)).

XXIII. RECORDS MANAGEMENT

Records maintained by employees who telework are subject to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), the Privacy Act, and EDA records retention requirements. Supervisors of teleworking employees are responsible for ensuring that the files and records used by those employees are subject to search for documents responsive to FOIA and Privacy Act requests. Teleworkers must maintain official records and files at alternate worksites in the same manner they do when working at their conventional worksites. Once projects/assignments are completed, associated files should be returned to the conventional worksite, if applicable.

Chapter 71, the Union or the Agency may initiate mid-term bargaining by proposing changes in conditions of employment provided that such changes are not covered by this or any other CBA between the parties and provided further that such changes do not relate to matters over which either party has expressly waived its right to bargain during the negotiation of this Agreement.
- C. This article establishes ground rules for mid-term bargaining between the parties. The provisions of this article apply to all mid-term negotiations between the parties unless modified by other articles in this Agreement or agreed to by both parties.

Section 9.02

- A. The Agency shall provide the Union with reasonable advance notice, but normally not less than fifteen (15) calendar days of the proposed changes in conditions of employment. Written notice of the intended changes by the Agency will be served on the Chapter President or his/her designee. The notice shall include:

Section 9.03

- A. For briefings requested consistent with this article, official time will be approved for up to three (3) Union representatives designated by NFFE unless additional representatives are authorized by the Agency. Union representatives located outside the commuting area of the briefing location may participate telephonically or through some other electronic means.
- B. Management has determined it will have up to four (4) representatives on its bargaining team. The Union bargaining team will include up to four (4) representatives. Management retains the right to determine to increase the number of representatives on its bargaining team. In such event, the Union may also add an equal number of representatives to its bargaining team. In accordance with 5 U.S.C. § 7114(b)(3), negotiation sessions will be scheduled at reasonable times and convenient places.
- C. All agreements are tentative until full agreement is reached.
- D. Mid-term agreements reached will be reduced to writing and executed by both parties.

- H. If one of the parties invokes impasse procedures, the Agency shall postpone the implementation of any changes until the impasse is resolved, except as provided by law, prior to a decision by the Federal Service Impasses Panel (FSIP).

ARTICLE 10: GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE

Section 10.01

- A. The Agency and the Union recognize and endorse the importance of bringing to light and addressing employee concerns through the negotiated grievance procedure promptly and, whenever possible, informally.
- B. A grievance may be initiated by an employee, a group of employees, the Union or the Agency.
- C. The filing of a grievance shall not be construed as reflecting unfavorably on an employee's good standing, performance, loyalty, or desirability to the organization.

Section 10.02

The term "grievance" is defined as a dispute, difference, disagreement or complaint between the parties related to wages, hours and conditions of employment, A grievance should include, but is not limited to, the complaint of an employee or of the Union which involves the interpretation, application of, or compliance with the provisions of this agreement or any local Memorandum of Understanding not in conflict with this Agreement.

- A. This procedure will be the only procedure available to bargaining unit employees for the processing and disposition of grievances as defined in Section 10.02(A) above, except when the employee has a statutory right of choice, that is, adverse actions, actions taken for unacceptable performance, or Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) complaints, OIG Complaints, complaints filed under DAO 202-955, Harassment Complaints, and Whistleblower Complaints.
- B. The grievance procedures of this article shall not apply to the following;

 - 2. Retirement, life insurance, or health insurance;
 - 3. A suspension or removal under Section 752 of Title 5 (relating to national security matters);
 - 4. Any examination, certification or appointment;

Section 10.03

- A. Grievances under this article may be initiated by employees in the unit either singly or jointly, or by the Union on behalf of employees.
- B. Where an employee has initiated a grievance and does not elect to be represented by the Union, the Union will have a right to be present at all discussions between the employee and the Agency concerning the grievance and the union will be notified ahead of the meeting as early as possible. The resolution of grievances must be consistent with the terms and conditions of this Agreement. The Union will be provided with a copy of the Agency's response.

Section 10.04

Grievances will not be considered unless they are filed with the Agency within fifteen (15) business days of the incident which gives rise to the grievance or within fifteen (15) business days after the aggrieved became aware of the matters out of which the grievance arose, whichever occurred later. Timelines may be extended by mutual consent of both parties.

Section 10.05

The parties are encouraged to seek informal resolution of grievances.

- A. Step 1

A grievance is required to be presented in writing to the employee's immediate supervisor with a simultaneous electronic copy to the Chief Administrative Officer and Labor Relations Specialist assigned to MBDA. If the grievance pertains to discipline, the deciding official will not be the proposing official. In this case, the grievance will be presented to the next level supervisor in the chain of command and will follow the chain of command through the grievance process

- 1. The grievance will specify the following:

- a. The nature of the grievance;
 - b. Whether the grievance involves an individual or group of employees;
 - c. To the extent possible, the articles of the Agreement alleged to be violated;
 - d. To the extent possible, any statute, regulation or Agency policy alleged to be violated, if applicable;
 - e. The approximate date and nature of the action or incident and the individuals involved, if available;
 - f. The name of the Union representative(s);
 - g. The remedy sought.
2. If requested by either party, the meeting shall take place within fifteen (15) calendar days of the submission of the grievance. Grievance meetings will be scheduled at a time agreeable to all parties. The meeting shall include the proposing official, the Labor Relations Specialist assigned to MBDA, the employee, and the employee's Union representative. Such meeting shall be held face-to-face unless the parties agree otherwise.

The grievant and the Union will be provided with a written response to the grievance within fifteen (15) business days of the close of the Step 1 meeting. The response must indicate the right to submit the grievance to Step 2 below. If the agency does not respond within the time frame, then the union may advance the grievance to Step 2. Timelines may be extended by mutual consent of both parties.

3. At any step of the grievance process, Management and Union Representatives shall have the authority to settle the grievance.
4. The Union may elect to withdrawal the grievance in whole or in part at any point in the grievance process.

B. Step 2

1. If an employee is dissatisfied with the decision rendered at Step 1, they may appeal the grievance to the next level supervisor in the chain of command with a simultaneous electronic copy to the Labor Relations Specialist assigned to MBDA. Such appeal must be filed in writing within fifteen (15) business days of receipt of the Step 1 decision.
2. If requested, within fifteen (15) business days of the filing, the parties shall hold a Step 2 meeting. The meeting shall include the next level management official in the chain of command, the employee, the Labor Relations Specialist assigned to MBDA, the employee's Union representative. Such meeting shall be held face-to-face unless the parties agree otherwise.

3. Within fifteen (15) business days of the Step 2 meeting, a next level management official shall issue a final decision.
4. If the Union is dissatisfied with the final decision, the Union may invoke arbitration within thirty (30) calendar days in accordance with Article 11: Arbitration.
5. The parties may agree to have additional representatives attend any step of the grievance procedure.
6. New issues may not be raised at the Step 2 level by either party unless they have been raised in the original Step 1 grievance procedure.

Section 10.06

- A. The parties shall have the obligation of maintaining a complete record during the steps of the grievance process, including the obligation to produce all witnesses who have information relevant to the matter at issue. The Union's request for the participation of a witness, who is an employee of MBDA, will normally be approved, absent a severe workload interruption.
- B. The parties agree to exchange information that is relevant and necessary to understand the dispute and maximize the potential of settling the matter.
- C. Failure to cite a specific Agreement provision, regulation, or statute shall not bar an employee or the Union from amending the grievance to include such violations provided the issue has been raised in the grievance at Step 1.

Section 10.07

- A. Grievances are considered group grievances if two (2) or more grieving employees have designated the Union to serve as their representative on one (1) or more grievances involving the same facts and the same issues, or the Union has filed one (1) or more grievances on behalf of two (2) or more employees involving the same facts and the same issues.
- B. Group grievances will be processed in accordance with the grievance procedure outlined above, except that such grievances, at the Union's option, may be initiated at Step 2 in Section 10.05(B) above. The Union will submit the grievance to the Senior Career Executive (SES) and the Labor Relations Specialist assigned to MBDA.

Section 10.08

- A. If the Agency is aggrieved, its representative shall file a grievance with the NFFE FL 2 President, as appropriate, within thirty (30) calendar days of the act or awareness of the act causing the grievance, whichever occurred later. At the request of the Agency, representatives of the parties shall meet within fifteen (15) calendar days from the date of submission of the grievance. Within fifteen (15) calendar days of said meeting, the Union official shall render a decision, in writing, to the Senior Career Executive (SES) and the Labor Relations Specialist assigned to MBDA. If such decision fails to resolve the matter, the Agency may invoke arbitration in accordance with the procedures set forth in Article 11: Arbitration.

ARTICLE 11: ARBITRATION

Section 11.01

- A. Matters not settled in the grievance procedure for which arbitration is invoked will be arbitrated pursuant to the terms of this article.
- B. There are two (2) types of arbitration procedures available:
 - 1. Conventional Arbitration: Shall be used unless a matter is covered by expedited arbitration.
 - 2. Expedited Arbitration: Expedited arbitration may be used to resolve specified disputes in accordance with Section 11.04 below.

Section 11.02

- A. The party invoking arbitration will make a written request to the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service (FMCS), with a copy to the other party, seeking a list of seven (7) randomly selected arbitrators having federal sector experience to the extent available, and are also available to conduct the arbitration at the location designated by the parties, within the period of time mutually agreed upon by the parties.
- B. The parties will meet within fourteen (14) calendar days after receipt of the list to select an arbitrator. If the parties cannot agree upon an arbitrator from the list, they will alternately strike names from the list. A coin flip will determine which party will strike first. When a single name remains on the list, that person will serve as the arbitrator.
- C. Within fourteen (14) calendar days after selection of an arbitrator, the parties shall jointly contact the arbitrator for the purpose of scheduling mutually agreeable dates for a hearing. If, within fourteen (14) calendar days of the date the arbitrator is first contacted, the parties do not mutually agree on the date(s) for a hearing on the merits, the arbitrator shall, upon request by either party, set a hearing date.

Section 11.03

- A. The following procedures apply to all arbitrations.
 - 1. The cost of arbitration will be shared equally by the Agency and the Union to include all regular fees, including travel expenses of the arbitrator hearing the case.
 - 2. Arbitration hearings will be held on the Agency's headquarters facility, normally at the appellant's duty station, and at the Union's offices on a rotating basis, absent mutual agreement otherwise by the Parties of a different location.

3. The grievant, the grievant representative, and all employees who are called as witnesses will be excused from duty to the extent necessary to participate in the arbitration proceedings without loss of pay or charge to annual leave.
4. The arbitrator shall have the sole discretion to determine who may testify.
5. Unless mutually agreed upon by the parties, the arbitrator will not have the authority to keep the record open to hear testimony of additional witnesses. Each party has the responsibility and obligation to produce its witnesses on the day of the hearing.
6. The arbitrator shall have the authority to make all arbitrability and/or grievance determinations. The arbitrator shall make grievance and/or arbitrability determinations prior to addressing the merits of the original grievance. Such determinations shall be made within the hearing and shall not be bifurcated.
7. The arbitrator's decision shall be final, binding and, precedential. For the purposes of this Agreement, "precedential" means an interpretation of this Agreement that is binding on the bargaining unit to the extent not contrary to law and the interpretation may be given due weight by an arbitrator hearing subsequent related matters.
8. The arbitrator shall possess the authority to make an aggrieved employee whole to the extent such remedy is not limited by law or applicable regulation, including the authority to award back pay and interest in accordance with 5 C.F.R. § 550.801(a), reinstatement, retroactive promotion where appropriate, to issue an order to expunge the record of all references to a disciplinary, adverse, or unacceptable performance action, if appropriate and attorney's fees in accordance with the Back Pay Act.
9. Once an arbitration date has been established, a party requesting that an arbitration hearing be postponed, delayed, and/ or canceled for any reason (which results in any fees being charged by the arbitrator and/or court reporter) shall pay any resulting fees.
10. In any grievance where the parties mutually agree to postpone, delay, and/or cancel an arbitration proceeding, they will equally share the cost of any fees being charged by the arbitrator and/or court reporter. The fact that one party has no objection to the request of the other party for postponement, delay, or cancellation of the arbitration hearing will not absolve the requesting party from the paying of all the resulting fees being charged.
11. The strict rules of evidence are not applicable, and the hearing shall be informal.
12. The parties have the right to present and cross examine witnesses and issue opening and closing statements.
13. The arbitrator may exclude testimony or evidence which is determined to be irrelevant or unduly repetitious.
14. Testimony shall be under oath or affirmation.

15. The arbitrator may ask questions of or request information from either party to complete the record at hearing. The arbitrator may also draw an appropriate inference when either party fails to present facts or witnesses that the arbitrator deems necessary and relevant.
 16. The Agency will make employees available as witnesses when requested by the Union. If the Agency determines that it is not administratively practicable to comply with the Union's request, and the arbitrator determines the employee's testimony is relevant, then the hearing may be postponed.
 17. Bargaining history may not be used in an arbitration hearing unless the party proposing to use it has notified the other in writing at least seven (7) calendar days prior to the hearing of its intent to use it.
 18. The parties will request that the Arbitrator render a decision within thirty (30) calendar days of submission of post-hearing briefs or within thirty (30) calendar days of the arbitration if no briefs are submitted.
- B. The following procedure applies to conventional arbitration only. A verbatim transcript of the arbitration proceeding will be made by an authorized court reporter unless the parties mutually agree not to have a transcript made. The arbitrator and each party will be provided with a copy. The cost of the transcript shall be equally borne by the parties.

Section 11.04

- A. A grievance concerning the following matters may be submitted for expedited arbitration:
1. Dues withholding;
 2. Denials of official time;
 3. Improper maintenance of personnel records;
 4. Denials of a work schedule or telework request;
 5. Bulletin board postings or literature distribution by the Union;
 6. Denials of an outside employment request; or
 7. Any other matters which the parties involved in the dispute mutually agree upon.
- B. The party invoking expedited arbitration must make a written request to other party within fifteen (15) calendar days of receipt of the final decision in the grievance procedure (Article 10: Grievance Procedure). If no final decision has been issued, the request will be made within fifteen (15) calendar days from the date such decision should have been issued. The arbitrator will be selected in the same manner as provided for in Section 11.02 above. An arbitrator unable to hear an expedited arbitration case within thirty (30) calendar days will be deemed unavailable and the parties will select another arbitrator.

- C. The hearing will be conducted as soon as possible and will be informal in nature. The parties may arrange for a pre-hearing conference with or without the arbitrator to consider means of expediting the hearing. The arbitrator will issue a decision as soon as possible, but no later than twenty (20) calendar days after the official closing of the hearing, unless otherwise agreed by the parties.
- D. The following procedures apply to expedited arbitration only:
 - 1. No briefs may be filed. A transcript is not required. However, if either party requests a transcript, it will be made and the requesting party will pay the cost. Such transcripts shall not be provided to the arbitrator unless otherwise requested.
 - 2. The arbitrator will issue a bench decision, if possible. If not, he/she will issue a brief written decision within fourteen (14) calendar days of the close of the hearing.

Section 11.05

- A. The arbitrator shall hold the hearing notwithstanding that one (1) party refuses to attend the arbitration. The first issue to be addressed shall be the question of whether the case is properly before the arbitrator. If the case is proper, the grievance will be heard on the merits. The party going forward will notify the other party of its intent, listing the date and the location of the hearing.
- B. Any written decision by the arbitrator will be provided to the designated representatives of the parties in both paper and electronic forms.

Section 11.06

In accordance with the Back Pay Act, reasonable attorney fees will be provided to employees (the Union) who suffer unwarranted and unjust personnel actions if the employee (the Union) is the prevailing party and the arbitrator determines that payment of attorney fees is warranted in the interest of justice, including any case in which a prohibited personnel practice was engaged in by the Agency or any case in which the Agency's action was clearly without merit, and is otherwise consistent with applicable law.

Section 11.07

The jurisdiction, authority, and expressed opinions of the chosen arbitrator will be confined exclusively to the interpretation of the expressed provision or provisions of this Agreement at issue between the parties. The arbitrator will have no authority to add to, subtract from, alter, amend, or modify any provision of this Agreement, or impose on either the Agency or the Union any limitation or obligation not specifically provided for under the terms of this Agreement. The parties reserve the right to take exceptions to any award to the FLRA.

Section 11.08

The grievant, or his/her representative, may request that the Agency provide such written information as is relevant to the subject matter of the grievance and necessary to its resolution consistent with 5

U.S.C. § 7114(b)(4). If the Agency refuses to provide all necessary and relevant information, that issue may be joined with the grievance and processed to arbitration. At arbitration, the arbitrator shall review the information denied to the Union “in camera” and decide whether or not it is to be provided to the Union consistent with applicable law.

ARTICLE 12: DISCIPLINARY ACTIONS

Section 12.01

- A. For the purpose of this article, a disciplinary action is defined as a letter of reprimand or a suspension of fourteen (14) days or less.
- B. Disciplinary actions will be taken only for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the Service. Such actions must be consistent with applicable laws and government-wide regulations.
- C. If a disciplinary action is rescinded, all documentation relative to the action will be removed from the Electronic Official Personnel Folder (eOPF) with confirmation of said action sent to the employee.

Section 12.02

- A. Progressive discipline, fairness, equity, and the principle of similar penalties for similar offenses guide Agency discipline determinations as warranted by the circumstances of each case.
- B. Prior to deciding what disciplinary action is a proper response to the incident or act, the Agency will consider the factors outlined in Appendix D: Douglas v. Veterans Administration (5 MSPB 280 (1981)), if relevant.
- C. In deciding what action may be appropriate, the Agency will give due consideration to the relevance of any mitigating circumstances and any information provided by the employee in the course of the inquiry leading to the action.

Section 12.03

Unless prohibited by law, any and all documents or any other evidence, upon which a disciplinary action is based, will be made available to the affected employee and her/his designated representative upon request. This provision in no way limits the Union's right to information under 5 U.S.C. § 7114.

Section 12.04

- A. An employee has a right to Union representation at any examination of them by the Agency, in connection with an investigation, if the employee reasonably believes that the examination may result in disciplinary action against the employee and the employee requests representation.
- B. Where the Agency has relied on witnesses to support the reason for a disciplinary action, to the extent any written statements were taken, they will be made a part of the file which is provided to the employee and his/her representative. The Agency shall advise any bargaining unit employee serving as a witness that his/her statements may be shared with a third party.

Section 12.05

- A. For Letters of Reprimand the following procedures will apply:
1. The Agency will hand-deliver the letter to the employee, if practicable, provided the employee is in a duty status. Letters that are not hand-delivered may be sent via trackable means.
 2. The letter will include the specific reasons for the action, the retention period in the eOPF, if applicable, and the employee's rights and time limits for filing a grievance.
 3. Letters of Reprimand will be removed from an employee's eOPF no later than two (2) years from the date of issuance. Letters of Reprimands older than two years will not serve as a basis for future progressive discipline.
 4. Letters of Reprimand are grievable as per Article 10.
- B. The following procedures shall apply for a suspension of fourteen (14) calendar days or less:
1. The Agency will hand-deliver the notice to the employee, if practicable, provided the employee is in a duty status. Letters that are not hand-delivered may be sent via trackable means.
 2. In cases where a suspension is proposed for reasons of off-duty misconduct, the Agency's written notification will also contain a statement of the nexus (relationship) between the off-duty misconduct and the efficiency of the Service. An employee's off-the-job conduct shall not result in disciplinary action unless a nexus to the job is demonstrated by the Agency. If the Agency elects to change the stated nexus prior to issuing a final decision letter, the employee will be informed of such changes or modifications in writing and be given an opportunity to respond prior to final Agency action.
 3. An employee has the right to make an oral and/or written reply within fifteen (15) calendar days of the employee's actual receipt of the letter of proposed action. An employee, who chooses to make an oral reply must schedule the meeting within seven (7) calendar days of his/her actual receipt of the letter of proposed action. Prior to the expiration of the fifteen (15) calendar days, the employee will have a reasonable amount of duty time (not to exceed four (4) hours) to prepare for and to make the oral and/or written reply. If the employee elects to make an oral reply, the oral reply will be made to the deciding official. The employee may submit within five (5) calendar days of the oral reply, a written outline of the points covered upon conclusion of the oral reply.
 4. The deciding official shall issue a written decision based upon the evidence presented and the employee's response, if any, within a reasonable period of time normally within 30 calendar days following the oral or written reply.

5. The final decision in any sustained suspension will be made by a management official other than the official who issued the notice of proposed action. The final decision letter will contain the Agency's determination with respect to each charge and/or specification made against the employee in the notice of proposed action, and the dates of the suspension. The final decision will contain a statement of the employee's appeal rights including the right to file a grievance as stated in the negotiated grievance procedure contained in this Agreement, if applicable.

ARTICLE 13: ADVERSE ACTION

Section 13.01

- A. An adverse action, for the purpose of this article, is defined as a removal, a suspension for more than fourteen (14) calendar days, a reduction in grade, a reduction in pay, based on performance and/or conduct, and a furlough (when not a condition of employment) of thirty (30) calendar days or less of an employee.
- B. Adverse actions will be taken only for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the Service. Such actions must be consistent with applicable laws and government-wide regulations.
- C. If an adverse action is rescinded, all documentation relative to that action will be removed from the eOPF.

Section 13.02

- A. Progressive discipline, fairness, equity and the principle of similar penalties for similar offenses guide Agency discipline determinations as warranted by the circumstances of each case.
- B. Prior to deciding what adverse action is a proper response to the incident or act, the Agency will consider the factors outlined in Appendix D: Douglas v. Veterans Administration (5 MSPB 280 (1981)), if relevant.
- C. In deciding what action may be appropriate and in accordance with applicable law and regulation, the Agency will give due consideration to the relevance of any mitigating circumstances and to information provided by the employee to the Agency in the course of the inquiry leading to the adverse action.

Section 13.03

Unless prohibited by law, any and all documents or any other evidence, upon which an adverse action is based, will be made available to the affected employee and her/his designated representative, upon request. This provision in no way limits the Union's right to information under 5 U.S.C. § 7114.

Section 13.04

- A. The employee has a right to Union representation at any examination of them by the Agency, in connection with an investigation, if the employee reasonably believes that the examination may result in disciplinary action against the employee and the employee so requests representation.
- B. Where the Agency has relied on witnesses to support the reasons for an adverse action, to the extent any written statements were taken, they will be made a part of the file which is provided to the employee and her/his representative upon request. The Agency shall advise any employee serving as a witness that his/her statements may be shared with a third party.

Section 13.05

- A. In all cases of proposed adverse action, except for emergency suspensions and actions taken in which there is reasonable cause to believe the employee has committed a crime for which a sentence of imprisonment may be imposed, the employee will be given written notice stating the specific reasons for the proposed action thirty (30) calendar days in advance of the action and informed of their right to reply to the proposed action. The written notice shall include the following:
 - 1. Specific action proposed;
 - 2. Specific reason for proposed action;
 - 3. Deciding official to whom the employee may respond;

- B. In cases where an adverse action is proposed for reasons of off-duty misconduct, the Agency's written notification will also contain a statement of the asserted nexus (relationship) between the off-duty misconduct and the efficiency of the Service.
- C. An employee may request an oral reply within seven (7) calendar days of his/her actual receipt of the letter of proposed action. An employee also has the right to make a written reply within fifteen (15) calendar days of the employee's actual receipt of the letter of proposed action. If the employee elects to make an oral reply, the oral reply will be made to the deciding official. The employee may submit a written outline of the contents of the oral reply within three (3) calendar days of the reply meeting, and the Agency shall consider them prior to making a final decision.

- D. The deciding official shall issue a written decision based upon the evidence presented and the employee's response, if any, within a reasonable amount of time ideally within 30 days following the oral or written reply.
- E. The final decision in any sustained adverse action will be made by a management official other than the official who issued the notice of proposed action. The final decision letter will contain the Agency's determination with respect to each charge and/or specification made against the employee in the notice of proposed action. The final decision will contain a statement of the employee's right to appeal an adverse decision to the MSPB or to binding arbitration, but not both.

Section 13.06

- A. If the Agency's final decision is to affect an adverse action against a bargaining unit employee, the employee may either appeal the decision under the appellate procedures in accordance with applicable law or file a grievance under the negotiated grievance procedure. Under no condition may an employee appeal an adverse action under both the applicable appellate procedures and to arbitration.

The Union must notify the agency's Chief Administrative Officer and the Labor Relations Specialist assigned to MBDA of any appeal to arbitration filed by the union and will include the matter to be arbitrated. The Union must invoke arbitration within thirty (30) days of the date the employee receives the final decision issued by the Agency.

- B. The standard of proof in any arbitration over this matter will be the preponderance of evidence.
- C. Both parties will exchange their anticipated witness lists seven (7) days prior to the hearing date.
- D. The Agency may request to hold a pre-arbitration settlement conference with NFFE following the Union providing the Agency notice pursuant to Section 13.06(B) above with respect to any employee who was not represented by NFFE at the proposed adverse action stage. If requested, the meeting will take place at a mutually agreed-upon location (including telephonically) and time within fourteen (14) days from the date NFFE invokes arbitration. Such meeting will not result in a delay of the arbitration hearing or require either party to produce evidence.

ARTICLE 14: NOTICES TO EMPLOYEES

Section 14.01

The Agency presents an employee with a written notice specified in Section 14.02 of this Article; the employee shall be given an extra copy of the notice which shall contain the following statement: "An extra copy of this notice is enclosed herein. This copy may, at your own option, be furnished to NFFE, Local 2."

Section 14.02

For purposes of this Article, the term "written notice" includes, but is not limited to:

- A. Letters of proposed disciplinary or adverse action;
- B. Letters of advance notice on a decision to impose a reduction-in-force (RIF);
- C. Letters placing an employee on leave restriction;
- D. Notice of a decision to separate a probationary employee;
- E. Notice of involuntary assignment to a different position or location;
- F. Letters of decision for disciplinary actions;
- G. Letters of decision for adverse actions; and

ARTICLE 15: POSITION CLASSIFICATION

Section 15.01

- A. The Agency has determined that the position description will accurately reflect the duties, responsibilities, and supervisory controls pertaining to the employee filling that position.
- B. The Agency has determined to prepare new position descriptions within sixty (60) calendar days but no longer than ninety (90) calendar days of assigning employees to do the work of the position in those instances where no classified position description exists which accurately describes the duties to be performed.
- C. In the case of new or revised position descriptions, copies shall be provided to NFFE Local 2 within thirty (30) calendar days of the modification being made, and no later than the date it is provided to the employee. Where modifications in position descriptions result in a change in conditions of employment, the Agency will provide NFFE with appropriate notice.

Section 15.03

- A. It is agreed that employees whose duties and responsibilities deviate substantially from those reflected in the position description may seek resolution by requesting a review of a position description reflecting these duties or make a request for a desk audit as provided by the Office of Personnel Management and Department policies.

- B. Desk audits will be performed upon written request of either an employee or the employee's supervisor. Normally, when requesting a desk audit, an employee is required to submit a rationale in support of her/his request to the immediate Supervisor, if the Supervisor is unavailable then the employee may elevate to the next level Supervisor. Supervisory approval and a revised description of duties and responsibilities should also accompany the request. To the extent the supervisor does not approve the employee's request within thirty (30) days, the employee may forward their request directly to the MBDA servicing Classification Human Resources Office. To the maximum extent possible, desk audits will be conducted in a timely manner, generally no more than ninety (90) days from submission of the request to Human Resources and or the governing party responsible for performing the desk audit.
- C. In a classification appeal resulting from a desk audit within the Agency:
 - 1. The employee has the right to Union representation;
 - 2. The Agency will be notified in advance of Union representative attendance at a meeting under this section.
 - 3. A copy of the written evaluation resulting from the desk audit will be provided to the employee.
 - 4. The employee has the right to make written comments on his/her desk audit as part of the appeal.

Section 15.04

In accordance with 5 U.S.C. § 7121, an employee may grieve the classification of a position which results in a reduction in grade or pay of the employee.

ARTICLE 16: PERFORMANCE EVALUATION

Section 16.01

- A. This article is intended to be interpreted and applied in a manner consistent with 5 U.S.C. Chapter 43, 5 C.F.R. Part 430 & 432, and 5 U.S.C. § 9508. This article does not pertain to temporary employees on an appointment of less than one hundred eighty (180) days.

Section 16.02

MBDA management and bargaining unit employees must follow the Department of Commerce's Performance Management System, DAO-202-430 and all Departmental policies and procedures within these systems. An employee's request for a formal or informal reconsideration of a performance rating must be resolved under the administrative grievance procedure DAO 202-430.

The Bargaining Unit Employees Performance plan includes:

- A. Critical Elements: An employee will have three (3) to five (5) critical elements in the performance plan, as identified by the Agency which are consistent with the duties and responsibilities in the position description, the Department's and MBDA's strategic plans and priorities.
- B. Performance Standards: Qualitative and/or quantitative measures of success appropriate to the employee's critical elements. Standards will be clearly written and attainable.
- A. Progress Review:
 - B. The supervisor shall hold at a minimum of one progress review at the mid-point of the performance period. Additional progress reviews may be held at the supervisor's discretion. Progress reviews will be documented on the performance appraisal form, CD-430. Before each progress review, employees are encouraged to summarize their performance accomplishments and submit to their supervisor prior to each progress review meeting.
- C. An objective of the performance management system is to improve communications between the Rating Official and the employee concerning performance expectations and results. The Rating Official shall hold a mid-year progress review. The midyear progress review will be documented on the performance appraisal form. After each progress review, employees are encouraged to summarize the discussion and transmit it to their supervisor. These reviews are in addition to the initial meeting to develop the performance plan and the annual rating discussion.
- D. Summary Rating: At the end of the rating period, the Rating Official assigns a summary rating level of 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5. A summary rating of 3 or higher means that an employee has met the performance expectations of each critical element.
- E. Certification: The performance plan must be signed and dated at the beginning of the rating period by the employee and the Rating Official to indicate that the performance plan has been received by the employee. The performance plan must be signed at the conclusion of the rating period when the summary rating is determined and discussed with the employee. The employee's signature serves as acknowledgement of receipt of the performance plan and final rating.

Section 16.03

- A. The Rating Official and the employee will meet at the beginning of the review period, normally within 60 after the end of each fiscal year, to discuss all performance criteria set forth in the employee's performance plan.
- B. The rating official shall inform the employee when there is a decrease in work performance that may result in a rating lower than a level 3. Such notification shall occur as soon as practicable and provide sufficient time to improve performance.
- A. The Rating Official and newly hired employee shall meet normally within thirty (30) calendar days after entrance on duty (EOD) to discuss performance expectations and the performance plan.

- C. The year-end evaluation will be issued to the employee normally within thirty (30) calendar days after the end of the rating period (September 30). The only exceptions to this rule are as follows:
- D. New employees, who are un-ratable at the end of the appraisal period because they have not served in a position for at least the minimum appraisal period (120 days) of the operating unit, must be rated within 30 days after they have served for the minimum appraisal period
- E. When the employee is not available to receive the evaluation due to absence for sick leave or absence due to an on-the-job injury, the evaluation will be prepared by the Rating Official (provided the employee had one hundred and twenty (120) calendar days to perform under the performance plan prior to being absent) but will not be effective or used in any employment consideration until the evaluation has been provided to the employee either in person or by sending it to the employee's official mailing address. The employee shall be permitted an opportunity to submit written comments.
- F. When a rating official changes positions or leaves the Department:
More than 120 days remaining of the appraisal period, or less than 120 days remaining in the appraisal period he or she should complete interim ratings for his or her employees (who served in their current position 120 days) before leaving the position and/or the Department. In many cases, these interim ratings may become the final rating of record for employees who serve in several positions (for less than 120 days) throughout the remainder of the appraisal period. In both situations, the departing supervisor must do the following:
Request written accomplishments from each employee. Prepare/sign the interim rating for each employee (check interim ratings on Summary Rating page of CD-430). Transmit the interim rating to the new supervisor. Discuss the employee's performance without divulging the interim rating. Notify the employee that the interim rating may be changed by the new supervisor before it becomes final on September 30.

Section 16.04

An employee's summary rating is used in the following personnel actions:

- A. Within-Grade Increases (WGI): An employee must have a current rating of record of "fully successful" or better in order to be granted a WGI.
- B. Awards: See Article 32: Awards.
- C. Promotion: In order to receive a career ladder promotion, an employee must have a current rating of record of "fully successful" or better.
- D. RIF: See Article 17: Reduction-in-Force (RIF).

Section 16.05

This section involves unacceptable performance

A. Scope:

1. For purposes of this article, an action based on unacceptable performance under 5 U.S.C. § 4303 is a reduction in grade or removal of an employee who fails to demonstrate acceptable performance in one (1) or more critical elements of the performance plan.
2. Actions taken under this article for unacceptable performance shall be supported by substantial evidence.
3. The provisions of this article do not apply to the removal of probationary, temporary, or term employees under 5 U.S.C. § 7511.

B. Performance Improvement Period:

For each critical element in which the employee's performance is at the "unsatisfactory" level, the Agency will provide the employee a reasonable period of time (usually thirty (30) to ninety (90) calendar days, depending on the nature of the employee's duties) to demonstrate acceptable performance (defined as meeting at least the "minimally successful" criterion), commensurate with the duties and responsibilities of the employee's position. The Agency will inform the employee that, unless his/her performance improves to and is sustained at an acceptable level during such period of time, the Agency will reduce the employee's grade or remove him/her from his/her position or federal service.

1. The Agency will notify the employee in writing of the critical element(s) for which performance is unacceptable, inform the employee of the performance requirement(s) or standard(s) that must be attained in order to demonstrate acceptable performance in his/her position and advise the employee what he/she must do to bring his/her performance up to the "minimally successful" level. The notice will also explain what efforts will be made by the Agency to assist the employee in improving performance. Assistance may include, but is not limited to, formal training, closer supervision, counseling, or more frequent progress reviews. The Agency may give an employee such notice at any time during the performance appraisal cycle.

C. Proposal Notice: The Agency will follow these procedures when proposing to take an action under this article:

1. Provide the employee a thirty (30)-calendar day advance written notice of the proposed action. The notice will identify both the specific instances of unacceptable performance and the related critical elements and standards.
2. Provide the employee with a copy of any information relied upon to support the proposal. This provision in no way limits the Union's right to additional information under 5 U.S.C. § 7114 or any other applicable law, rule, or regulation.
3. Advise the employee in writing of his/her right to representation.

4. Grant the employee a reasonable amount of duty time, normally up to eight (8) hours, with supervisory approval, to prepare his/her response to the proposed action. The Agency will consider a written request from the employee for additional duty time to prepare his/her response.
5. Provide the employee the opportunity to reply to the notice orally and/or in writing within fifteen (15) days from the date the employee receives notice of the proposed action. The Agency will consider a written request to extend the reply period.
6. If the employee elects to make an oral reply, it will be made to the Deciding Official in person, unless agreed otherwise. The employee may submit a written outline of the points covered upon conclusion of the oral reply. At the option of the Agency, a verbatim transcript or summary of the oral reply shall be made. If a verbatim transcript is made, the Agency will pay the cost of the court reporter. However, if NFFE determines it wants a copy of the transcript, NFFE would share equally in the cost of the court reporter. Each party shall bear the cost of purchasing its own copy of the transcript. The Agency will pay the travel and per diem expenses of the employee to attend the oral reply, subject to applicable law and regulation.

D. Decision Notice:

1. The Agency will consider the employee's oral or written reply and give the employee a written decision letter concerning the proposed action normally within a reasonable time after expiration of the advance notice period. Normally, the written decision will be issued by a management official who is in a higher position than the person who proposed the action. The decision letter will be issued prior to or on the effective date of the action and will specify the instances of unacceptable performance by the employee on which the action is based.
2. The decision letter will inform the employee of his/her right either to appeal under 5 U.S.C. § 7701 [MSPB] or to file a grievance under Article 10: Grievance Procedure of this Agreement, but not both.

- E. Recordkeeping: If an action for unacceptable performance is canceled or overturned and the matter is not subject to further appeal or legal action, all documentation relative to that action (or proposed action) in the employee's eOPF will be removed with confirmation of removal sent to the employee. The Agency will not remove or destroy any documentation required to be preserved under laws, rules, or regulations.

ARTICLE 17: REDUCTION-IN-FORCE (RIF)

Section 17.01

Pursuant to 5 C.F.R. § 351.201, a RIF is the release of a competing employee from his/her competitive level by furlough for more than thirty (30) calendar days, separation, demotion, or reassignment requiring displacement, when the release is required because of a lack of work, shortage of funds, insufficient personnel ceiling, reorganization, the exercise of reemployment or restoration rights, or reclassification of an employee's position due to erosion of duties when the reclassification will take effect after an agency has formally announced a RIF in the employee's competitive area and when the RIF will take effect within one hundred eighty (180) calendar days.

Section 17.02

- A. At least thirty (30) calendar days before the Agency provides formal notice of a RIF to the Union, the Agency shall inform the Union in writing that it has made a preliminary determination to conduct a RIF.
- B. At the same time as it informs the Union, the Agency will provide the Union with the reasons for the action. Nothing stated above compromises the Union's entitlement to obtain information from the Agency under 5 U.S.C. § 7114(b)(4).
- C. Within seven (7) calendar days of receiving the information from the Agency, and if requested, the Agency shall brief the Union on the Agency's preliminary RIF determination.
- D. Following the briefing, the Union shall have five (5) calendar days in which to submit its written comments regarding the Agency's preliminary determination.

Section 17.03

- A. In the event the Agency decides to proceed with a RIF, the parties agree to expedited impact and implementation bargaining, beginning no later than thirty (30) calendar days after the date the Agency provided the RIF notice provided in Section 17.02(A) above.
- B. The parties may negotiate over any RIF-related issues negotiable under law and this Agreement.

ARTICLE 18: PERSONNEL RECORDS AND ACCESS TO INFORMATION

Section 18.01

- A. Employees who have regular access to an Agency-owned computer will have access to their official personnel record through the eOPF system. Employees may access their eOPF using an Agency owned computer to review and make copies of forms or documents in the eOPF.
- B. Employees who have, other than routine access to an Agency-owned computer, may request a copy of any document(s), other than an extensive request, from the eOPF at any time via email to the Agency-designated point of contact at the MBDA Human Resources Office. The Agency shall provide the employee with a hard or electronic copy of the requested document(s) within seven (7) calendar days of receiving the employee's email request. Before disclosure of a record is made to employees, their identity must be verified.
- C. Employees may personally make or provide copies of documents from their eOPF, including to their personally designated representative. The only exception is a copy of records restricted by law or government-wide rule or regulation.

Section 18.02

The eOPF will be purged in accordance with applicable government-wide regulations. However, any employee documentation file maintained by a supervisor is not part of the eOPF. Employees may request from their supervisor to review any files maintained by their supervisor if they exist.

Section 18.03

The Agency will enter and maintain performance appraisals in the employee's eOPF. Access to the eOPF is limited to the employee management officials with a need to know and those others referenced in the current system of records description in accordance with the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552(a).

ARTICLE 19: MERIT PROMOTION

Section 19.01

- (a) All bargaining unit positions will be filled based on merit, and except where otherwise provided by law, without regard to an employee's color, race, religion, national origin, politics, marital status, membership or non-membership in an employee organization, non-disqualifying physical handicap, age, sex, genetics, or based on personal favoritism.
- (b) The Employer shall make every effort to utilize to the maximum extent possible the skills and talents of its current employees. Careful consideration will be given to filling vacant positions through the utilization of present employees.
- (c) The competitive procedures of this Article will apply to those circumstances set forth and defined in the Employer's Merit Assignment Program, 5 Code of Federal Regulation (C.F.R) 335.103, and the procedures as set forth by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM).
- (d) Competitive procedures do not apply to the following actions.
 - (1) Career ladder promotions where competition has taken place earlier.
 - (2) Upgrading of a position due to application of a new classification standard without a significant change in duties, or from the correction of an initial classification error.
 - (3) A promotion resulting from an employee's position being classified at a higher grade (with no further promotion potential) because of additional duties and responsibilities, commonly known as accretion of duties. The noncompetitive upgrade requires the employee to continue to perform the same basic function in the new position that is a clear successor to and absorbs the duties of the old position. In addition, there are no other employees within the organizational unit to whom the additional duties and responsibilities could have been assigned. The Agency agrees that a position's grade will not be increased by an accretion of duties solely to avoid a competitive promotion action.
 - (4) Promotion of an employee who failed to receive proper consideration in a prior competitive promotion action.
 - (5) Actions taken under RIF.
 - (6) Conversion of a temporary promotion to a permanent promotion, provided that the temporary promotion was originally made under competitive procedures, and that the normal minimum area of consideration for the position was used to recruit candidates.
 - (7) Details to higher-graded positions or temporary promotions not to exceed one hundred twenty (120) days.

Section 19.02

- (a) Vacancy announcements will be made available through the Office of Personnel Management web site, (www.usajobs.opm.gov) (USAJOBS). All Bargaining Unit employees will be provided access to such announcements at their regular work sites.
- (b) The minimum areas of consideration are –for GS-15, and equivalent, and below, status employees of the Employer, as well as Senior Level (SL) positions, and Scientific or Professional (ST) positions filled using competitive procedures.
- (c) The Employer shall attempt to find candidates within the minimum area of consideration but may expand the area of consideration if the minimum area of consideration does not produce enough high-quality candidates or the Employer finds it is necessary to conduct a broader search.
- (d) Announcements for Bargaining Unit positions shall be open for a minimum of seven calendar days, but no more than fourteen (14) calendar days under specifically identified circumstances. The Director, Human Resources, except where otherwise prohibited, may make exceptions to the length of the open period, prior to the time frame of the opening, for objective, mission-oriented purposes, documenting such reasons in the case file.
- (e) Vacancy announcements will, as a minimum, contain the following information:
 - (1) the title, series, and grade of the position, as well as the number of vacant positions expected to be filled and an announcement number.
 - (2) duty location and office.
 - (3) the area(s) of consideration.
 - (4) the duties of the position.
 - (5) the minimum qualifications required, all selective placement factors, if any, and all positive education requirements, if any.
 - (6) the pertinent knowledges, skills, and abilities to be evaluated.
 - (7) a statement of whether the position has promotion potential, and if so to
 - (8) what grade, and, if applicable, that the position is a trainee or understudy position.
 - (9) Department of Commerce (DOC) equal employment opportunity policy.
 - (10) the opening date of the announcement.
 - (11) the closing date of the announcement.
 - (12) instructions on how to apply.
 - (13) whom to contact for additional information.
 - (14) pay ranges.
 - (15) a statement of the amount of travel involved, if more than occasional.
 - (16) Reasonable Accommodation Policy; and
 - (17) any special notes or instructions, e.g., whether reapplication is necessary for positions being re-announced, the authority to extend temporary promotions, the changes effected by an amendment, and so forth.

(f) A career ladder position is one identified as developmental and is filled at a grade lower than the target (maximum) grade level for that position. The target level is identified on the Request for Personnel Action (RPA) (SF 52) and on the vacancy announcement. All employees in career ladder positions shall be promoted the first pay period after they can perform at the next higher level, and they become minimally eligible to be promoted (must meet time in grade requirements).

Section 19.03

- (a) Employees shall fully satisfy the time-in-grade and time-after-competitive appointment requirements as well as qualification requirements for the position at the time of any consideration for selection.
- (b) Candidates shall be rated basically qualified for a position if they meet the minimum qualification requirements for a General Schedule position described in OPM's Qualification Standards for General Schedule Positions as supplemented by valid job-related selective placement factors, if any.

Section 19.04

- (a) The best qualified candidates shall be identified through an impartial evaluation of eligible candidates based upon uniformly applied job-related evaluation criteria.
- (b) The supervisor and/or office head of the position to be filled has the responsibility for preparing the rating criteria, i.e., crediting plan. The Human Resources staff shall review the criteria for reasonableness and appropriateness.
- (c) Candidates shall be evaluated based upon their most recent performance appraisal; experience; education; pertinent job-related training; self-development and outside activities; and awards (achievements that earned an employee special recognition, both monetary and non-monetary) earned within the last five (5) years.

Section 19.05

- (a) Before beginning the ranking procedures, the application shall be reviewed by Human Resources to ensure the candidate is within the area of consideration, meets minimum qualifications (including selective placement factors, if identified), and meets time in grade requirements.
- (b) Rating and ranking shall be accomplished by an automated system and Human Resources staff.
- (c) Based upon the span of numerical scores, the HR specialist (or panel members) shall identify the logical or meaningful breakpoint that distinguishes the best qualified candidates from the other qualified candidates. The best qualified candidates shall be those individuals with the highest scores. There shall be a significant, or meaningful, break in numerical rankings separating the best qualified group from the remaining candidates.
- (d) A list of qualified candidates is received from HR and an interview panel, if determined necessary, is established to screen the applicants. The members of the panel shall meet to evaluate best candidates. If convened, panels will consist of at least three (3) persons responsible for evaluating candidates. The panel members shall be at the grade being filled or higher and at least one (1) panel member should be a subject matter expert in the same field as the vacant position. The interview shall be sufficient to provide the applicant an opportunity to inform the panel members of any qualifications not apparent from the resume.

- (e) The best qualified candidates shall be referred in alphabetical order to the selecting official. Individual scores shall not be provided.

Section 19.06

- (a) The recommending and/or selecting official may offer an additional interview to the best qualified candidates.
- (b) The selecting official is not required to select a candidate from the referral list and may select from any other appropriate source. He or she may request an extension of the area of consideration or additional recruitment efforts or may fill the job by some other type of placement action. However, if selection is to be made from among those candidates who were rated and ranked under merit staffing procedures, the range of selection is limited to those candidates who have been identified as best qualified.
- (c) If the selecting official does not act within ninety (90) days after receiving the list of best qualified candidates, the merit promotion list shall be canceled. Exceptions may be granted by Human Resources in extenuating circumstances.
- (d) An employee selected for promotion will normally be released from his/her current position at the end of the pay period closest to fifteen (15) calendar days after the selection date. An extension of an employee's release date may be requested for extenuating circumstances with agreement from the Human Resources Director.

Section 19.07

Employees shall be notified in writing, or electronically, if they do not meet the requirements of the position, their application is incomplete, or they were referred to the selecting official but not selected. The Employer shall provide notification as soon as possible.

Section 19.08

A promotion folder shall be established in Human Resources for each specific promotion or other placement action filled under the competitive procedures of this Article. All documentation concerning merit selection actions shall be maintained in accordance with the recordkeeping provisions of OPM, this Agreement, DAO 205-1, and DAO 205-16, Managing Electronic Records and contain proper markings. It shall be kept for two (2) years or until a formal OPM evaluation of the program, whichever time is shorter and absent any grievance concerning such an action. The folder shall contain the following information:

- (1) a copy of the vacancy announcement.
- (2) a copy of the position description.
- (3) selective factors used (if any).

- (4) any quality ranking factors.
- (5) all rating and ranking factors used.
- (6) a list of all eligible candidates and their applications.
- (7) a list of and identification of breakpoints of best qualified candidates.
- (8) the name of the applicant selected and the selecting official.
- (9) copies of all written and electronic correspondence with applicants; and
- (10) copies of the interview questions, along with the composition of any interview panel, and name(s) of the recommending and/or selecting official.

Section 19.09

- (a) An employee who feels that he or she has been denied a promotion because of a violation of this Article may grieve through the negotiated grievance procedures of Article 10 (Grievance Procedures) as established by this Agreement or file a formal complaint through the procedures of Article 20 (EEO). However, a non-selection from a group of properly ranked and certified individuals is not by itself a basis for a grievance.
- (b) In the processing of complaints or grievances concerning actions taken under this Article the Union shall, upon request, be furnished with copies of all records, subject only to the Employer's authority to withhold such records under applicable laws and regulations that pertain to the subject action.

ARTICLE 20: DIVERSITY AND EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY

Section 20.01

In accordance with the Rules and Regulations of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), and within the limits of authority delegated to the Agency, specifically, the Office of Civil Rights agree to work together to provide equal opportunity for employment and to prohibit discrimination in employment because of race, religion, color, sex, sexual harassment, sexual orientation/preference, national origin, age, genetic information, or disability.

Section 20.02

Nothing in this Agreement prohibits an employee from being represented by a Union steward at any stage of the EEO complaint process including the counseling stage unless the employee designates another representative.

- D. To provide adequate safety training for all employees, specifically in such areas as evacuation of buildings during suspected fire or bomb threats.
- E. The Union will be notified at least one (1) workday in advance of any meetings held with bargaining unit employees to discuss health and safety issues, other than routine safety briefings. The Union will be allowed to send one (1) representative to these meetings on official time.

Section 21.02

- A. Pursuant to 29 C.F.R. Part 1960, an employee may decline to perform his/her assigned task because of a reasonable belief that, under the circumstances, the task poses an imminent risk of death or serious bodily harm, and there is insufficient time to seek effective redress through normal hazard reporting and abatement procedures. In the event an employee declines an assignment under these conditions, he/she shall be free from reprisal. The Agency shall notify all affected employees of the existence of a dangerous condition or any possible unsafe condition immediately.

Section 21.03

The Agency will take appropriate action to ensure that employees are familiar with the proper means of leaving the office during a suspected emergency threat. Where an emergency threat is reasonably suspected, the Agency will evacuate affected employees to safer areas or take other appropriate precautions.

Section 21.04

When it is necessary for an employee to leave work because of a serious illness or incapacitation, the Agency will offer assistance to ensure that the employee is transported to a medical treatment facility.

Section 21.05

- A. The Agency will provide the Union with access to all information related to health and safety in the workplace pursuant to the Occupational Health & Safety Act and applicable law and regulation. The Agency shall provide such information to the Union as requested.

Section 21.06

The Agency will provide the NFFE Local 2 with reasonable advance notice of any planned construction that will affect bargaining unit employees' conditions of employment.

Section 21.07

- A. The Agency shall maintain its current Employee Assistance Program (EAP) consistent with law, rule, and regulation. It is the policy of the Department of Commerce (DOC) to offer counseling to all employees. The Employee Assistance Program (EAP) is a confidential service that can help in a variety of situations.

ARTICLE 22: HOURS OF WORK

The Agency shall inform every new employee of the days and hours of his/her workweek. Except as provided below, prior to implementing a change in the basic workweek, the Agency will notify the Union as far in advance as possible, but not less than seven (7) calendar days.
- B. Rest Periods: Supervisors shall authorize rest/break periods during the workday, normally with a fifteen (15) minute break during the first and second half of the workday. The Agency shall inform every new employee of the days and hours of his/her workweek.
- F. Normal Workday: The normal administrative workday consists of eight (8) hours of work time except for those employees working an alternate work schedule. The normal meal break is thirty (30) minutes.
- G. Core Hours: Employees will be in a work status during core hours. Absence from work during these hours must be requested of and approved by the supervisor as indicated by an approved leave request in writing or on an electronic form, or an approved Alternative Work Schedule (AWS) or telework agreement. Core hours are Monday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Employees should be logged on during the core hours between 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m., Any hours that an employee voluntarily works after 6PM will not be entitled to night differential, unless the work hours are mandated by the Agency.

- H. Core Day: The designated day that employees are present at the designated worksite. The Agency's designated the core day is Monday. If a federal holiday is observed on a Monday, the core day will be cancelled for this week.
- I. Basic Eight (8)-Hour Schedule: This is a fixed five (5)-day schedule that does not vary from day to day. It is an eight (8)-hour day. An employee will be provided a thirty (30) minute unpaid lunch period at approximately mid-day. Any other schedule (tour of duty) is subject to approval by the employee's supervisor in accordance with this Agreement.

Section 22.02

- A. Available Schedules: Employees shall be eligible to work Alternative Work Schedules (AWS) as long as they have achieved a "fully successful" or higher summary rating and have not had any documented conduct issue(s) in the last twelve (12) months.
- B. Management will approve or deny each schedule request within one (1) pay period of the date of submission, when feasible.
- C. Upon request, a denial of request for a particular work schedule will be provided to the employee in writing, stating the reasons for such denial. Such denial would include one of the following reasons: a reduction of an agency's productivity, a diminished level of services furnished to the public, or an increase in the cost of agency operations.
- D. Alternate and Flexible Work Schedules:
 - 1. Alternative Eight (8)-Hour Schedule: This is a fixed schedule that does not vary from day to day, with established arrival and departure times. The schedule includes ten (10) workdays in each pay period, with each workday being eight (8) hours in length. This schedule differs from the normal eight (8)-hour schedule in that the established arrival and departure times need not coincide with the basic work hours for a particular shift.
 - 2. Ten (10)-Hour Compressed Work Schedule (CWS): This is a fixed, non-flexible schedule (meaning it does not vary from day to day). Arrival and departure times are set and approved in advance. Eight (8) workdays of ten (10) work hours each (four (4) days each week) constitute the pay period. A ten (10)-hour schedule may not include any combination of half-days or workdays of less than ten (10) work hours.
 - 3. Five-Four-Nine (5-4-9) (CWS): This is a fixed, non-flexible schedule (meaning it does not vary from day-to day). The schedule includes nine (9) workdays in each pay period, with eight (8) of those days consisting of nine (9) work hours each and one (1) day consisting of eight (8) work hours. An approved variation of this consists of eight (8) nine (9)-hour days and two (2) four (4)-hour days.
 - 4. Flexitime Flexible Eight (8)-Hour Schedule (Gliding Schedule): This is a flexible (non-fixed) schedule with a basic work requirement of an eight (8)-hour day and forty (40)-hour workweek. The employee will work an eight (8)-hour day, but arrival and departure times are flexible as long as daily core hours are worked (see Section 23.01(G) above regarding core hours). Absence from work during core hours requires supervisory approval.

Section 22.03

- A. Consistent with 5 C.F.R. § 610.121, an employee will be informed of a cancellation or revision of their approved alternate work schedule in writing within one (1) pay period in advance of the change.
- B. Management will approve or deny each alternate work schedule or work schedule request within one (1) pay period of the date of submission.
- C. Management's denial of request for a particular work schedule will be provided to the employee in writing, stating the reasons for such denial, upon request.
- D. Hardship Schedule Requests:
 - 1. Agency employees may submit hardship schedule requests. The request should be submitted in writing to the immediate supervisor and must provide a brief explanation of the hardship.
 - 2. Hardship schedule requests will be approved or denied within one (1) pay period of the date of submission, if feasible.

Section 22.04

This section provides for procedures for establishing special temporary work schedules.

- A. Training: Employees scheduled for training will revert to a Monday-Friday eight (8)-hour schedule consistent with the hours of the training program unless a mutually agreeable arrangement is made with the supervisor or designee.
- B. Temporary Duty: When an employee covered by this agreement is assigned to a temporary duty station within the Region using another schedule, either traditional or AWS, the Agency may allow the employee to continue to use the schedule used at his or her permanent work site, if suitable, or require the employee to change the schedule to conform to operations at the temporary work site.
- C. Temporary Changes to Employee's Work Schedules: Except as provided for by 5 C.F.R. § 610.121(a), an employee's regularly scheduled workday or workweek shall not be changed solely to avoid payment of overtime or earning of compensatory time.

Section 22.06

- A. When the Agency seeks to change an employee's tour of duty, it will provide fourteen (14) calendar days' advance notice to the NFFE Chief Steward and all affected employees, except as provided for by 5 C.F.R. § 610.121. Such change shall be limited to the employee's tour of duty and shall not affect approved leave, AWS, or telework arrangements.

- B. Except as provided for by 5 C.F.R. § 610.121(a), the Agency shall not change employee tours of duty/schedules in order to avoid paying overtime. To the extent practicable, the Agency shall schedule overtime contiguous (i.e., next or together in sequence) to an employee's normal tour of duty.
- C. Emergency events will be addressed in accordance with Article 24: Changes in Operational Status.

ARTICLE 23: COMPENSATORY TIME

Section 23.01

The Agency will compensate employees for work performed outside normal duty hours if the supervisor approves the compensatory hours in advance and in writing.

Compensatory time will be allowed for any Management-mandated extra time worked, so long as allowed by law and government-wide regulations.

A compensatory time request will be submitted through the time keeping system, WebTA, for supervisory approval.

Section 23.02

In order to inform employees whether they are exempt or nonexempt for purposes of the FLSA, the Agency will indicate each employee's FLSA status on the Standard Form 50.

Section 23.03

- E. Generally, supervisors or their designees may approve or disapprove the earning of credit hours in advance. Supervisors may approve an employee's standing request to work credit hours on a particular day(s). Supervisors may also approve credit hours an employee has already worked on a retroactive basis. If two (2) or more similarly qualified employees request credit hours resulting in a conflict, the more senior employee shall be permitted to earn the credit hours. If such a conflict reoccurs, the supervisor will assign credit hours on a rotational basis.
- F. Once earned, an employee may use credit hours in fifteen (15)-minute increments in the same manner as leave. The use of credit hours is subject to prior supervisory approval.
- G. Full-time employees can carry over up to twenty-four (24) credit hours from pay period to pay period. Part time employees can carry over up to one-quarter of their bi-weekly work requirement. Credit hours typically will be used in the following pay period.
- H. Subject to applicable law and regulation, an employee shall have the option to elect credit hours or overtime for the time worked in excess of eight (8) hours in a day. In no event shall the Agency use credit hours in lieu of paying overtime.

ARTICLE 24: HOLIDAYS

Section 24.01

Employees are entitled to compensation for all federal holidays. Holiday means any day designated as a holiday by a federal statute or declared by an Executive Order. Federal holidays that fall on weekend days (Saturday and Sunday) will be observed either on Friday or on Monday, as determined by the OPM.

Section 24.02

- A. If an employee is required to work on the day observed as the holiday, he/she shall receive holiday premium pay for regularly scheduled, non-overtime tours of duty, not to exceed their normal tour of duty hours. Employees who are required to work on a holiday receive their rate of basic pay, plus holiday premium pay at a rate equal to the rate of their basic pay, for each hour of holiday work pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 5546(b).
- B. An employee who is required to perform work on a designated holiday is entitled to holiday pay for the hours worked.

Section 24.03

The Agency shall apply early dismissal announced for holidays uniformly office-wide unless certain employees have coverage requirements.

ARTICLE 25: LEAVE

Section 25.01

- A. Employees shall earn and Management will grant annual and sick leave in accordance with applicable laws and regulations. Careful consideration shall be given the desires and needs of the employees in granting annual and sick leave, subject to operational requirements.
- B. When supervisor charges leave for tardiness, the employee(s) will be so notified and will not work during the charged leave period.
- C. Employees will normally use the electronic time and attendance system, currently WebTA or a manual Application for Leave (OPM-71) for requesting scheduled leave. A request for leave approval does not guarantee that leave will be granted. Personnel shortages, conflicting requests, overtime, etc., may necessitate a change in leave periods or cancellation of approval leave. If leave is denied, the supervisor must be given a reason for the denial.
- D. Except in emergency situations, leave used for personal purposes shall be requested and approved in advance to permit careful scheduling of leave for all employees concerned and to meet the needs of the work unit.

- E. In the event of a death in the immediate family of any employee, Management will make every effort to grant annual leave, sick leave (or leave without pay if there is no accrued annual or sick leave) as requested.

Section 25.02

- A. The Agency has determined that annual leave will be granted consistent with workload and staffing needs in a manner which permits each employee to take consecutive days off up to two (2) consecutive weeks or more of annual leave each year. The Agency shall make every reasonable effort to grant employee requests for annual leave consistent with workload and staffing needs. Full consideration will be given to each employee's preferred vacation period.
- B. Supervisors will consider and respond to requests for annual leave according to the following process:
 - 1. Leave requests will be responded to normally within 24 hours after the request is received.
 - 2. Employees may submit leave requests no earlier than one (1) year in advance of the requested leave date(s). Employees will be granted leave on a first come, first served basis based on the date the request is submitted. An employee's annual leave request will be granted unless the request conflicts with a previously approved request and is inconsistent with workload and staffing needs. The supervisor will inform the affected employee of the status of their request within a reasonable amount of time.
 - 3. When annual leave requests are submitted on the same date the leave will be approved based on first come first serve basis.

Section 25.03

- A. When an employee may be reasonably expected to know in advance of their starting time that he/she will not be at work on time, he/she will immediately notify the supervisor or designee. If the supervisor or designee is unavailable, the employee shall send notification by voicemail, e-mail or text detailing their need for leave. In addition, the employee will provide his/her immediate valid contact information and his/her expected time to report to work. Where it is not possible for the employee to notify in advance, due to circumstances outside employee's control, he/she shall provide notification as soon as possible. The supervisor will not unreasonably deny the employee's request.
- B. In unusual or exceptional circumstances where an employee is temporarily incapacitated, the employee shall request sick leave at the earliest practicable time.

Section 25.04

Upon advance request, the Agency shall make every reasonable effort to grant, consistent with workload and staffing needs, an employee's request for annual leave that occurs on a religious holiday.

Section 25.05

- A. The Agency agrees annual leave requested by the employee shall be scheduled and approved in accordance with 5 C.F.R. § 630.308, so employees will not lose annual leave at the end of the leave year whenever possible, consistent with work requirements. Employees may carry over annual leave, not in excess of two hundred forty (240) hours, at the end of the leave year if the annual leave was approved and scheduled in advance and the employee was prevented from using the leave due to a business exigency and/or illness. In accordance with law, rule, and regulation, an employee may also carry over annual leave due to administrative error which results in annual leave being forfeited through no fault of the employee.
- B. To avoid leave forfeiture, 'use or lose' annual leave must be requested no later than three (3) pay periods prior to the end of the leave year. Annually the Agency will notify all employees advising and reminding them of the regulations concerning "use or lose" annual leave and the need to request annual leave to avoid unintended forfeiture of such annual leave.
- C. Annual leave may be restored if such leave was approved by the third pay period prior to the end of the leave year and was later denied and forfeited. An employee's leave may be restored if forfeited due to an administrative error that resulted in annual leave being forfeited through no fault of the employee.

Section 25.06

When leave has been requested and approved, the Agency will not rescind approval absent an emergency situation, as defined by 5 U.S.C. § 7106 (a)(2)(D) or unanticipated workload or staffing needs. When previously approved leave must be canceled, the employee will be notified and will be advised of the change in writing and be provided an explanation as to why the action was taken. Every reasonable effort shall be made to accommodate the employee to reschedule his/her leave. The Agency will make every reasonable effort not to cancel previously approved leave, particularly where an employee's expenses are non-refundable, consistent with this Agreement.

Section 25.07

- A. The granting of advanced annual leave by the Agency is discretionary. However, the Agency may grant advanced annual leave, when the employee requesting advanced annual leave:
 - 1. Is eligible to earn annual leave;
 - 2. Does not request more advanced annual leave than would be earned during the remainder of the leave year or for the remainder of the period during which the employee will be employed, such as a term limited appointment;

3. Is not on a leave restriction letter or has not been the subject of a performance or conduct based action within the last twelve (12) months; and
 4. Is expected to return to work after having used the leave.
- B. As annual leave is earned by the employee, the earned annual leave will be used to repay any outstanding advanced annual leave balance, or the employee may repay any outstanding balance.

Section 25.08 LWOP

The Agency will consider all employee applications for LWOP. The Agency will administer LWOP equitably and approval or disapproval of employee requests will be made with due consideration of personal hardship and the needs of both the Agency and the employee in accordance with applicable laws, regulations, and this Agreement.

ARTICLE 26: SICK LEAVE

Section 26.01

Employees will earn sick leave in accordance with applicable statutes and regulations. Employees may utilize sick leave in fifteen (15)-minute increments. Employees may not be charged sick leave without consent.

Section 26.02

- A. Approval of sick leave will be granted to employees when they are incapacitated for the performance of their duties by such reasons as sickness, injury, or pregnancy.
- B. Sick leave will be granted for contagious diseases as set forth in applicable statutes and regulations. Sick leave will generally be granted for medical, dental, or optical examination or treatment when required and requested prior to the beginning of the absence.
- C. The Federal Employees Family Friendly Leave Act authorizes covered full-time employees to use a total of up to 40 hours (5 workdays) of sick leave per year to (1) give care or otherwise attend to a family member having an illness, injury, or other condition which, if an employee had such a condition, would justify the use of sick leave by the employee; or (2) make arrangements for or attend the funeral of a family member. In addition, a covered full-time employee who maintains a balance of at least 80 hours of sick leave may use an additional 64 hours (8 workdays) of sick leave per year for these purposes, bringing the total amount of sick leave available for family care or bereavement purposes to a maximum of 104 hours (13 workdays) per year.
- D. When an employee may be reasonably expected to know, in advance of their starting time that he/she will not be at work on time, he/she will immediately notify the supervisor or designee. If the supervisor or designee is unavailable, the employee shall send notification by voicemail, e-mail or text detailing their need for leave. In addition, the employee will provide his/her immediate valid contact information and his/her expected time to report to work. Where it is not possible for the employee to notify in advance due to circumstances outside the employee's control, he/she shall provide notification as soon as possible. The supervisor will not unreasonably deny the employee's request.

- E. In unusual or exceptional circumstances where an employee is temporarily incapacitated, the employee shall request sick leave at the earliest practicable time.

Section 26.03

- A. Employees may be required to furnish administratively acceptable evidence to the supervisor or designee to substantiate a request for approval of sick leave if sick leave exceeds three (3) consecutive workdays or a reasonable basis exists to believe sick leave abuse is occurring or in accordance with a leave restriction memorandum. Medical certificates must:
 - 1. Include a statement that the employee is under the care of physician;
 - 2. Include a statement that the employee was incapacitated for duty and the days the employee was incapacitated;
 - 3. Include information concerning the expected duration of when the employee was unable to work; and
 - 4. Must be signed by or contain the stamped signature of the medical provider.
- B. Where the Agency has a reasonable basis to question whether an employee is properly using sick leave (e.g., when sick leave is used frequently or in unusual patterns or circumstances), the Agency may request that the employee provide an explanation. Absent a reasonably acceptable explanation, the employee may be orally counseled that continued frequent use of sick leave, or use in unusual patterns or circumstances, may result in a written requirement to furnish acceptable documentation for each subsequent absence due to illness or incapacitation for duty, regardless of duration.
- C. If a reasonable basis continues to exist for questioning an employee's use of sick leave, the employee may be notified in writing that for a stated period (not to exceed six (6) months), the employee is on sick leave restriction. A sick leave restriction is a series of instructions establishing the specific requirements for the use of sick leave. This includes that no request for sick leave, or other leave in lieu of sick leave, will be approved unless supported by administratively acceptable medical evidence, which will be submitted to a representative designated by the Agency. Any such written notice will describe the frequency, patterns, or circumstances which led to its issuance. A sick leave restriction will be rescinded at the end of the period if the employee fully complies with the requirements of the restriction. A sick leave restriction may be extended an additional six (6) months if the employee fails to fully comply with the requirements of the restriction. Such sick leave restriction may be extended if the circumstances warrant it.
- D. The issuance of sick leave restriction shall be subject to the grievance and arbitration provisions of this Agreement.

- E. Employees who, because of illness, are released from duty, and are not subject to the restrictions of Section 28.03(C) above, will not be required to furnish administratively acceptable medical evidence to substantiate sick leave for the day released from duty. Subsequent days of absence will be subject to the provisions of the subsections above.
- F. Employees who are not subject to the restrictions of the subsections above will not be required to furnish administratively acceptable medical evidence on a continuing basis if the employee suffers from a chronic condition which does not necessarily require medical treatment although absence from work may be necessary and the employee has previously furnished medical certification of the chronic condition. The Agency may periodically require further administratively acceptable medical evidence to substantiate an employee's continued use of this provision. Such evidence will be submitted to a representative designated by the Agency.

Section 26.04

- A. An approved absence, which would otherwise be chargeable to sick leave, will be charged to annual leave if requested by the employee and there is no just cause for the Agency to deny such request.
- B. An employee who becomes ill while on annual leave may have the time of illness changed to sick leave provided that the employee notifies the supervisor on the first day of the illness and otherwise complies with the requirements of Section 28.02 of this article.

Section 26.05

- A. The Agency may advance sick leave when all of the following conditions are met:
 - 1. The employee is eligible to earn sick leave;
 - 2. The employee's request does not exceed thirty (30) workdays; or whatever lesser amount complies with applicable regulations;
 - 3. There is no reason to believe the employee will not return to work after having used the leave;
 - 4. The employee has provided administratively acceptable medical documentation of the need for advanced sick leave;
 - 5. The employee is adopting a child, or the employee or family member has a serious health condition, or to make arrangements necessitated by the death of a family member or to attend the funeral of a family member (e.g., spouse, parent, or child); and
 - 6. The employee is not subject to the restrictions of Section 28.03(C) above.
- B. Even if all of the conditions above have been met, the Agency may deny advanced sick leave to probationary employees during the first year of their probationary period.

- C. Advanced sick leave is not available for routine medical visits or minor illnesses.
- D. As sick leave is earned by an employee, the earned sick leave will be used to repay any outstanding advanced sick leave balance or the employee can repay it.

Section 26.06

The Agency will treat as confidential any medical information given by an employee in support of a request for sick leave. The Agency may disclose such information subject to its Privacy Act obligations, for work-related reasons on a need-to-know basis only.

Section 26.07

The Agency will implement this article consistent with 5 C.F.R. § 630.

ARTICLE 27: BEREAVEMENT LEAVE

- A. In accordance with applicable law and regulation the Agency will grant sick leave to an employee to make arrangements necessitated by the death of a family member or attend the funeral/memorial service of a family member.
- B. An employee is entitled to use up to one hundred four (104) hours (13 days) of sick leave each leave year for such bereavement purposes. For part-time employees, the amount of sick leave is pro-rated in proportion to the average number of hours of work in the employee's scheduled tour of duty each week. For example, an employee who works twenty (20) hours a week may not be granted more than fifty-two (52) hours of sick leave for bereavement purposes.
- C. Normally, absence due to bereavement is charged to sick leave. An employee may not be charged LWOP or have any leave charged against his or her Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) entitlement, unless specifically requested by the employee and approved by the Agency.
- D. An employee has the option of using annual leave or LWOP for bereavement purposes.
- E. Family member, for the purposes of bereavement, is defined by applicable law and regulation:
 - 1. Spouse, and parents thereof;
 - 2. Sons and daughters, and spouses thereof;
 - 3. Parents, and spouses thereof;
 - 4. Brothers and sisters, and spouses thereof;
 - 5. Grandparents and grandchildren, and spouses thereof;

6. Domestic partner and parents thereof, including domestic partners of any individual in items (2) through (5) of this definition; and
 7. Any individual related by blood or affinity whose close association with the employee is equivalent of a family relationship.
- F. The associated definitions for the term son or daughter, parent, domestic partner, and committed relationship are provided by 5 C.F.R.

ARTICLE 28: FAMILY MEDICAL LEAVE ACT (FMLA) AND FEDERAL EMPLOYEE PAID LEAVE ACT (FEPLA)

Section 28.01

- A. Employees may be entitled to leave under the provisions of the Family and Medical Leave Act in accordance with 5 USC §6381-6387 to a total of 12 administrative workweeks of unpaid leave during any 12-month period for:
- a) the birth of a son or daughter of the employee and in order to care for such son or daughter.
 - b) the placement of a son or daughter with the employee for adoption or foster care.
 - c) In order to care for the spouse, or a son, daughter, or parent, of the employee, if such spouse, son, daughter, or parent has a serious health condition.
 - d) Because of a serious health condition that makes the employee unable to perform the functions of the employee's position.
 - e) Because of any qualifying exigency arising out of the fact that the spouse, or a son, daughter, or parent of the employee is on covered active duty (or has been notified of an impending call or order to covered active duty) in the Armed Forces.
- B. An employee seeking to request leave for Family Medical Leave in accordance with Public Law 116-92, should submit such request four weeks in advance of the proposed start date. Approval of leave for this reason will be consistent with entitlements under FMLA and will be considered on its own merits.
- C. When an employee reports a medical condition, which may impede his/her ability perform the essential functions of the position, the Agency's Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator will work with the employee to initiate the interactive reasonable accommodation process outlined in DAO 215-10. Efforts will be made to accommodate employees in need of position modification on a temporary basis to the extent management's rights are not impeded.

Section 28.02

- A. Beginning October 1, 2020, the Agency will comply with the Federal Employee Paid Leave Act (FEPLA) which provides 12 weeks of paid parental leave in connection with a qualifying birth or placement (for adoption or foster care).

- B. Paid parental leave granted in connection with a qualifying birth or placement under FEPLA is substituted for unpaid FMLA leave and is available during the 12-month period following the birth or placement. In order to be eligible for paid parental leave under FEPLA, a Federal employee must be eligible for FMLA leave under 5 U.S.C. 6382(a)(1)(A) or (B) and must meet FMLA eligibility requirements.
- C. Paid parental leave under FEPLA is limited to 12 work weeks and may be used only during the 12-month period beginning on the date of the birth or placement involved. Within these 12 work weeks, paid parental leave is available as long as an employee has a continuing parental role with the child whose birth or placement was the basis for the leave entitlement.
- D. Under FEPLA, an employee may not use any paid parental leave unless the employee agrees in writing, before commencement of the leave, to subsequently work for the applicable employing agency for at least 12 weeks. This 12-week work obligation begins on the employee's first scheduled workday after such paid parental leave concludes.

Section 28.03

An employee may substitute paid time off that is annual leave, sick leave (as appropriate), compensatory time off, or credit hours for LWOP.

ARTICLE 29: OTHER ABSENCES

Section 29.01

An excused absence is an approved absence from duty without loss of pay and without charge to leave.

Section 29.02

As a general rule, when the voting polls are not open at least three (3) hours either before or after an employee's regular hours of work, such employee shall be granted an excused absence to vote which will permit the employee to report to work up to three (3) hours after the polls open or leave work up to three (3) hours before the polls close, whichever requires the lesser amount of time. If a manager rejects an employee's request for administrative time off to vote, the matter will immediately be referred to the employee's second-line manager for a determination whether the granting of administrative time off is appropriate.

Section 29.03

Employees are expected to report for work on time and be ready, willing, and able to perform the duties of their position during their assigned tour of duty. Infrequent instances of tardiness of short duration may be excused by the supervisor or designee for good cause. Habitual instances of tardiness may be charged absence without leave (AWOL) as determined by the supervisor or designee.

Section 29.04

In accordance with OPM and DOC leave regulations, administrative leave may be granted up to four (4) hours of excused absence, for blood donation to an American Red Cross-sponsored event or in emergency situations to local hospitals or blood banks of nonprofit institutions approved by the Agency based upon advanced request and consistent with workload and staffing needs. The Agency shall make reasonable efforts to release employees to donate blood.

Section 29.05

- A. Bone marrow and organ donation is covered by applicable law and regulations.
- B. To request such leave, the employee will provide documentation to their supervisor consistent with the regulatory requirements and this Agreement.

Section 29.06

Employees shall be granted court leave when called to jury duty or when serving as a witness on behalf of the federal, state, or local government.

Section 29.07

Subject to workload considerations, the Agency may grant an employee up to a total of two (2) hours of administrative leave per calendar year for the purposes of attending an Agency-sponsored health benefits fair, reviewing health benefits information and materials, and seeking supplemental retirement counseling. The Agency shall make reasonable efforts to release employees for such purposes.

ARTICLE 30: AWARDS

Section 30.01

- A. Each fiscal year, the Agency will grant awards annually in a fair, equitable, and objective manner in accordance with this Agreement and applicable rules and regulations. Incentive awards will be administered in accordance with Department of Commerce policies and directives and are linked to performance. Performance awards are not guaranteed, but rather are based on individual employee performance and agency funding. As part of the Agency's efforts to recognize outstanding work performance by employees, it conducts an annual employee recognition program where it highlights & promotes major accomplishments within the organization. This program also reinforces commitment to the core values influencing the work within MBDA. Award categories include: The National Director's Award, Leadership (Core Value), Professionalism (Core Value), Integrity (Core Value), Teamwork (Core Value), and Work-Life Balance (Core Value). In each respective category, an employee is recognized whose contributions during the fiscal year exemplify agency standards. The recognition comes with either a monetary or non-monetary award for each recipient.

Section 30.02

- A. The Employer will, if requested, annually provide the Union with an electronic data file, within the second quarter of the fiscal year, containing the following information on awards made under this Article: grade and step; summary rating scale; type of award received (i.e., performance award, QSI, time off award, incentive award, etc.) amount of award received; race, national origin, gender, and age (RNOGA).

Section 30.03

- A. The Agency and the Union agree that the performance awards program applicable to all bargaining unit employees will be provided as follows:
 1. Employees who receive a "Level 3 or higher summary rating will be eligible to receive Performance Award.
 2. To be eligible for a QSI, an employee must demonstrate a continuous level 5 performance. QSIs shall be reviewed and approved by an official with authority to do so.
 3. Employees who receive a "minimally successful" or "unsatisfactory" summary rating will not be eligible for a Performance Award.
- B. Annually the Agency will provide the Union with an updated copy of the implementation plan developed by the Agency, including the established award ranges and/or amounts.
- C. Performance awards will be issued to employees as timely as possible; however, the Agency will make every reasonable effort not to exceed ninety (90) days after receipt of their annual performance ratings.

ARTICLE 31: DETAILS AND SPECIAL ASSIGNMENTS

Section 31.01

- A. A detail is defined as a temporary assignment of an employee to a different position for a specified period with the employee returning to regular duties at the end of the assignment. This includes positions at higher or lower grades. An employee who is on a detail is considered to be permanently occupying his/her regular position and is not required to meet the qualifications of the temporary position.
- B. 5 C.F.R. § 335.103(c)(1) provides:
 1. Competitive actions. Except as provided in paragraphs (c)(2) and (3) of this section, competitive procedures in Agency promotion plans apply to all promotions under § 335.102 of this part and to the following actions:
 - a. Time-limited promotions under § 335.102(f) of this part for more than 120 days to higher graded positions (prior service during the preceding 12 months under noncompetitive time-limited promotions and noncompetitive details to higher graded positions counts toward the 120-day total). A temporary promotion may be made permanent without further competition provided the temporary promotion was originally made under competitive procedures and the fact that might lead to a permanent promotion was made known to all potential candidates;

- b. Details for more than 120 days to a higher-grade position or to a position with higher promotion potential (prior service during the preceding 12 months under noncompetitive details to higher graded positions and noncompetitive time-limited promotions counts toward the 120-day total);
 - c. Selection for training, which is part of an authorized training agreement, part of a promotion program, or required before an employee may be considered for a promotion as specified in §410.302 of this chapter;
 - d. Reassignment or demotion to a position with more promotion potential than a position previously held on a permanent basis in the competitive service (except as permitted by reduction-in-force regulations);
 - e. Transfer to a position at a higher grade or with more promotion potential than a position previously held on a permanent basis in the competitive service; and
 - f. Reinstatement to a permanent or temporary position at a higher grade or with more promotion potential than a position previously held on a permanent basis in the competitive service.
- C. If an employee has been assigned higher level duties improperly, the Agency will take such action as necessary to compensate the employee, as permitted by applicable law and regulations.
- D. Details of more than thirty (30) consecutive calendar days will be formally documented by the placement of an SF-50 in the employee's eOPF.

Section 31.02

- A. The Agency may affect details or non-competitive temporary promotions of one hundred twenty (120) days or less from among appropriately qualified employees (to be eligible for a temporary promotion, employees must meet minimum OPM qualifications and time-in-grade requirements).
- B. For permanent employees, volunteers for details of more than sixty (60) consecutive days will be solicited from interested and qualified employees in the order set forth in Section 33.01(E) above. If there are too many volunteers, selection will be made in descending order using SCD, unless competitive procedures are used to identify the best qualified candidate. If there are insufficient volunteers, the Agency will select from among appropriately qualified employees in reverse order of SCD.

- C. Volunteers for non-competitive temporary promotions of more than sixty (60) days, but less than one hundred twenty (120) consecutive days will be solicited from interested and qualified employees who meet minimum OPM qualifications and time-in-grade requirements for the temporary promotion. If there are too many volunteers, selection will be made in descending order using SCD.
- D. If the most senior qualified applicant received the same or a similar opportunity within the last twelve (12) months, he/she will be passed over until all other qualified volunteers have been selected.
- E. In cases where the Agency announces, in advance of the solicitation, that it will not pay travel or per diem expenses, consideration will be given to all qualified employees, including those who are willing to take the detail without these costs.

Section 31.03

- A. In the event that the Agency opts to split a detail between two (2) or more employees, all participating employees shall, if applicable, receive the higher rate for the period of time they perform the higher-level duties even if it is less than one hundred twenty (120) days.

ARTICLE 32: PROBATIONARY EMPLOYEES

Section 32.01

- A. The termination of a probationary employee is not subject to the grievance or arbitration provisions of this Agreement.
- B. Employees in the competitive service serve a probationary period of twelve (12) months. However, a probationary employee may be terminated at any time during the period. During the probationary period, the employee's conduct and performance in fulfilling the duties of their position will be observed, and the employee may be separated from the Service in accordance with law and applicable regulations.

Section 32.02

All notices to separate a probationer will contain a statement concerning the employee's right to appeal, in accordance with law and regulation, to the MSPB, EEOC, or other federal agencies, if the claim is within its jurisdiction.

Section 32.03

Prior to receiving notice of termination, probationary employees may choose, up to the effective date of their termination, to submit a letter reflecting a voluntary resignation.

Section 32.04

If performance issues arise during the probationary period, the supervisor shall raise any such issues with the employee in order to improve the employee's performance.

ARTICLE 33: REASSIGNMENTS

Section 33.01

- A. A “reassignment” is defined as any change from one position to another without promotion or change to a lower grade. The Agency may direct a reassignment as an exception to Section 39.02 below when required by law, regulation, budget, to settle an outstanding EEO or other case, or other legitimate reason.
- B. The parties shall work together to minimize the adverse impact in employees involuntarily reassigned/realigned under this article

ARTICLE 34: WORKERS COMPENSATION

Section 34.01

Employee(s) and/or witness(es) should report all on-the-job injuries immediately or as soon as possible to the Agency.

Section 34.02

The Agency will provide the employee or her/his representative (upon designation by the employee in writing to the supervisor) the proper form(s) in paper or electronic format and assistance required for medical treatment and/or claim for benefits to be filed with the Office of Workers’ Compensation.

Section 34.03

The Agency will provide employees or their representatives (upon designation by the employee in writing to the supervisor) access to documents concerning workers’ compensation benefits available, as well as procedures for filing for benefits.

Section 34.04

At the time an on-the-job injury or illness occurs, the Agency will assist an employee to get necessary emergency or appropriate medical treatment.

Section 34.05

The Department’s OWCP provides guidance when an employee has been on workers’ compensation benefits (OWCP) for over one (1) year with no anticipated return to full duty and have been removed from the agency rolls that they should apply for disability retirement to protect themselves if they lose FECA benefits. We will refer an injured worker to their Benefit/Retirement office for the process of disability retirement.

ARTICLE 35: TELEWORK

Section 35.01

An employee's official duty station is their official workplace. Use of a workplace other than the official workplace requires approval under Agency policy. The Agency encourages the use of alternative workplaces, including telework when consistent with the work to be performed, the mission of the Agency and the needs of the individual employee's organization. Employee participation in the telework program is voluntary, and the Agency shall not compel an employee's participation. The telework program is governed by the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and applicable laws, rules, regulations, and policies consistent with this Agreement.

Section 35.02

Employees may request to telework for up to two (2) days per workweek.

Section 35.03

- A. All employees whose position is eligible for telework may apply for telework unless they:
 1. Have been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five (5) days for any calendar year; or
 2. Have been officially disciplined for violation of subpart (G) of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography on a federal computer or while performing Federal Government duties; or
 3. Have less than a fully successful (satisfactory) performance rating at any time during the rating period and have been formally notified.
- B. An employee who wishes to telework will initiate a request to telework through their immediate supervisor and may do so at any time. The employee will submit the appropriate forms and take the required annual training to participate in the telework program.
- C. Upon receipt of the request, the supervisor or designee will evaluate the employee's and position's suitability for participating in the program. The supervisor will review the application form with the employee and will approve or disapprove the telework request within seven (7) calendar days. In the case of the denial of a request to telework, the supervisor will provide a written explanation on the form of the reasons for the denial.
- D. If approved, the employee and supervisor or designee will enter into a telework agreement. The Agency will retain the completed and signed agreement. A copy will be provided to the employee.

Section 35.04

- A. Telework policies and procedures may have no impact on the current work schedule provisions governing covered employees. Employee teleworkers will work tours of duty that are consistent with their tour of duty at their Agency workplace. Supervisors or designees will approve telework schedules in advance to ensure that the employee's time and attendance can be properly certified and to preclude any liability for premium or overtime pay. An employee already on a flexible schedule may vary their start and/or stop time with supervisory approval. An employee working a compressed schedule (e.g., 5-4-9, 4-10) is not eligible to vary start and/or stop times.
- B. Time and attendance reporting procedures will remain the same for employees who telework. Employees will document days and hours spent teleworking by entering the appropriate codes on their electronic time sheet each pay period.
- C. During the regular duty hours, absences from the alternative work site (e.g., visits on official business to attend meetings or use of annual or sick leave) will be coordinated with and approved by the supervisor or designee at the earliest time practicable.
- D. All rules governing premium pay apply to teleworkers. Employees will receive overtime or compensatory time off, when ordered and approved in advance, by the supervisor or designee, in accordance with Article 25: Overtime and Compensatory Time.
- E. Employees are expected to attend training, mandatory meetings, meetings where in-person attendance is essential, and workshops at the office or other sites regardless of whether they are working within their approved telework location.

Section 35.05

- A. Intermittent (ad hoc) telework is a flexible workplace arrangement that may be approved on a short-term basis for a work situation of limited duration (one (1) to five (5) days) when an employee has a telework agreement in place. Intermittent telework must be approved in advance by the supervisor or designee. Examples of intermittent telework include telework as a result of inclement weather, special work assignments or emergency.

Section 35.06

- A. Employees who are approved to be teleworkers will use a government-issued laptop computer, configured in accordance with specifications established by the Agency, if available. Agency-provided equipment must not be altered or upgraded in any way except by Information Technology staff. The Agency will not be liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property while the employee is working at the telework site. Employees will comply with the applicable Agency Information Technology Policies when working at a telework site.
- B. If there is a problem with the hardware or software applications on the teleworking equipment, the employee is required to contact their immediate supervisor or designee to report the problem. Support may be provided via the telephone during normal business hours. Teleworkers should not expect after-hours and weekend support. If the problem cannot be resolved over the telephone, the employee is required to bring the equipment on-site the next workday so that the problem can be resolved.

- C. Approved teleworkers will be required to obtain and maintain internet access through an internet service provider. Access and use of any Agency equipment, software, or internet connection is subject to applicable Agency policies.
- D. Employees need to ensure that they can receive telephone calls while working at the telework site, including during those times the employee is utilizing the internet access. While teleworking, an employee must be able to be reached at the phone number provided in the telework agreement during their hours of duty.
- E. Teleworkers will ensure that all Agency records and information (electronic and hard copy) are protected under the terms of the Privacy Act and Agency information security requirements.
- F. Teleworkers are responsible for taking reasonable precautions in preventing any loss or damage to equipment issued to them.

Section 35.07

If an employee is teleworking and the regular duty station closes due to an emergency situation on the telework day, the teleworker will continue to work until the end of the scheduled workday. If there is an emergency situation (e.g., inclement weather or power outage) at the telework site when the employee is teleworking and the employee's main office is closed due to the emergency situation, the employee may request Weather and Safety Leave in accordance with the Administrative Leave Act of 2016. If there is an emergency situation at the telework site when the employee is teleworking and the employee's main office remains open, the employee may return to the main office, request an alternative work location or request appropriate leave. Whether an emergency situation exists is the exclusive determination of the Agency.

Section 35.08

Telework may not be revoked arbitrarily (i.e., for reasons other than listed in 36.03 (A) 1-3). If an employee's telework agreement is revoked, they may appeal the decision to the MBDA Chief Operating Officer with a copy to the Labor Relations Specialist assigned to MBDA. If the revocation is sustained, the Chief Operating Officer will provide their rationale for the decision.

Section 35.09

Application of this telework agreement may vary by unit or location, but related policies must support efficiency of service. The number of telework days per week will not vary by unit or location unless renegotiated by mutual consent of both parties.

Section 35.10

Employees understand they are covered under the Federal Employee's Compensation Act if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the regular office or the telework site. The employee agrees to notify the supervisor as soon as practicable usually within twenty-four (24) hours of any accident or injury that occurs at the telework site and to complete any required forms. The supervisor or designee will investigate such a report as required by the regulations of the Office of Worker's Compensation and Agency Policy. The government will not be liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property during the course of performance of official duties or while using government equipment in the employee's telework site, except to the extent the government is held liable by Federal Tort Claims Act claims or claims arising under the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act. Matters arising under this section are not grievable nor are they arbitrable under this Agreement.

ARTICLE 36: OUTSIDE WORK OR ACTIVITY

Section 36.01

- A. Outside work or activities are permitted unless they are prohibited by statute or regulation or would require (to avoid a conflict of interest) the employee's disqualification from matters central or critical to the performance of his or her official duties.
- B. Employees shall obtain written approval from a DOC or MBDA ethics Counselor before engaging in outside paid or unpaid work with a prohibited source as defined by 5 C.F.R. § 2635.203.
- C. Employees will not engage in any outside work or activity in which they are identified as a DOC or MBDA employee without obtaining prior approval from MBDA. All outside work must take place outside official duty hours or while on authorized leave.
- D. Teaching, speaking, and writing as part of outside work or activity must be in compliance with 5 C.F.R. § 2635.807; § 3501.105; the current DOC Ethics guide and MBDA Ethics policies; and this Agreement. Employees are encouraged to consult with the MBDA ethics counselor prior to engaging in teaching, speaking, and writing work or activity.
- E. Should the Agency issue any supplemental standards, it will notify the Union and negotiate as appropriate prior to effectuating the proposed standards.
- F. Consistent with 5 C.F.R. § 2635, disciplinary action will not be taken against an employee who has engaged in outside work or activity in good faith reliance upon the advice of the ethics official, provided that the employee, in seeking such advice, has made full disclosure of all relevant circumstances.
- G. If it is later determined the previously approved outside work or activity is in violation of law or regulation or it is a conflict of interest, the employee will be given notice in writing to cease such employment immediately, but no later than fifteen (15) calendar days from receipt of the notice.
- H. Upon notification of a violation of a prohibition contained in law, or the determination that relevant facts were withheld by the employee at the time the employee sought ethics advice (and the non-disclosed facts would have resulted in different advice provided to the employee), the employee will immediately cease the outside work or activity.

- I. When an employee knows or believes a change in the assigned duties or other changes may have a material impact on the advice previously provided by the ethics counselor, the employee shall submit an updated request for approval to engage in the outside work or activity within seven (7) calendar days. And if the request is disapproved, the employee will cease such work or outside activity immediately, but not later than fifteen (15) calendar days.

Section 36.02

- A. The Agency will approve or disapprove an employee's request to engage in outside work or activity as soon as practicable, but not later than fourteen (14) calendar days from receipt of the employee's request or fourteen (14) calendar days from the receipt of additional information requested by the Agency. If a request is disapproved, the Agency will provide the employee with a written narrative explanation, setting forth the reason(s) for the disapproval. The written narrative explanation is in addition to the MBDA Ethics form. If a response is not received within the period prescribed, the request will be considered denied and be subject to the negotiated grievance procedure.
- B. A denial of a request to engage in outside work or activity may be grieved in accordance with this Agreement.

ARTICLE 37: TRAVEL AND PER DIEM

Section 37.01

- A. The Agency agrees to schedule travel during the regular work hours and workweek of the employee, to the maximum extent practicable. Employees may travel outside of their regular work schedule if they so choose and if authorized by the Agency. The time spent traveling outside the established workday results in the travel being considered hours of work for non-exempt employees, and is compensable, if it meets the appropriate provisions of Title 29 of the FLSA (e.g., travel results from an event which cannot be scheduled or controlled administratively).
- B. Employees traveling on their own time, at their option, are responsible for any additional costs resulting from travel deviations.

Section 37.02

If circumstances require an employee's attendance at a temporary duty station at a time too early to permit travel on that day during the employee's regularly scheduled working hours, the employee may, with supervisory approval, travel during regularly scheduled hours on the preceding day. With supervisory approval, if the preceding day is a non-workday, an employee may travel during the regularly scheduled hours on the last workday preceding the non-workday. If an employee chooses to do so, subsistence reimbursement and use of the government travel card will be limited to what the employee would have been entitled to if traveling on a non-workday.

Section 37.03

- A. Employees who are unable to return from temporary duty stations during normal duty hours may, with supervisory approval, return that evening or the following day during normal duty hours. An employee electing to travel the next day should return at the earliest practicable opportunity during the regularly scheduled hours of work.
- B. If the scheduling of a meeting is within the control of the Agency, and it is administratively feasible, the Agency will attempt to reschedule the meeting to avoid required travel on non-workdays. Emergency travel can be required on non-workdays.

Section 37.04

If employees are required to travel, the Agency will provide employees with as much advance notice as reasonably possible.

Section 37.05

In cases of emergency travel, an employee is expected to use the government-issued individual travel card to cover necessary official travel expenses. The Agency will accommodate a traveler who does not have a travel card through a cash advance or other government-provided means to avoid having an employee use personal funds to cover official travel expenses.

Section 37.06

- A. The Agency agrees to reimburse employees when in a travel status for authorized expenses incurred by them in the discharge of their official duties to the extent allowable by law and government-wide regulation.
- B. Official travel generally begins when the employee leaves home, the office, or other authorized point of departure and ends when the employee returns home, to the office, or the other authorized point of departure.
- C. A per diem allowance will not be allowed for travel within the employee's commuting area.

Section 37.07

When a privately owned vehicle is used for official business, the employee providing such automobile will be reimbursed in accordance with government travel regulations. In no case may an employee be required to use her/his privately owned vehicle in connection with official business.

Section 37.08

When an employee in a travel status becomes ill and is expected to remain so for any significant length of time, the Agency will cover all normal travel expenses in connection with returning that employee to her/his normal post-of-duty area as promptly as possible.

Section 37.09

- A. Time spent traveling will be considered hours of work and therefore compensable for employees non-exempt from the FLSA if:
 - 1. An employee is required to travel during regular working hours;
 - 2. An employee is required to drive a vehicle or perform other work while traveling;
 - 3. An employee is required to travel as a passenger on a one (1)-day assignment away from the official duty station; or
 - 4. An employee is required to travel as a passenger on an overnight assignment away from the official duty station during hours on non-workdays that correspond to the employee's regular working hours.
- B. Time spent in a travel status away from the official duty station for employees exempt from the FLSA shall be deemed employment only when:
 - 1. It is within her/his regularly scheduled administrative workweek, including regular overtime work; or
 - 2. The travel:
 - a. Involves the performance of work while traveling;
 - b. Is incident to travel that involves the performance of work while traveling (e.g., deadhead travel in order to drive an empty truck back to the point of origin); or
 - 3. The travel results from an event that could not be scheduled or controlled administratively, including travel by an employee to such an event and the return of such employee from such an event to her/his official duty station (e.g., training scheduled solely by a private firm or job-related court appearance required by a court subpoena).

Section 37.10

- A. A copy of official MBDA travel regulations and/or guidelines and GSA travel regulations will be made accessible to employees on the Agency's Intranet site. These guidelines will include the appropriate use of government credit cards. All such regulations and guidelines will be explained to the employees upon request. The Agency agrees to provide the Union notice of changes to government travel regulations in accordance with Article 9: Mid-term Negotiations.

Section 37.11

- A. If an employee's position requires travel, the employee should consult their supervisor, sign up for associated training, and apply for a work travel credit card. The agency does not approve the employee's application for credit.

ARTICLE 38: CONTRACTING OUT AND WORK JURISDICTION

Section 38.01

The Agency's contracting-out practices will conform to applicable law, rule and government-wide regulations.

Section 38.02

If the Agency decides to contract out work that may result in the loss of work normally performed by bargaining unit employees, which is not otherwise covered by OMB Circular No. A-76, the Agency will notify National NFFE and bargain to the extent required by law and this Agreement.

- A. The Agency shall provide NFFE a copy of each Request for Proposal (RFP) within fifteen (15) days of issuance for any solicitation of services that may result in the loss of work normally performed by bargaining unit employees, which is not otherwise covered by A-76.

ARTICLE 39: TRAINING

Section 39.01

- A. The Agency agrees to provide employees with training necessary to assist employees in the performance of official duties, subject to budgetary and workload considerations.
- B. The Agency recognizes that training for staff consists of participation in conferences, workshops and other activities in which employees share their own work and are exposed to the current scholarship in their fields. Therefore, the Agency encourages employees to participate in professional activities of their occupation. The Agency will consider requests for duty time, use of earned credit hours or compensatory time, as appropriate, to participate in training, professional meetings, professional development, conferences, or continuing education courses.

Section 39.02

Supervisors encourage employees to develop a written Individual Development Plan (IDP) to enhance the employee's development in her/his current position. This plan will identify development needs and suggested activities to meet those needs. Such activities may include formal classroom training, on-the-job training, self-study, developmental job assignments, and other activities. When working with the employee in preparing the employee's IDP and at other times, the supervisor will counsel employees and provide feedback concerning their goals, objectives, knowledge and skills, and development activities. When an employee learns of a training opportunity in which they are interested, the employee should discuss the opportunity with the supervisor.

Section 39.03

This section addresses training courses/conferences requests not specifically related to an employee's position or IDP but furthering an Agency goal. When budgetary and workload considerations permit employee training, the Agency will consider such factors in selection of training and attendees, including but not limited to:

- A. Workload and mission requirements;
- B. Whether an employee has made a request or requests for particular training or to attend a training conference;
- C. The value of the conference/course offering to the employee and employing organization;
- D. The extent to which the employee has not had the opportunity to attend similar course/conferences in the past;
- E. Whether the employee is an officer or member of the organization presenting the conference/course;
- F. The extent to which the employee can share/disseminate materials and information from the conference/course upon returning to the duty station, through formal and informal channels.

Section 39.04

- A. Employees have an individual responsibility for researching training opportunities that can increase their potential or enhance their opportunity for advancement.
- B. When new technology or equipment is introduced that creates the need for different knowledge, skills, or abilities, the Agency agrees to offer training to those employees affected, within budgetary limitations. In the event the Agency introduces new technology and the Agency has determined training is necessary, if the Agency does not provide training, employees shall not be assessed on competencies related to the use of such technology, until training is received.

Section 39.05

- A. All training and all related expenses should be submitted by the employee, approved by the supervisor, and authorized within a reasonable amount of time, generally at least thirty (30) calendar days in advance of the starting date of the training. Requests for training should cite appropriate sections of the employee's annual performance appraisal and/or the employee's IDP.
- B. Once an employee is authorized/approved for a training program, the training course/program is a work assignment.
- C. Employees who fail to satisfactorily complete training for which the costs have been approved and authorized by the Agency will reimburse the Agency for all tuition and related expenses that it incurred for such training. If the reason for non-completion of the training is beyond the employee's control, the Agency will waive this requirement.
- D. An employee who is unable to attend training for which he/she has been authorized shall inform the Agency of her/his inability to complete the training as soon as possible after becoming aware of the impediment to attendance. If the Agency is unable to obtain a refund of fees paid or substitute another employee, Section 50.05(C) above applies.

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT

BETWEEN

National Environmental Satellite, Data, and Information Service
National Centers for Environmental Information (NCEI)
Asheville, NC

And

The American Federation of Government Employees, Local 446

This Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) is entered into by the National Environmental Satellite, Data, and Information Service (NESDIS), National Centers for Environmental Information (NCEI) (the Employer), Asheville, NC and The American Federation of Government Employees, Local 446 (the Union), collectively known as the "Parties." This MOA is for the purposes of concluding mid-term bargaining over Article 39: Telework of the Parties Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA). This MOA will serve as an amendment to the Parties CBA dated July 31, 2019. Article 39 of the Parties CBA is hereby amended and replaced in its entirety by the following. All other Articles and Provisions of the CBA, which are not amended below, remain in full effect:

Article 39: Telework

Section 1. Policy

The Parties agree bargaining unit employees may telework consistent with the agency's telework policy subject to mission requirements and applicable law, government-wide rules and regulations. As of the Effective Date of this Agreement, the Parties will follow the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan, dated November 4, 2021, with the clarifications listed in Section 3.

Section 2. Scope

This article does not cover remote work, sometimes referred to as 100% or full-time telework; or situational telework as a result of an evacuation order.

Section 3. Clarifications to 2021 NOAA Telework Plan

A. Teleworkers and Non-Teleworkers Shall be Treated the Same for Certain Purposes:

1. Periodic appraisals of job performance of employees;

2. Training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reduction in grade, retaining, and removing employees;
3. Work requirements and/or developmental assignments;
4. Other acts involving managerial discretion.

B. Maximum Amount of Teleworking

1. In accordance with OMB duty station requirements, teleworking employees will be required to report to the Veach-Baley Federal Building duty station at least twice each pay period in order to stay within locality pay requirements for Asheville, NC. Therefore, the maximum number of telework days allowed are eight days per pay period. Scheduled leave and holiday time off can preclude the twice each pay period reporting requirement. The twice each pay period reporting requirement may be temporarily suspended in accordance with the “Temporary Telework Arrangements” section of the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan.
2. For telework eligible employees, supervisors may impose reasonable, business-related limitations on the frequency of telework and such limitations will be based on job functions, documented misconduct, or documented performance issues and other mission-related priorities. Telework suitability based on job functions will treat employees with similar work functions the same.
3. Mere managerial preferences alone are not grounds to deny an employee the maximum allowed days of telework described in B.1.

Section 4. Updates to NOAA Telework Implementation Plan

Upon written request by either Party, the Parties agree to engage in bargaining consistent with Article 9 (Mid-Term Bargaining) should there be any changes to the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan. In accordance with Article 9, written requests to bargain must be submitted within 5 business days following receipt of a new or revised NOAA Telework Implementation Plan.

Once all signatures have been obtained below, this MOA will be forwarded by Management for Agency Head Review (AHR) consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 7114. Once the Agreement has been approved by the Agency Head or absent disapproval by the Agency Head, 31 days after execution, the Agreement shall become effective. If the MOA fails AHR the parties may attempt to renegotiate the MOA. This MOA will remain in place throughout the full term of the CBA, including any rollover, or until renegotiated.

Agency –

Please accept this letter as AFGE Local 3908’s official position regarding the proposed 2023 Telework and Remote Work Policy. This memorandum is intended as an update to the Union’s original counterproposal, dated February 23, 2023, initially provided in response to the Agency’s Notification of NOAA Telework and Remote Work Policies issued to the Union on February 10, 2023.

Union Position

In accordance with Article 28 of the 2021 Collective Bargaining Agreement between AFGE Local 3908 and the GLERL (CBA), the Union refuses to mutually consent to open the CBA to Mid-Term Negotiations regarding the Agency’s proposed 2023 Telework and Remote Work Policy.

Union Argument

The Union contends that the 2021 Telework Policy is incorporated into the CBA under Article 19, Section 3(A)(4) and 3(B)(4). The pertinent sections state: “[e]mployees who are telework eligible and have a telework agreement in place, will follow the telework policy and agreement as those employees may have to continue work from the telework location.” (emphasis added).

The CBA was implemented in April 2021, therefore telework policy in Article 19 is the 2018 Telework Policy, as described in the October 2018 Telework Implementation Plan which also covers Remote Work. Therefore, the 2018 Telework Policy was originally incorporated into the CBA. Since any change to the 2018 Telework Policy would be a change to the CBA, the parties must mutually agree to Mid-Term Negotiations under Article 28.

On November 8, 2021, the Agency notified the Union of an intent to implement the 2021 NOAA Telework Implementation Plan. It is the Union’s position that the 2021 Telework Policy was not properly negotiated. The 2021 Telework Policy should have been negotiated under Article 28, not under Article 9, and implemented only after Mid-Term Negotiations had concluded. However, since the Union did not object, and the policy has been in place since 2021, the Union accepts the 2021 changes to the 2018 Telework Policy as a past practice.

Therefore, the 2021 Telework Policy is incorporated into the CBA. The Union contends that Article 28 – Changes and Amendments to the Agreement controls because the proposed 2023 Telework and Remote Work Policy would substantially alter and contradict the explicit terms of

American Federation of Government Employees
Local 3908
P.O. Box 652
Saline, MI 48176
www.afge3908.org

the CBA. As such, the parties are obligated to mutually consent to the opening of the agreement for the purpose of amending any portion.

At this time, the Union does not consent to opening of the CBA for the purpose of amending the current 2021 Telework Policy. As such, the Union requests that the Agency continue applying the 2021 Telework Policy to all Bargaining Unit Employees.

Respectfully, on behalf of AFGE Local 3908,

Article 1: General Provisions

Section 1. Parties

This Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA) is entered into by and between the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Alaska Fisheries Science Center and Northwest Fisheries Science Center, hereinafter referred to as "Management," and the International Federation of Professional and Technical Engineers (IFPTE), Local 8A, Fisheries Chapter as the exclusive representative of all full-time and part-time non-supervisory personnel of the Centers, hereinafter referred to as the "Union." The "Union" and "Management" are collectively referred to as the "Parties."

Employees excluded from the Unit are vessel employees, employees of the Auke Bay Laboratories, management officials, supervisors, guards, persons engaged in Federal personnel work in other than purely clerical capacity and/or short term temporary employees (less than 90-day appointment), as described in 5 U.S.C. §7112 (b)(2), (3), (4), (6), and (7).

Section 2. Purpose and Intent

This Agreement has been established under the authority of Title 5 of the United States Code, Chapter 71 (the Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute, or the Statute). In the Statute, Congress finds that the recognition of labor organizations and collective bargaining safeguards the public interest and contributes to the effective conduct of public business. Per the Statute, the public interest demands the highest standards of employee performance and the continued development and implementation of modern and progressive work practices to facilitate and improve employee performance and the efficient accomplishment of the operations of the Federal Government.

This Agreement has been made in the spirit of mutual cooperation. It is the intent of the Parties that Labor-Management conflicts arising during the life of the Agreement be resolved promptly and informally whenever possible. To that end, the Parties will make every effort to expeditiously bring such problems or disputes to the attention of the Union or Management at the lowest possible level.

It is the intent and purpose of both Parties of this Agreement to foster an understanding of personnel policies, procedures and practices, and matters affecting the conditions of employment; and to foster amicable discussion of matters of mutual interest to the Parties. The Parties hereby agree that the Labor-Management relationship and all matters relative thereto will be consistent with the provisions and intent of the Statute as well as all applicable laws, rules, and regulations, and will contribute to an effective and efficient workforce and work environment.

By endorsement of this Agreement, the Parties affirm their commitment to the success of the NOAA mission of science, service, and stewardship, and affirm their commitment to the aspirational values of safety, integrity, teamwork, excellence, and inclusion.

Section 3. Common Interests

Management and the Union agree to support certain common interests. These interests include the following:

- 1) To help prevent hazards to life, health, and property;
- 2) To constantly strive to optimize the quality and quantity of work produced by the organizations involved;
- 3) To maintain and improve the quality of superior employee communications on technical and personnel matters of concern;
- 4) To foster cooperation which will increase the efficiency of all employees;
- 5) To promote the judicious use of leave by every employee;
- 6) To address the conditions which prompt grievances and misunderstandings;
- 7) To improve employment conditions through suggestions and resolutions of problems;
- 8) To cultivate strong morale of all employees in the service;
- 9) A continued effort to conserve materials, supplies, and equipment used by all activities covered by this agreement; and
- 10) To make the organizations a workplace of choice, for personnel with AFSC and NWFSC; organizations that care for their people; and organizations that are constantly trying to improve how they conduct business.

Section 4. Time Frames

All time periods specified in this agreement as “days” refers to calendar days. Any time requirements identified in this agreement can be extended by mutual written consent of all parties unless precluded by law, rule or regulation.

Article 2: Mutual Rights and Obligations

Section 1. Management Rights

Chapter 71 of Title 5 USC §7106:

(a) Subject to subsection (b) of this section, nothing in Title 5, Chapter 71 USC, or in this Agreement, shall affect the authority of management --

- (1) to determine the mission, budget, organization, number of employees, and internal security practices of the agency; and
- (2) in accordance with applicable laws--
 - (A) to hire, assign, direct, layoff, and retain employees in the agency, or to suspend, remove, reduce in grade or pay, or take other disciplinary action against such employees;
 - (B) to assign work, to make determinations with respect to contracting out, and to determine the personnel by which agency operations shall be conducted;
 - (C) with respect to filling positions, to make selections for appointments from --
 - (i) among properly ranked and certified candidates for promotion; or
 - (ii) any other appropriate source; and
 - (D) to take whatever actions may be necessary to carry out the agency mission during emergencies.

(b) Nothing in this section shall preclude Management and the Union from negotiating:

- (1) at the election of the agency, on the numbers, types, and grades of employees or positions assigned to any organizational subdivision, work project, or tour of duty, or on the technology, methods, and means of performing work;
- (2) procedures which management officials of the agency will observe in exercising any authority under this section; or
- (3) appropriate arrangements for employees adversely affected by the exercise of any authority under this section by such management officials.

Section 2. Employee Rights

Employees who are adversely affected by the exercise of any management authority identified in Section 1 have the right to seek representation. Specifically, Employees have the right to seek their own representation in a grievance or appellate procedure established by law, rule, or regulation. Employees may be represented by:

- 1) a representative of the Union,
- 2) a private attorney, or
- 3) any other representative of their choosing, except as specified in the grievance and appeals procedures in the Agreement.

Employees shall have the right, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, to organize or join, or to refrain from joining any lawful employee organization. No employee will be required by this agreement to join or remain a member of the union or to pay money to the union except pursuant to a voluntary, written authorization by a member for the payment of dues through payroll deductions. Employees have the right to act for a labor organization in the capacity of a representative and, in that capacity, the right to present the views of the labor organization to Management or otherwise appropriate authorities. Employees have the right to engage in collective bargaining with respect to conditions of employment through representatives chosen by the Employees under this Agreement. Management shall take action, consistent with regulations, as may be required to ensure that no interference, restraint, coercion or discrimination is practiced within the Service to encourage or discourage membership in any employee organization.

Section 3. Employee Participation

Management may make reasonable efforts to involve employees in the development and implementation of personnel policies, practices, and procedures that affect them in their work, improve employee morale, and contribute to the effectiveness of the public service. Management retains the right to make final decisions and issue policy regarding the above, subject to Impact and Implementation required by law and this Agreement.

Section 4. Employee Protections

Management shall not discipline or discriminate against any employee because they have filed a complaint or given testimony under law. Management shall take such action, consistent with regulations, as may be required to ensure this provision is not violated.

No employee shall be precluded from bringing matters of personal concern to the attention of appropriate officials in accordance with applicable law, directive, regulation, or policy of the agency.

The provisions of this article shall not nullify or abridge the rights of employees or the union to grieve or appeal the exercise of the management rights set forth in this article through appropriate channels as provided by law.

Management will not coerce or in any manner require employees to invest their money, donate to charity, or participate in activities, meetings, or undertakings not related to their performance of official duties.

Section 5. Outside Activities

Employees shall have the right to engage in outside activities of their own choosing without being required to report to Management on such activities, except as required by law or regulation. Outside work engaged in by employees must not involve a conflict of interest and must not interfere with or be detrimental to the efficient discharge of the official duties of employees during the hours they are expected to be available to perform the work of the Centers.

Section 6. Non-discrimination

No employee will be discriminated against based on race, color, religion, sex (including sexual harassment and pregnancy discrimination), sexual orientation, gender identity, national origin, age (40 years of age and over), disability (physical or mental), or genetic information. Further, no employee will be discriminated against because the person complained about discrimination, filed a charge of discrimination, or participated in an employment discrimination investigation or lawsuit.

No supervisor or management official will discipline, threaten, harass, or discriminate against an employee who meets with or seeks the advice of a counselor, management official, commission, or representative of the union in accordance with regulations and/or the union contract. Nothing in this provision limits management's right to discipline employees for engaging in misconduct.

Article 3: Representation

Section 1. Exclusive Representation

Management agrees to recognize the Union as the exclusive representative of the employees in the bargaining unit and that the Union is entitled to act for them and negotiate collective bargaining agreements covering all employees in the bargaining unit. The Union will provide to Management a list containing the name, union position (i.e. steward, etc), duty location, email address, and telephone number of those bargaining unit members acting as representatives of the Union and that have the right to use official time as specified in this agreement.

Section 2. Union Representatives

The Union will designate one member of the bargaining unit as the main representative for the Union and one bargaining unit member within each Science Center as their deputy. Other officers, representatives, and stewards will be determined in accordance with union bylaws and relevant federal regulations. The Union may designate a person who is not a member of the bargaining unit to represent them in matters covered by this agreement but will notify Management in advance of its intent to do so. Management may not prevent an employee from taking a position as a union official (president, steward, etc).

Section 3. Union Stewards

The Union will provide to Management the names of those bargaining unit members that are authorized by the Union to act as Stewards. The number of stewards shall be the minimum number required in order to assure that each employee in the bargaining unit shall have ready access. One of the stewards shall be designated as the Chief Steward.

Management agrees that Union Stewards are authorized a reasonable working time during duty hours to participate in matters directly related to the work situation and/or employee grievances, not to exceed a maximum as noted in Article 4 without prior agreement by Management. Management agrees that there shall be no restraint, interference, coercion, or discrimination against the stewards because of the performance of such duties.

Management and the Union mutually recognize the need to use available funds wisely by limiting travel as much as is reasonable while still accomplishing the goals of representation and the exercise of Weingarten Rights. To that end, when Union Stewards engage in representational activities involving bargaining unit members in a separate location, they will use email, telephone conferencing, and video conferencing as much as is feasible. However, both parties acknowledge that travel may be necessary for the appropriate exercise of representational obligations, and that such travel may allow for resolution at the lowest level possible. In such cases if a steward is not available at a unit location and the matter before the steward calls for in-person consultation, and if mutually agreed to by both parties, Management will cover Steward travel as official travel between facilities/office locations of the NWFSC and the AFSC. Management is not responsible for a steward or employees' travel to or from (1) a remote duty station or, (2) a long-distance teleworking location, to a unit location. If a steward is not able to be physically present when a staff member has requested union representation under their Weingarten Rights, all parties will participate in the meeting via video. If video capability is not available, all parties will participate in the meeting via telephone. For in person meetings, either party may choose to have some of their participants join remotely via video or telephone.

Section 4. Formal Meetings

Consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 7114 (a)(2)((A), the Union will be afforded an opportunity to be represented at any formal discussion between one (1) or more representatives of management and one (1) or more employees or their representatives concerning:

- 1) any grievance (a meeting concerning a grievance is, by definition, a formal discussion), or
- 2) any personnel policy or practice or other general conditions of employment.

The Union shall be given an opportunity to be present at any examination of an employee in the unit by a Management Representative in connection with an investigation, if the employee reasonably believes that the examination may result in disciplinary action against the employee and the employee requests representation. The Union Representative need not be present at routine informational meetings during which no discussion occurs regarding changes in personnel policy or general conditions of employment.

At any examination of an employee as part of an investigation, the Management Representative will explain the purpose of the meeting to the employee prior to the examination. If the employee being interviewed requests representation, no further questioning will take place until the employee has been given a reasonable amount of time, normally three (3) days, to contact an appropriate representative, unless there are extenuating circumstances.

For formal discussions, the Union will be given advance notice of the meeting via email by contacting the designated Union Representative, normally within three (3) days in advance of the discussion except in emergency situations. The meeting will be scheduled at the earliest time practical that allows for union participation/representation as needed.

At those meetings where the Union is represented, Management will acknowledge the attendance of the Union Representative at the start of the meeting. Furthermore, Management will permit the Union Representative to ask questions, and to present a brief statement before the end of the meeting outlining the Union position concerning the issues. The Union Representative will refrain from activities designed to disrupt the meeting. All issues to be discussed at the meeting by Management will be listed in a written agenda, where practicable, which will be forwarded to the Union at the same time that the Union receives prior notice of the meeting.

Section 5. Employee Lists

Management will make every effort, on a monthly basis, to provide the Union with a list of new employees who are covered by the bargaining agreement. The Union will be afforded the opportunity to meet with new employees.

Management of each Science Center agrees to provide the Union a list of all employees covered by the bargaining agreement by March 1st of each year, and upon request within 10 days. The list will include the names, position titles, and duty station for all bargaining unit employees.

Article 4: Official Time

Section 1. Allocation and Procedures

Consistent with 5 USC Section 7131, Management agrees to allow Union Representatives a reasonable amount of official time to complete their representational duties. Official time may only be used on the days and during the times that a local union official would otherwise be in a duty status.

Official Time will normally be limited to the following amounts:

- 1) Main Representative – up to 10% of their time (8 hrs per pay period)
- 2) Deputy – up to 10% of their time (8 hrs per pay period)
- 3) Chief Steward – up to 20% of their time (16 hours per pay period)
- 4) Stewards – up to 10% of their time (8 hours per pay period)
- 5) Negotiating team members – up to 10% of their time (8 hours per pay period)

If additional official time is required for a given pay period, the Union Representative will normally request and receive approval in advance from their supervisor (and cc the Management Representative) for the use of official time. The request shall include an explanation of the circumstances establishing the need for additional time. In the event the supervisor is unavailable, the Union Representative shall contact the Management Representative. If unable to locate the Management Representative or in emergency situations, the Union Representative may proceed to use a reasonable amount of official time as provided by this contract and provide to the supervisor a record of the amount of official time used. If the supervisor denies the request for additional official time, the Union Representative may appeal to the Management Representative.

Management will make every effort to accommodate official time requests as the mission allows. Management will render a decision as promptly as possible. The supervisor or designee shall propose an alternate time in those instances where requested official time is denied.

Section 2. Allowable Use

Official time may only be used on the days and during the times that a local union official would be otherwise in a duty status. The term official time shall include the purposes set forth in 5 U.S.C. § 7131, as well as other representational activities including:

- 1) Attendance at formal meetings or proceedings;

- 2) Preparation time for meetings involving unfair labor practice charges or unit clarification petitions;
- 3) Representation of employees in disciplinary matters in which employees are entitled to representation;
- 4) Presentation of appeals in connection with statutory or regulatory procedures in which the Union is a party or is designated as the representative, (e.g., MSPB, EEOC, Federal Service Impasse Panel proceedings);
- 5) Attendance at management examinations of any bargaining unit employee, in connection with an investigation at which an employee requests such representation;
- 6) Attendance at grievance meetings and arbitration hearings, including preparation;
- 7) Attendance at meetings of committees or workgroups when Management has given authorization for union attendance;
- 8) Attendance at negotiations as a member of the negotiations team;
- 9) To confer with employees with respect to any matters for which remedial relief may be sought pursuant to the terms of this agreement wherein the employee has elected to have a representative and is entitled to such representation;
- 10) To complete research in preparation for labor-management related meetings, negotiations, and hearings;
- 11) To prepare and maintain records and reports required of the Union and its representatives by any Federal Agency;
- 12) To respond to Congressional contacts relative to representational matters;
- 13) Time spent in preparing replies to management proposals and proposed management policy changes submitted to the Union for comment or considerations;
- 14) Time spent in labor-management meetings, or special projects mutually agreed to by the parties; and
- 15) Attendance at approved training to develop knowledge, skills, and abilities of Union Representatives that support better representation for employees and improved efficiency and effectiveness in representational rights.

Travel will not be considered as official time. When travel is required in order to participate in representational duties, the travel will be considered duty time.

Section 3. Recording

Official time recording is a bilateral system set up to meet the Office of Personnel Management requirement that Management maintain a record-keeping system of official time used in the performance of representational duties. Union officials and representatives are responsible for correctly recording and reporting any use of official time in the electronic time and attendance system (i.e. WebTA). The following are examples of codes and categories that should be used in completing their time and attendance:

35- Base/Negotiations/Reopen - ex. Negotiating a CBA

36- Base/Midterm Negotiations – ex. Negotiating provisions of a CBA, to include issues raised during the life of the agreement.

37- Base/Labor-Management

38 – Base/Grievances/Appeals

Management will provide the Union with written notification whenever these codes and categories are updated/revised.

Section 4. Employee Use

Employees covered by this agreement will be accorded reasonable duty time to consult with a Union Representative for representational purposes or for representing themselves consistent with the terms of this agreement and applicable regulations and law. This includes time for preparation, attendance (at meetings and/or hearings), and travel of the employee for matters such as grievance/arbitration, FLRA, MSPB, EEO, or other disciplinary actions, adverse action proceedings, and ULP charges and/or complaints. Travel costs related to these activities will be borne by Management. The employee will make every reasonable effort to request and have advance approval of such use of duty time. The employee will continue to administer and control their work-load in a manner that is in the best interest of the Service.

Section 5. Limitations on use

Internal union business will be conducted on non-duty time. The term internal union business shall include the purposes set forth in 5 USC § 7131(b), including such actions as the solicitation of membership or election of Union officials.

It is understood that nothing in this agreement is intended to limit the statutory rights to official time provided pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 7131 or any other statute or regulation.

Article 5: Mid-term and Impact and Implementation Bargaining

Section 1. Rights and Obligations of the Parties

With the exception of changes mandated by law, rule, regulation, or by direction from higher authority; or changes flowing from the introduction of new technology; all matters covered by this Agreement will not be subject to change during the term of the agreement, absent mutual consent of the Parties. When, because of mandated changes or the introduction of new technology, there is a need to reopen existing articles or add new articles, the procedures in this article will be followed. The procedures in this article will also be used when there is a change in working conditions (non-mandated changes), and there is not a specific process included in another article. Neither the Union nor Management shall waive any statutory rights during this process.

In this regard, the Agency has the sole right to make changes in the exercise of its management rights pursuant to 5 U.S.C. §7106, or for any other reason associated with the accomplishment of its mission. However, the Agency does recognize its obligation, consistent with applicable laws, rules, and regulations, to notify the Union of such changes and to negotiate, upon request of the Union, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. §7106 (b) (2) and (3). These changes may be Agency-initiated and/or may result from implementation of future laws, Department-wide or Agency regulations, Department-wide or Agency directives, Department-wide or Agency policies and government-wide regulations, as deemed necessary or appropriate by the Agency.

Section 2. Negotiations

The negotiation of procedures and appropriate arrangements, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. §7106(b)(2) and (3), of local-level changes will be conducted and/or facilitated by the Management Representative (or designee) and the applicable Chapter President (or designee).

Section 3. Applicable Negotiation Procedures

The procedures contained in this section shall constitute the ground rules for all negotiations under this article.

- 1) Notification Procedure. In issuing, revising or canceling rules, and regulations relating to personnel policy, practices, procedures, and matters affecting working conditions, the Employer shall give due regard to the obligations imposed by applicable laws, rules, regulations, and this Agreement. Before making changes to bargaining unit employees' conditions of employment, or otherwise changing personnel policy, practices or working conditions, the Agency shall provide the Union with written notice of the proposed change(s). Such notice will be transmitted by email. All other correspondence under this article shall be provided to the Union using similar means. The Union will provide the Agency with any response(s) in a similar manner. The Union's response shall be signed by the appropriate official as provided in Section 2 of this article. Specific procedures to be used pursuant to this article are as follows:

- a) The Agency will provide written notice to the Union of the Agency's intent to make a change(s) of bargaining unit members' conditions of employment (that are not otherwise covered by the parties agreement) once the Agency has made a final decision to implement the proposed change(s).
- b) The Union will have seven (7) days to advise the Agency, in writing, of the Union's intent to negotiate over procedures and appropriate arrangements regarding the change pursuant to 5 U.S.C. §7106. After that notice, the Union will then have fourteen (14) additional days to provide the Agency with proposals relating to the impact and implementation of the proposed change. The parties will then schedule a time to begin negotiating within seven (7) days of the Agency's receipt of the Union's proposals.
- c) The Union may request additional information regarding the proposed change(s) and/or to seek clarification of the reasons for the change outlined in the Agency's written notification during the course of negotiations. This information may be provided by documentary record or from a dialogue between the Agency and Union regarding the change(s). During an information request and response, the fourteen (14) days allowed for the Union to provide the Agency with proposals as indicated in Section 3.1.b will be paused.

2) Bargaining Procedure. Upon written notification and proposals being presented as discussed in Section 3 above, the Agency and Union will bargain, as appropriate and in accordance with applicable law, rule and regulation, over procedures and appropriate arrangements for the change(s).

- a) The Agency will provide a site for negotiations. Preferably, negotiations will take place in person when possible, but can be held virtually via video or teleconference if both parties agree. If meeting in person, negotiations will take place at the Alaska Fisheries Science Center (AKFSC), Seattle, WA, with all parties present in person.
- b) The Union will be authorized the same number of bargaining representatives on official time as the Agency has representatives participating in the negotiations. The Agency will not reimburse the Union or pay for travel expenses for union officials attending mid-term bargaining sessions. However, Union Representatives traveling between the NWFSC Seattle offices and the AKFSC Western Regional Center offices for in person meetings with Management, subject to availability, may use Agency vehicles and will be on official time while in transit directly, without detour between the facilities. Eligibility and use of Agency vehicles must be in accordance with DOC Property Management Manual, Chapter 13, and with local office policies for such eligibility and use.

- c) Either party may have a technical expert (TE) present as necessary who can provide information necessary for the successful completion of bargaining. Any TE for the Union may be granted appropriate official time for participation in the bargaining sessions. The Agency will not reimburse or pay for travel expenses for the Union's TE.
- d) Negotiations shall take place as soon as practicable, but no more than seven (7) days after the Union has provided proposals, unless the parties mutually agree to extend the period. Bargaining will occur during regular duty hours, unless otherwise mutually agreed by the Parties. The Parties will endeavor to reach agreement and conclude bargaining within ten (10) days from the start of negotiations, but that period may be extended by mutual agreement of the Parties. However, post implementation bargaining procedures pursuant to Section 4 of this article will apply if the parties are unable to reach agreement prior to the implementation date declared by the Agency.
- e) The Union may raise no additional proposals or subjects of bargaining after submission of its initial proposals except by mutual agreement, or under the post implementation bargaining procedure under Section 4 of this article.

Section 4. Post implementation bargaining

1) Definition. Post implementation bargaining is bargaining procedures and appropriate arrangements after a management-initiated change has been implemented. When the Agency determines that a particular change is necessary or appropriate; in accordance with law, rule or regulation; and must be implemented by a certain date; post implementation procedures will apply if the parties are unable to reach agreement prior to the implementation date of the change.

2) Post Implementation Bargaining Procedure. The Union will be afforded the opportunity to submit bargaining proposals concerning the change for twenty-one (21) days following the date that implementation by the Agency has occurred. The Union shall not file unfair labor practice charges solely over implementation prior to completion of bargaining. However, the Union reserves all other rights pursuant to applicable laws and regulations. Once union proposals have been submitted to the Agency, the procedures in Section 3(2)(d) above will apply.

Section 5. Agency Head Review

Agreements negotiated pursuant to this article will be subject to Agency head review pursuant to 5 USC 7114(c). In the event of disapproval at Agency head review, the Union will have the option of renegotiating the entire midterm matter. The option to renegotiate the entire midterm must be exercised by the Union by notice to the Employer within twenty-one (21) days of notice of disapproval.

Section 6. Good Faith

Both parties to this agreement have the responsibility of conducting their negotiations and consultations in good faith and otherwise in such a manner as will further the purposes of 5 USC 71. They agree to make every reasonable effort to resolve all differences which arise between them in connection with the administration of this agreement.

Article 6: Labor-Management Relations

Section 1. Purpose

The Parties recognize that the negotiation of a formal bargaining agreement is only one element of successful and effective labor-management relations. Open, informal communication is essential to the efficient and effective operation of the Science Centers. Therefore, the Parties agree to meet at least semi-annually for an informal local Labor-Management Relations Roundtable.

The objectives of the local Labor-Management Roundtable are to enhance the quality of work life and to improve the effectiveness of the Centers. The Roundtable is intended to provide a venue for the discussion of concerns of either or both Parties, to allow for the open exchange of information, where such exchange is not prohibited by law, to create opportunities for joint problem-solving, and to discuss and/or collaborate on other matters involving personnel practices, procedures, and/or working conditions. The Parties recognize that the best ideas for improving the way a job is done often come from the people doing the job.

The Parties agree that semi-annual roundtable discussions and the practice of pre-decisional involvement can be beneficial and productive for the Centers and the employees of each Center. The Parties further recognize that pre-decisional involvement (PDI) in decisions which are traditional Management prerogatives may obviate the need for subsequent bargaining over the impact and implementation of such decisions.

The Roundtable will discuss issues of substance and concerns of the Parties in a non-adversarial and informal manner. It is understood by the Parties that the Forum will not be a replacement for negotiations nor an arena to present grievances. However, this should not prohibit the discussion of serious problems that may, in an incidental manner, be covered by an active grievance, or to debrief after a grievance is resolved.

The Parties agree that the Roundtable will meet on a semi-annual basis. Meetings will normally not be more than three (3) hours. The Parties will meet at mutually agreeable times and locations with video conferencing being an option. Union participants will be granted Official Time for these meetings, but each Party is responsible for their own travel if they deem travel necessary.

Section 2. Agency or Departmental Labor-Management Forums

The parties recognize the benefits of previous higher-level Labor-Management Forums, such as at the Agency or Department level. While there are no such Forums as of this writing, the Parties agree that the establishment of such Forums and the participation by IFPTE Local 8A NOAA Fisheries Chapter representatives in such Forums would be to the benefit of the Science Centers and to the benefit of NOAA Fisheries more broadly. Nothing in this article shall preclude the Union from involvement in such Forums, in accordance with any future executive order.

Article 7: Discipline

Section 1. Policy

Management shall determine when the need arises for disciplinary or adverse actions. Disciplinary actions and adverse actions will be taken in accordance with applicable laws, rules, and regulations in effect at the time of the action. The specific penalty for an instance of misconduct shall be tailored to the facts and circumstances of the situation. This article applies to all employees in the Bargaining Unit regardless of tenure who have completed the applicable probationary or trial period, as appropriate.

Management agrees that discipline will be administered in a fair and impartial manner and that no employee will be discharged or otherwise disciplined except as provided by appropriate regulations and be taken only for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the service. The goal of discipline is not to punish the employee, but to encourage acceptable conduct and work habits.

Disciplinary conversations and meetings will be conducted in a private manner so as to avoid embarrassment to the employee.

Section 2. General Provisions

- 1) For purposes of this Agreement, disciplinary and adverse actions taken in accordance with Title 5 U.S.C. Chapter 75 and their implementing regulations at 5 CFR § 752 will be processed in accordance with the procedures contained in this article. Days referenced in this article are calendar days.
- 2) A disciplinary action, for the purpose of this article, is defined as a Reprimand or a Suspension of fourteen (14) days or less.
- 3) An adverse action, for the purpose of this article, is defined as a Removal, a Suspension for more than fourteen (14) days, a Reduction in Grade, a Reduction in Pay, or a Furlough of thirty (30) days or less.
- 4) This article applies to employees who have completed their probationary or trial period except to the extent prohibited by law.
- 5) No employee will be the subject of a disciplinary or adverse action except for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the Federal service.
- 6) Counseling and warnings whether oral or written are not considered disciplinary actions. Counseling and warnings will inform an employee of expectations.

Section 3. Employee Rights

At a meeting between an employee and Management during which there is an inquiry, examination, or investigation that has the potential to lead to disciplinary action, the employee has the right to request union representation. If such a request is made, a reasonable amount of time will be allowed to obtain a representative.

Section 4. Representation

Upon the issuance of a disciplinary or proposed disciplinary action, employees may subsequently consult with their representative.

Section 5. Informal Discipline: Counseling/Warning

Informal discipline includes counseling and warnings are not formal disciplinary actions to which the procedures in this article apply. Counseling and warnings, which may be oral or written, may be used when an employee's conduct or performance is less than acceptable and it is likely that an informal action will result in improvement. Such actions may be considered, if documented, when determining appropriate formal discipline should the employee engage in future misconduct.

Written counseling and warning, or the documentation of oral counseling or warning, will not be made part of an employee's electronic Official Personnel File (eOPF), but may be maintained by the employee's immediate supervisor and will be destroyed no later than one year after the date of issuance provided there have been no further incidents.

Section 6. Reprimands

1. A reprimand will be documented in a letter to the employee. The letter will specifically explain the reason(s) supporting the reprimand. Where Management desires future corrective action or behavior on the part of the employee receiving the letter, they will outline specific expectations for future behavior or conduct.
2. A reprimand shall inform the employee of their appeal/grievance rights as required by law.
3. A reprimand will be placed in the employee's electronic Official Personnel Folder (eOPF) on the temporary side for a period of not more than two (2) years. An employee may request removal of the letter of reprimand from their eOPF at any time. Management, at its discretion, may consider whether to remove the reprimand prior to the expiration.
4. An employee has the right to grieve a reprimand in accordance with the negotiated grievance procedure in Article 8 of this agreement.

Section 7. Suspension for Fourteen (14) Days or Less

- 1) When Management proposes to suspend an employee for fourteen (14) days or less, the following procedures will apply:
 - a) Management will provide the employee written notification of the proposed Suspension with a period of 15 days to reply to the proposed action. The proposed notification will contain the reason(s) and specification(s), with Management's rationale that supports the proposed Suspension, and the employee's right to review materials relied upon to support the action. The letter will also include the name of the Deciding Official who will receive the oral and/or written reply. The designated deciding official will be at a higher organizational level than the employee's immediate supervisor. The Deciding Official will only consider the reason(s) and specification(s) outlined in the notice of proposed action and the oral and/or written reply of the employee, and any supporting documentation. In deciding the outcome, the Deciding Official may sustain the proposed Suspension, mitigate it, or take no action.
 - b) An employee has the right to represent themselves in making an oral and/or written reply, or to be represented by a Union Representative, a private attorney, or a personal representative of their choosing. The right to answer orally in person does not include the right to a formal hearing with examination of witnesses. The employee will be allowed a reasonable amount of time to review the materials on which this proposal is based and to prepare and present a reply. Management may disallow an employee representative if that individual will cause a conflict of interest or position, if release from their official position would give rise to unreasonable costs, and/or if the employee's priority work assignments preclude their release to serve as a representative (752 5CFR).
 - c) Should an employee choose to submit a reply, it must be received by the Deciding Official within fifteen (15) days of the employee's receipt of the letter of proposed notification. The employee may request an extension to reply, by submitting a written request to the deciding official, stating the specific reasons within the same fifteen (15) day limit. The deciding official, at their discretion, may grant additional time on a case by case basis. If no timely reply is received, the Deciding Official will issue a decision based on the proposal letter and any supporting documentation.
- 2) If the final decision is a Suspension, the Deciding Official will determine when the Suspension will take effect.
- 3) An employee has the right to grieve a final decision in accordance with the negotiated grievance procedure in Article 8 of this Agreement.

Section 8. Adverse Actions

- 1) An adverse action, for the purpose of this article, is defined as a Removal, a Suspension for more than fourteen (14) days, a Reduction in Grade, a Reduction in Pay, or a Furlough of thirty (30) days or less. A Removal or Reduction in Pay based on unacceptable performance may be taken under this article.
- 2) When Management proposes an adverse action, the following procedures will apply:
 - a) Management will provide the employee with thirty (30) days advance written notification of the proposed adverse action. The proposed notification will contain the reason(s) and specification(s), with Management's rationale that supports the proposed action. The letter will also include the name of the Deciding Official that will receive the oral and/or written reply. The designated deciding official will be at a higher organizational level than the employee's immediate supervisor. The Deciding Official will consider only the reason(s) and specification(s) outlined in the notice of proposed action and the oral and/or written reply of the employee, and any supporting documentation. In deciding, the Deciding Official may sustain the proposed action, mitigate it, or take no action.
 - b) An employee has the right to represent themselves in making an oral and/or written reply, or to be represented by a Union Representative, a private attorney, or a personal representative of their choosing. The right to answer orally in person does not include the right to a formal hearing with examination of witnesses. The employee will be allowed a reasonable amount of time to review the materials on which this proposal is based and to prepare and present a reply. Management may disallow an employee representative if that individual will cause a conflict of interest or position, if release from their official position would give rise to unreasonable costs, and/or if that individual's priority work assignments preclude their release to serve as a representative.
 - c) Should an employee choose to submit a reply, it must be received by the Deciding Official within fifteen (15) days of the employee's receipt of the letter of proposed notification. The employee may request an extension to reply, by submitting a written request to the deciding official, stating the specific reasons within the same fifteen (15) day limit. The deciding official, at their discretion, may grant additional time on a case by case basis. If no timely reply is received, the Deciding Official will issue their decision based on the proposal letter and any supporting documentation.

Section 9. Considerations

In deciding what disciplinary or adverse action is appropriate, Management will give due consideration to the relevance of any mitigating and/or aggravating circumstances consistent with Douglas vs. Veterans Administration, 5 M.S.P.R. 280 (1981).

When appropriate, progressive discipline may be considered. Progressive discipline is the imposition of the least to the most serious disciplinary action applicable to correct the issue or misconduct. However, progressive discipline need not follow any specific sequence of disciplinary actions. Major offenses may be cause for severe action, including removal, irrespective of whether previous disciplinary or adverse actions have been taken against the offending employee.

The factors to be considered during discipline include, but are not limited to,

- 1) the nature and seriousness of the offense and its relation to the employee's duties, position, and responsibilities, including whether the offense was intentional or technical or inadvertent, committed maliciously or for gain, or was frequently repeated;
- 2) the employee's job level and type of employment, including fiduciary role, contacts with the public, and prominence of the position;
- 3) the employee's past disciplinary record;
- 4) the employee's past work record, including length of service, performance on the job, ability to get along with fellow workers, and dependability;
- 5) the effect of the offense upon the employee's ability to perform at a satisfactory level and its effect upon the Management's confidence in the employee's ability to perform assigned duties;
- 6) consistency of the penalty with those imposed upon other employees for the same or similar offenses;
- 7) the consistency of the penalty with any applicable Agency table of penalties;
- 8) the notoriety of the offense or its impact upon the reputation of the Agency;
- 9) the clarity with which the employee was on notice of any rules that were violated in committing the offense or if the employee had been warned about the conduct in question;
- 10) the potential for the employee's rehabilitation;
- 11) mitigating circumstances surrounding the offense, such as unusual job tensions, personality problems, mental impairment, or harassment, or bad faith, malice, or provocation on the part of others involved in the matter; and
- 12) the adequacy and effectiveness of alternative sanctions to deter such conduct in the future by the employee or others.

Section 10. Supporting Documentation

An employee may request a copy of the supporting documentation or material that formed the basis for the reason(s) and specification(s) outlined in the disciplinary or adverse action.

Management reserves the right to remove or redact any material when required by law, such as personally identifiable information (PII).

Nothing in this article shall limit the right of the Union to request information in accordance with 5 USC 7114.

Section 11. Appeals

In the event that Management sustains a disciplinary or adverse action, the final decision letter will include a statement of the employee's right to challenge the action and will provide their appeal rights. Once an employee has elected one of following appellate procedures, their decision is irrevocable, and the employee may not change thereafter to the other procedure.

The employee may elect to challenge the action in one of the ways listed below.

- 1) For Appeals of Reprimands or Suspensions of fourteen (14) days or less, an employee may elect to challenge the action through only one of two procedures. The two procedural options include:
 - a) filing a formal complaint of discrimination under the administrative EEO process pursuant to 29 CFR, Part 1614; or,
 - b) under this Agreement, going directly to Step Two Formal Grievance, as outlined in article 8: Negotiated Grievance Procedures

- 2) For Appeals of a Suspension of more than fourteen (14) days, Reduction in Grade or pay, or Furloughs of thirty (30) days or less against the employee, an employee may elect to challenge the action through only one of three procedures. The three options include:
 - a) an appeal to the MSPB in accordance with applicable laws and regulations;
 - b) a formal complaint of discrimination filed under the administrative EEO process pursuant to 29 CFR, Part 1614; or
 - c) under this Agreement, going directly to Step Two Formal Grievance, as outlined in Article 8: Negotiated Grievance Procedures.

- 3) For Appeals of Removal, an employee may elect to challenge the action through only one of three procedures. The three procedural options include:
 - a) an appeal to the MSPB in accordance with applicable laws and regulations; or
 - b) a formal complaint of discrimination filed under the administrative EEO process pursuant to 29 CFR, Part 1614; or
 - c) under this Agreement, going directly to Step Two Formal Grievance, as outlined in Article 8: Negotiated Grievance Procedures.

Employees may elect to file complaints with the Office of Special Counsel and to the extent provided by law, appeal to the MSPB, if they believe disciplinary or adverse action was imposed to retaliate for whistleblowing or other protected activity.

Section 12. Work Status During Notice Period

Under normal circumstances, an employee for which an appealable adverse action has been proposed will remain in a duty status during the advance notice period. However, Management has the right to assign the employee to other duties or carry an employee in a paid non-work status until a decision is implemented relative to the proposal, so long as the paid non-work status is consistent with law, rule or regulation.

Section 13. Shortening Notice Period

Management at their discretion, may shorten the notice period under the Exception set forth in 5 C.F.R. 752.404(d), "Exceptions. (1) Section 7513(b) of title 5, U.S. code, authorizes an exception to the 30 days' advance written notice when the agency has reasonable cause to believe that the employee has committed a crime for which a sentence of imprisonment may be imposed and is proposing a removal or suspension, including indefinite suspension. This notice exception is commonly referred to as the "crime provision." This provision may be invoked even in the absence of judicial action."

Article 8: Negotiated Grievance Procedures

Section 1. Definitions

A grievance is any complaint:

- 1) By an employee concerning any matter relating to their employment;
- 2) By the Union concerning any matter relating to the employment of any employee in the bargaining unit;
- 3) By an employee, the Union, or the Management concerning;
 - a) The effect or interpretation, or a claim of breach of this agreement.
 - b) Any claimed violation, misinterpretation, or misapplication of any law, rule, or regulation affecting conditions of employment.

Section 2. Purpose

The purpose of this article is to provide a procedure for prompt and fair resolution between the Parties. This procedure is the exclusive method available to the Parties for resolution of issues, including interpretation and implementation of this Agreement or portions thereof. This negotiated grievance procedure shall not apply with respect to any grievance concerning:

- 1) Non-selection from a group of properly ranked and certified candidates;
- 2) A notice of proposed disciplinary, adverse, or performance-based action;
- 3) The granting of, or failure to grant, an award or any form of incentive pay, including cash awards; quality step increases; or recruitment, retention, or relocation payments;
- 4) A return of an employee from a non-bargaining unit position as a supervisor or manager to a bargaining unit position;
- 5) Any claimed violation of subchapter III of Chapter 73 of Title 5 U.S.C. as amended relating to prohibited political activities;
- 6) Summary performance ratings, performance scores or performance pay increases covered by the Commerce Alternative Personnel System (grievable under DAO 202-771).
- 7) Retirement, life insurance, or health insurance;

- 8) Actions relating to any examination, certification, or appointment under 5 U.S.C. § 7121 (c)(4);
- 9) A suspension or removal for national security reasons under 5 U.S.C. 7532;
- 10) Termination of a probationary, trial period, term and/or temporary employee;
- 11) Supervisory determination of job elements and performance standards;
- 12) The content of any Agency Policy or regulation;
- 13) The classification of any position which does not result in the reduction in grade or pay of an employee;
- 14) Oral or written non-disciplinary corrective actions, including but not limited to, counseling and admonishments;
- 15) Filling of positions outside the bargaining unit;
- 16) An action which terminates a detail or temporary or term promotion by its own terms.

Section 3. Grievance Presentation

This negotiated procedure shall be the only procedure available to the Union and bargaining unit employees for resolving grievances except as provided in Section 5 below. If an employee wishes to present a grievance on his/her own behalf, a representative of the Union will have the right to be present at any meeting with the Agency concerning the grievance. This right of grievance presentation without union representation does not extend to arbitration which may be invoked only by the Union on the employee's behalf. Employees reserve the right to request union representation at any time during the grievance procedure. The designation of a Union Representative must be in writing.

Section 4. Time Limits

Failure to adhere to the time limits expressed herein shall result in the grievance being advanced to the next higher step if Management incurs the delay. If the grievant or Union incurs the delay, it shall render the grievance void or settled on the basis of the last decision given by Management, unless an extension of time limits has been agreed upon in writing. Extensions of time may be granted by mutual consent of the Parties.

Section 5. Option Exercised

In three areas employees have the option to use either this negotiated procedure or a statutory appeals procedure, but not both. Employees exercise their options when they file a timely notice of appeal under the appropriate appellate procedure or file a timely grievance in writing under this procedure. In employment discrimination complaint actions this election is made in accordance with procedures set forth in the Agency DAO 215-9 and EEOC regulations 29 CFR Part 1614:

- 1) Employment discrimination complaints;
- 2) Removal or reduction in grade for unacceptable performance; and
- 3) Adverse actions (removal, reduction in grade for other than unacceptable performance, suspension for more than 14 days, furlough for 30 days or less).

Section 6. Who can initiate a grievance?

A grievance can be initiated by:

- 1) Any employee concerning any matter relating to their employment;
- 2) The Union concerning any matter relating to the employment of any employee or any group of employees;
- 3) Any employee, the Union, or Management concerning the effect, or interpretation, or a claim of a breach of, this agreement;
- 4) Any employee, the Union, or Management concerning any claimed violation, interpretation, or misapplication of any law, rule, or regulation affecting conditions of employment.

Section 7. Employee Grievances Procedures

Step 1. The grievance shall be submitted in writing by the employee and/or their Union representative, if any, to the grievance official, i.e., the lowest level Agency Official with authority to grant the relief sought. Normally, this will be the employee's direct supervisor. Grievances must be presented within thirty (30) days from the date the grievant became aware of the occurrence. The written grievance shall contain the following information:

- 1) Name, title and duty station of the aggrieved;
- 2) A specific and brief statement of the grievance;
- 3) A statement of the items, regulations or Agreement alleged to have been violated, citing specific paragraphs of articles, sections, and subsections;
- 4) Remedies desired; and
- 5) Designation of representative or statement of self-representation.

Within ten (10) days of receiving the written grievance, the first step grievance official will request to meet with the employee on the next mutually agreeable workday to discuss the grievance. Arrangements for the representative to be present is the responsibility of the grievant. Within fifteen (15) days following the meeting, the grievance official shall provide a decision to the grievant and their representative in writing. The written response will include a statement of the Agency's response and a detailed explanation supporting that position. The Step 1 decision will include the name, e-mail address and telephone number of the Step 2 grievance official.

Step 2. If the employee is not satisfied with the reply received at Step 1, then the grievant may submit the grievance within ten (10) days to the Step 2 grievance official as identified in the Step 1 decision, normally the next higher person in the chain of command over the person rendering the Step 1 decision. The Step 2 grievance shall be submitted in writing and will include all requirements outlined in Step 1 above, refer to the meeting between the supervisor and grievant, and include a copy of the supervisor's written decision. Within fifteen (15) days following receipt of the Step 2 grievance, the grievance shall be reviewed and the second step deciding official shall render to the grievant a written decision. The written response will include a statement of the Agency's response and a detailed explanation supporting the decision reached in Step 2. The Step 2 written decision is final and not subject to further review.

If the matter is still unresolved, only the Union may invoke arbitration under the provisions of the Arbitration Article of this Agreement.

At any point during the grievance process, the Parties, by mutual written Agreement, may elect to engage in an Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) process. Time periods shall be suspended during the ADR process.

Section 8. Alternative Dispute Resolution

At any point during the grievance process, the parties, by mutual agreement, may elect to utilize the services of NOAA's Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) Program (detailed in NAO 202-715). ADR consists of a variety of approaches to early intervention and dispute resolution including mediation and facilitated problem solving. Time periods shall be suspended during the ADR process. Enforcement of discipline, other than removal, may be held in abeyance during the ADR process by mutual consent.

When both parties involved agree to participate in ADR and they reach resolution, an agreement shall be recorded in writing, signed by the parties, and considered binding to the extent not inconsistent with government wide regulations or law. A copy of the agreement shall be provided to all participating parties. Agreements arrived at through this process will not be precedential for future grievances and are considered confidential.

At any time during the ADR process, either involved party may withdraw from the ADR process by providing notice in writing to the other party.

ADR will be completed within 30 days.

Section 9. Grievances presented by Employee(s)

An employee or group of employees may present their grievances to Management with or without the services of the Union using the process outlined above. If presented without union representation, such grievances may be decided without union intervention, provided the decision is consistent with the terms of this Agreement.

- 1) Employees who choose to present their own grievances without intervention by the Union are not entitled to further review or consideration beyond the opportunity to present their grievance and have it adjusted, affirmatively or negatively. The decision of the second Step Grievance Official is final as to the employee or employees who choose to present their grievance without the intervention of the Union.
- 2) Neither new issues nor new remedies sought may be raised by either party to the Grievance Procedure or during arbitration unless they have been raised at Step 1 of the Grievance Procedure.
- 3) Outcomes and decisions from grievances presented by an employee or employees who choose not to be represented by the Union shall not be considered past practice without written agreement by the Union.
- 4) The Union retains the right to be present during the grievance proceeding and to receive copies of the grievance decision.
- 5) The employee or employees may request Union representation at any point during the Grievance Procedure.

Section 10. Union/Agency Grievance

Grievances may be filed by Management or the Union based on an action that concerns an alleged violation of the provisions of this Agreement or any supplement thereto. When it does so it waives its right to file an unfair labor practice charge over the same issue with the appropriate authorities under 5 USC 7116.

- 1) In the case of any grievance which the Union may have against Management or Management may have against the Union, such grievance shall be submitted in writing to the Management Representative, or the Union's Chapter President, respectively, within thirty (30) days after the date on which the Union or Management became aware of the event giving rise to the grievance. It shall contain the following:
 - a) A statement setting forth the facts upon which the grievance is based;

- b) The specific article and section of the Agreement, law, rule, regulation or policy alleged to have been misapplied and/or misinterpreted; and
- c) The correction sought.

2) If requested by either party, a meeting of the Parties will be held within fifteen (15) days after receipt of the grievance. If the Parties meet, a written decision will be issued by the appropriate party within fifteen (15) days after the meeting, or in the event of no meeting, within thirty (30) days after the date the grievance is filed. The written response will include a statement of Management or the Union's response and a detailed explanation supporting that position.

3) If the matter is still unresolved, the Union or Management may invoke arbitration under the provisions of the Arbitration Article of this Agreement.

Section 11. Employees no longer in Bargaining Unit

If any employee resigns, transfers, or otherwise leaves the bargaining unit by any action before a decision is reached on a grievance which is being processed, action will be stopped, and the Parties will be notified that the case is being closed without decision. A copy of this notification will be made a part of the case file.

Section 12. Settling Grievances

Employees and the Parties shall cooperate to resolve grievances informally at the earliest possible time and at the lowest possible supervisory level. Sharing information and exercising good faith ensure this.

It is agreed that every effort will be made by Management, the Union, and the aggrieved party(s) to settle grievances at the lowest possible level.

Section 13. Information Requests

If the need arises for information, the Union will make a request for information via email, noting the items being requested. A reasonable time shall be allowed for Management to respond to the information request associated with the grievance. All time requirements (days) for the grievance will be paused between the date the information request is received by Management and two business days after the response and information is received by the Union.

Article 9: Arbitration

Section 1. Request for Arbitration

If Management and the Union fail to settle any grievance under the negotiated grievance procedures, such grievance, upon written request by either the Agency or the Union within twenty-one (21) days after issuance of the final decision, may be submitted to arbitration. The party desiring arbitration shall send an email notification to the other party and include "Arbitration Request," on the subject line. The Union shall send the email to the OMI Division Director at the appropriate Center. For Management grievances, Management shall send the email to the Union Chapter President and to the Chief Steward.

The parties shall attempt to agree upon and collectively define and present the specific issue(s) in writing to the arbitrator in advance of any arbitration proceedings.

Section 2. Selection of Arbitrator

Within 15 days after receiving written notification by the other party desiring arbitration, the party invoking arbitration shall request the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service (FMCS) to submit a list of five (5) impartial persons that have Federal Sector Labor Law experience or to mutually agree to select an arbitrator from a previously requisitioned arbitrator master list. The parties shall share the cost of the FMCS list equally. If a new list is requested, the parties shall meet within fifteen (15) days of receipt of the FMCS list by the parties to select an arbitrator. If the parties cannot agree on one of the listed arbitrators, then the parties will alternately strike one name from the list until only one name remains. The remaining arbitrator will be used to conduct the arbitration. The winner of a coin toss will strike second.

Section 3. Arbitration Expenses

The fee and expense of the arbitrator shall be borne equally by the Union and Management. The arbitrator hearings shall be held during the regularly scheduled workweek. The employee, the employee's representative, and employee witnesses shall be in a pay status without charge to annual leave while participating in the arbitration proceedings. Under no circumstances shall the employee, representative or witnesses be paid overtime for participating in arbitration unless specifically authorized by Management.

Management and the Union agree to share equally the expenses of any mutually agreed upon services in connection with the arbitration proceedings (e.g., court reporters). When a formal hearing is used, verbatim transcription will be utilized if agreed to by both parties. The cost of this transaction service will be equally divided between both parties. If the parties cannot agree to share the cost equally, either party may utilize verbatim transcriptions at its own expense. Either party may request to file a post-hearing brief, subject to the Arbitrator's approval.

The parties agree that arbitrations will be held in Seattle unless mutually agreed otherwise. To the extent available, the arbitrators will be from the geographic area where the arbitration is being held, when conducted in person. If both parties agree, hearings may be held via video.

If the parties agree to postpone, costs will be shared equally. If the case is settled before arbitration proceedings but fees are incurred due to cancellation, both parties equally share the costs. Should either party fail to participate in a duly established arbitration, that party will pay all expenses for that arbitration.

Section 4. Representation Expenses

Each party is responsible for their own costs for representation.

Section 5. Consolidation of Grievances

The parties may mutually agree to consolidate grievances containing substantially common issues of law and fact. The parties will endeavor to accomplish any mutually agreed upon consolidation seven (7) days after a grievance has been referred to arbitration.

Section 6. Limits on Arbitrator

The Arbitrator is bound by law, rule, and regulation. Further, the Arbitrator shall have no authority to alter the terms of this agreement. The decision of the arbitrator will be final and binding on the Parties, subject to the right of appeal set forth in the Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute (FSLMRS).

Section 7. Timely Decision

The arbitrator will be requested by the parties to render a decision as soon as possible, but no later than thirty (30) days after conclusion of the hearing or after the submission of closing briefs, if applicable, unless the parties agree otherwise. The arbitrator shall confine themselves to the precise issue submitted for arbitration and shall have no authority to determine any other issues not so submitted to them. In matters covered under Title 5 USC 4303 and 7512 which have been raised under this procedure, an arbitrator shall be governed by Title 5 USC 7701.

Section 8. Awards and Exceptions

The decision and award of the arbitrator will be final and binding except that either party may file an exception to the award as provided in 5 USC 7122. The parties retain their rights under 5 USC 7122, 5 USC 7123, and 5 USC 7702. The filing of an exception to the FLRA will serve to stay implementation of any award until the FLRA accepts or denies the appeal. Any dispute over the application of an arbitrator's award will be returned to the arbitrator for settlement, including remanded awards.

Section 9. Time Limits

All time limits in the arbitration procedure may be extended by mutual consent.

Article 10: Dues Withholding

Section 1. Eligibility

Eligible employees who are members of the Union are permitted to pay dues through the authorization of voluntary allotments from their compensation. This article covers all eligible employees:

- 1) Who are members in good standing with the Union;
- 2) Who voluntarily complete Standard Form 1187, Request and Authorization for Voluntary Allotment of Compensation for payment of Employee Organization Dues;
- 3) Who receive compensation sufficient to cover the total amount of the allotment.

Section 2. Union Responsibilities

The Union is responsible for:

- 1) Providing Standard Form 1187;
- 2) Notifying the Office of Human Capital Services in writing of:
 - a) Current authorized names and titles of officials who will make the necessary certification of Standard Form 1187 in accordance with this article.
 - b) Any change in the amount of dues to be deducted.
 - c) Any employee who is no longer in good standing within ten (10) days of the date of such determination.
 - d) Forwarding properly executed and certified Standard Form 1187 to the Office of Human Capital Services on a timely basis;
 - e) Keeping the Office Human Capital Services informed of the name, title, and address of the allottee to whom remittance should be sent.

Section 3. NOAA's Responsibilities

NOAA is responsible for:

- 1) Permitting and processing voluntary allotment of dues in accordance with this article;
- 2) Withholding dues on a bi-weekly basis;

- 3) Notifying the Union when an employee is not eligible for an allotment;
- 4) Transmitting remittance checks each pay period to the allottee designated by the Union;
- 5) Providing the Union, upon request, a list of the amount withheld per employee.

Section 4. Joint Stipulations

The amount of the dues to be deducted as allotments from compensation will normally not be changed more frequently than once each twelve (12) months.

Administrative error in remittance checks will be corrected and adjusted as soon as practicable via check to be issued to the employee organization. If the Union is not scheduled to receive a remittance check after discovery of an error, the gaining party agrees to promptly refund the erroneous remittance.

Section 5. Effective Dates

The effective dates for actions under this Agreement are as follows:

- 1) Starting dues withholding: First pay period after date of receipt by Office of Human Capital Services of a properly executed Standard Form 1187. An employee must remain on payroll deduction for one (1) year after commencement of dues withholding.
- 2) Changes in amounts of dues: First pay period after receipt of certification by the Office of Human Capital Services.
- 3) Revocation by employee of dues withholding may be made by use of Standard Form 1188 or by memorandum after withholding has been in effect for at least one year. After the expiration of a one-year period during which an assignment may not be revoked, an employee may initiate the revocation of a previously authorized assignment at any time that the employee chooses.
- 4) Termination due to loss of membership in good standing: First pay period after receipt of notification by the Office of Human Capital Services.
- 5) Termination due to loss of exclusive recognition on which allotment was based: First pay period after date of receipt of notification by the Office of Human Capital Services.

Article 11: Safety and Health

Section 1. General

Management and the Union agree that addressing the safety and health of employees is of the utmost concern for all parties. Both the Northwest and Alaska Fisheries Science Centers have a history of excellence regarding the safety of employees due in part to the past collaboration between management and employees. All parties will make efforts to ensure a safe working environment for employees under the many different working conditions under which they must operate in order to meet the mission of NOAA, NMFS, and the Science Centers.

Management and the Union recognize the suite of environments that employees work in to complete the mission of the Agency, including standard office work, laboratories, temporary and permanent field camps, small boats, dive operations, NOAA Ships, commercial fishing vessels chartered to conduct research, commercial fishing vessels engaged in fishing activities, small craft operations, and work based out of aircraft. Transits to and from field locations, embarking and disembarking vessels, and similar activities can be especially fraught with risk. Management and the Union agree to work together to provide a work environment free of recognized manageable hazards with a goal to prevent and eliminate accidents and injuries. It is both the Management's and the Union's goal to comply with applicable federal, state, and local laws and regulations protecting the working environment, health, and safety of the employees covered by this Agreement.

Section 2. Occupational Safety and Health Program

Management shall institute an effective occupational safety and health program meeting the requirements of Executive Order 12196 and 29 CFR 1960. Management and the Union shall consult and/or negotiate on any proposed changes or recommendations relative to safety and health policies and/or standards, as appropriate in accordance with Federal laws and government wide rules and regulations.

Section 3. Working Conditions

Management will attempt in good faith to provide safe and sanitary working conditions and equipment in accordance with applicable Federal laws and government wide rules and regulations. Management agrees to ensure, to the extent possible, adequate lighting, heating, and ventilation in work areas, and shall not require employees to work in unnecessarily crowded, dark, cold, or unventilated areas. Regarding the adequacy of light, heat, ventilation, and space in any work areas, Management will consider and respond to recommendations of Safety Committees or from individual employees.

Work in the field (small boats, dive operations, stream surveys, vessels, field camps, aircraft) can be especially hazardous in part due to the fatigue brought on under adverse working conditions. To address this issue:

- 1) Policies should be established that allow employees to gain enough rest to maintain safe working operations. These policies should address overall length of deployments, amount of work expected per day, time periods between operations, and other such matters.
- 2) These policies should then be communicated to the appropriate NMFS field authorities (e.g. supervisors, project leaders, cruise leaders, field party chiefs, and deck bosses) so that they are aware of the policies and can plan accordingly.
- 3) Policies should be developed in concert with the Safety Committees and communicated to staff.

In the field, weather can be the strongest determinant affecting safety of operations. Type of operation, size of vessel, type of aircraft, area of operation, and many other factors affect weather-related operational safety such that a single factor (e. g., Beaufort scale) cannot be set as the threshold at which operations should cease. Those field personnel invested with responsibility to accomplish work should be trained to recognize weather-related safety thresholds as they apply to current operational parameters and be given authority and support to suspend operations when necessary and/or advisable. Staff should also be trained to recognize safety thresholds and be encouraged to discuss the issues with the appropriate field authority when they feel the threshold is being approached.

Section 4. Safety Committee

The Union shall designate persons to serve on the Safety Committees established at each Science Center. There shall be one (1) Union designee for each Safety Committee. Management and the Union may mutually agree to increase union representation. The Safety Committee(s) will perform the following functions:

- 1) Identify any environmental conditions appearing not in accordance with applicable Federal laws and Government wide rules and regulations or considered to be potentially harmful or injurious to health, safety, or comfort of employees. If it is determined that harmful or unsafe conditions exist, and that these conditions pose an immediate and urgent risk for employees, the Committee shall immediately notify the authority identified by Management, specifying the problem. The Safety Committee may also provide a recommended action.
- 2) Receive the results of incident investigations and make recommendations to the appropriate Director regarding policies or other corrective actions to prevent future incidents. Types of incidents subject to investigation are specified in NAO 209-1A and NOAA Manual 209-10.

- 3) Investigate, report, and suggest corrective action for unsafe working conditions referred to the Committee for action following protocols agreed to by Management and the Union.
- 4) Meet at regularly scheduled intervals and compile minutes of each meeting describing the Committee's and fellow workers' contributions to safety.
- 5) Make the results of Safety Committee meetings, minutes, findings, and actions readily available to employees. The Safety Committee meeting minutes shall be posted in an easily accessible form on each Center's intranet.

Section 5. Safety Inspections

There shall be an annual safety inspection of all areas occupied by the employees. A Union Representative shall have the right to participate in the inspection. Management will provide adequate notice to the Union prior to conducting safety inspections. When scheduled safety inspections are made pursuant to OSHA or other statutes or regulations in areas where unit employees work, the Union will be notified, and a Union Representative may accompany the inspector or inspecting team. Management agrees to provide the Union with information on safety inspections, serious accidents, and occupational illnesses within the limitations of the Privacy Act and security requirements, whether they occur in the field or the office.

Section 6. Notification of Safety Concerns

Management and the Union shall encourage employees to work safely and to report any observed unsafe or unhealthy conditions. Employees will report unsafe and/or unhealthy conditions or incidents to their immediate supervisor or other appropriate authority if the supervisor is unavailable. If requested, the anonymity of the employee will be protected to the extent possible. No reprisal will be taken against the employee for reporting unsafe practices, conditions, or suspected health and safety violations.

The employee has the right to decline to perform assigned tasks because of a reasonable belief that, under the circumstances, the tasks pose an imminent risk of death or serious bodily harm coupled with a reasonable belief that there is insufficient time to effectively seek corrective action through normal hazard reporting and abatement procedures. When confronted with unsafe working conditions, an employee should let their supervisor or other appropriate authority know about the problem and discuss solutions before refusing to work. This action may also serve to prevent fellow employees from being exposed to the same risk.

Section 7. Safety Gear and Personal Protective Equipment

Employees will be provided at no cost to them the necessary safety gear and personal protective equipment (PPE) to perform their assigned duties. Requests for safety gear and/or PPE may be made by bargaining unit members to their supervisor or developed through the Safety Committees. This may be done in consultation with the Safety and Environmental Compliance Officer (SECO) or other appropriate authorities. The bargaining unit member's supervisor will then determine the best way to meet the request. Cleaning and repair of issued safety gear and PPE shall be provided by Management as needed.

Section 8. On the Job Injury or Illness

Employees shall report to their supervisor all injuries or near misses which occur on the job, no matter how slight. Employee illnesses should be reported if the illness was caused by a condition on the job or could impair the health or safety of others or the mission. An employee need only provide sufficient information about any illness to allow a supervisor to make informed safety decisions. Management will have procedures to record concerns, injuries, and illnesses; note what actions are taken; and provide an annual summary. Any employee's medical condition or history will be treated in a confidential manner and will not be included in any report or summary. The Union will assist Management to the extent possible in using these data to mitigate safety issues and provide improved working conditions. No reprisal will be taken against the employee for reporting injuries, illnesses or near misses.

Section 9. Charter Vessels

Vessels chartered by the Alaska and Northwest Fisheries Science Centers upon which employees are to be stationed shall meet safety and personal comfort standards defined in vessel-selection materials and processes. Management and the Union, primarily through the Safety Committees, shall ensure that appropriate standards are described and that materials are updated for each vessel-selection cycle. Serious safety matters should be addressed within each cycle through appropriate contract modification processes. While at sea, the field party chief or other NMFS authority shall suspend operations if serious safety issues arise with the vessel or other items over which the charter operator has control. Suspension of operations can be temporary, until the safety issue is resolved, or permanent, ending the cruise leg if necessary.

The Alaska and Northwest Fisheries Science Centers shall also address safety and personal comfort standards for employees stationed on vessels through internal operating procedures for those items over which Management retains direct control.

An annual post field season debrief should occur in which all safety and personal comfort issues that arose can be described and methods of resolution discussed. Information from these meetings should be incorporated into the next seasons' activities prior to vessel selection or departure and appropriate training provided. Past performance on safety should be an important selection criterion for vessels and a means to better prepare field staff in charge of operations from the NMFS side.

Section 10. Aviation Safety

The policy and procedures established in NOAA Aviation Safety Policy, NAO 209-124 will be followed. Requests for aviation safety equipment beyond that required by the NOAA Aviation Safety Policy may be made by bargaining unit members to their supervisor. This may be done in consultation with the SECO's at each Center. The bargaining unit member's supervisor will then determine the best way to meet the request. Upon request, supervisors will help employees overcome administrative issues related to certifications, to the extent possible.

Section 11. Safety Training

All training necessary to the safe conduct of assigned duties and the response to catastrophic events will be provided by Management. Standards will be set in coordination with Safety Committees on the types of training employees must have before they can complete specific assigned duties, such as time aboard chartered fishing vessels, aerial surveys, use of hazardous materials, and other job-related activities. Systems shall be in place to track each staff member's participation in and successful completion of safety training. Only authorized employees with appropriate training will be permitted or required to operate machinery or equipment or to perform work that could cause injury to an inexperienced operator or endanger other employees. Non-employees (i.e. contractors, interns, etc.) who go to sea shall have adequate safety training so as not to endanger their own or other staff members' health and safety.

Section 12. Smoking

Management will make reasonable efforts to accommodate smokers and non-smokers to their mutual satisfaction consistent with existing law and regulations.

Section 13. Medical Monitoring

Medical monitoring and record keeping will be done in accordance with the requirements of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 specified in Title 29 Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) in Parts 1910 (General Industry), 1913 (Medical Records), 1917 (Maritime Terminals), 1926 (Construction), or 1960 (Basic Program for Federal Employees) whichever is most applicable.

Requirements for hazard analysis and medical monitoring can be found in 29 CFR 1910:

- 1) Subpart G - Occupational Health and Environmental Controls
- 2) Subpart H - Hazardous Materials
- 3) Subpart I - Personal Protective Equipment
- 4) Subpart T - Commercial Diving
- 5) Subpart Z - Toxic and Hazardous Substances

These requirements can also be found in the analogous subparts in Parts 1917 and 1926.

Section 14: Workplace Harassment

Management and the Union will promote a work environment that is free from harassment, which includes bullying, offensive comments/conduct, or workplace violence, whether or not the employee is a member of a protected class.

Management recognizes bullying in the workplace is a very serious matter which can lead to a hostile work environment; therefore, bullying will not be tolerated. Bullying can create a toxic environment harmful even to those who are not directly affected and can have a chilling effect on employees in their performance, withdrawing and being less engaged or productive, and may be less likely to stay at their job as they feel less valued.

Workplace bullying is repeated abusive behavior that is threatening, humiliating, or intimidating. It may be direct or indirect, whether verbal, physical, or otherwise, by one or more persons against another or others, at the place of work and/or in the course of employment.

Workplace violence, including threats of violence by or against an employee, will not be tolerated. Additional information can be found in the Department of Commerce policy document titled Addressing Workplace Violence (OWR-09). Employees who feel that they have been subject to a hostile work environment as a member of a protected class should refer to DAO 202-955, Allegations of Harassment Prohibited by Federal Law.

All reports of workplace violence (which may include bullying) are taken seriously and dealt with appropriately. Individuals who engage in workplace violence or other disruptive behavior may be removed from the premises and may be subject to disciplinary action (up to and including removal), criminal penalties, or both.

If management fails to address reports of bullying or workplace violence, the employee may file a grievance under Article 8.

Article 12: Labor Management Relations Training

Section 1. Training Time

Management agrees to grant official time to employees who are officially designated Stewards, elected and/or appointed union officials or negotiating team members - workload permitting - to attend training sessions and union related conventions and/or meetings in Labor-Management relations where such sessions, or components of such sessions, are designed to orient and brief such employees in matters concerning basic statutes, regulations, policies, and negotiated agreements affecting working conditions, federal requirements, and local personnel policies, practices, and procedures, and where not prohibited by the Federal Service Labor Management Relations Statute.

Requests for training under this article must be submitted in writing, through the immediate supervisor with a cc to the OMI Director of the respective Center for determination with as much advance notice as practicable, usually thirty (30) days prior to the designated training date. The request will contain pertinent information regarding the duration, purpose, and nature of the training.

The Union is limited to a total of one hundred eighty (180) hours every calendar year for this purpose. Management may grant additional time at their discretion.

Section 2. Expenses

Management will pay travel expenses for one Union Representative to attend IFPTE Legislative Advocacy Week every year it occurs (two of every three years).

Management, at its discretion, may pay for additional travel expenses associated with training under this article. Management will not pay course fees or any other incidental costs to this training.

Article 13: Communications and Facilities

Section 1. Distribution of information

Official publications of the Union, which may include newsletters, fliers or other notices, may be distributed on Agency property by employee representatives during non-duty time. The Union may distribute printed notices or post bulletins at each Laboratory, Office, or Field Station included in the Unit of recognition.

- 1) Literature posted or distributed will not contain language which is defamatory against Management, individuals, or activities of the Federal Government.
- 2) Violations of standards concerning content and distribution of literature will be grounds for revocation of these privileges.
- 3) The Union is responsible for the content of all union materials posted or distributed.
- 4) Material shall be pertinent to the conduct of workplace business and not related to partisan political matters.

Section 2. Union Intranet Page

Management agrees to post to an intranet page directional union information. The intranet page is not to be used for internal union business or announcements. This intranet page will point to the Union's official web page for those purposes.

The Union intranet page will be limited to the following:

- Name of the union
- Brief statement on what staff the union represents
- Names and contact information for union officers (president, chief steward, stewards)
- A list of standing committees with a designated union seat (Center specific)
- A link to this Collective Bargaining Agreement (pdf)
- A link to the Department of Commerce (DOC) annual Weingarten Rights statement (pdf)
- A link to the Union's official web page
- Major announcements mutually agreed upon by Management and the Union

Changes to the intranet page will be submitted to a designated Management POC at each Science Center to update. Only Management POCs will have access to post to the pages. The Union will not have direct access to this site to make changes.

Section 3. Bulletin Boards

Management will provide the Union with bulletin boards in each of the following locations:

- 1) AFSC Western Regional Center, Building 4, 1st and 2nd floor main entrances
- 2) AFSC Kodiak Laboratory
- 3) NWFSC Montlake East Building, 1st floor lunchroom
- 4) NWFSC Manchester Field Station
- 5) Hatfield Marine Science Center - Newport, OR

Union posting will be maintained in an orderly condition.

Section 4. Office Equipment

Management agrees that the Union may have reasonable use of telephone service, fax machines, e-mail, photocopy machines, computers and printers, and regular mail/postage for the purpose of preparing for or facilitating labor-management relations activities (e.g., communication of information), or any other purpose for which official time is permitted under this Agreement. The Union will ensure that its use of the above listed equipment does not unduly interfere with the normal operations of the office.

The above-listed equipment may not be used to conduct internal union business. Furthermore, the parties agree that employees using the above-listed equipment shall be in non-duty or official time status, and shall not impede the work of the Agency.

Article 14: Duration and Term of Agreement

Section 1. Duration

The effective date and the anniversary date of this agreement shall be the date of approval by the U.S. Department of Commerce at Agency Head Review (AHR), or on the 31st day after execution if the Agency Head does not approve or disprove the agreement. This agreement shall remain in full force and effect for a period of three (3) years from its effective date and shall automatically be renewed for one (1) year on the anniversary date thereafter. Between one hundred twenty (120) and sixty (60) days prior to the renewal date, either party can give written notice to the other of its desire to amend, renegotiate, or terminate the Agreement. Both parties agree that renegotiation will begin within sixty (60) days of the notice. The parties may extend this timeframe by mutual agreement. The Agreement may be rolled over on a yearly basis by mutual agreement. The present Agreement will remain in full force and effect until a new agreement passes ratification and Agency Head Review. This agreement shall remain valid so long as the Union is entitled to exclusive recognition under the Act.

Section 2. Amendments

This agreement may be opened for amendment of existing articles by mutual consent of the parties at any time after it has been approved and validated. Any requests for amendment shall be in writing and include a brief summary of the requested amendment. The responding party will meet with the requestor within fifteen (15) days to discuss the amendment, and the parties shall make the decision whether or not to begin negotiations.

Amendment to this agreement may be required due to changes in applicable laws, rules, or regulations issued after the effective date of this Agreement. The Parties shall meet for the purpose of negotiating new language in compliance with these changes. Such amendments will be duly executed and will become effective upon passing Agency Head Review.

Article 15: Alternate Work Schedules (AWS)

Section 1. Coverage and exclusions

All organizational components of the Northwest Fisheries Science Center and the Alaska Fisheries Science Center may participate in this plan. Participation in the program is voluntary, and subject to supervisory approval. While workplace efficiency can often be enhanced, participation is not an employee right. When a supervisor determines that an employee's participation must be terminated, reasonable advance notice will be given (at least one pay period in advance of termination). Employees who choose not to, or are not authorized to participate in the AWS Plan, will be placed on a traditional work schedule.

Section 2. Definitions

Alternative work schedules is an umbrella term that refers to compressed work schedules and flexible work schedules. Compressed work schedule means a fixed work schedule (no flexible time bands) in which an employee can complete the biweekly work requirement in less than ten (10) working days. Flexible schedule means one of several types of work schedules all of which comprise core hours and flexible time bands.

Core hours is a term used in the context of flexible work schedules. It refers to the scheduled hours of the workday during which an employee must either be present at work (on-site or teleworking), on leave, or using credit hours. Core hours are 9:30 am to 2:30 pm, Tuesday through Thursday.

Flexible time band refers to the time periods on either side of core hours during the workday, workweek or pay period within the tour of duty in which an employee can vary arrival and departure time or work credit hours. The flexible time band is 5:00 am to 8:00 pm, Monday through Friday. Support services such as IT, facilities, administration, or security will not be available outside of 6:00 am to 6:00 pm. Visitors are not permitted outside of 6:00 am to 6:00 pm. Employees must follow standard safety protocols at all times. For example, employees may not work solo when such work involves freezer or lab access.

Credit hours are base (non-overtime) hours that an employee on a flexible work schedule elects to work, with supervisory approval, within a flexible time band, and in excess of the basic work requirement in order to have an equal amount of time off on the same or another day, workweek or pay period. Credit hours are specific to flexible work schedules and may not be earned by employees on compressed work schedules because a compressed work schedule is a fixed schedule. The basic work requirement (80 hours in a bi-weekly pay period) must be met (regular and/or leave hours) before credit hours can be earned.

Credit hours earned should not be confused with overtime hours earned. Overtime hours are hours of work that Management officially orders or approves in advance and are in excess of eight (8) hours a day or forty (40) hours a week. Credit hours are base hours that the employee elects to work, with supervisory approval, to vary the length of a workday, workweek or pay period.

Section 3. Authorized Scheduling Options

In addition to the traditional fixed schedule for full-time employees, two categories of AWS schedules, compressed and flexible, are authorized for use by employees, subject to supervisory approval.

Traditional - This fixed schedule for a full-time employee is eight (8) hours a day, plus at least a 30-minute non-compensable lunch period that begins and ends at the same time each day totaling forty (40) hours each week. Examples of traditional schedules are 8:00 am to 4:30 pm, or 8:30 am to 5:00 pm, Monday through Friday.

Compressed - There are two compressed work schedules authorized for use by employees. Compressed work schedules are fixed schedules. Under a compressed work schedule an employee must complete the eighty (80) hour basic work requirement in less than ten (10) workdays. An employee can work four 10-hour days each week in a bi-weekly pay period or eight 9-hour days and one 8-hour day with one day off (also known as 5/4-9 work schedule). A compressed work schedule does not allow flexible arrival and departure times and there is no allowance for credit hours.

Flexible - Flexible work schedules consist of core hours (including a non-compensable lunch period) and flexible time bands. In a flexible environment, employees must be present during core hours but they can deviate from a specified arrival and departure time and work credit hours during the flexible time band.

Maxiflex - This flexible work schedule allows the employee to establish a schedule that meets the basic work requirement of eighty (80) hours in a bi-weekly pay period, given the core hours and other limitations described above, including working fewer than ten (10) days. Credit hours for voluntary work outside of the established schedule may be earned with the supervisor's approval.

Section 4. General Provisions – AWS and Fixed Schedules

Breaks: Breaks are authorized at the discretion of the supervisor. Breaks may not be more than fifteen (15) minutes in length during each four (4) hour period of work. They may not be taken immediately before or after lunch periods or at the start or end of a workday.

Lunch: Every workday of five (5) hours or more will include a non-compensable lunch period of at least thirty (30) minutes. The time is not considered part of the basic workday and is therefore not in a pay status. An employee may not work through the lunch period to shorten the workday, to extend paid time, or to otherwise modify the work schedule.

Leave: An employee taking unscheduled or emergency leave is responsible for notifying his or her supervisor as early as possible, usually at the beginning of the established tour of duty. There are several types of leave, and other approved absences, including annual leave, sick leave, and leave without pay.

Time Accounting: Each Center will use a system of internal controls that ensures (1) proper authorization and approval of T&A transactions, and (2) maintenance of complete and accurate T&A records. On the T&A record, employees will record their time showing hours worked, time used (leave, credit hours, etc.), and time earned (overtime, credit hours earned, etc.). Supervisors are responsible for certifying the accuracy of T&A records and any attachments, ensuring that time accounting is in accordance with this plan and all other legal and policy requirements, and for investigating any time-reporting discrepancies. Disciplinary action will result if T&A violations or abuses are found.

Holidays: The maximum number of hours of administrative leave for a holiday is 8 hours in a day. However, if on a compressed work schedule, employees receive pay for a holiday based on the number of hours they would have worked but for holiday (e.g., 9 or 10 hours).

Travel: For short-term travel (less than one week), the traveler maintains the established AWS schedule. For long-term travel (one week or more), the traveler will convert to an 8-hour, 5-day week for the entire pay period. However, with supervisory approval, an employee may choose to maintain their established AWS schedule. Travel in this context includes field work.

Actual travel time to and from the destination should be scheduled to take place during established working hours. When scheduling is beyond the control of the employee, and travel time occurs outside of the employee's work schedule, employees can earn compensatory time off for travel. The travel must be officially authorized, and must be approved in advance by an authorized agency official, usually the employee's supervisor. When travel time is scheduled for the convenience of the employee, it is generally not creditable for compensatory time off for travel. Travel time between the airport and home is not considered travel time. Compensatory time for travel is kept separately from non-travel related compensatory time.

Section 5. Process

- 1) Employees may request an alternative work schedule by submitting an application form through their supervisor.

- 2) The supervisor will review and approve/disapprove the request based on operational needs and employee work performance. If disapproved, the supervisor will provide the basis for this decision to the employee.
- 3) All AWS applications (approved and disapproved) are maintained in the employee's time and attendance record. New work schedules must start at the beginning of the pay period.
- 4) In those instances where the supervisor believes the work requires a schedule different from that proposed by the employee, the supervisor and the employee will work together to develop an acceptable schedule. If an acceptable schedule cannot be agreed upon, the matter will be referred to the Division Director for independent review and decision.
- 5) Employees should check with their supervisor or administrative professional when questions arise.

Article 16: Telework

Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

I. INTRODUCTION

Telework is a flexible work arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position and other authorized activities from an approved alternative worksite other than the employee's designated traditional Federal workplace.

Telework is a workplace flexibility management option to facilitate the timely and effective accomplishment of the work of the office. An employee's decision to elect to telework is entirely voluntary (unless the employee is designated an "emergency" employee or is designated as a member of the Emergency Response Group).

The NOAA Telework Implementation Plan is consistent with the provisions of the Telework Enhancement Act \(Act\) of 2010 \(Public Law 111-292, October 9, 2010\), the Department of Commerce Telework Plan \(August 2021\), and the Office of Personnel Management's (OPM's) policies contained in their Guide to Telework in the Federal Government, Governmentwide Dismissal and Closure Procedures \(November 2018\), and OPM's Additional Guidance on Post-Reentry Personnel Policies and Work Environment.

The law and policies are intended to promote:

- Recruiting and retaining the best possible workforce;
- Continuing operations during emergency conditions (including pandemic health crises);
- Reducing costs related to employee turnover and absenteeism;
- Reducing real estate and transit costs; and
- Enhancing work-life balance by allowing employees to better manage their work and personal obligations.

NOAA and the Department of Commerce (DOC) recognize that a well-managed, widely used telework program has the potential to lead to benefits such as:

- Improved marketability (as a more competitive and inclusive employer);
- Reduced commuting time (that can contribute to an improved quality of work/life balance);
- Cost savings (in areas such as recruitment and retention of employees); and
- An improved Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP).

NOAA supports and encourages telework as a major element in its efforts to reduce its facility space requirements, thereby reducing its energy consumption, greenhouse gas emissions, surface ozone, rent, and other operating costs.

The operational needs of NOAA supersede an employee's desire to telework. In addressing any application for telework, including an application to continue, modify, or terminate an employee telework arrangement, management will consider the following:

- Operational needs and work requirements of the organizational unit,
- Duties of the position, and,
- Employee conduct, performance, and capacity or demonstrated ability to telework.

While approval is at the sole discretion of the supervisor, it may not be based on mere managerial preference. The aforementioned criteria will be reviewed using the NOAA

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment. Employees do not have an entitlement to telework, nor do employees who currently telework have an automatic right to continue teleworking.

DOC encourages participation at a rate of at least four (4) days per pay period for all supervisory and non-supervisory employees with sufficient amounts of portable work. Where a position is not suitable for significant amounts of telework, supervisors are encouraged to use telework as a means for greater flexibility to the extent possible.

5 U.S.C. § 6329c - Administrative Leave Act

III. DEFINITIONS

Agency Worksite – The location from which work would have been performed had the employee not entered into a telework or remote work arrangement. For teleworkers, this is the same as the traditional worksite.

Alternative Worksite – The employee's residence, or a location other than the traditional worksite which has been approved by the manager/supervisor for the performance of the employee's official duties. For purposes of telework, the alternative worksite is considered an official Government worksite.

Approving Official – The immediate supervisor, unless an office has issued a standard operating procedure requiring approval at a high level.

Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) – Overseas work arrangement where a Federal Executive branch employee performs the work requirements and duties of their domestic Civil Service or Foreign Service (FS) position from an approved overseas location via a DETO Agreement. Employees have no authorization to telework from a foreign location without an approved DETO Agreement. DETO agreements are not needed for U.S. territories or possessions.

Eligible Employee – All employees are considered eligible to telework unless:

- 1.) the employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five (5) days in any calendar year (there are no exceptions); or
- 2.) the employee has been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties (there are no exceptions), or

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

- 3.) the employee’s performance does not comply with the terms of the written agreement between the approving official and the employee (see Telework Agreement).

Eligible Position – See Position Suitability.

Emergency Response Group (ERG) Member – A person assigned responsibility to report to an alternate site, be on call, or serve as backup, as required, performing agency-essential functions or other continuity of operations-related duties.

Essential Functions – Functions that enable the Federal Government to provide vital services, exercise civil authority, maintain the safety and well-being of the general populace, and sustain the industrial/economic base in an emergency.

Evacuation Pay and Special Allowances – Consistent with NOAA Administrative Order (NAO) 202-1110, during a pandemic health crisis or other emergency situation, the NOAA Administrator may:

- 1) order one or more employees to evacuate their worksite and provide them with evacuation pay and special allowances; or
- 2) Approve evacuation pay and special allowances to an employee or employees in receipt of an evacuation order from a State, Local, or Federal authority.

An employee in receipt of evacuation pay may be required to work from a “safe haven” (usually their homes or an alternative location mutually agreeable to the agency and employee) without regard to whether the agency and employee have a telework agreement in place when the order to evacuate is issued. An evacuated employee at a safe haven may be assigned to perform any work considered necessary or required to be performed during the evacuation period without regard to the employee’s grade/band, level, or title. The employee must have the necessary knowledge and skills to perform the assigned work. Failure or refusal to perform assigned work within the employee’s knowledge, and skill level, except when the failure is due to circumstances beyond the employee’s control related to the evacuation, can be a basis for disciplinary action and termination of evacuation pay.

Hoteling – Telework arrangement in which employees are not assigned permanent space in their designated traditional worksite, but share offices and conference space as necessary when working at the traditional worksite. Such space is assigned by reservation, much like a hotel. NOAA encourages Line and Staff Offices to establish hoteling and space sharing arrangements for all employees who telework three (3) or more days per week.

Mobile Workers – Employees who, by the nature of their duties, do not have a designated traditional agency worksite, and they typically use their home as their duty station. Due to the nature of their work, they are not considered telework-ready employees. Note: This is different from ‘hoteling’ arrangements, in which frequent telework-ready employees use shared space when they are working at their designated traditional worksite.

Official Duty Station – Location of an employee’s position of record where the employee regularly performs their duties (i.e., normally this means the location at which the employee

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan

works for the majority of their working time). If the employee's work involves recurring travel or their work location varies on a recurring basis, the duty station is the location where the work activities of the employee's position of record are based, as determined by the manager/supervisor. An employee's official duty station determines the appropriate locality area for pay purposes for General Schedule or equivalent employees as well as entitlement to travel and relocation expenses under the Federal Travel Regulations (FTR).

Officially Disciplined – A disciplinary action that results in the placement of a document in an employee's official personnel file (OPF); the bar on telework participation remains in effect as long as the document stays in an employee's OPF. A suspension or termination related to the items mentioned in the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, Public Law 111-292 that results in a document (Standard Form (SF)50) that permanently remains in the OPF would result in permanent prohibition in telework participation.

Position Suitability – A position is suitable for telework unless the official duties require on a daily basis (every workday) the direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the head of the bureau/operating unit; or the performance of on-site activities that cannot be performed at an alternative worksite.

Routine Telework – Telework that occurs as part of an ongoing regular/recurring schedule such that the employee typically teleworks on the same day(s) during each biweekly pay period or a series of pay periods.

Remote Worker (Within the USA and its Territories) – An alternative work arrangement by which an employee is scheduled to perform the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite (e.g., home, other alternative location) other than the employee's traditional worksite, either within or outside of the locality pay area of the traditional worksite and is not scheduled to report to the traditional worksite at least twice on a regular/recurring basis each pay period. The duty station must be changed to the alternative worksite for pay purposes, relocation expenses, travel expenses, etc., and must be documented on the employee's SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, even if the alternative worksite is within the same locality pay area as the traditional worksite. Remote work is not considered to be Telework under the Telework Enhancement Act.

Remote work guidance based on OPM guidance (including already provided OPM guidance that may form the basis of pilot programs) will be provided in a separate policy. Note: For Remote Work outside of the USA, see Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO).

Situational Telework – Telework performed on an ad hoc, occasional, episodic, one-time, or irregular basis, including Unscheduled Telework, and modifications to an employee's Routine Telework schedule.

Telework – Telework, known as “telecommuting,” refers to a paid, flexible workplace arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite, and is scheduled to report to the traditional worksite at least twice each pay period on a regular/recurring basis. The official duty station remains the traditional worksite.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

Telework Agreement – A signed written agreement between the employee and their supervisor/manager which provides the terms of the telework arrangement and contain the requirements under Section XII of this policy. NOAA considers all telework agreements to encompass both the written application/agreement form, any addendums and additions to the form, as well as the employee’s Performance Plan.

Telework-Ready Employee – An employee who occupies a position suitable to telework and has:

- Completed the required one-time telework training for employees via the Commerce Learning Center (CLC);
- A signed individual telework agreement;
- The required technological necessities to telework (i.e., Computer, internet access, electricity, telephone, etc.);
 - Note: the Telework Agreement should specify the necessary equipment and whether it will be provided by the government or the employee.
- A safe and appropriate approved alternative work site.
- Has sufficient work that can be completed at the alternative work site.

Temporary Duty (TDY) Location – A place, away from an employees’ official duty station, where the employee is authorized to travel. Employees on TDY may be permitted to telework consistent with their agreements. Note: Employees on TDY in foreign locations are not considered to be DETOs, but must receive permission from their manager/supervisor before engaging in telework activities; consideration should be given to potential security issues associated with remotely accessing government systems in the foreign location.

Traditional Worksite – See Agency Worksite.

Unscheduled Telework – A subset of Situational Telework that is available in response to an office closure, weather, or safety event. This type of telework is authorized by OPM or an appropriate agency official in response to an appropriate event or condition effecting an employee’s duty station.

IV. TELEWORK STRATEGIES

- A. Agreeing to Telework. An employee’s decision to telework is voluntary unless telework is a condition of employment (i.e., the employee is designated an “emergency employee”) or is required to continue Government operations in times of emergency (i.e., while in receipt of Evacuation Pay, as a member of the ERG, or as part of the COOP). In these instances, an employee may be required to work at home, or at another approved alternative worksite.
- B. Types of Telework. It is NOAA’s policy to allow eligible employees to work at alternative work sites away from their official duty stations, consistent with the needs of their office, during their regular tour of duty. Employees may be approved for Routine and/or Situational Telework.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

C. Telework Conditions

1. Routine Telework schedules and use of Situational Telework must be approved by an approving official (i.e., supervisor) and may not be changed without prior approval.
2. Employees approved for Routine Telework may be granted Situational Telework when business or personal needs require a short-term change to the telework arrangement, such as switching a scheduled telework day with a day the employee would otherwise report to the agency worksite or adding additional telework days. See “Temporary Telework Arrangements” below for additional details.
3. An employee’s use of telework does not adversely affect their option to use an alternative (flexible or compressed) work schedules.
4. Unscheduled Telework does not require advance approval. When OPM makes an announcement of “Unscheduled Telework” and it is not the employee’s regularly scheduled telework day, the employee may choose to perform unscheduled telework in lieu of reporting to the agency worksite. The employee’s decision is not subject to prior approval by the supervisor. However, the employee must notify their supervisor in accordance with the applicable procedures of the office.
5. In rare circumstances, management may find it necessary to require a teleworking employee to report for an assignment that requires presence at the worksite (e.g., providing a presentation or performing administrative duties at a pre-scheduled conference) on their scheduled telework day. This should not be a last-minute request, but a special work circumstance that both the supervisor and employee know about, discuss, and plan in advance as the special work requires.
6. Communications systems and procedures to conduct telework are to be in place to support telework in an emergency, including a communication process to notify ERG personnel, emergency, and non-emergency employees of the activation of the agency’s emergency plan, and the agency’s operating status during the emergency.
7. All employees designated as “emergency,” as members of the ERG, or have responsibility during activation of the COOP, must have an approved individual telework agreement. Note: Employees required to telework only as a result of emergency or ERG responsibility are not required to telework on a regular, unscheduled, or ad hoc basis and will not be subject to telework requirements during office closures. Their individual telework agreement should specify whether they elect to telework outside of their emergency

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

requirements (and are therefore subject to the normal telework requirements therein).

8. Time and Travel Conditions:
 - a. An employee who is required to travel between their traditional worksite and alternative worksite after the beginning of their work day is considered to be working during the travel, unless Weather and Safety Leave is warranted (See OPM's Governmentwide dismissal and closure procedures for guidance.).
 - b. To reduce government liability and maximize productivity, managers should avoid requiring or permitting employees to travel from their alternative worksite to an agency worksite during the work day. If the requirement to report to the worksite is known prior to the day that the employee is required to report to the worksite, employees should instead be directed to report for a full day of work at the agency worksite. At an employee's request, managers may permit employees to travel from their traditional worksite to their telework location to complete their work day; this travel must be accomplished on personal time (e.g., lunch or during flexible bands) or on approved personal leave.
 - c. Telework-ready employees scheduled to telework during their regular tour of duty on a day when their office is closed (or when other employees are dismissed early) are not entitled to receive overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time off in lieu of overtime payment for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours.
 - d. Employees voluntarily participating in the telework program are required to telework when offices are closed as a result of a weather or safety incident. Employees may be granted personal leave in lieu of teleworking or may be excused from teleworking consistent with the guidance provided in Section VII below.
 - e. All time teleworked in a pay period will be recorded per instructions in the appropriate time and attendance system.

- D. Maximum Amount of Telework. The maximum number of days an employee (including part-time employees) may perform routine or situational telework during a pay period is left to the discretion of the approving official, except that an employee must be regularly scheduled to report to the agency worksite at least twice per pay period on a recurring basis.

The twice per pay period requirement is irrespective of the number of hours spent performing work at the agency worksite; therefore, an employee on an Alternative Work Schedule may spend fewer than 16 hours each pay period at the agency worksite, as long as they have reported on two separate work days.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

The approving official's determination must be based on the employee's readiness to telework, the functions of the position, and the operational needs and work requirements of the organizational unit, not mere managerial preference.

An employee may be permitted to telework in excess of this maximum situationally or temporarily as long as there is a reasonable expectation that such employee will return to their routine telework arrangement in the foreseeable future. While there is no specific time limit on these situations, as durations increase supervisors must ensure the circumstances clearly support the temporary nature of the arrangement. See "Temporary Arrangements" in Section XIII for additional details.

E. Teleworking and Care of Elders, Children, and other Dependents.

If alternative caregivers are available (i.e., spouse, babysitter, etc.), or the dependents are able to care for themselves for part or all of the workday (such as older children), then their presence at the worksite would not interfere with the employee performing their duties; therefore, telework in these circumstances may be performed while dependents are at the telework location. Employees should coordinate with their supervisors to use flexible schedules, appropriate leave, or other arrangements to account for their time spent engaging in dependent care.

The above guidance also applies in the event of an office closure that results from a weather or safety emergency that also impacts the availability of dependent care (i.e., schools and/or care facilities are closed or inaccessible). However, if these circumstances significantly diminish an employees' ability to perform agency work, or if the supervisor or a Line or Staff Office policy bars telework in a given dependent care situation, the employee will not be considered telework-ready and therefore must be granted Weather and Safety Leave.

F. Teleworkers and Non-Teleworkers Shall be Treated the Same for Certain Purposes:

1. Periodic appraisals of job performance of employees;
2. Training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reduction in grade, retaining, and removing employees;
3. Work requirements; and
4. Other acts involving managerial discretion.

Note: While managers may require that teleworking employees be available for telephonic or video meetings and respond within reasonable periods of time to impromptu meeting requests (as they would expect of employees in the office), managers may not require employees to keep their video or telephone conferencing channels open for prolonged periods of time to facilitate spot checking of work.

G. Training Requirements. All employees interested in teleworking must successfully complete the required telework training for employees via the CLC before they may be approved to telework.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

The approving official for individual telework agreements must have completed the required telework training for managers via the CLC before they can approve any individual telework agreements.

V. ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA

- A. Non-Discrimination. Participation in telework is open to all eligible employees without regard to race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy and gender identity), national origin, political affiliation, sexual orientation, marital status, disability, genetic information, age, membership in an employee organization, retaliation, parental status, military service, or other non-merit factors.
- B. Employee Eligibility. All NOAA employees are initially considered eligible to telework subject to the following statutory exclusions:
- a. The employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without leave (AWOL) for more than five (5) days in any calendar year; or
 - b. The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties; or
 - c. The employee's performance at the time they request to telework is at least "Fully Successful" or the equivalent (a rating of 55 under Commerce Alternative Personnel System (CAPS)) and the performance of the employee does not comply with the terms of the telework agreement. Note: The duration of a performance-based exclusion is at the discretion of the employee's supervisor; supervisors need not exclude employees until they receive a formal performance review and may permit an employee to telework when they feel their performance has reached the "Fully Successful" level.

If an employee is determined to be ineligible to telework due to these exclusions, the employee will receive a written determination from the approving official within 10 working days of the employee's request to telework.

- C. Position Suitability. The employee is not eligible if the employee's position requires the employee to perform the following types of work on a daily basis (every work day)
- a. Direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the agency head;
 - b. On-site activity that cannot be handled remotely or at an alternative worksite; or
 - c. The employee is a mobile worker (not eligible due to the nature of work)
- These determinations must be made position-by-position, based on the duties of the position and the needs of the service.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

VI. ACCOMMODATIONS FOR EMPLOYEES WITH DISABILITIES

It is important to distinguish between ordinary requests to telework and requests from persons with disabilities for reasonable accommodation. Approving officials/supervisors should consult Department Administrative Order (DAO) 215-10, "Reasonable Accommodation Policy," and the Office of Human Capital Services (OHCS) as part of the interactive process established by the Rehabilitation Act, in order to fully understand supervisors' responsibilities under the law.

As governed by Section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 791 et. seq., the Rehabilitation Act and DAO 215-10, the determination as to whether an employee may be granted telework as a reasonable accommodation due to a disability should be made through the Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator, the employee's first-line supervisor, and the employee.

VII. EXCUSED FROM TELEWORKING

The supervisor, on a case-by-case basis, should excuse a telework-ready employee from duty without charge to paid personal leave or loss of pay during an emergency situation if the employee is prevented from performing work at an approved location due to: (1) an act of God; (2) a terrorist attack; or (3) another condition that prevents the employee from performing work at an approved location. Examples of the latter situation include:

- A. (1) the emergency situation adversely affects the telework site (e.g., disruption of electricity, or network connection problems that prevent telework); or
(2) the telework-ready employee's duties are such that they cannot continue to work without contact with the regular worksite during an emergency situation, and those individuals are not present.
- B. If the telework-ready employee faces a personal hardship that prevents them from working successfully at the telework site, the employee may request the appropriate leave (annual, sick, compensatory, credit hours, compensatory time for travel, weather/safety leave, administrative leave, etc.). The employee may also switch to an alternative work schedule day off, or use "flexing" consistent with the employee's alternative work schedule, if any.

Note: Under certain circumstances, the employee's personal hardship may be a result of weather or safety conditions that permit the supervisor to grant weather/safety leave, such as the need to prepare the home for severe weather, clear snow or ice from the primary egress, or make repairs to damage that threatens the safety of the employee. Supervisors are encouraged to consult with OHCS in determining whether to grant Weather and Safety Leave under these circumstances.

VIII. PERFORMANCE STANDARDS

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

Performance standards for telework-ready employees must be the same as performance standards for non-telework-ready employees. Expectations for performance should be clearly addressed in each employee's performance plan. The performance plan should be reviewed to ensure the standards do not create inequities or inconsistencies between telework-ready and non-telework-ready employees. Like non-telework-ready employees, telework-ready employees are held accountable for the results they produce. Resources for performance management are available from OPM at <https://www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/performance-management/>; and OHCS's performance management resources portal at <https://sites.google.com/noaa.gov/ohcs/policy-procedures/performance-management>.

IX. ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

A. NOAA/OHCS Telework Program Manager (TPM)

1. Develop, review and update the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan.
2. Maintain a list of the primary telework coordinators (TCs) for each line and staff office.
3. Establish procedures for evaluating the telework program.
4. Provide telework reports, with input from line/staff office TCs, as required by the DOC.
5. Provide advice and assistance to line and staff office TCs on the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan, including working with senior-level managers in establishing and obtaining office telework goals, objectives, and reporting requirements.
6. Answer telework-related questions and providing guidance to the NOAA line/staff office TCs.
7. Develop and conduct telework training to approving officials, managers, supervisors and the Line/Staff Office TCs.
8. Develop a catalog of best practices and lessons learned.
9. Develop and maintain an online telework portal of information.

B. Approving Officials. Approving officials are responsible for the overall management and success of teleworking within their offices, including day-to-day operations. Telework-ready employees and their approving officials are responsible for reviewing the individual telework agreement at least annually to ensure that it is current. The date of the review must be documented.

C. NOAA Line/Staff Office Telework Coordinators (TCs)

1. In consultation with the OHCS TPM:
 - a. Conduct training sessions for their assigned line/staff office to supplement the orientation training provided to all new employees. The training session will provide orientation and training for telework-ready employees and their supervisors regarding the implementation plan and their responsibilities; and
 - b. Provide NOAA procedural program guidance to management and telework-ready employees.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

2. Maintain a central file of all approved individual telework agreements for the personnel in their line/staff office as well as a record of all written denials or terminations;
3. Answer telework-related questions and provide guidance to the employees within their line/staff offices;
4. Develop and implement a reporting system capturing telework participation, hours teleworked (from the time and attendance (WebTA) system), terminations, and denials; and
5. Response to requests for reports consistent with Section XV below.

X. PREPARING FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TELEWORK AGREEMENT

The following actions should be taken when establishing an individual telework agreement:

- A. The employee completes the NOAA Supervisor's/Manager's Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool (See Appendix B).
- B. The employee completes the "Telework Application/Agreement and Modification of Telework Agreement" (See Appendix A) and submits it to their supervisor along with the certificate showing successful completion of the required telework training for employees via the CLC.
- C. The employee completes the Telework Safety Checklist (See Appendix C).
- D. The employee and supervisor discuss the expectations in the proposed telework agreement, including the performance levels required of the employee and the results of the NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool.
- E. If the supervisor is not the approving official, the supervisor will forward the telework agreement to the approving official with their recommendations.

XI. TELEWORK AGREEMENTS

A. Duration of Telework Agreements

1. Approving Officials should determine the duration of the telework agreement. Telework agreements may be considered indefinite and do not require an expiration date. Approving Officials are encouraged to regularly review telework agreements with participants and make adjustments, including terminations, when requested by employees or determined to be necessary by management. All agreements must be reviewed at least annually. NOAA suggests these reviews be completed during the employee's annual or semi-annual performance management reviews.
2. An employee may not telework if they do not have a current approved telework agreement in place.
3. In accordance with 5 U.S.C. § 6502\(b\)\(3\), an employee is not authorized to continue teleworking if the performance of that employee does not comply with the terms of the written telework agreement between the approving official and the employee (see "B" below).

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

B. Modification and Termination of Telework Agreement. The operational needs of NOAA supersede an employee’s desire to telework. In addressing any application for telework, including an application to continue teleworking, or in making a decision to modify or terminate an employee telework arrangement, management will first consider the operational needs and work requirements of the organizational unit, the duties of the position, and, through the NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment, the employee’s conduct, performance, and capacity or demonstrated ability to telework. While approval is at the sole discretion of the supervisor, it may not be based on mere managerial preference. Employees do not have an entitlement to telework. Nor do employees who currently telework have an automatic right to continue teleworking.

1. Modification

- i. Management Directed Modification
 - 1. Management may modify the agreement at any time to address the operational needs of the work unit, employee performance or conduct, or to comply with law and policy.
 - 2. The approving official must provide written documentation supporting the modification, including the reason for modification, to the affected employee. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect.
 - 3. Management must provide the employee with at least ten (10) working days’ advance notice prior to implementing the modification to allow the employee to make necessary arrangements. In establishing the implementation date, management should consider the nature of the arrangements the employee must make, particularly in situations where the employee had been performing significant amounts of routine telework.

- ii. Employee Modification Request
 - 1. An employee may request to modify the current telework agreement (e.g., change the regular teleworking day) by submitting a new “Telework Application / Agreement and Modification of Telework Agreement” (check “Modification”) to the employee’s supervisor with the requested changes highlighted;
 - 2. The supervisor and employee shall discuss the employee’s requested modifications within five (5) working days of submission;
 - 3. If the supervisor is not the approving official, the supervisor will forward the request to the approving official with their recommendations within five (5) working days;

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

4. The approving official will issue a final, written decision to the employee and supervisor within seven (7) working days of receiving the supervisor's recommendation.

2. Termination

- i. There is no mandatory waiting period following termination prior to submitting a new request to telework.
- ii. Employee Termination
An employee may terminate the telework agreement at any time, for any reason, without the need to provide advanced notice, by providing the approving official with written notice of a decision to terminate their written telework agreement. While employees are not required to provide advanced notice, they should notify their managers promptly and prior to executing their termination.
- iii. Management Directed Termination
 1. Management may terminate the agreement at any time to address the operational needs of the work unit, employee performance or conduct, or to comply with law and policy.
 2. The approving official must provide written documentation supporting the termination, including the reason for termination, to the affected employee. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect
 3. Management must provide the employee with at least ten (10) working days advance notice prior to implementing the termination to allow the employee to make necessary arrangements. In establishing the implementation date, management should consider the nature of the arrangements the employee must make, particularly in situations where the employee had been performing significant amounts of routine telework.

C. Appeals

Non-bargaining unit employees must use the procedures in DAO 202-771, "Administrative Grievance Procedure" to appeal issues relating to their request to telework, modification to an existing telework agreement, and management directed terminations of telework agreements.

Bargaining unit employees should use the negotiated grievance procedure and/or follow the process outlined in their collective bargaining agreement unless telework related issues have been excluded from their agreement.

In following the administrative grievance process, the official making the final decision on appeals will issue a written decision on an employee's appeal of the denial

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

of their request within 10 working days of the request being received by the deciding official. If the deciding official disapproves the request, they must provide written justification to the employee indicating when or if the employee would be eligible to reapply, and if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve their chance of future approval. Deciding officials are to provide employees copies of signed written denials or terminations of telework agreements.

- D. Discrimination. Employees who believe they are the victims of prohibited discrimination must use the procedures in DAO 215-9, “Filing Discrimination Complaints,” to appeal the alleged discrimination, or may use the negotiated grievance procedure.

XII. ESTABLISHING THE WORK SCHEDULE

Work schedules identify the days and times an employee will telework. Normally, telework schedules parallel those at the traditional worksite; however, they can differ to meet the needs of the organization and participating employees’ needs. Work schedules may also include fixed times during the day for manager/supervisor/employee telephone conversations, which may be helpful to ensure ongoing communication. For additional information on hours of duty, please visit:

- <https://www.commerce.gov/hr/practitioners/leave-policies/hours-of-duty-and-work-schedules>.
- <https://sites.google.com/noaa.gov/ohcs/employee-resources/manager-resources/manager-resource-guide/hours-of-duty-and-work-schedules>.

XIII. DETERMINING THE OFFICIAL DUTY STATION

The official duty station is the location of the traditional worksite as long as the employee is scheduled to physically reports to the traditional work site at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis. If management were to approve an arrangement through which this criterion is not met, the telework location becomes the official duty station (and the employee is considered a Remote Worker).

Note: If a teleworking employee with a varying work location works at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis in the same locality pay area in which the traditional worksite is located, the employee does not have to report twice each pay period to the official worksite to maintain the locality payment for that area. For example, an employee who is required to perform duties at two or more separate agency worksites within a given locality pay area may meet the twice per pay period reporting requirement by visiting any two agency worksites each pay period.

A. Temporary Telework Arrangements

1. There is no change in official duty station for employees on Detail or TDY.
2. In certain temporary situations, NOAA may continue to designate the location of the traditional worksite as the official duty station, even though the

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

employee is not able to report to the traditional worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/ recurring basis. The intent of this exception is to address temporary situations in which an employee is expected to return to their regular worksite when the temporary situation or agreed upon time period has concluded. Such situations may include, but are not limited to:

- a. Recovery from an injury or illness;
 - b. Emergencies, including severe weather and pandemic health crises;
 - c. Extended periods of approved absence mixed with telework;
 - d. TDY and Details.
3. Supervisors must approve these arrangements in writing, such as by email, and the approval must include:
- a. The location from which the employee will be teleworking (if different from their normal telework location);
 - b. When the temporary arrangement will begin;
 - c. The expected duration of the temporary arrangement;

XIV. PREMIUM PAY AND LEAVE

- A. Pay. An employee's locality rate of pay is based on the employee's official duty station, and is determined in accordance with 5 CFR 531.604. The line/staff office must determine and designate the official duty station for an employee covered by a telework agreement using the criteria above.
- B. Premium Pay. The same premium pay rules apply to employees when they telework as when they are working at the traditional worksite.
- C. Leave and Work Scheduling Flexibilities. Telework-ready employees are governed by the same procedures as non-telework-ready employees for requesting and obtaining leave approval. Telework arrangements should have no impact on alternative work schedules and vice versa.

XV. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

The line/staff offices, via their Telework Coordinator, are required to respond to requests from the OHCS Telework Program Manager for a variety of reporting requirements/initiatives. Below is information that may be requested, although it is not all-inclusive.

1. The degree of participation by employees of each line/staff office teleworking during the period covered by the report;
2. The method for gathering telework data in each line/staff office;
3. The reasons for positive or negative variations in telework participation if the total number of employees' teleworking is 10 percent higher or lower than the previous year in the line/staff office;
4. The line/staff office goal for increasing telework participation to the extent practicable or necessary;

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

5. An explanation of whether or not a line/staff office met its goals for the last reporting period and, if not, what actions are being taken to identify and eliminate barriers;
6. An assessment of the progress made in meeting line/staff office participation-rate goals and other goals related to telework, such as the impact of telework on emergency readiness, energy use, recruitment and retention, performance, productivity, and employee attitudes and opinions regarding telework; and
7. Best practices in the line/staff office.

XVI. INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY (IT) SECURITY REQUIREMENTS FOR TELEWORK-READY EMPLOYEES

Telework-ready employees must abide by the IT security requirements conveyed in the DOC IT Security Program Policy \(ITSP\), Commerce IT Requirements (CITRs), Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) and IT Security Policy memos. A complete list of DOC IT security documentation can be accessed at:

http://home.commerce.gov/CIO/ITSITnew/IT_Security_Program_Documentation.html.

In addition to the requirements above, telework-ready employees must abide by the IT security requirements conveyed in the NOAA IT Security Policy (ITSP), NOAA's Computer Incident Response Team Requirements (N-CITR), and IT Security Policies. The Telework Agreement signed by the telework-ready employee and their supervisor may describe additional security requirements. A complete list of NOAA IT security documentation can be accessed at: <https://sites.google.com/noaa.gov/csd>.

Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to comply with all existing IT security requirements and to ensure employees are held accountable to them.

XVII. PROTECTING THE SECURITY AND CONFIDENTIALITY OF RECORDS

All telework-ready employees must ensure that records subject to the Privacy Act of 1974, or which have sensitive Personally Identifiable Information (PII) or Business Identifiable Information (BII), are not disclosed to anyone except those who have been authorized access to such information to perform their duties. Bureaus/Operating Units (OUs) must ensure that appropriate physical, administrative, and technical safeguards are used to protect the security and confidentiality of such records.

A. Disclosure of Records from an Agency System of Records

1. Telework-ready employees are responsible for ensuring that their disclosure of a record (information) from any agency system of record complies with the Privacy Act of 1974.
2. The Privacy Act of 1974 defines a 'system of records' as a group of any records under the control of any agency from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or by some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particular assigned to the individual. DOC system of record notices (SORNs) are posted at:

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

<http://www.gpo.gov/fdsys/browse/collection.action?collectionCode=PAI&browsePath=2005&isCollapsed=false&leafLevelBrowse=false&ycord=0>.

3. The Privacy Act of 1974 prohibits the disclosure of a record (information) from an agency system of record that is not identified as a routine use in that system's SORN, does not comply with an exemption identified in the SORN, or does not comply with one of the 12 exceptions to the non-disclosure-(to third parties)-without-consent rule.
4. A Privacy Act incident occurs when an officer or employee of the agency, who by virtue of their employment or official position, has possession of or access to agency records that contain individually identifiable information, the disclosure of which is prohibited by 5 U.S.C. § 552a (or regulations established thereunder), and discloses the material in any manner to any person or agency not entitled to receive it. Knowing misuse or release of information protected by the Privacy Act of 1974 can subject an employee to fines and/or criminal sanctions.
5. Telework-ready employees must immediately report a suspected or confirmed Privacy Act incident to their bureau/OU privacy officer or the Computer Incident Response Team (CIRT) and immediate supervisor.

B. Proper Handling of PII and BII

1. Telework-ready employees are responsible for the safeguarding of PII and BII.
2. PII is information that can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, such as name, social security number, biometric records, etc., alone, or when combined with other personal or identifying information, which is linked or linkable to a specific individual, such as date and place of birth, mother's maiden name, etc. Sensitive PII, if lost, compromised, or disclosed without authorization, could result in substantial harm, embarrassment, inconvenience, or unfairness to an individual.
3. Types of PII considered sensitive when associated with an individual are: social security number (including truncated form), place of birth, date of birth, mother's maiden name, biometric information, medical information (except brief references to absences from work), personal financial information, credit card or purchase card account numbers, passport numbers, potentially sensitive employment information (e.g., personnel ratings, disciplinary actions, and results of background investigations), criminal history, and any information that may stigmatize or adversely affect an individual. The DOC's IT Privacy Policy provides that breaches of sensitive PII are subject to notification/reporting requirements.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

4. When deciding whether PII is sensitive or non-sensitive, it is important to consider the type of information, obligations, or expectations regarding the protection of information, risk (probability and consequences) of loss or compromise of information, and context of information. Context is particularly important. The same types of information can be sensitive or non-sensitive depending upon the context. For example, a list of names and phone numbers for the Department softball roster is very different from a list of names and phone numbers for individuals being treated for an infectious disease. It is important to use good judgment when deciding whether PII is sensitive or non-sensitive. When in doubt, treat PII as sensitive.
5. The Department's policy states that if sensitive PII must be electronically transmitted, it must be protected by secure methodologies such as encryption, Public Key Infrastructure, or secure socket layers. Federal Information Processing Standards (FIPS) Publication 140-2, "Security Requirements for Cryptographic Modules" provides the standard to which encryption methodologies must conform. The transmission of sensitive PII, even if protected by secure means, must be kept to a minimum. Check with your bureau/OU's Office of the Chief Information Officer to determine methods or services they are using to support the electronic transmission of sensitive PII.
6. In addition to sensitive PII, telework-ready employees must ensure the safeguarding of BII. BII is information that is defined in the Freedom of Information Act as "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person [that is] privileged or confidential." "Commercial" is not confined to records that reveal "basic commercial operations" but includes any records (information) in which the submitter has a "commercial interest" and can include information submitted by a non-profit entity. Terms for BII that must be protected from disclosure include "confidential business information," "confidential commercial information," and "proprietary information."
7. Sensitive PII and BII can be stored on Government systems only, and saved, stored, or hosted only on DOC-authorized equipment (including contractor-owned equipment or a system that is approved to be used as a Government system). Computers that are personally-owned may not be used to save, store, or host sensitive PII and BII that is collected or maintained by the Department.
8. Sensitive PII and BII must be sent encrypted as an email attachment and encrypted on mobile computers, media (e.g., CDs, DVDs, USB drives), and devices (e.g., laptops, hard drives). When faxing sensitive PII and BII, an advisory statement about the contents must be included on the cover sheet, and the recipient must be notified immediately before and after transmission. Exception: According to the Commerce Acquisition Manual (CAM) 1313.301, cardholders shall not transmit credit card information over a facsimile machine. When mailing sensitive PII and BII, it must be physically secured when in

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

transit. Do not mail or send by courier sensitive PII and BII on CDs, DVDs, hard drives, flash drives, USB drives, floppy disks, or other removable media unless the data is encrypted. Sensitive PII and BII must be sealed in an opaque envelop or container and mailed using First Class or Priority Mail, or a commercial delivery service (e.g., Federal Express or DHL). Appropriate methods must be used to destroy sensitive paper PII and BII (e.g., shredding, using a burn bag) and securely delete sensitive electronic PII and BII (e.g., empty the Windows recycle bin).

9. Telework-ready employees and supervisors are responsible for complying with all Bureau/OU guidelines on reporting PII and BII incidents. The Office of Management and Budget Memorandum M-07-16 defines a PII incident as the loss of control, compromise, unauthorized disclosure, unauthorized acquisition, unauthorized access, or any similar term referring to situations where persons other than authorized users, and for other than authorized purpose(s), have access or potential access to PII, whether physical or electronic. Telework-ready employees must immediately report a suspected or confirmed PII and BII incident to their bureau/OU privacy officer or CIRT and immediate supervisor.

XVIII. PRIVACY ACT, SENSITIVE, AND HIGHLY SENSITIVE INFORMATION

A. Decisions on Proper Use and Handling of Sensitive Information

These decisions will be made by the approving official who permits the employee to work at home or another alternative worksite. A telework agreement will be signed by the employee and their approving official that contains the specific data types allowed to be accessed. Information is generally categorized into the following groups: Non-Sensitive Information; Sensitive Information; and Classified National Security Information.

B. Physical Security Standards

The physical security standard for PII and other Sensitive and Administratively Controlled Information must be addressed prior to allowing telework. Chapter 35 of the Office of Security's (OSY's) Security Manual provides minimum physical security standards for the office environment that are also applicable during telework. At a minimum, Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI), including PII, should be afforded protection to prevent unauthorized access of the information.

C. Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI) Registry

The National Archives and Records Administration's CUI Office developed the CUI Registry, which allows anyone to access the Safeguarding and Dissemination requirements for CUI that must be afforded to information like PII (privacy) and other unclassified information. The registry may not be all inclusive, as only those categories of unclassified information that have a law, regulation, or Government-wide policy governing dissemination and/or safeguarding are provided. Therefore, any Sensitive and Administratively Controlled Information in hard-copy form that does not

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

fall within the parameters of the manual, or the registry, should be brought to the attention of the Information and Personnel Security Division of the OSY.

Teleworkers and supervisors should visit <http://www.archives.gov/cui/registry/category-list.html> prior to allowing hard copy PII and other administratively controlled information outside the workplace for telework purposes.

CUI, established by Executive Order 13556, is legally protected and covered under the Sensitive Information category.

D. Highly Sensitive Information

This information is subject to the most stringent security and access control rules, such as courier authorization, hand-to-hand transmission, or agency-specific rules not included in the DOC telework policy. Classified information that requires Secret or Top Secret security clearances for protecting national security information is included in this category. Classified information (Confidential, Secret, or Top Secret) may only be transmitted or removed from official worksites by classified networks or authorized official couriers. This type of information may not be used or accessed in any manner by teleworkers.

XIX. TELEWORK IT SECURITY POLICY

The Department's Chief Information Officer (CIO) is responsible for issuing and maintaining IT and eGov policies and minimum implementation standards, including remote access and safeguarding sensitive information. These policies and minimum implementation standards outline responsibilities of bureau/operating unit CIOs/ACIOs and teleworkers to enable an effective working environment for the teleworker and the protection of Department systems from undue risk. Operating unit CIOs/ACIOs, with the support of their IT security officers, are responsible for establishing teleworking IT security procedures specific to their operating unit and providing secure telecommuting resources and operational controls commensurate with the sensitivity of the data processed and with policies and minimum implementation standards provided by the Department's CIO. The Department's policy on remote access is accessible via intranet at:

https://connection.commerce.gov/sites/connection.commerce.gov/files/media/files/2014/citr-008_remote_access.pdf.

Managers/supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to comply with all existing security policies and procedures, including IT security. Telework-ready employees also agree that their responsibilities, described in Section 3.3.9 of the Department's "IT Security Policy and Minimum Implementation Standards," remain in effect while on telework status. Other pertinent bureau or operating unit policies on IT security may also exist; managers/supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to follow all applicable policies.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

The workplace and workstation must be set up to accomplish secure information processing, including the proper storage of Sensitive Information in both electronic and paper form. The telework-ready employee, following bureau/operating unit policies, must minimize security vulnerabilities to the workstation and the Departmental network.

XX. TELEWORKING DURING EMERGENCY SITUATIONS/INCLEMENT WEATHER

- A. Unscheduled Telework. This type of telework option allows telework-ready employees to work from home or at an approved alternative location upon notification to their supervisor in accordance with the office policies.

- B. Federal/Departmental Offices Are Closed. Employees must telework consistent with law and their telework agreements when Federal/Departmental offices in their local commuting area are closed. Excused absences (utilizing Weather and Safety Leave or administrative leave) may be granted on a case-by-case basis for telework-ready employees in the above situations that may include but are not limited to: power outages, damaged/un-inhabitable alternative work sites, dependent care issues, or state/local laws. (See section VII, “Excused from Teleworking”, for more details.).

- C. Early Dismissal/Delayed Arrival. When an early dismissal/delayed arrival is announced or provided as a result of an emergency situation or inclement weather, those who are teleworking are not dismissed from duty for any part of the workday. However, managers/supervisors may grant Weather and Safety Leave on a case-by-case basis, if the employee is unable to begin or continue teleworking. Teleworking employees are permitted to take advantage of early dismissals granted by management or the President in relation to a holiday, recognition of a special circumstance, and similar occasions.

- D. Emergency at the Alternative Worksite. When an emergency affects only the alternative worksite for a major portion of the workday, the employee is expected to report to the traditional worksite, an approved alternative telework site, or request supervisory approval of applicable paid personal leave (i.e., annual, compensatory time, compensatory time off for travel, credit hours, etc.). Note: Consistent with OPM guidance, an employee required to travel between an alternate worksite and a traditional worksite as a result of a weather or safety issue must be granted Weather and Safety Leave for the duration of their commute between duty stations.

However, on a case-by-case basis, the manager/supervisor may excuse, without charge to paid personal leave or loss of pay, a telework employee from duty during an emergency if: (1) the emergency adversely affects the telework site; (2) the telework-ready employee is unable to access another alternative telework site; (3) the telework-ready employee is unable to access the traditional worksite within a reasonable period of time; and (4) the telework-ready employee’s duties are such that they cannot continue to work without contact with the traditional worksite. (See section VII, “Excused from Teleworking”, for more details.).

XXI. TELEWORK AND THE CONTINUITY OF OPERATIONS PLAN (COOP)

If an employee occupies a position deemed essential or serves as an ERG member (these designations may vary based on the nature of the emergency) for inclement weather or natural or man-made emergencies, they may be required to report to work.

If an employee is an ERG member for COOP purposes, management, along with the employee and supervisor, should make advance and/or situational decisions as to whether the employee must physically report for duty or may work from home or an alternative worksite. For example, if the purpose of the employee reporting for duty at the traditional worksite is to provide policy guidance or to notify specific individuals of emergency requirements, this may be able to be accomplished from home, provided the employee has access to the resources necessary to perform the required services. However, in some cases, the only way to obtain the services of the employee may be through telework from an alternative worksite. For example, if inclement weather or other emergency situation results in a transportation shutdown, but phone lines remain working, the employee may be able to work from home rather than reporting to the traditional worksite or COOP site.

Employees designated as COOP Team Members may be required to telework during emergency closures or other emergencies, including pandemics and for COOP exercises, on any day, even if that day is not a regular telework day or a day with specific approval for situational/episodic telework. Telework-ready employees may also be required to perform duties outside of their usual or customary duties to ensure continuation of agency-essential mission or activities.

During any period that the Department is operating under COOP, that plan shall supersede any telework policy (Public Law 111-292 Section 6504(d)(2)).

NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool

In considering whether and how much telework an employee should perform, the supervisor and employee should complete and discuss the NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool.

The Employee and Supervisor Have Discussed the Results of the NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool.

NOAA Telework Safety Checklist

In order to minimize threats to the safety of its employees and properly address liability and injury compensation issues, the telework application must clearly describe the specific location within the alternative worksite from which the employee will telework. Additionally, the NOAA Telework Safety Checklist must be completed and reviewed by the supervisor.

The NOAA Telework Safety Checklist has been completed and all action necessary to address safety concerns have been completed.

Additional Agreement Details:

Use this space to add additional requirements, metrics, or details that will become part of the agreement.

Employee Acknowledgements

I acknowledge that I will not be authorized to telework if my performance does not comply with the terms of my telework agreement. Failure to comply may also result in disciplinary action.

I understand that I must perform at the Fully Successful or higher (or equivalent) level in order to telework.

I certify that I have completed an approved interactive telework training program authorized by my bureau, the Telework Safety Checklist, and the Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool, if applicable.

I understand that, unless this agreement is for COOP/Emergency purposes only, I am required to telework during office closures for weather and safety events unless granted Weather and Safety or Administrative leave by my supervisor, or electing to take unscheduled leave (if offered).

I understand that that I may be required to report for an assignment that requires presence at the worksite (e.g., providing a presentation or performing administrative duties at a pre-scheduled conference) on my scheduled telework day.

When unscheduled leave or telework is announced by the appropriate authorities, I understand that the election is mine but I must notify my supervisor. I am aware that, in rare situations, management may require me (a “non-emergency” employee) to report for an assignment that requires my presence, and management has discussed this with me in advance of the situation giving rise to unscheduled leave/telework.

I understand that I may not care for children, elders, or other dependents while I am in a duty status and teleworking. As described in the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan, in these situations, I must request the appropriate leave (paid or unpaid) from my supervisor, utilize the flexibility available under my Flexible Work Schedule to stop working (if applicable), or request a change in my Work Schedule.

I understand that I must abide by the IT Security requirements conveyed in the Commerce Information Technology Security Program Policy (ITSP), Commerce Information Technology Requirements (CITRs), Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs), and IT Security Policy memos.

Alternate Worksite Costs – The employee understands that the Government will not be responsible for any operating costs associated with the use of the employee’s home as an alternate worksite, for example, home maintenance, insurance, or utilities. The employee also understands that any entitlement to reimbursement for authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the Government, as provided for by statute or regulation, is not relinquished by this agreement.

Liability – The applicant understands that the Government will not be held liable for damages to their personal or real property while they are working at the approved alternate worksite, except to the extent the Government is held liable under the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act and the Federal Tort Claims Act.

Injury Compensation – The applicant understands that they are covered under the Federal Employees Compensation Act if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the alternate worksite. The applicant agrees to notify his/her supervisor immediately of any accident or injury that occurs at the alternate workplace and to complete any required forms. The supervisor agrees to investigate such a report as soon as possible.

Disclosure – The applicant agrees to protect Government records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. § 552(a), and those outlined in sections XVII - XX of the DOC Telework Policy and Sections XVII – XIX of the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan (October 2021).

XXIII. APPENDIX B: NOAA TELEWORK ELIGIBILITY AND READINESS
ASSESSMENT TOOL

NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool

Note: This assessment should focus on the attributes of the employee rather than the suitability of the functions of the position for telework. The amount of telework that is suitable for a position should be established using the telework suitability tool.

The decision to permit an employee to telework, and how much telework to approve, should be based on the ability of an employee to work in a setting away from their customers and coworkers, either in their home or at another Federal facility, without on-site supervision. The following tool is to be used by the supervisor as a basis for discussing whether and how much telework is appropriate for a particular employee. The employee and the supervisor may complete the assessment together or separately and should discuss any discrepancies.

Lower scores in any assessment area are not necessarily disqualifying for telework, but may influence the amount of telework the supervisor approves and/or may require significant discussion, planning, or the addition of specific items/metrics in the telework agreement to ensure success. The supervisor may wish to utilize short-term telework agreements which expire after a few months to gauge the employee's readiness for telework.

Statutory Eligibility:

If any of the below boxes are checked, the employee is ineligible for telework and their application must be denied.

- The employee has been officially disciplined for being Absent Without Leave (AWOL) for more than 5 days in any calendar year and the record of such discipline remains in the eOPF.
- The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties [Public Law 111-292, 6502(a)(2)(A)(B)] and the record of such discipline remains in the eOPF.
- The employee's current performance is below the Fully Successful (or equivalent) level.

Notes:

1. Disciplinary actions that are not reflected in the eOPF are not considered "official."
 2. Disciplinary records such as Letters of Reprimand, which are removed from the eOPF after a period of time, are only disqualifying while they are present in the eOPF.
 3. An employee's performance may change throughout the year. If an employee's performance has previously been less than Fully Successful, but they have since improved, they are no longer ineligible.

ARTICLE 1 - Preamble

This Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA) is entered into by and between the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Office of Response and Restoration (OR&R) Emergency Response Division, hereinafter referred to as Management, and the International Federation of Professional and Technical Engineers (IFPTE), Local 8A, as the exclusive representative of all full-time and part-time non-supervisory personnel of the Emergency Response Division of OR&R, hereinafter referred to as the Union.

The Parties mutually recognize that the Congress of the United States has expressed public policy concerning labor relations in the Federal Government as follows (5 U.S.C. §7101):“...the right of employees to organize, bargain collectively and participate through labor organizations of their own choosing in decisions which affect them, safeguards the public interest, contributes to the effective conduct of the public business, and facilitates and encourages the amicable settlement of disputes between employees and their employers involving conditions of employment; and the public interest demands the highest standards of employee performance and the continued development and implementation of modern and progressive work practices to facilitate and improve employee performance and the efficient accomplishment of the operations of the government.”

Therefore, labor organizations and collective bargaining in the civil service are in the public interest.

Management and the Union agree to abide by the Federal Labor-Management Relations Statute. Both Parties agree to recognize the rights of the other as established by this Statute. Both Parties also recognize the rights of the bargaining unit employees as established by this statute. The Parties acknowledge the importance of free and open communications and the importance of building a partnership that enables the workforce to develop its full potential and be aligned with NOAA objectives. The Parties endorse the use of formal and informal meetings to promote the exchange of information and the discussion of appropriate matters of concern. The Parties do not intend by this CBA to discourage or impede in any way open communications among the Union, individual employees, and Management representatives. Management and the Union share in building an organization that can successfully meet NOAA goals and objectives. The partnership that is needed for a high-performing organization requires the ability to demonstrate:

NOAA - OR&R CBA

- 1) a genuine concern for people, whether employees, environmental stakeholders, or the public;
- 2) an unflagging desire to improve in every possible way;
- 3) a clear alignment of all strategies, processes, and activities with visions and missions;
- 4) a wise use of data and information to measure and improve performance; and,
- 5) a strong position as leaders in our fields.

The Parties agree that should the IFPTE request certification to include subsequently organized groups of employees in OR&R; Management will not oppose such certification if the groupings would be considered an appropriate unit under the law.

ARTICLE 2 - Governing Laws and Regulations

Section 1. In the administration of all matters covered by this Agreement, the Parties are governed by government-wide rules and regulations in effect on the effective date of this Agreement and not in conflict with existing Agreements between the parties. Where the terms of this Agreement conflict with government-wide rules and regulations issued after the effective date of this Agreement, the terms of this Agreement shall be controlling. All applicable Federal laws also govern this Agreement. Such laws will take precedence over this Agreement.

Section 2. This Agreement supersedes all previous Agreements between Management and the Union and any past negotiable practices in conflict with this Agreement. Any prior benefits and practices and understandings which were in effect on the effective date of this Agreement and are not specifically covered by this Agreement and do not detract from it will not be changed except in accordance with this Agreement and 5 U.S.C. 71.

ARTICLE 3 - Terms of Agreement

Section 1. This Agreement will be implemented and become effective when it has been approved, ratified, and signed by the Parties, including review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. §7114. The effective date and the anniversary date of this Agreement shall be the date of approval by the U.S. Department of Commerce at Agency Head Review (AHR).

Section 2. This Agreement will remain in effect for three (3) years from its effective date. It will be automatically renewed on the anniversary date of the Agreement for one (1) year period unless either Party gives notice to the other Party of intention to amend and/or renegotiate the Agreement. If notice is given by either Party to amend and/or renegotiate the Agreement, the Agreement will be automatically extended until a new Agreement is in effect. The present Agreement will remain in full force and effect until a new agreement passes ratification and AHR.

Section 3. Either Party shall give notice to the other Party within 120 calendar days of the anniversary date of the Agreement of their intention to amend and/or renegotiate the Agreement. The proposed Articles to be renegotiated shall be identified by Article Name and Number with such notice and shall be accompanied by a statement describing the Party's interest which the proposal(s) are seeking to address. The notice to amend and/or renegotiate the Agreement must be acknowledged in writing by the other Party within fifteen (15) calendar days of receipt.

Within 30 calendar days of such notice, the initiating Party will provide the other Party with written proposals for identified Articles for amendment or renegotiation. The other Party will provide their counter-proposals, if any, within 30 calendar days from receipt of the written proposals.

Section 4. Management will ensure that this Agreement will be available electronically to all bargaining unit employees.

ARTICLE 4 - Management Initiatives and Mid-term Bargaining

Section 1. The Union recognizes that Management has the right to exercise its management rights as set forth in the Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute, this Agreement, and in accordance with applicable law, rule, and regulation to initiate changes in operational and administrative procedures and programs when Management determines it is in the interest of the program to do so. In accordance with the law, management recognizes that the Union has the right to receive timely advance notice and engage in good faith negotiations, when applicable, with Management on any changes in the conditions of bargaining unit employees' employment.

Section 2. The Union and Management agree to follow applicable existing law with regard to labor management relations. In this regard, Management has the sole right to make changes in the exercise of its management rights pursuant to 5 U.S.C. §7106 or for any other reason associated with the accomplishment of its mission. Management does recognize its potential obligation, consistent with applicable laws, rules, and government-wide regulations, to notify the Union of such changes and to negotiate, upon request of the Union, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. §7106(b) (2) and (3). Management agrees to provide notice and, if the Union requests, will complete negotiations before implementing a change to any personnel policy, practice, or condition of employment not specified by this Agreement, except as provided by law or existing Agreements between the Parties or existing government-wide regulations. Management recognizes its duty to fulfill its statutory bargaining obligations regardless of whether or not the change in conditions of employment affecting bargaining unit employees are directly under the control of ERD management.

These changes may be Management initiated and/or may result from implementation of future laws, Department-wide or Management regulations, Department-wide or Management directives, Department-wide or Management policies; and government-wide regulations, as deemed necessary or appropriate by Management. Management will endeavor to engage the Union in pre-decisional discussions on proposed changes in conditions of employment.

Section 3. Notification Procedure

In issuing, revising, or canceling rules and regulations relating to personnel policy, practices, procedures and matters affecting working conditions, Management shall give due regard to the obligations imposed by applicable laws, rules, regulations, and this

NOAA - OR&R CBA

Agreement. Before making changes to Employees' conditions of employment, or otherwise changing personnel policy, practices, or working conditions, Management shall provide the Union with written notice of the proposed change(s). Such notice may be provided to the Union by mail, hand delivery, or e-mail. All other correspondence under this Article shall be provided to the Union using similar means.

- a. Management's notice to the Union shall include the following:
 - (1) a description of the desired change;
 - (2) an explanation of how this change shall be implemented;
 - (3) the proposed implementation date, if known; and,
 - (4) the identity of Management's representatives if someone other than the designated management official. Management's representative shall be someone who has the authority to negotiate in good faith and enter into a binding agreement with the Union. This does not affect the right of Management's representative, prior to entering any such Agreement, to confer with higher-level management, legal advisors, and others as the representative deems appropriate.

- b. The Union will have ten (10) business days to advise Management, in writing, of the Union's intent to negotiate over procedures and appropriate arrangements regarding the change pursuant to 5 U.S.C. §7106. The written request to negotiate shall be signed by the designated official and include the following:
 - (1) a description of any adverse impact created by the change;
 - (2) a list of negotiable proposals intended to mitigate the adverse impacts;
 - (3) an explanation as to how each proposal mitigates the adverse impacts created by the change.

During the ten (10) business days, the Union may request a Clarifying Discussion and/or request additional information regarding the proposed change with the appropriate Management Representatives. Within five (5) business days following the Clarifying Discussion and/or response to the information request, the Union will provide

NOAA - OR&R CBA

Management with proposals, if any, relating to the impact and implementation of the proposed change.

- c. The Parties will then schedule a date and time to begin negotiating. Negotiations will begin within seven (7) business days after Management's receipt of the Union's proposals unless the Parties mutually agree to extend the period.

Section 4. Bargaining Procedure

Upon written notification and proposals being presented, as discussed in Section 3. above, Management and the Union will bargain, as appropriate and in accordance with applicable law, rule, regulation, and government-wide regulation over procedures and appropriate arrangements for the change(s).

- a. Management will provide a site for negotiations.
- b. The Union will be authorized the same number of bargaining representatives on official time as Management has representatives participating in the negotiations.
- c. Management will not reimburse the Union or pay for travel expenses for Union officials attending mid-term bargaining sessions.
- d. Either Party may have a subject matter expert (SME) present as necessary who can provide information necessary for the successful completion of bargaining. Any SME for the Union may be granted appropriate official time for participation in the bargaining sessions. Management will not reimburse or pay for travel expenses for the Union's SME.
- e. Bargaining will occur during regular duty hours unless otherwise mutually agreed by the Parties. The Parties will endeavor to reach agreement and conclude bargaining within ten (10) business days from the start of negotiations, but that period may be extended by mutual agreement of the Parties.
- e. The Union may raise no additional proposals or subjects of bargaining after submission of its initial proposals except by mutual agreement.

Section 5. Procedures for Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service and Federal Service Impasses Panel

If the Parties fail to reach an agreement within sixty (60) calendar days after notification of the proposed change, either Party may request mediation with the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service (FMCS). If agreement is not reached during mediation, either Party may declare impasse and pursue an appeal with the Federal Service Impasses Panel (FSIP). If this procedure is invoked, Management shall postpone the implementation of any change until the impasse is resolved, except where the implementation is otherwise permitted by law. Management retains the right to implement its last, best, and final offer in the event the Union fails to seek timely assistance from the Federal Service Impasses Panel but will give advance notice to the Union of at least ten (10) business days of its intent to do so. The Union may invoke its right to pursue an appeal with the Federal Service Impasses Panel within these ten (10) business days of notification.

Section 6. Agency Head Review

Agreements negotiated pursuant to this Article will be subject to Agency Head Review (AHR) pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 7114(c). In the event of disapproval at Agency Head Review, the Union will have the option of renegotiating the proposals that did not pass AHR. The option to renegotiate must be exercised by the Union by notice to Management within ten (10) business days of notice of disapproval.

ARTICLE 5 - Employee Rights

Section 1. Employee rights are codified in the FLSMRS at 5 U.S.C. § 7102: Each employee shall have the right to form, join, or assist any labor organization, or to refrain from any such activity, freely and without fear of penalty or reprisal, and each employee shall be protected in the exercise of such right. Except as otherwise provided under this chapter, such right includes the right –

- a) to act for a labor organization in the capacity of a representative and the right, in that capacity, to present the views of the labor organization to heads of agencies and other officials of the executive branch of the Government, the Congress, or other appropriate authorities, and
- b) to engage in collective bargaining with respect to conditions of employment through representatives chosen by employees under this chapter.

Section 2. Both Parties recognize that Employees have the right to refrain from participation in bargaining unit activities and to do so freely, without fear of penalty or reprisal. Therefore, both Parties agree that there will be no undue pressure placed on Employees to become active members of the Union. This section is not intended to limit the reasonable recruiting efforts of the Union in their attempts to increase active membership.

Section 3. All Employees shall be treated fairly and equitably in all aspects of personnel management, and without regard to political affiliation, race, color, religion, national origin, sex, marital status, age, handicapping condition, Union membership, and with proper regard and protection of their privacy and constitutional rights.

Section 4. Employees will be protected against reprisal for the disclosure to NOAA officials, members of Congress, or appropriate legal authorities, information that the Employee believes evidences a violation of law, rule, or regulation, or evidences mismanagement a waste of funds, or an abuse of authority. However, in the case of misconduct associated with the disclosure of information, Employees may be subject to disciplinary action.

ARTICLE 6 - Management Rights

Section 1. Management rights are codified in the FLSMRS as 5 U.S.C. § 7106:
Management Rights:

- a) Subject to subsection (b) of this section, nothing in this chapter shall affect the authority of any Management official of any agency –
 - 1) to determine the mission, budget, organization, number of employees, and internal security practices of the agency; and
 - 2) in accordance with applicable laws -
 - A) to hire, assign, direct, layoff, and retain employees in the agency, or to suspend, remove, reduce in grade or pay, or take other disciplinary action against such employees;
 - B) to assign work, to make determinations with respect to contracting out, and to determine the personnel by which agency operations shall be conducted;
 - C) with respect to filling positions, to make selections for appointments from
 - (i) among properly ranked and certified candidates for promotion; or
 - (ii) any other appropriate source; and
 - D) to take whatever actions may be necessary to carry out the agency mission during emergencies.
- b) Nothing in this section shall preclude any agency and any labor organization from negotiating
 - 1) at the election of the agency, on the numbers, types, and grades of employees or positions assigned to any organizational subdivision, work project, or tour of duty, or on the technology, methods, and means of performing work;
 - 2) procedures which management officials of the agency will observe in exercising any authority under this section; or
 - 3) appropriate arrangements for employees adversely affected by the exercise of any authority under this section by such management officials.

ARTICLE 7 - Representational Rights and Duties

Section 1. Consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 7114 (a)(2)(B), the Union shall be given an opportunity to be present at any examination of an Employee in the unit by a Management representative in connection with an investigation if the Employee reasonably believes that the examination may result in disciplinary action against the Employee and the Employee requests representation. At any examination of an Employee as part of an investigation which may lead to disciplinary action against that Employee, the Management representative will explain the purpose of the meeting to the Employee prior to the examination.

Section 2. If the Employee being interviewed requests representation, no further questioning will take place until the Employee has been given a reasonable amount of time, normally one (1) work day, to contact an appropriate representative.

Section 3. Consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 7114 (a) (2) (A), the Union will be afforded an opportunity to be represented at any formal discussion between one (1) or more representatives of Management and one (1) or more Employees or their representatives concerning (a) any grievance (a meeting concerning a grievance is, by definition, a formal discussion), or (b) any personnel policy or practice or other general condition of employment. For formal discussions as in (b) above, the Union will be given advance notice of the meeting via electronic mail and/or telephonically by contacting the designated Union representative, when practicable, at least five (5) business days in advance of the discussion. The Union representative need not be present at routine informational meeting during which no discussion occurs regarding changes in personnel policy, or practices, or general conditions of employment.

Section 4. At those meetings where the Union is represented, Management will acknowledge the attendance of the Union representative at the start of the meeting. Furthermore, Management will permit the Union representative to ask questions and to present a brief statement before the end of the meeting outlining the Union position concerning the issues. The Union representative will refrain from activities designed to disrupt the meeting. All issues to be discussed at the meeting by Management will be listed in a written agenda, where practicable, which will be forwarded to the Union at the same time that the Union receives prior notice of the meeting.

ARTICLE 8 - Official Time

Section 1. Consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 7131(d), Management shall authorize official time in any amount that Management and the Union agree to be reasonable, necessary, and in the public interest.

Authorized Official Time will be granted to elected Union officials (President, Vice-President, and Secretary) and the appointed Union Steward(s). The noted Union officials may use four hours per week without a written explanation and eight hours per week with a written explanation to Management.

Employees who are not elected or appointed Union officials in the bargaining unit representing the Union in official representational duties (e.g., for special projects or short-term duties) must request in writing and receive approval for Official Time in advance from their supervisors.

All Employees serving as Union representatives and using official time will document the official time used with the appropriate code in the Department's WebTA system.

In the event the supervisor is unavailable or in emergency situations, the Union representative may proceed to use a reasonable amount of official time as provided by this contract and provide to the supervisor a record of the amount of official time used. No more than eight (8) hours will be approved in these instances.

Section 2. Official time may only be used on the days and during the times that a Union official would be otherwise in a duty status. The Union shall provide Management with the names of the Union officials authorized to use official time within 10 business days of Union elections or appointments. The Employee will enter on their timesheet, per standard time and attendance procedures, official time used for Union covered representational activities. The term official time shall include the purposes set forth in 5 U.S.C. § 7131, as well as other representational activities including:

- a. attendance at formal meetings;
- b. attendance at meetings involving unfair labor practice charges or unit clarification petitions and preparation time for such meetings;

NOAA - OR&R CBA

- c. representation of Employees in disciplinary matters in which Employees are entitled to representation;
- d. presentation of appeals in connection with statutory or regulatory procedures in which the Union is a party or is designated as the representative, (e.g., Merit System Protection Board (MSPB) and Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) proceedings);
- e. attendance at Employer examinations of any bargaining unit Employee, in connection with an investigation at which an Employee requests such representation;
- f. attendance at grievance meetings and arbitration hearings;
- g. attendance at meetings of committees or workgroups when the Employer has given authorization for Union attendance;
- h. attendance at negotiations as a member of the negotiations team;
- i. to confer with Employees with respect to any matters for which remedial relief may be sought pursuant to the terms of this Agreement wherein the Employee has elected to have a representative and is entitled to such representation;
- j. to complete research in preparation for labor-management related meetings, negotiations, and hearings;
- k. to prepare and maintain records and reports required of the Union and its representatives by any Federal Agency;
- l. to respond to Congressional contacts relative to representational matters;
- m. time spent in preparing replies to Employer proposals and proposed Employer policy changes submitted to the Union for comment or consideration; and,
- n. time spent in labor-management meetings or special projects mutually agreed to by the Parties.

Section 3. Internal Union business will be conducted on non-duty time. The term internal Union business shall include the purposes set forth in 5 U.S.C. § 7131(b), including such actions as

- a. the solicitation of membership,
- b. elections of labor organization officials, and
- c. collection of dues.

Section 4. Employees covered by this Agreement will be accorded reasonable official time to consult with a Union representative for representational purposes or for representing themselves consistent with the terms of this Agreement and applicable regulations and law. This includes time for preparation, attendance (at meetings and/or hearings), and travel of the Employee for matters such as grievance/arbitration, Federal Labor Relations Authority (FLRA), MSPB or other disciplinary actions, adverse action proceedings, and Unfair Labor Practice (ULP) charges and/or complaints. The Employee will make every reasonable effort to request and have advance approval of such use of official time. The Employee will continue to administer and control his/her work-load in a manner that is in the best interest of the Division.

Section 5. It is understood that nothing in this Agreement is intended to limit the statutory rights to official time provided pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 7131 or any other statute or regulation.

ARTICLE 9 - Communications

Section 1. Management agrees that the Union may have reasonable use of telephone service, fax machines, e-mail, photocopy machines, computers and printers, and regular mail/postage (including priority, express, or overnight mail) for the purpose of preparing for or facilitating labor-management relations, or any other purpose for which official time is permitted under this Agreement. The Union will ensure that its use of the above-listed equipment does not unduly interfere with the normal operations of the office.

Section 2. The above-listed equipment may not be used to conduct internal Union business. Furthermore, the Parties agree that Employees using the above-listed equipment shall be in non-duty or official time status and shall not impede the work of the Agency.

Section 3. Management will make a 3' x 4' bulletin board near the staff offices in Seattle available to the IFPTE Local 8A to post information. Management will also provide a link to the IFPTE Local 8A website on the OR&R Intranet site, provided such a site exists.

Section 4. Management will use a checklist job aid for ensuring new bargaining unit employees to the Division are oriented satisfactorily. A Union representative may take up to 15 minutes of official time to meet with new Employees in the bargaining unit to provide appropriate orientation information. Management will provide new bargaining unit employees with a copy of their position description and a pre-approved, single sheet (8.5" x 11") piece of literature for the IFPTE Union.

Section 5. Employees will be annually informed of their rights to have Union representation in connection with an investigation, as specified in Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute, § 7114(a)(3).

ARTICLE 10 - Dues Withholding

Section 1. General

In implementing the dues deduction program, Management and the Union will be governed by the provisions of 5 U.S.C. 7115 and this Article. Employees who occupy positions represented by the Union may have their dues withheld through payroll deduction. Dues withholding is to be voluntary on the part of the individual Employee. The Union is responsible for informing the Employee of the voluntary nature of dues withholding and the conditions governing an Employee revocation of dues withholding.

The Union will pay no fee for the services set out in this Article. Management is responsible for all costs associated with this payroll deduction allotment or revocation of dues processing.

Section 2. Supply of Forms

The Union will be responsible for the distribution of Standard Form 1187 (SF-1187) for the use by an eligible Employee of the Union who wishes to authorize the deduction of his/her dues. Standard Form 1188 (SF-1188) will also be available through the Union and Management for Employees who wish to revoke the allotment as described in Section 8. of this Article.

Section 3. Requesting Dues Withholding

Standard Form 1187 may be completed at any time by an Employee certified by only the Union President, Vice President, or Treasurer of the Union, and forwarded to the Management representative for concurrence. The Management representative will in turn forward the approved dues allotment form to the Office of Human Capital Services (OHCS), Employee and Labor Relations Branch for processing. Dues will be withheld beginning with the first complete pay period following receipt of SF-1187.

Section 4. Dues Schedule

The Union certifies that the dues schedule applicable to its members will be provided to each Employee prior to membership enrollment. Employee's dues schedule may be changed pursuant to Section 7. of this Article.

Section 5. Union Members Not In Good Standing.

If the Union suspends or expels a Union member, it will notify the Management representative by email of that determination. The Management representative will subsequently notify OHCS, Employee and Labor Relations Branch with an SF-1188 to cease dues deduction for that Employee and copy the Union Chapter President.

Section 6. Dues Withholding Fees and Accounts

NOAA/OHCS will remit by Electronic Funds Transfer (EFT) the net amount of dues withheld. OHCS, Employee and Labor Relations Branch, will also send to the Union a listing of names and amounts withheld.

Section 7. Change in Amount of Dues

Changes to the amount of Union dues cannot occur until 12 months have passed since the latest change. When the amount of regular dues changes, the Union President or designee will notify the Management representative of that change in writing using an SF-1187. The Management representative will acknowledge and forward by email to the OHCS, Employee, and Labor Relations Branch for inclusion in future allotments, and the Union Chapter President will be copied. This should take effect within two bi-weekly pay periods of notification to the OHCS, Employee, and Labor Relations Branch.

Section 8. Automatic Termination of Dues Withholding

All dues allotments of Union dues withholding will be automatically terminated in the event of loss of exclusive recognition. If the Employee is on a temporary assignment to a non-bargaining unit position, Management will notify the OHCS, Employee, and Labor Relations Branch to cease the allotment of Union dues deduction and so inform the Union President. The Employee will be responsible for submitting a new SF-1187 upon returning to a bargaining unit position if he/she elects to voluntarily continue to pay Union dues through payroll deduction.

Any individual allotment for dues withholding shall automatically terminate upon the separation of the Employee from the Department or transfer of the Employee from the bargaining unit. The Union will certify to Management any member who ceases to be a member in good standing.

Section 9. Correction of Errors.

Administrative errors in remittance amounts will be corrected and adjusted in the next remittance to be issued to the Union. Management agrees that the total error in the amount of dues withheld from the Employee shall be adjusted as soon as practicable after it has been discovered by OHCS or OHCS has received written notification from the Union of the error.

If an Employee has been improperly separated and is ordered reinstated by the appropriate authority to a bargaining unit position, the Employee is required to initiate a new SF-1187 to restart dues withholding if they voluntarily elect to do so.

ARTICLE 11 - Information Requests

Section 1. The Union will make all requests for information, in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 7114 (b) Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute, in writing. The written request will include a description of the specific information needed and an explanation of the particularized need for the information that explains how the Union intends to use the requested information and how that use of the information relates to the Union's role as the exclusive representative.

Section 2.

- a. Management will provide a written response to the Union within ten (10) business days. The response will include the information or a detailed explanation as to why the information is not being provided. If Management is unclear about the Union's stated reason for needing the requested information, Management will, within five (5) business days, ask the Union to clarify the request.
- b. The Union will agree to any reasonable Management written request for delay in providing any or all of the requested information provided such a delay does not interfere with the timeliness of the underlying issue. Such a request must include an explanation for the delay and expected delivery date.

Section 3. In order to encourage exchange of information, Management may, but is not required to, have Union representation or observers on management committees that recommend changes in workplace conditions affecting the bargaining unit.

ARTICLE 12 - Grievances

Section 1. The grievance procedure is pursuant to the Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute (FSLMRS), subchapter III, 5 U.S.C. § 7121 et. seq.

Section 2. Both Parties recognize the importance of prompt and equitable disposition of any grievance at the lowest organizational level possible using flexible and informal procedures. The Union or any bargaining unit employee shall have the right to present a grievance and have it promptly considered on its merits. The initiation of a grievance by any bargaining unit employee shall not cast any adverse reflection on his or her standing as an Employee, and Management will refrain from any reprisal or adverse action to the Employee or Union representative due to the initiation of a grievance. Likewise, the initiation of a grievance by Management shall not cast any adverse reflection on Management, and bargaining unit employees will refrain from any reprisal or adverse action to Management due to the initiation of a grievance.

Section 3. A grievance is defined as any complaint by any bargaining unit employee concerning any matter relating to the employment of the Employee; a complaint by the Union concerning any matter relating to the employment of any bargaining unit employee; or, a complaint by any Employee, the Union, or the Management concerning the effect or interpretation, or a claim of a breach of, this Agreement. The Union also has the right to file, as a grievance under this contract, any alleged unfair labor practices. When it does so, however, it waives its right to file an unfair labor practice charge over the same issue with the appropriate authorities under law and regulation.

Section 4. Excluded from this grievance procedure are the following:

- a. Any claimed violation of subchapter III of Chapter 73 of Title 5, United States Code, relating to prohibited political activities;
- b. Retirement, life insurance, or health insurance;
- c. A suspension or removal under Section 7532 of Title 5, United States Code (national security);
- d. Any examination, certification, or appointment;

NOAA - OR&R CBA

- e. The classification of any position that does not result in the reduction in grade or pay of an employee;
- f. Termination of a probationary employee in accordance with Office of Personnel Management regulations and appropriate United States Code.
- g. Notice of proposed personnel action;
- h. Matters excluded by law or government-wide rule not in conflict with this Agreement; and,
- i. Complaints or appeals from persons outside the bargaining unit.

Nothing in these exclusions is intended to prevent any Employee from filing an EEO complaint using the established protocols for such complaints.

Section 5. Any bargaining unit Employee or group of Employees may present such grievances to Management and have them adjusted, without involvement of the Union, as long as the adjustment is not inconsistent with the terms of this Agreement. In these cases, the Union must be given an opportunity to be present at any meeting with the grievant regarding adjustment of the grievance. A bargaining unit employee or group of Employees proceeding without the involvement of the Union must follow the negotiated grievance procedure. When an Employee files a grievance and does not designate the Union as his or her representative, if the Union requests, Management shall furnish the Union with a copy of the filed grievance, and the response issued at each step.

Section 6. For discussions with bargaining unit employees concerning grievances, the Employee will be given reasonable time to notify a Union representative.

Section 7. Under circumstances involving EEO complaints, a bargaining unit employee has the option of filing a grievance under the negotiated grievance procedure or an EEO complaint under the EEO complaint procedure, but not both. For the purpose of this Article, a bargaining unit employee shall be deemed to have exercised his/her option at such time as the bargaining unit employee timely initiates an action under the applicable statutory procedure or timely files a grievance in writing in accordance with the provision of the procedure in this Article, whichever occurs first.

Section 8. The Parties acknowledge that this negotiated grievance procedure neither expands or contracts the jurisdiction of the Merit Systems Protection Board (MSPB) as provided by law. Further, nothing in this Article is intended to limit the arbitrator's authority to determine questions of arbitrability.

Section 9. The grievance shall be filed at the step at which the subject matter of the grievance arose, except in the case of grievances involving disciplinary actions that may be filed at the next higher supervisory level. In the event that Management decides that the grievance can effectively be resolved at a lower level than that at which it was initiated, Management may remand the grievance to the appropriate level and the remand shall be accomplished in a timely manner. In such cases the time requirement for an answer shall be fifteen (15) business days from the date of the remand.

The grievance procedure shall consist of the following steps:

STEP ONE. Any Employee may refer a grievance to the Union if he or she desires. At step one in accordance with this Article, a grievance is to be presented to the first level supervisor of the grievant, or his or her designee, in writing. The grievance must be received not later than thirty (30) business days following the date on which the grieving party knew or should have known of the facts giving rise to the grievance. When the basis for the grievance is a continuing practice or condition then the grievance can be filed at any time. The Employee or his/her representative may request an oral presentation of the written grievance. If requested, the oral presentation will take place within ten (10) business days following the date the grievance was received. A written grievance answer will be issued by the first level supervisor, or his or her designee, within thirty (30) business days following the date on which the grievance was received.

The written grievance shall include:

- a. The name and office address of the bargaining unit member;
- b. A statement with details of the issue and the grounds for the grievance, including, any law, rule or regulation violated, if known;
- c. Corrective action requested and the reasons for such action; and,
- d. The name of the designated representative, if any.

STEP TWO. Absent resolution of the grievance at step one, the bargaining unit employee and/or his or her representative may present the grievance at step two. The step two grievance must be in writing and signed by the grievant or his or her representative, and received by the second level supervisor, or his or her designee, within twenty (20) business days of the issuance of the Step One answer. The bargaining unit employee or his/her representative may request an oral presentation in the written grievance. If requested, the oral presentation will take place within ten (10) business days following the date the grievance was received unless the Parties mutually agree otherwise. The Step Two answer will be issued in writing within twenty (20) business days following the date on which the Step Two grievance was received.

Section 10. In computing time periods for Steps 1 and 2 of this Article, should the time to either file a grievance or respond to a grievance fall on a weekend, a holiday, or during a shutdown or furlough, the time limit will automatically be extended to the next business day.

Section 11. Failure on the part of Management to meet any of the time requirements of this procedure during Step One will permit the grievance to advance to Step Two upon written initiation by the bargaining unit employee or designated representative.

Failure on the part of Management to meet any of the time requirements of this procedure during Step Two will mean that Management agrees to the position of the bargaining unit employee or designated representative, provided that the position is consistent with applicable law or government-wide regulation.

If the bargaining unit employee or representative fails to meet the requirements in Section 10 and prosecutes the grievance within the stated time frames, the grievance will be terminated by Management.

Section 12. Management grievances must be filed within thirty (30) business days of the date Management knew or should have known about the matter, unless the matter is a continuing practice or condition, which may be filed at any time. Management grievances shall be in writing addressed to the Chief Steward. In the event the Chief Steward is the subject of the grievance, the grievance shall be addressed to the Local Chapter President. The Chief Steward or his or her designee, shall issue a written answer addressed to the Employer representative who signed the grievance. The answer shall be provided within thirty (30) business days after receipt of such grievance. Management may request an oral presentation of the written grievance. If requested, the oral presentation will take place within ten (10) business days following the date the grievance was received.

Section 13. Nothing herein should be deemed as foreclosing either the Union or Management from attempting to adjust the grievance by using alternative dispute resolution procedure.

Section 14. Any of the foregoing time requirements can be extended by mutual written consent of all Parties. During response emergencies any of the foregoing time requirements can be extended up to 30 business days upon reasonable written request by either Party. All correspondence between the Parties for grievance and arbitration processing shall be by United States Postal Service, a commercial delivery service, fax machine, electronic mail, or delivered in person. Time limits under this Article shall commence on the date of receipt.

ARTICLE 13 - Arbitration

Section 1. If the answer at the final step of the grievance procedure does not resolve the grievance, the Union or Management may refer the grievance to binding arbitration by mailing or otherwise transmitting written notice to the other party within twenty (20) business days after receipt of the last answer. If Management fails to issue a timely decision at the last step of the grievance procedure, or fails to deliver the decision to the Union, the Union may invoke arbitration under Section 7. below within forty (40) business days of the date when a decision should have been issued by Management.

Upon referral of a grievance to arbitration, the Party invoking arbitration shall request the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service (FMCS) to submit a list of five arbitrators having federal sector experience. The party requesting the list of arbitrators shall pay the fee charged by the FMCS for production of the list. The Parties will meet within ten (10) business days of receipt of the list of arbitrators.

If the Parties cannot mutually agree upon one of the listed arbitrators, they shall alternately cross off one name at a time until one arbitrator remains, who shall then be the arbitrator selected by the Parties. The right to be the first to cross off the name of an arbitrator shall be determined by coin toss.

Section 2. The Parties agree that arbitrations will be held in Seattle unless mutually agreed otherwise. To the extent available, the arbitrators will be from the Seattle area.

Section 3. The Parties may mutually agree to consolidate grievances containing substantially common issues of law and fact. The Parties will endeavor to accomplish any mutually agreed upon consolidation five (5) business days after a grievance has been referred to arbitration.

Section 4. The Arbitrator will be requested by the Parties to render a decision as soon as possible, but no later than thirty (30) business days after the conclusion of the hearing unless the Parties agree otherwise.

Section 5. The Arbitrator is bound by applicable law and applicable government-wide rule or regulation. Further, the Arbitrator shall have no authority to alter the terms of this Agreement. The decision of the Arbitrator will be final and binding on the Parties, subject to the right of appeal set forth in the FSLMRS.

Section 6. Any arbitration involving alleged prohibited personnel practices will allow the Arbitrator to order a stay of any personnel action in a manner similar to the manner described in 5 U.S.C. 1221 (c) with respect to the Merit Systems Protection Board (MSPB); and the taking, by an agency, of any disciplinary action identified under 5 U.S.C. 1215 (a) (3) that is otherwise within the authority of such agency to take.

Section 7. Should either Party refuse to participate in arbitration or should either Party fail to respond in a timely manner at the last step of the grievance procedure, the other Party may unilaterally employ an Arbitrator and present the case to the Arbitrator. The Arbitrator will have the authority to render a decision. At least ten (10) business days before an Arbitrator is contacted by a Party under this section, that Party will send written notice to the Party refusing to participate in arbitration of its intention to contact an Arbitrator. The Parties acknowledge that refusal to participate does not include reasonable requests for postponements made by either Party.

Section 8

- a. The Union and Management will share the Arbitrator's fees and expenses equally, and the cost, if any, of a mutually agreed upon hearing facility if government space is not available.
- b. A transcript of the proceedings will be made unless the Union and Management mutually agree that one is not needed. The cost of the transcript will be shared equally.
- c. Each Party will be responsible for the costs of their own representation unless otherwise directed by the Arbitrator.

Section 9. In the event the Party invoking arbitration fails to contact the Arbitrator selected by the Parties for the purpose of scheduling a hearing date(s) within 60 calendar days of the date the Party invoked the arbitration process, the arbitration shall be deemed dismissed with respect to subject grievance, unless the Parties agree otherwise. The Parties will cooperate in agreeing upon arbitration dates in an effort to resolve the dispute.

ARTICLE 14 - Official Travel

Section 1. Laws and Regulations

The Division shall follow Federal law and the Federal Travel Regulations (FTR) in effect at the time of this Agreement.

Section 2. Employees shall not be required to travel except under conditions and procedures prescribed by pertinent laws and regulations, including the FTR/DOC/NOAA/NOS Travel Regulations. Unless organization needs require otherwise, when practical, time spent on travel status will be scheduled during duty hours of the traveling Employee. However, Employees may travel at other times provided it does not impede the mission or increase costs to the Division.

Section 3. Management will make a reasonable attempt to ensure that travel assignments are made in a fair manner. When practical, Management will solicit volunteers from among qualified Employees for travel assignments. Both Parties understand that Management has the final authority to determine all the qualifications necessary to perform all assignments and to assign work to individual Employees. Upon an Employee request, Management will provide an explanation in writing as to why an Employee was not selected for a specific assignment involving travel.

Section 4. Employees will use government issued travel cards for official travel expenses unless such use is impractical or would cause exceptional inconvenience to the traveler or where exemption from use of the travel card is specified in the FTR. Upon request, supervisors will help Employees overcome any administrative issues that may delay reimbursement for any timely submitted travel voucher.

Section 6. Employees will not be required to use privately owned vehicles (POVs) for official travel. However, an Employee may elect to use a POV if the Agency mission is not impeded. Employees will be responsible for any additional cost, beyond what is authorized, that is incurred by their use of their POV.

Section 7. Employees will not be required to share lodging accommodations unless emergency conditions require this. Management will make every reasonable effort to find individual lodging. If sharing of lodging is required, this will be discussed with the Employee as a condition of, and prior to, the travel.

Section 8. The Union may request travel and per diem expenses related to any official time activities listed in Article 8: Official Time of this Agreement. Such requests must explain the need for the Union's physical presence and the unavailability of local representation. The Union shall make every practicable effort to rely on Employees who are locally available for participation in such activities. The Parties agree to utilize teleconferencing capabilities to minimize travel cost whenever practicable. Management will approve, on a case-by-case basis, any reasonable request that is consistent with the objectives and goals of the organization.

Subject to budget constraints, Management will fund travel and per diem expenses, not to exceed five (5) business days or one trip per year, for one (1) Union official to attend training related to official representational duties of the Union. This training may not be for internal Union business.

When the Union files a grievance, and the Parties agree that travel is necessary (i.e., alternative forms of meeting such as conference calling would fail to provide for an effective grievance meeting and no local representative is available), Management and the Union agree to equally share the travel costs and per diem for one Union representative when necessary to represent the bargaining unit.

In the event of Arbitration, Management and the Union agree to pay for travel for their own witnesses.

ARTICLE 15 - Computer Security and IT Policy

Section 1. Personal entertainment files, such as music files and movie files, may not be downloaded to government owned computers. Such files that are for official government business may be downloaded to government-owned computers or transferred to personal computers subject to the restrictions in this Article.

Section 2. Software that is to be used on government computers is to be purchased by the government. Employees that need such software for the performance of their official duties should make the purchase request through their supervisors. Management should respond to any Employee's software request within 10 business days.

Employees shall request permission from Management prior to installing applications on government-supplied IT equipment. Management will respond to such requests within 10 business days and will provide, in writing, an explanation for any installation refusal.

Section 3. Employees may elect to use their own personal mobile IT devices to perform their work provided such devices are not directly connected to a government internal network or contain PII or classified documents and comply with all existing DOC, NOAA and NOS policies concerning the handling of data and information provided such policies do not contradict this CBA or other existing Agreements between the Union and Management. The employee agrees to pay for all costs required to use such personal IT devices and maintain reasonable anti-virus protection on them. The Employee will allow access to the devices to respond to legitimate discovery requests for civil or criminal proceedings and shall comply with all directives of the Agency with respect to litigation holds, data preservation (including backups), data integrity, and protection.

Section 4. Should Management require the Employee to use government provided IT equipment in the office, field, or at an alternative worksite, Management will be responsible for the cost of all such equipment and supplies. Management is not responsible for any employee supplied IT equipment.

Section 5. Employees may use government-provided mobile IT devices in-off duty time for limited, personal, non-commercial use provided such usage does not increase the cost to the government, threaten IT security, or access inappropriate material.

ARTICLE 16 - Research Programs and Demonstration Projects

Section 1. Any research or demonstration project as defined under 5 U.S.C. § 4701, approved by OPM and affecting the bargaining unit employees, will be negotiated with the Union and not implemented until agreement is reached. Terms of this CBA will take precedence over any provision of the research or demonstration project unless specified by law or otherwise agreed to by Management and the Union.

Section 2 Employee participation in research and demonstration projects under this Article will not be construed as a forfeiture of an Employee right provided for by law, regulation, or this Agreement.

ARTICLE 17 - Public and Scientific Communication

- a.
 - 1. Management supports employees in conducting, presenting, and publishing scientific and technical research consistent with Division priorities and will not unreasonably restrict or interfere with employees' opportunity to do so.
- b.
 - 1. Subject to budget and mission constraints, employees are encouraged to participate in and give technical presentations at scientific and technical conferences. Permission to submit a paper to a conference does not obligate management to send the employee to the conference. However, Management will consider acceptance of a paper at a conference as a criterion in determining who may attend the conference.
 - 2. Employees may request annual leave before and after the conference, provided that it does not add to the expense of attending the conference or impede the Agency mission. Management may not use conference location as a reason to deny annual leave.
- c. There are a number of overarching policies and regulations addressing public and scientific communications. Particularly relevant documents include:
 - 1. Information Quality Act (Public Law 106-554) and associated Departmental and subordinate policies;
 - 2. Office of Management and Budget memorandum of December 16, 2004 "Issuance of OMB's 'Final Information Quality Bulletin for Peer Review'";
 - 3. Department of Commerce Administrative Order DAO 219-1 "Public Communications";
 - 4. Department of Commerce Social Media - Web 2.0 policy (2011); and,
 - 5. NOAA Administrative Order 202-735D "Scientific Integrity." Dec 7, 2011.
 - 6. White House Memorandum for the Heads of Executive Departments and Agencies on Scientific Integrity. Dec 17, 2010.

Section 2.

NOAA - OR&R CBA

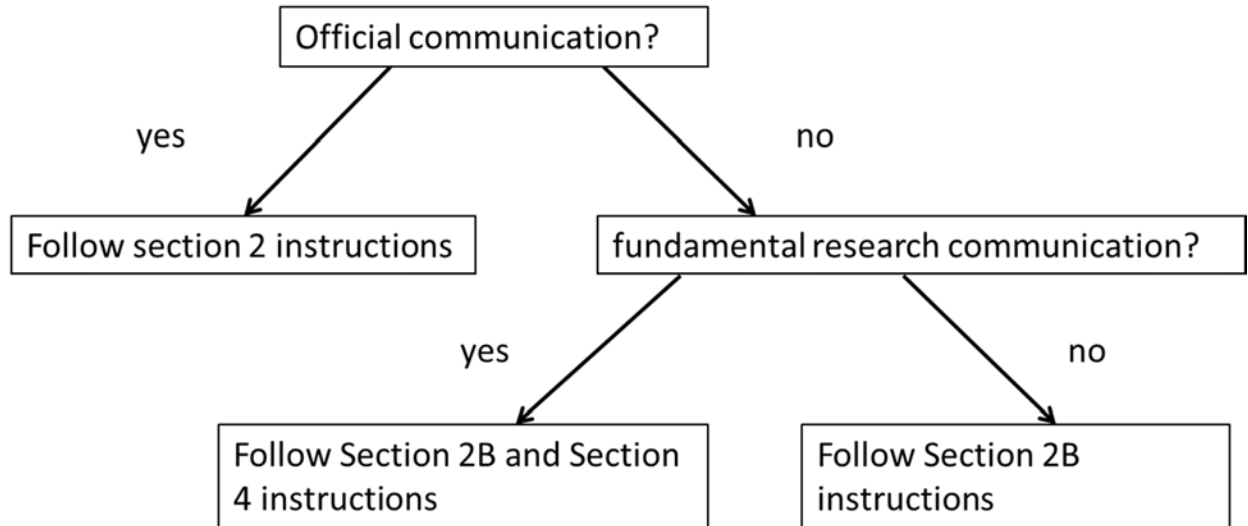

- a. All scientific publications or presentations that represent an official view of the Agency will follow the guidelines contained in the Information Quality Act (Section 515 of Public Law 106-554) and Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Bulletin M-05-03. Information products that do not represent an official view of the Agency are not covered by the IQA and OMB guidelines.
- b. No public communication may:
 1. contain classified or other material restricted by law or regulation;
 2. violate ethics regulations and statutes; or,
 3. improperly attribute personal views of the employee to the Department or views that could reasonably be perceived by the public as doing so.
- c.
 1. Official communications are public communication by an employee that relates to the Department's programs, policies, or operations and takes place or is prepared:
 - a. at the direction of their superior;
 - b. substantially during official working hours of the employee;
 - c. with substantial use of U. S. government resources; or,
 - d. with substantial assistance of U.S. government employee(s) on official duty.

Typically, official communications involve matters of policy, budget, or management. Official communications are subject to agency pre-approval.
- d. Employees may remove their names as author or contributor from any official report or communication if the employee concludes that it does not represent their best professional judgment or conclusions on the subject matter covered by the report or communication.

Section 3.

NOAA - OR&R CBA

- a. To be open and transparent about their work, and consistent with the NOAA Scientific Integrity Policy NAO 202-735D (Dec 7, 2011) and their official duties, ERD bargaining unit members may freely communicate to the media, their peers, and the public about scientific and technical matters based on their official work, including scientific and technical ideas, approaches, findings, and conclusions that are based on their official work, provided such communication does not violate the restrictions of Section 2(b) of this Article.
- b.
 1. If a bargaining unit employee finds it difficult to distinguish between an official communication and non-official communication, they should consult with their supervisor or other appropriate Management official for a determination.
 2. If adverse action is proposed against an employee for activities that involve the determination of whether a communication is an official or non-official communication, then the employee may request a management-appointed independent advisory review of that determination.
 3. Any employee who foregoes submitting a non-official and non-emergency communication to Management for approval assumes sole responsibility for adherence to the restrictions in Section 2(B) of this Article. Unless impractical, the employee will inform their supervisor or other appropriate Management official prior to the nonofficial communication if the communication involves Agency programs, policies, or operations.
 4. The following diagram is to be used only as an aid to assist in understanding this article.

Section 4.

- a. A brief definition of a Fundamental Research Communication is a public communication prepared as part of the employee's official work regarding the products of basic or applied research in science and engineering, the results of which ordinarily are published and shared broadly within the scientific community. Matters of policy, budget, or management are not considered Fundamental Research Communications.
- b.
 - 1. Management may require peer review and/or a disclaimer for fundamental research communications.
 - 2. Fundamental research communications that have undergone peer review by reputable scientific journals or conferences, as recognized by Agency past practice, will be assumed to have met the peer review requirement unless Management specifies otherwise in advance and provides reasonable justification for any additional peer review.
 - 3. Such additional review should be based solely on assessment of scientific suitability and merit and be consistent with the timely release of the communication. The employee will submit the draft fundamental research communication material to the approving official in a timely manner and confirm they have received it. The approving official will inform the employee of the expected date of reply. If the approving official fails to respond by the specified

- date and further delay would prevent or impede the fundamental research communication, then the employee may take this failure as approval of the fundamental research communication.
- c. An example of an acceptable disclaimer notice for a fundamental research communication, as per DAO 219-1 Section 7.03 is "The information in this document reflects the views of the author, and does not necessarily reflect the official positions or policies of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration or the Department of Commerce." Upon Management approval, alternative disclaimers may be used.

Section 5. Responders engaged in communicating on-going spill incident information to those outside the U.S. Government will be considered to be engaged in emergency official communications governed by the requirements of Section 10 of DAO 219-1.

ARTICLE 18 - Promotion and Hiring

Section 1. If a bargaining unit employee is promoted to a position in the bargaining unit, and within one year after the promotion, is demoted for inability to perform at the higher level, Management agrees to make reasonable efforts to return the Employee to a position equivalent to the one held before the promotion occurred, whenever practical.

Section 2. In filling an existing position as per H. R. Bulletin #210, FY17, the selecting official may, at his or her discretion, limit the area of consideration for ERD competitive personnel actions to members of the bargaining unit. When conducting a competitive personnel action drawing on applicants from outside of the bargaining unit, the selecting official will give first consideration to any bargaining unit employees listed on the certificate. The selecting official will expand consideration to other candidates listed on the certificate when, in the judgment of the selecting official, it would be in the best interests of the government to do so.

Section 3.

With respect to the NOAA Merit Assignment Plan:

- a. A vacancy announcement will be open for a minimum of 10 business days.
- b. Job vacancies (including competitive promotions) within the bargaining unit will be announced to bargaining unit employees via email as early as practical.
- c. If a ranking panel is established by NOAA's Office of Human Capital Services to evaluate candidates for a position within the bargaining unit, the Union will be given the opportunity to designate a representative to be an observer. The Union representative's purpose will be to help prevent foreseeable adverse effects in the selection process by helping to ensure that bargaining unit employees are rated accurately based on the written application. The Union representative will not: 1) participate in determining the ranking criteria, nor 2) participate in the final ranking discussions.

Section 4.

If an appropriate authority decides there was an unjustified or unwarranted personnel action as defined by the Back Pay Act (5 U.S.C. 5596) and applicable decisional law, and the Employee would have been selected for promotion, the employee will receive appropriate compensation and allowances as pursuant to the Back Pay Act.

ARTICLE 19 - Details and Temporary Positions

Section 1. A detail is a temporary assignment of an Employee, without an official personnel action to change his/her position assignment of record, to perform duties other than those of the position he holds under his/her current appointment. An Employee may be detailed only when there is statutory authority for such a detail. Proper use of details is specified in DAO 202-334, Section 2.04. If management determines that more than one Employee possesses the requisite qualifications for a particular detail, it will request volunteers unless it determines that there are strong programmatic reasons not to do so. Management will provide a written explanation of their choice if requested by the Union or affected Employee. If temporary relocation is required for an involuntary detail, Management will approve payment of Employee relocation expenses as provided by law and regulation. If temporary relocation is required for a voluntary detail, Management may approve payment of Employee relocation expenses as provided by law and regulation unless stated in the detail announcement that relocation funds are not available.

Section 2. Employees recovering from a serious illness or injury may submit a written request to their supervisor requesting temporary assignment commensurate with their illness or injury and qualifications. Management will consider such requests in accordance with applicable rules, regulations, and medical recommendations.

Section 3. Employees will not be assigned to details exceeding 120 days unless authorized as per DAO 202-334, government-wide regulation, or law. Selection for details of more than 60 days to a higher grade position or a position of known promotional potential will be done through the competitive process.

Section 4. Any Employee detailed to a higher graded position will receive a temporary promotion to that higher grade, pursuant to government wide regulation, existing Department of Commerce policy, and the Employee's qualifications for holding a higher graded position. An Employee being temporarily assigned to a lower-graded position will not have his/her salary or classification adversely affected.

Section 5. Temporary work assignments, particularly those of a higher grade, may be rotated among qualified Employees to the extent practicable.

Section 6. Work that, as a result of the detail, is distributed to other Employees of the bargaining unit will be parceled out in a fair and equitable manner.

ARTICLE 20 - Part-time Employment and Job Sharing

Section 1. Job sharing involves an arrangement between two or more Employees under which they share a full-time job. Employees wishing to job-share must make a written request to Management, including requested work-schedules. Management agrees that entry into job-sharing should be strictly voluntary and initiated by the Employee without coercion. Employees who are job-sharing are considered part-time.

Section 2. Part-time career employment is regularly scheduled work from 16-32 hours a week in either the permanent competitive or excepted service in Tenure Group I or II. Employment on a temporary or intermittent basis is not included. Any full-time Employee wishing to convert to part-time must submit a written request to his/her supervisor. Management will make a good faith effort to accommodate the request and will provide a written explanation to the Employee within 10 business days if the request is denied. Management will notify the Employee that this action may affect Employee benefits, and the Employee should inform himself/ herself of the expected impact on benefits. There is no guarantee that an Employee converting to part-time employment may subsequently convert back to a full-time employee.

Section 3. Management will notify the Union when recruiting for a temporary employee to staff a bargaining unit position that was previously filled with a permanent employee. Employees with temporary appointments will be considered members of the bargaining unit and are entitled to representation.

ARTICLE 21 - Incident Response

Section 1. Response, for the purposes of this Article, is construed to mean answering telephone calls, faxes, or emails on technical queries with respect to actual spill events or other emergencies or reacting to said events in person by reporting to the Employee's place of work or on scene to perform work. Compensation means one of the many forms of pay or benefits that are afforded to Employees for their time, to include, but not limited to: pay, premium pay, credit hours, and compensatory time.

Section 2. When practical, Management will solicit volunteers from among qualified Employees for field assignments involving emergency response and try and provide opportunities to all qualified staff. Management may consult with the appropriate Scientific Support Coordinator with regards to needed skills for the response but Management retains the right to determine qualifications necessary to perform any particular field assignment.

Section 3.

- a. If an Employee, either in a duty status or on an unannounced recall, responds to an emergency response incident outside of his/her scheduled working hours, the Employee may claim a minimum of 1 hour of compensation. If the Employee is required to travel from his/her present location to his/her office or alternative work location to fulfill the duties of the response, a minimum of 2 hours of compensation may be credited to the Employee.
- b. Although Employees are encouraged to choose overtime rather than compensatory time off, they may choose either as a premium pay compensation option except as noted in this Article.
 - 1) Supervisors may approve bargaining unit employees to earn premium pay compensation only during an emergency or to meet extraordinary program needs. The determinations of "emergency" and "extraordinary program needs" will be made by the Employee's supervisor. Incident response will generally meet the definition of "emergency."
 - 2) Employees shall not exceed the 80-hour cap for unused compensatory time off.

NOAA - OR&R CBA

- 3) Management may put a time limit on the use of any accrued compensatory time off not less than 26 pay periods. Compensatory time that is not used within the time limit or that exceeds the 80 hour cap in 3 b.(2) may revert to overtime pay at the rate at which it was earned.
- 4) Nothing in this section applies to the earning or use of travel compensatory time.

Section 4. If an employee is away from his/her residence while on approved leave and is recalled into duty status, travel from his/her present location, he/she will be compensated as per Federal Travel Regulations and the Department of Commerce Travel Handbook.

ARTICLE 22 - Awards

Section 1. Management and the Union believe that there should be transparency in award procedures and that all Employees should have a fair and equitable opportunity to receive awards. Employees will be considered for performance based awards in accordance with the Department and NOAA guidelines and any applicable rules, laws, regulations, and government-wide regulations.

Section 2. Management may establish and chair a committee (ERD Awards and Recognition Team (ART)) to make recommendations to management to reward ERD Employees' accomplishments not related to their performance. The team consists of a total of two members each from management and the bargaining unit, with one of the managers as the chair. The Chair may choose to include an advisor from the OR&R Business Services Group. The management team members are appointed by the Chief, ERD and the employees are appointed by the Union. Employees will rotate on an annual basis.

ARTICLE 23: Time and Leave

Section 1.

Employees will accrue annual and sick leave in accordance with government-wide rules and regulations. Employees should apply in advance for approval of all anticipated leave. All leave requests will be responded to by the approving official in a timely manner. Leave will not be denied as a disciplinary measure but may be denied based on the needs of the organization. Management will not force employees to use personal leave against their will.

Section 2.

The use of accrued annual leave is a right of the employee and will not be denied for frivolous reasons or in an inequitable manner. Employees should apply in advance for approval of all anticipated annual leave to permit orderly scheduling. It is understood by Management and the Union that although Employees have a right to use annual leave but only with Management's approval. Annual leave may also be granted when it is not scheduled in advance and operational needs allow. Leave for personal emergencies will be granted unless there is an operational exigency that requires the employee presence. Employees should request leave through the Department's WebT&A system and Management shall approve or disapprove the Employee's request through the Department's WebT&A system. Management will provide the basis for disapproval of an Employee's leave request in the comment section of the request for leave.

Management shall notify Employees when there is potential "use or lose" leave, and Employees shall take appropriate action to ensure that they use this leave prior to the end of the leave year. When scheduling conflicts arise, Management should attempt to allow Employees to resolve the conflict themselves. Unresolved conflicts will be settled on a fair basis.

Section 3.

The use of sick leave is an employee benefit. Grants of, requests for, and substantiation of sick leave must be done in accordance with federal law and government-wide rules and regulations. Employees will not be required to substantiate a request for sick leave unless the sick leave exceeds three days or Management has identified a pattern of leave abuse. An employee with a chronic medical condition that results in periodic absences from work of more than three days will not have to substantiate individual absences if the employee provides every six months an updated medical certificate that clearly states the continuing need for periodic absences, unless Management has a credible reason to suspect that the leave request is not valid. At the discretion of the Agency, sick leave of up to 30 days may be advanced in cases of serious disability or ailment when required by the exigencies of the situation as determined by the approving official. The employee must request advanced sick leave through the Department's WebT&A system. Sick leave cannot be advanced when it is likely that the Employee will be separated from government employment before the advanced leave will be earned.

Section 4.

Employees are entitled to leave without pay (LWOP) under situations covered by the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 and situations covered under other applicable laws and government wide regulations. At the discretion of Management, leave without pay may be granted for other reasons. Employees should consider consequences to retirement and other benefits before requesting such leave.

Section 5.

Administrative leave is an Employee's authorized absence from duty without charge to leave or loss of pay. Management and the Union recognize and agree to follow the statutory types of leave (administrative leave, investigative leave, notice leave, and weather and safety leave) established by the Administrative Leave Act of 2016, government-wide regulations, Department and NOAA policy and guidelines. Excused absences may also be granted for activities that are in the government interest. These include, but are not limited to, blood, organ or tissue donation, military leave and jury duty. Employees called to jury duty must give to the government any compensation earned for jury duty but may retain reimbursement for expenses accrued.

Section 6.

Definition of Terms:

Core Hours: The time periods during the workday, workweek, or pay period during which an Employee covered by a flexible work schedule is required to be present for work. Core hours are not required for the OR&R workforce.

Flexible Time Band: The times during the workday, workweek, or pay period during which an Employee covered by a flexible work schedule may choose to vary his or her times of arrival to and departure from the work site, consistent with the duties and requirements of the position. The flexible time band is 6:00am to 7:00pm local time, Monday through Friday.

NOAA - OR&R CBA

Credit Hours: Extra hours an Employee works in excess of the basic work requirement under a flexible schedule. Credit hours are distinguished from overtime hours in that Management has not officially ordered the Employee to work. The Employee, by choice, and with proper supervisory approval, has decided to work additional hours. Full-time Employees may not carry more than 24 credit hours from one pay period to the next. Credit hours must be earned within the flexible time-band. The use of credit hours, as with other leave, must be approved in advance by the supervisor.

Lunch Periods: On any workday of five hours or more, Employees must include a 30-minute lunch period, which is uncompensated. Lunch periods cannot be used at the beginning or ending of a day.

Tour of Duty: The hours of the day (including specific start and end times) and the days of the workweek that constitute an employee's regularly scheduled workweek.

Workday: A workday is any day Monday through Friday inclusive and does not include Saturday or Sunday.

Work Schedules:

Alternate Work Schedule (AWS) – an umbrella term that refers to both compressed and flexible work schedules.

Compressed: Involves longer but fewer workdays. An Employee completes 80 hours during each biweekly pay period in less than 10 workdays. These schedules are fixed with no flexibility in arrival and departure times each day, relative to the employee's established tour of duty. Once established, the schedule does not change. Hours must be worked within the flexible time band with no more than 10 hours worked on any given day to meet the 80 hours biweekly requirement. Employees cannot earn credit hours.

An Employee may choose one of the following compressed schedules:

- (1) Four 10-hour day work week for each week in a pay period; or,
- (2) Eight 9-hour days and one 8-hour day for a total of nine days (5/4-9) in a pay period.

In each case, an employee will work a total of 80 hours during each biweekly pay period.

With supervisory approval based on consideration of office and work requirements, Employees may establish arrival and departure times for each day, Monday through Friday, and select their day(s) off. Once selected, the schedule is fixed and does not change. An Employee may not vary the daily or weekly schedule in any way.

NOAA - OR&R CBA

If an Employee has a need to change their schedule it must be discussed and approved by the supervisor at least one pay period in advance of beginning the new schedule.

Not more than 20% of Employees may use a compressed work schedule, known as "four ten", at any one time during the term of this Agreement. Employees interested in working such a schedule will submit a request to their supervisor to be placed on the program when an opening(s) is (are) available. Management will determine the eligibility of an Employee and inform said Employee within 10 workdays of receipt of a request. Employees have the right to grieve any eligibility rejection within 30 calendar days pursuant to Article 11 - Grievances. Should there be more eligible Employees than openings, a lottery system will determine the Employees selected for the four ten compressed work schedule.

Should an Employee selected for the four ten schedule choose to terminate his/her four ten schedule, and subsequently desires to return to a four ten schedule they must follow the process above for a new four ten schedule. If the Employee seeks to change or alter his/her schedule or if Management exerts any option to alter the Employee's schedule otherwise, the Employee's subsequent placement on the four ten schedule will revert to the process described above.

Flexible: Involves flexibility for each workday with variable arrival and departure times. An employee will work a total of 80 hours during each biweekly pay period (within the established flexible time band) with the advantage of extra days off. Credit hours can be earned. Within OR&R, employees are limited to no more than two work days off per pay period, with no more than 10 hours worked on any given day to meet the 80 hours biweekly requirement.

Standard: A traditional, non-AWS schedule in which employees work a fixed schedule, with no flexibility in arrival and departure time, of eight hours a day, five days a week (Monday-Friday) to meet the 80 hours biweekly requirement. No credit hours are earned.

Employees must have supervisory approval to establish a schedule and for any changes to that schedule.

Management is committed to providing maximum work schedule flexibility to Employees consistent with the full execution of the mission. In order to effectively implement that flexibility, clear work schedules must be established, documented, and time accurately reported.

Section 7. Establishing Work Schedules (compressed, flexible, standard)

The hours of work are established for OR&R employees from 6:00 AM to 7:00 PM local time, Monday through Friday. No Employee may have a regular recurring schedule that has one or more days that start prior to 6:00 am or end after 7:00 pm. Further, Employees may not have a regular, recurring schedule that includes more than 10 work hours on any given day to meet the 80 hour per pay period requirement. Supervisors have the discretion to deny employee schedule requests that may prevent the office from effectively carrying out its functions.

Employees may select an alternate work schedule (which includes flexible and compressed work schedules), or a standard/basic work schedule. Schedules must be consistent with the requirements set forth in the paragraph above.

Employees do not have a right to establish an alternate work schedule. An Employee's schedule shall not preclude attendance at necessary meetings or functions related to his/her positions/responsibilities. Employees are expected and required to make adjustments should the need arise for their attendance at meetings, participation in group projects, mandatory training, or similar work-related events.

Section 8. Documenting the Schedule

Once a schedule is agreed upon, the employee is required to document their choice of schedule and work hours in a designated Google form. Any changes to the agreed upon schedule will require supervisory approval. Except in special cases, subject to supervisor discretion, one full pay period's notice is required to change a work schedule.

Management does not require formal requests within WebT&A to earn credit hours, only to use them. Approval to earn credit hours can be done through a brief email to the supervisor a minimum of once a pay period, indicating when, why and how many credit hours are sought.

Section 9. Recording Arrival/Departure and Time Worked:

All Employees must record their arrival and departure time and number of hours worked each day in the Department's WebT&A system. Employees recognize that Management must account for Employees hours of work as required by law. Employees' failure to accurately and daily record their hours of work in the Department's WebT&A without a reasonable explanation may be subject to discipline.

No changes are required or intended to procedures already in place for Employees to validate and supervisors to certify time/attendance in the Department's WebT&A each pay period. Further, apart from the approval of accrual and use of credit hours discussed in the section above, all other processes related to leave use and approval remain unchanged.

NOAA - OR&R CBA

No additional methods for documenting time and attendance are required by OR&R, though Division Chiefs (or equivalent level supervisors) have discretion to require additional documentation for monitoring Employees' time and attendance, and may delegate this decision to the Branch Chief level.

Section 10. Removal of Employees from an AWS Schedule:

If employees fail to comply with OR&R policy and/or procedures concerning alternate work schedules, NOS/NOAA requirements, or the organization's mission is adversely impacted by the schedule, then the supervisor has the discretion to remove employees from participation in alternative work schedule options and place the employee on a standard/basic work schedule. In such cases, the employee must wait at least six months before seeking supervisor approval to reestablish an alternate work schedule.

The following are examples of situations where a supervisor may remove an employee from participation in AWS:

Employee is not adhering to all rules, regulations, government-wide regulations, and law for AWS

Employees' participation results in serious adverse impact to mission activities or objectives of the organization; and/or

Employees' duties must be performed on a set schedule which are inconsistent with AWS;

In situations in which all Employees or a specific group of Employees must work together as a team, or when participation will adversely affect customer service or daily operations.

When an Employee is on official travel or training for three (3) workdays or more, the AWS can be temporarily changed to a standard schedule (e.g., 8:30-5:00) for the duration of the travel or training. In such instances, Employees are not subject to the six month ban on reapplying for AWS. Employees may be given one pay period advance notice of this scheduling change, when such notice is possible.

Section 11.

Any Employee who knows he/she will be out of the office when timesheets are due should validate his/her timesheet in the Department's WebT&A system prior to the period of absence or make arrangements with his/her timekeeper to validate his/her timesheet in the Department's WebT&A system. If a valid extenuating circumstance occurs that prevented the Employee from documenting his/her hours of work on a daily basis in the Department's WebT&A system (e.g. an employee is on official travel or has a personal emergency the timekeeper will record the Employee hours of work as an eight (8) hour workday, 40 hours a week, 80 hours a biweekly pay period. The affected employee will then have one pay period (two weeks) in which to correct the original timesheet. If the employee does not meet the due date for correction of the timesheet, the supervisor will have the option of exerting disciplinary action on the employee.

NOAA - OR&R CBA

ARTICLE 24 - Dependent Care

Section 1. Management recognizes that Employees may have childcare, dependent-care, or other family-care needs during normal working hours. The Parties also recognize the need for such Employees to secure adequate child, dependent, and family care arrangements.

Management agrees to reasonably accommodate the child-care and dependent-care needs of Employees in accordance with applicable laws, rules, and regulations in effect at that time (e.g., leave, hours of work, overtime, part-time employment, and alternative workplace arrangements).

Section 2. Management agrees to consider initiatives by Federal government agencies to establish or improve availability of childcare to bargaining unit employees. The Union is responsible for bringing such initiatives to the attention of Management.

Management agrees to promote the mutual interests of bargaining unit employees and Management to the appropriate Federal contract officer(s) or management contact when aware of bargaining unit issues with childcare providers. For issues outside of Management's purview, Management agrees to convey the Union's interests to the parties mentioned in this Section.

ARTICLE 25 - Outside Activities and Employment

Section 1. Employees may pursue outside employment or business opportunities except under the following conditions:

1. Conflict of interest (as described in 18 U.S.C. §§ 201-203, 205, 207-209)
2. Activities inconsistent with the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch (5 CFR 2635)
3. Adverse effect on performance of an employee's official duties
4. Prohibited by Federal statute.

Section 2. Management encourages employees to jointly review proposals for outside activities or employment with the Department of Commerce Ethics Law and Programs Division prior to engaging in such actions.

ARTICLE 26 - Employee Assistance Program

Healthy Employees and healthy work environments are important to the Department and NOAA. Good relationships at work, and at home, allow Employees to focus on the tasks at hand and to accomplish more. If difficulties occur, professional counselors are available through NOAA's Employee Assistance Program (EAP) to provide guidance and support to Employees and their families. The EAP is a counseling service offered to NOAA employees. Through this program, Employees are offered a certain number of free counseling sessions. For more information regarding this program, please contact your servicing Human Resources Advisor.

ARTICLE 27 - Parking and Transportation

Section 1. Commuter parking will be provided to Seattle-based Employees according to NOAA Western Regional Center (WRC) regulations. Commuter parking for field Employees may be provided on a case-by-case basis, subject to available facilities, leases and/or other allowable resources (e.g., subsidies) specific to each location.

Section 2. Both the Management and the Union agree to promote alternative commuting options. These may include advertising ridesharing opportunities, telecommuting when appropriate, and taking advantage of any NOAA transportation subsidies available to Employees.

ARTICLE 28 - Health and Safety

Section 1. Management and the Union agree to work together to provide a work environment free of recognized hazards and to prevent and eliminate accidents and injuries. It is both the Union's and Management's goal to comply with applicable federal, state, and local laws and regulations protecting the working environment, health, and safety of the Employees covered by this Agreement.

Section 2. Employees will report unsafe and/or unhealthy conditions or incidents to their supervisor or other appropriate authority. If requested, the anonymity of the Employee will be protected to the extent possible. No reprisal will be taken against the Employee for reporting suspected health and safety violations.

Section 3. Employees will be provided at no cost to them the necessary safety equipment and clothing to perform their assigned duties. Requests for safety equipment may be made by bargaining unit employees to their supervisor. This may be done in consultation with the OR&R Health and Safety Officer. The bargaining unit employee's supervisor will then determine the best way to meet the request.

Section 4. When confronted with unsafe working conditions, an Employee should let his or her supervisor know about the problem and discuss solutions before refusing to work. The Employee has the right to decline to perform assigned tasks because of a reasonable belief that, under the circumstances, the tasks pose an imminent risk of death or serious bodily harm coupled with a reasonable belief that there is insufficient time to effectively seek corrective action through normal hazard reporting and abatement procedures.

Section 5. Stress and/or exhaustion can create an unsafe working environment through both direct and indirect impacts on an Employee's health and safety. Extended overtime or lengthy deployments during response operations may increase the likelihood and severity of the risks associated with stress and exhaustion. Employees are encouraged to monitor and assess their continued ability to perform during such activities. If an Employee notifies his/her supervisor or the lead Scientific Support Coordinator (SSC) on-scene that stress and/or exhaustion from ongoing response operations are either creating a potentially unsafe working environment or affecting his/her ability to perform his/her duties, he/she may request and may be granted either

- a. leave for a short duration (e.g. one to two days) using appropriate work leave options, or
- b. a temporary reprieve from field deployment, with proper documentation.

Many unique personal factors can affect an individual's susceptibility to stress and/or exhaustion. If the Employee needs to be absent or unavailable for response deployment for a longer period of time, he/she will be required to provide documentation from a licensed health care professional. This documentation should address any limitations on the employee's assignments or working conditions and any requested job modifications, if applicable. Stress and exhaustion will be considered to be significant mitigating factors should the Agency take any adverse action against an Employee whose availability for field deployment or for overtime work has become limited due to lengthy or repeated field deployments.

Management agrees to consider and address Employee stress and exhaustion in staffing response activities and will address documented stress hazards when they are identified by Employees.

Section 6. The policy and procedures established in NOAA Aviation Safety Policy, NAO 209-124 will be followed. Requests for aviation safety equipment beyond that required by the NOAA Aviation Safety Policy may be made by bargaining unit members to their supervisor. This may be done in consultation with the OR&R Safety Officer. The bargaining unit employee's supervisor will then determine the best way to meet the request. Upon request, supervisors will help Employees overcome administrative issues related to certifications to the extent possible.

ARTICLE 29 - Position Classification

Section 1. When Management changes Position Descriptions (which are more than de minimis) for Employees, Management will notify the Union. Management will provide affected Employees and the Union with copies of their modified Position Description a minimum of 15 calendar days in advance of implementation. The Union may bargain the impact of a substantial change that affects working conditions by a position description revision of all positions within a series group within the bargaining unit.

Section 2. Any Employee, who believes that his/her position is inaccurately described, may request, through their Rating Official, that a job audit be conducted. If the Rating Official concurs with the Employee, the Rating Official may request a job audit of that position. If the Rating Official does not concur, the Employee may officially submit a classification appeal to the Department's Office of Human Resources Management or to the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) in accordance with Department Administrative Order, DAO 202-511 (Position Classification). The Employee may seek the assistance of the Union in formulating this appeal.

Section 3. When a job audit is conducted for any reason, the affected Employee may request Union assistance. Any written evaluation statement prepared by Office Human Capital Services following a job audit shall be furnished to the Employee prior to the resolution of the classification appeal. The employee shall have the right to make written comments within ten (10) business days after receipt of the evaluation statement, and those comments shall be attached and forwarded with the written evaluation statement.

ARTICLE 30 - Contracting Out and Outsourcing

Section 1. Management shall ensure that contracting out civil service work does not contradict Employee rights and protections under this Agreement or the law.

Section 2. If it becomes necessary to contract out bargaining unit work, Management will make every reasonable effort to minimize impacts to bargaining unit employees. Management will consider allowing current Employees to take on duties as career enhancements, prior to making the decision to contract out work. Management will adhere to all government wide regulations regarding placement of affected Employees as specified in Federal statute and regulations (including OMB Circular A-76 and Federal Acquisition Regulations).

Section 3. Management agrees to review and respond to concerns that the Union may wish to raise with regard to the utilization of contractor personnel on-site work similar to, or formerly performed by, bargaining unit employees.

The Union recognizes Management's right to assign work. Management will not direct contractors to perform inherently governmental work. Management will direct contractors to perform work only within the scope of their contracts.

In the event that Employees witness defective, deficient or unethical work being performed by a contractor working within the Division they are encouraged to report it to ERD management. If Employees disagree with the technical decision of a contractor, Employees may express their concern either orally or in writing to ERD Management. Within 10 business days, ERD Management will follow-up with the concerned Employee.

Section 4. Upon request, Management shall provide the Union with a sanitized, i.e. no Privacy Act Information, copy of the FAIR Act Inventory for bargaining unit employees. The Union copy shall include the position, series, and status of bargaining unit employees (inherently Government or Contract position).

ARTICLE 31 - Reduction in Force and Transfer of Functions

Section 1. Management will give the Union at the earliest possible date a written notice of its intention to submit a Reduction in Force (RIF) request to NOAA or conduct a transfer of function that involves geographical relocation of Employees (TOF). The notice will include the reason for the RIF or TOF, the approximate number of Employees who may be affected by the action, and anticipated effective date that the action will be taken.

After the notice has been given, but before Management has submitted its input to an NOAA request to DOC for a RIF/transfer, Management agrees to a discussion with the Union. This is not a bargaining session.

- a. Management will provide to the Union a copy of that portion of its input to the NOAA request for a RIF/transfer that pertains to the ERD bargaining unit. Thereafter, Management will provide to the Union a copy of the Department's approval of the request.
- b. Management will provide the Union, at the earliest possible date, with the notice list containing the names of Employees who are affected by the RIF/transfer and will be receiving RIF/transfer notices and, if applicable, a list of any Employees who received Certificates of Expected Separation.
- c. Before the issuance of specific RIF's notices, the Union will be provided with a copy of the annotated retention register(s) to be used to issue any notices that could go to Employees. Amended registers will be provided to the Union as soon as they are prepared. The retention register will include: the Employee's tenure group, competitive level, and service computation date, and the adjusted service computation date. Employees and/or their designated representative(s) will be permitted to review the applicable retention register so that the Employee may consider how the retention register competitive level was constructed and how the relative standing of the Employee was determined.
- d. Management will give a specific notice in writing to Employees who will be affected by a RIF, with a copy to the Union. This notice period will be no less than 90 calendar days prior to the implementation date except when a RIF/transfer is caused by circumstances that are not reasonably foreseeable, the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) at the request of the Department of Commerce, may authorize a notice period of less than 60 days but at least 30 full calendar days before the effective date of release. The Parties agree to be bound by the OPM decision.

NOAA - OR&R CBA

Section 2. Management will consider using vacancies, to the maximum extent possible and practicable, to avoid or lessen the impact of the RIF within the affected competitive area at the onset of and during the RIF, by making job offers to an individual within the competitive area who is affected by position abolishment, and who meets the qualifications for the position.

Section 3. Whenever possible and to the extent practicable, and before conducting a budget-driven RIF/transfer, Management will attempt to avoid the use of a RIF by considering other cost-saving methods, including attrition. At the request of the Union, Management will provide a cost study of savings methods considered in order to avoid a RIF /transfer. A cost study, for the purposes of this section, may comprise a summary of cost saving methods Management may have developed, used, or considered in arriving at its decision.

Section 4. Management will make a reasonable effort to train an Employee affected by a RIF, where necessary upon reassignment in lieu of separation.

Employees subject to transfer have mandatory and discretionary relocation expenses paid under applicable government-wide regulations.

An Employee offered a vacant position may decline the offer without any prejudice, except as specified by law or by government-wide regulations, to the Employee's other RIF rights and options. An offer of a vacant position shall be held open for seven (7) business days to allow the offeree time to evaluate the offer and accept or reject it.

Section 5. Eligible Employees separated by a RIF may apply for placement on a reemployment priority list (RPL). Former Employees on an RPL will receive first consideration for ERD vacancies for up to two (2) years.

Section 6. Management will make a good faith effort to provide outplacement assistance to Employees adversely affected by RIFs. This includes Employees who are unable to accept assignments to another commuting area. Management also encourages

NOAA - OR&R CBA

Employees subject to a RIF to apply to Employee placement programs such as ICTAP, CTAP and RPL.

Employees may use additional assistance provided by the Department of Commerce to the RIF/transfer affected individual. This may include information on the placement assistance programs available through OPM; individual job counseling and referral; stress and mental health counseling through the Employee Assistance Program; job testing, assessment, and evaluation; training on self-directed job search, resume preparation, and interviewing; and financial planning.

Section 7. The Union reserves its statutory rights to negotiate on the impact or implementation of any individual RIF/transfer with respect to matters not specifically covered by this Agreement.

Section 8. Employees who are relocated as a result of a transfer of function are entitled to reimbursable expenses allowable under the Federal Travel Regulation (FTR), Department of Commerce (DOC) Travel Regulation, and NOAA Travel Regulations (NTR).

ARTICLE 32 - Furloughs

Section 1. This Article applies only to those Employees covered under 5 CFR 752.401(c), Employees Covered. Except as provided for under 5 CFR 752.404(d) (2), Exceptions, the Agency will take no action to furlough Employees until the Union has been notified.

The Parties agree that furloughs of more than thirty (30) consecutive days or more than twenty-two (22) discontinuous workdays shall follow the provisions of Article 30, Reduction in Force and Transfer of Functions.

Section 2. Management will seek to identify cost saving actions that could reduce or eliminate the need for potential furloughs. Management will engage the Union, if practicable, in discussions prior to the announcement of any administrative furloughs. Management will consider any reasonable suggestion by the Union on cost saving actions that could reduce or eliminate the need for potential furloughs.

Administrative Furlough is a planned event by the Agency which is designed to absorb reductions necessitated by downsizing, reduced funding, lack of work, or any budget situation other than a lapse in appropriations.

- a. An Employee will be given a furlough notice of at least thirty (30) days in advance of the effective date of an administrative furlough unless there is reasonable cause to believe the Employee has committed a crime for which a sentence of imprisonment may be imposed. Advance written notice and an opportunity to answer are not required for a shutdown furlough which occurs without pay due to unforeseeable circumstances, such as sudden breakdowns in equipment, acts of God, or sudden emergencies requiring immediate curtailment of activities.
- b. The furlough notice will:
 - i. State the specific reason for the proposed furlough
 - ii. Allow at least seven (7) calendar days to respond orally and in writing;
 - iii. To the proposal notice and furnish evidence in support thereof;

NOAA - OR&R CBA

- iv. The right to be represented by an attorney or other representative;
- v. Inform the Employee of his/her right to review the material, which is relied upon to support furlough notice;
- vi. Inform the Employee of his/her right to receive a written decision with the specific reasons for its action at the earliest time practicable; and,
- vii. Inform the Employee of his/her appeal rights according to applicable laws, rules, statutes, and the terms of this Agreement and their right to respond.

Shutdown Furlough (emergency) occurs when there is a lapse in appropriations and can occur at the beginning of a fiscal year, if no funds have been appropriated for that year, or upon expiration of a continuing resolution, if a new continuing resolution or appropriations law is not passed.

- a. Exempt Employees are not affected by a lapse in appropriations. This includes Employees who are not funded by annually appropriated funds. Employees performing those functions will generally continue to be governed by the normal pay, leave, and other service rules.
- b. Excepted Employees refers to employees who are funded through annual appropriations but are excluded from furlough because they are performing work that, by law, may continue to be performed during a lapse in appropriations or authorization. Excepted Employees include employees who conduct emergency work involving the safety of human life or the protection of property, or certain other types of excepted work. Emergency Employees are not automatically deemed excepted Employees for the purpose of shutdown furloughs. NOAA legal counsel working with senior agency managers, determine which Employees are designated to be handling “excepted” and “non-excepted” functions.

Section 3. Management has the right to determine the total number of furlough days for the bargaining unit. When requested by the Union. Management will provide written explanation if some, but not all, of the Employees in a competitive area were selected for furlough. The Union may grieve such selective furlough exclusion through the negotiated grievance procedure in the CBA.

Section 4. When it is necessary to furlough some, but not all, Employees in an organization unit, DOC/NOAA may solicit volunteers at the affected work site. The volunteers may request Leave without Pay (LWOP) for the furlough days. If a sufficient number of volunteers do not come forth, DOC/NOAA will select Employees for furlough utilizing lowest service computation date (SCD). Employees not furloughed must be qualified to perform the functions (as determined by the Agency) that are to continue to be performed during the period of furlough.

Section 5. When DOC/NOAA have made a decision to furlough Employees for a specified number of days during a specified period of time, Employees will be provided an opportunity to submit a schedule of their preferred furlough day and date(s) unless Management determines that doing so would adversely impact the Division's ability to manage its workload with a reduced workforce. Any schedule conflicts amongst Employees will be resolved by utilizing SCD. DOC/NOAA's operational needs will take precedence.

In the case of an administrative furlough affecting Employees for more than five (5) consecutive days total, Management agrees to explore opportunities for providing Employees leave prior to the furlough to apply for unemployment benefits, and/or to contact job placement, and/or employment agencies.

Section 6. The Employee will be given seven (7) calendar days to respond to the furlough notice. Once the Employee has submitted a written and/or oral reply, DOC/NOAA will issue a decision in writing. The written decision will be delivered to the Employee on or before the effective date of the furlough.

Section 7. In accordance with appropriate regulations, when an Employee is designated to go into furlough status, any annual or sick leave that has been approved is canceled. Canceled or interrupted annual or sick leave is not forfeited, but may be used at a later date.

Section 8. Allowances for the effects of a furlough on Employees regarding assigned work will be made when conducting Employee performance appraisals.

Section 9. DOC/NOAA will normally provide sufficient notice of expected return to duty to Employees to avoid any instances of Employees losing pay and/or being placed in an AWOL status. However, these notices advising Employees when they should return to work at the conclusion of a shutdown or administrative furlough would have to be tailored to the specific situation, which may include advising Employees to monitor OPM's website, and media outlets for notification that a continuing resolution or appropriation has been signed by the President.

ARTICLE 33 - Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO)

Section 1. Management and the Union agree that there shall be no discrimination against any Employee on the basis of race, color, national origin, age, sex, sexual orientation, disabilities, or religion. Toward this end, Management will administer an EEO program in accordance with applicable laws, government-wide regulations, Department and NOAA policies.

Section 2. Management agrees to meet at the request of the Union to review and discuss specific issues relating to equal opportunity as they arise. The Parties further recognize that EEO plans and reports are developed in accordance with guidelines and instructions promulgated from the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC). Management agrees to provide copies of such plans and reports at the request of the Union.

Section 3. The OR&R may have one representative on NOAA's NOS Equal Employment Opportunity and Diversity Advisory Committee contingent upon the continuing approval of the NOS Assistant Administrator. Selection of the candidate representative will be at the discretion of the Union. If a bargaining unit employee is chosen by the Office to serve, Management agrees to fund travel costs for one representative for the purposes of training related to committee membership, not to exceed one trip per year.

Section 4. Any meeting requested by or initiated by the Department of Commerce Office of Civil Rights or NOAA Office of Inclusion and Civil Rights is not considered a formal discussion as described in 7114 (a)(2)A of 5 U.S.C Chapter 71. Management is not obligated to notify the Union of such a meeting. However, the Employee may elect to be accompanied by a representative, who may be a Union representative.

ARTICLE 34 - Disciplinary or Adverse Action

Section 1. Purpose

Discipline or adverse action is intended to correct unacceptable conduct, attitude or work habits, and poor performance. The goal is not to punish the Employee, but to encourage acceptable conduct and work habits through corrective action. Discipline should be fair and reasonable in its degree of severity to the offenses. Disciplinary and/or adverse actions should be initiated in a timely manner. Management shall determine when the need arises for disciplinary and/or adverse actions and shall be taken in accordance with applicable laws, rules, and government-wide regulations in effect at the time of this agreement.

Management may take adverse actions for misconduct and/or performance in accordance with 5 U.S.C. Chapter 75 and 5 CFR 752, for just cause as will promote the efficiency of the Service and may not take disciplinary and/or adverse actions against an employee for any reason prohibited by 5 U.S.C. 2302, Prohibited Personnel Practices.

Disciplinary and/or adverse actions will be taken in such a way as to respect the Employee's privacy and to avoid embarrassment to affected employees.

Management will generally conduct fact-finding to collect evidence to determine whether misconduct has occurred requiring consideration of disciplinary or adverse action. Nothing in this Article shall limit the right of the Union to request information in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 7114.

Section 2. Penalty Determination

The specific penalty for an instance of misconduct and/or poor performance shall be tailored to the facts and circumstances of the situation and in consideration of the Department Administrative Order, DAO-202-751, Discipline. To aid in the selection of an appropriate disciplinary action, consideration shall be given to the Table of Offenses and Penalties included in Appendix B of DAO-202-751. The penalties are guidelines only and are not mandatory. Each situation shall be considered on its own merits and the penalty should be fair and reasonable in its degree of severity.

- a. In order to determine the appropriate penalty for an Employee's misconduct or poor performance, Management will consider the relevant factor and applicable law, rule, and government-wide regulations.

- b. The Parties recognize that discipline may be progressive in nature, however, the progressive sequence of discipline is not required. It is understood, however, that progressive discipline need not follow any specific sequence and that some offenses may be cause for severe action, including removal, irrespective of whether previous disciplinary or adverse actions have been taken against the offending Employee.
- c. The proposing official (generally the first level supervisor) will rely upon all the information collected during the fact-finding referred to as the evidence relied on file relevant to the disciplinary or adverse action, both favorable and unfavorable to the Employee, in making decisions about whether to take action and the severity of any action taken.

Section 3. Reprimands

A reprimand is a written letter to an Employee based on unacceptable conduct or poor performance. Prior notice is not required before the issuance of a reprimand. A reprimand shall state the specific reasons for the action. If requested by the Employee or Representative, Management will provide the Employee or their representative with a copy of the evidence relied on file that contains all relevant documents supporting the action. A reprimand will remain in an Employee's Electronic Official Personnel Folder (e-OPF) for up to two years, but may be removed by the management official, at its sole discretion, anytime within the two-year period. A reprimand shall inform the Employee of his/her grievance rights as stated in this Agreement.

Any written reprimand persisting in the file past the specified purge date will be considered as purged. Purged records may not be relied upon or referred to in subsequent actions or transferred to any subsequent supervisor of the Employee.

Section 4. Adverse Actions

Management may take an adverse action, including performance-based adverse action, as for such a cause that will promote the efficiency of the service.

The proposing official is generally the first level supervisor, and the deciding official is generally the second level supervisor.

A. Suspensions of 14 calendar days or less:

Suspensions require a proposing and deciding official. An Employee against whom a suspension of 14 calendar days or less is proposed is entitled to;

1. Advance written notice of the proposed action that specifies the reasons for the proposed action. If requested by the Employee or Representative, Management will provide the Employee with a copy of “the evidence relied on file” that contains all relevant documents supporting the action.
2. The Employee will have 10 business days to respond orally and/or in writing and to furnish affidavits and other documentary evidence in support of their response. Reasonable official time will be given to the Employee or his/her representative to prepare a defense to any proposed adverse action. The proposal notice will designate the deciding official to hear the Employee’s oral and/or written response. The deciding official has the authority to make a final decision on the proposed adverse action. If the Employee requests an extension to the reply period before the expiration of the stated reply period, the deciding official may extend the reply period if he/she determines that good cause exists for an extension based on extenuating circumstances. The right to answer orally and/or in writing does not include the right to a formal hearing with an examination of witnesses;
3. Be represented by an attorney or other representative; and,
4. A written decision at the earliest practicable date, containing the specific reasons for the decision and notifying the Employee of his/her right to file a grievance under the provisions of this Agreement except that the grievance will be initially filed at the next organizational level above the deciding official.

B. Suspensions of more than 14 calendar days, Reductions-in-Grade or Pay, Removals; and Furloughs:

Suspensions of more than 14 calendar days, Reductions -in-Grade or Pay, Removals; and Furloughs of 30 days or more, require a proposing and deciding official. An Employee against whom an adverse action is proposed for one of the above is entitled to:

1. Thirty (30) calendar days advance written notice of the proposed action, which specifies the nature of the proposed action. If requested by the Employee or Representative, Management will provide the Employee with a copy of the evidence relied on file that contains all relevant documents supporting the action. Reasonable official time will be given to the Employee or his/her representative to prepare a defense to any proposed adverse or disciplinary action. If there is reasonable cause to believe that the Employee has committed a crime for which a sentence of imprisonment may be imposed, the proposed action may be effected less than 30 calendar days from the receipt of the advance written notice;
2. The Employee will have 15 business days to respond orally and/or in writing and to furnish affidavits and other documentary evidence in support of their response. If the Employee requests an extension to the reply period before the expiration of the stated reply period, the deciding official may extend the reply period if he/she determines that good cause exists for an extension based on extenuating circumstances.
3. Be represented by an attorney or other representative; and
4. A written decision at the earliest practicable date, containing the specific reasons for the decision and informing the Employee of his/her appeal rights.

C. Appeal and Grievance Rights.

The Employee has the right, rather than filing a grievance, to appeal the Management action to the Merit System Protection Board but may not do both. If the Employee's appeal is based, in whole or part, on allegation of discrimination, the employee may file an EEO complaint with NOAA's Office of Inclusion and Civil Rights under statutory procedures.

ARTICLE 35 - Performance Evaluation

Section 1.

- a. Employee performance will be rated following all applicable laws, government-wide regulations, regulations, and the Department's rules and the general policy listed in Department of Commerce Administrative Order, DAO 202-430, Performance Management System and accompanying Department of Commerce Performance Management Handbook, except where Department of Commerce Administrative Order, DAO 202-430 Performance Management System and accompanying Department of Commerce Performance Management Handbook conflicts with this Agreement. In such a circumstance, the Agreement will prevail but not over Government-wide regulations implemented before the Agreement.
- b. Employee's critical elements and standards will be compiled into the Employee's performance plan and uniform for like duties in like circumstances and be related to the duties of the position. Management will provide Employees with guidance and materials necessary to perform their jobs in a satisfactory manner.
- c. External factors beyond the control of the Employee, but that affect performance results of the Employee, will be taken into consideration by the rating official (supervisor) when evaluating the Employee's performance. Performance measures should be objective, measurable, realistic, and stated clearly. If Employees have concerns regarding any of the measures in their performance plan, they should raise them to their supervisor at the beginning of the performance rating cycle or promptly as they arise.
- d. The Employee may share his/her performance plan with a Union representative. During the performance of representational duties, a Union representative may request and obtain a copy of the Employee's performance plan from the Employee's supervisor after presenting the supervisor with written documentation from the affected Employee that identifies the Union representative.
- e. Documentation of success in completion of milestones by the Employee is voluntary and highly recommended. Failure of the Employee to submit documentation to the supervisor shall not be cause for an adverse rating of the Employee. The supervisor will provide written justification for the employee.

Section 2.

- a. Employee evaluation will begin with a pre-appraisal meeting between the Employee and his/her supervisor. The appraisal meeting is where the Employee will receive his/her Rating of Record. At the appraisal meeting, the Employee will state if they agree or disagree with the supervisor's appraisal in order to provide management with an indication of potential disagreements. Employees or Union officials considering disputing a performance rating should inform Management of that intention as soon as possible and may file a Request for Reconsideration either orally or in writing to the rating official (supervisor) within 5 calendar days of receipt of the appraisal from the rating official. The rating official must provide a written decision back to the Employee within 5 calendar days of receipt of the Request for Reconsideration. Employees seeking to dispute their ratings are strongly encouraged to utilize the request for reconsideration process.
- b. The Employee may formally grieve the rating of record under Article 12, the negotiated grievance procedure, if the matter is not resolved through the Reconsideration process.
- c. Notice of unacceptable performance after all other regulatory requirements are met, will be given to the Employee at least 30 calendar days prior to the issuance of any proposed notice of corrective action (demotion or removal). If a notice of proposed corrective action is issued, the Employee or Employee's designated Union representative will have fifteen (15) business days to respond under the negotiated grievance procedure or take other appropriate action.
- d. Employees may utilize the Department's Commerce Learning Center for available web-based training on the 5- Level Performance Management System. ERD will ensure that supervisors are familiar with their responsibilities under the 5-Level Performance Management System.

Section 3.

- a. When either a regular appraisal period or an extended appraisal period ends and the Department's established deadline for providing ratings of record passes or a subsequent rating of record is issued, the Department/NOAA shall not produce or change retroactively a rating of record that covers that earlier appraisal period except that a rating of record may be changed —

- 1) Within 60 days of issuance based upon an informal request by the Employee;
 - 2) As a result of a grievance, complaint, or other formal proceeding permitted by law or regulation that results in a final determination by appropriate authority that the rating of record must be changed or as part of a bona fide settlement of a formal proceeding; or
 - 3) Where the agency determines that a rating of record was incorrectly recorded or calculated.
- b. In a RIF, an Employee will receive service credit based on an average of the Employee's three most recent ratings of record received during the four-year period prior to the date of the issuance of a specific RIF notice (or an officially designated performance credit cut-off date) and will be used to determine eligibility for additional credit toward an employee's service computation date. Law, government-wide regulations, and Department's policy, at the time of this contract will be used to determine the additional service credit allowed from the performance ratings.

Section 4.

- a. Performance based awards will be issued in accordance with applicable laws, government-wide regulations, and the Department's policy on the Performance Management Recognition System. Performance-based awards will be based solely on the Employees' performance ratings. No Employee with a lower summary performance rating than another Employee will receive a greater performance-based award (as measured by percentage of salary) than the Employee with the higher summary performance rating.
- b. Provided funds are available, ERD will allocate funds each fiscal year for performance-based awards under the Department's Performance Management Recognition System. Funds set aside for performance-based awards to Employees, but not actually spent for this purpose, may be used for other awards or other Division purposes provided such awards or purposes are not in conflict with applicable law, regulations, this Agreement, or the intent of this Article. The performance-based award amount set aside represents the maximum amount

- that may be awarded to Employees; the total actually awarded will be based on performance ratings of records.
- c. If requested in writing by the Union, Management will provide to the Union within 10 business days after such information becomes available, or 10 business days after the request is received, whichever is later, annual reports on the amount of money allocated to the 5 tier performance award pool, the CAPS bonus pool percentage, the estimated ERD bargaining unit labor costs, and the amount of money actually awarded for performance bonuses to the bargaining unit.

ARTICLE 36 - Telework

Section 1. Foundational Policies

Telework procedures will be governed in order of precedence by applicable law, government-wide regulations at the time of this Agreement, this Agreement, and the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan October 2021, dated November 4, 2021.

Section 2. Union Duties While Teleworking

Union representatives may perform representational duties while teleworking on Official Time (see Article 8). That time will be recorded in the Department's WebTA (see Article 23, Time and Leave) as Official Time. Internal Union business will not be conducted on official time regardless of the Employee's worksite.

Section 3. Availability of an Employee's Residence for Telework

An Employee's residence or other pre-approved location may be used as an alternate worksite for telework provided it is conducive for telework and is deemed safe. Use of an Employee's residence for telework requires the mutual consent of both Management and the Employee as documented in the signed telework agreement. If an Employee is using their residence as an alternative worksite (AW), it is the Employee's responsibility to ensure a proper and safe work environment is maintained.

The availability of an Employee's personal property, including their residence, to perform government functions is at the discretion of the Employee. An Employee who teleworks from their residence will provide their supervisor with a timely notice if their residence becomes unavailable or unsuitable as a telework location and, if possible, will provide an estimate of how long it will remain unavailable. If an employee's only approved AW is their residence and this location becomes unavailable, the Employee is not considered to be "telework ready" until the Employee notifies management that their residence is once again available as a telework location. During this period, the Employee is expected to work from their traditional worksite or request appropriate leave.

Section 4. Mandatory Telework during Unusual Circumstances

When advance notice (no less than 2 hours prior to the end of an Employee's work shift) is given of a closure or potential closure of the traditional worksite due to an emergency situation, "telework ready" bargaining unit employees will telework even if not scheduled to do so provided they are able to perform their normal work assignments at the telework location. If the Employee is unable to perform their normal work assignments at the alternative work location, they will be excused (i.e. placed on Weather & Safety Leave) for the same time period as non-teleworking employees.

NOAA - OR&R CBA

During any single emergency (non-COOP) closure, telework ready Employees will be required to telework at the alternate worksite designated in their telework agreement for up to six days of unscheduled telework. Following the sixth day of such unscheduled telework, Employees will not be required to telework at the alternative worksite designated in their telework agreement. Rather, if and once management provides an alternate worksite, Employees will be required to work at that site. Following the sixth day of unscheduled telework during the single emergency closure, to the extent management is not able to find an alternate worksite, Employees will not be required to perform unscheduled telework and will be excused (i.e., placed on Weather & Safety Leave) for the same time period as non-teleworking employees.

Employees are not responsible for ensuring that they will always have sufficient assigned work to accomplish while on mandatory telework. An employee will notify their supervisor if they have insufficient assigned work that can be accomplished while teleworking or lack the necessary equipment or supplies due to circumstances outside of the Employee's control. If this lack of work cannot be resolved, the Employee will be excused (i.e., placed on Weather & Safety Leave) for the same time period as non-teleworking employees.

Routine maintenance and construction activities are not considered to be emergency situations that trigger mandatory telework even if they result in the closure of the primary worksite.

ARTICLE 37 - Training

Section 1. Appropriate and relevant training and career development are in the best interests of NOAA, NOS, ERD, and the Employee. Maintaining proficiency in connection with assigned duties as stated in the position description and performance plan is among the responsibilities of all Employees. The assigned training and developmental activities for Employees are the responsibilities of Management.

Section 2. Management will provide and make known to Employees general training information external, internal, and webinars offered through the Department of Commerce Learning Management System Center (currently the CLC). Additionally, Management will advise individual Employees of appropriate and relevant training opportunities that meet their individual training needs.

Section 3. Employees are encouraged to develop an Individual Development Plan (IDP) in coordination with their respective supervisors. If requested, Management will provide access to IDP training.

Section 4. Employees are encouraged to participate in technical, scientific, career, and individual development conferences and meetings that are relevant to their positions and career development objectives and consistent with their IDPs. At Management's discretion, Management will provide funds for registration, travel, and fees, resources permitting, for Employees to attend such events. Attendance priority will be given to Employees who will be presenting papers or posters, or speaking at such conferences/meetings.

Section 5. In accordance with DOC and NOAA policies, Administrative Orders, 5 U.S.C. 5757 allows, but does not require, the payment for expenses related to professional credentials. This authority may not be used to qualify an applicant (Employee) for a position. So long as the expense directly supports identified strategic interests of OR&R and ERD, appropriated funds can be used to pay for:

- a. Expenses for employees to obtain professional credentials, including expenses for professional accreditation, State-imposed and professional licenses, and professional certification.
- b. Examinations to obtain such credentials.

- c. Organizational membership in the association or society so long as the primary benefit of membership is a prerequisite to obtaining the professional license or certification.
- d. Membership for a specific agency position that the incumbent uses to improve the conduct, supervision, or management of his/her function. Additionally, appropriated funds may be used to pay for attendance at meetings which are concerned with the functions or activities for which the appropriation is made or which will contribute to improved conduct, supervision, or management of the functions or activities in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 4110.

Section 6. Employees are encouraged to participate in long-term training which supports the work of ERD. Employees may discuss long-term training with their supervisors and include such training in their IDPs. Approval of long-term training will be done in accordance with applicable DOC and NOAA policies and Administrative Orders.

Section 7. In the event that multiple employees are interested in a similar training opportunity and resources restrict the number that can participate, those not selected to participate will receive consideration, for one calendar year, when the same or similar opportunity arises again. It is the responsibility of the Employee to reapply for the training opportunity to receive this consideration.

Section 8. When practical, management will schedule formal work related, in house training courses. For purposes of this training, Employees' alternative work schedules will be temporarily suspended and Employees will conform to a regular work schedule, 8:30 to 5 for the duration of the training. Employees will be allowed a lunch period, local time to the host venue.

Section 9. The Employee recognizes his/her individual responsibility to keep his/her personal personnel training records current and complete to fully reflect total employment experience, training and education.

ARTICLE 38 - Labor-Management Activities

Section 1. Management will consider requests for official time for ERD employees who are officially designated Stewards or elected/appointed Union officials, workload permitting, to attend Union-sponsored or labor related training which management and the Union agree are of mutual concern and benefit.

Section 2. No employee may receive more than forty (40) hours every twelve (12) months for Union-sponsored or labor related training and the total hours allocated to the Union may not exceed one-hundred twenty (120) hours per calendar year unless agreed to by both management and the Union. Travel and per diem to the training venue may be considered for reimbursement on a case by case basis and in accordance with government-wide travel regulations.

ARTICLE 39 - Office Space

Section 1. General Principles and Shared Offices

- a. To the extent practical, each employee of the bargaining unit shall be furnished with office/work space that facilitates productivity and employee satisfaction.
- b. Management will usually attempt to assign individual offices to staff but may require shared offices or community (hotel) workspaces in future circumstances. In the case of a shared office, the Employees in the office to be shared may be consulted by Management on the shared office space. Employees in a shared office should be reasonable and flexible regarding their concerns about potential office mates. At an Employee's request, the Union may represent either or both Employees during this consultation.

Section 2. Individual assignments at Western Regional Center (WRC)

- a. For the purpose of this Article, Vacant Staff Office Space is defined as non-temporary NOAA WRC office space that is to be allocated to or is presently used by ERD and is vacant (not used as primary office by any Employee for greater than 90 days) or is occupied less than 3 days a week due to telework or soon to be vacant and either:
 1. Management has determined that the office space qualifies as vacant ERD staff office space, i.e., space available for occupancy by bargaining unit employees; or
 2. Meets all of the following criteria:
 - a. is adjacent to or very near existing office space occupied by bargaining unit employees; and
 - b. could be available to bargaining unit employees without interfering with Management's exercise of its right to determine the methods and/or means of performing work; and
 - c. is not intended to be occupied by managers or other federal employees who are not part of the bargaining unit.

Section 3. Formula for use at the WRC

Unless there is a clear and justifiable reason for locating specific staff close to a common area or resource needed by Management to achieve its mission, Vacant Staff Office Space will be assigned as follows:

- a. Management will notify the Union and all Employees within that commuting area about the availability of office space and request notification from all Employees who are interested in occupying the office.
- b. If no Employee applies for the space, then the method of this Section does not apply. If only one Employee applies, he/she will be assigned the office space. If more than one Employee applies, Management will select the Employee to be assigned to the vacant office space based on the highest applicant score given by the following formula:

Score = 5 times General Schedule grade level + years of service as determined by the Service Computation Date in employee's electronic official personnel folder.

- c. The Union will be notified in writing of the selection; this notification will include a list of staff who expressed interest in the vacant office and a brief rationale of the assignment based on the process and the criteria used. The Union reserves the right to grieve the selection with Management if factors other than the formula in Section 3(B) were used to make the assignment.

Section 4. Vacant office space outside of ERD's allotted space at the Western Regional Center (WRC)

In some instances, office space in the WRC allocated to the Office of Response and Restoration, that is neither to be allocated to nor in use by ERD, may become vacant. Where such office space meets all of the criteria in Section 2(a)(2) (other than the requirement that the office space "is to be allocated to or is presently used by ERD") and the Union would like for the space to be assigned to an employee, the Union may, in writing, notify Management of the specific office space it seeks. Management will thereafter raise the request with the division manager responsible for the office space at issue. Management will then provide an answer to the Union and the reason for its answer. Should ERD be able to secure the office space the Union requests, Management will assign the relevant office space in accordance with Section 3 of this Article. When vacant space is available, Management recognizes that it is generally in the interest of both Management and the Union to secure office space that the Union finds desirable.

Section 5. Preservation of rights

Nothing in this Article should be interpreted as abridging the rights of Management or the Union under 5 U.S.C. §7106.

Section 6. Union records

Management shall provide the Union Chief Steward a secure storage location for Union documents in an office space dedicated to a Union officer chosen by or designated by the Union.

ARTICLE 40 - Phased Retirement

Section 1. Management and the Union agree that it can be beneficial to both the Employee and NOS/ERD to facilitate the transfer of knowledge and experience of senior Employees in succession planning and implementation. Therefore, Management and the Union support voluntary use of “phased” retirement as defined under section 100121 of Public Law 112-141 and OPM regulation 79 FR 46608. Rules for phased retirement will follow Department of Commerce, Office of Human Resources Management, Human Resources Bulletin, HR Bulletin #192 dated 3/21/16 except where that Bulletin conflicts with this Agreement in which case the Agreement will prevail.

Section 2. No Employee will be forced to take phased retirement. Phased retirement is voluntary but not an employee’s right. Employees must complete the Department of Commerce Phased Retirement Request/Agreement and submit it to the first line supervisor for recommended approval or disapproval to the second line supervisor. The second line supervisor maintains authority to approve or disapprove the phased retirement application and mentoring activities. If approved, the second line supervisor submits the application to the Agency Head (or designee) (OHCS) for final approval. The first and second line supervisor will provide a reason for disapproval as required on the application. Management will respond to the Employee’s phased retirement request in a fair and timely manner. The employee understands that the mentoring program must be fully vetted before the phased retirement can receive final approval by the Agency Head (or designee). If a decision is not reached by Management within 30 business days of receipt of the Employee’s application, Management will notify the Employee of its status. Denial of any application to otherwise qualified staff will be based on the operational needs only, and the Employee will be offered an explanation in writing.

Section 3. Any Employee who transitions to a phased or partial retirement status will remain a member of the bargaining unit.

Section 4. Employees may grieve any denial or dismissal of the phased retirement agreement using the negotiated grievance procedure.

Section 5. The DOC/NOAA will temporarily suspend mentoring requirements for phased retirement Employees involved in an emergency response if DOC/NOAA determines that it is impracticable for the Employee to meet the mentoring requirement during the spill emergency. Management reserves the right to approve who the retiree mentors as part of the requirements for the program.

NOAA - OR&R CBA

1. Introduction

From the outset of the COVID-19 pandemic, the entire NWS Workforce demonstrated remarkable agility, creativity, tenacity, and perseverance to continue delivering life and property saving data, forecasts, and warnings to the public while ensuring workforce safety through remote operations under the emergency evacuation order. Yet again, NWS employees at all levels together proved their resilience, professionalism and devotion to the mission and the communities we serve. A hearty congratulations and well done to all! Looking ahead to the time when the pandemic-induced emergency evacuation order is lifted, we will all begin transitioning into the 'new next' of both our personal and professional lives. Like any major change or transition, it will bring excitement as well as trepidation. To succeed together, we will all need to demonstrate that same agility, creativity, tenacity, and perseverance that we showed at the outset, as well as a great deal of mutual patience, care, and concern for one another. This reintegration plan, jointly negotiated with NWSEO leadership, aims to enable a smoother transition and successful reintegration by providing a 'one-stop-shop' of information and guidance, as well as setting expectations for the future state of work across NWS.

Throughout the pandemic, we have learned a lot about the nature of our work in the context of a mandatory evacuation order— both positive things as well as others. Reintegration provides our first opportunity to apply these lessons to increase workplace flexibilities without compromising optimal mission execution. In the pages below, you will find the plan outlining the stages and criterion for a 'smart-steady-flexible' reintegration that accounts for a near 100% vaccinated workforce as well as local COVID conditions and office-level work requirements. Telework policies and procedures are also described, and Appendix-A contains observations that can be applied to management decisions at the local level when determining how to balance increased workplace flexibilities with mission requirements. Leadership's expectations are that decisions will be fair and consistent, data-driven, and respect a degree of parity in similar work environments while overall expanding workplace flexibility across the workforce while maintaining mission excellence.

Finally, looking beyond the next step of reintegration, NWS and NWSEO together are committed to a continuum of learning by observing, assessing, and adapting to make meaningful changes to sustain mission excellence while simultaneously improving the overall employee experience of status employees and the next generation team members in the world's best weather service.

2. Overview / Background

1. NWS mission and how it has been affected by COVID-19
 - a. The National Weather Service (NWS) provides weather, hydrologic, and climate forecasts, impact-based decision support services and warnings for the United States, its territories, adjacent waters, and ocean areas, for the protection of life and property and the enhancement of the national economy.
 - b. NWS has been able to offer continued support to all partners and fulfill all mission goals despite restrictions brought on by the COVID-19 pandemic. However, some mission-critical job duties have required continued onsite presence.
2. The purpose of this document is to provide guidance to NWS managers and employees regarding reintegration and our flexible telework posture going forward post pandemic.
3. NWS principles for reintegration:
 - a. NWS approach is, and will remain: Smart, Steady, Flexible and Science Driven.
 - b. There will not be a switch flipped where people are suddenly all back in the office. NWS personnel and NWSEO leadership will be given a 30-day notice before any change in phase for any office takes effect.
 - c. The ideal future state of the NWS workforce will capture the “best of both worlds” by providing telework flexibility to the greatest extent that is practicable given the functions of the job, needs of operations and in person interactions.
 - d. Solutions will continue to be locality/facility based and can be adapted as needed.
 - e. When applicable, all labor-management obligations will be completed before changes are made.

3. Phasing / Reintegration Steps

The below phases for facilities are outlined in the recently updated NOAA COVID-19 Reintegration Implementation Plan. NOAA uses Centers for Disease Control \(CDC\) county data to determine when a facility could change phase. If phase definitions are updated based on the evaluation of new scientific data that accounts for our widely vaccinated workforce, the parties may immediately discuss updating this MOU. If there is a spike in the number of COVID-19 cases, the site may move to a lower phase to ensure employee safety. Note that all phasing guidelines and language included below are intended to be followed under routine conditions. Emergency situations, or other circumstances may require deviation from these guidelines.

Phase 0 / Reintegration Step 0

- Mandatory telework is in effect.
- Onsite facility presence is limited to only Mission-Critical Personnel.
- Community is identified as a “Sustained Hotspot,” meaning an area of substantial or high risk for COVID-19 transmission, based on the CDC’s Area of Concern Continuum.
- The facility may proceed to Phase 1 if the community is no longer considered a “Sustained Hotspot” in the CDC’s Area of Concern Continuum.
- For initial advancement onto Phase 2 or Phase 3, employees will receive a 30 day notice before moving forward.

Phase 1 / Reintegration Step 1

- CDC color category is Red/Orange, meaning Community Transmission Levels and CDC Area of Concern Continuum reports have been “High or Substantial” for at least four consecutive weeks.
- Up to 25% occupancy in an office.
- If more than 25% of employees are interested in coming on-site, the office will need to work an “in-person” schedule to not exceed the acceptable occupancy.
- The facility may proceed to Phase 2 if Community Transmission Levels are “Moderate” for four consecutive weeks and community is not an “Emerging Hotspot” per the CDC’s Area of Concern Continuum.
- The facility may move back to Phase 0 if the community is a “Sustained Hotspot” per the CDC’s Area of Concern Continuum.
- Employees will receive a 30-day notice when the phase will move forward to phase 2.

Phase 2 / Reintegration Step 2

- CDC color category is Yellow, meaning Community Transmission Levels and CDC Area of Concern Continuum reports are “Moderate” for at least four consecutive weeks
- Up to 50% occupancy in an office.
If more than 50% of employees are interested in coming on-site the office will need to work an “in-person” schedule to not exceed the acceptable occupancy.
- The facility may proceed to Phase 3 if Community Transmission Levels are “Low” for four consecutive weeks and community is not an “Emerging Hotspot” per the CDC’s Area of Concern Continuum.
- The facility may move back to Phase 1 if the Community Transmission Levels are “High/Substantial” for two of four prior weeks.
- Employees will receive a 30-day notice when the phase will move forward to phase 3.

Phase 3 / Reintegration Step 3

- CDC color category is blue, meaning Community Transmission Levels and CDC Area of Concern Continuum reports are “Low” for at least four consecutive weeks
- Up to 100% occupancy in an office.
- The facility may move back in phase if Community Transmission Levels warrant based on the CDC Area of Concern Continuum. If a facility regresses to a lower phase due to local health concerns, then an office will follow the NOAA protocols for moving back.

4. Telework

The COVID-19 pandemic forced changes to the workplace including a mandatory evacuation order to increase workforce safety. Many employees learned how to perform the functions of their job in a new way during a difficult time, meeting the challenges head-on. NWS demonstrated that we have been able to carry out our mission effectively.

We now have an opportunity to revisit how we were operating prior to the pandemic and leverage lessons learned during the pandemic to integrate telework and remote work into our strategic workforce efforts.

As we look to the future and build upon the Office of Personnel Management's (OPM's) encouragement, we intend to strategically leverage more workplace flexibilities such as telework, remote work alternatives, and alternative/flexible work schedules as tools to help attract, recruit, and retain the best possible workforce.

Overall, the eligibility of a given position for telework should be grounded in a determination whether the position's duties and responsibilities may be performed at an alternative worksite without diminution of employee performance or agency operations and the process should be as transparent as possible. The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 (Public Law 111-292) includes language that says that telework should not diminish employee performance. In making these decisions, individual units are in the best position to define what it means to "ensure that telework does not diminish employee performance or agency operations." NWS will restructure jobs not currently eligible for telework in a way that would allow incumbents (except those who are legally prohibited) to telework at least on a situational basis, as OPM encourages such innovation where it is possible. A workforce that is entirely telework-eligible would be best positioned to withstand emergencies and other disruptions to normal business operations, although such arrangements may not be possible on a day-to-day basis for some operational positions.

Moving forward, the NWS will provide increased opportunities for telework above pre-pandemic levels. Decisions will be data and employee driven. Telework can provide the following benefits:

- increased employee performance, efficiency, morale, job satisfaction.
- help in attracting and retaining skilled workers with diversity from a wider geographic area.
- increasing federal employment for individuals with disability and for veterans per Executive Order (EO) 13548 and EO 13518;
- lower absentee rates and attrition;
- reduced greenhouse emissions and support for Executive Order 13514;
- and improved standards of living by allowing employees to:
 - (i) be more productive without the interruptions of an office setting;
 - (ii) gain increased flexibility in managing their time and schedule;
 - (iii) reduce the cost of daily commute;

- (iv) stay productive in times of poor weather, mass transit delays, and natural disasters; and
- (v) enjoy a more rewarding and balanced work-, family-, and personal-life.

As noted above, telework flexibilities should be considered to the greatest extent that is practicable given needs of operations and in person interactions between team members and with our partners. Per the June 10, 2021 Integrating Planning for A Safe Increased Return of Federal Employees and Contractors to Physical Workplaces with Post-Reentry Personnel Policies and Work Environment Memo, “any such limitations should be based on job functions, documented misconduct, or performance-related challenges specific to telework, and other mission related priorities, however, rather than mere managerial preference.”

As NWS proceeds with reintegration, NWS and NWSEO will convene a monthly review panel consisting of the NWS Chief Operating Officer (COO), NWS Management Representative, the NWSEO President and the Executive Vice President to review any telework concerns and review proposed telework ideas for suitability and consistency.

Telework Guidelines:

- NWS non-bargaining employees will follow the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan, Oct 2021. Bargaining unit employees will also follow the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan, Oct 2021 and consistent with or as supplemented by this MOU.
- Managers and supervisors should look at functions/suitability of a position, IT resources and security, and employee safety concerns to determine which activities are portable. They should take into consideration the individual’s duties as well as the way the work unit functions as a whole.
- Managers and supervisors should work immediately with all non-bargaining employees, and for BU employees through the LOT to determine which practices identified during the pandemic-related evacuation orders can continue post-reintegration, taking into account employee flexibility, mission-critical activities and operational requirements. This can include adding additional fixed telework days per pay period, and identifying which activities are suitable for fixed or situational telework. Managers and supervisors when working through the LOT will consider pandemic telework observations listed in Appendix A in determining suitable post-integration telework arrangements which are consistent with operational needs.
- Local schedule changes will be bargained in the Local Office Team (LOT) in accordance with Article 8 of the Parties’ Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA).
 - As noted in the NOAA Reintegration Implementation Plan. At locations approved for Phase 2:
 - Employees who have been working on-site on a regular basis may be subject to reasonable adjustments to telework to support additional on-site activities.

- Employees who have NOT been working on-site on a regular basis and want to voluntarily return to on-site work may do so with supervisor approval for Phase 2 approved activities.
- Employees who have been teleworking full time who do NOT wish to return to on-site work prior to a requirement to do so will continue to telework full time unless their presence is required on-site for a mission essential or mission critical task.
- In anticipation of an eventual Phase 3 designation, the LOT will survey the bargaining unit to determine which employees would like to have their telework schedule changed from pandemic operations.

For all employees: There are times when an employee must be in the office (e.g., to attend a meeting) or on official travel on a regularly scheduled telework day. In such cases, the employee may request approval from his/her supervisor to reschedule the telework day during that pay period subject to the needs of the office. In addition, some employees' work requirements do not permit them to schedule regular telework days in advance. Therefore, these employees may schedule their telework days with their supervisors' approval on a weekly basis. This requirement must be annotated on the employee's telework agreement. Overall needs of the office must take precedence over working off-site on a regularly scheduled telework day if a conflict arises.

For shift working employees, managers should make efforts to allow these employees the opportunity to exchange this onsite shift for a telework shift at a later time; however, this cannot always be guaranteed.

If called in after a telework shift has started, the commute into the duty location counts as duty time.

Teams should have opportunities to meet together in person and should be scheduled well in advance.

Telework agreements can be individualized, and the number of days of telework authorized per pay period for each employee may vary consistent with the needs of the particular office and duties of the employee. Schedules including up to, but not exceeding, eight days of telework per pay period may be permissible in appropriate circumstances.

Remote Worker

An alternative work arrangement by which an employee is scheduled to perform the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite (e.g., home, other alternative location) other than the employee's traditional worksite, either within or outside of the locality pay area of the traditional worksite and is not scheduled to report to the traditional worksite at least twice on a regular/recurring basis each pay period. Requests for remote work are submitted to the NWS Deputy Assistant Administrator for consideration.

Telework Agreements

The employee and his/her supervisor shall discuss the expectations in the proposed telework agreement, including the performance levels required of the employee. The employee's immediate supervisor is the approving official for Telework Agreements entered under this policy.

When there is a modification or termination of a telework agreement, Management is encouraged to provide employees with 30 days of advanced notice prior to implementing the modification and not less than ten (10) working days' advance notice to allow the employee to make necessary arrangements.

This agreement supersedes the guidance in Article 26 of the NWS-NWSEO Negotiated Agreement, March 16, 2021.

This MOU may be reopened by either party after 18 months from the date of execution or if phase definitions are updated based on the evaluation of new scientific data that accounts for our widely vaccinated workforce. Unless mutually agreed, this MOU will have the same term as the March 16, 2021, NWS-NWSEO Negotiated Agreement.

APPENDIX A: Collected observations on telework during Pandemic-related evacuation orders. There are likely other observations not captured below, and these observations are not representative of the full breadth of innovation and flexibility employees exhibited to ensure continuity of the NWS Mission on short notice.

During the pandemic, the NWS Workforce demonstrated resilience and creativity to accomplish the mission while pivoting many functions to remote operations. The observations set forth below illustrate some of telework experiences collected during the pandemic. While these experiences are not an exhaustive list, they can serve as context for local discussions between employees, supervisors and stewards, as applicable as we consider what is sustainable over the long term, post-pandemic. Going forward, acceptable levels of risk for long-term post pandemic operations at all our locations must leverage the 'best of both worlds,' that is balancing workforce flexibility and morale with acceptable levels of operational and situational risk.

NWS-Wide:

- Virtual meeting platforms facilitated greater attendance and information flow, especially for broad invitation meetings (e.g. All Hands, Diversity celebrations, etc.)
- Virtual or hybrid hosted conferences enabled wider attendance and more professional development opportunities, especially by shift workers or those with limited personal flexibility for travel; but NWS hosted events where knowledge and experience transfer through in person mentoring was less than optimal.
- Wider professional networks were built, but deeper mentoring connections, especially new ones, were more difficult to establish and then thrive.
- Much professional development and training across the workforce was successfully completed remotely, but some critical hands-on training suffered. The NWS Training Center experimented with leveraging virtual training simulations for some technical work. Moving forward, virtual training may become more commonplace, but must still be balanced with necessary hands-on training where experience and knowledge transfer are important.
- Research, development, and science collaboration activities have all been successfully performed via telework during COVID-19.
- NWS employees successfully accomplished many administrative tasks and parts of operational processes from a remote/telework posture, including controlled correspondence, signature packages, communications and briefings, and significant portions of the product generation process. This has increased resilience, eliminated paper, and improved customer service.

Operational Units:

- Many NCEP centers produced operational forecast products and services during evacuation order/mandatory telework generally excelling at producing timely and accurate products. Many operational units noted little to no adverse impact to the timeliness of the products issued on telework or remote work. Telework during the pandemic allowed most of NCEP to make innovations in supplementing existing Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP) as workers are now capable of performing much of the COOP required activities remotely. There will likely be challenges ahead in sustaining the new capabilities developed during the pandemic and risks to consider going forward.
- Situational Telework was widely used at RFCs for both developmental work such as river forecast model improvement and enhancements as well as for augmenting in-person operations. RFCs are rather unique in NWS as a large portion of their duties are focused on developing enhanced hydrologic forecast capabilities which successfully continued via telework during the pandemic using AWIPS VPN. The telework capability enabled employees to continue the critical mission from an off-site location when needed. RFCs successfully augmented and conducted operations via telework during flooding operational postures. Many RFCs used teleworkers to supplement long event flood operations that were not critical but needed extra forecasters to supplement issuing forecasts during the evenings and weekend periods often after already having worked a full shift. This telework capability developed during the pandemic also allowed for improved and more robust IDSS interactions with partners at their facilities. Employees were able to demonstrate in real time what the model was producing and make modifications to the model to meet partner's needs in real time to address potential impacts. Through telework RFC hydrologists were able to work remotely at a river site with USGS partners to gather real-time critical flow measurements and directly input them into the forecast and work virtually with university and research partners to remotely generate and evaluate model improvements.
- WFOs were able to telework during operational shifts in a limited capacity and for specific reasons which provided operational flexibility and generally improved the employee experience. Employees have been able to provide new forms of mutual support for other offices such as gathering storm data via social and traditional media to support offices under times of extreme duress, such as hurricanes, tornado outbreaks, wildfires, and flooding. In WFOs, virtual teleworkers operating from home gave some offices another option to augment in-office operations during high-impact events with a higher level of flexibility for offices and safety for employees. WFOs performed many non-operational activities virtually, including significant research and development activities, forecast model improvements, science projects, training, and administrative activities. The mandatory telework posture also demonstrated an efficiency in scaled-down continuity of operations capabilities. That is, some backup activities can be successfully accomplished with telework from alternate worksites without requiring en masse re-location of the work unit or additional staff from other centers. When conducive to partner operations and decision making, NWS provided excellent IDSS support to decision-makers in virtual mode. This included providing IDSS to decision-makers for events at their request, including services to support prescribed fires, wildfires, search and rescue efforts, and various events such as parades, college football games, graduation ceremonies, festivals, etc. NWS also learned many of our IDSS core partner meetings can be run or attended virtually, including fire weather training, seasonal assessments, and partner briefings for fire weather, winter weather, air quality calls, and interactions with Emergency Managers. The key is to ensure any remote worker supporting IDSS meetings is in constant communication with the office to ensure consistency of messaging.

Student outreach and virtual classroom talks to schoolchildren across the country continued in virtual mode. NWS employees were able to teach weather sections to classrooms with students in ages ranging from kindergarten to high school.

- a. In the 2019-2020 school year there were 169 talks given
- b. In the 2020-2021 school year there were 368 given to over 13,000 students.
- c. There was a demand for over 600 talks.
- d. These talks were given to 46 states and 4 countries (including China, Japan, Korea, and Canada)

Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

I. INTRODUCTION

Telework is a flexible work arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position and other authorized activities from an approved alternative worksite other than the employee's designated traditional Federal workplace.

Telework is a workplace flexibility management option to facilitate the timely and effective accomplishment of the work of the office. An employee's decision to elect to telework is entirely voluntary (unless the employee is designated an "emergency" employee or is designated as a member of the Emergency Response Group).

The NOAA Telework Implementation Plan is consistent with the provisions of the Telework Enhancement Act \(Act\) of 2010 \(Public Law 111-292, October 9, 2010\), the Department of Commerce Telework Plan \(August 2021\), and the Office of Personnel Management's (OPM's) policies contained in their Guide to Telework in the Federal Government, Governmentwide Dismissal and Closure Procedures \(November 2018\), and OPM's Additional Guidance on Post-Reentry Personnel Policies and Work Environment.

The law and policies are intended to promote:

- Recruiting and retaining the best possible workforce;
- Continuing operations during emergency conditions (including pandemic health crises);
- Reducing costs related to employee turnover and absenteeism;
- Reducing real estate and transit costs; and
- Enhancing work-life balance by allowing employees to better manage their work and personal obligations.

NOAA and the Department of Commerce (DOC) recognize that a well-managed, widely used telework program has the potential to lead to benefits such as:

- Improved marketability (as a more competitive and inclusive employer);
- Reduced commuting time (that can contribute to an improved quality of work/life balance);
- Cost savings (in areas such as recruitment and retention of employees); and
- An improved Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP).

NOAA supports and encourages telework as a major element in its efforts to reduce its facility space requirements, thereby reducing its energy consumption, greenhouse gas emissions, surface ozone, rent, and other operating costs.

The operational needs of NOAA supersede an employee's desire to telework. In addressing any application for telework, including an application to continue, modify, or terminate an employee telework arrangement, management will consider the following:

- Operational needs and work requirements of the organizational unit,
- Duties of the position, and,
- Employee conduct, performance, and capacity or demonstrated ability to telework.

While approval is at the sole discretion of the supervisor, it may not be based on mere managerial preference. The aforementioned criteria will be reviewed using the NOAA

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment. Employees do not have an entitlement to telework, nor do employees who currently telework have an automatic right to continue teleworking.

DOC encourages participation at a rate of at least four (4) days per pay period for all supervisory and non-supervisory employees with sufficient amounts of portable work. Where a position is not suitable for significant amounts of telework, supervisors are encouraged to use telework as a means for greater flexibility to the extent possible.

5 U.S.C. § 6329c - Administrative Leave Act

III. DEFINITIONS

Agency Worksite – The location from which work would have been performed had the employee not entered into a telework or remote work arrangement. For teleworkers, this is the same as the traditional worksite.

Alternative Worksite – The employee's residence, or a location other than the traditional worksite which has been approved by the manager/supervisor for the performance of the employee's official duties. For purposes of telework, the alternative worksite is considered an official Government worksite.

Approving Official – The immediate supervisor, unless an office has issued a standard operating procedure requiring approval at a high level.

Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) – Overseas work arrangement where a Federal Executive branch employee performs the work requirements and duties of their domestic Civil Service or Foreign Service (FS) position from an approved overseas location via a DETO Agreement. Employees have no authorization to telework from a foreign location without an approved DETO Agreement. DETO agreements are not needed for U.S. territories or possessions.

Eligible Employee – All employees are considered eligible to telework unless:

- 1.) the employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five (5) days in any calendar year (there are no exceptions); or
- 2.) the employee has been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties (there are no exceptions), or

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

- 3.) the employee’s performance does not comply with the terms of the written agreement between the approving official and the employee (see Telework Agreement).

Eligible Position – See Position Suitability.

Emergency Response Group (ERG) Member – A person assigned responsibility to report to an alternate site, be on call, or serve as backup, as required, performing agency-essential functions or other continuity of operations-related duties.

Essential Functions – Functions that enable the Federal Government to provide vital services, exercise civil authority, maintain the safety and well-being of the general populace, and sustain the industrial/economic base in an emergency.

Evacuation Pay and Special Allowances – Consistent with NOAA Administrative Order (NAO) 202-1110, during a pandemic health crisis or other emergency situation, the NOAA Administrator may:

- 1) order one or more employees to evacuate their worksite and provide them with evacuation pay and special allowances; or
- 2) Approve evacuation pay and special allowances to an employee or employees in receipt of an evacuation order from a State, Local, or Federal authority.

An employee in receipt of evacuation pay may be required to work from a “safe haven” (usually their homes or an alternative location mutually agreeable to the agency and employee) without regard to whether the agency and employee have a telework agreement in place when the order to evacuate is issued. An evacuated employee at a safe haven may be assigned to perform any work considered necessary or required to be performed during the evacuation period without regard to the employee’s grade/band, level, or title. The employee must have the necessary knowledge and skills to perform the assigned work. Failure or refusal to perform assigned work within the employee’s knowledge, and skill level, except when the failure is due to circumstances beyond the employee’s control related to the evacuation, can be a basis for disciplinary action and termination of evacuation pay.

Hoteling – Telework arrangement in which employees are not assigned permanent space in their designated traditional worksite, but share offices and conference space as necessary when working at the traditional worksite. Such space is assigned by reservation, much like a hotel. NOAA encourages Line and Staff Offices to establish hoteling and space sharing arrangements for all employees who telework three (3) or more days per week.

Mobile Workers – Employees who, by the nature of their duties, do not have a designated traditional agency worksite, and they typically use their home as their duty station. Due to the nature of their work, they are not considered telework-ready employees. Note: This is different from ‘hoteling’ arrangements, in which frequent telework-ready employees use shared space when they are working at their designated traditional worksite.

Official Duty Station – Location of an employee’s position of record where the employee regularly performs their duties (i.e., normally this means the location at which the employee

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan

works for the majority of their working time). If the employee's work involves recurring travel or their work location varies on a recurring basis, the duty station is the location where the work activities of the employee's position of record are based, as determined by the manager/supervisor. An employee's official duty station determines the appropriate locality area for pay purposes for General Schedule or equivalent employees as well as entitlement to travel and relocation expenses under the Federal Travel Regulations (FTR).

Officially Disciplined – A disciplinary action that results in the placement of a document in an employee's official personnel file (OPF); the bar on telework participation remains in effect as long as the document stays in an employee's OPF. A suspension or termination related to the items mentioned in the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, Public Law 111-292 that results in a document (Standard Form (SF)50) that permanently remains in the OPF would result in permanent prohibition in telework participation.

Position Suitability – A position is suitable for telework unless the official duties require on a daily basis (every workday) the direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the head of the bureau/operating unit; or the performance of on-site activities that cannot be performed at an alternative worksite.

Routine Telework – Telework that occurs as part of an ongoing regular/recurring schedule such that the employee typically teleworks on the same day(s) during each biweekly pay period or a series of pay periods.

Remote Worker (Within the USA and its Territories) – An alternative work arrangement by which an employee is scheduled to perform the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite (e.g., home, other alternative location) other than the employee's traditional worksite, either within or outside of the locality pay area of the traditional worksite and is not scheduled to report to the traditional worksite at least twice on a regular/recurring basis each pay period. The duty station must be changed to the alternative worksite for pay purposes, relocation expenses, travel expenses, etc., and must be documented on the employee's SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, even if the alternative worksite is within the same locality pay area as the traditional worksite. Remote work is not considered to be Telework under the Telework Enhancement Act.

Remote work guidance based on OPM guidance (including already provided OPM guidance that may form the basis of pilot programs) will be provided in a separate policy. Note: For Remote Work outside of the USA, see Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO).

Situational Telework – Telework performed on an ad hoc, occasional, episodic, one-time, or irregular basis, including Unscheduled Telework, and modifications to an employee's Routine Telework schedule.

Telework – Telework, known as “telecommuting,” refers to a paid, flexible workplace arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite, and is scheduled to report to the traditional worksite at least twice each pay period on a regular/recurring basis. The official duty station remains the traditional worksite.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

Telework Agreement – A signed written agreement between the employee and their supervisor/manager which provides the terms of the telework arrangement and contain the requirements under Section XII of this policy. NOAA considers all telework agreements to encompass both the written application/agreement form, any addendums and additions to the form, as well as the employee’s Performance Plan.

Telework-Ready Employee – An employee who occupies a position suitable to telework and has:

- Completed the required one-time telework training for employees via the Commerce Learning Center (CLC);
- A signed individual telework agreement;
- The required technological necessities to telework (i.e., Computer, internet access, electricity, telephone, etc.);
 - Note: the Telework Agreement should specify the necessary equipment and whether it will be provided by the government or the employee.
- A safe and appropriate approved alternative work site.
- Has sufficient work that can be completed at the alternative work site.

Temporary Duty (TDY) Location – A place, away from an employees’ official duty station, where the employee is authorized to travel. Employees on TDY may be permitted to telework consistent with their agreements. Note: Employees on TDY in foreign locations are not considered to be DETOs, but must receive permission from their manager/supervisor before engaging in telework activities; consideration should be given to potential security issues associated with remotely accessing government systems in the foreign location.

Traditional Worksite – See Agency Worksite.

Unscheduled Telework – A subset of Situational Telework that is available in response to an office closure, weather, or safety event. This type of telework is authorized by OPM or an appropriate agency official in response to an appropriate event or condition effecting an employee’s duty station.

IV. TELEWORK STRATEGIES

- A. Agreeing to Telework. An employee’s decision to telework is voluntary unless telework is a condition of employment (i.e., the employee is designated an “emergency employee”) or is required to continue Government operations in times of emergency (i.e., while in receipt of Evacuation Pay, as a member of the ERG, or as part of the COOP). In these instances, an employee may be required to work at home, or at another approved alternative worksite.
- B. Types of Telework. It is NOAA’s policy to allow eligible employees to work at alternative work sites away from their official duty stations, consistent with the needs of their office, during their regular tour of duty. Employees may be approved for Routine and/or Situational Telework.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

C. Telework Conditions

1. Routine Telework schedules and use of Situational Telework must be approved by an approving official (i.e., supervisor) and may not be changed without prior approval.
2. Employees approved for Routine Telework may be granted Situational Telework when business or personal needs require a short-term change to the telework arrangement, such as switching a scheduled telework day with a day the employee would otherwise report to the agency worksite or adding additional telework days. See “Temporary Telework Arrangements” below for additional details.
3. An employee’s use of telework does not adversely affect their option to use an alternative (flexible or compressed) work schedules.
4. Unscheduled Telework does not require advance approval. When OPM makes an announcement of “Unscheduled Telework” and it is not the employee’s regularly scheduled telework day, the employee may choose to perform unscheduled telework in lieu of reporting to the agency worksite. The employee’s decision is not subject to prior approval by the supervisor. However, the employee must notify their supervisor in accordance with the applicable procedures of the office.
5. In rare circumstances, management may find it necessary to require a teleworking employee to report for an assignment that requires presence at the worksite (e.g., providing a presentation or performing administrative duties at a pre-scheduled conference) on their scheduled telework day. This should not be a last-minute request, but a special work circumstance that both the supervisor and employee know about, discuss, and plan in advance as the special work requires.
6. Communications systems and procedures to conduct telework are to be in place to support telework in an emergency, including a communication process to notify ERG personnel, emergency, and non-emergency employees of the activation of the agency’s emergency plan, and the agency’s operating status during the emergency.
7. All employees designated as “emergency,” as members of the ERG, or have responsibility during activation of the COOP, must have an approved individual telework agreement. Note: Employees required to telework only as a result of emergency or ERG responsibility are not required to telework on a regular, unscheduled, or ad hoc basis and will not be subject to telework requirements during office closures. Their individual telework agreement should specify whether they elect to telework outside of their emergency requirements (and are therefore subject to the normal telework requirements therein).

8. Time and Travel Conditions:
 - a. An employee who is required to travel between their traditional worksite and alternative worksite after the beginning of their work day is considered to be working during the travel, unless Weather and Safety Leave is warranted (See OPM's Governmentwide dismissal and closure procedures for guidance.).
 - b. To reduce government liability and maximize productivity, managers should avoid requiring or permitting employees to travel from their alternative worksite to an agency worksite during the work day. If the requirement to report to the worksite is known prior to the day that the employee is required to report to the worksite, employees should instead be directed to report for a full day of work at the agency worksite. At an employee's request, managers may permit employees to travel from their traditional worksite to their telework location to complete their work day; this travel must be accomplished on personal time (e.g., lunch or during flexible bands) or on approved personal leave.
 - c. Telework-ready employees scheduled to telework during their regular tour of duty on a day when their office is closed (or when other employees are dismissed early) are not entitled to receive overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time off in lieu of overtime payment for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours.
 - d. Employees voluntarily participating in the telework program are required to telework when offices are closed as a result of a weather or safety incident. Employees may be granted personal leave in lieu of teleworking or may be excused from teleworking consistent with the guidance provided in Section VII below.
 - e. All time teleworked in a pay period will be recorded per instructions in the appropriate time and attendance system.

- D. Maximum Amount of Telework. The maximum number of days an employee (including part-time employees) may perform routine or situational telework during a pay period is left to the discretion of the approving official, except that an employee must be regularly scheduled to report to the agency worksite at least twice per pay period on a recurring basis.

The twice per pay period requirement is irrespective of the number of hours spent performing work at the agency worksite; therefore, an employee on an Alternative Work Schedule may spend fewer than 16 hours each pay period at the agency worksite, as long as they have reported on two separate work days.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

The approving official's determination must be based on the employee's readiness to telework, the functions of the position, and the operational needs and work requirements of the organizational unit, not mere managerial preference.

An employee may be permitted to telework in excess of this maximum situationally or temporarily as long as there is a reasonable expectation that such employee will return to their routine telework arrangement in the foreseeable future. While there is no specific time limit on these situations, as durations increase supervisors must ensure the circumstances clearly support the temporary nature of the arrangement. See "Temporary Arrangements" in Section XIII for additional details.

E. Teleworking and Care of Elders, Children, and other Dependents.

If alternative caregivers are available (i.e., spouse, babysitter, etc.), or the dependents are able to care for themselves for part or all of the workday (such as older children), then their presence at the worksite would not interfere with the employee performing their duties; therefore, telework in these circumstances may be performed while dependents are at the telework location. Employees should coordinate with their supervisors to use flexible schedules, appropriate leave, or other arrangements to account for their time spent engaging in dependent care.

The above guidance also applies in the event of an office closure that results from a weather or safety emergency that also impacts the availability of dependent care (i.e., schools and/or care facilities are closed or inaccessible). However, if these circumstances significantly diminish an employees' ability to perform agency work, or if the supervisor or a Line or Staff Office policy bars telework in a given dependent care situation, the employee will not be considered telework-ready and therefore must be granted Weather and Safety Leave.

F. Teleworkers and Non-Teleworkers Shall be Treated the Same for Certain Purposes:

1. Periodic appraisals of job performance of employees;
2. Training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reduction in grade, retaining, and removing employees;
3. Work requirements; and
4. Other acts involving managerial discretion.

Note: While managers may require that teleworking employees be available for telephonic or video meetings and respond within reasonable periods of time to impromptu meeting requests (as they would expect of employees in the office), managers may not require employees to keep their video or telephone conferencing channels open for prolonged periods of time to facilitate spot checking of work.

G. Training Requirements. All employees interested in teleworking must successfully complete the required telework training for employees via the CLC before they may be approved to telework.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

The approving official for individual telework agreements must have completed the required telework training for managers via the CLC before they can approve any individual telework agreements.

V. ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA

- A. Non-Discrimination. Participation in telework is open to all eligible employees without regard to race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy and gender identity), national origin, political affiliation, sexual orientation, marital status, disability, genetic information, age, membership in an employee organization, retaliation, parental status, military service, or other non-merit factors.
- B. Employee Eligibility. All NOAA employees are initially considered eligible to telework subject to the following statutory exclusions:
- a. The employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without leave (AWOL) for more than five (5) days in any calendar year; or
 - b. The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635 (Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch) for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties; or
 - c. The employee's performance at the time they request to telework is at least "Fully Successful" or the equivalent (a rating of 55 under Commerce Alternative Personnel System (CAPS)) and the performance of the employee does not comply with the terms of the telework agreement. Note: The duration of a performance-based exclusion is at the discretion of the employee's supervisor; supervisors need not exclude employees until they receive a formal performance review and may permit an employee to telework when they feel their performance has reached the "Fully Successful" level.

If an employee is determined to be ineligible to telework due to these exclusions, the employee will receive a written determination from the approving official within 10 working days of the employee's request to telework.

- C. Position Suitability. The employee is not eligible if the employee's position requires the employee to perform the following types of work on a daily basis (every work day)
- a. Direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the agency head;
 - b. On-site activity that cannot be handled remotely or at an alternative worksite; or
 - c. The employee is a mobile worker (not eligible due to the nature of work)
- These determinations must be made position-by-position, based on the duties of the position and the needs of the service.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)

October 2021

VI. ACCOMMODATIONS FOR EMPLOYEES WITH DISABILITIES

It is important to distinguish between ordinary requests to telework and requests from persons with disabilities for reasonable accommodation. Approving officials/supervisors should consult Department Administrative Order (DAO) 215-10, "Reasonable Accommodation Policy," and the Office of Human Capital Services (OHCS) as part of the interactive process established by the Rehabilitation Act, in order to fully understand supervisors' responsibilities under the law.

As governed by Section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 791 et. seq., the Rehabilitation Act and DAO 215-10, the determination as to whether an employee may be granted telework as a reasonable accommodation due to a disability should be made through the Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator, the employee's first-line supervisor, and the employee.

VII. EXCUSED FROM TELEWORKING

The supervisor, on a case-by-case basis, should excuse a telework-ready employee from duty without charge to paid personal leave or loss of pay during an emergency situation if the employee is prevented from performing work at an approved location due to: (1) an act of God; (2) a terrorist attack; or (3) another condition that prevents the employee from performing work at an approved location. Examples of the latter situation include:

- A. (1) the emergency situation adversely affects the telework site (e.g., disruption of electricity, or network connection problems that prevent telework); or
(2) the telework-ready employee's duties are such that they cannot continue to work without contact with the regular worksite during an emergency situation, and those individuals are not present.
- B. If the telework-ready employee faces a personal hardship that prevents them from working successfully at the telework site, the employee may request the appropriate leave (annual, sick, compensatory, credit hours, compensatory time for travel, weather/safety leave, administrative leave, etc.). The employee may also switch to an alternative work schedule day off, or use "flexing" consistent with the employee's alternative work schedule, if any.

Note: Under certain circumstances, the employee's personal hardship may be a result of weather or safety conditions that permit the supervisor to grant weather/safety leave, such as the need to prepare the home for severe weather, clear snow or ice from the primary egress, or make repairs to damage that threatens the safety of the employee. Supervisors are encouraged to consult with OHCS in determining whether to grant Weather and Safety Leave under these circumstances.

VIII. PERFORMANCE STANDARDS

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

Performance standards for telework-ready employees must be the same as performance standards for non-telework-ready employees. Expectations for performance should be clearly addressed in each employee's performance plan. The performance plan should be reviewed to ensure the standards do not create inequities or inconsistencies between telework-ready and non-telework-ready employees. Like non-telework-ready employees, telework-ready employees are held accountable for the results they produce. Resources for performance management are available from OPM at <https://www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/performance-management/>; and OHCS's performance management resources portal at <https://sites.google.com/noaa.gov/ohcs/policy-procedures/performance-management>.

IX. ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

A. NOAA/OHCS Telework Program Manager (TPM)

1. Develop, review and update the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan.
2. Maintain a list of the primary telework coordinators (TCs) for each line and staff office.
3. Establish procedures for evaluating the telework program.
4. Provide telework reports, with input from line/staff office TCs, as required by the DOC.
5. Provide advice and assistance to line and staff office TCs on the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan, including working with senior-level managers in establishing and obtaining office telework goals, objectives, and reporting requirements.
6. Answer telework-related questions and providing guidance to the NOAA line/staff office TCs.
7. Develop and conduct telework training to approving officials, managers, supervisors and the Line/Staff Office TCs.
8. Develop a catalog of best practices and lessons learned.
9. Develop and maintain an online telework portal of information.

B. Approving Officials. Approving officials are responsible for the overall management and success of teleworking within their offices, including day-to-day operations. Telework-ready employees and their approving officials are responsible for reviewing the individual telework agreement at least annually to ensure that it is current. The date of the review must be documented.

C. NOAA Line/Staff Office Telework Coordinators (TCs)

1. In consultation with the OHCS TPM:
 - a. Conduct training sessions for their assigned line/staff office to supplement the orientation training provided to all new employees. The training session will provide orientation and training for telework-ready employees and their supervisors regarding the implementation plan and their responsibilities; and
 - b. Provide NOAA procedural program guidance to management and telework-ready employees.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

2. Maintain a central file of all approved individual telework agreements for the personnel in their line/staff office as well as a record of all written denials or terminations;
3. Answer telework-related questions and provide guidance to the employees within their line/staff offices;
4. Develop and implement a reporting system capturing telework participation, hours teleworked (from the time and attendance (WebTA) system), terminations, and denials; and
5. Response to requests for reports consistent with Section XV below.

X. PREPARING FOR THE INDIVIDUAL TELEWORK AGREEMENT

The following actions should be taken when establishing an individual telework agreement:

- A. The employee completes the NOAA Supervisor's/Manager's Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool (See Appendix B).
- B. The employee completes the "Telework Application/Agreement and Modification of Telework Agreement" (See Appendix A) and submits it to their supervisor along with the certificate showing successful completion of the required telework training for employees via the CLC.
- C. The employee completes the Telework Safety Checklist (See Appendix C).
- D. The employee and supervisor discuss the expectations in the proposed telework agreement, including the performance levels required of the employee and the results of the NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool.
- E. If the supervisor is not the approving official, the supervisor will forward the telework agreement to the approving official with their recommendations.

XI. TELEWORK AGREEMENTS

A. Duration of Telework Agreements

1. Approving Officials should determine the duration of the telework agreement. Telework agreements may be considered indefinite and do not require an expiration date. Approving Officials are encouraged to regularly review telework agreements with participants and make adjustments, including terminations, when requested by employees or determined to be necessary by management. All agreements must be reviewed at least annually. NOAA suggests these reviews be completed during the employee's annual or semi-annual performance management reviews.
2. An employee may not telework if they do not have a current approved telework agreement in place.
3. In accordance with 5 U.S.C. § 6502\(b\)\(3\), an employee is not authorized to continue teleworking if the performance of that employee does not comply with the terms of the written telework agreement between the approving official and the employee (see "B" below).

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

B. Modification and Termination of Telework Agreement. The operational needs of NOAA supersede an employee's desire to telework. In addressing any application for telework, including an application to continue teleworking, or in making a decision to modify or terminate an employee telework arrangement, management will first consider the operational needs and work requirements of the organizational unit, the duties of the position, and, through the NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment, the employee's conduct, performance, and capacity or demonstrated ability to telework. While approval is at the sole discretion of the supervisor, it may not be based on mere managerial preference. Employees do not have an entitlement to telework. Nor do employees who currently telework have an automatic right to continue teleworking.

1. Modification

- i. Management Directed Modification
 1. Management may modify the agreement at any time to address the operational needs of the work unit, employee performance or conduct, or to comply with law and policy.
 2. The approving official must provide written documentation supporting the modification, including the reason for modification, to the affected employee. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect.
 3. Management must provide the employee with at least ten (10) working days' advance notice prior to implementing the modification to allow the employee to make necessary arrangements. In establishing the implementation date, management should consider the nature of the arrangements the employee must make, particularly in situations where the employee had been performing significant amounts of routine telework.

- ii. Employee Modification Request
 1. An employee may request to modify the current telework agreement (e.g., change the regular teleworking day) by submitting a new "Telework Application / Agreement and Modification of Telework Agreement" (check "Modification") to the employee's supervisor with the requested changes highlighted;
 2. The supervisor and employee shall discuss the employee's requested modifications within five (5) working days of submission;
 3. If the supervisor is not the approving official, the supervisor will forward the request to the approving official with their recommendations within five (5) working days;

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

4. The approving official will issue a final, written decision to the employee and supervisor within seven (7) working days of receiving the supervisor's recommendation.

2. Termination

- i. There is no mandatory waiting period following termination prior to submitting a new request to telework.
- ii. Employee Termination
An employee may terminate the telework agreement at any time, for any reason, without the need to provide advanced notice, by providing the approving official with written notice of a decision to terminate their written telework agreement. While employees are not required to provide advanced notice, they should notify their managers promptly and prior to executing their termination.
- iii. Management Directed Termination
 1. Management may terminate the agreement at any time to address the operational needs of the work unit, employee performance or conduct, or to comply with law and policy.
 2. The approving official must provide written documentation supporting the termination, including the reason for termination, to the affected employee. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect
 3. Management must provide the employee with at least ten (10) working days advance notice prior to implementing the termination to allow the employee to make necessary arrangements. In establishing the implementation date, management should consider the nature of the arrangements the employee must make, particularly in situations where the employee had been performing significant amounts of routine telework.

C. Appeals

Non-bargaining unit employees must use the procedures in DAO 202-771, "Administrative Grievance Procedure" to appeal issues relating to their request to telework, modification to an existing telework agreement, and management directed terminations of telework agreements.

Bargaining unit employees should use the negotiated grievance procedure and/or follow the process outlined in their collective bargaining agreement unless telework related issues have been excluded from their agreement.

In following the administrative grievance process, the official making the final decision on appeals will issue a written decision on an employee's appeal of the denial

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

of their request within 10 working days of the request being received by the deciding official. If the deciding official disapproves the request, they must provide written justification to the employee indicating when or if the employee would be eligible to reapply, and if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve their chance of future approval. Deciding officials are to provide employees copies of signed written denials or terminations of telework agreements.

- D. Discrimination. Employees who believe they are the victims of prohibited discrimination must use the procedures in DAO 215-9, “Filing Discrimination Complaints,” to appeal the alleged discrimination, or may use the negotiated grievance procedure.

XII. ESTABLISHING THE WORK SCHEDULE

Work schedules identify the days and times an employee will telework. Normally, telework schedules parallel those at the traditional worksite; however, they can differ to meet the needs of the organization and participating employees’ needs. Work schedules may also include fixed times during the day for manager/supervisor/employee telephone conversations, which may be helpful to ensure ongoing communication. For additional information on hours of duty, please visit:

- <https://www.commerce.gov/hr/practitioners/leave-policies/hours-of-duty-and-work-schedules>.
- <https://sites.google.com/noaa.gov/ohcs/employee-resources/manager-resources/manager-resource-guide/hours-of-duty-and-work-schedules>.

XIII. DETERMINING THE OFFICIAL DUTY STATION

The official duty station is the location of the traditional worksite as long as the employee is scheduled to physically reports to the traditional work site at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis. If management were to approve an arrangement through which this criterion is not met, the telework location becomes the official duty station (and the employee is considered a Remote Worker).

Note: If a teleworking employee with a varying work location works at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis in the same locality pay area in which the traditional worksite is located, the employee does not have to report twice each pay period to the official worksite to maintain the locality payment for that area. For example, an employee who is required to perform duties at two or more separate agency worksites within a given locality pay area may meet the twice per pay period reporting requirement by visiting any two agency worksites each pay period.

A. Temporary Telework Arrangements

1. There is no change in official duty station for employees on Detail or TDY.
2. In certain temporary situations, NOAA may continue to designate the location of the traditional worksite as the official duty station, even though the

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

employee is not able to report to the traditional worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular/ recurring basis. The intent of this exception is to address temporary situations in which an employee is expected to return to their regular worksite when the temporary situation or agreed upon time period has concluded. Such situations may include, but are not limited to:

- a. Recovery from an injury or illness;
 - b. Emergencies, including severe weather and pandemic health crises;
 - c. Extended periods of approved absence mixed with telework;
 - d. TDY and Details.
3. Supervisors must approve these arrangements in writing, such as by email, and the approval must include:
- a. The location from which the employee will be teleworking (if different from their normal telework location);
 - b. When the temporary arrangement will begin;
 - c. The expected duration of the temporary arrangement;

XIV. PREMIUM PAY AND LEAVE

- A. Pay. An employee's locality rate of pay is based on the employee's official duty station, and is determined in accordance with 5 CFR 531.604. The line/staff office must determine and designate the official duty station for an employee covered by a telework agreement using the criteria above.
- B. Premium Pay. The same premium pay rules apply to employees when they telework as when they are working at the traditional worksite.
- C. Leave and Work Scheduling Flexibilities. Telework-ready employees are governed by the same procedures as non-telework-ready employees for requesting and obtaining leave approval. Telework arrangements should have no impact on alternative work schedules and vice versa.

XV. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

The line/staff offices, via their Telework Coordinator, are required to respond to requests from the OHCS Telework Program Manager for a variety of reporting requirements/initiatives. Below is information that may be requested, although it is not all-inclusive.

1. The degree of participation by employees of each line/staff office teleworking during the period covered by the report;
2. The method for gathering telework data in each line/staff office;
3. The reasons for positive or negative variations in telework participation if the total number of employees' teleworking is 10 percent higher or lower than the previous year in the line/staff office;
4. The line/staff office goal for increasing telework participation to the extent practicable or necessary;

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

5. An explanation of whether or not a line/staff office met its goals for the last reporting period and, if not, what actions are being taken to identify and eliminate barriers;
6. An assessment of the progress made in meeting line/staff office participation-rate goals and other goals related to telework, such as the impact of telework on emergency readiness, energy use, recruitment and retention, performance, productivity, and employee attitudes and opinions regarding telework; and
7. Best practices in the line/staff office.

XVI. INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY (IT) SECURITY REQUIREMENTS FOR TELEWORK-READY EMPLOYEES

Telework-ready employees must abide by the IT security requirements conveyed in the DOC IT Security Program Policy \(ITSP\), Commerce IT Requirements (CITRs), Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) and IT Security Policy memos. A complete list of DOC IT security documentation can be accessed at:

http://home.commerce.gov/CIO/ITSITnew/IT_Security_Program_Documentation.html.

In addition to the requirements above, telework-ready employees must abide by the IT security requirements conveyed in the NOAA IT Security Policy (ITSP), NOAA's Computer Incident Response Team Requirements (N-CITR), and IT Security Policies. The Telework Agreement signed by the telework-ready employee and their supervisor may describe additional security requirements. A complete list of NOAA IT security documentation can be accessed at: <https://sites.google.com/noaa.gov/csd>.

Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to comply with all existing IT security requirements and to ensure employees are held accountable to them.

XVII. PROTECTING THE SECURITY AND CONFIDENTIALITY OF RECORDS

All telework-ready employees must ensure that records subject to the Privacy Act of 1974, or which have sensitive Personally Identifiable Information (PII) or Business Identifiable Information (BII), are not disclosed to anyone except those who have been authorized access to such information to perform their duties. Bureaus/Operating Units (OUs) must ensure that appropriate physical, administrative, and technical safeguards are used to protect the security and confidentiality of such records.

A. Disclosure of Records from an Agency System of Records

1. Telework-ready employees are responsible for ensuring that their disclosure of a record (information) from any agency system of record complies with the Privacy Act of 1974.
2. The Privacy Act of 1974 defines a 'system of records' as a group of any records under the control of any agency from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or by some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particular assigned to the individual. DOC system of record notices (SORNs) are posted at:

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

<http://www.gpo.gov/fdsys/browse/collection.action?collectionCode=PAI&browsePath=2005&isCollapsed=false&leafLevelBrowse=false&ycord=0>.

3. The Privacy Act of 1974 prohibits the disclosure of a record (information) from an agency system of record that is not identified as a routine use in that system's SORN, does not comply with an exemption identified in the SORN, or does not comply with one of the 12 exceptions to the non-disclosure-(to third parties)-without-consent rule.
4. A Privacy Act incident occurs when an officer or employee of the agency, who by virtue of their employment or official position, has possession of or access to agency records that contain individually identifiable information, the disclosure of which is prohibited by 5 U.S.C. § 552a (or regulations established thereunder), and discloses the material in any manner to any person or agency not entitled to receive it. Knowing misuse or release of information protected by the Privacy Act of 1974 can subject an employee to fines and/or criminal sanctions.
5. Telework-ready employees must immediately report a suspected or confirmed Privacy Act incident to their bureau/OU privacy officer or the Computer Incident Response Team (CIRT) and immediate supervisor.

B. Proper Handling of PII and BII

1. Telework-ready employees are responsible for the safeguarding of PII and BII.
2. PII is information that can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, such as name, social security number, biometric records, etc., alone, or when combined with other personal or identifying information, which is linked or linkable to a specific individual, such as date and place of birth, mother's maiden name, etc. Sensitive PII, if lost, compromised, or disclosed without authorization, could result in substantial harm, embarrassment, inconvenience, or unfairness to an individual.
3. Types of PII considered sensitive when associated with an individual are: social security number (including truncated form), place of birth, date of birth, mother's maiden name, biometric information, medical information (except brief references to absences from work), personal financial information, credit card or purchase card account numbers, passport numbers, potentially sensitive employment information (e.g., personnel ratings, disciplinary actions, and results of background investigations), criminal history, and any information that may stigmatize or adversely affect an individual. The DOC's IT Privacy Policy provides that breaches of sensitive PII are subject to notification/reporting requirements.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

4. When deciding whether PII is sensitive or non-sensitive, it is important to consider the type of information, obligations, or expectations regarding the protection of information, risk (probability and consequences) of loss or compromise of information, and context of information. Context is particularly important. The same types of information can be sensitive or non-sensitive depending upon the context. For example, a list of names and phone numbers for the Department softball roster is very different from a list of names and phone numbers for individuals being treated for an infectious disease. It is important to use good judgment when deciding whether PII is sensitive or non-sensitive. When in doubt, treat PII as sensitive.
5. The Department's policy states that if sensitive PII must be electronically transmitted, it must be protected by secure methodologies such as encryption, Public Key Infrastructure, or secure socket layers. Federal Information Processing Standards (FIPS) Publication 140-2, "Security Requirements for Cryptographic Modules" provides the standard to which encryption methodologies must conform. The transmission of sensitive PII, even if protected by secure means, must be kept to a minimum. Check with your bureau/OU's Office of the Chief Information Officer to determine methods or services they are using to support the electronic transmission of sensitive PII.
6. In addition to sensitive PII, telework-ready employees must ensure the safeguarding of BII. BII is information that is defined in the Freedom of Information Act as "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person [that is] privileged or confidential." "Commercial" is not confined to records that reveal "basic commercial operations" but includes any records (information) in which the submitter has a "commercial interest" and can include information submitted by a non-profit entity. Terms for BII that must be protected from disclosure include "confidential business information," "confidential commercial information," and "proprietary information."
7. Sensitive PII and BII can be stored on Government systems only, and saved, stored, or hosted only on DOC-authorized equipment (including contractor-owned equipment or a system that is approved to be used as a Government system). Computers that are personally-owned may not be used to save, store, or host sensitive PII and BII that is collected or maintained by the Department.
8. Sensitive PII and BII must be sent encrypted as an email attachment and encrypted on mobile computers, media (e.g., CDs, DVDs, USB drives), and devices (e.g., laptops, hard drives). When faxing sensitive PII and BII, an advisory statement about the contents must be included on the cover sheet, and the recipient must be notified immediately before and after transmission. Exception: According to the Commerce Acquisition Manual (CAM) 1313.301, cardholders shall not transmit credit card information over a facsimile machine. When mailing sensitive PII and BII, it must be physically secured when in

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

transit. Do not mail or send by courier sensitive PII and BII on CDs, DVDs, hard drives, flash drives, USB drives, floppy disks, or other removable media unless the data is encrypted. Sensitive PII and BII must be sealed in an opaque envelop or container and mailed using First Class or Priority Mail, or a commercial delivery service (e.g., Federal Express or DHL). Appropriate methods must be used to destroy sensitive paper PII and BII (e.g., shredding, using a burn bag) and securely delete sensitive electronic PII and BII (e.g., empty the Windows recycle bin).

9. Telework-ready employees and supervisors are responsible for complying with all Bureau/OU guidelines on reporting PII and BII incidents. The Office of Management and Budget Memorandum M-07-16 defines a PII incident as the loss of control, compromise, unauthorized disclosure, unauthorized acquisition, unauthorized access, or any similar term referring to situations where persons other than authorized users, and for other than authorized purpose(s), have access or potential access to PII, whether physical or electronic. Telework-ready employees must immediately report a suspected or confirmed PII and BII incident to their bureau/OU privacy officer or CIRT and immediate supervisor.

XVIII. PRIVACY ACT, SENSITIVE, AND HIGHLY SENSITIVE INFORMATION

A. Decisions on Proper Use and Handling of Sensitive Information

These decisions will be made by the approving official who permits the employee to work at home or another alternative worksite. A telework agreement will be signed by the employee and their approving official that contains the specific data types allowed to be accessed. Information is generally categorized into the following groups: Non-Sensitive Information; Sensitive Information; and Classified National Security Information.

B. Physical Security Standards

The physical security standard for PII and other Sensitive and Administratively Controlled Information must be addressed prior to allowing telework. Chapter 35 of the Office of Security's (OSY's) Security Manual provides minimum physical security standards for the office environment that are also applicable during telework. At a minimum, Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI), including PII, should be afforded protection to prevent unauthorized access of the information.

C. Controlled Unclassified Information (CUI) Registry

The National Archives and Records Administration's CUI Office developed the CUI Registry, which allows anyone to access the Safeguarding and Dissemination requirements for CUI that must be afforded to information like PII (privacy) and other unclassified information. The registry may not be all inclusive, as only those categories of unclassified information that have a law, regulation, or Government-wide policy governing dissemination and/or safeguarding are provided. Therefore, any Sensitive and Administratively Controlled Information in hard-copy form that does not

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

fall within the parameters of the manual, or the registry, should be brought to the attention of the Information and Personnel Security Division of the OSY.

Teleworkers and supervisors should visit <http://www.archives.gov/cui/registry/category-list.html> prior to allowing hard copy PII and other administratively controlled information outside the workplace for telework purposes.

CUI, established by Executive Order 13556, is legally protected and covered under the Sensitive Information category.

D. Highly Sensitive Information

This information is subject to the most stringent security and access control rules, such as courier authorization, hand-to-hand transmission, or agency-specific rules not included in the DOC telework policy. Classified information that requires Secret or Top Secret security clearances for protecting national security information is included in this category. Classified information (Confidential, Secret, or Top Secret) may only be transmitted or removed from official worksites by classified networks or authorized official couriers. This type of information may not be used or accessed in any manner by teleworkers.

XIX. TELEWORK IT SECURITY POLICY

The Department's Chief Information Officer (CIO) is responsible for issuing and maintaining IT and eGov policies and minimum implementation standards, including remote access and safeguarding sensitive information. These policies and minimum implementation standards outline responsibilities of bureau/operating unit CIOs/ACIOs and teleworkers to enable an effective working environment for the teleworker and the protection of Department systems from undue risk. Operating unit CIOs/ACIOs, with the support of their IT security officers, are responsible for establishing teleworking IT security procedures specific to their operating unit and providing secure telecommuting resources and operational controls commensurate with the sensitivity of the data processed and with policies and minimum implementation standards provided by the Department's CIO. The Department's policy on remote access is accessible via intranet at:

https://connection.commerce.gov/sites/connection.commerce.gov/files/media/files/2014/citr-008_remote_access.pdf.

Managers/supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to comply with all existing security policies and procedures, including IT security. Telework-ready employees also agree that their responsibilities, described in Section 3.3.9 of the Department's "IT Security Policy and Minimum Implementation Standards," remain in effect while on telework status. Other pertinent bureau or operating unit policies on IT security may also exist; managers/supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to follow all applicable policies.

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

The workplace and workstation must be set up to accomplish secure information processing, including the proper storage of Sensitive Information in both electronic and paper form. The telework-ready employee, following bureau/operating unit policies, must minimize security vulnerabilities to the workstation and the Departmental network.

XX. TELEWORKING DURING EMERGENCY SITUATIONS/INCLEMENT WEATHER

- A. Unscheduled Telework. This type of telework option allows telework-ready employees to work from home or at an approved alternative location upon notification to their supervisor in accordance with the office policies.

- B. Federal/Departmental Offices Are Closed. Employees must telework consistent with law and their telework agreements when Federal/Departmental offices in their local commuting area are closed. Excused absences (utilizing Weather and Safety Leave or administrative leave) may be granted on a case-by-case basis for telework-ready employees in the above situations that may include but are not limited to: power outages, damaged/un-inhabitable alternative work sites, dependent care issues, or state/local laws. (See section VII, “Excused from Teleworking”, for more details.).

- C. Early Dismissal/Delayed Arrival. When an early dismissal/delayed arrival is announced or provided as a result of an emergency situation or inclement weather, those who are teleworking are not dismissed from duty for any part of the workday. However, managers/supervisors may grant Weather and Safety Leave on a case-by-case basis, if the employee is unable to begin or continue teleworking. Teleworking employees are permitted to take advantage of early dismissals granted by management or the President in relation to a holiday, recognition of a special circumstance, and similar occasions.

- D. Emergency at the Alternative Worksite. When an emergency affects only the alternative worksite for a major portion of the workday, the employee is expected to report to the traditional worksite, an approved alternative telework site, or request supervisory approval of applicable paid personal leave (i.e., annual, compensatory time, compensatory time off for travel, credit hours, etc.). Note: Consistent with OPM guidance, an employee required to travel between an alternate worksite and a traditional worksite as a result of a weather or safety issue must be granted Weather and Safety Leave for the duration of their commute between duty stations.

However, on a case-by-case basis, the manager/supervisor may excuse, without charge to paid personal leave or loss of pay, a telework employee from duty during an emergency if: (1) the emergency adversely affects the telework site; (2) the telework-ready employee is unable to access another alternative telework site; (3) the telework-ready employee is unable to access the traditional worksite within a reasonable period of time; and (4) the telework-ready employee’s duties are such that they cannot continue to work without contact with the traditional worksite. (See section VII, “Excused from Teleworking”, for more details.).

National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA)
Telework Implementation Plan
October 2021

XXI. TELEWORK AND THE CONTINUITY OF OPERATIONS PLAN (COOP)

If an employee occupies a position deemed essential or serves as an ERG member (these designations may vary based on the nature of the emergency) for inclement weather or natural or man-made emergencies, they may be required to report to work.

If an employee is an ERG member for COOP purposes, management, along with the employee and supervisor, should make advance and/or situational decisions as to whether the employee must physically report for duty or may work from home or an alternative worksite. For example, if the purpose of the employee reporting for duty at the traditional worksite is to provide policy guidance or to notify specific individuals of emergency requirements, this may be able to be accomplished from home, provided the employee has access to the resources necessary to perform the required services. However, in some cases, the only way to obtain the services of the employee may be through telework from an alternative worksite. For example, if inclement weather or other emergency situation results in a transportation shutdown, but phone lines remain working, the employee may be able to work from home rather than reporting to the traditional worksite or COOP site.

Employees designated as COOP Team Members may be required to telework during emergency closures or other emergencies, including pandemics and for COOP exercises, on any day, even if that day is not a regular telework day or a day with specific approval for situational/episodic telework. Telework-ready employees may also be required to perform duties outside of their usual or customary duties to ensure continuation of agency-essential mission or activities.

During any period that the Department is operating under COOP, that plan shall supersede any telework policy (Public Law 111-292 Section 6504(d)(2)).

The Employee and Supervisor Have Discussed the Results of the NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool.

NOAA Telework Safety Checklist

In order to minimize threats to the safety of its employees and properly address liability and injury compensation issues, the telework application must clearly describe the specific location within the alternative worksite from which the employee will telework. Additionally, the NOAA Telework Safety Checklist must be completed and reviewed by the supervisor.

The NOAA Telework Safety Checklist has been completed and all action necessary to address safety concerns have been completed.

Additional Agreement Details:

Use this space to add additional requirements, metrics, or details that will become part of the agreement.

Employee Acknowledgements

I acknowledge that I will not be authorized to telework if my performance does not comply with the terms of my telework agreement. Failure to comply may also result in disciplinary action.

I understand that I must perform at the Fully Successful or higher (or equivalent) level in order to telework.

I certify that I have completed an approved interactive telework training program authorized by my bureau, the Telework Safety Checklist, and the Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool, if applicable.

I understand that, unless this agreement is for COOP/Emergency purposes only, I am required to telework during office closures for weather and safety events unless granted Weather and Safety or Administrative leave by my supervisor, or electing to take unscheduled leave (if offered).

I understand that that I may be required to report for an assignment that requires presence at the worksite (e.g., providing a presentation or performing administrative duties at a pre-scheduled conference) on my scheduled telework day.

When unscheduled leave or telework is announced by the appropriate authorities, I understand that the election is mine but I must notify my supervisor. I am aware that, in rare situations, management may require me (a “non-emergency” employee) to report for an assignment that requires my presence, and management has discussed this with me in advance of the situation giving rise to unscheduled leave/telework.

I understand that I may not care for children, elders, or other dependents while I am in a duty status and teleworking. As described in the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan, in these situations, I must request the appropriate leave (paid or unpaid) from my supervisor, utilize the flexibility available under my Flexible Work Schedule to stop working (if applicable), or request a change in my Work Schedule.

I understand that I must abide by the IT Security requirements conveyed in the Commerce Information Technology Security Program Policy (ITSP), Commerce Information Technology Requirements (CITRs), Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs), and IT Security Policy memos.

Alternate Worksite Costs – The employee understands that the Government will not be responsible for any operating costs associated with the use of the employee’s home as an alternate worksite, for example, home maintenance, insurance, or utilities. The employee also understands that any entitlement to reimbursement for authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the Government, as provided for by statute or regulation, is not relinquished by this agreement.

Liability – The applicant understands that the Government will not be held liable for damages to their personal or real property while they are working at the approved alternate worksite, except to the extent the Government is held liable under the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act and the Federal Tort Claims Act.

Injury Compensation – The applicant understands that they are covered under the Federal Employees Compensation Act if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the alternate worksite. The applicant agrees to notify his/her supervisor immediately of any accident or injury that occurs at the alternate workplace and to complete any required forms. The supervisor agrees to investigate such a report as soon as possible.

Disclosure – The applicant agrees to protect Government records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. § 552(a), and those outlined in sections XVII - XX of the DOC Telework Policy and Sections XVII – XIX of the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan (October 2021).

XXIII. APPENDIX B: NOAA TELEWORK ELIGIBILITY AND READINESS
ASSESSMENT TOOL

NOAA Telework Eligibility and Readiness Assessment Tool

Note: This assessment should focus on the attributes of the employee rather than the suitability of the functions of the position for telework. The amount of telework that is suitable for a position should be established using the telework suitability tool.

The decision to permit an employee to telework, and how much telework to approve, should be based on the ability of an employee to work in a setting away from their customers and coworkers, either in their home or at another Federal facility, without on-site supervision. The following tool is to be used by the supervisor as a basis for discussing whether and how much telework is appropriate for a particular employee. The employee and the supervisor may complete the assessment together or separately and should discuss any discrepancies.

Lower scores in any assessment area are not necessarily disqualifying for telework, but may influence the amount of telework the supervisor approves and/or may require significant discussion, planning, or the addition of specific items/metrics in the telework agreement to ensure success. The supervisor may wish to utilize short-term telework agreements which expire after a few months to gauge the employee's readiness for telework.

Statutory Eligibility:

If any of the below boxes are checked, the employee is ineligible for telework and their application must be denied.

- The employee has been officially disciplined for being Absent Without Leave (AWOL) for more than 5 days in any calendar year and the record of such discipline remains in the eOPF.
- The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties [Public Law 111-292, 6502(a)(2)(A)(B)] and the record of such discipline remains in the eOPF.
- The employee's current performance is below the Fully Successful (or equivalent) level.

Notes:

1. Disciplinary actions that are not reflected in the eOPF are not considered "official."
 2. Disciplinary records such as Letters of Reprimand, which are removed from the eOPF after a period of time, are only disqualifying while they are present in the eOPF.
 3. An employee's performance may change throughout the year. If an employee's performance has previously been less than Fully Successful, but they have since improved, they are no longer ineligible.

Telework Readiness Assessment

Please rate yourself or your employee, using the following scale:

- 5 1. Employee successfully performs tasks without regular monitoring/supervision.
- 5 2. Employee is comfortable working autonomously/independently.
- 5 3. Employee independently identifies required work products.
- 5 4. Employee successfully establishes priorities and plans/organizes their work accordingly.
- 5 5. Employee demonstrates a high level of productivity, efficiency, and effectiveness.

I. INTRODUCTION

This Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) between the NOAA Office of General Counsel (OGC) and NOAA Attorneys Guild (Union) implements a NOAA Office of General Counsel telework plan, consistent with OPM guidance issued in November 2021 and the NOAA Telework Implementation Plan issued in October 2021. This agreement is applicable to telework, a form of alternative work arrangement in which an attorney is expected to report to the traditional worksite on a regular and recurring basis, which is currently defined as at least twice each biweekly pay period.¹

The NOAA Office of General Counsel promotes the maximum use of telework consistent with the needs of the office. Telework can provide the following benefits while positively impacting NOAA General Counsel's mission: increased attorney performance, efficiency, morale, and job satisfaction; help in attracting and retaining a diverse group of skilled workers from a wider geographic area; support for increasing federal employment of individuals with disabilities, veterans, and affirmatively advancing equity, civil rights, racial justice, and equal opportunity; lower absentee rates and attrition; reduced greenhouse emissions; and improved standards of living by allowing attorneys to: (1) be more productive without the interruptions of an office setting; (2) gain increased flexibility in managing their time and schedule; (3) reduce the cost of daily commuting; (4) stay productive in times of poor weather, mass transit delays, and natural disasters; and (5) enjoy a more rewarding and balanced work-, family-, and personal-life. NOAA's Office of General Counsel also recognizes the value of in-person, in-office work as a means of (1) enhancing professional relationships among colleagues and clients; (2) promoting mentoring and professional development; (3) accomplishing certain in-office work tasks; (4) decreasing the risk of distractions at home and work-life imbalance; and (5) preventing feelings of isolation or disconnection from the workplace, to increase an attorney's job satisfaction and positively impact NOAA General Counsel's mission.

¹ Consistent with November 2021 OPM guidance, the requirement to physically report to the traditional worksite on a regular or recurring basis may be suspended on a temporary basis at the Deputy General Counsel's discretion, including the discretion to determine the duration of the temporary suspension.

II. SCOPE

The provisions of this document apply to NOAA GC attorneys participating in the NOAA GC telework program.

IV. EMPLOYEE ELIGIBILITY

- A. In general, any attorney may telework from an approved alternative work site² (including a part-time attorney) if he or she 1) performs work suitable for telework, 2) is satisfactorily fulfilling work responsibilities, as determined by his/her/their supervisor, and 3) has an approved telework agreement.
- B. Attorney positions in NOAA GC are generally suitable for telework. If a new attorney position is created that is not suitable for telework, Management will provide the Union with a written explanation before recruiting for that position.
- C. No attorney is eligible for telework who has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five days in any calendar year or officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties. (5 U.S.C. 6502(a)(2)(A)(B)).

² An attorney's residence, or a location other than the traditional agency worksite, which for telework purposes is considered an official government worksite.

V. SCHEDULING FLEXIBILITY AND MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF TELEWORK

- A. Telework agreements can be individualized. The number of days of telework authorized per pay period for each attorney may vary consistent with the needs of the particular office and duties of the attorney up to, but not exceeding, eight days of telework during a pay period using Routine/Regular and Ad Hoc/Episodic telework. The number of days an attorney may telework during a pay period is left to the discretion of the attorney's supervisor subject to the considerations outlined in Paragraph B.
- B. Approval of the number of telework days per pay period should take into consideration the following factors:
1. Accessibility (i.e., ease of contacting and communicating, availability for local office purposes such as mentoring, ability to resolve acute issues in a timely manner, and required in-person all-hands meetings, staff meetings, meetings that must occur in a secure room (e.g., a Sensitive Compartmented Information Facility), etc.);
 2. Client need for in-person meetings;
 3. Litigation/casework associated needs;
 4. Mission-related priorities;
 5. Time in service with NOAA and/or another federal agency;
 6. Employee's history of successful telework³;
 7. OGC's history of successful telework with this position or its functions;
 8. Challenges specific to telework⁴, and
 9. Reasonable consistency across OGC (i.e., similarly situated attorneys treated similarly).
- C. An attorney who teleworks more than five days per pay period (i.e., more than 50% of the time) may be subject to office sharing, hoteling, or other alternative office arrangement, such as placement in a smaller office or an office without a window. These alternative office arrangements may remain in effect even if the attorney later returns to less than 50% telework.

³ For employees who have worked less than three years in a full-time professional legal position (such as new attorneys starting at NOAA immediately after law school or following a clerkship or fellowship), or employees who have not previously held a position that permitted telework, managers should give careful consideration to the appropriate balance of in-office work and telework, ensuring a sufficient period (typically a year) for the employee to demonstrate successful telework performance and ability prior to permitting telework in excess of 50% of the employee's time.

⁴ Telework challenges are addressed in Section I, supra.

VI. TELEWORK OPTIONS AND CONDITIONS

Telework is a flexible arrangement entered into on a voluntary basis. Employees who desire the option of telework may choose one or any combination of the following available types of telework as approved by their supervisor and included in a telework agreement that allows work at an alternative site to the traditional worksite,⁵ under the conditions identified in this Section:

- A. Routine/Regular Telework occurs as part of a preapproved ongoing, regular schedule while reporting to the traditional worksite on a regular and recurring basis. Once the schedule is established, the attorney may not change the assigned telework day(s) without approval.⁶
- B. Ad Hoc/Episodic Telework occurs on an irregular basis, chosen by the attorney, to address a specific need of the attorney.
- C. Unscheduled Telework occurs under an announcement by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) or other appropriate authority. When OPM makes an announcement of "Unscheduled Telework" and it is not the attorney's scheduled telework day, the attorney may choose to perform unscheduled telework or take unscheduled leave. The attorney's decision is not subject to approval by his/her/their supervisor. However, the attorney must notify his/her/their supervisor at the start of the workday via email.
- D. Conditions of Routine/Regular and Ad Hoc/Episodic Telework
 - 1. An attorney may combine teleworking with an alternative work schedule.
 - 2. An attorney is required to report to the agency worksite at least two times per pay period at their own expense.⁷ An agency worksite reporting day is intended to be a traditional, eight-hour working day, though flexibility is permissible. An attorney's supervisor may upon request approve less than eight hours of in-office work during an agency worksite reporting day, but any request for less than four hours of in-office work on an agency worksite reporting day requires approval of the Deputy General Counsel. Repeated requests for reduced in-office hours on agency worksite reporting days are discouraged, and more than five such requests in a six-month period will require the approval of the Deputy General Counsel. If the agency worksite is closed due to severe weather or otherwise on an attorney's scheduled agency worksite reporting day, ad hoc telework is permissible on that day, and the agency worksite reporting day does not need to be rescheduled.

⁵ The traditional worksite is the location an attorney is assigned to work absent a telework agreement.

⁶ The manner and timing of approval may vary at the discretion of Management and based on the specific needs of the Section.

⁷ This is not intended to affect reimbursements or subsidies from any federal or state transit or commuting subsidy or grant program.

3. The supervisor is responsible for assigning work in a manner that ensures the attorney has sufficient work. If an attorney does not have sufficient work for scheduled telework or time in the office, he/she/they shall consult with his/her/their supervisor to receive additional assignments.
4. In rare circumstances, management may find it necessary to require a nonemergency, telework-ready attorney to report to the traditional worksite for an assignment that requires an attorney's presence (e.g., providing a presentation or performing administrative duties at a pre-scheduled conference, to attend a meeting, or to work with materials that are too extensive to transport to the alternative work site). This should not be a last-minute surprise, but a special work circumstance that both the supervisor and attorney know about, discuss, and plan in advance as the instance requires.
5. When an attorney must be on official travel or a holiday falls on a regularly scheduled telework day, the attorney may request approval from his/her/their supervisor to reschedule the telework day during that pay period subject to the needs of the office. Generally, the interests of the office should be accommodated over the interests of working off-site on a regularly scheduled reporting day if a conflict arises, unless the attorney's supervisor agrees there are extenuating circumstances.
6. The attorney will be required to telework, adjust their schedule within their alternative work schedule arrangement, or take unscheduled leave when his/her/their office is closed (e.g. OPM Federal office closures and/or other authorized office closure) for reasons other than Federal law (i.e., Federal Holiday) or Executive Order, unless otherwise excused by his/her/their supervisor for good cause.

- a. Good cause for excusing an attorney from telework includes: (1) a lack of sufficient notice⁸ prior to the closure to allow the attorney to have the materials available at their alternative worksite to successfully telework; (2) factors outside of the attorney's control that impede successful telework; and (3) other similar circumstances.
 - b. Liberal leave and/or alteration of the attorney's work schedule shall be honored to the maximum extent possible to provide flexibility to an attorney due to an unplanned closure.
7. Employees may not use telework to care for dependents while on duty, though dependents may be present at the alternative worksite while an attorney is on duty, and a flexible work-schedule may be used to facilitate addressing dependent care needs while not on duty.
8. There is no restriction on the location of an attorney's approved alternative worksite except that any alternative worksite location must comply with all security clearance and Department of Commerce and NOAA Telework Policy approval requirements.
- E. Temporary exceptions to the requirement to report to the traditional worksite on a regular and recurring basis may be granted at management's sole discretion. Such exceptions, if they exceed two pay periods, must be approved by the Deputy General Counsel. Exceptions may be granted to address situations where the attorney is temporarily unable to report to the traditional worksite for reasons beyond the attorney's control (e.g., to accommodate an acute personal health or familial circumstance), a period during which the attorney is in temporary travel status away from the official worksite, or similar circumstance. A key consideration is the need to preserve equity between attorneys who are similarly situated.

VII. TELEWORK AGREEMENT

To participate in telework, an attorney must complete the "Telework Application/Agreement and Modification of Telework Agreement" (Appendix A), and if applicable, the Telework/Remote Telework Assessment Tool (Appendix B), and the "Telework Safety Checklist" (Appendix C). The attorney must submit the form or forms to his/her/their supervisor along with the certificate showing successful completion of Telework 101 for Employees via the Commerce Learning Center (CLC).

The attorney and his/her/their supervisor shall discuss the expectations in the proposed telework agreement, including the performance levels required of the attorney. The attorney's immediate supervisor is the approving official for Telework Agreements entered under this agreement (any departures from this agreement require approval of a Deputy General Counsel and Union Chair).

VIII. INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY (IT) SECURITY REQUIREMENTS FOR TELEWORK READY EMPLOYEES

Telework-ready employees must abide by the IT security requirements conveyed in the DOC IT Security Program Policy (ITSP), Commerce IT Requirements (CITRs), Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) and IT Security Policy memos.

In addition to the requirements above, telework-ready employees must abide by the IT security requirements conveyed in the NOAA IT Security Policy (ITSP), NOAA's Computer Incident Response Team Requirements (N-CITR), and IT Security Policies. The Telework Agreement signed by the telework-ready employee and their supervisor may describe additional security requirements.

Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that telework-ready employees agree to comply with all existing IT security requirements and to ensure employees are held accountable to them.

IX. MODIFICATION AND TERMINATION OF TELEWORK AGREEMENT

If management is proposing to modify or terminate an attorney's existing telework agreement (i.e. assumes duties not suitable for telework, or the arrangement is not working to the satisfaction of the supervisor, or the attorney otherwise is alleged to have violated telework eligibility requirements), the supervisor shall provide the attorney with an advance notice of thirty (30) calendar days prior to the effective date of the change (except for violations of Paragraph IV(C) eligibility requirements), with a written explanation to the attorney. An attorney may terminate this agreement at any time by submitting a completed Appendix D.

X. APPEAL AND GRIEVANCE PROCEDURES

Bargaining unit attorneys may use the procedures in the Collective Bargaining Agreement, Article 9, to grieve workplace matters related to telework eligibility, telework status, and/or telework schedule and agreement. Before filing a grievance using CBA Article 9, attorneys may seek reconsideration by his/her/their supervisor, and, if the matter is still unresolved, may appeal the matter to the relevant Deputy General Counsel. Any reconsideration or appeal to a Deputy General Counsel will extend the date by which a grievance must be filed.

XI. IMPLEMENTATION

- A. All attorneys participating in telework will complete the forms provided in Appendix A (mandatory) and Appendices B and C (as applicable) as soon as practicable after the effective date of this agreement before beginning to telework under this agreement. Introductory training sessions for all attorneys who request it will be made available within 90 days of the effective date of this agreement.

- B. To promote transparency and support informed conversations related to telework between the Union and Management, Management will provide the Union Chair or Vice-Chair a copy of the telework data provided to NOAA or the Department of Commerce through regular reporting consistent with DOC or NOAA policy. Upon request, Management will provide to the Union Chair or Vice-Chair copies of telework agreements that are not provided to the Union by bargaining unit members.

This agreement is effective until a superseding MOU is mutually agreed to.

Memorandum of Understanding

The parties to this Memorandum of Understanding (MOU), National Treasury Employees Union, Chapter 243 (NTEU 243) and the United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO or Agency), agree to this MOU covering the terms and implementation of a telework program for Patents Trial and Appeal Board (PTAB) NTEU 243 bargaining unit employees. The parties have worked collaboratively to develop the terms of the program, which are attached to this MOU as Appendix A (the Program) along with a list of position eligibility as Appendix B. This MOU covers NTEU 243 bargaining unit members working in PTAB. This agreement supersedes any other PTAB telework agreement covering PTAB NTEU 243 employees. In addition, the parties agree as follows:

- 1. Meeting of Bargaining Obligations: acknowledges that the Agency has met its notice and bargaining obligations regarding the implementation of the Program.
- 2. Implementation of Program: The Program will begin implementation during the notice period provided to employees regarding the reopening of the Alexandria Headquarters of the USPTO. Employees who have completed all of the actions necessary to participate in the program during that period will begin their new telework arrangement once the Office is no longer on maximum telework.
- 3. Reviewing Positions for Eligibility: No later than May of each year, PTAB will notify NTEU 243 of all bargaining unit positions it has identified as eligible for telework, the number of days per week each position is eligible to telework, and whether a position eligible to telework five days per week is also eligible for TEAP. PTAB will meet with NTEU 243 to discuss these determinations, including any positions PTAB has identified as ineligible for telework and the reason(s) therefore. PTAB will publish individual Position Eligibility lists after discussing eligibility determinations with the Union.

4. Future Discussions and Cooperation:

- a. The parties agree that they will meet periodically at the request of either party to discuss proposed changes to the Program. The Party wishing to propose a change in the Program will contact the other party to set up a meeting to discuss the topic. The parties will agree to further meetings as long as resolution of any issue(s) remain a possibility through informal and collaborative efforts.
- b. Changes agreed upon by the parties will be implemented as soon as practicable and reasonable notice will be given to the participants.
- c. If agreement is not reached informally pursuant to the provisions above, any party may reopen this agreement after one year from implementation, by giving notice to the other party of their request to renegotiate.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

I. Provisions Applicable to all Telework Participants

A. Introduction

1. Program Overview. The PTAB Telework Program (Program) allows eligible employees to perform assigned duties at an approved telework location, including their home. The Program is designed to deliver on the missions of the PTAB, and its customers while providing employees with workplace flexibility. The Program includes three telework options: situational, routine, and remote. Participation in the Program is voluntary and does not change the conditions of employment except as specified in these provisions.

Section I of this document is applicable to all Program participants (participants). Section II outlines additional provisions applicable to participants who elect situational telework. Section III outlines additional provisions applicable to participants who elect routine telework for one to five days per week, including participants who encumber positions eligible for remote telework and voluntarily elect routine telework. Section IV outlines additional provisions applicable to participants who elect remote telework. Section V outlines provisions for a temporary medical exception to leverage telework options for which their position is otherwise not eligible.

2. Definitions. The following definitions are used for the purposes of the Program:
 - a. USPTO office is defined as the USPTO headquarters in Alexandria, VA, unless otherwise designated as another location.
 - b. Official duty station is the city/town and state in which an employee's official worksite is located. For purposes of this program, the official duty station will always be in the United States (currently defined as the 50 United States, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico). An employee's official duty station is the location that is documented on the most recent SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action.
 - c. Official worksite is the location where an employee regularly performs their assigned duties. This may be a USPTO office or a primary alternate worksite¹.
 - d. Alternate worksite is an approved telework location. Approval must be received in advance of teleworking from an alternate worksite. A teleworking employee may have both a primary alternate worksite (i.e., the principal telework location, likely an employee's home) and one or more secondary alternate worksites (e.g., a relative's home, or a vacation or second property). See Section I.D. for alternate worksite requirements.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

- e. Situational telework is defined as performing assigned duties at an approved alternate worksite occasionally and on a case-by-case basis (i.e., the employee does not telework on an ongoing and regular telework schedule). Supervisory approval is required each time the employee teleworks. Situational telework may also be referred to as episodic, intermittent, or ad-hoc. A participant's official worksite, and therefore official duty station, will remain as the USPTO office. See Section II for situational telework provisions.
- f. Routine telework is defined as performing assigned duties at an approved alternate worksite on an approved ongoing and regular telework schedule. The participant routinely teleworks for one to five days per week and performs assigned duties at the USPTO office for four days to one (1) day² per week. The participant works at both the alternate worksite and at the USPTO office during each bi-week. The number of days eligible for telework are determined assuming a five-day workweek. This does not preclude an employee from using work schedule flexibilities to work less than the number of days eligible for telework at the approved alternate worksite, so long as the participant is working at the USPTO office in accordance with the expected number of days defined in the position eligibility. A participant's official worksite, and therefore official duty station, will remain as the USPTO office. See Section III for routine telework provisions.
- g. Remote telework is defined as performing assigned duties at an approved alternate worksite for five days per week (e.g. all hours in a bi-week) without a requirement to routinely report to the USPTO office. A remote telework participant decides, for their convenience, to change their official duty station (and therefore official worksite) from the USPTO office to the city/town and state of their primary alternate worksite (e.g., the participant's home) thereby eliminating the need to report to the office on a bi-weekly basis.³ See Section IV for remote telework provisions.
- h. Telework Enhancement Act Program (TEAP) is a remote telework option that allows participants who live greater than 50 miles from the USPTO office to decide, for their convenience, to change their official duty station from the USPTO office to the

² If an employee is required to report at least two times each bi-weekly pay period to the USPTO office, the reporting requirement is met by working in the USPTO office for a minimum of 15 minutes per week.

³ If an employee teleworks five days per week and maintains the USPTO office as their official duty station, they are participating in routine telework and must report to the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week. See [Section III.C.1] city/town and state of their approved telework location (e.g., the participant's home). The participant must travel to the USPTO office for a minimal number of mandatory trips when directed by the USPTO. When enrolled in TEAP, the participant waives their right to travel expenses for the minimal number of mandatory trips to the office (5 U.S.C. § 5711(f); 5 U.S.C. § 5711(g)). See Section IV.C. for additional details.

B. Eligibility

1. Activities Not Suitable for Telework. Positions generally eligible for telework are those positions with a sufficient volume of tasks that are suitable to be performed at an alternate worksite. Examples of the type of work that cannot be performed at an alternate worksite and will therefore limit the number of days a position is eligible for telework are:
 - a. Activities that require physical face-to-face personal contacts;
 - b. Activities that are restricted to a certain location;
 - c. Intake or distribution of postal mail or otherwise working with paper-based documentation not maintained in electronic format that are not portable and must not be duplicated;
 - d. Hands-on contact with machinery, equipment, vehicles, or files; or
 - e. Direct handling of classified or other secure materials that are not appropriate to access remotely.
2. Position Eligibility. The number of days a position is eligible to telework will be determined by evaluating the daily volume of tasks that are suitable to be performed at an alternate worksite and the daily volume of tasks that must be performed at the USPTO office. There are nine possible outcomes for each position's eligibility determination, based on a five-day workweek:
 - a. Not eligible for telework: the position's duties can only effectively be performed at the USPTO office.
 - b. Situational Telework: the position's duties are typically only able to be effectively performed at the USPTO office, but occasionally the employee's duties and the USPTO's needs are capable of being modified on a case-by-case basis to support non-routine performances of duties at an approved alternate worksite.
 - c. Routine Telework:

- i. 1 day per week: the position's duties, and the USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 1 day per week of routine telework. Employees in the position are expected to work at the USPTO office at least 4 days per week.
 - ii. 2 days per week: the position's duties, and USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 2 days per week of routine telework. Employees in the position are expected to work at the USPTO office at least 3 days per week.
 - iii. 3 days per week: the position's duties, and the USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 3 days per week of routine telework. Employees in the position are expected to work at the USPTO office at least 2 days per week.
 - iv. 4 days per week: the position's duties, and USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 4 days per week of routine telework. Employees in the position are expected to work at the USPTO office at least 1 day per week.
 - v. 5 days per week: the position's duties, and the USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 5 days per week of routine telework. If an employee chooses this telework option they maintain the USPTO office as their official duty station and they must report to the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week for 15 minutes for each occurrence to meet the recurring reporting requirement. This option is sometimes referred to as hoteling. See [Section III.C.]
- d. Remote Telework:
- i. 50-Mile Program (5 days per week): the position's duties, and the USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 5 days per week of remote telework⁴. If an employee who lives within 50-miles of the USPTO office chooses this option, their approved alternate worksite becomes their official duty station and they are not required to report to the USPTO office on a regular basis. See [Section IV.B.]
 - ii. TEAP (5 days per week): the position's duties, and USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 5 days per week of remote telework at an alternate worksite greater than 50 miles from the USPTO office. Assigned duties can be performed at the alternate worksite in all but a few instances per year with sufficient notice given to the participant to return to the USPTO office. See [Section IV.C.]

⁴ If an employee teleworks five days per week and maintains the USPTO office as their official duty station, they are not participating in 50mi or TEAP and are participating in routine telework and must report to the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week to meet the recurring reporting requirement. See [Section III.C.1.]

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

3. Review Positions for Eligibility. Annually, the PTAB will review positions to determine the number of days each position is eligible for telework. In addition, each position eligible to telework five days per week will be evaluated for TEAP eligibility. A position eligible for TEAP is one that the position's duties, and USPTO's needs, are not expected to require the participant to report to the office for extended or multiple periods of time (e.g., no more than three times per year). Once a position is deemed eligible for TEAP, the TEAP eligibility will not be removed if a participant occupying the position is enrolled in TEAP.
4. Individual Eligibility. Employees in a position deemed telework eligible are eligible to telework after they satisfy the minimum requirements outlined in the provisions of the Program [See requirements at 1.C.2.] and they meet the statutory eligibility requirements [See Section 1.B.5.]. The number of days a position is deemed eligible for telework will decree the maximum number of days an employee is eligible to telework.
5. Statutory Eligibility⁵. An employee is not eligible to participate in the Program if they: 1) have been officially disciplined for being absent without permission (i.e., absent without leave (AWOL)) for more than five days in any calendar year, or 2) have been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standard of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.
6. Position Changes. Employees joining the PTAB from another USPTO position will be required to apply for participation in the Program, subject to their new position's eligibility determination. Employees moving from one position to another within either PTAB are not required to reapply to the Program, but may be required to adjust their selected telework option and/or telework days based on their new position's eligibility and/or the PTAB's needs, as the case may be. The employee must discuss their schedule, the assigned duties to be performed at the alternate worksite, duty station and reporting requirements, and agreed-upon methods for communication and collaboration with their new position's supervisor.

C. Application

1. Request. An employee may participate in the Program to the maximum extent permitted by their position eligibility, or participate less than the maximum permissible, if applicable. (E.g., an employee in a position eligible for four days of telework per week may elect to participate on a four day per week basis, a fewer number of days per week, or not to telework at all.)

⁵ Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, as amended, 5 U.S.C § 6502(a)(2).

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

As described in I.C.2., below, employees wishing to participate in the Program will submit a request through the USPTO's Enterprise Telework Information System (ETIS), specifying the program option and number of days per week they wish to telework, as follows:

- a. Situational. As described in Section II, participants in this telework option generally report to the USPTO office five days per week, but are authorized to occasionally telework, up to the maximum number of days per week for which their position is eligible, as the employees' duties and/or circumstances make desirable.
- b. Routine: one day per week. As described in Section III.B., participants in this option report to the USPTO office four days per week. When at the USPTO office, a one day per week participant will maintain their status quo office.
- c. Routine: two days per week. As described in Section III.B., participants in this option report to the USPTO office three days per week. When at the USPTO office, a two day per week participant will maintain their status quo office.
- d. Routine: three days per week. As described in Section III.B., participants in this option report to the USPTO office two days per week. When at the USPTO office, a three day per week participant will share an office with another employee.
- e. Routine: four days per week. As described in Section III.B., participants in this option report to the USPTO office one day per week. When at the USPTO office, a four day per week participant will share an office with another employee.
- f. Five days per week. If electing to telework five days per week, a participant is presented with three five day per week program options. One option is routine telework and the other two are remote telework, as follows:
 - i. Routine: Hoteling. As described in Section III.C., participants in this option report to the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week for a minimum of 15 minutes at each occurrence on a schedule of their choosing. Participants will relinquish their USPTO designated office and, when at the USPTO office to meet the minimum reporting requirement, a five day per week routine telework participant will use temporary or "hoteling" office space.
 - ii. Remote: 50-Mile. As described in Section IV.B., participants in this option elect to designate their approved alternate worksite within 50 miles of the USPTO office as their official worksite and official duty station. The participant has no routine reporting requirement to the USPTO office. The participant will relinquish their USPTO designated office and, when occasionally at the USPTO office, a remote telework participant will use temporary or "hoteling" office space.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

iii. Remote: TEAP. As described in Section IV.C., participants in this option elect to designate their approved alternate worksite greater than 50 miles from the USPTO office as the participant's official worksite and official duty station. The participant has no routine reporting requirement to the USPTO office. The participant is responsible for paying for one of no more than a few mandatory trips to the office per fiscal year. The participant will relinquish their USPTO designated office and, when occasionally at the USPTO office, a remote telework participant will use temporary or "hoteling" office space.

2. Requirements. All employees who wish to participate in the Program must meet or complete the following requirements. Additional information about each item is located at the referenced section of this document.

- a. Be in an eligible position. [See Section I.B.]
- b. Read the Program Guidelines (this document).
- c. Hold a conversation with your immediate supervisor to discuss:
 - i. The desired telework program option and schedule based on position eligibility. [See Sections I.B., I.C.1., I.G., and III.B.1.]
 - ii. The assigned duties to be performed at the alternate worksite(s), [See Sections I.B., III.A., and III.B.]
 - iii. PTAB work schedule operating parameters, including agreed-upon methods for communication and collaboration. [See Sections I.E.3., I.F., and I.G.1.]
 - iv. Worksites, including the primary alternate worksite, the official worksite, and whether there will be more than one alternate worksite. [See Section I.D.]
 - v. If teleworking three or four days per week, which requires a participant to share an office, discuss office move and sharing logistics to execute the move. [See Section III.B.3.]

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

- vi. If teleworking five days per week, which requires a participant to relinquish their office, discuss the process for moving out of their office and reserving a hoteling room. See Sections [III.C.2. and IV.A.3.]
 - d. Review the alternate worksite(s) safety and security guidelines located on the USPTO Telework Resources website. See Sections [I.D.5. and I.D.6. and Appendix A.]
 - e. Secure approved internet service. See [Section I.E.2.]
 - f. Complete USPTO Teleworker Training: Telework Effectiveness and submit your certificate to your supervisor and the Business Unit Telework Coordinator. See [Section I.C.5.]
 - g. Submit an application for telework through the ETIS.
 - i. New employees will receive a New Employee Temporary Telework Agreement with the new hire welcome packet that must be signed before teleworking (see Appendix C). New employee information is loaded into the ETIS approximately three weeks after an employee's start date. The temporary agreement must be replaced by a permanent application and agreement through the ETIS within two months after the employee's start date.
 - h. Request and receive applicable telework equipment. The universal laptop and SecurID are the minimum equipment required to begin teleworking. See Sections [I.C.5. and I.E.1.]
 - i. If applying for a remote telework option, work with your supervisor to obtain approval and complete the Office of Human Resources (OHR) procedures to change your official duty station. See [Section IV.]
 - j. If applying to telework five days per week and not changing your duty station from the USPTO office, discuss the recurring reporting requirement with your immediate supervisor. See [Section III.C.1.]
3. Approval.
- a. Decisions to grant or deny telework requests will be made by the participant's immediate supervisor based on whether the position is eligible, whether the employee meets the requirements to participate in the Program See [Section I.C.2.], and whether the employee's request is otherwise consistent with the Program. The maximum number of days per week an employee may participate will be based on the number of days the position is eligible for telework.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

- b. Decisions on requests to grant or deny a telework request will be made promptly using the ETIS, generally within one week of submission of the request. Decisions to grant will include the number of days the employee is permitted to telework per week. Decisions to deny will include the reason for denial. An employee may appeal a decision to deny to the second level supervisor with a copy to the Business Unit Telework Coordinator.
 - c. Employees approved to telework who are not already teleworking or onboarding virtually will be authorized to begin telework the first full pay period after completing the required training and receiving the minimum amount of equipment to telework. The immediate supervisor may permit teleworking sooner at their discretion. Refer to Section I.C.9. for additional guidance about modifications to telework program options.
4. Telework Agreement. All participants must have an approved telework agreement denoting the telework option selected and signed by the employee and supervisor to begin telework. The telework agreement will be completed when applying for telework through the ETIS. Participants who opt for remote telework are required to change their duty station [See Section IV] and acknowledge that (a) they will not be reimbursed for travel between their alternate worksite and the USPTO office except as specified in Section IV, and (b) a duty station change could impact pay and benefits.
 5. Equipment Deployment. All participants must receive the minimum amount of equipment to perform official duties at the alternate worksite before teleworking. Follow the steps outlined below to request and receive your equipment. Participants will be provided with the minimum amount of equipment as soon as practicable after the approval of the telework request. [See Section I.E.1.]
 - a. Contact the Telework Coordinator after completing Section I.C.2 steps a. through g.
 - b. The Telework Coordinator will send the employee a Telework Equipment Deployment spreadsheet template to finalize in accordance with the guidelines included in Section I.E.1.
 - c. Deliver the completed spreadsheet to immediate supervisor for approval.
 - d. The supervisor will review the spreadsheet for compliance with equipment listed in Section I.E.1 and submit it to the Telework Coordinator representing their approval.
 - e. The Telework Coordinator will request the equipment.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

- f. The employee will be notified when the equipment is ready to be delivered or retrieved from the USPTO Telework Depot.
 - g. If on-boarding as a new employee with the USPTO virtually, before the on-board date the employee will be contacted by the OHR, the employee's supervisor, and/or the Telework Coordinator to arrange for equipment deployment. The Telework Coordinator will work with the employee's supervisor to define equipment needs and request equipment deployment.
 - i. The USPTO, OCIO will ship equipment to the employee to be received at least two days prior to the start date.
 - ii. The USPTO, OCIO will also deliver the employee's network account information and SecurID or other means of alternate authentication once the employee is sworn in.
6. Training. All participants teleworking for the first time must complete telework training before an employee is permitted to telework. If on-boarding as a new employee with the USPTO virtually, Training should be completed no later than two weeks after the employee's start date. The employee may contact the Telework Coordinator for assistance in locating the training. Managers should also complete Manager Training: Telework Effectiveness. The Office will ensure that such training is made available promptly to all participants whose requests to telework are approved.
7. Telework Agreement Updates. Participants will use the ETIS to update their telework agreement when participant telework information changes and annually for recertification, including that the participant reviewed the safety guidelines for alternate worksite(s). The Agency will remind all participants of the recertification requirement annually. The safety guidelines are posted on the Telework Program Office website and at Appendix A. Participants are responsible for updating the ETIS and telework agreement to ensure the Program option and address(es) of the alternate worksite(s) are accurate at all times.
8. Participant Telework Program Changes. The participant's telework schedule should reflect the program option selected in ETIS and recorded on the telework agreement. If a participant is regularly teleworking or working in the office on a schedule different than the program option selected, the participant or the supervisor should initiate a conversation about modifying the telework program option selected in ETIS using the procedures outlined in Section I.C.9., below.
9. Modifications. Participants may permanently modify their telework program option by selecting telework program option and days up to the maximum number of days for which the position is eligible using the ETIS. There are no advance notification requirements for participants whose positions are eligible to telework five days per week and who request to update their telework program option in a manner that does not impact office arrangements (e.g., changing from one day to two days per week telework or from five days per week with a reporting requirement to the 50-mile program).

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

Participants who encumber positions eligible to telework less than five days per week must discuss schedule changes with their supervisor if requesting to reduce the number of days working at the USPTO Office.

Otherwise, to allow for office arrangements, participants will notify their supervisor and the Telework Program coordinator via email at least two weeks in advance of modifying a telework program option from less than four days per week telework to five days per week telework or withdrawing from the program; and four weeks in advance of changing status from five days per week telework to less than four days per week telework. For exigent circumstances the Office will process employee requests in less than 4 weeks by providing hoteling or temporary office space to the employee until a permanent workspace can be arranged.

See Section III. B. 2. for guidance on temporary schedule changes.

D. Worksites

1. Locations. Participants will designate a primary alternate worksite as the location where hours will be worked while not at the USPTO office. If a participant desires, they may designate an additional location as a secondary alternate worksite. All alternate worksites must be located in the fifty (50) states of the United States, the District of Columbia, or Puerto Rico. The designation of a participant's official worksite is dependent on the designation of a participant's official duty station, as follows:
 - a. A situational telework participant's official worksite is the USPTO office.
 - b. A routine telework participant's official worksite is the USPTO office.
 - c. A remote telework participant's (i.e., a 50-mile or TEAP option⁶) official worksite is their primary alternate worksite (home or other approved telework location) because

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

the participant has changed their official duty station to the city/town and state of their primary alternate worksite.

2. Alternate Worksites. An alternate worksite may be the participant's home or other approved appropriate location. The participant must designate a room or location in their alternate worksite for placement and use of the equipment provided for the Program. Participants are responsible for purchasing and maintaining all office furniture at the alternate worksites.

Participants are responsible for ensuring compliance with all local laws or rules governing an office in their home. Participants who are renters are responsible for ensuring that their lease allows the installation of all the necessary equipment and connection services (e.g., compliant internet service) for the Program.

Participants are responsible for any utility cost, cooling, heating, and lighting at the alternate worksites. Participants are responsible for any re-wiring, updating, and improvements necessary to bring the electrical connections in an alternate worksite up to the required standards.

3. Working at a Secondary Alternate Worksite. Secondary alternate worksites are subject to the rules outlined in Section I.D.2. above. Participants must request approval to work at a secondary alternate worksite through ETIS prior to working from that location.

Requests are not necessary for each use of a secondary alternate worksite once the secondary alternate worksite is approved through ETIS. However, the participant must communicate the routine and recurring schedule with their immediate supervisor.

The amount of time spent working at the secondary alternate worksite cannot exceed 6 months in any 12-month period otherwise the secondary alternate worksite should be changed to become the primary alternate worksite. Employees must track their time at alternate worksites; if the intended stay at any secondary alternate worksite exceeds 6 months in a 12-month period, then the participant's supervisor initiates a Personnel Action Request (PAR) to change the duty station in the designated USPTO human resources system. See Section IV.A.2. for additional guidance on changing your duty station. The participant should also update their residence address in EPP, as applicable.

A participant whose official worksite is at the USPTO office will generally not be permitted to work at a secondary alternate worksite that is outside of a 50-mile radius of their USPTO office for a full bi-week or more at a time, unless the participant reports to the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week [See Section III.C.1.], meets one of the exceptions in 5 C.F.R. § 531.605(d)(2), or has been granted a temporary medical exception [See Section V].

4. Transporting Equipment. When a participant has been approved to work at a secondary alternate worksite they are responsible for safely and securely transporting equipment to and from the alternate worksites [See Section I.E.7]. The participant is also responsible for determining the equipment necessary to successfully perform their official duties at the secondary alternate worksite. A participant will only be issued one set of telework equipment in accordance with the standards outlined in Section I.E.1.
5. Safety Guidelines. All participants will review the alternate worksite(s) safety and security guidelines located on the USPTO Telework Program website. [See Appendix A.]
6. Security. All alternate worksites must meet security and privacy requirements, including those established and occasionally updated by OCIO regarding IT security [See Section I.E.4]. Participants are not permitted to work in a public area, e.g., a coffee shop, an airport terminal, or outside in a park.
7. Inspection. The participant will permit other USPTO employees and contractors to access the alternate worksite during the hours from 9:00 AM to 5:00 PM, Monday-Friday (excluding holidays) upon two business days' notice to the participant. Accessing the alternate worksite will be for the purpose of installing, repairing, maintaining, or removing work equipment, software, or other USPTO property, to investigate an accident or a worker's compensation claim, or to investigate other work related or safety problems arising from the administration of the Program. The parties may mutually agree to a time outside of these hours.

E. Equipment, Tools, and Supplies

1. Standard Equipment. Participants will be provided with a standard suite of IT equipment necessary to perform official assigned duties remotely at the primary alternate worksite as soon as practicable after the approval of the telework request. A participant may decline deployment of equipment if, after consultation with their supervisor, they deem the equipment is not necessary to productively perform official assigned duties at the primary alternate worksite (e.g., no printer, one monitor instead of two, etc.). Standard equipment includes the following:
 - a. 5 days per week: A universal laptop; docking station; two monitors; webcam; printer (provided the supervisor deems it necessary to perform assigned official duties);

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

telephone headset; keyboard; mouse; SecurID (FOB) or other means of alternate authentication; fingerprint reader⁷; and other related peripherals.

- b. 3 and 4 days per week. A universal laptop, docking station, two monitors, webcam, telephone headset, SecurID (FOB) or other means of alternate authentication, keyboard, mouse, and other related peripherals. A printer may be issued if the immediate supervisor deems it necessary to perform assigned official duties. Immediate supervisor approvals must be provided to the Telework Coordinator before printers will be deployed. If a participant is issued an approved printer to use at the alternate worksite, the employee will relinquish their personal office printer and use a shared network printer.
- c. 2 days per week or less. A universal laptop, docking station, one monitor, webcam, telephone headset, SecurID (FOB) or other means of alternate authentication, keyboard, mouse, and other related peripherals.
- d. Situational telework. A universal laptop and SecurID (FOB) or other means of alternate authentication.

To ensure a seamless customer experience, participants are required to use USPTO assigned phone numbers for communication with colleagues and customers.

Necessary equipment will be provided to the participant as soon as practicable after the approval of the telework request. The universal laptop and SecureID (FOB), or other designated authentication technology, is the minimum equipment required to begin teleworking.

2. Internet Service.

- a. Requirements. All participants must have high-speed broadband internet service such as cable or fiber optic that meets USPTO's virtual private network (VPN) connection requirements at all alternate worksites. Wired connectivity is recommended. Employees may choose to work either wired or wirelessly, but must be able to connect with a wired connection as needed to improve connectivity or upon OCIO request (e.g., in responding to a service request or to facilitate updates).
- b. Internet Service (IS) Reimbursement. Given that participants who telework five days per week have relinquished their USPTO office, they are eligible for IS cost

⁷ Fingerprint readers will be provided to TEAP participants, only.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

reimbursement at their approved alternate worksite(s) in accordance with the USPTO ISP Reimbursement Policy.

3. Collaboration Tools. Participants must use USPTO collaboration tools in accordance with the USPTO's Time and Attendance Tools, Communication, and Collaboration (TACC) Policy, or any policy that supersedes it. Collaboration tools include, but are not limited to: instant messaging and chat; document/desktop sharing and whiteboard features; virtual meeting tools; video communication and conferencing equipment; and presence indicator. Employees will be required to use their video communication tools (i.e., camera) in accordance with POPA and NTEU 243 negotiated agreements for specific meetings and when their active participation during such meeting is required.
4. IT Security. Participants are responsible for the security of Federal government property, information, and information systems at all alternate worksites. If not properly implemented, telework may introduce vulnerabilities into USPTO systems and networks. To prevent security incidents, participants are required to protect information and information systems commensurate with risk and complete the annual USPTO mandatory IT Security Awareness Training.

Information associated with official business should be stored in controlled, accessible, and safeguarded locations. Participants should store information in places that are adequately accessible to other colleagues (with a need to know) and backed up (e.g., shared drives, SharePoint) and refrain from desktop storage. Participants will not store USPTO information on personal devices or accounts.

The creation of paper copies containing sensitive information should be minimized to the greatest extent possible while teleworking. Most home or non-industrial shredders do not meet the General Services Administration's (GSA) approved cross-cut shredder requirement; therefore, these paper files must be stored in a locked drawer or room until participants can return to campus and utilize GSA-approved shredders. Please contact the USPTO Records Officers or CUI Managers if you have hard copies at your alternate worksite and are unable to adequately secure and store the documents until you can return to the USPTO. Please email CUI@uspto.gov with any questions related to properly disposing of records.

- a. Care must be taken to ensure records subject to the Privacy Act (5 U.S.C. § 552a, Records Maintained on Individuals) and sensitive but non-classified data are not disclosed to anyone except those who have authorized access to perform their duties. Participants should refer to the Rules of the Road.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

- b. Participants are responsible for the security of all official information, protection of any government furnished equipment and property, and the execution of the mission of the USPTO at the alternate worksite(s) in accordance with existing USPTO and DOC policies.
 - c. Any USPTO owned equipment is for official use only. Use of the equipment for private purposes is prohibited except as permitted by the USPTO Rules of the Road. Family members and friends of Participants are not authorized to use any government furnished equipment.
 - d. Participants are to comply with all security related USPTO policies including the USPTO Rules of the Road. These policies may be found on the USPTO intranet website.
5. USPTO Equipment Failures. Participants are to contact the USPTO Service Desk to report Agency-provided equipment or software failures or problems, including connecting via the VPN, as soon as they are discovered and follow the procedures provided by the Service Desk. In the event that VPN or Agency provided equipment problems (including USPTO power outages) prohibit working at an alternate worksite, the participant must notify their immediate supervisor. The participant may consult with their immediate supervisor to determine if there is non-equipment related work available at the alternate worksite and determine how to record time. See Section I.G.7 for guidance about non-weather related equipment failures at the alternate worksite(s) (e.g., participant power outages and interruptions in internet access) and Section I.I.1 for weather related outages.
6. Ownership and Maintenance. USPTO maintains ownership and control of any and all equipment, software, other materials, and data provided to the participant by the agency. The USPTO acts as the insurer for damage, theft, or other loss (e.g., fire, flood, etc.) of the USPTO equipment and materials only. Equipment provided by the Agency will be serviced and maintained by the Agency.
7. Safeguarding Assets. All participants are responsible for reasonably safeguarding and protecting government issued equipment. The accountability and security of IT resources [See Section I.E.4] extends to your alternate worksite(s), residence, other approved telework location, and/or other areas in which you use, travel with, and store the equipment. When a participant chooses to work at a secondary alternate worksite they are responsible for safely and securely transporting equipment to and from the alternate worksites. Reasonable safeguards must be consistently exercised to ensure that government property is not vulnerable to any negligence or potential criminal activity. When a participant is assigned a piece of equipment, including the Universal Laptop, the participant is responsible for reasonable safeguards of its physical safety, as well as the data stored on it. Suggestions for safeguarding equipment and procedures for reporting lost, stolen, or damaged equipment are available on the USPTO's Asset Management website.

Participants will provide property custodians with all information requested to inventory assets and will provide timely notice of equipment changes and issues.

8. Returning Equipment. Any equipment provided to the participant for use at the alternate worksite(s) should be returned to the Agency generally within five business days from the end of the participant's participation in the Program, unless exigent circumstances exist. Any equipment that was deployed to the participant and is not needed to perform official duties should be returned as soon as the participant deems the equipment as unnecessary.

A participant returning equipment must notify the Telework Coordinator to facilitate the return.

The USPTO may require return or exchange of Agency provided equipment. Except for remote telework participants enrolled in TEAP, participants may be required to report to the USPTO office to receive equipment or to repair or exchange equipment.

9. Supplies. Participants enrolled in TEAP who have been issued a printer will use the TEAP Operating Procedures to request toner and paper required to carry out official assigned duties. Unless otherwise defined, TEAP participants are expected to pick up all other small office supplies while on a trip to the USPTO office.

Also, unless otherwise defined, all other telework participants may pick up small office supplies required to carry out their official assigned duties from the USPTO office and those who have been issued a printer may pick up paper and toner from the USPTO office.

- F. Collaboration and Engagement. Employee engagement is a priority for the PTAB and to facilitate collaboration and successful interactive relationships employees should leverage collaboration tools, such as video conferencing, instant messaging or chat tools, and other USPTO approved collaboration software to stay connected. Employees are permitted to upload a workplace appropriate picture of themselves in USPTO collaboration tools so that colleagues and customers can associate names and faces. See the PTAB Work Schedule Operating Parameters for further information on communication, collaboration, and customer engagement.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

G. Schedules and Time and Attendance

1. Work Schedules. Employees teleworking five days per week must elect to work the Increased Flexitime Schedule (IFS) work schedules. See Appendix D for Minimum and Maximum work schedule for PTAB.
2. Timesheets. Participants will use the "Telework Home" transaction code (or other designated method to report telework time) with the appropriate PPA codes to indicate in the time and attendance system which days were worked at the alternate worksite(s) and the number of hours worked at the USPTO office and alternate worksite(s) each day.
3. Holidays. Participants working at an alternate worksite will be granted the same holidays as employees at the USPTO office, unless otherwise determined by the Office of Personnel Management. Early dismissal of USPTO employees or closure of the USPTO office for non-emergency conditions, such as on the day prior to a Federal holiday, will be granted to participants working at an alternate worksite.
4. Overtime and Compensatory Time. Overtime and compensatory time may be worked at an alternate worksite so long as the time has been approved by the participant's supervisor prior to working the additional hours.
5. Leave. All forms of approved leave, including compensatory time, may be used on days on which the participant is scheduled to work at the USPTO office or approved alternate worksite. Leave, however, may not be used on a regular basis to avoid working at the USPTO office on a non-telework day or to avoid meeting a routine telework participant's twice per bi-week reporting requirement See [Section III.C.1.].
6. Multiple Locations in a Given Day. A participant may work at the USPTO office and/or multiple alternate worksites on the same day. A participant who chooses to work at multiple locations on the same day must notify their immediate supervisor and comply with the requirements of the policy on communication and collaboration with respect to posting work hours (to include time zone, if outside of Eastern Time zone) regardless of where they work. Participants must mid-day flex (if on IFF/S) or take leave to accommodate travel time required for commuting to and from the various work sites. See [Section III.B. for routine telework schedule requirements.]
7. Inability to Work at an Alternate worksite. If an employee is prevented from working at an alternate worksite for reasons other than inclement weather (e.g., non-weather related power or internet outage at the alternate worksite or lack of dependent care), the participant must either (1) report to the USPTO office to perform official duties if not a TEAP participant, (2) obtain approval to work at a secondary alternate worksite, (3) if on

April 2022

IFP/S, change their work schedule by reducing the number of hours worked on that day, or (4) request appropriate leave, at the participant's option. If able to work, the participant may also consult with their immediate supervisor to determine if there is non-equipment related work available at the alternate worksite. The participant will not be reimbursed for any travel or related expenses for commuting between their alternate worksite(s) and the USPTO office and all trips will not be on duty time. See Section I.E.5. for guidance related to a USPTO equipment failure and Section I.I.1. for weather related conditions.

H. In-person Events

1. Virtual First. When technology is available, and consistent with the purpose of the event, meetings will be held so that participants working remotely can participate fully via video conference.
2. Mandatory Attendance. Participants may be required to report to the USPTO office to address business needs and office coverage for non-portable work activities, attend training, meetings, or other individual, team-, Office-, or Business Unit-wide events. Participants will be given as much notice as possible of any meeting or activity that they must attend in person. Absent exigent circumstances, participants will not be required to report to the USPTO office on the same day that notice is provided to the participant and the USPTO will endeavor to meet the notification timelines outlined below.
 - a. Office coverage to address business needs or non-portable work activities: Generally, for participants not enrolled in TEAP, notice to report to the USPTO office will not be less than two days.
 - b. Group meetings: Group meetings are defined as team, organizational (e.g.: section, branch, division, office), or business unit-wide meetings, to include training. For these planned events, the Agency has a goal of 4 weeks' notice, but at least 3 weeks' notice will be provided prior to the date of the meeting or training. This provides notification in accordance with TEAP operating procedures to ensure TEAP participants have adequate time to plan for a mandatory employee-paid trip.

All decisions to hold mandatory, in-person meetings will be approved by the Chief Judge or the Board Executive or their delegate(s).

I. Changes to Operating Status and Unscheduled Telework (e.g., Inclement Weather)

1. Office Closures, Early Departures and Delayed Arrivals Due to Weather or Safety Events. When a foreseeable weather or safety event causes the agency to close or authorize late arrival or early departure, any employee with a signed telework agreement (i.e., a

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

Program participant) must be prepared to telework, flex around the full or partial closure, and/or take leave. Except as provided below, no employee with a signed telework agreement of any type (regular, situational, etc.) may receive Weather and Safety leave, regardless of whether the employee was scheduled to telework that day. In order to telework during a weather or safety event, participants must have their Universal Laptop at their alternate worksite. Unscheduled telework due to a closure, early dismissal, or delayed arrival due to weather or safety events will not count against the allowable telework days provided by this Program.

If weather related physical conditions affect the alternate worksite in a way that limits the employee's ability to perform their duties (e.g., power or internet outages at the participant's alternate worksite or the USPTO office), the employee may request Weather and Safety administrative leave or to work at a secondary alternate worksite. Participants may telework at an alternate worksite where there are dependents or others. However, for any time that the employee claims as work time, their attention must be oriented to work activities and not dependent care. If dependent care prohibits the ability to perform telework for some portion of the work day during an office closure, early dismissal or delayed arrival, an employee may use a combination of flex time and unscheduled leave, with supervisory approval, to meet any dependent care needs and still accomplish work. See Section I.K.1 for additional information on dependent care.

Weather and Safety leave may be available to a Program participant if the participant was not prepared to telework at their approved alternate worksite because either (1) the weather or safety event that caused the agency to close or authorize late arrival or early departure was not foreseeable or (2) reasonable circumstances prevented the employee from preparing to telework (e.g., the participant had been on leave until the day of the weather event, and the participant was not able to obtain their laptop before the weather or safety event). Find additional information on weather and safety leave at Leave Administration, Appendix A: Impact of Weather and Safety Events on the Alexandria Campus and Randolph Square Building.

2. Unscheduled Leave or Unscheduled Telework. In the event OPM or USPTO declares that Federal agencies are open for the entire day with the option for "unscheduled leave or unscheduled telework," Program participants may report to the USPTO office, telework on a non-telework day (if consistent with the employee's work obligations), take unscheduled annual leave, or use a combination of work and annual leave to account for all of the regularly scheduled hours of the workday. A decision to telework on a day in which unscheduled telework is allowed will not count against the allowable telework days provided by this Program.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

J. Performance Management.

Participants are expected to perform assigned duties and responsibilities at the alternate worksite. It is important that the alternate worksite be free from distractions that would impair a participant's ability to perform official duties and provide the same time and level of attention to the work product as is available at the USPTO office. Participants will have their performance evaluated under the criteria set out in their performance appraisal plan. If the participant lacks sufficient work for a telework day, they should consult with the supervisor to see if there is additional work that can be done at the alternate worksite. If there is not enough work that can be done at the alternate worksite, the employee must work at the USPTO office or use leave to cover the hours for which there is no work. Participants shall provide details of work accomplished upon the request of their supervisor.

Participants who are on a Performance Improvement Plan (PIP) will not be required to change their telework arrangement due to the PIP. Whether the participant's official worksite is the USPTO office or an approved alternate worksite, a participant who is on a PIP will be required to commit to be available to receive assistance and training. The assistance may be provided at the USPTO office or virtually. The supervisor and the participant will attempt to find an agreeable time for the assistance to be provided, including providing reasonable notification in accordance with the intent of Section I.H.2. The supervisor, however, retains the right to direct the participant to attend meetings or training at the USPTO office, including one-on-one training.

K. Miscellaneous Provisions.

1. Dependent Care. No telework arrangement is authorized which allows the participant to provide care to any individual during work hours. Participants shall have dependent care arrangements so that the participant's ability to work at the alternate worksite is not adversely affected. A dependent may be at the alternate worksite while the participant teleworks if those dependents are independently pursuing their own activities or otherwise provided for by a caretaker. For any time that the employee claims as work time, their attention must be oriented to work activities and not dependent care.
2. Transit Subsidy. Participants continue to remain eligible for transit subsidies as set forth in the USPTO Public Transit Subsidy Program.
3. FECA and Alternate Worksite Injury. Participants are covered under the Federal Employee's Compensation Act (FECA) if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the alternate worksite. In order for a participant to be able to file a claim for worker's compensation, the participant who has an accident or injury while working at the alternate worksite must notify their immediate supervisor and report the accident or injury to a designated USPTO official in accordance with FECA requirements. Upon notification, the USPTO may investigate any reported accidents and injuries.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

4. Property Liability. The USPTO will not be liable for damages to a participant's personal or real property during the course of performing official duties or while using Government equipment in the participant's residence, except to the extent the Government is held liable by the Federal Tort Claims Act, claims arising under the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act, or other laws.
5. Protecting Records. Participants will apply approved safeguards to protect Agency records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with the Privacy Act requirements set forth in the Privacy Act of 1974, Public Law 93-579, codified at 5 U.S.C. Section 552a. See Section I.E.4. for additional IT Security requirements.

Participants are required to use electronic versions of documents and data whenever practical. When this is not practical, and solely for the purposes of this Program, participants will be permitted to remove USPTO copies of documents from the USPTO office in order to perform their officially assigned duties at an alternate worksite, unless such files have been identified by management as being inappropriate for removal from the USPTO office. The participant is responsible for the transportation and safeguarding of the documents and files to and from the USPTO office and alternate worksite(s). Original or official files may not be removed from the USPTO office unless specifically approved by the Agency.

When the USPTO has an unusual need for a document or file or other information that is located at the alternate worksite, the participant may be directed to provide the requested document, file or other information to the USPTO office within one business day by delivery means determined by the Agency. An unusual need is one that does not occur on a regular basis and cannot wait for the participant's scheduled return to the USPTO office or be resolved through other means.

6. Union Activities. Stewards and union officials may perform Union representational activities on official or bank time while teleworking.
7. Personal Information. Agency personnel will not divulge the addresses and private home or mobile telephone numbers of participants to the public or any other USPTO personnel who do not have a legitimate business need to know such information.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

II. Provisions Applicable to Situational Telework Participants

- A. Requesting Situational Telework. A situational telework participant is expected to perform their assigned duties at the USPTO office regularly. Situational telework must be requested in advance and approved by the immediate supervisor. Requests for situational telework must include the dates the participant will telework and the work that will be performed at the alternate worksite on those dates.

Participants currently teleworking situationally in a position that is eligible for routine or remote telework who would like to move to routine or remote telework must modify their telework application in ETIS and follow the application procedures in Section I.C.9. Additional information on routine telework may be found at Section III and additional information on remote telework may be found at Section IV.

- B. Offices. Participants selecting a situational telework program option will retain their status quo office.
- C. Part Time Employees. Part-time employees who encumber a position eligible for situational or routine telework may participate in situational telework.

III. Provisions Applicable to Routine Telework Participants

- A. Overview. A routine telework participant's official duty station remains the USPTO office and requires the participant to work at the USPTO office for a specified amount of time each week or bi-week as designated by their position eligibility determination.

1. Participants electing to telework one to four days per week will work at the USPTO office for four to one day(s) per week.
2. Participants electing to telework five days per week may elect either to retain the USPTO office as their official duty station and remain a routine teleworker or, if the participant's primary alternate worksite is located within 50 miles of the USPTO office, change the location of their official duty station to the primary alternate worksite in accordance with the procedures outlined in Section IV.B, and become a remote teleworker.

B. Routine Telework Participants Teleworking One to Four Days per Week

1. Telework Schedule. Participants eligible for routine or remote telework may request to telework one to four days per week, up to the number of days permitted by their position's eligibility determination. Participants electing this option are expected to perform their assigned duties at the USPTO office for one to four day(s) per week, as set forth in their position eligibility determination. Participants who select this option must consult with their immediate supervisor to define a telework schedule that identifies regular days to perform duties at the USPTO office each bi-week. For participants whose essential functions include duties that must be done at the USPTO office, the amount of time spent at the USPTO office on a non-telework day must be long enough to complete those essential functions and if a participant chooses to work at multiple locations on the same day they must notify their immediate supervisor. Participants may not use IFP/S flexibilities or any combination of leave to regularly avoid any in-office requirements. Participants are not precluded from teleworking on fewer days than their position's eligible number of days. The day(s) a participant elects to perform assigned duties in the office will be the same each week and must be scheduled in advance and approved by the immediate supervisor to ensure office coverage.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

On a situational basis, a one to four day per week routine telework participant's immediate supervisor may allow an employee to work additional days at an alternate worksite (i.e., supplemental situational telework) in accordance with the provisions for situational telework See [Section II]. Supplemental situational telework must be requested in advance and approved by the immediate supervisor. Requests for supplemental situational telework must include the dates the participant will telework in addition to the routine telework and the work that will be performed at the alternate worksite on those dates.

2. Telework Schedule Changes. Changes in USPTO office day(s) for participants whose position is eligible for routine telework one to four days per week must be requested in advance and approved by the immediate supervisor. These requests may be for a one-time change or for a permanent switch in the days performing assigned duties in the USPTO office. See Section I.C.7, I.C.8, and I.C.9 for permanent program changes. The PTAB may require temporary adjustments to USPTO office day(s) schedules to address business needs and office coverage for non-portable work activities.

Participants currently teleworking one to four days per week in a position that is eligible to telework five days per week who would like to move to five days per week telework must modify their telework application in ETIS and follow the application procedures in Section I.C.7, I.C.8, and I.C.9. Additional information on five day per week routine telework may be found at Section III.C, and on five day per week remote telework may be found at Section IV.

3. Offices. Routine telework participants who select a telework program option that places the participant at the USPTO office for two days per week or less will be required to share an office with another employee. Participants who share an office may coordinate their on-campus days, such that one of them uses the office at a time. Participants who select a telework program option that places the participant at the USPTO office for three days per week or more will remain their status quo office arrangements.

A Program participant whose selected telework program option places them in a shared office, and who changes the terms of their telework program and agreement in any way that places them at the USPTO office for three days per week or more, will be reassigned to an unshared office. A participant may have to remain in their shared office until individual office space is available.

The participant will be assigned an office as determined by their seniority consistent with existing Union agreements for office space. The employee should be issued the space they are entitled to within three months of notifying their immediate supervisor and Telework Program coordinator of the change.

C. Routine Telework Participants Teleworking Five Days per Week

1. Reporting Requirement. An employee who elects to telework five days per week and maintains the USPTO office as their official duty station is required to report to the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week. Participants shall work at the USPTO Office for a minimum of 15 minutes for each occurrence in a manner consistent with IFP work schedule rules as to days and hours of work. All forms of approved leave, including compensatory time, may be used to meet the required hour(s) on this day but leave may not be used on a regular basis to avoid the requirements of this paragraph to work at the USPTO office two times per bi-week.
2. Offices. Routine telework participants who telework five days per week will not have an assigned office at the USPTO office and will reserve hoteling space on campus when working at the USPTO office, including when meeting the regular bi-weekly reporting requirement.
3. Travel Expenses and Travel Time. When a participant's official duty station is the USPTO office, all travel between home and the USPTO office is considered commuting time and will not be reimbursed.

- D. Part Time Employees. Part-time employees who encumber a position eligible for routine telework for less than five days per week may participate in telework. The percentage of time that may be worked at the alternate work site will be prorated as determined by the percentage of the employee's part-time schedule compared to a full-time schedule, times the number of days. Part time employees who encumber a position eligible for remote telework for five days per week, may telework 100 percent of their part time work schedule (the requirement to routinely report to the USPTO office two times a bi-week remains). Part time employees should consult guidelines on part time work schedules in the applicable collective bargaining agreement, labor contract, or other union agreements related to part time work.

April 2022

IV. Provisions Applicable to Remote Telework Participants

A. Provisions Applicable to all Remote Telework Participants

1. Overview. A participant who elects to telework five days per week may elect to either retain the USPTO office as their official duty station in accordance with Section III.C. or change the location of their official duty station to the primary alternate worksite.

There is no requirement to routinely report to the USPTO office when a participant has changed their official duty station to the primary alternate worksite. The change in official duty station may impact a participant's pay and benefits because locality pay is based on the location of the official duty station. See Sections IV.A.2, IV.B.1, and IV.C.2 for additional information on changing the official duty station.

Table 1 provides an overview of implications for regular and recurring reporting requirements to the USPTO office, employee pay and benefits, and travel expenses associated with changing the official duty station.

2. Process for Changing the Official Duty Station. A remote telework participant will select one of two program options that permit a change of their official duty station, depending on the location of the approved primary alternate worksite. If the participant lives within a 50 mile radius of the USPTO office, they will select the 50-mile program option and follow the procedures in Section IV.B.1. If the participant lives outside of a 50 mile radius from the USPTO office, they will select the TEAP program option and follow the procedures in Section IV.C. The 50 miles is a point-to-point straight line distance from 600 Dulany Street, Alexandria, VA, 22314.

When changing the official duty station, participants are responsible for maintaining accurate human resource information as outlined in the ETIS Employee Information and Certification Language document located at Appendix B.

3. Offices. Remote telework participants will not have an assigned office at the USPTO office and may use hoteling space, if available, when working at the USPTO office.
4. Part Time Employees. Part time employees who encumber a position eligible for remote telework, may telework 100 percent of their part time work schedule. Part time employees should consult guidelines on part time work schedules in the applicable collective bargaining agreement, labor contract, or other union agreements related to part time work.

B. Remote Telework Participants Working within 50 miles of the USPTO Office⁸

1. Official Duty Station Changes. Participants who live within a 50-mile radius⁹ of the USPTO office may request to change their official duty station to their approved primary alternate worksite (e.g., home address), which will be designated as their official worksite. A change in the participant's official duty station eliminates the requirement to report to the USPTO

⁸ This category of remote telework is sometimes referred to as the "50-Mile Program".

⁹ The 50-mile radius is determined by https://www.gpsvisualizer.com/calculators#distance_address.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

office at least two times per bi-week and changes the participant's pay (including locality pay) to the location of the primary alternate worksite, which may be a different locality pay than the USPTO office. Information on locality pay is available by checking the relevant pay tables found at the Office of Personnel Management's website. Questions about other potential changes to pay and benefits (e.g., health and life insurance, thrift savings plan, etc.) may be directed to the OHR at (571) 272-6000 or HumanResources_USPTO@uspto.gov.

All changes to duty station are voluntary and for the convenience of the participant. See participant responsibilities in Section IV.A.2. All changes to the official duty station must be pre-approved by the USPTO. If a participant's primary alternate worksite (e.g., home address) is within a 50-mile radius of the Alexandria office, a 50-mile radius telework program option may be selected. The participant's supervisor approves the request in ETIS and initiates a PAR to change the duty station in the designated USPTO human resources system.

Generally, participants should request approval three weeks in advance of any change in the official duty station or move. This will provide the supervisor and OHR with sufficient time to process and apply an effective date for the duty station change. The USPTO will not pay for moving costs associated with changes in official duty station.

2. Working at the USPTO Office. Participants may occasionally voluntarily work at the USPTO office. Participants working at the USPTO office are encouraged to reserve hoteling space to perform their official duties. Participants may also be required to occasionally report to the USPTO office to address business needs and office coverage for non-portable work activities, attend training, meetings, or other team-, Office-, or Business Unit-wide events.
3. Travel Expenses and Travel Time. When a participant's official worksite is their home address or other approved alternate worksite within a 50-mile radius of the USPTO office, they will not be reimbursed for any travel or related expenses for commuting between their official worksite and the USPTO office regardless of whether the trips are mandatory or voluntary. All such trips, regardless of the location of the official worksite, will not be on duty time.

C. TEAP Option for Remote Participants Working more than 50 miles from the USPTO Office¹⁰

1. Telework Enhancement Act Program (TEAP). TEAP allows participants teleworking five days per week whose position is TEAP eligible and who live greater than 50 miles from the USPTO office to decide, for their own convenience, to change their duty station to an ¹⁰ This category of remote telework option is referred to as TEAP.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

approved telework location in the local commuting area of the city in which they live. See participant responsibilities outlined Section IV.A.2. The participant must travel to the USPTO office for mandatory trips when directed by the Office, and TEAP permits the participant to waive their right to travel expenses for a reasonable number of mandatory trips to the office (5 U.S.C. § 5711(f); 5 U.S.C. § 5711(g)). The participant is responsible for paying for one mandatory trip per fiscal year for up to a maximum of five calendar days, which will be the first trip of the fiscal year. Participants who telework five days per week and who wish to participate in TEAP should refer to the TEAP Operating Procedures for program specifics.

2. TEAP Operating Procedures. The USPTO maintains a TEAP with operating procedures applicable to all USPTO employees. Employees who enroll in TEAP will abide by TEAP Operating Procedures. Highlights of certain aspects of TEAP are outlined below. The information contained herein is not intended to substitute or supersede the TEAP Operating Procedures.
 - a. TEAP Eligibility. All telework participants who encumber positions eligible for TEAP may apply to TEAP if they meet the TEAP eligibility requirements (e.g., changing the official duty station, waiving travel reimbursements, etc.). Generally, participants should be approved for TEAP three weeks in advance of any change in the official duty station or move.
 - b. TEAP Application and Approval. If a participant's primary alternate worksite (e.g., home address) is outside of a 50-mile radius of the Alexandria office, a TEAP telework program option may be selected. The participant's supervisor approves the request in ETIS and initiates a PAR to change the duty station in the designated USPTO human resources system.
 - c. TEAP Pay and Benefits. Participation in TEAP may impact the participant's pay, due to locality pay differences from the USPTO office. Information on locality pay is available by checking the relevant pay tables found at the Office of Personnel Management's website. The TEAP Operating Procedures outline other potential changes to benefits (e.g., health and life insurance, thrift savings plan, etc.) and state taxes. Questions about pay and benefits may be directed to the OHR at (571) 272-6000 or HumanResources_USPTO@uspto.gov.
 - d. TEAP Relocation Expenses. Participation in TEAP is voluntary. No employee relocation expenses will be paid to participants.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

- e. TEAP Moves and Withdrawal. A participant must use ETIS to notify their immediate supervisor and the Telework Program coordinator of all moves to a different primary alternate worksite (official worksite) or withdrawal from the program. Generally, participants should request approval three weeks in advance of any change in the official duty station or move. This will provide the supervisor and OHR with sufficient time to process and apply an effective date for the duty station change. The USPTO will not pay for moving costs associated with changes in official duty station. See the TEAP Operating Procedures for specific instructions.
- f. TEAP Mandatory Trips. The TEAP Operating Procedures outline procedures and requirements for mandatory trips. The TEAP participants will incur one mandatory trip up to a maximum of five calendar days that is participant paid per fiscal year. All trips beyond that number will be paid by the Agency. The PTAB will endeavor to combine reasons for trips and limit the number of trips per year to a reasonable number. The participant's time for travel will be compensated based on the most efficient manner of travel as defined by Federal travel regulations.
- g. TEAP Voluntary Trips. Trips to the USPTO office are defined as voluntary when they are discretionary on the part of the participant and visitation/travel is not required by the PTAB. No travel expenses or travel time will be provided for voluntary trips. Voluntary trips to the USPTO office do not count towards the maximum number of mandatory trips. See TEAP Operating Procedures for further guidance on voluntary trips.

V. Temporary Medical Exception

- A. Description of Program. Management will consider requests from employees to work from home or another alternate worksite based on a serious temporary or short-term medical need of the employee or a family member which would:
 - 1. Significantly impair or preclude the employee from working at (or traveling to) the USPTO office;
 - 2. Ordinarily require the employee to use leave to be away from the USPTO office without the ability to telework; and
 - 3. Allow the employee to work from the alternate work site.
- B. Flexibility: In addition to the flexibility of where to work, the employee may request additional telework days, up to and including teleworking five days per week and specific hours of work.

PTAB TELEWORK PROGRAM 2.0 (NTEU-243)

April 2022

- C. Application. The request may be from a person not eligible to telework (based on position eligibility), or from a current teleworker to expand or change the number of days of telework or change their telework program option. If the request is from an employee whose position is not normally eligible to telework and is not covered by an existing telework agreement, the employee must sign a telework agreement. Eligibility requirements based on position may be waived because the eligibility for the temporary medical exception is based upon specific need.
- D. Approval. Requests under these circumstances (known as a Temporary Medical Exception) must be submitted to the employee's immediate supervisor (or designee) as soon as the need for the temporary medical exception is known by the employee. The supervisor or designee will promptly forward the request with any comments (to include their proposal for the terms of the medical telework) to the Business Unit Head or Deputy Business Unit Head or designee. Decisions to grant or deny requests will be made by the Business Unit Head, Deputy, or designee and communicated to the employee in writing promptly, generally within one or two weeks, and taking into consideration the date on which the employee requests to begin telework. The reason(s) for any denial will be included in the response.

In determining whether to approve a request under this section, the supervisor must consider:

1. The work available for the employee to perform from a remote location as well as the ability to successfully complete assigned tasks in accordance with the employee's performance appraisal plan;
2. Whether or not the employee will have appropriate remote access to USPTO IT systems and the likelihood that the employee can be successful in working remotely;
3. The employee's ability to work without the disruption of providing childcare, eldercare, or medical needs (the employee may mid-day flex, if on an appropriate work schedule, to accomplish these activities); and
4. The impact of the employee's absence from the USPTO office on other employees as well as the ability of the PTAB to meet its business needs.

Approval to telework under this exception will be up to the duration of the medical need, depending on the work available to be performed at the approved alternate work site. In all instances, the telework granted pursuant to this medical exception may not exceed 4 months without renewed approval. However, the approval may be reviewed at any time and may be extended, adjusted, or revoked: a.) if the medical circumstances have changed; or b.) when participation is based on the medical needs of a family member and business unit needs have changed significantly). Approval of these requests for a temporary medical exception is separate and independent of the Agency's reasonable accommodation process and is not considered evidence of the Agency perceiving or regarding an employee as disabled under the Rehabilitation Act. Nothing in this section precludes or limits the ability of employees to request a reasonable accommodation nor limits the ability of supervisors to refer employees to the Reasonable Accommodation Program Office/OEEOD for assistance when appropriate.

- E. Documentation. Upon request, employees must submit medical documentation) from a health care provider supporting the request for a temporary medical exception.
 - 1. The statement or documentation will: --
 - a. State the general nature of the medical need and why the employee should be excused from working at the USPTO office (treatment of the employee or a family member outside of the commuting area will satisfy this requirement).
 - b. Confirm that the employee can perform work.
 - c. Include either of the following:
 - i. If the employee has the medical condition—that the employee is fit for duty at the alternate work site, including any limitations that may apply; or,
 - ii. If a family member has the medical condition—
 - (A) state that the family member will not require constant attention, or
 - (B) the employee may indicate on the application that other people will provide care when the employee is working.
 - d. The expected duration of the need based on the medical condition.
 - 2. The employee will not be required to reveal any details about the medical condition other than the general nature of the condition as set out in the medical documentation described in Section V.E.1, and the PTAB may not require the employee or family member to sign a release for their medical information.
 - 3. The PTAB will treat as confidential any medical information given by an employee in support of the medical telework request, and may only disclose such information subject to its Privacy Act and Rehabilitation Act obligations for work-related reasons on a need to know basis.

4. The purpose of the health care provider's statement and/or documentation is to verify the existence of the medical reason asserted in the temporary medical request, that the employee could not reasonably be expected to work at the USPTO office or that working from an alternate worksite would help alleviate the medical condition or assist with recuperation, and that the employee is fit for duty at the alternate location. The PTAB will not substitute its own judgment for the medical judgment of the health care provider with respect to the validity of the medical condition, its duration, or how medical telework will alleviate the condition or help the employee (or family member) to recuperate (so long as there are sufficient details in the statement for the PTAB to understand the basis for the recommendations).
- F. Work Performed. Because of the added flexibility in terms of eligibility, scheduling and/or number of telework days and hours, the participant and the supervisor will discuss the work to be done, the hours to be worked (including both the number of hours per day and the time of these hours), and any changes in circumstances affecting the arrangement. The terms of the medical telework will be documented in writing and signed by the employee and supervisor or exchanged via email.

Appendix A

Safety Guidelines for the Alternate Worksite(s)

Employees may use the following guidelines to assist them in a review of the overall safety and adequacy of their alternate worksite. The following are only recommendations, and do not encompass every situation that may be encountered. Employees are encouraged to obtain professional assistance with issues concerning appropriate electrical service and circuit capacity for residential worksites.

1. Develop and practice a fire evacuation plan for use in the event of an emergency.
2. Check your smoke detectors regularly and replace any batteries as needed.
3. Have a working fire extinguisher conveniently located at your alternate worksite (in the room where you work or appropriately located to help with evacuation), and check the charge regularly.
4. Computers are heavy. Place them on sturdy, level, well-maintained furniture.
5. Choose office chairs that provide good supporting backrests and allow adjustments to fit you comfortably.
6. Locate your computer to eliminate noticeable glare from windows and lighting. Place the computer monitor at a height that is comfortable and does not produce neck or back strain. Locate computer keyboards at heights that do not cause wrist strain or place the keyboard on an adjustable surface.
7. Install sufficient lighting in locations to reduce glare on the work surface.
8. Arrange file cabinets so that opened drawers do not block ingress and egress.
9. Be sure to leave space for ingress and egress, where possible, to reduce tripping hazards.
10. Be sure electrical equipment is connected to grounded outlets.
11. Avoid fire hazards by not overloading electrical circuits.
12. Inspect and repair carpeting with frayed edges or loose seams. Avoid using throw rugs that can cause triggering hazards in your workspace.
13. Locate computers, phones, and other electrical equipment in a manner that keeps power cords out of walkways.
14. Lock (CTRL+ALT+DEL) computers after the workday is over.
15. Keep your workspace clean and avoid clutter which can cause fire and tripping hazards.
16. Use proper lifting techniques when moving or lifting heavy equipment and furniture.
17. Report accidents and injuries immediately to your supervisor.

Appendix B

ETIS Employee Information and Certification Language

The document summarizes the various conditions, understandings, and certifications required by an employee who applies for and enrolls into a USPTO telework program. The information will appear on screens during the ETIS application process.

General guidance and provisions of telework at USPTO

1. All pay, leave, and travel entitlements will be based on the participant's official duty station.
2. The participant must follow established USPTO procedures when requesting and taking leave, compensatory time or credit hours.
3. The participant agrees to complete surveys and attend focus group meetings and interviews to help evaluate the telework program.
4. For participants with government provided equipment: Upon reasonable advance notice by the agency, the participant will permit USPTO employees and contractors to access the alternate worksite during normal working hours on a day that the participant is working at home for the purpose of installing, repairing, maintaining, or removing equipment, software, or other USPTO property, or to investigate an accident or a Workers' Compensation claim or to investigate other work-related or safety problems arising from the administration of the telework program. The parties may mutually agree to a time outside of these hours.
5. The participant agrees to comply with USPTO instructions regarding the return or removal of program materials.
6. The government will not be liable for damages to a participant's personal or real property during the course of performance of official duties or while using government equipment in the participant's residence, except to the extent the government is liable by the Federal Tort Claims Act or claims arising under the Military Personnel and Civilians Employees Claims Act, or other laws.
7. All office policies and procedures and responsibilities remain in effect during a telework program unless the terms of the program agreement or guidelines specifically indicate a difference.
8. Participants who change their primary alternate worksite while participating in the program are required to update their primary alternate worksite address in the Enterprise Telework Information System (<https://etis.uspto.gov>). Participants must also keep their approved secondary alternate site location updated, but this does not constitute a relocation.
9. In accordance with USPTO CIO standards, participants in any telework program must have internet service provided by cable or fiber optic with minimum internet speeds of 15 Megabits per second of download speed and 4 Megabits per second of upload speed. The participant agrees that her/his internet speeds at the alternate worksite(s) meet or exceed this requirement, unless a lower speed is authorized by an underlying agreement.

Employee Responsibilities Related to Human Resource Information

I understand the following:

1. I am responsible for keeping my residential address and duty station up-to-date in the Employee Personal Page (EPP) and ETIS systems;
2. I am responsible for reviewing my benefits coverage (health insurance, dental and vision plans, and long term care insurance), and ensuring the options I have selected provide coverage in my desired location. If I relocate out of the coverage area and wish to elect a new health benefit plan, I must notify the Office of Human Resources (OHR) to make a new election;
3. I am responsible for ensuring that the correct state taxes are withheld from my salary. If I move, I understand it is my responsibility to submit a change request through OHR according to the established processing timelines. If I fail to ensure the proper taxes are withheld from my salary, it is my responsibility to work with my state(s) to make any necessary corrections. The OHR will not make retroactive adjustments or withholdings. More information on how to change your state tax exemption can be found here;
4. Because I am responsible for making sure that taxes are being paid to the appropriate jurisdiction and that my pay is based on the location of my duty station, reviewing my earnings and leave statements is the best way of identifying any issues as early as possible;
5. If applicable, I will work with my supervisor to ensure a "Change in Duty Station" Personnel Action Request (PAR) is initiated in the HRCconnect system before the effective date. I also understand that the change in duty station cannot be made effective until OHR has processed the request. If I fail to timely update my address or duty station, it may impact my locality pay and result in an erroneous salary overpayment. I will be required to refund any overpayment to the USPTO.
6. Questions regarding benefits, compensation or personnel action processing may be directed to HumanResources_USPTO@uspto.gov or by telephone at 571-272-6000.

Safeguarding USPTO information and equipment

1. The participant will protect Government/USPTO records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with the Privacy Act requirements set forth in the Privacy Act of 1974, Public Law 93-579, codified at 5 U.S.C. Section 522a.
2. The participant will ensure that Government/USPTO records taken from the USPTO are accessed only by authorized personnel.
3. The participant will safeguard documents, data files and equipment during transit and at the alternate worksite(s).
4. The participant must return all documents, data files, work products, drafts and notes to the USPTO upon participant ending participation in the program.

Office of General Counsel (OGC) Telework Program, a Memorandum of Understanding

March 25, 2022

The parties to this Memorandum of Understanding (MOU), the National Treasury Employees Union Chapter 243 (NTEU 243), the Patent Office Professional Association (POPA), and the United States Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO or Agency), agree to this MOU covering the terms and implementation of a telework program for the Office of General Counsel (OGC). The parties have worked collaboratively to develop the terms of the program, which are attached to this MOU as Appendix A (the Program) along with a list of bargaining unit position eligibility as Appendix B. This MOU covers bargaining unit members from both NTEU 243 and POPA working in OGC. This agreement supersedes any other telework agreements covering OGC bargaining unit employees. In addition, the parties agree as follows:

1. Meeting of Bargaining Obligations: NTEU 243 and POPA acknowledge that the Agency has met its notice and bargaining obligations regarding the implementation of the Program.
2. Implementation of Program: The Program will begin implementation during the notice period provided to employees regarding the reopening of the Alexandria Headquarters of the USPTO. Employees who have completed all of the actions necessary to participate in the program during that period will begin their new telework arrangement once the Office is no longer on maximum telework.
3. Reviewing Positions for Eligibility: No later than May of each year OGC will notify NTEU 243 and POPA of all bargaining unit positions it has identified as eligible for telework, the number of days per week each position is eligible to telework, and whether a position eligible to telework five days per week is also eligible for TEAP. OGC will meet with NTEU 243 and POPA to discuss these determinations, including any positions OGC has identified as ineligible for telework and the reason(s) therefore. OGC will publish individual position eligibility lists after discussing eligibility determinations with the Unions.

4. Future Discussions and Cooperation:

- a. The parties agree that they will meet periodically at the request of any party to discuss proposed changes to the Program. The party wishing to propose a change in the Program will contact the other parties to set up a meeting to discuss the topic. The parties will agree to further meetings as long as resolution of any issue(s) remain a possibility through informal and collaborative efforts.
- b. Changes agreed upon by the parties will be implemented as soon as practicable and reasonable notice will be given to the impacted participants.
- c. If agreement is not reached informally pursuant to the provisions above, any party may reopen this agreement after one year from implementation, by giving notice to the other parties of their request to renegotiate.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

I. Provisions Applicable to all Telework Participants

A. Introduction

1. Program Overview. The OGC Telework Program (Program) allows eligible employees to perform assigned duties at an approved telework location, including their home. The Program is designed to deliver on the missions of OGC and its customers while providing employees with workplace flexibility. The Program includes three telework options: situational, routine, and remote. Participation in the Program is voluntary and does not change the conditions of employment except as specified in these provisions.

Section I of this document is applicable to all Program participants (participants). Section II outlines additional provisions applicable to participants who elect situational telework. Section III outlines additional provisions applicable to participants who elect routine telework for one to five days per week, including participants who encumber positions eligible for remote telework and voluntarily elect routine telework. Section IV outlines additional provisions applicable to participants who elect remote telework. Section V outlines provisions for a temporary medical exception to leverage telework options for which their position is otherwise not eligible.

2. Definitions. The following definitions are used for the purposes of the Program:
 - a. USPTO office is defined as the USPTO headquarters in Alexandria, VA, unless otherwise designated as another location.
 - b. Official duty station is the city/town and state in which an employee's official worksite is located. For purposes of this program, the official duty station will always be in the United States (currently defined as the 50 United States, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico). An employee's official duty station is the location that is documented on the most recent SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action.
 - c. Official worksite is the location where an employee regularly performs their assigned duties. This may be a USPTO office or a primary alternate worksite¹.
 - d. Alternate worksite is an approved telework location. Approval must be received in advance of teleworking from an alternate worksite. A teleworking employee may have both a primary alternate worksite (i.e., the principal telework location, likely an employee's home) and one or more secondary alternate worksites (e.g., a relative's home, or a vacation or second property). See Section I.D. for alternate worksite requirements.

¹ If an employee is required to report at least two times each bi-weekly pay period to the USPTO office, the USPTO office remains the official worksite, regardless of whether that is the location where the employee performs most of their work.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

- e. Situational telework is defined as performing assigned duties at an approved alternate worksite occasionally and on a case-by-case basis (i.e., the employee does not telework on an ongoing and regular telework schedule). Supervisory approval is required each time the employee teleworks. Situational telework may also be referred to as episodic, intermittent, or ad-hoc. A participant's official worksite, and therefore official duty station, will remain as the USPTO office. See Section II for situational telework provisions.
- f. Routine telework is defined as performing assigned duties at an approved alternate worksite on an approved ongoing and regular telework schedule. The participant routinely teleworks for one to five days per week and performs assigned duties at the USPTO office for four days to one (1) day² per week. The participant works at both the alternate worksite and at the USPTO office during each bi-week. The number of days eligible for telework are determined assuming a five-day workweek. This does not preclude an employee from using work schedule flexibilities to work less than the number of days eligible for telework at the approved alternate worksite, so long as the participant is working at the USPTO office in accordance with the expected number of days defined in the position eligibility. A participant's official worksite, and therefore official duty station, will remain as the USPTO office. See Section III for routine telework provisions.
- g. Remote telework is defined as performing assigned duties at an approved alternate worksite for five days per week (e.g. all hours in a bi-week) without a requirement to routinely report to the USPTO office. A remote telework participant decides, for their convenience, to change their official duty station (and therefore official worksite) from the USPTO office to the city/town and state of their primary alternate worksite (e.g., the participant's home) thereby eliminating the need to report to the office on a bi-weekly basis.³ See Section IV for remote telework provisions.
- h. Telework Enhancement Act Program (TEAP) is a remote telework option that allows participants who live greater than 50 miles from the USPTO office to decide, for their convenience, to change their official duty station from the USPTO office to the city/town and state of their approved telework location (e.g., the participant's home). The participant must travel to the USPTO office for a minimal number of mandatory

² If an employee is required to report at least two times each bi-weekly pay period to the USPTO office, the reporting requirement is met by working in the USPTO office for a minimum of 15 minutes per week.

³ If an employee teleworks five days per week and maintains the USPTO office as their official duty station, they are participating in routine telework and must report to the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week. See [Section III.A.2.]

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

trips when directed by the USPTO. When enrolled in TEAP, the participant waives their right to travel expenses for the minimal number of mandatory trips to the office (5 U.S.C. § 5711(f); 5 U.S.C. § 5711(g)). See Section IV.C. for additional details.

B. Eligibility

1. Activities Not Suitable for Telework. Positions generally eligible for telework are those positions with a sufficient volume of tasks that are suitable to be performed at an alternate worksite. Examples of the type of work that cannot be performed at an alternate worksite and will therefore limit the number of days a position is eligible for telework are:
 - a. Activities that require physical face-to-face personal contacts;
 - b. Activities that are restricted to a certain location;
 - c. Intake or distribution of postal mail or otherwise working with paper-based documentation not maintained in electronic format that are not portable and must not be duplicated;
 - d. Hands-on contact with machinery, equipment, vehicles, or files; or
 - e. Direct handling of classified or other secure materials that are not appropriate to access remotely.
2. Position Eligibility. The number of days a position is eligible to telework will be determined by evaluating the daily volume of tasks that are suitable to be performed at an alternate worksite and the daily volume of tasks that must be performed at the USPTO office. There are nine possible outcomes for each position's eligibility determination, based on a five-day workweek:
 - a. Not eligible for telework: the position's duties can only effectively be performed at the USPTO office.
 - b. Situational Telework: the position's duties are typically only able to be effectively performed at the USPTO office, but occasionally the employee's duties and the USPTO's needs are capable of being modified on a case-by-case basis to support non-routine performances of duties at an approved alternate worksite.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

c. Routine Telework:

- i. 1 day per week: the position's duties, and the USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 1 day per week of routine telework. Employees in the position are expected to work at the USPTO office at least 4 days per week.
- ii. 2 days per week: the position's duties, and USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 2 days per week of routine telework. Employees in the position are expected to work at the USPTO office at least 3 days per week.
- iii. 3 days per week: the position's duties, and the USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 3 days per week of routine telework. Employees in the position are expected to work at the USPTO office at least 2 days per week.
- iv. 4 days per week: the position's duties, and USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 4 days per week of routine telework. Employees in the position are expected to work at the USPTO office at least 1 day per week.
- v. 5 days per week: the position's duties, and the USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 5 days per week of routine telework. If an employee chooses this telework option they maintain the USPTO office as their official duty station and they must report to the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week for 15 minutes for each occurrence to meet the recurring reporting requirement. This option is sometimes referred to as hoteling. See [Section III.C.]

d. Remote Telework:

- i. 50-Mile Program (5 days per week): the position's duties, and the USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 5 days per week of remote telework⁴. If an employee who lives within 50-miles of the USPTO office chooses this option, their approved alternate worksite becomes their official duty station and they are not required to report to the USPTO office on a regular basis.
- ii. TEAP (5 days per week): the position's duties, and USPTO's needs, are suitable for allowing 5 days per week of remote telework at an alternate worksite greater than 50 miles from the USPTO office. Assigned duties can be performed at the alternate worksite in all but a few instances per year with sufficient notice given to the participant to return to the USPTO office.

⁴ If an employee teleworks five days per week and maintains the USPTO office as their official duty station, they are not participating in 50mi or TEAP and are participating in routine telework and must report to the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week to meet the recurring reporting requirement. See [Section III.C.1.]

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

3. Review Positions for Eligibility. Annually, OGC will review positions to determine the number of days each position is eligible for telework. In addition, each position eligible to telework five days per week will be evaluated for TEAP eligibility. A position eligible for TEAP is one that the position's duties, and USPTO's needs, are not expected to require the participant to report to the office for extended or multiple periods of time (e.g., no more than three times per year). Once a bargaining unit position is deemed eligible for TEAP, the TEAP eligibility will not be removed if a participant occupying the position is enrolled in TEAP.
4. Individual Eligibility. Employees in a position deemed telework eligible are eligible to telework after they satisfy the minimum requirements outlined in the provisions of the Program See requirements at [1.C.2.] and they meet the statutory eligibility requirements See Section [1.B.5.]. The number of days a position is deemed eligible for telework will decree the maximum number of days an employee is eligible to telework.
5. Statutory Eligibility⁵. An employee is not eligible to participate in the Program if they: 1) have been officially disciplined for being absent without permission (i.e., absent without leave (AWOL)) for more than five days in any calendar year, or 2) have been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standard of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.
6. Position Changes. Employees joining OGC from another USPTO position will be required to apply for participation in the Program, subject to their new position's eligibility determination. Employees moving from one position to another within either OGC are not required to reapply to the Program, but may be required to adjust their selected telework option and/or telework days based on their new position's eligibility and/or OGC's needs, as the case may be. The employee must discuss their schedule, the assigned duties to be performed at the alternate worksite, duty station and reporting requirements, and agreed-upon methods for communication and collaboration with their new position's supervisor.

C. Application

1. Request. An employee may participate in the Program to the maximum extent permitted by their position eligibility, or participate less than the maximum permissible, if applicable. (E.g., an employee in a position eligible for four days of telework per week may elect to participate on a four day per week basis, a fewer number of days per week, or not to telework at all.)

⁵ Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, as amended, 5 U.S.C § 6502(a)(2) (2016).

As described in I.C.2, below, employees wishing to participate in the Program will submit a request through the USPTO's Enterprise Telework Information System \(ETIS\), specifying the program option and number of days per week they wish to telework, as follows:

- a. Situational. As described in Section II, participants in this telework option generally report to the USPTO office five days per week, but are authorized to occasionally telework, up to the maximum number of days per week for which their position is eligible, as the employees' duties and/or circumstances make desirable.
- b. Routine: one day per week. As described in Section III.B, participants in this option report to the USPTO office four days per week. When at the USPTO office, a one day per week participant will maintain their status quo office.
- c. Routine: two days per week. As described in Section III.B, participants in this option report to the USPTO office three days per week. When at the USPTO office, a two day per week participant will maintain their status quo office.
- d. Routine: three days per week. As described in Section III.B, participants in this option report to the USPTO office two days per week. When at the USPTO office, a three day per week participant will share an office with another employee.
- e. Routine: four days per week. As described in Section III.B, participants in this option report to the USPTO office one day per week. When at the USPTO office, a four day per week participant will share an office with another employee.
- f. Five days per week. If electing to telework five days per week, a participant is presented with three five day per week program options. One option is routine telework and the other two are remote telework, as follows:
 - i. Routine: Hoteling. As described in Section III.C, participants in this option report to the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week for a minimum of 15 minutes at each occurrence on a schedule of their choosing. Participants will relinquish their USPTO designated office and, when at the USPTO office to meet the minimum reporting requirement, a five day per week routine telework participant will use temporary or "hoteling" office space.
 - ii. Remote: 50-Mile. As described in Section IV.B, participants in this option elect to designate their approved alternate worksite within 50 miles of the USPTO office as their official worksite and official duty station. The participant has no routine reporting requirement to the USPTO office. The participant will relinquish their USPTO designated office and, when occasionally at the USPTO office, a remote telework participant will use temporary or “hoteling” office space.

- iii. Remote: TEAP. As described in Section IV.C., participants in this option elect to designate their approved alternate worksite greater than 50 miles from the USPTO office as the participant’s official worksite and official duty station. The participant has no routine reporting requirement to the USPTO office, but is responsible for paying for certain mandatory trips to the office as set forth in Section IV.C. The participant will relinquish their USPTO designated office and, when occasionally at the USPTO office, a remote telework participant will use temporary or “hoteling” office space.

2. Requirements. All employees who wish to participate in the Program must meet or complete the following requirements. Additional information about each item is located at the referenced section of this document.

- a. Be in an eligible position. See [Section I.B.]
- b. Read the Program Guidelines (this document).
- c. Hold a conversation with your immediate supervisor to discuss:
 - i. The desired telework program option and schedule based on position eligibility. See Sections [I.B., I.C.1. I.G., and III.B.1.]
 - ii. The assigned duties to be performed at the alternate worksite(s), See Sections [I.B., III.A., and III.B.]
 - iii. OGC work schedule operating parameters, including agreed-upon methods for communication and collaboration. See Sections [I.E.3., I.F., and I.G.1.]
 - iv. Worksites, including the primary alternate worksite, the official worksite, and whether there will be more than one alternate worksite. See [Section I.D.]
 - v. If teleworking three or four days per week, which requires a participant to share an office, discuss office move and sharing logistics to execute the move. See [Section III.B.3.]
 - vi. If teleworking five days per week, which requires a participant to relinquish their office, discuss the process for moving out of their office and reserving a hoteling room. See Sections [III.C.2. and IV.A.3.]

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

- d. Review the alternate worksite(s) safety and security guidelines located on the USPTO Telework Resources website. See Sections [I.D.5. and I.D.6. and Appendix A.]
 - e. Secure approved internet service. See [Section I.E.2.]
 - f. Complete USPTO Teleworker Training: Telework Effectiveness and submit your certificate to your supervisor and the Business Unit Telework Coordinator. See [Section I.C.5.]
 - g. Submit an application for telework through the ETIS.
 - i. If on-boarding as a new employee with the USPTO, complete a temporary telework agreement before teleworking See [Appendix B.]. New employee information is loaded into the ETIS approximately three weeks after an employee's start date. The temporary agreement must be replaced by a permanent application and agreement through the ETIS within two months after the employee's start date.
 - h. Request and receive applicable telework equipment. The universal laptop and SecurID are the minimum equipment required to begin teleworking. See Sections [I.C.5. and I.E.1.]
 - i. If applying for a remote telework option, work with your supervisor to obtain approval and complete the Office of Human Resources (OHR) procedures to change your official duty station. See [Section IV.]
 - j. If applying to telework five days per week and not changing your duty station from the USPTO office, discuss the recurring reporting requirement with your immediate supervisor. See [Section III.C.1.]
3. Approval.
- a. Decisions to grant or deny telework requests will be made by the participant's immediate supervisor based on whether the position is eligible, whether the employee meets the requirements to participate in the Program See [Section I.C.2.], and whether the employee's request is otherwise consistent with the Program. The maximum number of days per week an employee may participate will be based on the number of days the position is eligible for telework.
 - b. Decisions on requests to grant or deny a telework request will be made promptly using the ETIS, generally within one week of submission of the request. Decisions to grant will include the number of days the employee is permitted to telework per week.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

Decisions to deny will include the reason for denial. An employee may appeal a decision to deny to the second level supervisor with a copy to the Business Unit Telework Coordinator.

- c. Employees approved to telework who are not already teleworking or onboarding virtually will be authorized to begin telework the first full pay period after completing the required training and receiving the minimum amount of equipment to telework. The immediate supervisor may permit teleworking sooner at their discretion. Refer to Section I.C.9 for additional guidance about modifications to telework program options.
4. Telework Agreement. All participants must have an approved telework agreement denoting the telework option selected and signed by the employee and supervisor to begin telework. The telework agreement will be completed when applying for telework through the ETIS. Participants who opt for remote telework are required to change their duty station See [Section IV] and acknowledge that (a) they will not be reimbursed for travel between their alternate worksite and the USPTO office except as specified in Section IV, and (b) a duty station change could impact pay and benefits.
5. Equipment Deployment. All participants must receive the minimum amount of equipment to perform official duties at the alternate worksite before teleworking. Follow the steps outlined below to request and receive your equipment. Participants will be provided with the minimum amount of equipment as soon as practicable after the approval of the telework request. See [Section I.E.1.]
 - a. Contact the Telework Coordinator after completing Section I.C.2 steps a. through g.
 - b. The Telework Coordinator will send the employee a Telework Equipment Deployment spreadsheet template to finalize in accordance with the guidelines included in Section I.E.1.
 - c. Deliver the completed spreadsheet to immediate supervisor for approval.
 - d. The supervisor will review the spreadsheet for compliance with equipment listed in Section I.E.1 and submit it to the Telework Coordinator representing their approval.
 - e. The Telework Coordinator will request the equipment.
 - f. The employee will be notified when the equipment is ready to be delivered or retrieved from the USPTO Telework Depot.
 - g. If on-boarding as a new employee with the USPTO virtually, before the on-board date the employee will be contacted by the OHR, the employee's supervisor, and/or the Telework Coordinator to arrange for equipment deployment. The Telework

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

Coordinator will work with the employee's supervisor to define equipment needs and request equipment deployment.

- i. The USPTO, OCIO will ship equipment to the employee to be received at least two days prior to the start date.
 - ii. The USPTO, OCIO will also deliver the employee's network account information and SecurID or other means of alternate authentication prior to the start date.
6. Training. All participants teleworking for the first time must complete telework training before an employee is permitted to telework. If on-boarding as a new employee with the USPTO virtually, Training should be completed no later than two weeks after the employee's start date. The employee may contact the Telework Coordinator for assistance in locating the training. Managers should also complete Manager Training: Telework Effectiveness. The Agency will ensure that such training is made available promptly to all participants whose requests to telework are approved.
 7. Telework Agreement Updates. Participants will use the ETIS to update their telework agreement when participant telework information changes and annually for recertification, including that the participant reviewed the safety guidelines for alternate worksite(s). The Agency will remind all participants of the recertification requirement annually. The safety guidelines are posted on the Telework Program Office website and at Appendix A. Participants are responsible for updating the ETIS and telework agreement to ensure the Program option and address(es) of the alternate worksite(s) are accurate at all times.
 8. Participant Telework Program Changes. The participant's telework schedule should reflect the program option selected in ETIS and recorded on the telework agreement. If a participant is regularly teleworking or working in the office on a schedule different than the program option selected, the participant or the supervisor should initiate a conversation about modifying the telework program option selected in ETIS using the procedures outlined in Section I.C.9., below.
 9. Modifications. Participants may permanently modify their telework program option by selecting telework program option and days up to the maximum number of days for which the position is eligible using the ETIS. There are no advance notification requirements for participants whose positions are eligible to telework five days per week and who request to update their telework program option in a manner that does not impact office arrangements (e.g., changing from one day to two days per week telework or from five days per week with a reporting requirement to the 50-mile program).

Participants who encumber positions eligible to telework less than five days per week must discuss schedule changes with their supervisor if requesting to reduce the number of days working at the USPTO Office.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

Otherwise, to allow for office arrangements, participants will notify their supervisor and the Telework Program coordinator via email at least two weeks in advance of modifying a telework program option from less than four days per week telework to five days per week telework or withdrawing from the program; and four weeks in advance of changing status from five days per week telework to less than four days per week telework. For exigent circumstances the Office will process employee requests in less than 4 weeks by providing hoteling or temporary office space to the employee until a permanent workspace can be arranged.

See Section III.B.2 for guidance on temporary schedule changes.

D. Worksites

1. Locations. Participants will designate a primary alternate worksite as the location where hours will be worked while not at the USPTO office. If a participant desires, they may designate an additional location as a secondary alternate worksite. All alternate worksites must be located in the fifty (50) states of the United States, the District of Columbia, or Puerto Rico. The designation of a participant's official worksite is dependent on the designation of a participant's official duty station, as follows:
 - a. A situational telework participant's official worksite is the USPTO office.
 - b. A routine telework participant's official worksite is the USPTO office.
 - c. A remote telework participant's (i.e., a 50-mile or TEAP option⁶) official worksite is their primary alternate worksite (home or other approved telework location) because the participant has changed their official duty station to the city/town and state of their primary alternate worksite.
2. Alternate Worksites. An alternate worksite may be the participant's home or other approved appropriate location. The participant must designate a room or location in their alternate worksite for placement and use of the equipment provided for the Program. Participants are responsible for purchasing and maintaining all office furniture at the alternate worksites.

⁶ A five day per week telework participant who chooses to maintain the USPTO office as their official duty station (i.e., non-50-mile and non-TEAP) is a routine telework participant. See Section III.C.1 for requirements to report the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

Participants are responsible for ensuring compliance with all local laws or rules governing an office in their home. Participants who are renters are responsible for ensuring that their lease allows the installation of all the necessary equipment and connection services (e.g., compliant internet service) for the Program.

Participants are responsible for any utility cost, cooling, heating, and lighting at the alternate worksites. Participants are responsible for any re-wiring, updating, and improvements necessary to bring the electrical connections in an alternate worksite up to the required standards.

3. Working at a Secondary Alternate Worksite. Secondary alternate worksites are subject to the rules outlined in Section I.D.2. above. Participants must request approval to work at a secondary alternate worksite through ETIS prior to working from that location.

Requests are not necessary for each use of a secondary alternate worksite once the secondary alternate worksite is approved through ETIS. However, the participant must communicate the routine and recurring schedule with their immediate supervisor.

The amount of time spent working at the secondary alternate worksite cannot exceed 6 months in any 12-month period otherwise the secondary alternate worksite should be changed to become the primary alternate worksite. Employees must track their time at alternate worksites; if the intended stay at any secondary alternate worksite exceeds 6 months in a 12-month period, then the participant must make an address change in EPP. The participant's supervisor initiates a Personnel Action Request (PAR) to change the duty station in the designated USPTO human resources system. See Section IV.A.2. for additional guidance on changing your duty station.

A participant whose official worksite is at the USPTO office will generally not be permitted to work at a secondary alternate worksite that is outside of a 50-mile radius of their USPTO office for a full bi-week or more at a time, unless the participant reports to the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week See [Section III.C.1.], meets one of the exceptions in 5 C.F.R. § 531.605\(d\)\(2\), or has been granted a temporary medical exception See [Section V].

4. Transporting Equipment. When a participant has been approved to work at a secondary alternate worksite they are responsible for safely and securely transporting equipment to and from the alternate worksites See [Section I.E.7.]. The participant is also responsible for determining the equipment necessary to successfully perform their official duties at the secondary alternate worksite. A participant will only be issued one set of telework equipment in accordance with the standards outlined in Section I.E.1.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

5. Safety Guidelines. All participants will review the alternate worksite(s) safety and security guidelines located on the USPTO Telework Resources intranet site. See [Appendix A.]
6. Security. All alternate worksites must meet security and privacy requirements, including those established and occasionally updated by OCIO regarding IT security See [Section I.E.4.]. Participants are not permitted to work in a public area, e.g., a coffee shop, an airport terminal, or outside in a park.
7. Inspection. The participant will permit other USPTO employees and contractors to access the alternate worksite during the hours from 9:00 AM to 5:00 PM, Monday-Friday (excluding holidays) upon two business days' notice to the participant. Accessing the alternate worksite will be for the purpose of installing, repairing, maintaining, or removing work equipment, software, or other USPTO property, to investigate an accident or a worker's compensation claim, or to investigate other work related or safety problems arising from the administration of the Program. The parties may mutually agree to a time outside of these hours.

E. Equipment, Tools, and Supplies

1. Standard Equipment. Participants will be provided with a standard suite of IT equipment necessary to perform official assigned duties remotely at the primary alternate worksite as soon as practicable after the approval of the telework request. A participant may decline deployment of equipment if, after consultation with their supervisor, they deem the equipment is not necessary to productively perform official assigned duties at the primary alternate worksite (e.g., no printer, one monitor instead of two, etc.). Standard equipment includes the following:
 - a. 5 days per week: A universal laptop; docking station; two monitors; webcam; printer (provided the supervisor deems it necessary to perform assigned official duties); telephone headset; keyboard; mouse; SecurID (FOB) or other means of alternate authentication; fingerprint reader⁷; and other related peripherals.
 - b. 3 and 4 days per week. A universal laptop, docking station, two monitors, webcam, telephone headset, SecurID (FOB) or other means of alternate authentication, keyboard, mouse, and other related peripherals. A printer may be issued if the immediate supervisor deems it necessary to perform assigned official duties. Immediate supervisor approvals must be provided to the Telework Coordinator before printers will be deployed. If a participant is issued an approved printer to use at the alternate worksite, the employee will relinquish their personal office printer and use a shared network printer.

⁷ Fingerprint readers will be provided to TEAP participants, only.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

- c. 2 days per week or less. A universal laptop, docking station, one monitor, webcam, telephone headset, SecurID (FOB) or other means of alternate authentication, keyboard, mouse, and other related peripherals.
- d. Situational telework. A universal laptop and SecurID (FOB) or other means of alternate authentication.

To ensure a seamless customer experience, participants are required to use USPTO assigned phone numbers for communication with colleagues and customers.

Necessary equipment will be provided to the participant as soon as practicable after the approval of the telework request. The universal laptop and SecureID (FOB), or other designated authentication technology, is the minimum equipment required to begin teleworking.

2. Internet Service.

- a. Requirements. All participants must have high-speed broadband internet service such as cable or fiber optic that meets USPTO's virtual private network \(VPN\) connection requirements at all alternate worksites. Wired connectivity is recommended. Employees may choose to work either wired or wirelessly, but must be able to connect with a wired connection as needed to improve connectivity or upon OCIO request (e.g., in responding to a service request or to facilitate updates).
- b. Internet Service (IS) Reimbursement. Given that participants who telework five days per week have relinquished their USPTO office, they are eligible for IS cost reimbursement at their approved alternate worksite(s) in accordance with the USPTO ISP Reimbursement Policy.

- 3. Collaboration Tools. Participants must use USPTO collaboration tools in accordance with the USPTO's Time and Attendance Tools, Communication, and Collaboration \(TACC\) Policy, or any policy that supersedes it. Collaboration tools include, but are not limited to: instant messaging and chat; document/desktop sharing and whiteboard features; virtual meeting tools; video communication and conferencing equipment; and presence indicator. Employees will be required to use their video communication tools (i.e., camera) in accordance with POPA and NTEU 243 negotiated agreements for specific meetings and when their active participation during such meeting is required.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

4. IT Security. Participants are responsible for the security of Federal government property, information, and information systems at all alternate worksites. If not properly implemented, telework may introduce vulnerabilities into USPTO systems and networks. To prevent security incidents, participants are required to protect information and information systems commensurate with risk and complete the annual USPTO mandatory IT Security Awareness Training.

Information associated with official business should be stored in controlled, accessible, and safeguarded locations. Participants should store information in places that are adequately accessible to other colleagues (with a need to know) and backed up (e.g., shared drives, SharePoint) and refrain from desktop storage. Participants will not store USPTO information on personal devices or accounts.

The creation of paper copies containing sensitive information should be minimized to the greatest extent possible while teleworking. Most home or non-industrial shredders do not meet the General Services Administration's (GSA) approved cross-cut shredder requirement; therefore, these paper files must be stored in a locked drawer or room until participants can return to campus and utilize GSA-approved shredders. Please contact the USPTO Records Officers or CUI Managers if you have hard copies at your alternate worksite and are unable to adequately secure and store the documents until you can return to the USPTO. Please email CUI@uspto.gov with any questions related to properly disposing of records.

- a. Care must be taken to ensure records subject to the Privacy Act (5 U.S.C. § 552a, Records Maintained on Individuals) and sensitive but non-classified data are not disclosed to anyone except those who have authorized access to perform their duties. Participants should refer to the Rules of the Road.
- b. Participants are responsible for the security of all official information, protection of any government furnished equipment and property, and the execution of the mission of the USPTO at the alternate worksite(s) in accordance with existing USPTO and DOC policies.
- c. Any USPTO owned equipment is for official use only. Use of the equipment for private purposes is prohibited except as permitted by the USPTO Rules of the Road. Family members and friends of Participants are not authorized to use any government furnished equipment.
- d. Participants are to comply with all security related USPTO policies including the USPTO Rules of the Road. These policies may be found on the USPTO intranet website.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

5. USPTO Equipment Failures. Participants are to contact the USPTO Service Desk to report Agency-provided equipment or software failures or problems, including connecting via the VPN, as soon as they are discovered and follow the procedures provided by the Service Desk. In the event that VPN or Agency provided equipment problems (including USPTO power outages) prohibit working at an alternate worksite, the participant must notify their immediate supervisor. The participant may consult with their immediate supervisor to determine if there is non-equipment related work available at the alternate worksite and determine how to record time. See Section I.G.7. for guidance about non-weather related equipment failures at the alternate worksite(s) (e.g., participant power outages and interruptions in internet access) and Section I.I.1 for weather related outages.
6. Ownership and Maintenance. USPTO maintains ownership and control of any and all equipment, software, other materials, and data provided to the participant by the agency. The USPTO acts as the insurer for damage, theft, or other loss (e.g., fire, flood, etc.) of the USPTO equipment and materials only. Equipment provided by the Agency will be serviced and maintained by the Agency.
7. Safeguarding Assets. All participants are responsible for reasonably safeguarding and protecting government issued equipment. The accountability and security of IT resources See [Section I.E.4] extends to your alternate worksite(s), residence, other approved telework location, and/or other areas in which you use, travel with, and store the equipment. When a participant chooses to work at a secondary alternate worksite they are responsible for safely and securely transporting equipment to and from the alternate worksites. Reasonable safeguards must be consistently exercised to ensure that government property is not vulnerable to any negligence or potential criminal activity. When a participant is assigned a piece of equipment, including the Universal Laptop, the participant is responsible for reasonable safeguards of its physical safety, as well as the data stored on it. Suggestions for safeguarding equipment and procedures for reporting lost, stolen, or damaged equipment are available on the USPTO's Asset Management intranet page.

Participants will provide property custodians with all information requested to inventory assets and will provide timely notice of equipment changes and issues.
8. Returning Equipment. Any equipment provided to the participant for use at the alternate worksite(s) should be returned to the Agency generally within five business days from the end of the participant's participation in the Program, unless exigent circumstances exist. Any equipment that was deployed to the participant and is not needed to perform official duties should be returned as soon as the participant deems the equipment as unnecessary.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

A participant returning equipment must notify the Telework Coordinator to facilitate the return.

The USPTO may require return or exchange of Agency provided equipment. Except for remote telework participants enrolled in TEAP, participants may be required to report to the USPTO office to receive equipment or to repair or exchange equipment.

9. Supplies. Participants enrolled in TEAP who have been issued a printer will use the TEAP Operating Procedures to request toner and paper required to carry out official assigned duties. Unless otherwise defined, TEAP participants are expected to pick up all other small office supplies while on a trip to the USPTO office.

Also, unless otherwise defined, all other telework participants may pick up small office supplies required to carry out their official assigned duties from the USPTO office and those who have been issued a printer may pick up paper and toner from the USPTO office.

- F. Collaboration and Engagement. Employee engagement is a priority for OGC and to facilitate collaboration and successful interactive relationships employees should leverage collaboration tools, such as video conferencing, instant messaging or chat tools, and other USPTO approved collaboration software to stay connected. Employees are permitted to upload a workplace appropriate picture of themselves in USPTO collaboration tools so that colleagues and customers can associate names and faces. Please see the Time and Attendance Tools, Communication, and Collaboration \(TACC\) Policy for further information.

G. Schedules and Time and Attendance

1. Work Schedules. Employees teleworking five days per week must elect to work the Increased Flexitime Program (IFP) or Increased Flexitime Schedule (IFS) work schedules. See the OGC Flexible Work Schedule Options or applicable bargaining unit agreement.
2. Timesheets. Participants will use the "Telework Home" transaction code (or other designated method to report telework time) with the appropriate PPA codes to indicate in the time and attendance system which days were worked at the alternate worksite(s) and the number of hours worked at the USPTO office and alternate worksite(s) each day.
3. Holidays. Participants working at an alternate worksite will be granted the same holidays as employees at the USPTO office, unless otherwise determined by the Office of Personnel Management. Early dismissal of USPTO employees or closure of the USPTO office for non-emergency conditions, such as on the day prior to a Federal holiday, will be granted to participants working at an alternate worksite.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

4. Overtime and Compensatory Time. Overtime and compensatory time may be worked at an alternate worksite so long as the time has been approved by the participant's supervisor prior to working the additional hours.
5. Leave. All forms of approved leave, including compensatory time, may be used on days on which the participant is scheduled to work at the USPTO office or approved alternate worksite. Leave, however, may not be used on a regular basis to avoid working at the USPTO office on a non-telework day or to avoid meeting a routine telework participant's twice per bi-week reporting requirement See [Section III.C.1.].
6. Multiple Locations in a Given Day. A participant may work at the USPTO office and/or multiple alternate worksites on the same day. A participant who chooses to work at multiple locations on the same day must notify their immediate supervisor and comply with the requirements of the policy on communication and collaboration with respect to posting work hours (to include time zone, if outside of Eastern Time zone) regardless of where they work. Participants must mid-day flex (if on IFP/S) or take leave to accommodate travel time required for commuting to and from the various work sites. See [Section III.B. for routine telework schedule requirements.]
7. Inability to Work at an Alternate worksite. If an employee is prevented from working at an alternate worksite for reasons other than inclement weather (e.g., non-weather related power or internet outage at the alternate worksite or lack of dependent care), the participant must either (1) report to the USPTO office to perform official duties if not a TEAP participant, (2) obtain approval to work at a secondary alternate worksite, (3) if on IFP/S, change their work schedule by reducing the number of hours worked on that day, or (4) request appropriate leave, at the participant's option. If able to work, the participant may also consult with their immediate supervisor to determine if there is non-equipment related work available at the alternate worksite. The participant will not be reimbursed for any travel or related expenses for commuting between their alternate worksite(s) and the USPTO office and all trips will not be on duty time. See Section I.E.5. for guidance related to a USPTO equipment failure and Section I.I.1. for weather related conditions.

H. In-person Events

1. Virtual First. When technology is available, and consistent with the purpose of the event, meetings will be held so that participants working remotely can participate fully via video conference.
2. Mandatory Attendance. Participants may be required to report to the USPTO office to address business needs and office coverage for non-portable work activities, attend training, meetings, or other individual, team-, Office-, or Business Unit-wide events.

OGC TELEWORK PROGRAM

March 2022

Participants will be given as much notice as possible of any meeting or activity that they must attend in person. Absent exigent circumstances, participants will not be required to report to the USPTO office on the same day that notice is provided to the participant and the USPTO will endeavor to meet the notification timelines outlined below.

- a. Office coverage to address business needs or non-portable work activities: Generally, for participants not enrolled in TEAP, notice to report to the USPTO office will not be less than two days.
- b. Group meetings: Group meetings are defined as team, organizational (e.g.: section, branch, division, office), or business unit-wide meetings, to include training. For these planned events, the Agency has a goal of 4 weeks' notice, but at least 3 weeks' notice will be provided prior to the date of the meeting or training. This provides notification in accordance with TEAP operating procedures to ensure TEAP participants have adequate time to plan for a mandatory employee-paid trip.

All decisions to hold mandatory, in-person meetings will be approved by either the General Counsel, OGC Chief of Staff, a Deputy General Counsel, or their delegate(s).

I. Changes to Operating Status and Unscheduled Telework (e.g., Inclement Weather)

1. Office Closures, Early Departures and Delayed Arrivals Due to Weather or Safety Events. When a foreseeable weather or safety event causes the agency to close or authorize late arrival or early departure, any employee with a signed telework agreement (i.e., a Program participant) must be prepared to telework, flex around the full or partial closure, and/or take leave. Except as provided below, no employee with a signed telework agreement of any type (regular, situational, etc.) may receive Weather and Safety leave, regardless of whether the employee was scheduled to telework that day. In order to telework during a weather or safety event, participants must have their Universal Laptop at their alternate worksite. Unscheduled telework due to a closure, early dismissal, or delayed arrival due to weather or safety events will not count against the allowable telework days provided by this Program.

If weather related physical conditions affect the alternate worksite in a way that limits the employee's ability to perform their duties (e.g., power or internet outages at the participant's alternate worksite or the USPTO office), the employee may request Weather and Safety administrative leave or to work at a secondary alternate worksite. Participants may telework at an alternate worksite where there are dependents or others. However, for any time that the employee claims as work time, their attention must be oriented to work activities and not dependent care. If dependent care prohibits the ability to perform telework for some portion of the work day during an office closure, early dismissal or delayed arrival, an employee may use a combination of flex time and unscheduled leave, with supervisory approval, to meet any dependent care needs and still accomplish work. See Section I.K.1 for additional information on dependent care.

Weather and Safety leave may be available to a Program participant if the participant was not prepared to telework at their approved alternate worksite because either (1) the weather or safety event that caused the agency to close or authorize late arrival or early departure was not foreseeable or (2) reasonable circumstances prevented the employee from preparing to telework (e.g., the participant had been on leave until the day of the weather event, and the participant was not able to obtain their laptop before the weather or safety event). Find additional information on weather and safety leave at Leave Administration, Appendix A: Impact of Weather and Safety Events on the Alexandria Campus and Randolph Square Building.

2. Unscheduled Leave or Unscheduled Telework. In the event OPM or USPTO declares that Federal agencies are open for the entire day with the option for “unscheduled leave or unscheduled telework,” Program participants may report to the USPTO office, telework on a non-telework day (if consistent with the employee’s work obligations), take unscheduled annual leave, or use a combination of work and annual leave to account for all of the regularly scheduled hours of the workday. A decision to telework on a day in which unscheduled telework is allowed will not count against the allowable telework days provided by this Program.

J. Performance Management.

Participants are expected to perform assigned duties and responsibilities at the alternate worksite. It is important that the alternate worksite be free from distractions that would impair a participant’s ability to perform official duties and provide the same time and level of attention to the work product as is available at the USPTO office. Participants will have their performance evaluated under the criteria set out in their performance appraisal plan. Situational and routine participants teleworking less than five days per week are in the best position to know whether they have sufficient work for a telework day. If the employee lacks sufficient work for a telework day, the employee should consult with the supervisor to see if there is additional work that can be done at the alternate worksite. If there is not enough work that can be done at the alternate worksite, the employee must work at the USPTO office or use leave to cover the hours for which there is no work. Participants shall provide details of work accomplished upon the request of their supervisor.

Participants who are on a Performance Improvement Plan (PIP) will not be required to change their telework arrangement due to the PIP. Whether the participant's official worksite is the USPTO office or an approved alternate worksite, a participant who is on a PIP will be required to commit to be available to receive assistance and training. The assistance may be provided at the USPTO office or virtually. The supervisor and the participant will attempt to find an agreeable time for the assistance to be provided, including providing reasonable notification in accordance with the intent of Section I.H.2. The supervisor, however, retains the right to direct the participant to attend meetings or training at the USPTO office, including one-on-one training.

K. Miscellaneous Provisions.

1. Dependent Care. No telework arrangement is authorized which allows the participant to provide care to any individual during work hours. Participants shall have dependent care arrangements so that the participant's ability to work at the alternate worksite is not adversely affected. A dependent may be at the alternate worksite while the participant teleworks if those dependents are independently pursuing their own activities or otherwise provided for by a caretaker. For any time that the employee claims as work time, their attention must be oriented to work activities and not dependent care.
2. Transit Subsidy. Participants continue to remain eligible for transit subsidies as set forth in the USPTO Public Transit Subsidy Program.
3. FECA and Alternate Worksite Injury. Participants are covered under the Federal Employee's Compensation Act (FECA) if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the alternate worksite. In order for a participant to be able to file a claim for worker's compensation, the participant who has an accident or injury while working at the alternate worksite must notify their immediate supervisor and report the accident or injury to a designated USPTO official in accordance with FECA requirements. Upon notification, the USPTO may investigate any reported accidents and injuries.
4. Property Liability. The USPTO will not be liable for damages to a participant's personal or real property during the course of performing official duties or while using Government equipment in the participant's residence, except to the extent the Government is held liable by the Federal Tort Claims Act, claims arising under the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act, or other laws.
5. Protecting Records. Participants will apply approved safeguards to protect Agency records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with the Privacy Act requirements set forth in the Privacy Act of 1974, Public Law 93-579, codified at 5 U.S.C. Section 552a. See Section I.E.4 for additional IT Security requirements.

Participants are required to use electronic versions of documents and data whenever practical. When this is not practical, and solely for the purposes of this Program, participants will be permitted to remove USPTO copies of documents from the USPTO office in order to perform their officially assigned duties at an alternate worksite, unless such files have been identified by management as being inappropriate for removal from the USPTO office. The participant is responsible for the transportation and safeguarding of the documents and files to and from the USPTO office and alternate worksite(s). Original or official files may not be removed from the USPTO office unless specifically approved by the Agency.

When the USPTO has an unusual need for a document or file or other information that is located at the alternate worksite, the participant may be directed to provide the requested document, file or other information to the USPTO office within one business day by delivery means determined by the Agency. An unusual need is one that does not occur on a regular basis and cannot wait for the participant's scheduled return to the USPTO office or be resolved through other means.

6. Union Activities. Stewards and union officials may perform Union representational activities on official or bank time while teleworking.
7. Personal Information. Agency personnel will not divulge the addresses and private home or mobile telephone numbers of participants to the public or any other USPTO personnel who do not have a legitimate business need to know such information.

II. Provisions Applicable to Situational Telework Participants

- A. Requesting Situational Telework. A situational telework participant is expected to perform their assigned duties at the USPTO office regularly. Situational telework must be requested in advance and approved by the immediate supervisor. Requests for situational telework must include the dates the participant will telework and the work that will be performed at the alternate worksite on those dates.

Participants currently teleworking situationally in a position that is eligible for routine or remote telework who would like to move to routine or remote telework must modify their telework application in ETIS and follow the application procedures in Section I.C.9. Additional information on routine telework may be found at Section III and additional information on remote telework may be found at Section IV.

- B. Offices. Participants selecting a situational telework program option will retain their status quo office.

- C. Part Time Employees. Part-time employees who encumber a position eligible for situational or routine telework may participate in situational telework.

III. Provisions Applicable to Routine Telework Participants

- A. Overview. A routine telework participant's official duty station remains the USPTO office and requires the participant to work at the USPTO office for a specified amount of time each week or bi-week as designated by their position eligibility determination.

1. Participants electing to telework one to four days per week will work at the USPTO office for four to one day(s) per week.
2. Participants electing to telework five days per week may elect either to retain the USPTO office as their official duty station and remain a routine teleworker or, if the participant's primary alternate worksite is located within 50 miles of the USPTO office, change the location of their official duty station to the primary alternate worksite in accordance with the procedures outlined in Section IV.B. and become a remote teleworker.

B. Routine Telework Participants Teleworking One to Four Days per Week

1. Telework Schedule. Participants eligible for routine or remote telework may request to telework one to four days per week, up to the number of days permitted by their position's eligibility determination. Participants electing this option are expected to perform their assigned duties at the USPTO office for one to four day(s) per week, as set forth in their position eligibility determination. Participants who select this option must consult with their immediate supervisor to define a telework schedule that identifies regular days to perform duties at the USPTO office each bi-week. For participants whose essential functions include duties that must be done at the USPTO office, the amount of time spent at the USPTO office on a non-telework day must be long enough to complete those essential functions and if a participant chooses to work at multiple locations on the same day they must notify their immediate supervisor.

Participants may not use IFP/S flexibilities or any combination of leave to regularly avoid any in-office requirements. Participants are not precluded from teleworking on fewer days than their position's eligible number of days. The day(s) a participant elects to perform assigned duties in the office will be the same each week and must be scheduled in advance and approved by the immediate supervisor to ensure office coverage.

On a situational basis, a one to four day per week routine telework participant's immediate supervisor may allow an employee to work additional days at an alternate worksite (i.e., supplemental situational telework) in accordance with the provisions for situational telework See [Section II]. Supplemental situational telework must be requested in advance and approved by the immediate supervisor. Requests for supplemental situational telework must include the dates the participant will telework in addition to the routine telework and the work that will be performed at the alternate worksite on those dates.

2. Telework Schedule Changes. Changes in USPTO office day(s) for participants whose position is eligible for routine telework one to four days per week must be requested in advance and approved by the immediate supervisor. These requests may be for a one-time change or for a permanent switch in the days performing assigned duties in the USPTO office. See Section I.C.7. and I.C.8. for permanent program changes. OGC may require temporary adjustments to USPTO office day(s) schedules to address business needs and office coverage for non-portable work activities.

Participants currently teleworking one to four days per week in a position that is eligible to telework five days per week who would like to move to five days per week telework must modify their telework application in ETIS and follow the application procedures in Section I.C.7. and I.C.8. Additional information on five day per week routine telework may be found at Section III.C. and on five day per week remote telework may be found at Section IV.

3. Offices. Routine telework participants who select a telework program option that places the participant at the USPTO office for two days per week or less will be required to share an office with another employee. Participants who share an office may coordinate their on-campus days, such that one of them uses the office at a time. Participants who select a telework program option that places the participant at the USPTO office for three days per week or more will remain their status quo office arrangements.

A Program participant whose selected telework program option places them in a shared office, and who changes the terms of their telework program and agreement in any way that places them at the USPTO office for three days per week or more, will be reassigned to an unshared office. A participant may have to remain in their shared office until individual office space is available.

Participants in a bargaining unit will be assigned an office as determined by their seniority consistent with existing Union agreements for office space. The bargaining unit employee should be issued the space they are entitled to within three months of notifying their immediate supervisor and Telework Program coordinator of the change.

C. Routine Telework Participants Teleworking Five Days per Week

1. Reporting Requirement. An employee who elects to telework five days per week and maintains the USPTO office as their official duty station is required to report to the USPTO office at least two times per bi-week. Participants shall work at the USPTO Office for a minimum of 15 minutes for each occurrence in a manner consistent with IFP work schedule rules as to days and hours of work. All forms of approved leave, including compensatory time, may be used to meet the required hour(s) on this day but leave may not be used on a regular basis to avoid the requirements of this paragraph to work at the USPTO office two times per bi-week.
2. Offices. Routine telework participants who telework five days per week will not have an assigned office at the USPTO office and will reserve hoteling space on campus when working at the USPTO office, including when meeting the regular bi-weekly reporting requirement.
3. Travel Expenses and Travel Time. When a participant's official duty station is the USPTO office, all travel between home and the USPTO office is considered commuting time and will not be reimbursed.

- D. Part Time Employees. Part-time employees who encumber a position eligible for routine telework for less than five days per week may participate in telework. The percentage of time that may be worked at the alternate work site will be prorated as determined by the percentage of the employee's part-time schedule compared to a full-time schedule, times the number of days. Part time employees who encumber a position eligible for remote telework for five days per week, may telework 100 percent of their part time work schedule (the requirement to routinely report to the USPTO office two times a bi-week remains). Part time employees should consult guidelines on part time work schedules in the applicable collective bargaining agreement, labor contract, or other union agreements related to part time work.

IV. Provisions Applicable to Remote Telework Participants

A. Provisions Applicable to all Remote Telework Participants

1. Overview. A participant who elects to telework five days per week may elect to either retain the USPTO office as their official duty station in accordance with Section III.C. or change the location of their official duty station to the primary alternate worksite.
