Individual telework agreements will expire one calendar year after the date specified in Section C of the Form G-1129, Telework Application.

(g) GOVERNMENT FURNISHED EQUIPMENT (GFE)

In addition to office supplies routinely used at the traditional worksite, the Agency will provide all necessary GFE, as determined by the Agency, to accomplish work assignments. Supervisors will approve Administrative Time for employees to resolve issues related to GFE such as training, installation, configuration, and repair services.

(h) COSTS

Except for providing and maintaining GFE, the Agency will not be responsible for operating costs (such as telephone line usage fees, internet installation or connection fees, and monthly service charges), maintenance, or any other costs incurred by the employee as a result of the employee's voluntary participation in the telework program.

(i) ALTERNATIVE WORKSITE

(1) Minimum Requirements.

Employees must have a designated workspace or workstation for performance of their work. Employees are responsible for ensuring that the alternative worksite:

(A) Has internet access; and

(B) Has a designated location in which Sensitive But Unclassified (SBU) materials must be stored under lock and key, when not in use. Examples of sufficient access control measures include a locked room, desk drawer, safe, and/or file cabinet.

These requirements may be waived at the discretion of the Supervisor/Manager depending on the specific nature of the work to be performed at the alternative worksite.

(2) Handling Sensitive Materials.

(A) Teleworkers must comply with the Privacy Act of 1974 (the "Privacy Act"), codified in 5 U.S.C. § 552a, by ensuring that sensitive data are not disclosed to anyone except those who are authorized access to such information and have a need-to-know in order to perform their duties. Employees must demonstrate that the appropriate administrative, technical, and physical safeguards are available at their telework locations to ensure the security and confidentiality of records protected by the Privacy Act.

(B) Files, materials, and equipment shall be handled in accordance with the Agency policies for safeguarding property and sensitive information. If an employee transports files to the alternative worksite, before leaving the traditional worksite, the employee must update the RAILS System (or its equivalent) to reflect that the files are located at the employee's alternative worksite.

(C) Employees may not remove classified data from the traditional worksites to alternative worksite locations.

(j) REPORTING TO THE TRADITIONAL WORKSITE

Employees who telework must be available to work at the traditional worksite on telework days, if necessitated by work requirements. Requests by employees to change scheduled telework days in a particular week or bi-weekly pay period may, to the greatest extent possible, be accommodated by the supervisor consistent with mission requirements.

(1) Employer Request.

Employees may be required to report to their traditional worksite for scheduled trainings, conferences, meetings, or to perform work on a short-term basis that cannot otherwise be performed at the alternative worksite or accomplished via telephone or other reasonable alternative methods. When requested, employees who telework must be available to report to the traditional worksite on telework. Supervisors will make every effort to provide at least 24 hours' notice in such cases.

Separate from an emergency file recall, when advance notice of 24 hours or more is not possible, employees will be provided a reasonable amount of time, to include time to make arrangements and travel, to report to the traditional worksite. Employees should make every reasonable effort to report as soon as possible. The employee will provide the Agency with an expected amount of time needed to report to the office. The normal commute time for such employees will be taken into consideration in the event they are required to report to the traditional worksite on short notice. In cases in which employees are called into the traditional worksite without 24 hours' notice, employees will be afforded the opportunity to start their regular workday from their alternate worksite before being granted duty time to travel to the traditional worksite in conjunction with service needs and consistent with management's rights.

(2) Employee Request.

Requests by the employee to work at the traditional worksite on scheduled telework days may be accommodated by the supervisor consistent with mission requirements and workspace availability. A permanent change in the telework arrangement must be reflected in the form of a new telework agreement.

(3) Work Interruption.

Before participating in the telework program, all employees and their immediate supervisors will identify tasks that could be completed at the alternative worksite when there is a temporary limitation related to working at the alternate worksite, such as a local power failure, that impacts an employee's ability to complete work on an assigned project. Employees will promptly inform supervisors whenever problems such as equipment failure, power outages, and telecommunications difficulties adversely affect their ability to work at the alternative worksite. In such cases, the employee may be required to report to the traditional worksite or, if requested by the employee and approved by the supervisor, may take appropriate leave.

(k) SUSPENSION OR TERMINATION OF TELEWORK AGREEMENT

(1) Procedures.

(A) Supervisors or managers may suspend or terminate a telework agreement for the reasons specified below. Unless legitimate business reasons dictate otherwise, the supervisor or manager will provide written notice to the employee at least fourteen (14) calendar days before suspension or termination of a telework agreement. The written notice of suspension or termination will inform the employee when they may re-apply for, or resume telework.

(B) Outside of an emergent situation, an employee may terminate a telework agreement for any reason by giving written notice to their supervisor at least fourteen (14) calendar days in advance. In such cases, the employee may be assigned a temporary workspace at the traditional worksite until such time as permanent workspace becomes available.

(C) Regardless of which party initiates termination, the reason for termination will be documented in Part 2 of the Form G-1129, Telework Agreement.

(2) Reasons.

Managers or supervisors may suspend or terminate participation in telework for the following reasons:

(A) The employee no longer meets the eligibility requirements;

(B) The employee has breached the telework agreement;

(C) The telework arrangement diminishes Agency operations;

(D) On three or more occasions in a twelve (12) month period, the employee fails to contact a manager or supervisor within two (2) hours of the manager's or supervisor's request by email and phone. The responding party must attempt to make contact by phone (text message) or email. However, if contact is made by phone and the party is not reached, the individual initiating contact must leave a voicemail or text message indicating the date and time of the call.

Employees are expected to be as available at the alternate worksite as they are at the traditional worksite.

(E) Reassignment causes a change of work such that the duties cannot reasonably be performed at the alternate worksite. If the reassignment of job duties is permanent, then the telework agreement must be terminated. If the reassignment is temporary, the supervisor or manager may suspend participation in telework for the duration of the project or assignment. Upon completion of the temporary assignment, the employee may resume telework under the original agreement without submitting a new application, provided that the agreement has not expired. The supervisor or manager will determine whether a telework agreement is terminated or suspended as a result of reassignment on a case-by-case basis.

(F) The alternate worksite did not pass a site inspection.

i. When an alternate worksite fails to pass a site inspection, a supervisor will notify the employee of the failure to pass the site inspection and provide the employee and the employee's Local Union upon request with a copy of the inspection results and specific reason for the failure of the inspection upon request. At the same time, the supervisor will notify the employee of the intent to suspend or terminate the telework agreement fourteen (14) calendar days from the date of the notification.

ii. Employee rebuttals will be submitted to their immediate supervisor for consideration no later than seven (7) calendar days after issuance of the negative site inspection report. Employees may ask a Union representative for assistance in preparing a rebuttal. Employee rebuttals may include a statement or that the reason for failure to pass a site inspection has been fully remediated, and/or the violation(s) was determined to be unfounded. The supervisor has discretion to extend the rebuttal period for good cause.

iii. The supervisor will make a final determination no later than seven (7) calendar days after receipt of any rebuttal received or, if no rebuttal received, within fourteen (14) calendar days of the initial notice of failed inspection.

iv. If the reason the alternate worksite did not pass a site inspection poses an immediate threat to the employee's safety or reveals a failure to comply with privacy protection requirements, the employee may be required to return to the traditional worksite even during the rebuttal period. The employee must be given a reasonable period of time to make necessary arrangements.

(l) EARLY DISMISSALS AND OFFICE CLOSURE

Telework allows a greater number of Federal employees to work during emergency situations and allows the Federal Government to maximize operational efficiency to the extent practicable without compromising the safety of its employees and the general public during heavy snow accumulation, significant road closures due to various events, and other emergency situations.

(1) Emergency Closure of Traditional Worksite.

If the traditional worksite closes due to an emergency (such as inclement weather, pandemic health crisis, and man-made or natural disasters) a telework-ready-employee (an employee with an approved telework agreement and the work and equipment necessary to perform duties) is required to telework, consistent with Agency policy.

If the traditional worksite is subject to early dismissal due to an emergency, employees who are on scheduled telework during that timeframe who are able to perform their assigned work at the alternate worksite, are expected to continue working or request appropriate leave, unless instructed otherwise by the designated Supervisor/Manager.

(2) Non-Emergency.

When the office announces an early dismissal of employees for non-emergency conditions, employees who are scheduled to telework during that same time will be excused from work.

(m) ALTERNATIVE WORKSITE INSPECTIONS

Employees are responsible for allowing for inspections of the alternate worksite, if required by the organization to which they are assigned. Virtual inspections are encouraged.

Standards for home (alternative work site) inspections:

(1) The inspections will be conducted by Management officials only.

(2) At the request of the employee under inspection, a Union representative will be allowed to attend the inspection.

(3) Management will provide reasonable advance notice to employees of not less than two (2) hours.

(4) The focus of the inspection will be limited to only the designated work area including the designated lockable work storage area(s).

(5) Upon request, the employee will be provided a copy of the completed site inspection check list or report. The check list or report will include only information that is germane to the compliance inspection.

(n) SHARED WORKSPACE

Telework participants may be required to share workspace at the traditional worksite with other staff members or be assigned to varying workstations on the days they work at the traditional worksite. These shared workspace arrangements will be subject to Local bargaining upon request of the Local Union.

(o) LOCAL SUPPLEMENTAL BARGAINING

The Parties agree that telework may be implemented throughout the Agency consistent with the terms of this Agreement. By mutual agreement or where otherwise required by law, the Parties will negotiate additional telework procedures consistent with this Agreement.

2. EXALSS Telework MOA – January 9, 2023

- a. (1) Employees will be allowed to participate in core telework up to eight (8) days per pay period. Telework days may take place on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday.

3. LSA Between USCIS District C32 and AFGE locals 1616, 3928, & 4014 – March 6, 2024

Article 4 – Telework

- a. Whenever practicable, positions designated for telework covered under the scope of this agreement will be eligible for core and/or episodic telework.
- b. In accordance with the CBA, telework is an important and critical business model to USCIS that should be utilized to the maximum extent possible and consistent with mission needs and requirements of the Agency.
- c. Telework Eligible Days:
 - (1) Episodic telework eligible days are Monday through Friday during operating hours.
 - (2) Core Telework eligible days are Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday during operating hours. Management may limit the number of employees that utilize the same core telework day in order to ensure the availability of in-person services and other operational needs. In the event that management limits the number, the reasons for the limitation will be communicated to the employee and the Union in writing.
 - (3) Employees can telework while earning credit hours, overtime, and compensatory time Monday through Sunday.

4. LSA Between USCIS District C34 and AFGE locals 46, 2718, & 3928 – January 10, 2024

Article 4 – Telework

- a. Whenever practicable, positions designated for telework covered under the scope of this agreement will be eligible for core and/or episodic telework.
- b. In accordance with the CBA, telework is an important and critical business model to USCIS that should be utilized to the maximum extent possible and consistent with mission needs and requirements of the Agency.
- c. Telework Eligible Days:
 - a. Episodic telework eligible days are Monday through Friday during operating hours.
 - b. Core Telework eligible day is Friday during operating hours.
 - c. Telework can be utilized during completion of overtime Monday through Sunday.

5. LSA Between NBC District and AFGE – January 4, 2024

Article 3 - Telework

- b. Office Days
 - All telework employees must be scheduled to work at the traditional worksite a minimum of two (2) days per bi-weekly pay period. As outlined in Article 29 of the CBA, the Agency has the sole discretion to determine the number of days per week a teleworker is approved to telework. However, it is recognized that telework flexibilities outlined in Article 29(e) of the CBA help promote a positive work/life balance. Supervisors will approve the number of in office days, and requests for telework flexibilities, solely on legitimate business needs and reasons. Disapproval of telework flexibilities will not be done.

6. Community Relations Officers Realignment to EXA MOA – October 17, 2022

V. Terms and Provisions

(4) Management commits to bargaining a separate alternate work schedule (AWS), telework, and remote work agreement specifically for CROs to accommodate their unique job duties and mission requirements. Notice on the bargaining will be issued within 30 days of the implementation of this MOA. Until a new national CRO work schedule agreement is reached, CROs will be permitted to work any schedule allowed within existing national and local agreements.

(5) Nothing shall prevent an affected bargaining unit employee from submitting a request to telework.

7. SCOPS National Supplemental Agreement – March 3, 2023

Section 7: Telework and Unscheduled Telework

a. Telework Guided by 2022 Master Collective Bargaining Agreement
Telework will be managed in accordance with the 2022 Master Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA), specifically: Article 29 – Telework.

b. Unscheduled Telework Requirements
The Union and Management commenced bargaining on this topic as part of this NSA. The Parties agree to table this topic and recommence bargaining from the point at which it was tabled within 90 days of the effective date of this agreement. If the Agency determines this topic is appropriate for Agency-wide Bargaining, the Union will be notified in accordance with the CBA and the parties agree this will not be addressed at the SCOPS Directorate level.

8. Negotiated Agreement for OEIOI Reasonable Accommodations MOA – November 7, 2023

V. Terms and Provisions of Agreement

(28) The Agency recognizes that telework/remote work and/or flexible schedules may be appropriate RAs. The Agency will provide employees with the equipment as outlined in the 2022 CBA and associated telework/remote work MDs. Requests for telework, remote work, flexible schedules, and/or equipment as a reasonable accommodation will be evaluated on a case-by-case basis.

9. FOD ISO ASC Center Transition MOA – August 31, 2023

V. Terms and Provisions of Agreement

(5) Proposed changes in working conditions/conditions of employment in existing office protocol and procedures, including changes in Remote Work or Telework, will be negotiated in accordance with Article 9 of the Parties' 2022 CBA.

(6) All affected bargaining unit employees will be permitted to apply or maintain their current Telework Agreement and Telework Schedule until all necessary bargaining obligations are complete.

(7) Pursuant to Article 29 of the 2022 CBA and Agency Guidance, nothing shall prevent an affected bargaining unit employee from entering a new Telework Agreement at any time during the implementation period.

(27) Management will provide employees who choose to accept a remote position under the FOD HQ Virtual Office with the tools and guidance necessary to be successful in their position.

(28) Management will consider employee knowledge and skills in determining work assignments and provide employees who choose to accept a remote position under the FOD HQ Virtual Office with the training, tools and guidance necessary to be successful in their position.

10. SCOPS California Center Relocation MOA – January 25, 2024

V. Terms and Provisions of Agreement

Workstations

(6) Employees who are on episodic telework and/employees who work onsite full-time may select their workstations from available choices based on seniority in accordance with the Service Center Operations (SCOPS) National Supplemental Agreement (NSA). Management will provide the Union at least two (2) weeks' notice before the first workstation selection is made. Management will also provide a seniority roster of episodic telework and full-time onsite employees who regularly come into the office, who may choose their workstation from designated workstations.

Core telework employees, and any remote worker who may be required to come into the office will continue to utilize the on-line Virtual Office Reservation System to reserve a workstation on a first come, first serve basis.

(7) Management will inform all employees who are on episodic telework and employees who work onsite full-time when a window seat becomes vacant after it was previously chosen and designated based on seniority. Employees shall have seven (7) calendar days to respond if they are interested in the vacant window station. Selection of the available window workstation will be based on seniority as defined in the SCOPS NSA.

Facility Opening

(39) It is estimated that CSC will occupy the Tustin building on or about June 15, 2024. The effective date of the move serves as a target date for implementation, contingent upon completion of renovations. Employees will remain on their current telework agreements until the move to the new facility. The Agency will keep the Union informed of the progress of the build out and any change in the estimated move date (on or about June 15, 2024).

11. RAIO SWBP Screenings Asylum Details MOA – September 11, 2023

Terms and Provisions of Agreement

(5) Employees who do not elect to work remotely will be permitted to maintain their current Telework Agreement, or establish a new one, consistent with the schedules established in the Asylum Division's MOA on Shift Work and Flexible Work Schedules for SWPS for the duration of their detail

(6) Employees who wish to work at an Agency location will be provided with the necessary access, space, equipment, and support necessary to be able to conduct confidential interviews and/or other required work. These facilities will be provided at either their home office or the nearest USCIS facility within the commuting area, if a space is available that conforms with RAIO interviewing standards.

(7) To all detailees who elect telework and/or remote work schedules, the Agency will issue the equipment and system(s) access necessary to complete their job duties, responsibilities, and work assignments.

(8) The Agency will strive to ensure that, upon completion of details, employees will return to their prior working conditions, including but not limited to work schedules, telework agreements, and workspace assignments wherever feasible. This will be accomplished as soon as possible, but no longer than one pay period after the conclusion of the detail. If it is not possible for employees to return to their exact prior working conditions (for example, due to an office move) management will engage with the local Union to find an acceptable alternative, if needed. Employees returning from detail will be provided sufficient time by their home office, normally no less than two (2) business days, and all necessary resources to resume their prior duties, including but not limited to requesting and receiving relevant systems access, reviewing policy changes, and completing any necessary training(s) missed during the duration of the detail.

(41) As noted in the Temporary Remote Work, Mandatory Overtime, and Work Schedule MOAs regarding Southwest Border Protection Screening, a single working group will be established within ten (10) days of the implementation of this MOA, to monitor and evaluate the SWPS program and make recommendations for necessary modifications to this and other applicable agreements.

12. Dallas District 33 and Local 3377 Hoteling Telework MOA – December 20, 2022

V. Terms and Provisions of Agreement

(6) Telework:

This MOA incorporates the previously negotiated telework procedures by reference:

a. D33 Dallas and OKC Field Offices MOA on Standards of Dress and Appearance, Space Sharing, Telework and AWS, May 8, 2019: Telework 2.0 – 9.0.

b. Houston Field Office MOA regarding FOD 2020 Implementation, January 19, 2017: Section V. 1 a, b, d; 2 a, b, c; d (ii); e and f.

13. EXA CRO Work Schedule MOA – April 4, 2023

V. Terms and Provisions of Agreement

(4) All affected bargaining unit employees will be permitted to maintain their current telework agreement and telework schedule until all necessary bargaining obligations are complete.

(5) Bargaining unit employees may apply for telework and remote work in accordance with Article 29-Telework and Article 30-Remote Work of the 2022 CBA and current USCIS policy for remote work and telework.

(22) The Agency will strive to provide consistency in hours of work, work schedules, and telework for the employees.

(29) Pursuant to Article 29 of the 2022 CBA, employees will be permitted to telework to the maximum extent possible without diminishing the employee's performance or mission accomplishment (in-office requirement of two (2) days per pay period) in accordance with Article 29-Telework of the 2022 CBA and USCIS Management Directive No. 123-001.2, Telework Program, dated April 22, 2022. Any work done outside of an employee's designated telework location (i.e. outreach events, Field or District offices, Application Support Centers, Asylum Offices, Service Centers, etc.) will be considered "in-office" to meet the requirements of the employee's "in-office" day(s) for the length of the event and all related travel time. Nothing prevents management and/or the employee from scheduling and conducting multiple in-person outreach events per pay period, regardless of their work schedules required "in-office" days.

(31) Applications for changes to an employee's work schedule, including alternate work schedules, telework, and/or remote work may be submitted at any time following Agency Head Review and approval of this MOA. Within fourteen (14) calendar days of receipt of an application, the employee's immediate supervisor, or designee, will provide a written decision. If an application is denied, the decision will have a written explanation of the reason for the denial. An employee whose request is denied will remain on their existing work schedule until a subsequent application is approved.

(34) Pursuant to Article 29 (e)(2) of the 2022 CBA, employees without a business or administrative need to report to the Agency worksite may request unscheduled telework for their scheduled in-office day, subject to management approval.

(37) In instances where seniority is a factor, seniority will be utilized as outlined in paragraph (b) of Article 18 - Seniority of the 2022 CBA. Those instances may include decisions regarding an employee's requested day off and requested telework schedule to ensure adequate staffing coverage throughout the pay period.

WORK ENVIRONMENT IMPLEMENTATION DATA CALL

January 18, 2024

OMB issued its Organizational Health and Performance Memorandum (M-23-15) last spring as guidance for agencies as they reevaluate their work environment posture to increase in-person presence while optimizing organizational health and performance. As the White House Chief of Staff and OMB have continued to emphasize in the Cabinet, PMC, and other forums, it is essential for agency leaders to be paying close attention to implementation progress and ensuring that updated Work Environment policies are having the intended impact.

In line with M-23-15, OMB requests that agencies that are still implementing in-person presence goals respond to this implementation data call outlining all remaining steps that the agency will take to reach intended work environment postures.

Agencies should provide:

- (1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

Secretary Fudge has directed leadership to increase our in-person presence, while working within our union agreements, to continue to deliver on HUD's mission. HUD will achieve its objectives by the end of the first quarter.

- HUD completed negotiations on our current workplace policies in May-June of 2022, which outlines the Agency's modified telework and remote work guidelines. The negotiated policy contains guardrails to ensure that decisions regarding the work environment are based on achieving the Department's mission and strategic objectives. Language is included in the policy to address the need to bring employees onsite for meaningful work, as needed, for things such as collaboration, meetings, training, and to have individual managers establish core days where needed.
- The policy, as negotiated with our unions, allows leaders to make telework decisions based on the associated business need and allows leaders to terminate telework for business or performance related reasons.
- Leaders across the Department have been implementing this policy and continue to make adjustments as necessary based on business needs.
- In 2022, while moving from maximum telework status, HUD was thoughtful in identifying the limited number of positions eligible for remote work, while maintaining HUD as a competitive place to work. HUD identified 6% of positions as being remote work eligible. The American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE) has grieved the Department's decision not to expand remote work beyond the positions deemed eligible.

- On August 3, 2023, we communicated clear expectations of the minimum in-person presence required of all HUD managers/supervisors and senior leaders. To lead the effort in strengthening the bonds created through in-person collaboration, all managers and supervisors, in both the National Capital Region and HUD regional and local offices, increased their in-person presence by 50%.
 - Some offices within HUD have already increased their in-person presence for all employees based on identified business needs. Leadership in the remaining offices have already identified where programmatic and organizational health improvements are needed. Employees in those offices will be expected to increase their in-person presence by 50% by the end of the first quarter.
 - Some offices are constrained in requiring an increased in-person presence due to ongoing necessary renovations occurring at the Weaver Headquarters building.
- (2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

Increased in-person presence began with our senior leadership team. Leaders continue to assess programmatic and organizational health improvements across all program areas, GS levels, and job categories at HUD.

- (3) Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.
- It has been over a year since HUD senior leadership instructed all leaders at HUD to ensure employees are in compliance with their telework agreements, as well as properly coding their WebTA.
 - Over the past year, the Deputy Secretary has received a bi-weekly report of the badging data for HUD's Headquarters office.
 - HUD leaders are also using the bi-weekly response to OMB's telework data call as another method of compliance oversight.
 - Each office within HUD has created telework compliance processes, such as meeting regularly with managers/supervisors to review reports on employee time and attendance and in-person reporting and to discuss any anomalies.

DRAFT and DELIBERATIVE

Request. Please send a written update that answers these questions. Agencies may provide additional detail or narrative on top of these answers. Responses are due via email to futureofwork@omb.eop.gov no later than January 26, 2024.

HUD-25228 Flexiplace Application and Agreement

CHAPTER 1. GENERAL PROVISIONS

1-1 Introduction:

In recent years, Flexiplace arrangements governing where employees work, including telework, remote work, and mobile work, have become increasingly widespread and formalized, with legislative mandates as well as programmatic and policy supports and structures. Tools, such as e-mail, easy access to information via the internet, teleconferencing, paperless work processes, and other innovations, are now readily available to implement a transparent program that lends itself to performing duties in alternate locations.

Flexiplace arrangements can serve multiple purposes and can have multiple benefits for both the Department and employees when implemented effectively. Flexiplace arrangements are of particular interest for their benefits in the following areas:

- Recruiting and retaining the best possible workforce – particularly workers who have high expectations of a technologically forward-thinking workplace and any worker who values work/life balance;
- Helping employees manage long commutes and other work/life issues that, if not addressed, can have a negative impact on their effectiveness or lead to employees leaving the Department;
- Reducing traffic congestion, emissions, and infrastructure impact, thereby improving the environment;
- Ensuring continuity of essential functions in the event of national or local emergencies; and
- Helping the Department achieve cost savings with real estate footprint reductions.

Flexiplace arrangements are not an employee entitlement, and how work is accomplished in an office is always a management decision. However, the Department encourages and fully supports the use of Flexiplace arrangements and management's efforts to utilize this flexibility tool in a way that enhances the work of the Department and the work/life of its employees. Additionally, as with any policy, not every provision or situation can be addressed in this document. Managers and supervisors, as well as employees, will have to exercise good judgment in applying this policy.

1-2 Purpose:

This policy implements the requirements of Public Law 106-346 and Public Law 111-292, codified in 5 U.S.C. Chapter 65, which require each Executive Agency to establish a policy under which eligible employees of the agency may participate in teleworking.

This policy sets forth the authority, policy, and responsibilities for the administration of the Flexiplace Program, to include telework, remote work, and mobile work, within the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for most full- and part-time employees. Additionally, this policy supersedes any other references to telework in any other Agency policies or guidance dated prior to this policy.

This policy applies to all HUD employees, except Office of Inspector General employees.

HUD employees are not authorized to perform work under the Flexiplace Program outside of the United States. The only exception is on the rare occasion that an employee is approved both by HUD and then the Department of State as a sponsored Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) approved to accompany a spouse assigned to work in an overseas location on behalf of the U.S. government. Sponsored HUD DETOs must adhere to the requirements of this policy as well as HUD's DETO policy.

1-4 Definitions:

Agency Worksite: The official agency location (HUD office) where work activities are based, generally considered a centralized location of an employee's assigned organization. The term regular worksite is also used to describe the agency worksite.

Alternative Worksite: An approved worksite other than the agency worksite, at which the employee performs their official duties. For teleworkers, this is the employee's approved telework site, and for remote workers, this is the approved remote site. Alternative worksites may include the employee's residence and/or another location where there is secure, reliable internet access, and there is an office setting conducive to accomplishing work requirements in a safe and secure manner.

Approving Official: For remote work arrangements, the approving official is the lowest level delegated by the Assistant Secretary (or equivalent) for the program office. The Assistant Secretary may retain approval authority for remote work, or delegate it. Each office's approving official may be different based on the level of delegated authority. However, all requests must be submitted to the immediate supervisor. For telework arrangements, the approving official is normally the immediate supervisor.

Continuity: An uninterrupted ability to provide services and support, while maintaining organizational viability, before, during and after an event, including but not limited to the Continuity of Operations Program.

Continuity of Operations Program: An effort within the Executive Office of the President and individual Departments and Agencies to ensure that essential functions continue to be performed during disruption of normal operations.

Continuity Personnel: Those personnel who have been designated by the Assistant Secretary for each office as necessary to continue essential functions under HUD's Continuity of Operations Program. NOTE: Continuity Personnel should review Chapter 9-8 for specific information.

Flexiplace Program: HUD program governing where employees work. Flexiplace arrangement types include telework, remote work, and mobile work.

Hot Desking: An alternative workspace arrangement in which employees use non-dedicated, non-permanent workspaces assigned on a first-come, first-served basis. Also known as free address or touchdown workstations.

Hoteling: An alternative workspace arrangement in which employees reserve workspaces on an as-needed basis. Rather than each employee having their own desk, workstations are shared throughout the agency and reserved by employees when necessary.

Internet Access: A secure, reliable internet connection via cable, fiber optics, DSL, wireless technology, or satellite.

Mobile Work: Work characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in customer or other varying worksites as opposed to a single authorized agency or alternative worksite.

Official Worksite: The “duty station” of an employee’s position of record for pay purposes, as documented on the SF-50, “Notification of Personnel Action,” where the employee regularly performs his or her duties. See Chapter 7-6 for more information on the official worksite for each type of flexiplace arrangement.

Outstationed Workers: Employees who are assigned to an agency office in one location but who are approved to physically report to an agency office in a different locality. Outstationed employees who are approved for telework must physically report to the approved HUD office at least twice per pay period.

Remote Access: The ability to work at a location other than the official duty station to perform work or emergency duties.

Remote Work: Remote work is a type of alternative work arrangement by which an employee, under a written Flexiplace agreement, is scheduled to perform work at an alternative worksite within or outside the local commuting area of an agency worksite and is not expected to report to an agency worksite at least twice a pay period on a regular and recurring basis.

Remote work – Near HUD Office: Work performed at an alternative worksite within a 50-mile radius of a HUD office.

Remote work – Outside Commuting Area: Work performed at an alternative worksite outside of a 50-mile radius of a HUD office.

Personally Identifiable Information: “Personally Identifiable Information” (PII) means any information about an individual maintained by an agency, including but not limited to, education, financial transactions, medical history, and criminal or employment history and information which can be used to distinguish or trace an individual’s identity, such as their name, social security number, date of birth, mother’s maiden name, biometric records, etc., including any other personal information which is linked or linkable to an individual.

Sensitive Information: Information required to be protected on the basis of its need for protection against loss, disclosure, or alteration because of the risk and magnitude of harm that could result.

Telework: Refers to a voluntary arrangement where the employee, under a written Flexiplace agreement, is expected to report to work at an agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis each pay period and also works from an alternative worksite on a regular and recurring or situational basis for an agreed upon period of time.

Routine telework is telework that occurs as part of an ongoing regular and recurring schedule with the telework day or days specified in a written Flexiplace agreement between the employee and employee's supervisor. In order to be considered regular telework, an employee must be regularly scheduled to work at an alternative worksite for a minimum of one day per pay period. Employees MUST report to the office a minimum of 2 days per pay period.

Situational telework is telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis where the hours or days teleworked are not part of an ongoing, and regular telework schedule.

CHAPTER 2. ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

2-1 Assistant Secretary for Administration (ASA):

The Assistant Secretary for Administration or equivalent or their designee is responsible for the administration of this policy. Approval to deviate from this policy must be obtained from the Assistant Secretary for Administration or their designee.

2-2 Approving Official:

The approving official for remote work arrangements (approval or termination) is the lowest level designated by the Assistant Secretary (or equivalent) for the program office. Each office's approving official may be different based on the level of delegated authority. However, all requests must be submitted to immediate supervisors. The approving official for telework arrangements is normally the immediate supervisor.

The approving official will:

1. Review each Flexiplace application, on a case-by-case basis, to determine if the employee and the employee's position are "Flexiplace eligible," based on the eligibility criteria outlined in Chapters 3 and 4, within that position's eligibility for participation in Flexiplace arrangements, normally determined during the position classification process.
2. For remote work requests (approval or termination), consult with the Program Office's funds control/budget officer on the potential budget implications prior to approving or disapproving the request in order to conduct an assessment of benefits and cost to determine if the arrangement is workable and cost effective for the Government and the organization.

3. For remote work arrangements, review the employee's position description to ensure that the duties are conducive to remote work before approving the arrangement.

4. Approve or disapprove the employee's participation in the program in writing, normally within 15 business days upon receipt of a complete application for telework requests and 20 business days for remote work requests¹, unless extenuating circumstances preclude processing within this time period. An employee will be notified in writing of any delay in processing because of extenuating circumstances. An example of an extenuating circumstance is when a supervisor is on leave, travel, and/or higher management level approval of the request is required.

5. Provide written explanation to the employee if the request to participate is denied.

6. Ensure that a personnel action is processed to document any change in duty station arising from an approved or terminated Flexiplace arrangement, normally within one pay period of the start date of the arrangement and ensure that a pen-and-ink change is submitted to update the duty station and bargaining unit status code, if applicable, on the OF-8 Position Description coversheet.

7. Enforce the terms of the Flexiplace policy and application, and, for bargaining unit employees, the terms of applicable collective bargaining agreements and supplements, and take appropriate corrective action to ensure conformance.

8. Ensure supervisors monitor timesheets such that they appropriately reflect employee Flexiplace participation.

9. Provide written notice to the employee of termination of telework or remote work and justification.

10. Complete all lessons of the required Telework Fundamentals for Managers training and ensure subordinate personnel, serving as immediate supervisors, complete the training found at the <https://www.telework.gov/training-resources/telework-training/virtual-telework-fundamentals-training-courses/> and maintain copy of certificate of completion. (At the time of this policy's issuance, the training consists of five lessons, all of which must be completed.)

11. Refrain from creating a repository of completed Flexiplace applications at the local level, as OCHCO is the only authorized entity to retain a central collection of completed Flexiplace Applications.

2-3 Employee:

¹ Response timeframes for requests from AFGE employees are 10 business days for telework requests and 15 business days for remote work requests.

The employee will:

1. Complete all lessons of the required Telework Fundamentals training and attach a copy of the completion certificate to their electronic Flexiplace application. (At the time of this policy's issuance, the training consists of five lessons, all of which must be completed.)
2. Complete the electronic Flexiplace application and submit it for automatic routing to the supervisor for approval and to the Program Office Flexiplace Coordinator.
3. Ensure protection of sensitive data by:
 - a. Properly safeguarding and disposing of media (both hardcopy and electronic) using approved means of destruction in accordance with applicable records management regulations and policies;
 - b. Receiving permission, from the employee's supervisor and the designated management official(s) within the employee's program office, to use or access sensitive data outside of HUD facilities;
 - c. Utilizing and storing sensitive data only on HUD-approved systems or devices;
 - d. Abiding by the most current HUD Information Technology Security Policy (version at the time of this policy's issuance is HUD Handbook 2400.25 Rev. 5.0);
 - e. Physically securing laptops and sensitive hard copy documents at all times;
 - f. Immediately reporting incidents in which sensitive information has been potentially lost or compromised to the HUD HITS Help Desk. (At the time of this policy's issuance, for items involving phishing, contact Phishing@hud.gov; for IT security incidents, contact CIRT@hud.gov). For example, if a teleworker loses a cell phone, laptop, removable or external hard drive, flash drive, or hardcopy documentation, that contains HUD information, it should be reported without delay. Refer to the HUD IT Security Policy for additional guidance on protecting sensitive data.
4. Adhere to the Government-wide Standards of Conduct regarding the use and misuse of government services, resources, and equipment (5 C.F.R. § 2635.101(B)(9)).
5. Demonstrate the ability to work independently and ensure the quality and quantity of work does not suffer while participating in the Flexiplace program.
6. Ensure that appropriate dependent care (i.e., children, elders, and/or loved ones) is obtained and utilized during work hours while participating in the Flexiplace program. While the presence of dependents in the household is not an absolute bar to working at the alternative worksite, employees must not engage in dependent care activities when performing official duties. While an occasional, brief interruption may occur when a dependent is present in the home, employees must be careful to keep interruptions to a minimum to avoid disruptions in work accomplishment. In lieu of requesting leave for interruptions that are not brief, the employee may request to extend their workday to make up for the missed duty time by the corresponding amount of time used with notification to the supervisor, as long as extending the workday does not incur any overtime liabilities for the Department. The employee is responsible for notifying the supervisor when such an interruption exists which briefly extends their workday. In the event the level of care needed for a dependent prevents or significantly disrupts the performance or accomplishment of work for an extended period of time, employees shall notify their supervisors as soon as possible about the work interruption and request approval for appropriate leave or use of earned compensatory time or credit hours while performing dependent care responsibilities.

7. Adhere to terms and conditions of the approved Flexiplace application including any reporting requirements as outlined in the application form (i.e., time and attendance, etc.).

8. Protect personally identifiable information to ensure that it is not disclosed to unauthorized persons, either intentionally or unintentionally.

9. Provide a phone number (home, cell, etc.) where they may be reached by the supervisor and/or other management official, and HUD staff as appropriate.

10. Avoid any negative impact from Flexiplace arrangements on the work of the other members of the work group (e.g., normally, others in the office should not have to perform duties assigned to someone else who would otherwise do them simply because the employee is working from an alternative worksite).

2-4 Program Office Flexiplace Coordinator:

The Program Office Flexiplace Coordinator will:

1. Review approved Flexiplace applications for completeness and notify employees and supervisors of any deficiencies.
2. Refrain from creating a repository of completed Flexiplace agreements at the local level, as OCHCO is the only authorized entity to retain a central collection of completed Flexiplace Applications.

2-5 Flexiplace Managing Officer (FMO):

The FMO, in OCHCO, will oversee the Flexiplace program for the Department. In this capacity, the FMO will serve as an advisor for the Department leadership including the Chief Human Capital Officer and serve as the statutorily required Telework Managing Officer for HUD. Additionally, the FMO will provide guidance and supervision to ensure the Department's Flexiplace Program is administered in accordance with applicable public laws, guidelines, and this policy. In addition, the FMO:

1. Facilitates agency compliance with the requirements of the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, 5 U.S.C. Chapter 65.

2. Leads the agency in creating a vision of the Flexiplace Program as a strategic management tool that supports and aligns with the agency's operational goals and mission.
3. Gains leadership buy-in and emphasizes the importance of leaders leading by example.
4. Helps managers and employees understand the purpose for implementing a Flexiplace Program and the benefits to the organization.
5. Provides key stakeholders a clear understanding of what the agency is trying to achieve in order to obtain acceptance of and compliance with flexiplace policies and practices.
6. Oversees the collection of completed Flexiplace agreements enabling accurate Flexiplace reporting. Works collaboratively with OPM to satisfy mandatory annual data collection and reporting requirements and ensures that supervisors and employees understand accurate data reporting requirements.
7. Develops clear and specific requirements for evaluation of the Flexiplace Program, both for the individual participants and for the agency in general.
8. Answers workforce questions on Flexiplace policies and procedures and provides Flexiplace data on an as needed basis.

CHAPTER 3. TELEWORK

3-1 Types of Telework:

1. Telework is a voluntary arrangement where the employee is expected to report to work at an agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis at least twice each pay period and also works from an alternative worksite on a regular and recurring or situational basis. Note: Any arrangement that requires employees to report to the agency worksite less than twice a pay period, including "full-time telework," is defined as remote work under this policy.
2. Once an employee enters into a Flexiplace agreement, there may be times when the employee will be obligated to work from home beyond the employee's normal telework schedule. See Chapter 7-1 for more information.
3. There are two types of telework, listed below. The telework program is designed to be beneficial to both the Department and the employee. Employees are encouraged to apply for Situational telework even if they do not plan on working a Regular/Routine telework schedule. If the forms and clearances are obtained in advance, the ability to utilize Situational telework is simplified when it is needed. While it is not a requirement to apply to participate in the telework program, employees may not work from an alternative worksite, including during inclement weather, without an approved Flexiplace agreement in place.

a. Regular/Routine Telework is telework that occurs as part of an ongoing regular and recurring schedule with the telework day or days specified in a written telework Flexiplace agreement between the employee and employee's supervisor. In order to be considered regular telework, an employee must be regularly scheduled to work at an alternative worksite for a minimum of one day per pay period. Managers and supervisors should use their discretion to determine not only the amount of time an employee can work outside of the office, but the type and amount of communication necessary to ensure the work of the office is completed. Employees MUST report to the office a minimum of 2 days per pay period under this type of telework, regardless of their work schedule type. Employees who report to the HUD office on fewer than six days per pay period may be subject to space sharing arrangements such as hoteling or hot desking.

b. Situational Telework is telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis where the hours or days teleworked are not part of an ongoing, and regular telework schedule. Supervisors may approve instances of non-recurring work away from the agency when the employee has an approved Situational or Regular Telework arrangement.

3-2 Eligibility Criteria:

Employee Requirements:

These requirements apply to all employees in positions conducive to telework and remote work, including managers and supervisors, if the position meets the position requirements specified below.

1. The following employees are statutorily ineligible to participate in telework or remote work:

a. An employee who has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year, for as long as the documentation of the disciplinary action remains in the employee's Official Personnel Folder.

b. An employee who has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties [5 U.S.C. 6502(a)(2)(A)(B)], for as long as the documentation of the disciplinary action remains in the employee's Official Personnel Folder.

2. Technology: The employee must have appropriate access to secure, reliable internet service that will accommodate remote access to HUD programs at the alternative worksite, if required to perform the duties of the position.

3. Additional Factors for Consideration: Supervisors should consider factors in addition to the basic eligibility criteria when evaluating an employee's request to participate in telework, but these factors cannot be used to arbitrarily restrict participation. Factors appropriate for consideration include:

- a. Conduct: Although an official record of misconduct does not automatically exclude an employee from telework, a record of disciplinary or other corrective action may be considered as it relates to the employee's ability to successfully work at an alternative worksite.
- b. Attendance: An employee who is on leave restriction or who has a documented history of unsubstantiated excessive absences or being charged with Absence without Leave (AWOL) may not be a suitable candidate for telework.
- c. Performance: Although an official record of performance issues does not automatically exclude an employee from telework, a record of performance actions or less than Fully Successful performance may be considered as it relates to the employee's ability to successfully work at an alternative worksite.
- d. Office Coverage: The organization should be sufficiently staffed to prevent a hardship when one or more employees are permitted to work at an alternative worksite.
- e. Supervision: Telework and remote work may not be suitable for employees who have not demonstrated the ability to work independently, or for employees in developmental or trainee positions.
- f. Budget Constraints: Appropriate equipment needed to perform the employee's duties at the alternative worksite may not be available within allocated resources.

Position Requirements:

1. Employees eligible for telework are persons engaged in tasks and work activities that are portable, do not depend on the employee being at the traditional worksite, and are conducive to supervisory oversight at the alternative worksite. Employees shall not be excluded as eligible on the basis of their occupation, series, grade, or Union activities. All telework decisions must align with the position's eligibility for participation in Flexiplace arrangements, normally determined during the position classification process.

Tasks and work activities generally eligible for telework include, but are not limited to, work that requires:

- a. Reviewing grants, reports, and cases.
- b. Writing decisions or reports.
- c. Participating in conference calls.
- d. Researching and analyzing regulatory or other documentation.
- e. Conducting computer-oriented tasks such as programming, data entry, and word processing.
- f. Researching legislation.
- g. Editing and proofreading reports.
- h. Data analysis.
- i. Continuity Program-related task and work activities.

Note: The above are examples only and do not represent all types of work suitable for telework.

2. Ineligible positions may include positions which:

- a. Require the employee to have daily face-to-face contact with the supervisor, colleagues, clients, or the general public in order to perform their job effectively.
- b. Require routine access to national security classified information or other sensitive information/material that cannot be secured from or transported to a remote location.

3. Employees in training-driven positions, such as Pathways Program participants, must adhere to the following conditions:

- a. During periods of training, telework may be suspended.
- b. The telework program must not impede the progression or the ability for the employee to complete all of the requirements of their training program.

3-3 Employee-Initiated Telework Arrangement Modification:

1. A teleworker may request a temporary modification to the telework arrangement based on their personal needs. For example, a teleworker may request to change their telework day from Tuesday to Wednesday one week.

- a. Supervisors are encouraged to accommodate the employee's request if it does not impact or impede the work of the office. However, supervisors may disapprove this request.
- b. If the request involves a change for up to two pay periods, a verbal agreement is acceptable. Any change that extends beyond two pay periods requires a written request and response.

2. An employee may request a permanent modification to their telework arrangement. Requests that create a need for additional office-based workspace may require the employee to participate in space sharing arrangements, such as hot desking or hoteling, temporarily until such time as sufficient workspace becomes available.

- a. Supervisors are encouraged to accommodate the employee's request if it does not impact or impede the work of the office. However, supervisors may disapprove this request.
- b. If approved, a new Flexiplace agreement must be put in place.

3-4 Supervisor-Initiated Telework Arrangement Modification:

1. Supervisors may require a temporary modification to the telework arrangement based on the needs of the office. For example, a supervisor may request an employee to change their telework day from Tuesday to Wednesday.

- a. The request will be documented in writing and will include the estimated time period of the change (e.g., one day, three weeks, etc.).
- b. The supervisor will give the employee reasonable advance notice of the required change to the extent possible.

2. Supervisors reserve the right to permanently modify an employee's telework agreement, at any time, for business or performance-related reasons.

- a. Supervisors are encouraged to work with the employee to select a telework day or days mutually agreeable to both, but ultimately, this is the decision of management.
- b. This constitutes a change in the telework agreement and the changes must be documented in a new Flexiplace agreement.
- c. Supervisors should give the employee reasonable notice of this change to the telework agreement, in advance to the extent practicable.
- d. Supervisors must provide the notice in writing and include the reason(s) for the modification.

3-5 Termination of the Telework Arrangement:

1. Employees may terminate participation in the telework program at any time, for any reason. The termination must be in writing and state the effective date of the termination. If an employee's choice to terminate their telework creates a need for additional workspace in the office, the employee may need to participate in space sharing, such as hot desking or hoteling, temporarily until such time as sufficient workspace becomes available.

2. Supervisors may terminate participation in the telework program at any time, for any business, conduct, or performance-related reason and will notify the employee in writing and provide the reason(s) for termination. Reasonable notice will be given to the employee to the extent practicable. Supervisors are encouraged to consider warnings, modifications, and temporary suspensions of telework before terminating an agreement. A supervisor may terminate a telework agreement whenever:

- a. There is a change in work requirements, office coverage or the arrangement no longer supports the Department/Office mission.
- b. The employee has demonstrated conduct and performance problems such as:
 - Violating time and attendance policies;

- An employee does not have to be placed on leave restriction in order to terminate telework.
 - Work products are not done in a timely manner and/or the quality of the work significantly decreases in quality and/or quantity, etc.
 - An employee does not have to be placed on any type of performance improvement mechanism (i.e., PIP, OIP, or equivalent) in order to terminate telework.
 - c. Changes in technology require that work be conducted in the office; such as the employee does not have access to the internet, hardware is not working, etc.
 - d. The employee does not conform to the terms of the Flexiplace agreement.
 - e. The employee’s performance has fallen such that it no longer meets business needs.
3. Removal from telework does not prevent an employee from reapplying at a later date.

CHAPTER 4. REMOTE WORK

4-1 Types of Remote Work:

Remote work is a special type of alternative work arrangement by which an employee is scheduled to perform work within or outside the local commuting area of an agency worksite and is not expected to report to an agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis at least twice a pay period.

Employees must submit a Flexiplace application and obtain managerial approval for remote work arrangements. Remote work arrangements may have budget implications, equity considerations, and other factors that management must consider when making decisions to institute or execute a remote work agreement or position. All remote work decisions must align with the position’s eligibility for participation in Flexiplace arrangements, normally determined during the position classification process. Current employees will not be required to enter into a remote work arrangement if they were not explicitly hired as remote workers.

Types of remote work arrangements:

1. Remote work – Near HUD Office: Work performed at an alternative worksite within a 50-mile radius of a HUD office. Examples:
 - a. An employee whose position would normally be based in HUD’s Robert C. Weaver headquarters building in Washington, DC is instead stationed in their home in the DC suburb of Arlington, VA.
 - b. An employee whose position would normally be based in HUD’s Robert C. Weaver headquarters building in Washington, DC is instead stationed in their home in the Denver suburb of Lakewood, CO, which is within 50 miles of the HUD Denver Regional Office.

2. Remote work – Outside Commuting Area: Work performed at an alternative worksite outside of a 50-mile radius of a HUD office. New positions that are advertised as remote positions could be duty stationed either anywhere within a specified geographic area or anywhere in the United States, outside the local commuting area of a HUD office, as determined by management. Existing employees may also be in positions that are eligible for remote work outside the local commuting area of a HUD office, either within a specified geographic area or anywhere in the United States. Examples:
 - a. An employee whose position would normally be based in HUD’s Robert C. Weaver headquarters building in Washington, DC is instead stationed in their home in Gettysburg, PA, which is more than 50 miles away from any HUD office but meets management’s requirement that the position be stationed within Region III.
 - b. A position whose manager is based in HUD’s Robert C. Weaver headquarters building in Washington, DC is advertised with a remote duty station anywhere in the United States and the selected employee is stationed in their home in Midland, TX, which is more than 50 miles away from any HUD office.

4-2 Eligibility Criteria:

Position Requirements:

Management determines position eligibility for remote work, normally during the position classification process. Considerations include, but are not limited to:

- Portability of the duties of the position,
- Frequency that the position requires performance of duties in the office,
- Frequency of travel required for work, and
- Budgetary implications of changes in locality pay area, transit and travel costs, and real estate and facility savings.

Duties that require handling personally identifiable information (PII) or other sensitive information, barring national security classified information, may be deemed portable for remote work purposes, subject to management approval.

The availability of space in the HUD office of the position’s normal work location may also be taken into consideration when determining where remote arrangements may be appropriate.

Employee Requirements:

If an employee’s position is eligible for remote work, management will consider all telework employee eligibility factors listed in Chapter 3 when reviewing employee requests for remote work.

4-3 Employee-Initiated Remote Work Arrangement Modification or Termination:

1. An employee may request a temporary modification to their remote work location based on their personal needs, for a period not to exceed two pay periods.

a. Supervisors are encouraged to accommodate the employee's request if it does not impact or impede the work of the office. However, supervisors may disapprove this request for business reasons.

b. Requests must be submitted and approved/denied in writing (via email or another written format).

c. Requests that increase an employee's presence at an agency's worksite will be subject to space availability and may require the employee to participate in space sharing (for example, hot desk or hotel (reserve space)).

2. Any change that extends beyond two pay periods, including a permanent change or termination, requires a written request to the supervisor, written approval from the Assistant Secretary or designee and may require a change in the duty station. An employee may request a permanent modification to their remote work arrangement. Employees whose requests result in a greater presence in the HUD office may need to participate in space sharing, such as hot desking or hoteling, temporarily until such time as sufficient workspace becomes available.

a. Supervisors must consider position requirements, such as frequency of travel, as well as budgetary implications of changes in locality pay area, when considering requests to change an existing remote work arrangement.

b. Remote workers may request a temporary change to report to the HUD office on a regular basis to temporarily support an assignment that can be performed more effectively at the agency worksite. Upon completion of this status or project, the employee will return to their remote work status.

c. Employees may request to terminate participation in the Flexiplace Program at any time, for any reason. Employees shall provide the termination notice to their supervisor in writing and state the effective date of the termination. Employees do not need to provide a reason. Employees who choose to terminate their participation in remote work may need to participate in space sharing arrangement, such as hot desking or hoteling, temporarily until such time as sufficient workspace becomes available.

d. If a change lasting longer than two pay periods is approved, a new Flexiplace agreement must be put in place and may require a change in the employee's official worksite for pay purposes (duty station) in the personnel system.

3. HUD will not reimburse relocation expenses for employee-initiated changes to Flexiplace arrangements. Any relocation costs arising from employee-initiated requests to change to a different geographic area (e.g., changing from one HUD regional office to another) are the responsibility of the employee.

4-4 Management-Initiated Temporary Change to or Termination of the Remote Work Arrangement:

1. Management may change or terminate participation in the remote work program at any time based on business needs, misconduct, or performance, not for arbitrary or capricious reasons, and will notify the employee in writing and provide the reason(s) for the change or termination. Advance written notice will be provided at least two weeks in advance to the affected employee before the change or termination date, unless emergency conditions exist, which may necessitate expedited termination. The change or termination will be documented in writing.
2. Management may terminate a remote work arrangement whenever there is a change in work requirements, or the arrangement no longer supports the Department/Office mission.
3. Management must consider position requirements, such as frequency of travel, as well as budgetary implications of changes in locality pay area, and the potential costs of relocation, when determining whether to change or terminate an existing remote work arrangement.
4. When a remote work arrangement was initiated at the request of an employee and management terminates the agreement due to a decline in the employee's performance or misconduct, the resulting reassignment to the new duty station will not be considered involuntary, and the employee will thus be ineligible for a severance payment, should they separate from HUD instead of accepting the reassignment.
5. Supervisors may consider whether to terminate a remote work arrangement and/or take disciplinary or performance-based actions while the employee remains remote when:
 - a. The employee has demonstrated conduct and performance problems. For example:
 - Violating time and attendance policies;
 - An employee does not have to be placed on leave restriction in order to terminate remote work.
 - Work products are not done in a timely manner and/or the quality of the work significantly decreases in quality and/or quantity, etc.
 - An employee does not have to be placed on any type of performance improvement mechanism (i.e., PIP, OIP, or equivalent) in order to terminate remote work.
 - b. The employee does not conform to the terms of the Flexiplace agreement.
 - c. Supervisors are encouraged to consider warnings, modifications, and temporary suspensions of remote work before terminating an agreement.
6. When a remote work arrangement was initiated at the employee's request and management terminates the arrangement due to a decline in the employee's performance or an occurrence of misconduct, the employee will be responsible for covering their own costs to relocate to an agency duty station and will not seek relocation costs from HUD. Any employee relocation costs arising from management-initiated remote work changes or terminations that result in a change to a different geographic area (e.g., changing from one HUD regional office to another) for other reasons will be paid by HUD in accordance with the GSA Federal Travel Regulations. Management must coordinate such arrangements with the Program Office's funds control/budget officer in advance of making a determination that may create an entitlement to relocation costs.

7. Employees whose remote work arrangements have been terminated may have to participate in space sharing arrangements, such as desk sharing, hot desking, or hoteling temporarily until such time as sufficient workspace becomes available in the office.

8. Removal from remote work does not prevent an employee from reapplying to the Flexiplace Program at a later date.

CHAPTER 5. MOBILE WORK

Mobile work is work which is characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in customer or other worksites as opposed to a single authorized alternative worksite. Examples of mobile work include site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management, and work performed while commuting, traveling between worksites, or on official travel for temporary duty (TDY).

5-1 Eligibility Criteria:

The primary duties in the position description determine position eligibility for mobile work. Mobile workers are designated as such when they are hired for a mobile work position. When designing mobile work positions, management considerations include, but are not limited to:

- Degree of variability of the position's worksite,
- Portability of the duties of the position,
- Frequency that the position requires performance of duties in a HUD office, and
- Frequency of travel required for work.

CHAPTER 6. APPLICATION FOR TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

1. The application for the Flexiplace Program consists of the following:

- a. Flexiplace Application and Agreement.
- b. Telework Fundamentals training completion certificate.

2. Any references to a Flexiplace application, in this policy or any other references include both of the above.

3. Failure to complete either of the above constitutes an incomplete application and will not be considered.

6-1 Application Process:

1. The employee must submit an electronic Flexiplace application package to the immediate supervisor for review.

2. The supervisor will notify employees of an incomplete Flexiplace application within two business days, barring extenuating circumstances.

3. The supervisor or approving official will review the Flexiplace application package and provide a decision, in writing, within the timeframe described in Chapter 2-2.

4. If the request is approved, the employee and supervisor must abide by the terms and conditions of the arrangement.

5. The employee must complete all lessons of the applicable Telework Fundamentals prerequisite training. The training may be accessed at <https://www.telework.gov/training-resources/telework-training/virtual-telework-fundamentals-training-courses/>. (At the time of this policy's issuance, the training consists of five lessons, all of which must be completed.)

6-2 Agreement:

The electronic Flexiplace agreement, which must be completed and signed by an employee and their supervisor, outlines the terms and conditions of the Flexiplace arrangement. Among other requirements, the agreement stipulates:

1. Any set time, methods, and/or frequency for the employee to communicate during their tour of duty.

2. HUD management officials, the immediate supervisor and staff members may contact the employee throughout their tour of duty.

3. Employees should answer phone calls and emails and attend meetings with the same frequency and quality as they would while in the office. This may include turning on their camera for videoconference meetings, as requested by management.

6-3 Supervisor-Initiated Temporary Reporting to the Agency Worksite:

1. A supervisor has the right to require a Flexiplace participant to report to the official worksite at any time, based on operational requirements. A supervisor may require a teleworker to modify their telework schedule or a remote worker to report to the agency worksite in order to participate in a mandatory training activity, meeting, special project, day-of in-person team meeting(s), established in-person collaboration (shared) days, provide office coverage, etc., that cannot be performed at the alternate worksite. Therefore, employees participating in the Flexiplace program must be accessible and available to report to the agency worksite for work needs that cannot be performed at the alternative worksite.

- a. The supervisor will give the employee advance notice to the extent practicable.
- b. Reporting to the agency worksite will last no longer than is reasonable to complete a work assignment or training.
 - i. For teleworkers, the supervisor may consider allowing the employee to work another day in the same week from the alternate worksite but is not required to do so.
- c. Normally, this type of modification will be communicated in writing, which may include email.
- d. Requiring the employee to report to the agency worksite is not a termination of the Flexiplace agreement.
- e. The supervisor (or designee) will communicate directly with the employee regarding the decision to report to the agency worksite.
- f. For same day reporting to the agency worksite at management's behest, occurring after the tour of duty begins, the commute time is considered as part of the tour of duty. (If the employee is reporting to the worksite at the employee's election, the commute time is not considered part of the tour of duty.)
 - i. For example, if an employee's tour of duty begins at 8:00 am and the supervisor requires the employee to report to the office to attend a 1:00 pm conference, the time spent commuting by the employee is considered to be work time.
- g. Management must take into consideration the distance from the alternative worksite and transportation options available to the employee and allow adequate time for the employee to report. Mobile workers and Remote Work – Outside Commuting Area workers may need to be on official travel orders (temporary duty travel - TDY), if they are traveling outside the travel status radius of their official worksite, as defined in the GSA Federal Travel Regulations, when reporting to the agency worksite.
- h. The tour of duty ends at the same time it would have if the employee had been working from the alternative worksite.
- i. Time for travel back to the employee's home is not considered as part of the tour of duty unless the employee is on TDY.
- j. Employees on TDY may earn compensatory time off for travel for time spent in travel status that is not otherwise compensable in accordance with applicable policy and regulations.

- k. For teleworkers, any costs incurred to report to the office, e.g., public transportation, is at the employee's expense as a normal commuting expense. Remote and mobile workers will be reimbursed for TDY expenses per applicable policy and regulations.
- l. Failure to report to the agency worksite or other designated locations (training center, etc.) may result in the termination of the Flexiplace arrangement.

6-4 Denial and Appeal Process:

While telework and remote work are not employee entitlements, and not all employees and/or positions are conducive to telework or remote work, management officials are urged to look at all facets of an employee's request and make decisions fairly in their office.

1. If the request is denied, the supervisor must notify the employee of their decision and provide the employee written justification for the denial on the Flexiplace application.
2. The employee may appeal the denial of the telework or remote work request to the level above the approving official. For example, if the application is denied by a Branch Chief, the employee can appeal the decision to the Division Director.
 - a. The employee must appeal the decision within 15 calendar days of receipt of denial.
 - b. The appeal must be accompanied by any circumstances the employee believes are relevant to the request for reconsideration.
3. The deciding official will render a decision in writing within 21 calendar days upon receipt of the appeal.

CHAPTER 7. TIME, ATTENDANCE AND PAY

7-1 Flexiplace Hours of Duty:

1. The existing policies relating to "hours of duty" apply to employees participating in Flexiplace arrangements.
2. If a situation arises and the employee's agency worksite is closed due to emergency situations (e.g., inclement weather or office repairs), and the alternative worksite is not affected, the employee is required to complete their tour of duty, if feasible.
 - a. Flexiplace workers are required to work during their regular tour of duty on a day when the agency worksite is closed (or when employees at the agency worksite are granted late arrival or dismissed early). They are not entitled to receive weather and safety leave, overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours. Generally, employees who are Flexiplace participants will not receive weather and safety leave, since they are not usually prevented from performing work at an approved alternative worksite due to a weather or other safety-related emergency. If the agency worksite is closed, all employees participating in the Flexiplace program whose alternative worksite is their home are required to work from their homes – even if it is a day when they would be reporting to the agency worksite. This will be considered regular time. If the employee chooses not to work from their alternate worksite or home, a leave request may be submitted, but the employee is not eligible for weather and safety leave.

- b. If the employee is working from home due to an unexpected agency worksite closure, it is understood there may be circumstances that impede or prevent the employee from performing some or all of their duties. These include situations where a teleworker could not have reasonably anticipated severe weather or emergency and thus is not prepared to telework and is otherwise unable to perform productive work at the alternative worksite, or a where Flexiplace participant cannot safely work at the alternative worksite due to severe weather or an emergency situation. With proper justification, the employee may not be penalized for a situation beyond their control. Proper justification could include loss of power, lack of work assignments, lack of child/dependent care, etc.
 - i. Under these circumstances, the employee is required to notify the supervisor via email (if available) of the situation, and the supervisor will determine if a leave request is required or if weather and safety leave applies. The applicable regulations and procedures describe a few limited exceptions under which Flexiplace program participants may be granted weather and safety leave. The email should contain the specific reasons that prevent the employee from working all or a part of the day.
 - ii. For example, if the employee is the parent of two very young children AND there is no one else in the home to assist in their care, the employee's work may be impeded and the supervisor will take this and any other factors under consideration to determine if any, or how much leave must be taken.
3. When an emergency or other situation affects only the alternative worksite for a major portion of the workday, HUD may require Flexiplace participants to report to the agency worksite or the employee may request annual leave or leave-without-pay (LWOP). This requirement does not apply to Remote Work – Outside Commuting Area participants.
 - a. If HUD remote access is down, and internet access is required to perform work, the employee shall report to the agency worksite.
 - b. If it appears that the system will only be down for a short period, or there is other work that could be done without the access, the supervisor should be consulted to determine if reporting to the official worksite is practical.

4. Weather and safety leave also may be granted to Flexiplace participants when they are prevented from working by the need to make safety preparations for emergency weather situations, such as storm preparation when there are severe storms approaching (e.g., hurricanes and tropical storms).
5. If the Federal Government (or HUD) is closed or released early due to a holiday or “good will” gesture, Flexiplace employees will receive the same benefit as those employees at the official duty station.
6. If the Federal Government (or HUD) is open but operating under a status of “unscheduled leave or unscheduled telework,” employees must notify their supervisor by the start of their workday if they are performing unscheduled telework or using unscheduled leave.

7-2 Flexiplace Work Schedules:

1. Flexiplace is not a “work schedule;” it is a program allowing employees to work at an alternative worksite. Employees continue to be permitted to work alternative work schedules, with supervisory approval, while they participate in Flexiplace. Work schedules are at the discretion of supervisors. However, supervisors are encouraged to exercise as much flexibility as possible.
2. With supervisory approval, employees may work a fixed schedule or an alternative work schedule permitted by the most current HUD Alternative Work Schedules policy or applicable labor-management agreement. With supervisory approval, teleworkers may establish in their Flexiplace agreement different work start/stop times for telework days as compared to when they are in the office.

7-3 Leave:

All OPM and Department leave requirements remain the same. If an employee is scheduled to work from an alternate worksite and will not be working due to sickness, or any other reason that would prevent or impede the employee’s work, the employee is required to contact their supervisor to request the appropriate leave.

7-4 Overtime, Compensatory Time and Credit Hours:

Supervisors must approve overtime, compensatory time, and credit hours in advance.

The existing provisions in Title 5 U.S.C. and in the Fair Labor Standards Act governing overtime also apply to Flexiplace workers. Supervisors must approve all credit hours, overtime and/or compensatory time in advance and in writing. Flexiplace employees should not work credit hours, overtime or compensatory time without advance supervisory approval. If they do so, they may be removed from the Flexiplace program and may not be eligible for compensation.

7-5 Travel, Leave and Holidays:

For teleworkers, if the employee is on travel, leave, or the scheduled telework day is a holiday, the employee may not substitute an alternative telework day without advance supervisory approval. Whether or not a substitution will be approved is within the discretion of the supervisor.

7-6 Effect of Flexiplace Arrangements on Official Worksite & Locality Pay:

1. Teleworkers' Worksites:

The official worksite for an employee covered by a telework agreement is the location of the regular agency worksite for the employee's position (i.e., the place where the employee normally reports for work on non-telework days), as long as the employee is scheduled to physically report at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to that regular worksite, except in certain temporary situations.

2. Remote Workers' Worksites:

The official worksite for a remote worker is the approved alternative worksite (i.e., home or another alternative worksite).

3. Mobile Workers' Worksites:

A mobile worker's official worksite will be determined in accordance with 5 CFR 531.605.

In accordance with 5 CFR 531.605(d), in the case of a mobile work employee whose work location varies on a recurring basis, the employee need not report at least twice each biweekly pay period to the official worksite as long as the employee is performing work within the same geographic area (established for the purpose of a given pay entitlement) as the employee's official worksite.

4. Locality Pay:

For all General Schedule employees, locality-based comparability payments are authorized based on an employee's official worksite under the most current Federal regulation. The location of an employee's official worksite—the HUD office for teleworkers and the approved alternative worksite (normally, the employee's home) for remote workers—determines the employee's locality pay area, which has an assigned Government-wide locality payment percentage. At the time of this policy, 5 U.S.C. § 5304 and 5 CFR part 531, subpart F apply to most General Schedule positions. Current locality pay area definitions and rates can be found at <https://www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/pay-leave/salaries-wages/>. Employees in executive and senior level pay plans do not receive locality pay.

For teleworkers, in certain temporary situations, such as an extended office closure or other operating status announcement, or where an evacuation order has been issued, the employee may be precluded from returning to the agency worksite with the twice per pay period frequency required by regulation. In such situations, HUD may continue to treat the agency worksite as the official worksite of the employee even though, during that period, the employee is working from the alternative worksite and not returning to the agency worksite at least two days per pay period. In that situation, HUD is unable to offer an agency worksite but expects employees to return when the event has concluded. HUD may also permit an employee to telework without returning to the office twice per pay period in a situation where an employee is temporarily recovering from an injury or other medical condition but is expected to return to a normal telework schedule upon recovery.

Examples of appropriate temporary situations include:

- Recovery from an injury or medical condition;
- Emergency situations preventing an employee from regularly commuting to the agency worksite, such as a severe weather emergency or a pandemic health crisis. (For instance, in the aftermath of a hurricane or flood, an employee may be forced to temporarily relocate, making commuting to the agency worksite twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis not possible. If the employing agency sets up telework arrangements for the employee, a temporary exception to the twice-a-pay-period requirement would be appropriate.);
- An extended period of approved absence from work (e.g., paid leave) during which the employee will not be able to report to the agency worksite at least twice a pay period;
- A period during which the employee is in temporary duty travel status away from the official worksite; or
- A period during which an employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than a location covered by a Flexiplace agreement.

This exception is intended to address certain situations where the employee is temporarily unable to report to the agency worksite for reasons beyond the employee's control. The temporary exception should generally be used only in cases where: (1) the employee is expected to return to work at the agency worksite in the near future, or (2) the employee is expected to continue teleworking and will be able to report to the agency worksite at least twice each bi-weekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis in the near future.

5. Tax or other legal implications for the business use of the employee's home will be based on IRS and state and local government rules and restrictions. It is the employee's responsibility to determine any income tax implications for maintaining a home office. Employees are encouraged to consult with a qualified tax professional to discuss the tax implications of a remote work arrangement or mobile work arrangement where the employee's home is their official worksite. It is the responsibility of the employee to make state designations for employment taxes. Management will process the employee's elections in accordance with Department of Treasury requirements.

CHAPTER 8. EXPENSES, EQUIPMENT AND FACILITIES

8-1 Expenses:

1. To make calls and scan copies, employees should use tools and technology that do not incur costs, to the fullest extent practicable. To this end, employees should log onto HUD's group chat/call software (currently Microsoft Teams) when they start their day and throughout their day so that they can be reached by their supervisors and colleagues via video or teleconference without incurring a cost to the government. When using tools and technologies that do not incur costs is not possible, the following may occur:

a. Program offices may issue cell phones to Flexiplace participants upon request where there is a business need.

b. Employees will be reimbursed for mail charges, facsimile charges, and hard copies only if they are instructed and approved in advance by their supervisor to incur such costs.

2. The following expenses will not be reimbursed:

a. Reimbursement for internet access, personal computer equipment, and/or other related charges.

b. Reimbursement for utility costs for heating, air conditioning, lighting, and the operation of government-furnished data processing equipment associated with the alternative worksite.

8-2 Equipment & Software:

1. Employees who have a personal computer at home and have secure, reliable internet access are only permitted to use their personal computer if they are awaiting issuance of a HUD laptop. In such cases, they may be provided remote access to the HUD system on their personal computer in alignment with IT Helpdesk instructions.

2. On a rare, case-by-case basis, supervisors may approve employees to participate in the Flexiplace Program without secure, reliable internet service as long as their work does not require access to HUD systems.

3. All HUD-provided laptop computers will be pre-configured with HUD standard software by local IT staff and provided to the employee. If there is a problem with the hardware and/or software applications, the employee is required to call the HITS Helpdesk at 1-888-297-8689.

a. If the problem cannot be resolved over the telephone, the employee is required to bring the equipment on-site (or if they are Remote Work – Outside Commuting Area participants, ship it in accordance with instructions provided by the Helpdesk) so that IT staff can repair the problem. Employees will notify their supervisor when a failure of the technology occurs to determine the need to report to the agency worksite.

- b. Employees who are issued a HUD laptop computer are prohibited from installing non-government owned or unauthorized hardware or software, e.g., social networking software, etc.

4. Flexiplace participants must comply with organizational security procedures and ensure adequate security measures are in place to protect the equipment from being damaged, stolen, or accessed by unauthorized individuals.

5. Flexiplace participants are responsible for taking reasonable precautions in preventing any loss or damage to equipment that is issued to them. If HUD-provided equipment is lost, stolen, or damaged due to negligence, the employee may be held accountable for replacement. In the event a computer is lost or damaged, the employee will immediately (24 hours or less during the week) call the HITS Helpdesk at 1-888-297-8689 to report the incident. Replacement equipment will be provided by HUD as soon as it becomes available.

- a. If a Flexiplace participant has personal equipment or other equipment available, they may be allowed to use it in alignment with instructions provided by the Helpdesk until the HUD laptop is repaired or replaced, at which point the employee must cease use of personal equipment.
- b. If alternative equipment is not available, teleworkers and Remote Work – Near HUD Office participants may be required to report to the agency worksite on the next business day and continue reporting to the office until the equipment problems are resolved.

6. Supervisors must establish methods of communicating with their employees and ensure that all employees participating in the remote work program have alternative means of contacting the supervisor in the event that email is not available (due to HUD system failures, weather, or other conditions).

8-3 Facilities:

If working at home, employees participating in the Flexiplace program should have a designated workspace or workstation for the performance of their work duties. Requirements will vary, depending on the nature of the work and the equipment needed to perform the work. In addition, employees must acknowledge reviewing the “Self-Certification Safety Checklist” portion of the electronic Flexiplace application.

8-4 Space Sharing:

Employees who regularly work at least six days per pay period in a HUD office will be assigned a workstation/cubicle or office. Employees who regularly report to a HUD office on fewer than six days per pay period may be subject to space sharing, which may include hoteling and hot desking. Vacant and available workspaces will be assigned in accordance with the most recent space sharing policy.

CHAPTER 9. MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION

9-1 Position Description:

Changes to existing position descriptions are not necessary for telework arrangements. For remote work arrangements, approving officials must review the employee's position description and may make any necessary changes to ensure that the duties are conducive to remote work and a change in duty station before approving the arrangement. For example, changing the employee's status to or from remote work could affect their bargaining unit coverage in terms of which local or union may cover the employee based on geographic location. As position descriptions are developed or updated or vacancy announcements are opened, Flexiplace eligibility will be documented.

9-2 Performance Standards:

Critical elements and performance standards must have clearly defined performance requirements that are quantifiable, measurable, results-oriented, and tied to the Department's strategic plan. Explicit and objective "norms" for work output should be based on experience with those required and sustained in the office and monitored through scheduled and required progress reports. The performance of Flexiplace participants will be evaluated consistent with the applicable HUD performance management system, such that Flexiplace participants are treated the same as non-participants regarding performance management.

9-3 Work-Related Opportunities:

All participants in the Flexiplace Programs will be treated the same as non-participating (in-office) employees for purposes of periodic appraisals of job performance, training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees, work requirements, or other acts involving managerial discretion.

9-4 Liability Issues:

Questions related to claims for personal property damage or loss, or personal injury related to the employee's performance of official duties should be directed to the Office of the Chief Human Capital Officer (OCHCO). The Department will address issues of employee or Department liability in accordance with the specific facts of each case and under the provisions of the Federal Employees Claims Act, the Federal Tort Claims Act, and the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act, as applicable.

9-5 Workers' Compensation:

1. The Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA) covers Flexiplace participants. Employees may receive Workers' Compensation for an on-the-job traumatic injury sustained while performing official duties at the official or alternative worksite. Employees must inform their supervisor immediately or as soon as practical following an injury. Supervisors must ensure that the appropriate Workers' Compensation forms are completed within 10 days of the reported traumatic injury. In addition, the supervisor will immediately inform OCHCO about the injury. Information regarding the process for filing a Workers' Compensation Claim, as well as the forms may be accessed at <http://hudatwork.hud.gov/HUD/chco/po/arh/notices/workcomp>.

2. In a home office (whether the home office is near the HUD office or outside the commuting area where the employee is assigned organizationally), the employee is covered under FECA at their workstation while performing assigned duties or performing employment activities incident to those duties. A workstation would generally consist of a location in the home where the employee performs work assignments such as a desk with a computer and internet access. Injuries sustained while performing activities that are not immediately directed toward the actual performance of assigned duties are not covered. Unlike in a traditional office setting, employees remove themselves from the performance of assigned duties as soon as they walk away from that desk to use the bathroom, get a cup of coffee, or seek fresh air.

3. Employees must review the "Self-Certification Safety Checklist" to understand the importance of safety at their alternative worksite in compliance with Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) guidelines as part of the Flexiplace application. Any claim for Worker's Compensation based on a traumatic injury will be investigated by the Department of Labor. For additional information regarding OSHA requirements, visit to www.osha.gov.

9-6 Transit Subsidy:

1. Remote workers and mobile workers whose official worksite is their approved alternative worksite (e.g., the employee's home) are not eligible for the transit subsidy program. Approved regular teleworkers who receive a transit subsidy under HUD's Transit Subsidy Program must complete and return the HUD-80-A to the Transit Subsidy Program within two business days of notice of approval to telework, accounting for their approved telework schedule.

2. Participation in the telework program may or may not affect the amount of the transit subsidy awarded.

3. Failure to notify the appropriate headquarters or field representative of changes to a telework schedule may result in termination of not only the telework program, but the transit subsidy program as well, if the changes affect the amount of commuting trips and/or the amount of the subsidy to which the employee may be entitled.

9-7 Policy Questions:

Questions about HUD's Flexiplace Program may be directed to the Department Flexiplace Managing Officer, as listed on <http://hudatwork.hud.gov/HUD/chco/po/arh/eap/flexiplace>.

9-8 Continuity of Operations:

Continuity of Operations is a Federal Executive Branch program to ensure that Departments and Agencies can continue essential functions during disruption of normal operations across a wide spectrum of threats. Each Department is required to develop and maintain a Continuity of Operations Plan to ensure that Mission Essential Functions are operational within 12 hours of an emergency, with or without warning. Further information can be found in Federal Continuity Directive 1, located at <https://www.fema.gov/emergency-managers/national-preparedness/continuity>.

Telework is a critical part of HUD's Continuity of Operations Program. Employees are designated as Continuity Personnel by their Assistant Secretary and must adhere to requirements in HUD's Continuity of Operations Plan. Continuity Personnel must apply for telework, maintain telework readiness at all times, and abide by the terms of the HUD Flexiplace agreement, as documented, for the duration of their appointment to the Continuity of Operations program. The employee's telework capability should be verified on a regular basis, at a minimum once every quarter. All other eligibility criteria required in Chapter 3 are not applicable for Continuity Personnel conducting continuity-related telework. Continuity Personnel who are approved to telework only for continuity purposes must have their application annotated accordingly.

ARTICLE 18 TELEWORK

Section 18.01 - General. The Office of Personnel Management and the Department define telework as "work arrangements in which an employee regularly performs official assigned duties at home or other work site geographically convenient to the residence of the employee." Telework is simply a way of getting work done from a different location.

In accordance with § 359 of Public Law 106-346, Handbook 625.1 dated May 2010 is the Telework Policy for the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Under these provisions the Department encourages the implementation of telework to the maximum extent possible. No individual office or program area is authorized to establish a telework policy or modify or amend Handbook 625.1 dated May 2010 without the written approval of the Chief Human Capital Officer and/or the fulfillment of bargaining obligations with I IUD AFGE Council 222. The provisions of hoteling and hot desking are not being implemented at this time. When they become available, management agrees to negotiate as appropriate the applicable provisions.

The Department recognizes the potential benefits of voluntary telework to both employees and the Agency. Under normal circumstances, a manager may not require an employee to work from home. However, a manager may require an employee to work at an alternative worksite.

Section 18.02 - Eligibility.

- (1) With the exception of summer or seasonal employees, all employees in positions with duties that are conducive to telework are eligible to telework.
- (2) if the employee is considered "eligible" by HUD policy or this agreement, denial and termination decisions must be based on business needs or performance, not arbitrary or capricious reasons. When provisions of the Departmental policy are inconsistent with or contradict this Article, the Article will prevail.

Section 18.03 - Roles and Responsibilities.

- (1) The approving official shall:
 - (a) Approve, modify, or disapprove the employee's participation in the program in writing, within 10 business days upon receipt of a completed application, unless extenuating circumstances exist. The written notice shall provide the reason(s) for modification or disapproval.
 - (b) Within 2 business days, supervisors will notify employees of an incomplete application, unless extenuating circumstances exist.
 - (c) Submit a copy of the approved signed Telework Application to the Program Office Telework Coordinator. The list is available on the HUD website.

- (d) Notify the Union when the agreement is terminated, suspended or modified by the Supervisor for one pay period or more.
- (2) The employee shall:
 - (a) Submit applications for telework to their immediate supervisor or the supervisor's designee.
 - (b) Teleworkers will be treated the same as non-teleworking employees in the telework reporting requirements. There will be no sign in or out.
 - (c) Employees may use the call forwarding feature of their office telephone while on telework provided the feature can be initiated or cancelled from the alternative worksite.

Section 18.04 - Application Requirements and Process.

- (1) Employees on a five (5) day per week schedule may telework up to three (3) days per week. Employees on compressed work schedules may telework up to two (2) days per week during a compressed week.
- (2) Once an agreement is approved, employees may begin teleworking upon mutual agreement between the employee and their immediate supervisor.
- (3) Employees who are denied telework or the request is modified by the supervisor may select either the appeal process in HUD Handbook 625.1, Telework Policy, -or- the grievance procedures outlined in Article 51 of this Agreement.
- (4) Telework agreements are not required to be renewed once they have been approved. They remain in place until either party decides to modify or terminate the agreement. The telework agreement in place at the time of the implementation of this agreement will remain in effect unless the employee is no longer eligible for telework. If the employee requests a change based on the provisions of this supplement, a new agreement will be prepared. The self-certification safety checklist and IT approval Form are not required to be resubmitted unless there are substantial changes in the teleworking situation.
- (5) Employees may apply for telework at any time.
- (6) Employees who chose not to participate in the program will not be penalized.
- (7) Modifications to the telework agreement do not require a new Rules of Behavior for Remote Access User Agreement (HUD-22018); Telework Self-Certification Safety Checklist (HUD-25229) or IDT/HQOTC concurrence.

- (8) Communication levels and the methods of communication between employees and supervisors are expected to remain the same whether an employee is working in the office or teleworking. The communication requirements of the manager will be discussed with employee and identified in the telework application and agreement. Teleworkers will provide a telephone number where they may be reached by the supervisor and or, other management officials.
- (9) Management agrees not to disseminate or require an employee to publish personal information such as home or cell phone numbers.
- (10) Management agrees that the remote work site is not a governmental facility and that employees have the freedom to safeguard, insure and maintain the privacy of their home work place.

Section 18.05 - Same Day Recall (SDR). A SDR is when the supervisor requires an employee to return to the official worksite while teleworking.

- (1) A recall shall only be initiated due to extreme operational exigencies requiring same day attention. Recalling an employee should be a last resort effort and a rare occurrence.
- (2) Commute time back to the office of a recall is always considered part of the tour of duty.

Section 18.06 - Modification of Telework Agreements.

- (1) Supervisors must give reasonable advance notice for permanent or long term modifications to telework agreements and, under normal circumstances no less than one full pay period. The modification must be in writing and provide the reason(s) for the modification.
- (2) Handbook 625.1 Section 5-3-1 (a) of the HUD May 2010 Telework Policy is no longer applicable.
- (3) A permanent modification to a telework agreement requires a new agreement.

Section 18.07 - Termination of Telework Agreements.

- (1) Supervisors may terminate telework for business or performance related reasons. Employee's morale and quality of work life shall be considered in any decision to terminate an agreement.
- (2) Employees will be given written notification of termination of their telework agreement a minimum of one full pay period before the effective date, unless emergency conditions exist. The termination must be in writing and provide the reason(s) for the termination.

- (3) By mutual agreement of the supervisor and the employee, an employee may discuss the termination notice with their supervisors and have a union representative attend and participate in this discussion.
- (4) Supervisors are strongly encouraged to consider warnings, modifications, and temporary suspensions of telework before terminating an agreement.
- (5) If an employee is terminated from telework, the employee may reapply at any time.

Section 18.08 - Hours of Duty. Employee's teleworking may participate in and are subject to the provisions of Article 16 of this Agreement.

Section 18.09 - Leave. Employees working from an alternative worksite other than their home shall be covered under the same leave provisions as employees at the official work site, Section 18.10 - Work Schedules.

- (1) Telework is not a "work schedule" it is a program allowing employees to work at an alternative work location/worksite.
- (2) In accordance with the Office of Personnel Management guidance, teleworking employees continue to be eligible for all Alternative Work Schedules. However, employees choosing a flex-time schedule will inform their supervisors at least one day in advance of the time they will start work on their telework days, unless extenuating circumstances exist. In the absence of advance notice from the employee, it is understood that the employee will begin work at the time designated on the telework agreement.
- (3) Management is responsible to ensure that the mission and operational requirements of the Department care carried out effectively and efficiently.

Section 18.11 - Overtime, Compensatory Time and Credit Hours. Employees participating in any telework agreement are eligible to work credit hours, overtime and/or compensatory time on both scheduled and unscheduled telework days in accordance with the applicable provision of Article 16 of this Agreement and the Telework Policy.

Section 18.12 - Equipment used while on telework.

- (1) If an employee participating in telework has a loss or damage to equipment and does not have personal equipment available, the employee may be able to continue to work at home once the supervisor is notified and determines that work can be done without the use of a computer or internet access. HUD will make all reasonable efforts to provide replacement equipment as soon as possible, and will not purposely avoid replacing equipment to limit telework by any employee with an approved agreement.
- (2) Employees will not be required to purchase or obtain any equipment that is not required by the policy to telework. (e.g. fax machine, copier, scanner).

- (3) The Union may make requests to the Agency Head or Designee in accordance with 41 CFR 102-36.30 in order to obtain equipment for bargaining unit employees that is no longer needed for its original purpose.
- (4) In order to support telework to the maximum extent possible, HUD will endeavor to provide laptops to all teleworkers. However, there is nothing that precludes employees from using their own equipment.
- (5) Management agrees that the Department will provide supplies e.g., paper, pens, staples, and/or CD's to teleworkers that are routinely provided to employees in the office.
- (6) Employees may use HUD equipment and software programs while teleworking subject to the HUD Policy/Guidance on "Limited Personal Use" of government office equipment including information technology.
- (7) Employees without an internet connection may be eligible to participate in the telework program as long as the work to be performed at an alternative site would not require HUD internet services.

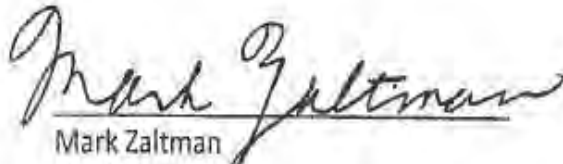

Section 18.13 - Training. A telework frequently asked questions document will be established and updated on the HUD website, which complies with this Article and the Departmental policy. Within 90 days of the effective date of this Agreement, the parties shall prepare and present telework contract interpretation training to all employees. The training will also jointly create the frequently asked questions that will be updated and maintained by management.

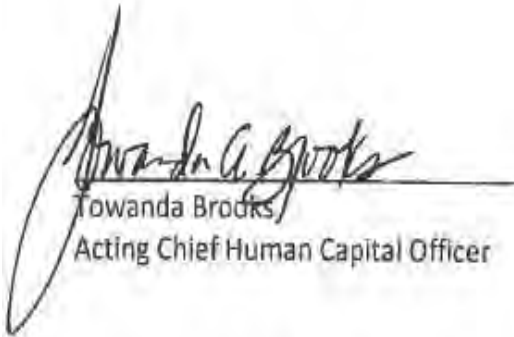

Section 18.14 - Union Representatives. Union representatives that are authorized official time may use official time while teleworking subject to the same approval and recording procedures.

Section 18.15 - Reasonable Accommodation. Work at home approved as a reasonable accommodation under the provisions of Article 45 is governed by reasonable accommodation provisions not necessarily the provision of the telework policy or this agreement.

NATIONAL SUPPLEMENT 33
BETWEEN
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT
AND
AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES
NATIONAL COUNCIL OF HUD LOCALS 222

SUBJECT: Implementation of the Department of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD's) proposed Flexiplace Policy, dated January 10, 2022.

SCOPE: This Supplemental Agreement addresses the implementation of those portions of HUD's proposed Flexiplace Policy, dated January 10, 2022, that apply to remote and mobile work. Any part of the Flexiplace Policy that addresses telework is covered by Article 18. Separate Supplemental Agreements address modifications to Article 18, Telework, and Article 57, Space Management, that relate to the expansion of telework and adoption of remote work. Although this agreement mentions demonstration of a new Electronic Flexiplace System (EFS) for processing Flexiplace requests, including for telework, the implementation of the EFS system is not covered by this Supplemental Agreement and will be addressed in a separate agreement except where otherwise stipulated in this agreement.

I. Introduction

1. Flexiplace Advantages. The Parties recognize that many HUD employees have worked successfully since March 2020 under maximum telework arrangements due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The Parties agree that establishing policies that offer greater latitude may provide for expanded flexibility for employees and offer both HUD and employees an opportunity to reduce expenses.
2. CBA Precedence. The Parties agree that HUD's new Flexiplace Policy does not supersede any provisions of the HUD-AFGE Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA) unless explicitly stated in this Supplemental Agreement. The Parties have agreed in separate Supplements to expand specific provisions of CBA Articles 18 and 57 that would otherwise be covered by the current CBA. The Union is not waiving its statutory rights under the Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute (Statute). If there is any conflict between the new proposed Flexiplace Policy and the provisions of this Supplemental Agreement, the terms of this Supplemental Agreement will govern.
3. Rights. The Parties agree that the implementation of this Supplemental Agreement shall not diminish or waive any rights that the Parties have under the CBA, law, government-wide rule or regulation, or agency policies that exist as of the date of this agreement.
4. Continuation of Terms. If this Supplemental Agreement is extinguished by issuance of a new collective bargaining agreement, the Parties agree the terms of this agreement that are mandatory subjects of bargaining will continue, subject to the new collective bargaining agreement, to the extent necessary until lawfully changed.

5. Existing CBA Provisions. The covered-by provisions of the 2015 HUD-AFGE CBA related to time and attendance, overtime, leave, and alternative work schedules are unchanged for any employee participating in a Flexiplace arrangement, including remote work and mobile work as well as telework unless otherwise agreed upon in this supplement. Performance standards and performance management policies and procedures for bargaining unit employees participating in the Flexiplace Policy shall comply with Article 30 of the HUD-AFGE Agreement.
6. Definitions. The terms used in this Agreement shall have the definitions provided by the January 10, 2022, Flexiplace Policy, unless a different definition is given below.
 - a. Mobile Work: Work characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work at customer or other varying worksites as opposed to a single authorized alternative worksite.
 - b. Official worksite shall have the definition in Office of Personnel Management (OPM) regulations at 5 CFR § 531.602 and 5 CFR § 531.605. Official duty station is synonymous and interchangeable with official worksite.
 - c. Remote work is a type of alternative work arrangement by which an employee, under a written remote work agreement, is scheduled to perform work at an alternative worksite within or outside the local commuting area (as defined below) and is not expected to regularly report to an agency worksite at least twice a pay period on a regular and recurring basis. There are two (2) types of remote work:
 - i. Remote work – Near HUD Office: Work performed at an alternative worksite within a 50-mile radius of a HUD office.
 - ii. Remote work – Outside Commuting Area: Work performed at an alternative worksite outside of a 50-mile radius of a HUD office. New positions that are advertised as remote positions could be duty stationed either anywhere within a specified geographic area or anywhere in the United States, outside the local commuting area of a HUD office, as determined by Management. Existing employees may also qualify for Remote Work outside of the local commuting area of a HUD office.
 - d. Management Official: For purposes of implementation of the Flexiplace Policy, wherever a Management official is referenced the intent is that the Management official or their designee shall serve in the specific capacity described.
 - e. Outstationed Workers: Employees who are assigned to an agency office in one location but who physically report to an agency office in a different locality. Outstationed employees may be approved for telework or remote work.

7. Dependent Care Schedule Flexibility. Employees must ensure that appropriate dependent care (i.e., children, elders, and/or loved ones) is obtained and utilized during work hours while participating in the Remote Work program. While the presence of dependents in the household is not an absolute bar for employees working at an alternate worksite, employees must not engage in dependent care activities when performing official duties. While an occasional, brief interruption may occur when a dependent is present in the home, employees must be careful to keep interruptions to a minimum to avoid disruptions in performing and accomplishing work. In lieu of requesting leave for interruptions that are not brief, the employee may request to extend their workday to make up for the missed duty time by the corresponding amount of time used with notification to the supervisor, as long as extending the workday does not incur any overtime liabilities for the Department. The employee is responsible for notifying the supervisor when such an interruption exists which briefly extends their workday. In the event the level of care needed for a dependent prevents or significantly disrupts the performance or accomplishment of work for an extended period of time, employees shall notify their supervisors as soon as possible about the work interruption and request approval for appropriate leave or use of earned compensatory time or credit hours while performing dependent care responsibilities.

II. Policy Implementation

8. Policy Compliance with Negotiated Agreements. Management will notify AFGE Bargaining Unit Employees and their supervisors of the existence of this Supplemental Agreement and provide them with a copy of this Agreement attached to the online Departmental Flexiplace Policy. Management shall include a notice next to or below any links to the online Departmental Flexiplace Policy and in any emails circulating copies of the Flexiplace Policy stating that, for AFGE bargaining unit employees, this Supplement governs if there is any conflict between the Flexiplace Policy and this Supplement.
9. Policy Compliance with OPM Guidance. The Department's Flexiplace Policy shall comply with U.S. Office of Personnel Management's (OPM) weather and safety leave regulations at 5 CFR § 630, Subpart P. Weather and safety leave may be granted for emergency weather situations, such as storm preparation when there are severe storms approaching (e.g., hurricanes and tropical storms).
10. Flexiplace Participants Treated Same as Other Employees. Similar to 5 U.S.C. § 6503(a)(3), Management shall ensure that all participants in Flexiplace programs shall be treated the same as non-participating (in-office) employees for purposes of periodic appraisals of job performance, training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees, work requirements or other acts involving managerial discretion.
11. Notice to Employees. The Department will notify all bargaining unit employees by email of both the new Departmental Flexiplace Policy and this Supplement within 30 days of signing this Supplement. Management will post both the Flexiplace Policy and the Supplement on the Department's intranet (HUD@Work) at the time of issuance.

12. Electronic Flexiplace System (EFS). Management shall provide the Union with appropriate Article 49 notices and fulfill all bargaining obligations under the CBA before implementation of the new Electronic Flexiplace System (EFS) and DocuSign. Notice and bargaining shall include any new forms or systems that were not previously used and that Management plans to implement as part of its new Flexiplace Policy and/or the EFS, such as the proposed Flexiplace Application, Flexiplace Agreement, Self-Certification, and DocuSign. Management shall provide the Union with training on use of the EFS before negotiations commence. The Parties agree to the use of electronic signatures for all current telework forms and electronic storage of those forms. The Flexiplace options (telework, remote, mobile work) will be added to current telework forms. The Parties agree that employees will enter their approved Flexiplace agreements in the electronic systems once the Parties fulfill their required bargaining obligations on the new systems. The employees' Flexiplace agreements will not be subject to reapproval before entry.
13. Prompt Implementation of Flexiplace. Management shall not delay implementation of the Flexiplace program due to any lack of functionality of the EFS. If the EFS is not functional at the time this agreement is signed or upon termination of the current Maximum Telework status, whichever is later, Management shall make all necessary forms available to employees in paper/digital copies and shall accept submission of and process paper/emailed requests to participate in remote work until the EFS is functional.
14. Eligibility. All HUD positions and employees should normally be eligible to participate in a Flexiplace arrangement in accordance with Agency Policy, applicable regulations, and the CBA. HUD shall include eligibility information in all position vacancy announcements. The Parties agree that Flexiplace eligibility is based on objective, equitable guidelines, function-based criteria, and shall not be arbitrary and capricious. HUD shall notify current employees of their eligibility status upon their application for a Flexiplace arrangement. If an employee is determined to be ineligible, Management shall, at the time the determination is made, provide the employee in writing with the reason(s) for ineligibility.
15. Determination of Remote and Mobile Work Positions. Remote and mobile work determinations for a position may be made at the time of position classification, and/or posted in a vacancy announcement. Additionally, remote work may be requested by an employee.
16. Adjustment of Duties. Management may consider adjustment of employee duties to allow for participation in remote work.
17. Designation of Official Duty Station for Locality Pay.
 - a. In accordance with 5 CFR § 531.605(d)(1), employees who are scheduled to report to the agency worksite at least twice per pay period shall have the agency worksite designated as their official duty station.
 - b. Remote workers who do not regularly report to an agency worksite at least twice a pay period shall have their alternative worksite (e.g., home) as their official duty station.

18. Withholding of State and Local Taxes. It is the responsibility of the employee to make state designations for employment taxes. Management will process the employee's elections in accordance with Department of Treasury requirements.
19. Training. Management shall provide reasonable accommodation(s) to allow employees with disabilities to participate in Flexiplace training. Employees who have previously taken the required telework training on hud.gov or telework.gov and who have a copy of their completion certificates will not be required to retake the training. Employees who have taken the training and have been teleworking prior to the execution of this Supplement but do not have a training certificate will be asked to attest that they have previously taken the training and will not be required to retake the training barring extenuating circumstances.
20. No Recurring Assessments. Once an employee has been approved to participate in a Flexiplace program, the supervisor shall not subject the employee to repeated reviews of the employee's home or telework/remote work environment, absent extenuating circumstances.

III. Remote Work Requests

21. Initiation of Remote Work Arrangement. Remote work arrangements may be initiated by an employee requesting to work remotely or by the agency posting a position announcement as one that will be performed remotely.
22. Remote Arrangements Not Required for Current Employees. No current employees shall be required to agree to a remote work arrangement if they were not explicitly hired as remote workers.
23. Submission of Flexiplace Applications. Employees may submit Flexiplace applications at any time and may request modification of any Flexiplace arrangement at any time.
24. No Recurring Applications. Once a bargaining unit employee has been approved to participate in a Flexiplace arrangement, Management shall not require an employee to reapply or to sign a new agreement in order to continue with the same approved arrangement. Existing Flexiplace participants will be required to enter their approved agreement information in the EFS system once implemented.
25. Requests Made Through Supervisor. Employees shall make requests for remote work through their immediate supervisor (or designee or other Management official). Requests made through the EFS shall be directed to the employee's immediate supervisor (or designee or other Management official). The approving official for remote work arrangements (approval, modification, or termination) is the lowest level Management official designated by the Assistant Secretary (or equivalent) for the program office, following coordination with the program office Funds Control/Budget Officer.

26. Incomplete Applications. Management shall notify employees of an incomplete Flexiplace application within two business days, barring extenuating circumstances.
27. Supervisory Approval. A bargaining unit employee's approved Flexiplace application shall be submitted by the supervisor or Management to the Program Office's Flexiplace Coordinator within two workdays of approval.
28. Approval/Denial Responses. Management shall approve or disapprove the employee's participation in the Flexiplace program in writing, within fifteen (15) business days upon receipt of a complete application, unless extenuating circumstances preclude processing within this time period.
29. Telework Pending Approval of Remote Work Request. Management shall consider permitting an employee who requests a remote work arrangement and is not currently teleworking to telework pending the final decision on the remote work application.
30. Handling of PII. Employees handling personally identifiable information (PII) or other sensitive information, barring national security classified information, are eligible to participate in remote work arrangements subject to Management approval. When addressing disclosure of PII, Management will take into consideration any factors beyond the employee's control.
31. Office Coverage. The Parties agree that when office coverage becomes a consideration in determining employees' eligibility to participate in remote work or telework, to the maximum extent practicable, Management will consider using existing technology, such as call forwarding or recorded messages with alternative contact information, to provide telephone coverage when employees telework or work remotely. Management may approve face-to-face video meetings instead of in-person interactions for situations other than supporting walk-in external customers or internal or external customers who require in-person support.
32. Locality Pay Information. The Department shall inform employees of the locality pay implications and effects (i.e., possible significant pay cuts) if they do not report to a HUD office at least two days per pay period and do not reside in a county within the HUD office's established locality pay area as determined in 5 CFR § 531.603. Upon request, information regarding the employee's individual circumstance will be provided to the employee. Employees shall have the option of withdrawing their remote work request.
33. Expenses. To the extent practicable, HUD shall consider certain costs to the agency, such as occasional local travel or occasional shipping of required equipment or files, to be de minimis for Flexiplace workers and not a reason to deny/terminate a Flexiplace arrangement. The Parties agree that bargaining unit employees must comply with the Federal Records Act, the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), the terms of litigation holds, discovery in litigation, and any requests for records by the Office of Inspector General.

IV. Denials of Flexiplace Requests, Termination or Modification of Flexiplace Arrangements, and Appeals

34. Basis for Denial, Modification, or Termination of Remote Work Arrangement. Any decision by Management to deny, modify, or terminate a remote work arrangement must be based on business needs, misconduct, or performance, not arbitrary or capricious reasons. Management shall provide the denial/modification/termination and the reason for the action in writing. Management shall not terminate, modify, or deny a remote work arrangement as a form of punishment or managerial personal preference.
35. Initial Appeal of Denial. An employee whose remote work request is disapproved initially has the right to appeal the decision within fifteen (15) calendar days to the next higher Management official above the deciding official within the employee's chain of command. If the appeal for remote or telework is denied, Management must notify the employee of their decision and provide the employee written justification for the denial within twenty-one (21) calendar days of receipt of the appeal.
36. Prior Notice. Barring extenuating circumstances, employees who are initially hired under remote work arrangements shall not be subject to having those remote work arrangements terminated unless the employee was informed, prior to accepting the job offer, that the remote work arrangement is subject to termination by the agency due to performance or business needs.
37. Termination or Modification of Remote Work Arrangements due to Performance. Supervisors may terminate remote work for performance-related reasons. Supervisors are strongly encouraged to consider warnings, modifications, and temporary suspensions of remote work before terminating an agreement. If an employee is terminated from remote work, they may reapply at any time.
38. Election of Grievance Process, EEO Complaint, or Appeal. Employees have the right to choose to grieve the denial or termination of their Flexiplace arrangement through any one of the following processes: the negotiated grievance process (within 45 days), file an EEO complaint, or appeal the action through the Employee Flexiplace System or directly to the supervisor (within 15 days). An employee is not required to appeal through the Employee Flexiplace System or directly to the supervisor prior to filing a grievance, EEO complaint or other statutory appeals procedure complaint.
39. Discussion with Union. By mutual agreement of the supervisor and the employee, an employee may discuss the denial or termination notice with the supervisor and have a union representative attend and participate in this discussion.
40. Notice of Termination of Remote Work Arrangement. If an employee's remote work is being terminated, supervisors will give written notification of at least two weeks to the affected employee before the termination date, unless emergency conditions exist, which may necessitate expedited termination. However, nothing in this provision overrides the provisions of Article 28 of the HUD-AFGE Agreement. A remote worker given a directed reassignment to a HUD office official duty station beyond 50 miles from their residence or alternative worksite shall be given at least 60 days to relocate, if required, unless renegotiated with the Union in accordance with Article 28, Section 28.05 of the HUD-AFGE Agreement.

41. Notice to Union. Any Management-initiated decision to terminate or modify a remote work arrangement for longer than one pay period requires notice to the Union.
42. Relocation Costs. When a remote work arrangement was initiated at the employee's request or Management terminates the remote work arrangement due to a decline in the employee's performance or an occurrence of misconduct, the employee will be responsible for covering their own costs to relocate to an agency duty station and will not seek relocation costs from HUD. Any employee relocation costs arising from supervisor-initiated remote work changes or terminations that result in a change to a different geographic area (e.g., changing from one HUD regional office to another) for reasons other than performance or misconduct will be paid by HUD in accordance with the GSA Federal Travel Regulations. Such arrangements must be coordinated with the Program Office's funds control/budget officer in advance of a determination that may create an entitlement to relocation costs.
43. Employee Decision to Terminate Flexiplace Arrangement. Employees may terminate participation in the Flexiplace program at any time, for any reason. Employees shall provide the termination notice to their supervisor in writing and state the effective date of the termination. Employees do not need to provide a reason. Employees who choose to terminate their participation in remote work may need to participate in desk sharing, hot desking, or hoteling temporarily until such time as sufficient workspace becomes available.

V. Implementation of a Remote Work or other Flexiplace Arrangement

44. Impact on Work Group. To the extent possible, bargaining unit employees should avoid any negative impact of Flexiplace arrangements on other members of the work group (e.g., normally, others in the office should not have to perform the duties assigned to someone else working remotely).
45. Perceived Performance. Employees' performance working remotely, teleworking or in the office shall be addressed in accordance with the provisions of Article 30.
46. Self-Certification of Time Worked. Employees who work remotely or telework, like employees who report to agency worksites, will self-validate their time using the current Departmental automated time-keeping system in accordance with the provisions in the Parties' Collective Bargaining Agreement.
 - a. In accordance with the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) guidance, remote working employees continue to be eligible for all Alternative Work Schedules, subject to Management approval. Remote workers will be treated the same as all other employees with regard to work reporting requirements. There will be no sign in or out.

- b. Microsoft Teams or its successor will not be used for time-keeping purposes.
- 47. Telephone Numbers. Remote workers will provide a telephone number where they may be reached by the supervisor and or, other Management officials. Management shall not require employees with a Flexiplace arrangement to provide a personal telephone number to HUD clients, or the public, in accordance with the Privacy Act.
 - a. Management shall not disseminate or publish employees' personal phone numbers or other personal information.
 - b. If an employee does not choose to share a personal telephone number, then HUD clients, and the public shall communicate with the employee by Microsoft Teams or other successor communications equipment/software, HUD-furnished cell phone, call-forwarding from a HUD telephone number if available and the employee chooses, voicemail retrieval and/or email.
 - c. If an employee uses a personal telephone to make outgoing work calls, the employee is permitted to block the personal phone number from appearing in Caller ID.
- 48. Supervisors' Contact Information. Supervisors will establish methods of communicating with their employees and ensure that all employees participating in the remote work program have alternative means of contacting the supervisor in the event that email is not available (due to HUD system failures, weather, or other conditions).
- 49. Video Conferencing. Management may request that bargaining unit employees turn on the video camera in Microsoft Teams or successor communications equipment/software to support interaction in training, collaboration, and customer engagement. Management will provide training to employees on applying background effects to maximize employee privacy. All HUD workers will be treated the same for these requirements.
- 50. Contact Outside Duty Hours. Supervisors and managers shall not contact employees by phone (text or voice call) outside of known duty hours barring emergency situations. Emergency, as defined in Article 2 of the Parties' Collective Bargaining Agreement, includes situations that cause substantial disruption, damage and destruction to properties and services; it is distinct from an urgent situation that can be resolved promptly during business hours. Employees on Flexiplace arrangements are not obligated to respond to emails received outside of duty hours until the employee's next business day at the earliest barring known emergency situations. Written Flexiplace agreements may not require employees to respond outside of duty hours to emails, text messages, voicemail, or other means of contact.
- 51. Use of Microsoft Teams. Employees may be required to use business communications platform software, such as Microsoft Teams, or a successor system(s), to attend meetings with supervisors, co-workers, or HUD customers.

Although bargaining-unit employees should remain logged-in to Microsoft Teams throughout the workday, they are not required to show their Teams status.

52. Loss of and Damage to Privately Owned Property. A bargaining unit employee has the right to file a claim against the government for loss, theft, or damage of privately owned property officially approved by Management in accordance with HUD Administrative Services Policy Handbook 2200.01, Chapter 9: Personal Property Management, Section 1, No. 6.C., the Federal Tort Claims Act (24 CFR Part 17, Subpart A), and the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act of 1964 (24 CFR, Part 17, Subpart B).
53. Early Dismissal for Goodwill. Early dismissals at the employee's official HUD worksite when the Agency announces early release for holidays and special events, shall be granted to Flexiplace workers to the same extent as granted to those employees reporting in person to the official HUD worksite.

VI. Temporary Modifications to Flexiplace Arrangements

54. Employee-Requested Modifications. Employees may request temporary modifications of their remote work locations, including both working at an agency office or working in a different geographic location. If the request involves a change not to exceed two pay periods, the request must be submitted in writing to the supervisor and approved or denied in writing by the supervisor. Any change that extends beyond two pay periods requires a written request to the supervisor, written approval from the Assistant Secretary or designee and may require a change in the duty station. HUD employees are not authorized to perform work outside of the United States under the Flexiplace program. The only exception is on the rare occasion that an employee is approved by both HUD and the Department of State as a sponsored Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) or subsequent Department of State policy regarding sponsored DETOs.
 - a. Employees approved for remote work may request a temporary change in their Flexiplace arrangement (e.g., reporting to the office on a regular basis) to temporarily support an assignment that can be performed more effectively at the agency worksite. Upon completion of this status or project, the employee will return to their remote work status.
 - b. The temporary changes outlined above shall not affect the employee's bargaining unit status. Employees may report to the HUD office nearest to where they are located, providing there is space available. Locality pay will be determined in accordance with 5 CFR Part 531.
 - c. Requests that increase an employee's presence at an agency's worksite will be subject to space availability, and may require the employee to hot desk, share a desk, or hotel (reserve space).
55. Return to Permanent Arrangement. Employees whose requests for temporary changes to their Flexiplace arrangements are approved shall not be required to reapply for their permanent arrangement at the conclusion of the temporary change.

- 56. Limits on Change Requests. An employee may request modifications to their work location at any time. If an employee is requesting to report to a HUD office location, employees may need to participate in shared space arrangements (e.g., hoteling and/or hotdesking) temporarily until sufficient workspace becomes available.
- 57. Travel to Agency Worksite. When remote or mobile workers need to go to an agency worksite either due to management direction, failure of provided equipment (e.g., a laptop), or to obtain or deliver required materials, Management shall provide the employees with travel orders arrangements, in accordance with the requirements of the most current federal travel regulations (e.g., if the official duty station is outside the 50-miles radius). All travel, including local travel, requires advance supervisory approval in writing.
- 58. Hold Harmless. Because remote workers are employed with the understanding that they are not required to report to the agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis, they shall not be subject to disciplinary action when they are not able to comply with requests to report to the agency or other designated worksite within one (1) day notice for factors beyond their control; this includes not being subject to termination of the remote work arrangement based on that reason.

VII. Reimbursements

- 59. Supplies. Management agrees that the Department will provide supplies e.g., paper, pens, staples and/or file folders, to remote workers that are routinely provided to employees in the office.
- 60. Shipping. Remote or mobile workers shall not be responsible for Agency shipping supplies, shipping and handling costs, and safe delivery of any equipment or materials shipped through a third party.

VIII. Reasonable Accommodations

- 61. Employees with previously approved reasonable accommodations for full-time telework/work-at-home are not required to reapply for the Flexiplace Policy nor submit new Flexiplace applications/agreements.

Effective Date: This supplement shall become effective upon signature of the Parties.

NATIONAL SUPPLEMENT 34
BETWEEN
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT
AND

SUBJECT: Amendments to Article 18, Telework, in the 2015 AFGE-HUD Collective Bargaining Agreement

SCOPE: This Supplemental Agreement modifies the current Telework Article due to the Department's implementation of a broader Flexiplace policy, which includes remote work and mobile work. The Department and Council 222 reached agreement on Supplement 33, Flexiplace Policy. This Supplement does not waive any rights of the Parties and modifies only those specific provisions of Article 18 mentioned below.

1. Limitations. The Parties agree that no provision of Article 18 other than those specifically identified below are modified by this Supplement.
2. Precedence. The Parties agree that HUD's new Flexiplace Policy does not supersede any provisions of the HUD-AFGE Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA) unless explicitly stated in this Supplemental Agreement. If there is any conflict between the new proposed Flexiplace Policy and the provisions of this Supplemental Agreement, the terms of this Supplement will govern. If there is any conflict between the new proposed Flexiplace Policy and provisions of the CBA that are not modified under this Supplement, the terms of the CBA will govern.
3. Section 18.01, General. The Parties agree to replace Section 18.01 in its entirety with the following language:

Section 18.01, General.

- (1) Definitions. For the purpose of this article, telework shall be defined as in 5 U.S.C. § 6501: "a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of [the] employee's position . . . from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work." Telework is simply a way of getting work done from a different location.
 - a. Regular and recurring shall mean a schedule in which at least two specified days each pay period are planned to be at a stated worksite (e.g., a HUD office, home, or other approved alternative worksite) as a matter of routine.
 - b. Routine telework is telework that occurs as part of an ongoing regular and recurring schedule with the telework day or days specified in a written telework agreement between the employee and employee's supervisor.
 - c. Situational telework is telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis and the hours or days teleworked are not part of an ongoing, and regular telework schedule. Permission for an employee to participate in situational telework must be specified in an existing written telework agreement between the employee and employee's supervisor unless an agreement is already in place for regular and routine telework.

- (2) Departmental Policy. In accordance with § 359 of Public Law 106-346, HUD's Flexiplace Policy dated January 10, 2022, provides the telework policy for the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Under these provisions the Department encourages the implementation of telework to the maximum extent possible. No individual office or program area is authorized to establish a telework policy or modify or amend the HUD Flexiplace Policy dated January 10, 2022, without the written approval of the Chief Human Capital Officer and/or the fulfillment of bargaining obligations with HUD AFGE Council 222. If Management makes any changes to the HUD Flexiplace Policy dated January 10, 2022, either before or upon implementing it as a numbered handbook, those changes shall be subject to notice and bargaining obligations under the CBA.

4. Section 18.03, Roles and Responsibilities. The Parties agree to add the following as Section 18.03(2)(d):

- (d) Employees must ensure that appropriate dependent care (i.e., children, elders, and/or loved ones) is obtained and utilized during work hours while participating in the telework program. While the presence of dependents in the household is not an absolute bar for employees working at an alternate worksite, employees must not engage in dependent care activities when performing official duties. While an occasional, brief interruption may occur when a dependent is present in the home, employees must be careful to keep interruptions to a minimum to avoid disruptions in performing and accomplishing work. In lieu of requesting leave for interruptions that are not brief, the employee may request to extend their workday to make up for the missed duty time by the corresponding amount of time used with notification to the supervisor, as long as extending the workday does not incur any overtime liabilities for the Department. The employee is responsible for notifying the supervisor when such an interruption exists which briefly extends their workday. In the event the level of care needed for a dependent prevents or significantly disrupts performing or accomplishing work, employees shall notify their supervisors as soon as possible about the situation preventing the teleworker from continuing work. Employees shall then request approval for appropriate leave or use of earned compensatory time or credit hours while performing dependent care responsibilities.

5. Section 18.04, Application Requirements and Process. The Parties agree to replace Section 18.04 in its entirety with the following language:

Section 18.04, Application Requirements and Process.

- (1) Employees on a five (5) day per week schedule may telework up to four (4) days per week. Employees on compressed work schedules may telework up to three (3) days per week during a compressed week. Teleworking employees are required to report to the office at least twice a pay period.

- (2) Once an agreement is approved, employees may begin teleworking upon mutual agreement between the employee and their immediate supervisor.
 - (3) Employees who are denied telework or whose request is modified by the supervisor may select either the appeal process in HUD Flexiplace Policy dated January 10, 2022, -or- the grievance procedures outlined in Article 51 of the Collective Bargaining Agreement.
 - (4) Telework agreements are not required to be renewed once they have been approved. They remain in place until either party decides to modify or terminate the agreement. The telework agreement in place at the time of the implementation of this agreement will remain in effect unless the employee is no longer eligible for telework. If the employee requests a change based on the provisions of this supplement, a new agreement will be prepared. The self-certification safety checklist and IT approval form are not required to be resubmitted unless there are substantial changes in the teleworking situation.
 - (5) Employees will be required to enter current agreements and new applications in the Electronic Flexiplace System (EFS) once it is available for use.
 - (6) Employees may apply for telework at any time.
 - (7) Employees who chose not to participate in the program will not be penalized.
 - (8) Modifications to the telework agreement do not require a new Rules of Behavior for Remote Access User Agreement (HUD-22018); Telework Self-Certification Safety Checklist (HUD-25229) or IDT/HQOTC concurrence.
 - (9) Communication levels and the methods of communication between employees and supervisors are expected to remain the same whether an employee is working in the office or teleworking. The communication requirements of the manager will be discussed with employee and identified in the telework application and agreement. Teleworkers will provide a telephone number where they may be reached by the supervisor and or, other Management officials.
 - (10) Management agrees not to disseminate or require an employee to publish personal information such as home or cell phone numbers.
 - (11) Management agrees that the remote work site is not a governmental facility and that employees have the freedom to safeguard, insure and maintain the privacy of their home work place.
6. Section 18.06, Modification of Telework Agreements. The Parties agree to replace Section 18.06(2) with the following language:
- (2) The Parties recognize that an employee's telework schedule constitutes an agreement between employee and supervisor, and that changes to the schedule may affect the method, timing, and cost of commuting as well as the scheduling and cost of dependent care. If a supervisor requires a temporary modification to the telework arrangement based on the needs of the office, the supervisor shall give the employee reasonable advance notice and shall provide as much notice as possible; under normal circumstances such as when information is available in advance (e.g., when scheduling training), this shall be no less than one full pay period. The employee may engage in discussions with the supervisor to achieve a mutually agreeable resolution if there is any conflict about the proposed temporary modification.

Effective Date: This supplement shall become effective upon signature of the Parties.

SUPPLEMENT 2022-01

SUPPLEMENT ON FLEXIPLACE PROGRAM (WORK FLEXIBILITY ARRANGEMENTS) 2022

This Supplement is the Agreement between NFFE Locals 1450, 1804 and 259 (“Locals”) and the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (“HUD” or “Department”)

SECTION 1: GENERAL.

The parties recognize that many HUD employees have worked successfully under maximum telework arrangements since March 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic. In many instances, the productivity of HUD has increased. The parties agree that work flexibility policies that encourage remote work, expanded telework, mobile work, and flexible work hours, offer both HUD and employees an opportunity to reduce expenses and improve or continue productivity gains while significantly increasing employee satisfaction. Capturing and enhancing the work flexibility arrangements that resulted in HUD’s response to the challenges of the COVID-19 pandemic is a benefit to HUD and its employees.

Tools, such as video conferencing, e-mail, easy access to information via the internet, teleconferencing, paperless work processes, and other innovations, all of which were available before the pandemic or were innovatively made available during the pandemic enabled employees, including supervisors and managers, to perform their duties remotely.

The Department encourages and fully supports the use of work flexibilities and management’s efforts to utilize this flexibility tool in a way that enhances the work of the Department and the work/ life of its employees.

Work flexibility arrangements can serve multiple purposes and can have multiple benefits for both the Department and employees when implemented effectively. Flexible work arrangements are of particular interest for their benefits in the following areas:

- Recruiting and retaining the best possible workforce – particularly workers who have high expectations of a technologically forward-thinking workplace and any worker who values work/life balance;
- Helping employees manage long commutes and other work/life issues that, if not addressed, can have a negative impact on their effectiveness or lead to employees leaving the Department;
- Reducing traffic congestion, emissions, and infrastructure impact in urban areas, thereby improving the environment;
- Ensuring continuity of essential functions in the event of national or local emergencies;
and

- Helping the Department achieve cost savings with real estate footprint reductions.

Flexiplace arrangements are not an employee entitlement, but they should not be used as an arbitrary management tool, a disincentive, or an incentive. However, the Department supports the use of Flexiplace arrangements and management's efforts to utilize this flexibility tool in a way that enhances the work of the Department and the work/life of its employees. OPM states that agencies should leverage their experiences with expanded telework during the pandemic to integrate telework programs into strategic workforce plans. As such, the performance of Flexiplace participants will be evaluated consistent with the applicable HUD performance management system, such that Flexiplace participants are treated the same as non-participants regarding performance management. Telework eligibility should be based on the requirements outlined in this supplement, and not the personal or managerial preference of individual managers.

Work flexibility arrangements and matters related to work flexibility arrangements are being bargained in this supplement pursuant to 5 USC § 7101 et seq. (Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute "Labor Relations Statute") and Executive Order 14003, January 22, 2021. Management will issue notice to the Union and an opportunity to bargain subsequent negotiable changes to work flexibility arrangements and matters related to work flexibility arrangements pursuant to 5 USC § 7101 et seq. (Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute "Labor Relations Statute") and Executive Order 14003, January 22, 2021, while in effect.

HUD's Flexiplace Policy, draft dated January 10, 2022 ("Flexiplace Policy"), describes multiple work flexibility arrangements, provisions or policies which may not have been addressed in or differ from HUD's Telework Handbook, 625.1, as well as other related issuances, including but not limited to remote work, mobile work, time, attendance and pay, and others. HUD's Flexiplace Policy, where not otherwise superseded in this Supplement, provides the guidance for telework, remote work and mobile work for NFFE bargaining unit employees. Where the Flexiplace Policy and this Supplement conflict, the Supplement governs. Any changes to matters affecting conditions of employment regarding Flexiplace not addressed in this Supplement that trigger a duty to bargain are reserved for future bargaining.

This Supplement modifies or supersedes certain related provisions in the Locals' respective collective bargaining agreements (CBA").

SECTION 2: DEFINITIONS.

- A. Telework: The term 'telework' or 'teleworking' refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite other than the location (official or agency worksite) from which the employee would otherwise work.
- B. Regular/Routine Telework: The performance of work from an alternative worksite for an agreed upon portion of a pay period on a regular basis.

In order to be considered regular telework, an employee must be regularly scheduled to work at an alternative worksite for a minimum of one day per pay period. Employees must report to the agency worksite a minimum of 2 days per pay period under this type of telework to preserve locality pay and in accordance with regulation to ensure that employee as well as agency performance are not adversely affected. All telework employees may be approved to work at an alternate worksite up to eight (8) days per pay period under a flexitour schedule or the maximum number of telework days consistent with the requirements of regular/routine telework in this section (Section 2(B)) and this Supplement.

- C. Situational Telework: An arrangement where an employee may telework on a case by case or ad hoc basis.

Situational telework may be approved to accommodate work/life balance needs (e.g. medical appointments, parent/teacher conferences, dependent care responsibilities, etc.) when commuting to the official worksite is impractical. Situational telework shall not be a permanent supplement to the regular telework schedule. However, all employees with regular telework schedules may request situational telework days to temporarily extend an employee's regular telework schedule where appropriate. OPM has issued guidance, including examples, where situational telework is appropriate.

Situational telework is an additional and critical workplace flexibility allowing the agency to satisfy its mission, by allowing employees to continue performing their duties instead of taking time off, while enhancing employee satisfaction with the agency.

Situational telework includes, but is not limited to, emergency telework, which includes the following: work away from the agency worksite based on an emergency situation (for example, wildfires; earthquakes; extreme heat; heavy smoke; transportation failures that significantly increase commute time which would otherwise be used productively) or needs such as inclement weather (including heavy fog or rain, flooding, snow, mudslides, Santa Ana winds, etc.), natural disasters, or other needs such as office closure due to office and/or building repairs, an emergency event that affects office operations such as major transportation strikes and protests, riots, etc. (which may or may not be associated with a COOP event Emergency Situation).

- a. In the event of an emergency, an employee with a telework agreement which includes approval for situational telework may request same-day situational telework meeting the criteria of this section, provided that the employee is not scheduled for an on-site activity necessitating the employee's physical presence at the agency worksite. The request to the supervisor shall be provided as soon as practicable, and no later than one hour after the start of the employee's work day. In the circumstance of an emergency, a supervisor may deny situational or unscheduled telework if the employee is not eligible for telework or, if there is an on-site activity that necessitates the employee's physical presence at the agency worksite.

- b. In the circumstance of an emergency, a response shall be provided to the employee as soon as practicable, normally within one (1) hour of the employee's request.
- c. In the case of an emergency, the employee shall be allowed to request unscheduled leave or may be approved, if appropriate, to use administrative – weather and safety leave in lieu of unscheduled telework.

D. Temporary Situational Telework Arrangements (Retention of Locality Pay):

Supervisors or managers may approve temporary situational telework arrangements at an alternative worksite outside of the employee's locality pay area for a discrete time period. The request should typically not exceed two pay periods, and the request must be submitted in writing via email to the supervisor and approved or denied in writing via email by the supervisor.

Employees needing temporary telework arrangements for extended periods longer than two pay periods should work with their manager or supervisor to determine if their situation may warrant telework as a reasonable accommodation or consider applying for remote work. The temporary situational telework arrangement should generally be used only in cases where: (1) the employee is expected to return to work at the official worksite in the near future; or (2) the employee is expected to resume routine telework in the near future. The intent of this special circumstance is to address certain situations where the employee is temporarily unable to report to the official worksite for reasons beyond the employee's control. Examples of appropriate temporary situational telework arrangements include:

- a. Emergency situations preventing the employee from commuting to the official worksite, such as a severe weather emergency or a pandemic health crisis.
- b. The employee is on personal approved leave, which may include for purposes of caring for a family member, but is available and approved to telework for a temporary period at an alternative worksite.
- c. When an employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than the official worksite.
- d. When the employee is in temporary duty travel status away from the official worksite.
- e. When an employee is recovering from an injury or medical condition.
 - i. Allowing an employee to telework in this circumstance allows for the continued accomplishment of Agency work while an employee is recovering from a medical condition or injury that prevents them from reporting to the office as required in section 2B but does not affect the employee's ability to perform their regular work assignment at an alternative worksite. Medical documentation certified by a licensed physician or other licensed health practitioner justifying the need for this telework must be provided to the supervisor or reasonable accommodation office unless the requirement is waived. This type of telework is a temporary telework arrangement. HUD shall make every effort to review medical telework requests on an expedited basis.

- ii. Employees with medical conditions should contact the reasonable accommodation office to determine if their situation may warrant telework as a reasonable accommodation or may consider applying for remote work.
 - iii. HUD may grant telework, leave or a combination of leave and telework to accommodate the employee and in consultation with the employee.
 - iv. Employees with work compensable injuries will be managed under applicable workers' compensation regulations.
- E. Teleworker: An employee who enters into a voluntary arrangement where the employee, under a written telework agreement, performs work at an alternative worksite for an agreed upon period of time.
- F. Agency worksite refers to an official Federal agency location where work activities are based, generally considered a centralized location of an employee's assigned organization. The term regular worksite is also used to describe agency worksite.
- G. Alternative worksite: An approved worksite other than the agency worksite from which the employee performs his/her official duties. For teleworkers, this is the employee's approved telework site, and for remote workers, this is the approved remote site. Alternative worksites may include the employee's residence, or another location where there is connectivity to high-speed internet and there is an office setting conducive to accomplishing work requirements in a safe and secure manner. An employee may have a temporary alternative worksite. Alternative worksites may be approved on an ad hoc basis for all forms of telework.
- H. Official worksite is the agency worksite for teleworkers. For a remote worker, the official worksite is the alternative worksite to which the agency and the employee agreed (e.g. the employee's residence). The official worksite is the location of an employee's duty station for pay purposes as documented on an employee's Standard Form 50.
- I. Desk-Sharing: An arrangement in which two or more employees share use of a single workspace where each employee has a designated day or time for use of the workspace.

- a. Each employee utilizing desk-sharing shall be provided with a lockable storage space in or adjacent to the shared workstation to keep limited personal items. In circumstances where storage space is not immediately available, Management will provide space as soon as practicable.
- J. Hoteling: An arrangement where employees use non-dedicated, non-permanent workspaces assigned for use by reservation on an as-needed basis.
- a. Each employee utilizing hoteling shall be provided with a lockable storage space in or adjacent to the shared workstation to keep limited personal items. In circumstances where storage space is not immediately available, Management will provide space as soon as practicable.
- K. Hot-Desking: An arrangement in which employees use non-dedicated, non-permanent workspaces on a first come, first served basis.
- a. Each employee utilizing hot-desking shall be provided with a lockable storage space in or adjacent to the shared workstation to keep limited personal items. In circumstances where storage space is not immediately available, Management will provide space as soon as practicable.
- L. Work-at-Home: A work flexibility arrangement that allows an employee to work from home. Generally, this may occur under a reasonable accommodation or other approved agency agreement.
- M. Hybrid work: This refers to a temporary arrangement of combining multiple forms of telework, work schedules or both, described in this supplement, MOU or collective bargaining agreement, to provide employee requested flexibilities, upon approval. A hybrid work arrangement must be approved in accordance with this supplement, and generally, is approved by the person's immediate supervisor.
- N. Remote Work: Remote work is a type of alternative work arrangement by which an employee, under a written remote work agreement, is scheduled to perform work at an alternative worksite within or outside the local commuting area of an agency worksite and is not expected to report to an agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis.
- O. Mobile Work: Work characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in customer or other varying worksites. Examples of mobile work include site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management, and work performed while commuting, traveling between worksites, or on Temporary Duty (TDY). For the purpose of this Supplement, mobile work is described in 5 CFR § 531.605 and OPM 2021 Guide to Telework and Remote Work in the Federal Government, Official Worksite and Pay, at 31.

- P. Flexiplace/ Telework Managing Officer. The Flexiplace/ Telework Managing Officer (“TMO”) oversees telework, remote work and other flexible arrangements, for the Department. In this capacity, the TMO serves as an advisor to the Department leadership including the Chief Human Capital Officer. Additionally, the TMO provides guidance and supervision to ensure the Department’s work flexibility programs are administered in accordance with laws and collective bargaining agreements.
- Q. Work Day Flexibility: Flexiplace participants must be careful to keep interruptions to a minimum to avoid disruptions in performing and accomplishing work. In lieu of requesting leave for interruptions that are not brief, the teleworker or remote worker may request to extend their workday to make up for the missed duty time by the corresponding amount of time used, as long it does not incur any overtime liabilities, including suffered or permitted overtime, for the Department. Such requests must be preapproved by the supervisor. In the event the interruption significantly disrupts performing or accomplishing work, employees should notify their supervisors as soon as possible about the situation preventing the teleworker or remote worker from continuing work. Employees should then request approval for appropriate leave.

Section 3: Criteria for Telework Arrangements

- A. All HUD positions and employees may be eligible to participate in a flexible work arrangement as long as they meet the eligibility criteria in this Supplement, which are defined below. Telework is not available to employees where prohibited by the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010. (Eligibility for remote work is outlined below in Section 19.) Requests for telework will be granted or denied in accordance with this Supplement and by law.
- B. Telework Eligibility:
- a. Performance: Although an official record of performance issues does not automatically exclude an employee from telework, a record of performance actions or other corrective action may be considered as it relates to the employee’s ability to successfully work at an alternative worksite.
 - b. Technology: The employee must have appropriate access to secure, reliable internet service that will accommodate remote access to HUD programs at the alternative worksite, if required to perform the duties of the position. On a rare, case-by-case basis, supervisors may approve employees to participate in the Flexiplace Program without secure, reliable internet service as long as their work does not require access to HUD systems.
 - c. Additional Factors for Consideration: Supervisors should consider factors in addition to the basic eligibility criteria when evaluating an employee’s request to participate in telework, but these factors cannot be used to arbitrarily restrict participation. Factors appropriate for consideration include:
 - i. Conduct: Although an official record of misconduct does not automatically exclude an employee from telework, a record of disciplinary or other corrective action may be considered as it relates to the employee’s ability to successfully work at an alternative worksite.

- ii. Attendance: An employee with a documented history of unsubstantiated excessive absences or being charged with Absence without Leave (AWOL) may not be a suitable candidate for telework.
- iii. Office Coverage: The Parties agree that when office coverage becomes a consideration in determining employees' eligibility to participate in remote work or telework, to the maximum extent practicable, without diminishing agency performance, Management will use existing technology, such as call forwarding or recorded messages with alternative contact information, to provide telephone coverage when employees telework or work remotely.
- iv. Supervision: Telework may not be suitable for employees who have not demonstrated the ability to work independently, or for employees in developmental or trainee positions, where on-site supervision is required.
- v. Budget Constraints: Appropriate equipment needed to perform the employee's duties at the alternative worksite may not be available within allocated resources unless the affected employee provides appropriate, personal equipment authorized for use by OCIO or the HITS Help Desk.

d. Position Requirements:

Employees eligible for telework are persons engaged in tasks and work activities that are portable, do not depend on the employee being at the traditional worksite, and are conducive to supervisory oversight at the alternative worksite.

e. Approval, denial and termination decisions must be consistent with the terms of this Supplement and based on business needs, conduct, or performance as reflected by the performance standards, not arbitrary or capricious reasons. Supervisors are strongly encouraged to consider warnings, modifications, and temporary suspensions of telework before terminating an agreement. If an employee is terminated from telework, they may reapply at any time once the issue(s) is resolved. Diminished employee performance while working under a telework agreement may be demonstrated, among other things, by non-portable work which may only be accomplished at the agency worksite.

- 1. Conduct: Employees, whether teleworking or working in the office, are held accountable for their performance and conduct. Employees should remember that workplace policies and performance expectations are the same regardless of the employee's location.

C. Unless otherwise provided for by regulation or policy, commuting costs are the responsibility of the employee.

D. All teleworkers and remote workers shall maintain a current, approved Flexiplace agreement, which shall encompass all Flexiplace arrangements.

- E. Flexible work arrangements include Regular/Routine Telework, Situational Telework, and Remote Work which may be requested by the employee, approved by the supervisor (Assistant Secretary or their designee for remote work), and may be a hybrid of the various identified telework arrangements in accordance with this supplement and as outlined in Section 2M above, in recognition of the agency and employee-centric goals established by OPM and HUD.
- a. An employee whose alternative worksite is outside of the agency worksite locality pay area because of a reorganization or office closure which transferred the employee to the current agency worksite shall be allowed to continue as an employee assigned to the current agency worksite, for the purpose of designating an official worksite, as long as they report to the agency worksite consistent with the terms of this Supplement.
 - b. Teleworkers who need to request additional situational telework on top of their regularly scheduled telework days may request Temporary Situational Telework Arrangements (Retention of Locality Pay) in accordance with Section 2D above, or remote work.
- F. Where an employee's duties require on-site presence on a routine basis such as the handling of secure materials inappropriate for telework, upon the employee's request, the supervisor shall make a good-faith effort to group and schedule the employee's duties in a manner that allows the employee the maximum number of telework days, to the extent practicable. Management may require the use of existing technology, such as call forwarding or recorded messages with alternative contact information, to provide telephone coverage when employees telework or work remotely.
- G. Teleworkers will provide a telephone number where they may be reached by the supervisor and or, other management officials for urgent matters. Management shall make every effort to use TEAMS or HUD email to contact employees during duty hours, unless the employee is unavailable on TEAMS or HUD email or an arrangement is otherwise agreed to between the supervisor and the employee. Management shall not require employees with a Flexiplace arrangement to provide a personal telephone number to HUD clients, or the public, in accordance with the Privacy Act. If an employee does not choose to share a personal telephone number, then HUD clients, and the public shall communicate with the employee by Microsoft Teams or other successor communications equipment/software, call-forwarding from a HUD telephone number if available and the employee chooses, voicemail retrieval and/or email.
- H. Caregiving, including Dependent and Elder Care: Telework may be used as a flexibility to help employees balance caregiving responsibilities including dependent or eldercare responsibilities to meet their family obligations and work responsibilities. However, it is not appropriate to use telework if the employee is unable to work due to caregiving responsibilities. Employees must ensure that appropriate dependent care (i.e., children, elders, and/or loved ones) is obtained and utilized during work hours while participating in the Flexiplace program. While the presence of dependents in the household is not an absolute bar to working at the alternative worksite, employees must not engage in dependent care activities when performing official duties. While an occasional, brief interruption may occur when a dependent is present in the home, employees must be careful to keep interruptions to a minimum to avoid disruptions in work accomplishment. In the event the level of care needed for a dependent prevents or significantly disrupts work performance, employees should notify their supervisors as soon as possible about the situation preventing them from continuing work. Employees should then request approval for appropriate leave while performing dependent care responsibilities, or may request the work day flexibilities outlined in Section 2Q.

- G. Reasonable Accommodation and Telework (“Work at Home”): Telework can be used as a tool to accommodate qualified employees with disabilities under the Agency’s reasonable accommodation process. Employees seeking to telework as a reasonable accommodation should follow the process utilized in the respective collective bargaining agreements. Reasonable Accommodation requests are submitted to the employee’s supervisor or the Agency Reasonable Accommodation office.

SECTION 4: PREREQUISITE TRAINING.

- A. All employees and supervisors/managers must complete Flexiplace training or orientation in accordance with this Supplement and the Flexiplace policy.

SECTION 5: Application and Approval Process

- A. Participation in a telework arrangement, generally, is voluntary under the terms and conditions of this Supplement and applicable collective bargaining agreements. Nonetheless, all employees must have completed telework training to ensure that all employees are telework capable to carry out the mission of HUD in emergencies, e.g. during a pandemic, and other situations requiring work at alternative sites.
- B. All employees with a current approved telework agreement must enter their existing telework agreements into the new Electronic Flexiplace System (EFS). All current, approved telework applications remain in effect pursuant to existing collective bargaining agreements. New applications and modifications to existing telework agreements shall be made and approved or denied through the Electronic Flexiplace System as bargained. Until EFS becomes available, as bargained, employees may submit their Flexiplace request in DocuSign using the Flexiplace Application and Agreement form which is negotiated between the parties and modified from the prior telework form to conform with the terms of this Supplement.
- C. The approving official for routine and all other Telework arrangements is the employee’s immediate supervisor or designee.
- D. After receipt of an application, an acknowledgement that the application has been received, verbal or written, will be provided to the employee within 2 workdays.

Existing teleworkers requesting a modification may remain on their current approved telework status until a final determination is rendered on the submitted application.

- E. The complete telework application shall be reviewed to determine if the employee meets the criteria for telework arrangements pursuant to this Supplement and shall be approved or denied within ten (10) workdays for telework. For current employees applying for remote work during this initial review phase, the approval or denial period shall be ten (10) workdays, barring extenuating circumstances, e.g. supervisor's absence. The approval or denial period for employees applying more than 60 days after the signing of this agreement shall be fifteen (15) workdays for remote work.
- F. The agency shall demonstrate the Electronic Flexiplace System (EFS) or proposed application software for telework/remote work as well as provide any related training documents and provide copies of the proposed telework/remote work application that will be utilized electronically in the EFS and all related documents for review and bargaining prior to implementation.

Section 6: Denial of Flexiplace application

- A. If the telework application is denied, the supervisor must notify the employee of their decision within ten (10) workdays. If the remote work application is being denied, the supervisor must notify current employees being denied remote work during this initial review phase within ten (10) workdays, barring extenuating circumstances, e.g. supervisor's absence. For employees applying for remote work more than 60 days after the signing of this agreement, the supervisor must notify employees of their decision within fifteen (15) workdays. The supervisor shall provide the employee with written justification for the denial on the application form.
 - 1) The explanation will identify the reason for the denial based on the criteria outlined in this Supplement.
 - 2) The collective bargaining agreements encourage informal resolutions to potential grievances. Employees are encouraged to reach out to their supervisors to discuss concerns prior to filing a grievance.
- B. The employee may request a reconsideration of the denial of the telework or remote work request to the next management level above the approving official.
 - a. The employee must request reconsideration within 15 workdays of receipt of denial.
 - b. The request for reconsideration must be submitted to the official deciding the appeal, accompanied by reasons the employee believes are relevant.

- C. The deciding official will render a decision in writing within 20 workdays from the date the employee submits the request for reconsideration.
- D. Employees have the right to choose to grieve the denial or termination of their Flexiplace application through the negotiated grievance process, file an EEO complaint, or appeal the action through reconsideration in the Employee Flexiplace System, within fifteen 15 workdays. The limitations period for filing a grievance shall commence on the day the deciding official, in Paragraph A, immediately above, issues a decision.

SECTION 7: Flexiplace Agreement.

- A. A general Flexiplace agreement is required for all teleworkers and remote workers and constitutes an agreement between the employee and the agency authorizing a flexible work arrangement satisfying the requirements of this Supplement and relevant CBA's.
- B. The Flexiplace agreement for routine teleworkers shall indicate the days on which the employee is working at an alternative worksite and any days the employee may be scheduled to report to the employee's official worksite. An employee not regularly scheduled for telework under a telework agreement may apply for situational telework.
 - a. A temporary change of a work schedule, including alternate work schedule and flexible work schedules as well as telework days may be requested and approved on an ad hoc basis without modifying the approved telework agreement, in accordance with Section 8.

SECTION 8: Modification of a Flexiplace Agreement.

- A. Each manager/supervisor is responsible for evaluating the impact of flexible work arrangements.

Employees may request temporary modifications of their Flexiplace work locations. If the request involves a change not to exceed two pay periods, the request must be submitted in writing via email to the supervisor and approved or denied in writing via email by the supervisor.

- B. An employee may request a modification of a telework or remote work arrangement that will last longer than two pay periods at least fifteen (15) workdays before the desired implementation of the requested change. Approval or denial shall be in accordance with the terms of this Supplement for approving or denial of a telework or remote work request. The same timeframes for an initial Flexiplace application will apply. If an employee is requesting to report to a HUD office location, employees may need to participate in shared space arrangements (e.g. hoteling and/or hotdesking) or be seated in alternate program areas or workstations temporarily until sufficient workspace becomes available that meets the requirements of the Local's CBA and this Supplement. The parties agree to reserve the implementation of desk-sharing, hoteling, and hot-desking for later bargaining upon demand of either party.

- C. Additional procedures for modification of a remote work arrangement are outlined in Section 19F.
- D. A supervisor may modify a Flexiplace arrangement for reasons outlined in Section 3A and B, or a substantive violation of the terms of the Flexiplace agreement.
 - a. The supervisor shall provide at least one pay period of notice to the employee of the intent to permanently modify the employee's telework arrangement.
 - b. Permanent modifications to a telework arrangement shall be subject to the same criteria for approval or denial of a telework request and shall be subject to the same procedures for approval or denial of telework.
- E. Supervisors may require a teleworker to report to duty at the official or other designated worksite on his/her scheduled telework day(s) where work requires on-site activity and alternative methods cannot achieve the same results. This provision does not permanently modify the employee's telework arrangement.
 - a. The supervisor, by email, shall give the employee at least three workdays advance notice to the extent practicable.
 - b. The supervisor shall offer the employee a choice of the date and time to perform the on-site activity where practicable.
 - c. Reporting to the agency worksite will last no longer than is necessary to complete the on-site activity and the employee may request to commute home on their own time, and complete the workday when returning to the alternate worksite under the provisions of Section 2Q.
 - d. The supervisor may allow the employee to work another day in the same week from an alternate worksite, to the extent practicable, when the employee's duties required a full day on-site.
 - e. Requiring the employee to report to the agency worksite is not a termination or permanent modification of the telework arrangement.
 - f. Under an exigent circumstance, the supervisor may request same day reporting. For same day reporting to the official worksite under this provision, if the request occurs after the tour of duty begins, the commute time to the office is considered as part of the tour of duty.

- i. Management must take into consideration the distance from the alternative worksite and transportation options available to the employee and allow adequate time for the employee to report.
- ii. For teleworkers, any costs incurred reporting to the office, e.g. public transportation, is at the employee's expense as a normal commuting expense unless otherwise provided by law or policy.

Section 9: Termination of Telework Arrangements

- A. Each supervisor is responsible for evaluating if the employee continues to meet the criteria for a telework arrangement, or has become ineligible for telework, pursuant to the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and this Supplement.
- B. Prior to termination of the telework arrangement, a supervisor must provide at least one pay period of notice, unless exigent conditions exist, to the employee of the proposed termination and the reasons for the proposed termination, which reasons shall be pursuant to the terms of this Supplement or by statute.
- C. The employee may request an extension of an additional pay period and the supervisor shall grant the requested extension where the termination imposes a hardship upon the employee for medical, child or other caregiving responsibilities, or other reasonable extenuating circumstances justifying the extension of time, unless the employee's continued participation in the telework program is prohibited by the Telework Enhancement Act.
- D. Upon agreement with the employee, the supervisor shall discuss with the employee the reasons for the proposed termination and shall cooperatively attempt to seek an alternative solution.
- E. Employees may terminate participation in the telework arrangement at any time with appropriate notice to the supervisor. The termination must be in writing and state the effective date of the termination. Subject to future bargaining at the request of any party to this Supplement, requests that include a need for additional office-based workspace may be restricted to a once-a-year open season in locations with limited HUD space. Employees may need to participate in shared space arrangements (e.g. desk sharing, hot desking, or hoteling) temporarily until such time as sufficient workspace becomes available.
- F. Notwithstanding any provision in this Supplement or the respective collective bargaining agreements, the involuntary termination of a telework arrangement may be grieved or appealed utilizing the process in Section 6D.
- G. A termination of the telework arrangement does not preclude the employee from reapplying for telework.

SECTION 10: WORK SCHEDULE.

- A. An employee's work schedule at an alternative worksite is not affected by participation in Flexiplace, unless the work schedule is separately changed in accordance with the CBA. With supervisory approval, teleworkers may establish in their Flexiplace Agreement different work start/stop times for telework days as compared to when they are in the office.
- B. The work schedule choices/changes for a Flexiplace participant must be in accordance with the governing provisions in the respective collective bargaining agreements on tours of duty and work schedules for work performed at the official worksite or as provided in this Supplement.
- C. Time and attendance procedures are the same for employees who participate in Flexiplace as those employees who work in the office.
- D. With advanced supervisory approval, employees may switch a telework day that falls on a holiday to another day within the pay period, if practicable.
- E. Teleworking and remote work employees shall be required to submit the same documentation of work accomplishments as employees in the office.

SECTION 11: ABSENCES FROM THE ALTERNATIVE WORKSITE.

During regular duty hours, an absence from the alternative worksite is equivalent to an absence from the agency worksite. Therefore, as with an absence from the agency worksite, the absence must be requested by the employee and approved by the supervisor in accordance with the procedures in the respective collective bargaining agreements applicable to absences from the agency worksite.

SECTION 12: PREMIUM PAY.

- A. There are no provisions for self-approved overtime. Therefore, Flexiplace participants must ensure that overtime is properly approved prior to working beyond their scheduled hours of work.

SECTION 13: EMERGENCY ARISES AT THE OFFICE OR AT THE ALTERNATIVE WORKSITE.

- A. If an employee is working at an alternative worksite, and the office closes due to an emergency situation, such as severe weather conditions, power outage, BART and/or transportation strike, etc., the Flexiplace participant will continue to work from their alternative worksite until the office closure ends, unless the emergency condition also impacts the employee's alternative worksite.

- B. When an emergency affects the area of the alternative worksite for a major portion of the workday, the supervisor may require the employee to report to the office if an approved substitute alternative worksite is not available, utilize a substitute alternative worksite; approve annual leave, leave without pay, accumulated compensatory time/credit hours, or grant other forms of leave as may be appropriate.

SECTION 14: TELEWORKER’S WORK SPACE.

- A. See, definition for “alternative worksite”.
- B. If staff are situational or routine teleworkers with an assigned workstation, they shall bring home their assigned HUD laptop, and are allowed to take home their assigned HUD keyboard, mouse, and one monitor, such that they are leaving one monitor and their docking station, in the office to support their in-office work environment. When coming to the office, employees will bring in their laptop and will use their laptop’s keyboard and touchpad, or, bring in their external keyboard and/or mouse, if needed. The ability to bring the docking station to the alternate workstation may be negotiated with hoteling and hotdesking.
- C. Management agrees that the Department will provide supplies e.g. paper, pens, staples, and/or CD's to teleworkers that are routinely provided to employees in the office.

SECTION 15: Teleworker/Remote Worker Safe Home Environment.

- A. Employees are responsible for ensuring that their alternative site workspace is safe; clean and free from obstructions; and, is free of hazardous materials.

SECTION 16: WORKERS’ COMPENSATION AT THE ALTERNATE WORKSITE.

Workers’ compensation coverage shall be in accordance with applicable laws.

SECTION 17: COMMUNICATION.

A teleworker’s and remote worker’s response time and quality of emails, phone calls, and other forms of electronic communication should be commensurate to the response time and quality expected while working in the office. This may include turning on their camera for videoconference meetings, as requested by management, with advance notice to employees.

SECTION 18: EQUIPMENT/SECURITY.

- A. Government-owned equipment shall be used for official purposes subject to HUD policy on limited personal use. To make calls and scan copies, employees should use tools and technology that do not incur costs, to the fullest extent practicable. Employees may be required to use business communications platform software, such as Microsoft Teams, or a successor system(s), to attend meetings with supervisors, co-workers, or HUD customers. Although bargaining-unit employees should remain logged in to Microsoft Teams throughout the workday, they are not required to show their Teams status.

- B. Access to HUD electronic systems shall be through HUD-approved hardware and software.
- C. HUD-provided laptop computers will be pre-configured with HUD standard software by local IT staff and provided to the employee. If there is a problem with the hardware and/or software applications, the employee is required to call the HITS Helpdesk at 1-888-297-8689.
 - a. If the problem cannot be resolved remotely, the employee shall coordinate the repair with IT staff, which may include bringing the equipment onsite to the office. If a technology failure occurs that would impact the employee's ability to do their job, the employee shall notify the supervisor to determine alternative means of completing his/her duties which may include a temporary return to the official worksite.
- D. Flexiplace participants must adhere to all rules, regulations, and procedures relating to security and confidentiality of work-related information, equipment and data.
- E. If an employee participating in a telework arrangement has a brief, temporary loss or damage to equipment and does not have personal equipment available that they can use in accordance with IT Helpdesk instructions for temporary authorized use, the employee may be able to continue to work at home once the supervisor is notified and the supervisor determines that work can be done without the use of a computer or internet access. For HUD issued equipment, HUD will make all reasonable efforts to provide replacement equipment as soon as possible, and will not purposely avoid replacing equipment to limit telework or remote work for any employee with an approved agreement.

SECTION 19: Remote Work.

Remote work is a work flexibility arrangement as defined in Section 2N.

Remote work arrangements have budget implications, equity considerations, and other factors that management must consider when making decisions to institute or execute a remote work agreement or position.

A position may be classified by the agency as Remote and hire employees into the position as remote workers.

An employee may apply to be considered for remote work.

While the provisions above that pertain to Flexiplace participants apply to both teleworkers and remote workers, the provisions in this section apply to remote workers only.

Definitions: The definitions of agency worksite; official worksite; and alternative worksite are described in Section 2.

A. Criteria for remote work

- a. The employee eligibility criteria for remote work are similar to that of the teleworker. See, Section 3(A). The primary difference between a telework arrangement and a remote work arrangement, includes but is not limited to additional budgetary considerations, as noted, below, and that a remote worker is not expected to return to the agency worksite on a routine or recurring basis.
- b. The agency may consider the budgetary impact of a remote work arrangement such as additional costs incurred in recalling the employee periodically; additional travel expenditures if the employee routinely travels for business reasons; potential change in locality pay; etc.

B. Types of remote work arrangements

- a. Remote work near HUD office: A remote worker near the HUD office is a remote worker whose alternative worksite is within a 50-mile radius of the agency worksite.
 - i. Remote workers remain subject to recall to the agency worksite for activities that can only be accomplished on-site. E.g. team building exercises; region wide in-person meetings; etc.
- b. Remote work outside of commuting area of HUD office: A remote worker outside of the commuting area is a remote worker whose alternative worksite is outside the 50 mile radius of the agency worksite.
 - i. Remote workers on recall from outside of the agency worksite's local commuting area must be on travel orders and may be eligible to receive compensation for travel expenses under the appropriate regulations and policies.
- c. Remote positions could be duty stationed either anywhere within a specified geographic area or anywhere outside the local commuting area of a HUD office in the United States, as determined by management. If management advertises a position as remote, management will also provide notice to current similarly situated employees with the same position description and utilize the same criteria in assessing the application of current similarly situated employees in the same position description for remote work, upon request for consideration by the employee.

C. Locality Pay

- a. The remote worker receives the locality pay in which the official worksite (alternative worksite) is located.
 - i. For example, an employee in the San Francisco office's locality pay area, whose official worksite (the alternative worksite, which is usually the employee's home) is outside of the San Francisco office's locality pay area, upon being approved to be a remote worker, may evidence a reduction in pay.

D. Application and Approval Process/Denial

- a. Section 5, Application and Approval and Section 6, Denial of Telework are adopted and incorporated herein with appropriate changes to reflect a remote work arrangement, except as outlined below.
- b. Remote work arrangements shall be approved or denied by the Assistant Secretary for the program area, or designee.

E. Office Equipment and Expenses

- a. The remote worker shall be provided with equipment similar to workstations at the agency worksite.
 - i. The equipment shall include, at a minimum: 1 laptop; docking station; keyboard; mouse; and one monitor.
 - ii. A remote worker may elect to receive only selected pieces of equipment to reduce costs.
- b. Management agrees that the Department will provide supplies e.g. paper, pens, staples, and/or CD's to remote workers that are routinely provided to employees in the office. Requests for office supplies may be submitted to the assigned Regional Support Manager/Administrative Officer and approved supplies shall be shipped to the remote worker.
- c. All HUD-provided laptop computers will be pre-configured with HUD standard software by local IT staff and provided to the employee. If there is a problem with the hardware and/or software applications, the employee is required to call the HITS Helpdesk at 1-888-297-8689.

i. If the problem cannot be resolved remotely, Remote Workers Near a HUD Office as defined in Section 19B shall follow the provisions for teleworkers under Section 18 above. Remote Workers Outside of a Commuting Area as defined in Section 19B may ship their equipment in accordance with the instructions provided by the Helpdesk so that IT staff can repair the problem. If a technology failure occurs that would impact the employee's ability to do their job, the employee shall notify the supervisor to determine alternative means of completing his/her duties which may include a temporary recall to an agency worksite.

F. Employee initiated Remote Work Modification/Approval

a. Temporary modification.

- i. An employee may request a temporary change to the official worksite for up to two pay periods with no change in locality pay.
- ii. Management will consider granting requests for a temporary change to the official worksite if there are no additional costs incurred or potentially incurred by the agency and if employee performance is not foreseeably diminished.
- iii. A request for a temporary modification shall be submitted to the supervisor as soon as practicable before the requested temporary modification.
- iv. The approving official shall be the immediate supervisor who shall approve or deny the request within 3 workdays, if practicable.

b. Permanent modification.

- i. An employee may request a permanent change to the official worksite.
- ii. The employee recognizes that a permanent change in the official worksite may result in a modification in pay.
- iii. The approving official for a requested permanent change in official worksite is the program area Assistant Secretary, or designee, and is subject to the same criteria as an initial approval for remote work.
- iv. The agency shall consider all relevant factors in the employee's request, including but not limited to, position requirements such as frequency of travel, as well as budgetary implications of changes in locality pay area, and employee concerns such as work/life issues; health related reasons; and other compassionate factors.

- v. An employee requesting a change into a telework arrangement is subject to the availability of workstations; equipment; and other physical office considerations. If an employee is requesting to report to a HUD office location, employees may need to participate in shared space arrangements (e.g. hoteling and/or hotdesking) temporarily until sufficient workspace becomes available.
- vi. The employee recognizes that costs associated with moving to a different official worksite are subject to the appropriate regulations and policies regarding reimbursement. HUD will not reimburse relocation expenses for employee-initiated requests for changes to remote work arrangements.

G. Agency Initiated Remote Work Modification or Termination

a. Temporary Modification

- i. The agency may initiate a temporary modification in remote work arrangement where the operational needs of the agency require the remote worker to perform his/her duties at a different location for no longer than two (2) pay periods without a change to locality pay.
- ii. The employee may be eligible to be compensated for travel and other expenses pursuant to applicable regulations and policies.
- iii. The agency shall provide as much notice as practicable to the employee but no less than two weeks notice, barring extenuating circumstances.
- iv. The remote worker shall be provided with temporary workspace, including access to equipment, meeting remote or on-site worker requirements for an agency worksite.

b. Permanent Change

- i. The agency may initiate a permanent change in remote work arrangement where there is a substantive violation of the terms of the Flexiplace agreement; the employee's duties may no longer be performed remotely; the employee no longer meets the eligibility requirements as outlined in Section 19A; or, due to the employee's inability to fulfill the operational needs of the agency, requiring the remote worker to perform his/her duties at a different official worksite.
 - 1. Any permanent change may be grieved or appealed as outlined in Section 6D.

- ii. Terminating the remote work arrangement in and of itself does not terminate the remote worker's employment with the agency, unless a termination action separately occurs in accordance with the CBA.
- iii. An agency termination of remote work and relocation of the employee to an agency worksite or a different official worksite may require relocation and other compensation in accordance with the appropriate regulations and HUD's Flexiplace Policy.
- iv. For remote workers within 50 miles of the agency worksite, if an employee's remote work is being terminated, supervisors will give written notification of at least 21 days to the affected employee before the termination date, unless emergency conditions exist, which may necessitate expedited termination. The employee may request an extension of an additional two weeks, subject to supervisor approval, where the termination imposes a hardship upon the employee for medical, child or other caregiving responsibilities, or other reasonable extenuating circumstances justifying the extension of time.
- v. For remote workers outside the 50-mile radius of the agency worksite, a remote worker given a directed reassignment to a HUD office official duty station beyond 50 miles from their residence or alternative worksite shall be given at least 60 days to relocate, if required, unless renegotiated with the Union in accordance with Article 50, Section 50.05 of the HUD-NFFE Agreement.
- vi. The agency shall be responsible for ensuring that employees whose remote work is terminated by management shall have a workstation or office (depending on the nature of their work) comparable to that of their peers, in addition to other requirements of the Local's CBA's, but the employee may have to participate in shared space arrangements as may be bargained upon demand of either party, or be seated in alternate workstations or program areas temporarily until an appropriate workspace that meets the requirements of the Local's CBA and this supplement becomes available.
- vii. When a remote work arrangement was initiated at the request of an employee and the supervisor terminates the agreement due to a decline in the employee's performance, the resulting reassignment to the new duty station will not be considered involuntary, and the employee will thus be ineligible for a severance payment, should they separate from HUD instead of accepting the reassignment.
- viii. An employee requesting and granted remote work, but whose remote work arrangement is being terminated, shall first be considered for reassignment to the employee's original agency worksite.

Section 20. Shared Space Arrangements

- A. The expansion of telework will require the use of shared space arrangements (e.g. hoteling and/or hot desking) for employees who are in the office less than six (6) days per pay period. If management determines there are sufficient workstations available in the office within the designated program area, employees who were in the office at least 2 days per week before the effective date of this Supplement under their previously approved (pre-pandemic) Telework Agreements and who remain on the same telework schedule may request and shall be granted an exception to the above language in this section to retain a non-shared workstation for as long as space remains available and if they remain on their previous telework schedule and in the same position.

Shared space arrangements will only apply to those offices impacted by future moves, office renovations/downsizing, or staffing increases that impact space availability.

- B. Management will negotiate any proposed space-sharing policies/arrangements (e.g. hoteling/hot-desking programs) with the Union before implementation. Management shall notify NFFE as appropriate and will bargain impact and implementation with the affected Local(s) in accordance with the Local's CBA.

Section 21. Dissemination of Supplement

- C. There shall be joint training provided by ELR and NFFE to all employees on the terms of this Supplement at the earliest practicable date.

January 2024 Submission

Office of the Deputy Attorney General

TO: Jason Miller, Deputy Director for Management

SUBJECT: Work Environment Implementation and Progress

The Department of Justice (Department) is pleased to provide the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) with this update on the Department's work environment posture. We respond below to your requests for information.

- 1. Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

As of January 14, 2024, all Department components have implemented a baseline of six days of in-person work per two-week pay period for non-remote personnel.¹ Components may establish narrow exceptions to this baseline for reasons such as limited office space or retention of skilled workers in hard-to-fill positions.

Over the 2023 winter holidays, and prior to full implementation of the Department's revised in-person-work policy, employees in the National Capital Region (NCR) worked in-person 40.3% of the time. This marked an increase over the 2022 winter holidays, when the same employee group worked in-person 34.6% of the time.

I expect the percentage of in-person work to increase in subsequent pay periods. In the first couple of weeks of 2024, hazardous weather conditions in the NCR, including office closures one day, likely suppressed rates of in-person work. We expect that total work hours for headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel will reflect more in-person work hours than telework hours in the next pay period. We will verify that figure using our employees' certified time entries, which will be available after the pay period ends on February 10, 2024.

With the winter holidays behind us, with the in-person-work policy in place, and with winter weather waning, in-person-work hours for NCR employees should steadily exceed 50% of total work hours by March 2024.

2. Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

The Department's Assistant Attorney General for Administration (AAG/A) and its Chief Human Capital Officer (CHCO) collect and track employee time-entry data from across the Department. They also receive reports from component heads on implementation and execution of the Department's revised in-person-work policy, as well as information about the impacts of the policy on employee retention and recruitment. They aggregate this information, which allows the AAG/A and CHCO to compare practices Department-wide and ensure equitable application of the policy and consistency across the workforce. And, as discussed next, the AAG/A and CHCO regularly report their findings to senior Department leadership.

3. Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

Senior leadership at the component level and the Department level are responsible for tracking implementation of the in-person work policy—and are committed to ensuring its success.

Each component head has primary responsibility for enforcing employees' compliance. To ensure accountability, the Department's Justice Management Division (JMD) tracks the data from employees' certified time entries, as well as building occupancy and other data. Component heads have access to this information for their component employees, and JMD leadership—including the AAG/A and the CHCO—go over the results with each component during quarterly management review meetings.

The AAG/A and the CHCO brief me every pay period on in-person-work rates, component implementation and compliance, and overall organizational health and performance.

Lastly, I ask component heads to report on the successes and challenges of implementing the in-person-work policy in their regular management meetings with me. Those meetings occur at least quarterly and can be as frequent as weekly, depending on the component.

DEFINITIONS

Term	Definition
Agency Worksite	An official federal agency location where work activities are based and considered a centralized location of an employee's assigned organization.
Alternative Worksite	A location where individuals perform official duties away from the primary agency worksite. Examples include an employee's residence, a telework center, or another component's workspace.
Component	All Offices, Divisions, Bureaus, and Boards identified in 28 C.F.R. § 0.1.
Continuity of Operations (COOP) Plan	A documented plan that details how an individual organization will ensure it can continue to perform its essential functions during a wide range of events that impact normal operations.
Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO)	An overseas remote work arrangement wherein the Federal Executive Branch employee temporarily performs the work requirements and duties of his/her domestic civil service position from an approved overseas location via a formal DETO agreement.
Maximum Telework	Telework authorized by agency or component head where employees are required to work from home or at an alternate work location during an emergency regardless of whether they have an approved telework agreement in place.
Meaningful In-Person Work	Work that is purposeful, well-planned and optimized for in-person collaboration. Generally, in-office meetings and events which provide employees with the best opportunities for collaboration, team cohesion, problem solving, and professional development.
Mobile Work	Work that is characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in customer or other worksites, as opposed to a single authorized alternative worksite (e.g., site audits, site inspections, investigations, and property management).
Official Discipline	A disciplinary action that results in the placement of a document in an employee's electronic official personnel file, such as a written reprimand a suspension, reduction in grade or pay, or removal.
Official Worksite	The location where the employee regularly performs their duties, and where their work primary activities are based, as determined by the component (including employees who perform mobile work) and is documented on the Standard Form 50, Notification of Personnel Action. Generally, the official worksite is the agency worksite for most telework-approved employees. For a remote worker, the official worksite is the alternative worksite to which the component and the employee agree (reference Remote Work definition).
Pandemic	A disease occurring over a wide geographic area, affecting an exceptionally high proportion of the population, and spreading to more than one continent.

Personally Identifiable Information	Information that can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, such as name, Social Security Number, or biometric records, alone, or when combined with other personal or identifying information that is linked or linkable to a specific individual, such as date and place of birth or mother's maiden name.
Remote Work	An arrangement in which an employee, under a written remote work agreement, is scheduled to perform official duties at an approved alternative worksite. A remote worker's official worksite may be within or outside the local commuting area of an agency worksite.
Routine Telework	A type of telework that occurs on a regular and recurring basis as part of an ongoing, regular schedule at an approved telework location away from an employee's agency worksite.
Situational or Ad Hoc Telework	A type of telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis and the hours worked were not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular telework schedule.
Telework	A work flexibility arrangement under which an employee, under a written Telework Agreement, performs the duties and responsibilities of the employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work. Telework does not include any part of work done while on official travel or mobile work.
Telework or Remote Work Agreement	A written agreement, completed and signed by the participating employee and authorized official(s) in the employee's organization that outlines the terms and conditions of the telework or remote work arrangement.
Telework Locations	Approved Alternative Worksites other than the employee's regular agency worksite. Examples include an employee's residence, a telework center, or another component's workspace.
Telework Managing Officer	Senior employee, appointed by the Department's Chief Human Capital Officer and serves as the Department's point-of-contact to provide overall strategic direction on telework issues.
Telework Program Coordinator	Appointed by the component's Human Resources Officer, who serves as a point-of-contact for providing guidance to employees and managers in their respective components, collects telework data for reports, and oversees implementation of their telework program.
Telework Program Manager	Appointed by the Department's Human Capital Officer, and reports to the Telework Managing Officer, and serves as the Department's point of contact for component Telework Coordinators. They provide leadership, guidance and interpretation, data analysis, training, and evaluation of the Department's telework program and policy.
Telework-Ready	The employee meets all eligibility criteria, has an established Telework Agreement in place, and has all authorized equipment necessary to telework.
Unscheduled Telework	A form of situational telework that provides the opportunity for employees to work from approved telework locations on non-scheduled telework days.

I. Policy

The Department of Justice (DOJ or Department) is fully committed to using in-person work, telework, and remote work to support the strategic management of human capital and facilitate the accomplishment of the Department's mission. The Department's policy requires employees who have been placed on approved telework agreements as described in this policy to work in person at least six days per two-week pay period, unless the employee is covered by an exception approved in accordance with this policy.

DOJ components determine which positions among their workforce are telework or remote work eligible. In doing so, components should consider position duties and responsibilities, budget, overall impact of telework or remote work on their mission, and other workplace variables (e.g., location and availability of office space or shared space), as appropriate. Participation in telework or remote work is voluntary and not an employee right or entitlement.

A. General Guidelines

1. Telework or remote work must be:

- a. Actively encouraged and implemented throughout the Department in support of the DOJ commitment to workforce efficiency, emergency, inclement weather preparedness, and quality of life.
- b. Authorized to the extent that the mission of the office is not jeopardized. When identifying positions for remote work, components must adhere to any residency restrictions that apply to certain positions, as appropriate.
- c. Accomplished on a routine or situational basis at an approved alternative worksite.
- d. Used to serve as an effective recruitment and retention strategy and enhance efforts to employ and accommodate people with disabilities.
- e. Used to create cost savings by decreasing the need for office space and parking facilities, and by reducing transportation costs, including costs associated with payment of transit subsidies.
- f. Used to serve as a critical workplace flexibility that enables components to meet mission-critical needs of the organization, while also helping employees balance work and personal responsibilities, thereby enhancing employee satisfaction and well-being, aiding retention, and serving as an incentive to potential applicants.
- g. Used to enhance Department or component Continuity of Operations (COOP) Plans to ensure essential federal functions continue during emergency situations (e.g., pandemic).

B. Types of Telework

1. Routine. A type of telework that occurs on a regular and recurring basis on an agreed-upon number of days during a bi-weekly pay period at an approved telework location away from an employee's agency worksite. The telework agreement must be reviewed annually by the employee's supervisor.
2. Situational. Situational telework can include episodic, intermittent, unscheduled, ad hoc, or maximum telework. Situational telework is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked were not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular telework schedule. Examples of situational telework include, but are not limited to, telework necessitated by inclement weather, national emergency (e.g., pandemic), or special work assignments. Employees may also request situational telework to allow them to be closer to the polls to vote on election days, including early voting days.

Employees who are approved for routine telework also are eligible for situational telework. An approved telework agreement for the situational event is required for if the situational event is going to last more than one month. Extensions of situational telework agreements should be reviewed monthly and generally not approved for more than a total of six consecutive months.

C. Remote Work.

An arrangement in which an employee, under a written remote work agreement, is scheduled to perform official duties at an approved alternative worksite within or outside the local commuting area of an agency worksite, without regularly reporting to the agency worksite during each pay period to perform work.

1. Remote Work Considerations. Components are not required to permit remote arrangements (except when required as a reasonable accommodation), and they may be selective about who is permitted to do remote work, may impose additional conditions on granting it, and may approach approvals on a case-by-case basis, taking into account the needs of the office and other considerations to maximize equity. When determining whether to approve a request for remote work, managers must take into consideration the nature and demands of the work; whether it is feasible for an employee to perform effectively all or most of the job functions at the remote worksite while still delivering on mission objectives; maintaining agency/component operations; and meeting customer needs. Components should refer to U.S. Office of Personnel Management (OPM)'s 2021 Guide to Telework and Remote Work in the Federal Government or subsequent guidance issued by OPM, to assist them in determining if remote work is appropriate.

2. Official Worksite. Supervisors will designate the remote work location as the official worksite for an employee who is not scheduled to report to the component worksite at least two times each pay period on a regular and recurring basis. If an employee's official worksite is located outside of the local commuting area, this change may affect the employee's pay and the component's budget, among other things.

D. In-Person Work Requirement

1. Baseline Requirement. Department employees performing routine telework pursuant to an approved telework agreement are generally required to work in person at least six days per two-week pay period, unless the employee is covered by an exception approved in accordance with paragraph 3 below. This baseline serves as a floor, with the understanding that some organizational units – including those with law enforcement, national security, and public-facing functions, among others – may set higher requirements for in-person work. Components and USAOs have the discretion to further define what qualifies as “in-person work,” although components are expected to define “in-person work” reasonably to include work in court or in the field as the job requires.
2. In-Person Work Experience. Components and United States Attorney Offices (USAOs) should ensure that the in-person work experience is meaningful and creates a productive working environment for employees. Specifically:
 - a. Core In-Person Workdays. Components and USAOs should establish at least one core workday per week when all non-remote personnel in a work team or at an office location are expected to work in person. Head of Components, and U.S. Attorneys, or their designees, have discretion to determine what constitutes a work team for this purpose, and the authority to approve exceptions as they do for the in-person requirement (Section I.D.3).
 - b. Employee Engagement. Components and USAOs should make reasonable efforts to increase meaningful in-person engagement in the workplace (e.g., town halls, one-on-one meetings between supervisors and staff, employee recognition events, group onboarding activities for new employees).
 - c. Work Environment. Components and USAOs should work with building managers to make the in-office experience more positive and productive.
3. Exceptions. The in-person work baseline of six days per pay period might not be appropriate for every office, employee, or group of employees. Heads of Components and U.S. Attorneys may authorize an exception for a group of employees (e.g., all members of a job series or a job title at an office location) after consultation with the Department's Chief Human Capital Officer. The Head of Component, U.S. Attorney, or their designees may grant an exception for an individual employee based on the employee's unique circumstances without such consultation.

The component's determination should be based on criteria including, but not limited to, the following:

1. Retention of specialized workers;
2. Recruitment of specialized or hard-to-fill positions; and
3. Office-space limitations.

E. Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) Arrangement. Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) are generally defined as remote work arrangements wherein an employee performs the work requirements and duties of their domestic federal position from an approved overseas location. DETO arrangements fall under the statutory authority of the Department of State and apply to all federal employees. The State Department has implemented specific requirements that must be met in order to obtain approval for a domestic employee to telework in an overseas country, under the authority of the Department of State's Chief of Mission, which reviews and evaluates each request on a case-by-case basis (reference "Overseas Telework" at telework.gov). Requirements are in addition to any OPM government-wide or Department remote work policies.

1. Employees have no authorization to work remotely from a foreign location without an approved DETO Agreement and required documents. DETO arrangements are rare, not a form of routine telework, and do not include work done while on official travel (TDY) or mobile work. Components should be aware that agreeing to a DETO may result in additional costs and increased security risks. As such, Department employees seeking to telework from an alternative location based in another country must have prior official approval from their component, the Department, and the Department of State.
2. Because the Department of State has outlined specific requirements that must be met to obtain approval for a domestic employee to telework in a foreign country, components wishing to pursue a DETO agreement should contact the Justice Management Division (JMD), Budget Staff, and/or the JMD, Human Resources (HR) Staff, for specific Departmental guidance.

F. Telework and Remote Work Compatibility and Eligibility. Components will identify which positions are compatible for telework or remote work. Employees must occupy a position that is compatible with telework or remote work and meet other criteria to be eligible.

1. Position Compatibility. Telework compatible positions are those for which employees can effectively accomplish job functions outside the component's worksite. Positions requiring employees to perform daily, on-site activities at the agency worksite, or to handle classified materials, are not compatible with routine or regularly scheduled telework.
2. Employee Eligibility Criteria. Except for telework established as a reasonable accommodation under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (reference Section O of this policy statement), DOJ employees must meet the following minimum criteria to be considered eligible for telework or remote work participation. The agency or component head may suspend the eligibility criteria in certain circumstances (e.g., pandemic or another emergency).
 - a. New DOJ employees may be approved for telework or remote work upon entry; however, the employee's supervisor must reevaluate the agreement within 90 days of the appointment.
 - b. The employee must not have been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year.
 - c. The employee must not have been officially disciplined for violations of Subpart G, of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch, for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer, or while performing official Federal Government duties.
3. Completing Telework Training. Telework training is required for all telework and remote work participants, including supervisors. The responsibility for the training is delegated to the components. Suggested training can be found at the Department's LearnDOJ website at <https://www.justice.gov/jmd/learndoj> or at www.telework.gov (reference Telework 101 for Employees and Telework 101 for Managers).

G. Telework and Remote Work Agreements. Eligible employees must sign a written telework or remote work agreement, have the agreement approved by the employee's supervisor and/or other designated management officials, and successfully complete telework training. A DOJ Telework Agreement and DOJ Remote Work Agreement are found within the Appendices to this Policy Statement. Components may create their own Telework Agreement or Remote Work Agreement but must ensure that any component-specific agreements align with this policy and any applicable collective bargaining agreements.

1. Developing Telework and Remote Work Agreements. The telework or remote work agreement must include the type of telework approved, self-certified safety checklist, supervisor telework or remote work checklist, work schedule, established working hours, core business hours, worksite location, and list of Government Furnished Equipment (GFE) (reference Appendices).
 - a. Work schedules must adhere to the provisions of existing regulations, government-wide, Department, and component policies, and any applicable collective bargaining agreements.
 - b. Each telework agreement should provide for the employee to work at the official component worksite a minimum of six days each pay period unless there is an approved exception. Components and/or supervisors may require an employee to report to the official component worksite more than the Department's minimum in-person work requirement during each pay period.
 - c. Agreements should expressly state that telework-ready employees are expected to continue to work in a case of a continuity event, such as a national or local emergency, during an emergency event involving inclement weather, or another situation that may result in a disruption to normal office operations. Refer to OPM's 2021 Guide to Telework and Remote Work in the Federal Government for additional information on Pay, Leave, and Work Schedule Flexibilities.
2. Employee Initiated Agreements. When remote work is initiated at the employee's request to accommodate an employee's personal circumstances, components, in consultation with counsel and HR Staff, should consider including provisions in the remote work agreement that will apply if the remote work arrangement does not succeed. For example, components may wish to consider having language in the remote work agreement that states the employee agrees not to seek relocation expenses to move to the commuting area of the Agency worksite if the arrangement fails because of a deterioration in the employee's performance. Additionally, HR Staff, in consultation with counsel, should consider revising any position descriptions that may apply to a remote work arrangement to provide for reassignment in the event of a diminishment of performance. Such a revision or agreement could state that any such reassignment shall not be considered involuntary and, thus, will preclude a severance payment should the employee separate instead of accepting the reassignment.

3. Duration of Agreements. All telework and remote work agreements are active for one year and must be reviewed on an annual basis.
4. Denying, Suspending, or Terminating a Telework or Remote Work Agreement. Supervisors may deny or suspend telework or remote work requests, and both supervisors and employees may terminate agreements.
 - a. Denial, Suspension, or Termination Decisions. Supervisors must base decisions to deny, suspend, or terminate permission to telework or work remotely on statutory or policy requirements and/or work-related reasons, such as:
 - 1) Employee ineligibility;
 - 2) Position incompatibility;
 - 3) Decline in employee performance;
 - 4) Employee misconduct;
 - 5) Employee appointment or position status (e.g., trainees or entry-level employees);
 - 6) Safety issues or suspected hazardous materials in the telework or remote work location;
 - 7) Adverse impact on the operations of the office (e.g., mission continuity), including costs associated with potential change of official worksite; or
 - 8) Failure to adhere to terms of the telework or remote work agreement.
 - b. Denial, Suspension, or Termination Documentation.
 - 1) When an employee's participation in telework or remote work is denied, suspended, or terminated, the supervisor must provide the employee with written notice, including the specific reason(s) for the proposed termination suspension, or denial, providing as much advanced notice as is reasonable under the circumstances and in accordance with any applicable collective bargaining agreement. An employee may voluntarily terminate a telework or remote work agreement upon advanced written notice to the supervisor.
 - 2) The component or supervisor may suspend or terminate a telework or remote work agreement in the event of an emergency or work exigency.
 - 3) If a component decides that the telework or remote work arrangement is negatively impacting the employee's performance, the component may wish to pursue a performance improvement plan that can be done remotely at the telework or remote work site versus requiring the employee to report to the agency worksite. In the case of a suspension or termination of a telework agreement because of diminution of an employee performance or of the component's ability to conduct its operations, the supervisor should document and demonstrate that the employee's teleworking directly and negatively impacted the employee's performance or the performance of the office and that remediation can best be accomplished by suspending or terminating the telework arrangement.

- 4) Unless specified by the Telework Enhancement Act, termination, or suspension of a telework or remote work agreement by a supervisor does not necessarily prevent an employee from participating in the Telework or Remote Work Program at a later date. Components may establish time periods during which an employee may be barred from participating in telework or remote work (i.e., duration which an official disciplinary action remains in the employee's personnel file). Otherwise, a supervisor or other designated official retains the discretion to approve telework or remote work for an employee whose telework or remote work has been previously suspended or terminated, so long as the employee continues to meet all eligibility criteria and the supervisor or other designated official believes the employee has sufficiently addressed the reasons for the initial suspension or termination.
- 5) Supervisors should also consider the following when terminating an employee's telework or remote work agreement:
 - a. Terminations should be based on the provisions of the Telework Enhancement Act, and, where discretion is possible, sound reasoning;
 - b. Be fair, consistent, and equitable, making sure that decisions are transparent and supported by the Telework Enhancement Act, as well as Department and component policies and rules;
 - c. Terminations should be in writing and timely; and
 - d. Terminations should be made in conjunction with employee and labor relations specialists and agency counsel, and any applicable collective bargaining agreements should be consulted to verify that the component has complied with any requirements the agreement may place on the component regarding the termination of a telework agreement.
- 6) If a telework or remote work agreement is suspended or terminated, supervisors will work with the employee to determine the effective date of the employee's return to the agency worksite, identify office space for the employee, and address any other applicable personnel matters, as appropriate.

- c. Grievances. Employees who believe their request to telework or work remotely has been wrongly denied may file a grievance under the Department or component's administrative grievance procedures, or the provisions of an applicable collective bargaining agreement.

H. Performance of Official Duties at the Telework or Remote Work Location.

The employee will regularly perform assigned duties only at the agency worksite, component approved telework location, or remote work location. This is to ensure worksite conformance with guidelines established in this policy. Failure to comply with this provision may result in termination of the agreement and appropriate disciplinary action.

I. Official Worksite. The official worksite for each employee must be consistent with the guidance set forth in title 5 C.F.R. § 531.605.

1. Designating Remote Location as the Official Worksite. Supervisors will designate the remote work location as the official worksite for an employee who is not scheduled to report to the component worksite at least two days each pay period on a regular and recurring basis.
2. Compensation Based on Official Worksite. Employees are compensated based on the location of their official worksite. When the remote work location becomes the employee's official worksite, locality pay is based on the location of the remote work location.
3. Change in Agency or Official Worksite. When an employee's official worksite designation is changed from the agency worksite to the remote work location, the supervisor must notify the servicing HR Office, which must process a Standard Form 50, Notification of Personnel Action, to record an official change in location.
4. Remote Work Location Outside the Commuting Area of the Agency Worksite. Generally, employees requesting designation of their remote work location as their official worksite may not be entitled to receive relocation expenses. The decision to authorize relocation expenses is a management decision and made on a case-by-case basis.
5. Reimbursement for Official Business Travel. Under applicable travel regulations, employees are entitled to reimbursement for official business travel to the component worksite when the employee works at a location outside of the local commuting area, and the employee's remote work location has been designated as the official worksite. As a reminder, official business travel must be approved in advance by the employee's supervisor.

6. In situations where employees are on maximum telework, DOJ will continue to treat the component worksite as the employee's official worksite (without having the employee report to the official worksite at least two days per pay period).
7. Reduction in Force. Employees working at a remote location may be in a different employment competitive area from the "agency worksite" in the event of a reduction-of-force. In these situations, supervisors should consult with their servicing HR Office.

J. Dependent Care. An employee may not telework for the purpose of fulfilling their full-time dependent care responsibilities while performing official duties; however, telework or remote work can be a valuable flexibility to employees with caregiving responsibilities when combined with other flexible work schedule options (e.g., Maxiflex). Supervisors should make those determinations on a case-by-case basis. A full-time employee must have 80 basic work requirement hours in a biweekly pay period.

K. Leave, Dismissals, or Closures. The ability to conduct work, whether at the agency worksite, telework location, or remote work location determines when an employee may be excused from duty. DOJ teleworkers, remote workers, and supervisors should consult the decision support matrix within the Appendices to determine an employee's duty status during a worksite closure, authorized early dismissal (including administrative leave for voting), authorized delayed arrival, or authorized unscheduled telework, including declaration of COOP status. OPM has instituted a change where the Federal closure operating status announcements will no longer allow non-emergency employees on pre-approved paid leave to receive an excused absence. Employees working outside of the Washington, D.C. locality area must follow the operating status announcements issued by the head of their office (e.g., United States Attorney, Special Agent in Charge, who make workforce status decisions for their employees). Those office heads should report those workforce status decisions to their component headquarters. Employees on pre-approved paid leave will generally be charged leave if the federal offices are closed.

1. Annual Leave. Scheduled annual leave may be cancelled if an employee is telework- ready with a telework agreement in place and agrees to perform telework in lieu of the scheduled leave. The general practice should be for employees on pre-approved leave to either telework or remain on leave when federal offices are closed.
2. Sick Leave. If an employee is on telework or working remotely and is scheduled to

- use sick leave for a medical appointment and that medical appointment is cancelled, the legal basis for the sick leave has been eliminated and the sick leave must be cancelled.
3. Dismissals or Closure. DOJ teleworkers scheduled to telework on a day when delayed arrival, early dismissal, or closure is authorized for the agency worksite will continue to work as scheduled, except as specifically authorized by the teleworker's supervisor. Supervisors may grant exceptions to scheduled telework or remote work requirements if there are power outages or other events that would prevent an employee from working. Teleworkers not scheduled to telework on days for which delayed arrival, early dismissal, or closure is authorized for the agency worksite are required to telework to the extent they have work to do and any necessary, approved equipment. In COOP situations, telework may be required.
 4. Unscheduled Leave or Unscheduled Telework. In situations when OPM announces unscheduled leave or unscheduled telework, affected employees who have a current telework agreement or remote work agreement and are telework-ready must be prepared to telework or take unscheduled leave. Employees must notify their supervisor of their intent to take unscheduled leave or perform unscheduled telework, in accordance with established procedures and subject to any bargaining unit requirements. The exception to this would be if the emergency requires the employee to evacuate their telework or remote location (e.g., due to hurricane, flood, or tornado evacuations).
 5. Employees electing the unscheduled telework option (e.g., including requesting telework on an official election day or designated early voting days) must have an approved telework agreement, necessary equipment, and an adequate amount of work to perform during the entire workday (employees may be granted administrative time off to go to the polls, in accordance with established Promoting Access to Voting for Employees Policy Memorandum, 2022-06) or account for any time not performing work by requesting leave.
 6. Weather and Safety Leave. DOJ may grant weather and safety leave when it is determined that employees cannot safely travel to or from, or perform work at, their agency worksite, a telework or remote work location, or other approved location because of severe weather or another emergency. Weather and safety leave is a form of paid time off authorized under the Administrative Leave Act and will generally be used in conjunction with an operating status announcement issued by OPM. The Department will be unable, in most circumstances, to grant weather and safety leave to an employee who is a telework program participant and able to safely perform telework at the employee's home. Therefore, employees participating in a telework program must telework, take other leave (paid or unpaid) or paid time off

(as approved by the component), or a combination of both, unless an exception applies during an office closure. This provision will apply regardless of what is stated or not stated in the employee's telework agreement and the Department or component's policies.

7. Compensatory Time Off for Travel. Employees who are officially ordered to travel away from their official worksite may be afforded compensatory time off for travel, in certain circumstances, based upon the approved travel itinerary. Compensatory time off for travel is not considered premium pay. It is earned by an employee for time spent in a travel status away from the employee's official worksite when such time is not otherwise compensable. Compensable refers to periods of time creditable as hours of work for the purpose of determining a specific pay entitlement. For example, certain travel time may be creditable as hours of work under the overtime pay provisions in title 5 C.F.R. § 550.112(g), or under the Fair Labor Standards Act (5 C.F.R. § 551.422).

L. Security. Employees are responsible for protecting and safeguarding all DOJ information, Government Furnished Equipment (GFE), and government property while teleworking.

1. Classified Documents. Employees must comply with Department and government-wide regulations regarding safeguarding classified documents. Employees who need to access classified information or systems must go into an authorized DOJ component location/office where such access is available or warranted. Employees must work with their component Security Office to address access to classified information.
2. Component Security Requirements. Employees must comply with any criteria and guidelines established by their respective component for keeping government property and information safe and secure.
3. Information Technology Security. All Department work conducted from alternative worksite locations must comply with DOJ Order 0904, Cybersecurity Program.
4. Unclassified Information. Teleworkers and remote workers must protect sensitive unclassified data or documents, including that which may be protected-from disclosure to others because of a legal privilege, the Privacy Act, or because they are designated Sensitive but Unclassified, or For Official Use Only, consistent with guidance and other applicable Department and component policies and guidance.
5. Competition Sensitive, Source Selection, or Contractor Proprietary Information, and Personally Identifiable Information (PII). Teleworkers and remote workers must protect competition sensitive, source selection information, or contractor proprietary data restricted by 41 U.S.C. § 423 (also known as Section 27 of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act, as amended) or data otherwise restricted by the Federal Acquisition Regulation, other acquisition policies, and employee information (e.g., PII) in accordance with the Privacy Act of 1974, as amended in 5 U.S.C. § 552a, DOJ Order 0601, Privacy and Civil Liberties, and other Department or component guidance.

M. Equipment.

1. Government Furnished Equipment (GFE). Within budgetary constraints and based on the nature and type of work performed, components should determine the propriety of providing and installing GFE and software for employees who are on telework or remote work agreements. Components should provide necessary and approved equipment and office supplies for official use. The component is responsible for service and maintenance of GFE and should account for any GFE provided to the employee.
2. Authorized Use. Employees must use GFE for official and authorized purposes only. Family members and friends of employees are not authorized to use GFE and materials. Employees must return GFE to the component at the conclusion of teleworking arrangements or at the component's request.
3. Use of Personally-Owned Computers. Use of personally owned computers to access unclassified DOJ systems or networks remotely must comply with the criteria and guidelines for using personal equipment established by the DOJ Chief Information Officer and the employee's component.
4. Incremental Costs. Employees are responsible for the installation, repair, and maintenance of all personally-owned equipment and other incidental or incremental costs associated with performing work from their personal residence. The government will not be responsible for any operating costs that are associated with the employee using their personal residence as a telework or remote work location (e.g., home maintenance, insurance, or utilities). However, the employee does not relinquish any entitlement to reimbursement for authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the government, as provided for by statute and regulations.
5. Use of Appropriated Funds. Components may, but are not required, to use appropriated funds to provide telecommunications equipment in a private residence for employees who telework on a routine basis or perform remote work when the purpose is for official Government business consistent with the guidance set forth in section 620 of Public Law (P.L.) 104-52.

6. Liability for Damage. DOJ is not liable for damages to any employee's personal or real property while the employee is working at a telework or remote work location, except to the extent the Government is liable under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1346(b), 1402(b), 2401(b), and 2671 et seq., (also known as "The Federal Tort Claims Act").
- N. Workers' Compensation. Employees are covered by 5 U.S.C. Chapter 81 (also known as "The Federal Employees' Compensation Act") when injured or suffering from work-related illnesses while conducting official government business at the approved telework or remote work location.
- O. Reasonable Accommodations. Reasonable accommodations for disabilities are governed by Section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (Rehabilitation Act), as amended, under 29 U.S.C. § 791 et seq. Depending on the facts of a particular accommodation request, an employee who has been deemed ineligible to participate in telework or remote work under either this policy statement or a component's policy may still be entitled to telework or remote work as a form of reasonable accommodation for a qualifying disability. Supervisors should consult with their Reasonable Accommodations Coordinator and legal office for guidance when receiving such a request. If telework or remote work is approved as a reasonable accommodation, supervisors should memorialize the terms of such approval as a reasonable accommodation in a telework agreement or remote work agreement.
- P. Component Telework Policies and Telework Agreements. A component may choose to use this policy statement in lieu of developing its own component-specific policy or may design its own component specific policy with additional criteria and standards for telework or remote work eligibility. In such cases, the component must inform its workforce in writing of this decision. Component-specific policies must comply with the minimum requirements set forth in this directive. A component also may opt to design a telework agreement that coincides with the requirements of this policy statement.

II. Roles and Responsibilities

A. Heads of Components

1. Establish, administer, and evaluate component telework programs in accordance with the requirements of OPM's 2021 Guide to Telework and Remote Work in the Federal Government, or subsequent guidance, and the provisions of this policy statement.
2. Designate a Component Telework Coordinator to provide guidance, manage and track telework and remote work, and who serves as a liaison to the Department on telework and remote work matters.

3. Incorporate telework and remote work into COOP plans, as appropriate.
4. Ensure that appropriate collective bargaining obligations on telework and remote work policies, including telework agreements, are fulfilled.

B. Department Telework Managing Officer

1. Advise agency leadership and serves as a resource for management and employees.
2. Serve as the primary point of contact for OPM on telework matters.

C. Department Telework Coordinator

1. Serve as the Department's coordinator for telework initiatives.
2. Periodically review the DOJ Telework and Remote Policy Statement to ensure consistency with changes to authorizing statutes and regulatory requirements.
3. Issue an annual call for component telework reports as required in this policy statement.

D. Component Telework Coordinators

1. Serve as the component's coordinator for Department and component-specific telework and remote work initiatives.
2. Periodically review component telework and remote work policy and procedures to ensure consistency with future changes to authorizing statutes, regulatory requirements, and this policy statement.
3. Compile and submit component telework and remote work reports as required by this policy statement.
4. Monitor progress on annual component telework participation goals established by the heads of component in accordance with the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010; establish procedures to capture and track employee participation, denials, and terminations; and provide telework data to the Director, HR, JMD, or their designee for the annual Status of Telework in the Federal Government Report to the U.S. Congress and other reports and data as requested.

5. Provide guidance and/or training to supervisors responsible for making decisions related to program participation and provide additional assistance as needed.

E. Supervisors.

1. Determine position compatibility for telework in accordance with guidelines set forth in Section I.F.1 of this policy statement.
2. Determine employee eligibility in accordance with Section I.F.2 of this policy statement.
3. Notify employees of their ability to participate in telework based on determinations of position compatibility and employee eligibility.
4. Complete an interactive telework training course prior to acting on any telework request.
5. Review and sign all types of telework and remote agreements.
6. Document any decisions related to disapproval or termination of telework or remote work. Disapproval of telework or remote work must be documented.
7. Require employees who request permission to telework or work remotely to certify that the proposed telework or remote work location has adequate physical and environmental security measures in place to protect equipment, documents, and data from being accessed by unauthorized individuals.
8. Verify that the employee has the information and equipment necessary to perform assigned work independently.
9. Assign work, monitor, and evaluate performance, reward/recognize, train, and develop teleworkers or remote workers in the same manner as employees at the agency worksite.
10. Review and as needed update the written telework or remote work agreement.
11. Review and certify time and attendance reports to ensure employee absences and scheduled tours of duty are accurately recorded, to include applicable telework and remote work codes.
12. Approve or deny requested changes in work schedules in advance.

13. Immediately investigate any reported workplace-related injury or illness.

F. Employees.

1. Complete an interactive telework training course prior to signing a telework or remote work agreement.
2. Complete and sign the employee sections of telework or remote work agreements.
3. Comply with the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch (5 C.F.R., Part 2635) while working at the telework or remote work location.
4. Complete all assigned work according to standards and guidelines in the employee's performance plan.
5. Ensure that work documents and data in both hard copy and electronic forms are adequately secured.
6. Comply with equipment usage requirements set forth in this policy statement.
7. Ensure that care for dependents (e.g., young children, elderly individuals, or individuals with special needs) is provided by someone other than the employee while the employee teleworks. Exceptions (based on emergency situations) must be approved by the employee's supervisor, and the employee must account for work and non-work hours during their tour of duty and take appropriate leave (paid or unpaid) to account for time spent away from normal work-related duties to care for dependents.
8. Notify the supervisor of any work-related injury or illness as soon as possible.
9. Follow established procedures for requesting leave.
10. Ensure supervisors, colleagues, customers, and others know when employee is teleworking and how the employee can be reached. Regularly communicate each telework instance, work schedules on telework days, contact information at telework site, and absences from the telework location, including official meetings. This promotes efficient collaboration and allows supervisors to properly account for the teleworking employee's whereabouts and attendance.
11. Notify the supervisor in advance when voluntarily terminating a telework or remote work agreement; and complete time and attendance reports to ensure that telework, remote work and absences during scheduled tours of duty are accurately recorded.

III. Reporting and Documentation

A. Annual Reports. In support of the annual Status of Telework in the Federal Government Report to the Congress, and in accordance with the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, components, upon request, must provide participation level information to the JMD, Director, HR Staff, or their designee, including:

1. Total number of employees in the organization.
2. Number and percentage of employees eligible to telework or work remotely.
3. Number and percentage of employees who are granted an exception to this policy (reference Section I.D).
4. Number and percentage of eligible employees who are teleworking or working remotely. For telework employees provide the following data:
 - a. Employees teleworking 6 or more days per pay period.
 - b. Employees teleworking 3-5 days per pay period;
 - c. Employees teleworking 1-2 days per pay period;
 - d. Employees teleworking once per month; or
 - e. Employees teleworking on a situational, episodic, or short-term basis.
5. Employees' telework or remote work hours must be recorded in the component's time and attendance tracking system.
6. Reasons for variation if the total percentage of employees teleworking and on remote work varies by 10% higher or lower from one year to the next.
7. Explanation on whether the organization has met its goals; if not, actions considered to identify and eliminate barriers to maximize telework or remote work opportunities for next reporting period.
8. Assessment of progress made in meeting participation goals and other organizational goals relating to telework or remote work, such as the impact on:

- a. Emergency readiness;
- b. Energy use;
- c. Recruitment and retention;
- d. Performance;
- e. Productivity;
- f. Employee attitudes and opinions regarding telework and remote work; and
- g. Best practices in the telework or remote work program.

B. Records Retention. Components must maintain telework records for each participating employee in accordance with National Archives and Records Administration approved General Records Schedule 2.3, Item 040, Telework/Alternate Worksite Program Case Files. For questions related to the General Records Schedule, contact your component Records Manager.

APPENDIX F: EMPLOYEE SELF-CERTIFIED SAFETY CHECK LIST

DOJ Telework and Remote Work Safety Self-Certified Home Workspace Checklist

Employees wishing to be approved for telework or remote work must use the following checklist to assist them in a survey of the overall safety and adequacy of their telework site. The following are only recommendations, and do not encompass every situation that may be encountered. Employees are encouraged to obtain professional assistance with issues concerning appropriate electrical service and circuit capacity for residential worksites.

- Practice a fire evacuation plan for use in the event of an emergency.
- Check your smoke detectors regularly and replace batteries once a year.
- Always have a working fire extinguisher conveniently located in your home and check the charge regularly.
- Computers can be heavy. Always place them on sturdy, level, well maintained furniture.
- Use sturdy office chairs that provide good supporting backrests and allow adjustments to fit you comfortably.
- Locate your computer to eliminate noticeable glare from windows and lighting. Place the computer monitor at height that is comfortable and does not require neck or back strain.
- Locate computer keyboards at heights that do not require wrist strain or place the keyboard on an adjustable surface.
- Install sufficient lighting in locations that reduce glare at the work surface.
- Arrange file cabinets so that open drawers do not block aisles or walkways.
- Be sure to leave aisle and clear walkway space where possible to reduce tripping hazards.
- Always make sure electrical equipment is connected to grounded outlets.
- Avoid fire hazards by never overloading electrical circuits.
- Inspect and repair carpeting with frayed edges or loose seams. Avoid using throw rugs that can cause tripping hazards in your workspace.
- Locate computers, phones and other electrical equipment in a manner that keeps power cords out of walkways.
- Always power down computers after the workday is over and always turn off all electrical equipment during thunderstorms.
- Keep your work area clean and avoid clutter, which can cause fire and tripping hazards.
- Do not allow non-government employees to operate or repair government owned equipment.
- Always keep government files and information in a secure place and do not advertise your home office to strangers.
- Always use proper lifting techniques when moving or lifting heavy equipment and furniture.
- Always report accidents and injuries immediately to your supervisor.

Article 28

Telework

Section 1. General Provisions

(a) Telework is mutually advantageous to the Employer and to employees by allowing the organization to accomplish its work while also providing employees with the opportunity to reduce commuting time and expenses, promote high morale, and increase time with family. The Parties agree that approved Telework arrangements must result in accomplishment of the assigned duties and responsibilities, while not adversely impacting the accomplishment of those duties and responsibilities. The Parties further agree that all provisions of this Article shall be administered fairly and equitably.

(b) Telework will be managed in accordance with this Article; the OPM Guide to Telework in the Federal Government; DOJ Order 1200.1, Part 6; DOJ Policy Statement 1200.01, Telework; the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010; and other applicable laws and regulations.

(c) Telework is voluntary, and an employee can end his or her participation at any time. While the Parties understand telework is not an individual entitlement, the Employer agrees that it will allow and encourage reasonable participation in the program.

(d) Participation in Telework is subject to technology availability and limitations.

(e) The work needs of the organization shall be paramount in supervisory decisions to approve, disapprove or modify individual requests for Telework arrangements. The Employer shall consider approval of Telework applications based upon position compatibility with Telework; and employee eligibility for Telework.

Section 2. Definitions

(a) Telework (also known as flexiplace, flexible workplace or telecommuting) - A work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work for an agreed upon portion of the work week. Telework arrangements may be of short or long term duration. The types of Telework arrangements which may be approved are as follows:

(1) Routine/Regular/Recurring Telework. The employee teleworks on a specific day (or days) each biweekly period, or month under an established work schedule. The Telework arrangement's duration shall be outlined in writing and shall continue subject to the conditions outlined in the signed agreement.

(2) Situational/Ad hoc/Intermittent Telework. The employee teleworks on a specific project or task(s) deemed by the Employer to be portable. Specific dates and times shall be outlined in advance. Approval of Telework on a short term basis shall be used for positions whose overall functions would not otherwise be portable and for which a regular, recurring Telework arrangement is not feasible. As provided for by OPM guidelines, situational Telework includes work-at-home specifically requested during OPM-approved adverse weather events, and other emergencies, as well as special events impacting employees' commutes.

(3) Telework for medical reasons. A Telework arrangement approved for medical reasons when the employee has a medical condition or the employee requests to be allowed to telecommute because of the medical condition of a family member. The employee shall submit adequate medical documentation which provides a diagnosis/prognosis pertaining to the employee or family member, along with any work-related medical restrictions. In the case of a family member's medical condition requiring the employee's presence, the employee shall outline how he or she will be able to accomplish the functions of the position under a Telework arrangement. Short-term (generally four months or less) work at home situations due to temporary medical situations are considered ad hoc telework and shall follow the provisions of this Article. Longer work at home arrangements should be treated as reasonable accommodations, and as such are covered by the Americans with Disabilities Act, as well as other applicable law, rules, and regulations and terms of this Agreement.

(b) Designated Work Area - An area which is set aside for the performance of the employee's official duties. The designated work area must be free from interruptions, and must provide the necessary level of security and protection of Government property.

(c) Duty Time – Telework is duty time and is just like work accomplished in a traditional office. Although Telework may offer some employees more time for their family responsibilities (e.g., through reduced commuting time), in compliance with guidelines from the Office of Personnel Management and the Department of Justice, Telework arrangements cannot be used as a substitute for child care or other dependent care. Employees may not use duty time for any purpose other than official duties.

(d) Official Duty Station: the official duty station of an employee participating in the Telework Program is the employee's JMD designated office. However, when scheduled Telework is close to 100% (the employee is not scheduled to report to the traditional worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period), then the Telework site may be required to be the Duty Station. This type of Telework is called "Remote Work" which is an arrangement in which the employee resides and works at a location beyond the local commuting area of the organization's worksite under a continuing telework arrangement.

(e) Work Schedule - The established guidance on hours of duty (Article 26) apply to employees under Telework. Telework employees may work fixed or alternate work schedules, (such as flexitime, or maxiflex schedules). The employee's tour of duty will be addressed in the Telework Agreement. Employees are expected to perform their duties at the alternate worksite during regular business hours, on the approved work schedule, and to be accessible during those hours to supervisors, customers, and others as needed. Telework employees shall not work overtime or compensatory time unless ordered and approved in advance by his or her supervisor. Because of the requirements for premium pay, Telework schedules may not be available between the hours of 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. or on Sundays and Federal holidays.

(f) Mobile Work: -Work that is accomplished away from the office, but is not Telework. It is characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in customer or other worksites as opposed to a single authorized alternative worksite. Examples include site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management, and work performed while commuting, traveling between worksites, or on Temporary Duty (TDY). Such work is not covered by this Article.

Section 3. Determining Position Compatibility

(a) Decisions shall be made on a position by position basis. The supervisor shall determine if the position's regular duties can be performed as efficiently and effectively at an alternate work site, without disruption of office operations; adding to Employer costs; adding to the work of other employees; or hampering the efficiency of other positions with whom the incumbent of the position interacts with or provides support, either within or outside the office. In particular, the supervisor will examine:

(1) the portability of the job functions. Examples of portable work include, but are not necessarily limited to: reading reports; analyzing documents and studies; preparing written letters, memoranda, reports, and other work correspondence; setting up and/or participating in work-related conference calls; and similar tasks which do not necessarily require an employee's presence at the worksite;

(2) the ability to measure the outcome(s) or results of the work performed; and

(3) the impact on the organization of the an employee's absence from the duty site, including office coverage, and the size of the organizational unit.

(b) Determinations shall be made as to the positions compatibility and positions shall be placed in four broad categories:

(1) Regular scheduled telework on 1 or more days per pay period;

(2) Regular scheduled telework once per month;

(3) Telework on an occasional, episodic, ad hoc, or short-term basis; or

(4) Position not compatible with telework.

(c) The Employer is responsible for the final review and approval of position eligibility.

Section 4. Determining Employee Eligibility

(a) The Employer shall consider:

(1) The employee's work history for the characteristics associated with successful performance of work in the absence of direct supervision. The employee shall have a rating of record indicating at least successful performance of his/her duties, and should not be under a performance improvement plan (PIP).

(2) Whether the employee is organized, highly disciplined, and a conscientious self-starter, who has demonstrated dependability in accomplishing work assignments without close supervision, and good time management skills.

(3) If the employee is ineligible based on being officially disciplined for any reason within the past year.

(4) If the employee is ineligible based on being officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five (5) workdays in any calendar year.

(5) If the employee is ineligible based on having been disciplined for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties

(b) Other factors may be considered in determining temporary limits on Telework and/or number of days approved. Such factors may include:

(1) training or introduction of new work procedures; and/or

(2) a new employee (or new assignment for a current employee) who needs initial OJT and closer supervision.

(c) The Employer is responsible for the final review and approval of participant eligibility.

Section 5. Employee and Union Notice

(a) An employee shall be informed of the position determination made under Section 3 above:

(1) within twenty (20) workdays of entering a new position; or

(2) within twenty (20) workdays of a change in Telework compatibility status of a position.

(b) An employee shall be informed of their personal eligibility for Telework made under Section 4 above within twenty (20) workdays of entering a new position.

(c) The Union shall be given a list of bargaining unit position determinations under Section 3 (b) above on an annual basis.

Section 6. Employee Requests

(a) Employees who are interested in Telework; and who are in compatible positions (Section 3 above) and are eligible for Telework (Section 4 above); should discuss their interest to Telework with their supervisor. The goal is to reach consensus on items such as the number of days and other details found in the DOJ Telework Agreement form.

(b) Employees who reach an oral agreement with their supervisor shall submit the agreed terms in a formal request/agreement to Telework. The request shall be made on a DOJ Telework Agreement form.

(c) If an oral agreement can't be reached on an employee request to telework, he/she may complete and submit a DOJ Telework Agreement form. The supervisor shall mark the form as "recommended for Disapproval", provide a justification, and return to the employee. The employee may grieve this decision under the process in Article 34 (Grievance Procedures).

Section 7. Agreement and Approval Criteria

(a) Alternate worksites shall be within a reasonable commuting distance that allows telecommuters to report to the official duty station upon request and at least two (2) days during a pay period except as a change in duty location is approved and enacted in accordance with DOJ policy and Section 2 (d) above

(b) The supervisor shall establish standards that address time frames by which the employee must respond to telephone calls or e-mails to ensure that the employee's work is accomplished in such a way under the Telework arrangement as to appear no different to the customer and to other JMD staff from how the work is accomplished at the official duty location.

(c) Teleworkers shall be appraised and rated in a manner consistent with the terms of and procedures provided for in Article 13 (Performance Rating and Standards). Performance standards and criteria for teleworkers shall be the same as for similarly-situated non-teleworkers.

(d) For ad hoc Telework, the supervisor shall determine whatever means of status reporting may be required (e.g., informal updates, periodic status reports, etc.).

(e) Employees proposing an alternate worksite, shall certify compliance of the designated work area with all appropriate safety requirements.

(f) Employees should verify the availability of appropriate equipment to do the job at their telework site, e.g., a computer with appropriate processing capability and associated communications hardware and software that are fully compatible with the equipment in use in their office, or any other equipment that is necessary for the performance of their duties. Depending upon the type of work to be performed, the employee may be required to have high-speed Internet access that will accommodate the Employer's remote access system to provide secure access to the Employer's network. Normally, the Employer shall not expend funds for telecommunications or any other additional costs that arise from an employee's use of a home as an alternate work site. However, expenditures may be authorized when requested/approved in advance for necessary expenses such as a phone card for making long-distance calls.

(g) Notwithstanding subsection (e) above, in some circumstances, appropriate government equipment may be provided to employees for authorized telework purposes. The use of government equipment shall be dependent upon:

- (1) budgetary constraints;
- (2) the nature and type of work being performed;
- (3) the availability of such equipment;
- (4) other pending higher priority requests for such equipment; and

(5) the Employer's determination that the assignment of such equipment for Telework will best meet the work needs of the organization. Such loans may be made on a temporary, short term basis, or for longer durations of time, depending upon the nature of the applicable Telework Agreement and upon the Employer's operational needs.

(h) The Employer shall consider the amount of work that is portable, office coverage (e.g., employees on alternate work schedules and the number of employee's telecommuting within the organization on each day), and organizational/mission needs in determining the days an individual may telecommute.

(i) When a choice between two otherwise equally eligible employees must be made, the employee with the longest U.S. Government service shall have preference in schedules, based on the employee's service computation date.

Section 8. Approving Requests

(a) Response Time. Managers shall review and approve or disapprove Telework requests within fifteen (15) workdays of submission of the completed form. Exceptions to this provision will only be granted when a manager is on leave or training and requires additional time to consider the request. In no case should the response time exceed twenty-five (25) workdays.

(b) Telework schedules must be accurately encoded into the NFC system.

Section 9. Protection of Government Records

Employees under Telework arrangements are responsible for ensuring that all Government records used at an alternate work site are safeguarded against unauthorized disclosure or damage, and shall comply with all laws, rules, and regulations governing classified, law enforcement sensitive, and privacy act protected information.

Section 10. Termination of Telework Arrangements

(a) An employee may terminate his/her participation in such an agreement at any time, after proper notification to the supervisor.

(b) Management has the right to end a Telework arrangement at any time prior to the conclusion of an agreement period if the employee's performance declines; if the employee does not conform to the agreed upon arrangements; if the employee's off site work adversely affects the work of staff remaining in the office; or if the arrangement fails to meet organizational needs.

(c) Normally, employees shall be given two weeks advance written notice before management's termination of a Telework agreement. Such notice shall include the reasons for the decision. The notice shall also inform the employee of his/her right to grieve such termination under the terms of Article 34 (Grievance Procedure) of this Agreement.

(d) Telework arrangements may be temporarily suspended by the supervisor for the reasons cited below, normally after the two (2) week written notification provided for in subsection (c) above unless the exigency of the public business does not allow sufficient time to notify the employee in writing. Telework may be temporarily suspended for the following reasons:

- (1) to fulfill official travel requirements;
- (2) to fulfill training requirements;
- (3) to enable the employee to substitute as an acting supervisor;
- (4) to attend essential meetings, conferences, etc.;
- (5) to fulfill critical project requirements that require the individual's presence at the official duty station or alternative duty station;
- (6) to cover for absences during heavy vacation periods; and
- (7) for other mission critical office needs.

(e) Written notices to suspend telework arrangements under the terms of subsection (d) will provide the employee with the reasons necessitating the temporary suspension.

Section 11. Training

(a) Pursuant to DOJ Policy Statement 1200.01 (Telework), JMD Human Resources will develop and provide interested employees with an interactive telework training program. Such training will be equivalent in nature to the online telework training offered by OPM. In the absence of any available Departmental telework training program, the Employer shall post notice on its Intranet, and/or on the Internet, of the availability of OPM's online training course. The posting shall also include a hot link to the applicable online training site.

(b) Employees shall be given administrative time of up to four (4) hours to participate in OPM's online telework training course or in such equivalent training as the Employer is able to provide.

(c) Employees must have completed such training prior to signing their Telework agreement.

Section 12. Operational Issues

(a) If an employee is unable to perform his or her official duties at the alternate work site because of equipment failure or malfunction or for other reasons beyond the employee's control that result in computer equipment or telephones being inoperable (such as power or telephone service outages), the employee shall notify the appropriate supervisory official immediately upon discovery of the problem. An employee unable to perform his or her official duties at an alternate work site, may be required to take leave or report to the official duty station to fulfill required duty hours for that day. In such a case, the supervisory official may treat the employee's transportation time to the official duty station as official time.

(b) Supervisors may cancel an employee's Telework day for a pay period. When there is holiday or other reason why a Telework day is not granted, an alternate day is not automatic. An alternate Telework day may be granted for that pay period only with written supervisory approval.

(c) Employees shall report to the office on a scheduled Telework day, if the supervisor so directs it, based on the work needs of the office.

(d) Employees who are scheduled to Telework on a day the traditional worksite is closed or subject to an early closure or delayed arrival, shall work their full schedule. An exception would be a power outage or other event that would prevent the employee from working as scheduled.

(e) The employee shall permit the Employer to inspect the alternative work site during the employee's normal working hours. The purpose of such inspections is to ensure conformance with key provisions of the Telework Agreement, especially the implementation of accepted safety standards, care of any government equipment, and/or the provisions of Section 9 (Protection of Government Records) above. The necessity of such inspections shall be determined by management on a case-by-case basis. Employees shall normally receive no less than forty-eight (48) hours advance notice. When such inspections are to be held, the employee may request that a Union representative be present. The Parties understand that, except under exceptional circumstances, inspections will be done by officials with the appropriate qualifications to certify compliance with recognized requirements.

Section 13. Employer's Rights

The Parties recognize and agree that the Employer has the sole discretion and authority to determine which occupational series are eligible for Telework arrangements.

Section 14. Employee's Rights

With regard to the terms of this Article, employees retain all grievance and complaint rights as provided for in Articles 34 (Grievance Procedures) and 11 (Equal Employment Opportunity). While the Parties acknowledge that the Employer retains all of its rights to approve or disapprove employee participation in Telework, they also acknowledge that employees may grieve or file a complaint regarding any procedural violations of this Agreement, or of applicable law, policy or regulation regarding the Employer's administration of its Telework program.

ARTICLE 30
NOTIFICATION OF SPECIAL WORK OPPORTUNITIES

Where there is a special work opportunity and Management has determined there may be more than one qualified employee to perform the assignment, Management will solicit volunteers for that work opportunity, unless due to a short deadline such solicitation cannot be accomplished. The ultimate decision as to which employee will be assigned to the work opportunity is Management's. It is understood that Management can direct and assign the work opportunity to an employee who did not volunteer. Upon request, Management shall provide the basis for the decision to an employee who volunteered or to the Union.

LABOR-MANAGEMENT COMMITTEES

Management will meet bi-weekly with the Union president (or designee) and one other Union representative to discuss anticipated Management-initiated changes to terms and conditions of employment for bargaining unit employees and other issues affecting bargaining unit employees. Management and the Union will work together to establish a cooperative labor-management process for sharing information and considering changes to existing policies and procedures as well as new policies and procedures.

The Labor-Management Committee may establish sub-committees or task forces, of equal numbers from each party, when the Committee determines it would be helpful to the furtherance of good labor-management relations. Either party may invite a subject matter expert to participate in the sub-committee or task force.

FLEXIPLACE

32.1 This Article establishes a Pilot Program to test the effectiveness of a flexiplace program at the Board of Immigration Appeals, in order to determine the feasibility of establishing a program on a permanent basis.

32.2 Unless specifically changed by the terms of this Article, all other terms and conditions of employment will affect employees participating in this Pilot Program to the same extent as other members of the bargaining unit.

32.3 The Pilot Program will last 12 months from the implementation date of this Agreement. At the end of the 12 months, the Parties will have 90 days to analyze the Pilot Program, and the Parties will negotiate over whether to continue, terminate, or modify the program. During the negotiation period the Pilot Program will remain in effect.

32.4 A key component of this Pilot Program is a comprehensive evaluation of the program's effectiveness. The standard for determining whether to continue the flexiplace program will be a "demonstrable benefit to the agency." Criteria for judging the effectiveness of the program will include the impact of the program on performance of the organization's mission; productivity of the organization; employee leave usage; supervisory assessment of the program; employee assessment of the program; and overall cost.

32.5 Data gathered from the evaluation, including the raw data collected by Management, will be shared with the Union and will be used by the Parties in evaluating the program. Such data should be shared with the Union as it is collected by Management.

32.6 Eligibility: The following criteria will be used in determining eligibility for participation in the Pilot Program:

- a. The employee's duties must be portable;
- b. The employee's most recent summary rating must be Outstanding;
- c. The employee must have year of experience in his or her position at the Board;
- d. Up to 15% of the bargaining unit attorneys at the Board may participate in the Pilot Program. Attorney-advisors currently working under a flexiplace arrangement will remain working under those arrangements during the Pilot Program, but are subject to the 15% limit. At the conclusion of the Pilot Program, all employees will be subject to the same conditions for participating in any flexiplace program. If total attorney-advisor interest in participating in the Pilot Program exceeds 15%, the eligibility of those attorney-advisors not currently in a flexiplace arrangement will be determined by seniority (as defined elsewhere in this Agreement);
- e. Up to 15% of the non-attorneys may also participate in the program, if it is established that the jobs in question are portable.

32.7 Conditions: The following are conditions for those participating in the Pilot Program:

- a. Employees participating in the Pilot Program agree to adhere to the "Agreement Governing Removal of Records of Proceedings from BIA Offices" distributed by the Chairman on April 15, 1996;
- b. Employees participating in the Pilot Program will sign a flexiplace work agreement prior to commencing work at home;
- c. Employees participating in the Pilot Program must be available by telephone during duty hours;

- d Employees participating in the Pilot Program may not use flexiplace as a substitute for child or elder care;
- e The employee must be available in the office at the need of the Board Members or Board Management, such as for Panel meetings, en banc conferences, and staff meetings;
- f Employees participating in the Pilot Program may not work more than 1 day a week at the flexiplace site, except that, pursuant to No. 6, those currently working under a flexiplace arrangement will remain working under their current arrangements.

32.8 Management reserves the right to terminate the participation in the Pilot Program of an employee who has demonstrated disregard for the security of government records or an employee whose work demonstrably declines while in the Pilot Program.

32.9 Nothing in this Article shall prevent Management, at its sole discretion, from allowing an employee, who demonstrates that he or she has a compelling, temporary need, to work in another type of arrangement involving a flexiplace site.

ARTICLE 33 WORK SPACE PROVISIONS

33.1 GENERAL: Management recognizes that the quality of the workplace has a significant impact on the efficiency of the Board's operations. In any design or redesign of the workplace, Management will focus on improving the quality of the workplace. A quality workplace requires the efficient use of office space and attention to those factors that provide employees adequate space to do their respective jobs to the best of their abilities. Space occupied by employees within the bargaining unit shall be arranged and maintained so as to ensure a quality workplace.

Management agrees that work space configurations must conform with applicable safety, fire and health codes.

When a space change is to occur that will have an impact on bargaining unit employees, Management will notify the Union before a final decision is rendered on the proposed change. Upon request, Management will consult with the Union on all aspects of the proposed changes, including the blue prints and such issues as size; design; location of offices and work stations; access to windows; common use space (e.g., break rooms, conference rooms); furniture; carpeting; paint; lighting; location of common use equipment; and storage or file space.

Management shall allocate workspace of bargaining unit employees in such a way as to set order of preference in accordance with an employee's seniority status, as defined in section 33.3 of this Article, within the employee's panel for the attorneys, paralegals, and legal technicians who support the attorney panels. The parties recognize that, if Management acquires suitable space, it may

Parties to the Agreement, Recognition and Definition of Unit

Section A. Parties to the Agreement

The parties to this Agreement are the Legal Divisions/Office of the Solicitor General of the Department of Justice (hereinafter known as the "Employer") and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, Local 3719, AFL-CIO (hereinafter known as the "Union").

Section B. Unit of Recognition

The unit of recognition covered by this Agreement is that unit certified by the Federal Labor Relations Authority in Case No. 3-RO-00017. The Employer recognizes Local 3719 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO, as the exclusive representative of all employees (hereinafter sometimes referred to as "employees" or "bargaining unit employee(s)") in the bargaining unit as defined below. The Union recognizes that it is responsible for representing the interests of all such bargaining unit employees, with respect to grievances, personnel policies, practices, or matters affecting their general working conditions without discrimination and without regard to Union membership and in accordance with applicable laws.

Section C. Definition of Unit

The Federal Labor Relations Authority has certified the Union as the exclusive representative of the bargaining unit comprised of: All nonprofessional employees employed by the U.S. Department of Justice in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area in the Office of the Solicitor General, Antitrust Division, Civil Division, Civil Rights Division, Tax

Division, and the Environment and Natural Resources Division, but excluding all professional employees, management officials, supervisors, temporary employees of 90 days or less, and employees described in 5 U.S.C. 7112 (b) (2) (3) (4) (6) and (7), temporary employees under stay-in-school and student programs, and law students on temporary appointment.

Section D. Coverage of the Agreement

This Agreement covers only those positions included in the bargaining unit. Where the term "employee" or "employees" is used, it is understood that it includes bargaining unit employees.

Article 32

Flexiplace

Section A. General Provisions

The Department of Justice makes a variety of worklife options potentially available to its employees. A single form, the Department of Justice Flexible Work Option Request Form, has been instituted to ensure that employees have a formal, consistent mechanism for requesting flexibility. Managers will give full and thoughtful consideration to employee requests.

Section B. Definitions

1. Flexiplace, also known as flexible workplace or telecommuting, refers to paid employment away from the workplace or at home for an agreed upon portion of the workweek. Flexiplace arrangements may be of short or long term duration.
2. Duty time. Although flexiplace may offer some employees more time for their family responsibilities (i.e., through reduced commuting time), in compliance with guidelines from the Office of Personnel Management, flexiplace arrangements can not be used as a substitute for child care or other dependent care. Employees may not use duty time for any purpose other than official duties.
3. Designated work area. A designated work area at an alternate work site is a single area, either a room or a portion of a room, that is set aside for the performance of the employee's official duties. The designated work area must be free from interruptions, and must provide the necessary level of security and protection for Government property.

Section C. Criteria and Conditions for Approval

1. Flexiplace is not an entitlement. The work needs of the organization will be paramount in supervisory decisions to approve, disapprove, or modify individual requests for Flexiplace arrangements. Decisions will be made on a case by case basis, with a focus on the portability of the employee's duties; the impact that the proposed arrangement will have on the efficient operation of the organization; and the employee's work history. See addendum.
2. The initial step in reviewing a Flexiplace request will be an examination of the nature and specific requirements of the employee's work. In order for a request to receive consideration, the supervisor must first determine that the employee's regular duties can be performed as efficiently and effectively at an alternate work site, without disrupting office operations; adding to agency costs; adding to the work of other employees; or hampering the efficiency of others with whom the individual interacts or provides support, either within or outside the office. In this regard, the supervisor will carefully consider how the employee is proposing in his/her Flexiplace request to sustain or enhance the employee's and the organization's ability to get the job done.
3. If the supervisor determines that the duties of an employee's position are suitable for performance at an alternate work site, as discussed above, the supervisor will then assess the employee's work history for the characteristics associated with successful performance of work in the absence of direct supervision. The employee should be an organized, highly disciplined, and conscientious self-starter, who has demonstrated dependability in accomplishing work assignments without close supervision, and good time management skills. Employees must also be willing to report to the office on a scheduled Flexiplace day, if the supervisor so directs it, based on the work needs of the office.

Individuals who are on leave restrictions; who have been counseled or disciplined for leave or conduct problems within the preceding year; or who have received less than a "fully successful" (or equivalent) rating on the employee's most recent performance appraisal, are ineligible to participate in Flexiplace arrangements.

4. Upon request, the Employer will provide interested employees with a listing of GSA-approved telecommuting centers in the vicinity of the employee's home. The Employer will determine if use of a telecommuting center is a cost effective method of performing work by an employee who has met all of the criteria for participation in a Flexiplace program.
5. Employees proposing an alternate work site other than an approved telecommuting center or other government office must certify compliance of the designated work area with all appropriate safety requirements, and must present an acceptable plan for eliminating personal distractions, including specific arrangements for dependent care if applicable. The employee agrees to permit the employer to inspect the alternative work site during the employee's normal working hours to ensure conformance with safety standards and/or provisions of Section E concerning the protection of government records. Necessity of inspection will be determined on a case-by-case basis by management. Employees will normally receive a minimum of 24 hours of advance notice. Additional inspections will occur only for cause, for example, accidents in the designated work area, employee relocation, or potential security violations. The parties understand that, normally, inspections will be done by officials with the appropriate qualifications to certify compliance with safety and/or security requirements.
6. Approved participants must have appropriate equipment to do their job, e.g., a computer with appropriate processing capability and associated communications hardware and software that are fully compatible with the equipment in use in their office, or any other equipment that is necessary for the performance of their duties. Appropriate surplus/loaner equipment may be provided on a temporary, short term basis in some circumstances dependent upon: (1) the availability of such surplus/loaner equipment; (2) other pending priority requests for such equipment; and (3) a management determination that the temporary assignment of this equipment to an employee for a short term flexiplace arrangement will best meet the work needs of the organization. The employer will not expend funds for telecommunications or any other additional costs that arise from an employee's use of a home as an alternate work site.

7. Normally, employees on Flexiplace arrangements are expected to perform their duties at the alternate work site during regular business hours, and to be accessible during those hours to supervisors, and others as needed. In accordance with applicable law, rules and regulations and Article 17, Section C, overtime must be ordered and approved in advance, in order for the employee to be compensated. Because of the requirements for premium pay, Flexiplace schedules are not available in the Legal Divisions/Office of the Solicitor General between the hours of 6pm and 6am or on Sundays and federal holidays.

Section D. Procedures for Making and Approving Requests

1. Employees wishing to request Flexiplace/telecommuting must fully address all information requirements on the DOJ Flexible Work Option Request Form. This form may be obtained from their supervisor or Executive Office and is incorporated by reference herein.
2. If a request is approved, the employee must sign a Flexiplace agreement in a manner specified by the Employer which sets forth the terms, conditions, and duration of participation.

Management may waive the requirement for a written agreement if the Flexiplace arrangement is of short duration, i.e., limited to a few days for a specific project approved by the supervisor. Notwithstanding such informal arrangements, appropriate measures to ensure the government against liability must be taken.

3. If an employee is engaged in a grievance or appeal relating to his/her work history at the time a Flexiplace request is made, the supervisor's decision on the Flexiplace request will be held in abeyance until the grievance or appeal is resolved.

Section E. Protection of Government Records

Employees under Flexiplace arrangements are responsible for ensuring that all government records used at an alternate work site are safeguarded against unauthorized disclosure or damage, and will comply with all laws, rules, and regulations governing classified, law enforcement sensitive, and Privacy Act protected information.

Section F. Termination of Flexiplace Arrangements

1. Management has the right to end a Flexiplace arrangement at any time prior to the conclusion of an agreement period if the employee's performance declines; if the employee does not conform to the agreed upon arrangements; if the employee's off-site work adversely affects the work of the staff remaining in the office; or if the arrangement fails to meet organizational needs.
2. Whenever feasible, employees will be given two weeks advance notice before managements's termination of a Flexiplace agreement. An employee may terminate his/her participation in such an agreement at any time, after proper notification to the supervisor.

Article 30

Transit Subsidy

Section 1. General Provisions

(a) The Employer has determined that it will provide a commuting subsidy in the form of monthly transit benefits to each eligible employee, as authorized by applicable laws, rules and regulations and subject to available funding. If an employee's actual cost of eligible commuting (not including the cost for parking or for any other related commuting expenses) is less than the maximum monthly benefit amount, she/he will only receive a transit benefit equal to the actual cost of the commute.

(b) An eligible OJP employee for purposes of receiving a transit benefit is either a student volunteer or an individual who is on the paid employment rolls of the Employer during the period for which he/she is seeking a benefit and who will remain on the rolls of the Employer for a sufficient period of time during that month to meet the usage criteria outlined below. In addition, an eligible employee must use mass transportation or a commuter highway vehicle for regular daily commuting in accordance with the provisions outlined below and who does not receive other commuting benefits from any federal agency.

(c) Employees named on a work place motor vehicle parking permit, including employees listed as a member of car pools and van pools that park in spaces subsidized by OJP or any other federal entity, must withdraw their membership in that car pool or van pool before receiving the Employer's transit benefit, in accordance with applicable laws, rules, and regulations. The Employer may establish appropriate systems to communicate with other Federal Parking Coordinators to monitor participation in car pools.

Section 2. Eligibility

In order for an employee to receive a transit benefit, in accordance with applicable laws, rules, and regulations, he/she must:

- (a) apply for the transit benefit, and
- (b) meet all requirements to include commuting the requisite number of days using an eligible mass transportation system or a commuter highway vehicle (including eligible van pools).

Section 3. Other Commuting Systems

If an individual uses a mass transportation system which has been approved by the Employer, but which is not a member of the WMATA Federal MetroPool program, the employee must follow the established procedures in order to be considered for any Employer reimbursement for his/her monthly commuting expenses on the mass transit system.

Section 4. Restrictions on Use

Transit benefits, and any other media to which they are converted, may not be transferred from the recipient to any other individual, including family members. Moreover, transit benefits, and any media to which they are converted, may only be used for commuting to and from work on an eligible mass transportation system. Transit benefits may not be used for personal trips, to pay for parking, or other costs associated with commuting.

Section 5. Replacement of Lost Transit Benefits

If an employee misplaces his/her transit benefit, it will not be replaced by the Employer.

Section 6. Conditions of Termination

Failure to comply with program requirements will result in expulsion from the program and can result in disciplinary action, up to and including removal. The making of a false, fictitious or fraudulent certification may render the maker subject to criminal prosecution under application laws, rules, and regulations, providing for administrative recoveries.

Article 31

Telework

Section 1. General Provisions

(a) Telework is primarily an arrangement established to facilitate the accomplishment of work; although it may be mutually advantageous to OJP and to employees by ensuring the organization accomplishes its mission while also providing employees with the opportunity to reduce commuting time and expenses, promote high morale, and increase time with family. Approved Telework arrangements must result in accomplishment of the assigned duties and responsibilities and must not adversely impact the accomplishment of those duties and responsibilities or the mission.

(b) Telework is voluntary, and an employee can end his or her participation at any time. Participation in Telework is subject to Employer approval, technology availability, and other limitations.

Section 2. Definitions

(a) Telework Site - A location, either in the employee's home or some other location over which the employee has control of the environment, that is set aside for the performance of the employee's official duties. The telework site must be free from hazards and interruptions, and must provide the necessary level of security and protection of Government information and property.

(b) Regular Worksite – The location from which the employee would perform official duties if not on a telework agreement.

(c) Official Duty Worksite – The official worksite of an employee participating in the Telework Program is the employee’s OJP designated office. However, when an employee is not scheduled to report to the regular worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period, the Telework site may be designated as the employee’s official worksite.

(d) Portable Function – Duties and responsibilities that can be effectively accomplished at the telework site with the assistance of electronic access. These may include, but are not limited to, writing, reviewing and editing, data analysis and management, customer communication via phone and e-mail, etc. Functions that are not portable normally include those that require physical presence and extensive face-to-face contact, require access to material that is not available off-site, and those that involve security issues that prevent the work from being accomplished at an alternative worksite.

(e) Telework Agreement– An agreement between OJP and an employee covering items specific to the employee’s situation such as type of Telework, official work site, Telework site, number of telework days authorized, modes of communication (e.g., email, telephone), and any other requirements determined by OJP in order to grant an employee Telework.

(f) Work Schedule - The existing rules on hours of duty apply to employees under Telework. Teleworkers must observe the same work rules with regard to hours of duty that apply to non-teleworking employees. Employees are expected to perform their duties at the telework site during regular business hours, and to be accessible during those hours to designated management officials, customers, and others as needed. A teleworking employee is not authorized to work overtime, compensatory time, or on weekends, holidays, or other premium pay periods unless ordered and approved in advance by his or her designated management official.

(g) Remote Work – An employee assignment in which the employee’s telework site becomes the official duty worksite. Remote work assignments may be initiated by OJP or requested by an employee and are recognized as a change in conditions of employment under Article 2, Section 7 Rights and Duties of the Union. Remote work assignments are designed to retain flexibility to provide a variety of workplace solutions on a case-by-case basis.

(h) Telework - A mutually agreed upon work flexibility arrangement under which employees perform the duties and responsibilities of their positions from a telework site rather than the regular worksite.

The types of Telework arrangements which may be approved are as follows:

(1) Regular Telework - Work performed from the telework site on a routine, regular, and ongoing basis (short term, long term, or both) consistent with the employee’s approved work schedule.

(2) Project-based Telework - Work performed from the telework site on an intermittent basis to complete specific projects or tasks deemed by the Employer to be portable. Project-based Telework may be used for positions whose overall functions would not otherwise be portable and for which regular Telework arrangements are not feasible. It may also be used to address other needs where the flexibility would benefit both the Employer and the employee, as determined and authorized by the Employer.

(3) Medical Telework - Work performed at the telework site to provide flexibility to address a medical condition of the employee or an employee’s family member.

(4) Continuity of Operations – Work performed at the telework site to continue essential functions in an emergency situation.

Section 3. Eligibility

(a) Position Compatibility – Work suitability depends on job content, rather than job title, type of appointment, or work schedule. The Parties recognize and agree that the Employer has the sole discretion and authority to determine which positions are compatible for Telework arrangements.

Compatibility is determined based upon the following criteria:

(1) Portable functions.

(2) The ability to measure the outcomes or results of the work performed.

(3) Negligible impact on the organization and mission accomplishment created by the employee’s absence from the regular worksite. This includes ensuring efficiency and effectiveness of completing the duties at an alternate work site without disruption of office operations, adding to agency costs, adding to the work of other employees, or hampering the efficiency of others with whom the individual interacts or provides support.

(b) Individual Eligibility - Telework is not an entitlement. The work needs of the organization will be paramount in supervisory decisions to approve, disapprove or modify individual requests for Telework arrangements. Subject to the operational needs of the office, employees are eligible to participate in Telework if they meet the following conditions:

- (1) They occupy a position that is compatible with telework.
- (2) Their current work performance and last rating of record are at the "Meets Expectations" or equivalent level or above.
- (3) They are not on leave restriction or have been on leave restriction within the last year.
- (4) They have not been counseled or disciplined for leave or conduct within the preceding year.
- (5) They have not been placed under a performance improvement plan (PIP).
- (6) There are no pending, unresolved issues related to previous work history.
- (7) There are no other exclusions based on applicable laws, rules, and regulations.

(c) Determinations shall be made as to the position's compatibility and positions shall be placed into four broad categories:

- (1) Regular scheduled telework up to five (5) days per pay period;
- (2) Regular scheduled telework once per month;
- (3) Telework on an occasional, episodic, ad hoc, or short-term basis; or
- (4) Position is not compatible with telework.

(d) The Employer is responsible for the final review and approval of position eligibility.

Section 4. Requirements for Participation in Telework

(a) Work Assignments and Performance:

(1) The designated management official and employee must mutually agree upon work that is routinely available to be performed at a telework site and would constitute sufficient work to fill the employee's scheduled tour of duty. Tasks will be identified and attached to the Telework request and agreement form. As determined necessary or appropriate, the employee will meet with the Employer to receive additional assignments and to review completed work.

(2) The designated management official may establish standards that address time frames by which the employees on Telework must respond to telephone calls, e-mails, etc. to ensure that the employee's work is accomplished in such a way under the Telework arrangement as to appear seamless to the customer and to other OJP staff from how the work is accomplished at the regular work site. The Employer may require employees on Telework to maintain written records of work performed while teleworking through email notifications, weekly or biweekly reports, written logs, etc. to his/her designated management official. Telework agreements may be reviewed periodically by the employee and the supervisor.

(3) Employees approved for regular or project based Telework may Telework up to five (5) days per pay period, for an agreed upon portion of the work week, as outlined in the Telework Agreement. The Employer will consider the amount of work that is portable, office coverage (e.g. employees on alternate work schedules and the number of employees telecommuting within the organization on each day), and organizational/mission needs in determining the days an individual may telecommute. Supervisors have the discretion to cancel an employee's Telework day for a pay period for operational needs and may grant an alternate Telework day for that pay period if schedules and operational needs of the Employer permit.

(4) The employee will complete all assigned work, whether working at the telework site or the regular worksite, according to work procedures mutually agreed upon by the employee and the Employer, and according to guidelines and standards stated in the employee's performance plan. The employee must maintain performance at the "Meets Expectations" or equivalent level to continue Teleworking.

(5) The employee may be required to attend meetings, conferences, training, etc. at the regular worksite or other Employer designated location on days or hours normally scheduled for the telework site. In such instances, an alternate telework day(s) may be granted, if schedules and operational needs of the Employer permit. With advanced approval from the Employer, the employee may temporarily change a Telework day within a pay period to accommodate a work or personal need.

(6) The employee must:

- i. Ensure that care for dependents (e.g. young children, elderly loved ones, or loved ones with special needs) is provided by someone other than themselves while they Telework;

- ii. Timely notify the supervisor of any workplace-related injury or illness;
- iii. Request leave in advance from the supervisor and keep the timekeeper informed of leave usage, in accordance with applicable laws, rules, and regulations, and this Agreement;
- iv. Coordinate absences from the Telework site, including official meetings, to ensure the supervisor can properly account for the Teleworker's whereabouts and attendance. The employee is expected to be either at the regular worksite, the telework site, or Employer designated location during the employee's designated hours of duty, except when on approved leave; and,
- v. Timely notify the supervisor of the desire to voluntarily terminate a Telework agreement.

(7) Telework for medical reasons. A Telework arrangement may be approved for medical reasons when the employee has a medical condition or the employee requests to be allowed to telework because of the medical condition of a family member. The employee shall submit administratively acceptable evidence consistent with applicable laws, rules, and regulations, pertaining to the employee or family member, along with any work-related medical restrictions. An employee seeking telework for medical reasons shall address his/her request to the designated management official. In the case of a family member's medical condition requiring the employee's presence, the employee shall outline how he or she will be able to accomplish the functions of the position under a Telework arrangement. Short-term (generally four months or less) medical telework due to temporary medical situations are considered ad hoc telework and shall follow the provisions of this Article. Longer medical telework arrangements should be treated as reasonable accommodations, and as such are covered by the Americans with Disabilities Act, as well as other applicable law, rules, and regulations and the terms of this Agreement.

(8) A Remote Work assignment (in which the employee's telework site becomes the duty station) for an employee is recognized as a change in conditions of employment under Article 2, Section 7 Rights and Duties of the Union.

(b) Facilities

(1) The employee is required to complete the Alternative Worksite Safety Checklist and certify that the telework site is clean, free of obstructions or potential safety hazards, in compliance with all building codes, and free of hazardous materials. The Telework arrangement may be denied, suspended, or discontinued based on safety problems at the telework site.

(2) If the employee changes the alternate work site (for example if the employee moves to a new home), the employee must immediately notify the responsible management official of the change. The employee must also amend the Telework Request and Agreement form to reflect the new location and document any changes to the Alternate Worksite Safety Checklist. A new form is not normally required if the employee has certified that the telework site meets appropriate standards.

(3) The Employer may periodically inspect the telework site during the employee's normal working hours to ensure proper maintenance of government-owned property, worksite conformance with safety standards, and other required specifications. The Employer will make reasonable attempts to provide 24 hour notice prior to conducting the inspection.

(4) The Employer is not liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property during the course of performance of official duties or while using government-owned equipment in the employee's residence, except to the extent the Government is held liable by applicable laws, rules, and regulations.

(5) The Employer is not responsible for operating costs, home maintenance, or any other incidental costs (e.g., utilities), associated with the use of the employee's residence. While Teleworking, the employee does not relinquish any entitlement to reimbursement for authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the government, as provided for by applicable laws, rules, or regulations.

(c) Equipment and Support Services

(1) The use of government-furnished equipment (GFE) is required during a Telework assignment. Upon approval of a Telework Agreement, the Employer will provide GFE as soon as practicable based upon:

- i. the availability of such equipment
- ii. other pending priority requests for such equipment
- iii. a management determination that the assignment of this equipment to an employee for a Telework arrangement to perform the employee's work assignments will best meet the work needs of the organization, and;
- iv. that necessary funds are available to provide appropriate equipment. Employees are not authorized to use personal computer equipment to access the DOJ/OJP computer network or supplement the GFE.

- v. that unauthorized usage may be subject to appropriate disciplinary action, up to and including removal.

(2) The employee is responsible for protecting the government equipment from all forms of loss or damage. GFE will be serviced and maintained by the government.

(3) Teleworkers shall use GFE for official and authorized purposes only. Family members and friends of employees are not authorized to use GFE and materials. Teleworkers must return GFE to the Employer at the conclusion of the Teleworking arrangement or at the Employer's request.

(d) Injury on the Job. Teleworkers are covered under the Federal Employee's Compensation Act if injured in the course of actually performing official duties on the Employer's premises or within the telework site. Any accident or injury occurring must be brought to the immediate attention of the responsible management official.

Section 5. Security and Protection of Government Records

(a) Employees under Telework arrangements are responsible to protect and secure all OJP information, GFE, and Government/Employer property while Teleworking.

(b) Employees shall not take classified documents (hard copy or electronic) to any Telework location.

(c) Employees must also follow applicable laws, rules, and regulations governing sensitive, unclassified data, including Privacy Act or Official Use Only information.

(d) Employees will also comply with all applicable laws, rules, and regulations governing information technology security in order to protect access to Employer electronic information and computer systems.

(e) Employees under Telework arrangements shall consider purchasing a lockable file cabinet to appropriately protect and safeguard office files and materials.

(f) Teleworkers must protect competition sensitive, source selection information, or contractor proprietary data or data otherwise restricted by applicable laws, rules, and regulations.

Section 6. Application and Approval Process

(a) An employee wishing to participate in Telework must fully address all information requirements on the designated request form, and be willing to comply with all of the terms, conditions, and requirements outlined in the Telework agreement, this Agreement, and applicable laws, rules, and regulations.

(b) An employee must complete, sign and submit the appropriate request and agreement form that will be available to all employees on the OJP portal. The employee must also identify in writing the tasks that can be completed while teleworking and attach this information to the form.

(c) In order for a request to be approved, the designated management official and employee must mutually agree that the identified work is routinely available for accomplishment at an alternative work site and would constitute sufficient work to fill the employee's scheduled tour of duty.

Section 7. Denial or Termination of Telework Arrangements

(a) Telework arrangements may be temporarily suspended by the designated management official for reasons included but not limited to those cited below, normally after the employee is notified in writing. Management reserves the right to suspend a telework agreement prior to notifying an employee in writing when the accomplishment of OJP's mission requires immediate suspension.

- (1) Position incompatibility;
- (2) Employee ineligibility;
- (3) Decline in employee performance;
- (4) Nonconformance with the signed Telework agreement ;
- (5) Adverse impact on the operations of the office;
- (6) The arrangement fails to meet organizational needs and/or hinders mission accomplishments;
- (7) Performance of telework from a location other than an approved telework site;
- (8) Employee misconduct;
- (9) Instances of counseling or imposition of discipline related to leave or conduct;
- (10) Employee status (e.g. trainee or entry-level); and
- (11) Safety issues or suspected hazardous materials in the Telework location.

Employees on alternate work schedules will follow applicable laws, rules, and regulations, and this Agreement, on Telework and AWS.

The Employer will document on the Telework Request and Agreement Form the reason(s) for any disapproval or cancellation. An employee may reapply for Telework once the conditions that led to the disapproval or denial no longer apply. Any modification of the Telework conditions will be described on the Telework Request and Agreement Form and a copy given to the employee.

(b) The Employer will give reasonable advance notice before the termination of a Telework agreement. Employees may provide a copy of any termination notice to the Union. An employee may terminate his/her participation in such an agreement at any time, after reasonable advance notification to the designated management official.

(c) Telework arrangements may be temporarily suspended by the designated management official for reasons such as those cited below, normally after written notification unless the conduct of the mission does not allow sufficient time to notify the employee in writing.

- (1) To fulfill official travel requirements
- (2) To fulfill training requirements
- (3) To attend essential meetings, conferences, etc.
- (4) To complete work requirements that require the individual's presence at a designated location
- (5) To cover for absences during heavy vacation periods
- (6) For other appropriate operational needs

(d) If the employee accepts a new position or if there is a change in designated management official, the Telework agreement is terminated. A new agreement based upon the new duties and/or the receiving designated management official's concurrence must be implemented before the employee may resume Telework.

(e) If the Employer and/or employee change the number of Telework days being worked per pay period on a regular basis, the original Telework agreement is considered to be terminated and a new agreement must be approved.

(f) Grievances and appeals related to Telework will be handled in accordance with applicable laws, rules, and regulations, and this Agreement.

(g) Work assignments, awards, recognition, developmental opportunities, training, promotions, leave requests, etc. for teleworkers will be handled in accordance with applicable laws, rules, and regulations, and this Agreement.

Section 8. Equipment Failure or Inoperability

If an employee is unable to perform his or her official duties at the alternate work site because of equipment failure or malfunction or for other reasons beyond the employee's control that result in computer equipment or telephones being inoperable (such as power or telephone service outages), the employee must notify the designated management official immediately upon discovery of the problem. An employee unable to perform his or her official duties at a telework site may be required to take leave or report to the designated location to fulfill required duty hours for that day.

Section 9. Employee Rights

An employee who teleworks will not be treated differently in terms of opportunities, such as work assignments, awards, recognition, development opportunities, and promotions, based solely on his/her Telework status.

Article 32 Ground Rules for Negotiation of Successor Collective Bargaining Agreements

Section 1. Purpose

The following ground rules will govern all matters between the Office of Justice Programs (OJP or Employer) and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME or Union) Local 2830, (both referred to collectively as the Parties) pertaining to negotiations of a new collective bargaining agreement.

Section 2. Introduction

(a) The Office of Justice Programs (OJP or the Employer) and AFSCME Local 2830 (the Union), which is the duly authorized exclusive representative of the bargaining unit members in OJP as defined in Article 1, Section 2 of the current negotiated agreement, hereby mutually agree to the following procedures for negotiating a master collective bargaining agreement (CBA). The CBA shall pertain to the personnel policies, practices, and working conditions affecting OJP's bargaining unit employees. The Agency and the Union are collectively referred to as the Parties to this Agreement.

(b) Both Parties agree to have equal bargaining status, under the applicable provisions of the Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute (Chapter 71 of Title 5 of the US Code, also referred to as the FSLMR Statute), during negotiation of the CBA while making efforts to maintain and further a constructive and positive working relationship to the benefit of the Employer and its employees. Both Parties agree to focus on interests and concerns and avoid personal criticism.

(c) Conditions and requirements established by these ground rules may be amended or waived by mutual agreement.

PREAMBLE

WHEREAS the American Federation of Government Employees, AFL-CIO (Union) and the United States Department of Justice, U.S. Marshals Service (Agency), also referred to as the Parties, recognize that the right of employees to organize, bargain collectively, and participate through labor organizations of their own choosing in decisions which affect them safeguards the public interest, contributes to the effective conduct of public business, and facilitates and encourages the amicable settlements of disputes between employees and their employers involving conditions of employment; and

WHEREAS the Parties recognize that the public interest demands the highest standards of employee performance and implementation of modern progressive work practices to facilitate and improve employee performance and the efficient accomplishment of the operations of the Government; and

WHEREAS the Parties recognize that a mutual commitment to cooperation promotes both the efficiency of the Agency's operations and the well-being of its employees; and

WHEREAS the Parties agree that the dignity of employees will be respected in the implementation and application of this Agreement as well as related personnel policies and practices;

NOW THEREFORE the Parties here by further agree as follows:

To work together through this Master Agreement to identify problems and craft solutions, enhance productivity, and deliver the best quality of service to the nation;

To focus on problems and ways to solve those problems which promote the interests of the public, while recognizing the needs of the other party;

To consider collective bargaining as an opportunity to improve the relationship between the Agency and the Union; and

To recognize that the employees are the most valuable resource of the Agency, and are encouraged, and shall be reasonably assisted, to develop their potential as U.S. Marshals Service employees to the fullest extent practicable.

The Agency agrees to provide a safe and healthful working environment for all employees and will comply with applicable federal, state and local laws and regulations.

This Agreement and such supplementary agreements and memorandums of understanding by both parties as may be agreed upon hereunder from time to time, together constitute an agreement between the Agency and the Union.

ARTICLE 24 TELEWORK

I. Policy and Authority

A. Definitions

For purposes of this Agreement, telework refers to an employee's performing assigned duties at a location other than the official duty station. Such an alternative duty station (ADS) can include a government or private telework center, or the employee's home.

B. Policy

This article establishes a formal telework program for all eligible employees of the Agency. It is an additional method the Agency may approve to accomplish work. Telework enhances continuation of Agency essential functions. It further enables the Agency to be better prepared for other emergencies. The telework program is strictly voluntary, and is not an employee entitlement, and is subject to approval by management. However, the Agency expects managers to make reasonable decisions in granting or denying telework participation. A successful telework arrangement should not be suspended, except for clearly defined concerns such as performance/conduct issues or mission related needs.

C. Authority

The Director's authority to supervise the USMS and establish personnel standards with approving authorities for the personnel actions set forth in 5 U.S.C. § 3401; 28 U.S.C. § 561(g); and 5 C.F.R. § 340.

II. Eligibility

A. Eligible Employees

1. This program applies to all eligible employees of the USMS. Eligible employees must have a current performance rating of at least successful to participate in the telework program. Factors such as documented prior discipline, substantiated leave abuse, and/or substantiated performance issues may prohibit participation in the program.
2. Eligible Job Positions: The employee's position must not require the removal of sensitive documents or case files from the USMS-controlled office space in order to perform the duties in a telework environment. For purposes of this directive, telework can be conducted from the employee's home or from another remote worksite approved by the supervisor.
3. Telework and non-telework employees are treated the same for purposes of periodic appraisals of job performance of employees; training, rewarding, reassignment, promoting, reducing in grade, retraining, and removing employees; work requirements; or other acts involving managerial discretion.

4. An employee with a disability (permanent or temporary) may request to telework under this policy or as a reasonable accommodation. Employees and supervisors are encouraged to contact the Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) Office for more information about reasonable accommodation.

III. Excluded Positions

Law Enforcement Officers (LEOs) are considered a mobile workforce and are excluded from the telework program based on OPM and DOJ regulation. This includes the 1811, 082, 1801, and 1802 job series.

IV. Duty Hours

- A. Employees who conduct telework duties at least three days a week are considered to be teleworking on a full time basis and employees who conduct telework duties two days a week are considered to be teleworking on a part time basis.
- B. Employees requesting participation in telework must be available to work during the assigned duty hours and only conduct work related business during those hours.
- C. The policies and procedures on pay and for requesting leave (i.e., annual leave, sick leave, or leave without pay (LWOP)) remain unchanged. Employees are required to request approval for leave when unavailable for work during scheduled duty hours and to keep the timekeeper informed of leave usage.
- D. Telework is not a substitute for dependent care. Telework arrangements can provide valuable assistance in the management of work/family schedules, but family responsibilities and personal business must not interfere with the performance of official duties at the alternative worksite.
- E. For the duration of the agreement period, the employee will work the hours of duty specified unless a change is scheduled and is approved by a supervisor.
- F. Under the telework program, all telework duty hours and telework days must be identified in the telework agreement, approved by the supervisor, and must be documented on the USM-399 Telework Request Form.
- G. Employees who telework as Situational are only authorized to do so with the agreement of the immediate supervisor.

V. Procedures

- A. Form USM-399, Telework Request must be completed by the employee and forwarded for approval to the immediate supervisor and approving official.

- B. All requests must be recommended for approval by the first line supervisor and approved by the approving official before an employee may telework.
- C. United States Marshals (USMs), Chief Deputy United States Marshals (CDUSMs), Assistant Directors (ADs), and Staff Office Heads are designated as approving officials.
- D. The granting of telework is at management discretion.
- E. If a telework request is denied, management should provide a written justification for the denial (see USM 399). The employee has the right to address the denial through the USMS grievance process.
- F. All employees new to telework must complete the following one-time training prior to participating in the USMS telework program:
http://www.telework.gov/tools_and_resources/training/employees/index.aspx
- G. All new supervisors must complete the following one-time training:
http://www.telework.gov/tools_and_resources/training/managers/index.aspx.
- H. Once an employee and supervisor have completed the online training, a certificate must be provided to a District/Division Telework Point of Contact within five days of completion to ensure compliance.

VI. Security, Equipment and Support Services

- A. All USMS employees must be in compliance with rules and regulations of Policy Directive, 12.2, The Management, Use, Allocation, Deployment, and Accountability of USMS Information Technology (IT) Resources and Systems and Policy Directive, 12.7, Information Technology (IT) Security.
- B. All employees must only use USMS-owned equipment when teleworking. The USMS-owned equipment must only be used for official purposes. The employee is responsible for properly maintaining, protecting, and securing the USMS- owned equipment at all times. The USMS is responsible for providing the employee with all necessary office supplies. The USMS is not liable for damages to employee's personal or real property while the employee is working at the approved alternate worksite.
- C. All USMS employees must comply with property accountability in regards to telework. Form USM-325, Hand Receipt, must be present with the employee when he or she teleworks to maintain accountability of USMS-owned equipment (i.e., laptop). The supervisor of the telework employee also must maintain a copy of Form USM-325.

VII. Personal Safety

- A. All USMS employees are covered under the Federal Employee's Compensation Act if injured while performing official duties at the official duty station or at an approved designated worksite.

- B. Any accident or injury occurring at the designated worksite must be reported immediately to the supervisor. The supervisor of the injured employee must report and investigate the incident immediately.

VIII. Administrative Management

- A. A representative from the Human Resources Division (HRD) serves as the Telework Coordinator for the USMS on all telework matters and as a liaison on all telework matters with DOJ.
- B. A representative from each District and Division serves as the Telework Point of Contact for the District or Division in order to assist the Telework Coordinator in documenting and reporting telework participation.
- C. The employee's regular office remains as the official duty station as it relates to pay, leave, and travel entitlements.
- D. Telework employees are eligible for overtime pay, provided that the hours worked were pre-approved by the supervisor.
- E. With regards to dismissal and emergency closings, the following applies:
 - 1. Approved telework employees who are scheduled to work when the USMS closes are expected to begin telework on time or request unscheduled leave.
 - 2. Approved telework employees who are working when an early dismissal occurs are expected to continue working.
 - 3. Supervisors may excuse a telework employee from duty during an emergency situation if the emergency adversely affects the telework site (i.e., disruption of electricity, loss of heat, etc.); if the telework employee faces a personal hardship (childcare, eldercare, etc.) that prevents him or her from working successfully at the telework site; if the telework employee does not have the means or the technology to work successfully at telework; or if the telework employee's duties are such that he or she cannot continue to work without contact with the regular worksite.
 - 4. Approved telework employees who are not scheduled to telework during an office closure must notify their supervisor of their intent to use unscheduled leave or unscheduled telework.
 - 5. Employees who are required to work during their regular tour of duty on a day when the USMS is closed or when other employees are dismissed early are not entitled to receive overtime pay or compensatory time off for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours.
 - 6. Additional guidance on dismissal and emergency closings is available on the OPM website in the publication Washington, DC, Area Dismissal and Closure Procedures and at http://www.telework.gov/policies_and_procedures/closure_dismissal/index.aspx.

- F. Supervisors and employees must revisit, revise (if needed), and re-sign Form USM-399, Telework Request no less frequently than once every two years.

IX. Employee Responsibilities

- A. Employees must properly adjust their compensation benefits if enrolled in the Employee Transit Program (ETP) when conducting telework. All USMS employees must follow the guidelines and be in compliance with Policy Directive, 7.2, Employee Transit Program (ETP).
- B. Employee must demonstrate self-motivation, independence, and dependability in accomplishing work assignments while conducting telework.
- C. Employee must be in compliance with the Privacy Act while conducting telework duties as stated in Policy Directive 1.2 Legal, Freedom of Information Act (FOIA)/Privacy Act (PA)
- D. Employee must use the appropriate security safeguards such as passwords or locking devices, to ensure that unauthorized users do not have access to government material.
- E. Employee must ensure Internet connection is secure and should not telework from non-secure areas. (i.e. wireless internet at a coffee shop or restaurant).
- F. Employee may be required to attend meetings, conferences, or training or to otherwise come to the official duty station on days or hours normally scheduled for the alternative worksite.
- G. Employee must have a back-up plan if the telework site needs to change and must have supervisor's approval prior to executing.
- H. Employee must maintain communication with co-workers and supervisor in order to conduct all job functions and duty requirements.
- I. Employee will meet with the supervisor to receive assignments and to review any work as necessary or appropriate.
- J. Employee is responsible for recording the hours in the time and attendance system.
- K. As stated in E(4)(f), employee must revisit, revise (if needed), and re-sign his or her Forms USM-399, Telework Request no less frequently than once every two years.

X. Supervisor Responsibilities

- A. In accordance with Section 6502(a)(2), under the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, the supervisor shall terminate any telework agreement at any given notice if a telework employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year or the employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties. USMS Policy Directive 3.23, Telework Page 6 of 7 Effective: 5/20/2011 (Last Updated: 3/19/2013)

- B. The supervisor has the right to terminate or suspend any telework agreement if the telework employee's performance declines in conjunction with performance
- C. The supervisor must contact HRD, Employee Relations, when terminating a telework agreement for reasons stated under item a. and b. above.
- D. The supervisor must monitor all work conducted by a telework employee to ensure the employee is working productively.
- E. The supervisor must maintain communication with telework employee and is responsible for the employee's actions while working from another worksite.
- F. The supervisor must maintain accountability of all government property that is being used by telework employees.
- G. The supervisor must ensure that a telework employee has conducted all the security measures and completed all the correct USMS forms before the employee begins work at an alternative worksite.
- H. The supervisor must ensure the telework employee is conducting duties in a safe and suitable work atmosphere and meeting all work requirements.
- I. As stated in E(4)(f), supervisor must revisit, revise (if needed), and re-sign employees' Forms USM-399, Telework Request no less frequently than once every two years.

XI. District/Division/Staff Office Responsibilities

- A. The District/Division/Staff Office will provide, as available, the employee with government-owned equipment in order to perform his or her duty.
- B. The District/Division/Staff Office must provide maintenance and repair for all government-owned equipment that is being provided to the employee.
- C. The District/Division/Staff Office must ensure that Limited Official Use (LOU) information is protected and safeguarded if an employee has been approved to telework.
- D. The District/Division/Staff Office is responsible for any USMS employee who teleworks from a remote worksite.

E. The District/Division/Staff Office is responsible for assigning an employee within its area to serve as a Telework Point of Contact.

Article 28 - Telework

Section 1. General Provisions

- (a) The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 requires a written telework agreement between the employee and supervisor as a condition to participate in telework. All employees who are teleworking on an intermittent, ad hoc, COOP, or regularly occurring schedule must sign a telework agreement and complete telework training. All telework agreements must be signed by the employee and the employee's first level supervisor, and the agreement must be renewed every two years.
- (b) The Telework Program will be managed in accordance with this Article; the OPM Guide to Telework in the Federal Government, and addendum entitled "Telework and Dependent Care Policy Guidance"; DOJ Order 1200.1, Part 6; DOJ Policy Statement 1200.01, Telework; the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010; USPC Telework Policy, and other applicable laws and regulations.
- (c) Federal law requires agencies to establish telework programs but does not create a legal right to telework. Telework is a benefit, not an employee's right, and should be granted in situations where the ability to perform required assignments is not affected by location. Participation in the Telework Program is voluntary and an employee may not be forced to participate. However, it is the Department's policy that employees who have approved telework agreements of any kind, e.g., intermittent, ad hoc, COOP, or regularly occurring schedule, are required to work when the Federal Government is closed for non-holiday situations such as weather-related or other situational closures. The Employer supports and encourages participation in the program, where appropriate. Additionally, a participating employee may withdraw from a telework agreement at any time.
- (d) The Parties understand telework may not be used as a substitute for dependent care. However, in certain circumstances, such as when a child is of age where adult supervision, but not constant monitoring, is required (e.g., not an infant or toddler), an employee may request the use of telework along with other work life flexibilities. This situation may also apply to an employee responsible for care of a dependent family member. Employees may not telework for the sole purpose of fulfilling their full-time dependent care responsibilities while performing official duties; however, telework can be a valuable flexibility to employees with caregiving responsibilities by expanding employees' choices as to dependent care. Telework may be an appropriate short-term workplace flexibility for employees with caregiving responsibilities in certain unplanned and temporary circumstances. Telework used with other workplace flexibilities, can facilitate the management of work and dependent care.
- (e) Participation in the Telework Program is subject to technology availability and position limitations. Telework is mutually advantageous to the Employer and to employees by allowing the organization to accomplish its work while also providing employees with the opportunity to reduce commuting time and expenses, promote high morale, and supports work life balance for employees.

- (f) The work needs of the organization shall be paramount in supervisory decisions to approve, disapprove or modify individual requests for telework arrangements. USPC managers and supervisors retain both the discretion and the obligation to determine an employee's eligibility for telework based on the needs of the agency, appropriateness of the duties to be performed, and the employee's demonstrated ability to successfully perform during telework.
- (g) Telework agreements must outline the specific work arrangements, such as schedule, location, and when appropriate, the work to be completed. All employees with an approved telework agreement in place are expected to know what is required of them when the Federal Government is closed, operating on a delayed status, or provided the opportunity for unscheduled leave or unscheduled telework due to inclement weather or other situations. Employees who have a current approved Telework Agreement, have taken the telework training and are telework-ready (i.e., have the proper equipment, work to do, etc.), should be expected to telework on a day the Government is closed. It is the responsibility of managers and supervisors to communicate their expectations when approving Telework Agreements, and in the event of a closure situation, the duty status of employees. When the Federal Government status is "Open with Option for Unscheduled Leave or Unscheduled Telework", the employee must inform their supervisor/manager, no later than 9:30 a.m., of their status, e.g. unscheduled leave or telework.

Section 2. Definitions

- (a) Telework is defined in Federal regulations and the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) guidelines as a work arrangement that allows an employee to perform work, during any part of regular, paid hours, at an approved alternative worksite (e.g., home, or other approved alternative site). This definition of telework includes what is generally referred to as remote work (i.e. site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management) but does not include any part of work done while on official travel or mobile work.
- (b) Telework (also known as flexiplace, flexible workplace or telecommuting) - A work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work for an agreed upon portion of the work week. Telework arrangements may be of short or long term duration.
- (c) The types of telework arrangements which may be approved are as follows:
 - (1) Routine/Regular/Recurring Telework. The employee teleworks on a specific day (or days) each biweekly period, or month under an established work schedule. The telework arrangement's duration shall be outlined in writing and shall continue subject to the conditions outlined in the signed agreement.
 - (2) Situational (sometimes referred to as Ad hoc or Intermittent) Telework. Situational telework is sometimes also referred to as episodic, intermittent, unscheduled, or ad hoc telework. Employees approved for routine telework are also eligible for situational telework and should be telework-ready during unscheduled closings, dismissals or circumstances that disrupt or prevent commuting or reporting to the official work site. Situational telework is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours to be worked are not part of a previously approved, ongoing and regular telework schedule. Examples of situational telework include: as a result of inclement weather, doctor appointment, or special work assignments. An example of situational telework is when the employee teleworks on a specific project or task(s) deemed by the Employer to be portable. Specific dates and times shall be outlined in advance. Approval of telework on a short-term basis shall be used for positions whose overall functions would not otherwise be portable and for which a regular, recurring Telework arrangement is not feasible.

(3) Telework for medical reasons. A telework arrangement approved for medical reasons when the employee has a medical condition or the employee requests to be allowed to telework because of the medical condition of a family member. The employee shall submit adequate medical documentation which provides a diagnosis/prognosis pertaining to the employee or family member, along with any work-related medical restrictions. In the case of a family member's medical condition requiring the employee's presence, the employee shall outline how he or she will be able to accomplish the functions of the position under a telework arrangement. Short-term (generally four months or less) work at home situations due to temporary medical situations are considered ad hoc telework and shall follow the provisions of this Article. Extended periods of telework arrangements based on medical reasons should be treated as reasonable accommodations, and as such are covered by the Americans with Disabilities Act, as well as other applicable law, rules, and regulations and terms of this Agreement.

(d) Mobile Work: -Work that is accomplished away from the office, but is not Telework. It is characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in customer or other worksites as opposed to a single authorized alternative worksite. Examples include site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management, and work performed while commuting, traveling between worksites, or on Temporary Duty (TDY). Such work is not covered by this Article.

Section 3. Telework Locations, Duty Stations and Tours of Duty

- (a) Telework Location. Employees approved for telework must agree to allow their supervisor or a designee to inspect their telework location during the employee's normal working hours upon receipt of at least 24 hours advance notice. This is to ensure the worksite is in conformance with this policy. Failure to comply with this provision may result in termination of the telework agreement and appropriate disciplinary action.
- (b) Official Worksite. The official worksite for each employee shall be consistent with the guidance set forth in section 531.605 of title 5, Code of Federal Regulations.

- (c) Designated Work Area - An area which is set aside for the performance of the employee's official duties. The designated work area must be free from interruptions, and must provide the necessary level of security and protection of Government property.
- (d) Official Duty Station: the official duty station of an employee participating in the Telework Program is the employee's USPC designated office. However, when scheduled telework is close to 100% (the employee is not scheduled to report to the traditional worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period), then the Telework site may be required to be the Duty Station. This type of Telework is called "Remote Work" which is an arrangement in which the employee resides and works at a location beyond the local commuting area of the organization's worksite under a continuing telework arrangement.
- (e) Tours of Duty (Work Schedule) - The established guidance on hours of duty (Article 26) apply to employees under telework agreements. Telework employees may work fixed or alternate work schedules. The employee's tour of duty will be addressed in the Telework Agreement. Employees are expected to perform their duties at the alternate worksite during regular business hours, on the approved work schedule, and to be accessible during those hours to supervisors, customers, and others as needed. Telework employees shall not work overtime or compensatory time unless ordered and approved in advance by his or her supervisor. Because of the requirements for premium pay, telework schedules may not be available between the hours of 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. or on Sundays and Federal holidays.
- (f) Employees are compensated based on the location of their official worksite (i.e., when the telework location is the employee's official worksite, locality pay is based on the location of the telework location, not the traditional worksite).
- (g) Employees requesting designation of their telework location as their official worksite will not be entitled to receive relocation expenses if the telework location is outside the commuting area of the employee's traditional worksite.
- (h) Under applicable travel regulations, employees are entitled to reimbursement for official business travel to the official worksite when the employee teleworks full-time from a location outside of the local commuting area, and his or her telework location has been designated as the official worksite.

Section 4. Determining Employee Eligibility

(a) The USPC shall consider and employees must occupy a position that is compatible with telework and must meet the minimum eligibility criteria to be considered for telework participation:

- (1) The employee's work history for the characteristics associated with successful performance of work in the absence of direct supervision. The employee shall have a rating of record indicating at least successful performance of his/her duties, and should not be under a performance improvement plan (PIP).

(2) Whether the employee has demonstrated dependability in accomplishing work assignments without close supervision, and appropriate time management skills.

(3) Whether the employee is ineligible based on being officially disciplined for any reason within the past year.

(4) Whether the employee is ineligible based on being officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five (5) workdays in any calendar year.

(5) Whether the employee is ineligible based on having been disciplined for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties

(b) Other factors may be considered in determining temporary limits on Telework and/or number of days approved. Such factors may include:

(1) training or introduction of new work procedures; and/or

(2) a new employee (or new assignment for a current employee) who needs initial OJT and closer supervision.

(c) The USPC is responsible for the final review and approval of participant eligibility.

Section 5. Employee and Union Notice

(a) An employee shall be informed of their personal eligibility for telework made under Section 4 above within twenty (20) workdays of entering a new position.

Section 6. Employee Requests

(a) Employees who are interested in telework and are eligible for Telework (Section 4 above); should discuss their interest to telework with their supervisor. The goal to reach consensus on items such as the number of days and other details found in the DOJ Telework Agreement form.

(b) Employees who reach an oral agreement with their supervisor shall submit the agreed terms in a formal request to telework. The request shall be made on a DOJ Telework Agreement form.

(c) If an oral agreement cannot be reached on an employee request to telework, he/she may complete and submit a DOJ Telework Agreement form. The supervisor shall mark the form as “recommended for Disapproval”, provide a justification, and return to the employee. The employee may grieve this decision under the process in Article 34 (Grievance Procedures).

Section 7. Agreement and Approval Criteria

(a) Alternate worksites shall be within a reasonable commuting distance that allows telecommuters to report to the official duty station upon request and at least two (2) days during a pay period except as a change in duty location is approved and enacted in accordance with DOJ policy and Section 2 (d) above

(b) The supervisor shall establish standards that address time frames by which the employee must respond to telephone calls or e-mails to ensure that the employee's work is accomplished in such a way under the Telework arrangement as to appear no different to the customer and to other JMD staff from how the work is accomplished at the official duty location.

(c) Teleworkers shall be appraised and rated in a manner consistent with the terms of and procedures provided for in Article 13 (Performance Rating and Standards). Performance standards and criteria for teleworkers shall be the same as for similarly-situated non-teleworkers.

(d) For ad hoc Telework, the supervisor shall determine whatever means of status reporting may be required (e.g., informal updates, periodic status reports, etc.).

(e) Employees proposing an alternate worksite, shall certify compliance of the designated work area with all appropriate safety requirements.

(f) Employees should verify the availability of appropriate equipment to do the job at their telework site, e.g., a computer with appropriate processing capability and associated communications hardware and software that are fully compatible with the equipment in use in their office, or any other equipment that is necessary for the performance of their duties. Depending upon the type of work to be performed, the employee may be required to have high-speed Internet access that will accommodate the Employer's remote access system to provide secure access to the Employer's network. Normally, the Employer shall not expend funds for telecommunications or any other additional costs that arise from an employee's use of a home as an alternate work site. However, expenditures may be authorized when requested/approved in advance for necessary expenses such as a phone card for making long-distance calls.

(g) Notwithstanding subsection (e) above, in some circumstances, appropriate government equipment may be provided to employees for authorized telework purposes. The use of government equipment shall be dependent upon:

- (1) budgetary constraints;
- (2) the nature and type of work being performed;
- (3) the availability of such equipment;
- (4) other pending higher priority requests for such equipment; and

(5) the Employer's determination that the assignment of such equipment for Telework will best meet the work needs of the organization. Such loans may be made on a temporary, short term basis, or for longer durations of time, depending upon the nature of the applicable Telework Agreement and upon the Employer's operational needs.

(h) The Employer shall consider the amount of work that is portable, office coverage (e.g., employees on alternate work schedules and the number of employee's telecommuting within the organization on each day), and organizational/mission needs in determining the days an individual may telecommute.

(i) When a choice between two otherwise equally eligible employees must be made, the employee with the longest U.S. Government service shall have preference in schedules, based on the employee's service computation date.

Section 8. Approving Requests

(a) Response Time. Managers shall review and approve or disapprove Telework requests within fifteen (15) workdays of submission of the completed form. Exceptions to this provision will only be granted when a manager is on leave or training and requires additional time to consider the request. In no case should the response time exceed twenty-five (25) workdays.

(b) Telework schedules must be accurately encoded into the NFC system.

Section 9. Protection of Government Records

Employees under Telework arrangements are responsible for ensuring that all Government records used at an alternate work site are safeguarded against unauthorized disclosure or damage, and shall comply with all laws, rules, and regulations governing classified, law enforcement sensitive, and privacy act protected information.

Section 10. Termination of Telework Arrangements

(a) An employee may terminate his/her participation in such an agreement at any time, after proper notification to the supervisor.

(b) Management has the right to end a Telework arrangement at any time prior to the conclusion of an agreement period if the employee's performance declines; if the employee does not conform to the agreed upon arrangements; if the employee's off site work adversely affects the work of staff remaining in the office; or if the arrangement fails to meet organizational needs.

(c) Normally, employees shall be given two weeks advance written notice before management's termination of a Telework agreement. Such notice shall include the reasons for the decision. The notice shall also inform the employee of his/her right to grieve such termination under the terms of Article 34 (Grievance Procedure) of this Agreement.

(d) Telework arrangements may be temporarily suspended by the supervisor for the reasons cited below, normally after the two (2) week written notification provided for in subsection (c) above unless the exigency of the public business does not allow sufficient time to notify the employee in writing. Telework may be temporarily suspended for the following reasons:

- (1) to fulfill official travel requirements;
- (2) to fulfill training requirements;
- (3) to enable the employee to substitute as an acting supervisor;
- (4) to attend essential meetings, conferences, etc.;
- (5) to fulfill critical project requirements that require the individual's presence at the official duty station or alternative duty station;
- (6) to cover for absences during heavy vacation periods; and
- (7) for other mission critical office needs.

(e) Written notices to suspend telework arrangements under the terms of subsection (d) will provide the employee with the reasons necessitating the temporary suspension.

Section 11. Training

(a) Pursuant to DOJ Policy Statement 1200.01 (Telework), USPC Human Resources will develop and provide interested employees with an interactive telework training program. Such training will be equivalent in nature to the online telework training offered by OPM. In the absence of any available Departmental telework training program, the Employer shall post notice on its Intranet, and/or on the Internet, of the availability of OPM's online training course. The posting shall also include a hot link to the applicable online training site.

(b) Employees must have completed such training prior to signing their Telework agreement.

Section 12. Operational Issues

(a) If an employee is unable to perform his or her official duties at the alternate work site because of equipment failure or malfunction or for other reasons beyond the employee's control that result in computer equipment or telephones being inoperable (such as power or telephone service outages), the employee shall notify the appropriate supervisory official immediately upon discovery of the problem. An employee unable to perform his or her official duties at an alternate work site, may be granted excused absence, required to take leave or report to the official duty station to fulfill required duty hours for that day. In such a case, the supervisory official may treat the employee's transportation time to the official duty station as official time.

(b) Supervisors may cancel an employee's Telework day for a pay period. When there is holiday or other reason why a Telework day is not granted, an alternate day is not automatic. An alternate Telework day may be granted for that pay period only with written supervisory approval.

(c) Employees shall report to the office on a scheduled Telework day, if the supervisor so directs it, based on the work needs of the office.

(d) Employees who are scheduled to Telework on a day the traditional worksite is closed or subject to an early closure or delayed arrival, shall work their full schedule. An exception would be a power outage or other event that would prevent the employee from working as scheduled.

(e) The employee shall permit the Employer to inspect the alternative work site during the employee's normal working hours. The purpose of such inspections is to ensure conformance with key provisions of the Telework Agreement, especially the implementation of accepted safety standards, care of any government equipment, and/or the provisions of Section 9 (Protection of Government Records) above. The necessity of such inspections shall be determined by management on a case-by-case basis. Employees shall normally receive no less than forty-eight (48) hours advance notice. When such inspections are to be held, the employee may request that a Union representative be present. The Parties understand that, except under exceptional circumstances, inspections will be done by officials with the appropriate qualifications to certify compliance with recognized requirements.

Section 13. Employer's Rights

The Parties recognize and agree that the Employer has the sole discretion and authority to determine which occupational series are eligible for Telework arrangements.

Section 14. Employee's Rights

With regard to the terms of this Article, employees retain all grievance and complaint rights as provided for in Articles 34 (Grievance Procedures) and 11 (Equal Employment Opportunity). While the Parties acknowledge that the Employer retains all of its rights to approve or disapprove employee participation in Telework, they also acknowledge that employees may grieve or file a complaint regarding any procedural violations of this Agreement, or of applicable law, policy or regulation regarding the Employer's administration of its Telework program.

WORK ENVIRONMENT IMPLEMENTATION UPDATES DATA CALL

May 31, 2024

OMB issued its Organizational Health and Performance Memorandum (M-23-15) last spring as guidance for agencies as they reevaluate their work environment posture to increase in-person presence while optimizing organizational health and performance. As the White House Chief of Staff and OMB have continued to emphasize in the Cabinet, PMC, and other forums, it is essential for agency leaders to be paying close attention to implementation progress and ensuring that updated Work Environment policies are having the intended impact.

In line with M-23-15, OMB requests that agencies that are still implementing in-person presence goals respond to this implementation data call outlining all remaining steps that the agency will take to reach intended work environment postures.

Agencies should provide:

- (1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

DOL's Updated Response to OMB – May 2024

On January 19, 2024, Acting Secretary Su notified the DOL workforce that, because DOL is actively engaged in negotiations with its Unions, implementation of the five-day in-person work requirement for DOL employees would not occur imminently.

Additional notices were sent to the DOL workforce on February 9 and April 5, notifying the DOL workforce that implementation of the increased in-person work requirement for employees remains delayed while DOL continues to actively engage in negotiations with its Unions.

As of May 17, 2024, DOL Union negotiations are ongoing.

DOL's Response to OMB from January 2024

On September 13, 2023, Acting Secretary Su notified the DOL workforce that all SES, political appointees, including Schedule C employees, Managers, and Supervisors would be required to report in-person to their official duty station location of record (a.k.a., the agency worksite) at least five days per pay period, effective October 22, 2023.

On November 28, 2023, Acting Secretary Su further notified the DOL workforce of her requirement that all DOL employees who telework would be required to report in-person at least five days per pay period effective January 28, 2023. She also committed to DOL meeting its labor management obligations in advance of implementation, as required by the Federal Service Labor Management Relations Statute (“the statute”).

DOL’s three Union partners demanded to bargain this change as of November 30, 2023. Negotiations began on January 17, 2024, the earliest date agreeable to DOL’s Unions. As required both by the statute and President Biden’s Executive Order 14003 to “encourage union organizing and collective bargaining,” because DOL is actively engaged with its Unions to meet its obligations, a timeline for implementation of the policy for our bargaining unit employees is unclear. The requirement for SES, Schedule C, Managers, and Supervisors to report in-person five days per pay period noted earlier, that began October 23, 2023, remains in effect.

(2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

DOL’s Updated Information to OMB – May 2024

As of May 17, 2024, DOL Union negotiations are ongoing.

DOL Response to OMB from January 2024

After negotiations with DOL’s Unions, DOL will implement that agreement and, in accordance with its terms, follow the appropriate procedures to modify employee telework agreements, as necessary.

The Department notes that while the focus of M-23-15 is on headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel, the Department’s onsite requirement applies to all DOL employees, regardless of their duty station location of record. The Acting Secretary believes this approach is important in order to advance equity.

(3) Description of your agency’s approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

DOL’s Updated Information to OMB – May 2024

DOL continues to have ongoing communications across the Department to raise awareness and compliance with time and attendance, telework, and work schedule policies and expectations, as appropriate.

DOL is reviewing data generated from internal systems to track and assess compliance with in-person work requirements (currently at least five days per pay period for Managers/Supervisors and two days per pay period for employees) and adherence to telework agreements and other work schedule expectations. DOL's Office of Human Resources is working directly with subcomponent agencies to act on findings that require corrective action.

The Deputy Secretary's office hosted a Departmental Management Meeting which was attended by all political and career leadership, including the entire SES corps, to reiterate the change in policy to require DOL executives, Managers, Supervisors, and Schedule C employees to work in-person at their official duty location of record at least five days per pay period. These senior executives were instructed to ensure that they adhere to the work schedule expectations themselves and ensure that their Managers, Supervisors, and employees telework agreements, work schedules, and actions align with current expectations and are modified, as appropriate, when expectations change.

DOL's Office of Human Resources is providing time and attendance data with subcomponent agency leadership to facilitate internal oversight of adherence to work schedule expectations.

DOL hosted four webinars between November 2023 and January 2024 for all Managers, Supervisors, and employees on timekeeping in WebTA to ensure that employees have the information they need to properly code and manage time sheets. This will facilitate tracking of implementation progress and ensure that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time. Additional webinars will be held throughout the transition to increase in-person work at DOL.

DOL will continue to have ongoing communications across the Department to raise awareness and ensure compliance with time and attendance, telework, and work schedule policies and expectations as appropriate.

Telework Policy(s)

DPR Chapter 611 – Telework

December 1, 2011

Introduction. The Department of Labor (DOL) administers its telework program in accordance with Public Law 106-346, Public Law 111-292 (the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010), and applicable statutes and regulations. The Act aims to increase telework opportunities for Federal employees and requires executive agencies to establish a policy under which eligible employees of the agency may participate in telework without diminishing employee performance or agency operations. All DOL employees meeting the definition of employee as defined in Section 2105 of Title 5 of the United States Code are covered by the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010.

This Departmental Personnel Regulation (DPR) describes the Department’s program for work at alternative sites, referred to herein as telework. The policies outlined in this DPR should be applied in conjunction with the applicable collective bargaining agreements and sub-agency specific telework guidance. Pre-existing telework agreements and arrangements must be brought into conformance with this DPR. Provisions of this DPR that conflict with any future statute or regulation must be brought into compliance with such requirements.

Employee participation in any telework program established under this DPR is voluntary. Policies and practices set forth by the Department to conform with and/or support government-wide laws, rules, and regulations are required for all employees. Additional information on telework processes for bargaining unit employees may be found in the appropriate collective bargaining agreement. In cases where DPR Chapter 611 requirements differ from those in the respective collective bargaining agreement, the collective bargaining agreement requirements will be applied.

Subchapter 1: Purpose

Telework is a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of his or her position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work.

Balancing work and family responsibilities, recruitment and retention, cost savings to the Government, and addressing environmental, financial, and commuting concerns are also among the advantages of telework. Additionally, one of the major benefits of telework is the ability to maintain continuity of operations for essential Government services and continue a high level of employee productivity during emergency situations (i.e. inclement weather, public health emergencies, natural disasters, localized events, etc.).

DOL recognizes the mutual benefits of a flexible workplace program to the Department and its employees. At the same time, DOL must accomplish its mission without diminishing employee performance or the operations of the agency. Participation in the telework program must be consistent with mission accomplishment and customer service.

Subchapter 2: Types of Telework Arrangements

All telework arrangements require supervisory approval and a written agreement between the employee and his/her supervisor.

There are two basic types of telework arrangements:

- a. Formal arrangements are regular and recurring in nature and include working at home or other site(s) approved by the supervisor.
- b. Informal arrangements are ad hoc or episodic in nature for short periods of time and used on an as needed basis. These situational arrangements are not regular or recurring and are not expected to continue on a long-term basis. An informal arrangement may be used as a trial period to determine the practicality of a formal arrangement; however, if such an arrangement becomes permanent in nature, a formal arrangement is required. An informal arrangement is also used to perform telework during emergency situations (see Subchapter 15 - Continuity Planning) or unscheduled telework when authorized (see Subchapter 11 - Early Dismissal and Closure Procedures).

Subchapter 3: Eligibility

The Department recognizes that although telework is not appropriate for every position given mission requirements and other extenuating circumstances, all or parts of many jobs are appropriate for teleworking. Within 60 days of a position being encumbered, management will review the position's duties/tasks and notify the employee if his or her position is eligible for telework in whole or in part.

Probationary employees should only participate in informal/ad hoc telework.

Employees whose duties and responsibilities require the following on a daily basis are ineligible to participate in the telework program:

- a. In-person contact with customers.
- b. The use of specialized equipment specific to the main worksite.
- c. Direct handling of or access to classified, secured, or sensitive materials which are determined to be inappropriate for transport or remote access.
- d. Activity that is otherwise infeasible to be performed away from the main worksite.

Additionally, employees are not eligible to participate in the telework program if:

- a. The employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five (5) days in any calendar year.
- b. The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.

For those employees occupying positions determined to be telework eligible by management, the following additional criteria must also be met by the employee in order to implement a telework agreement:

- a. A sufficient amount of the employee's essential work functions to be identified by the supervisor can be performed at a telework site.
- b. The necessary office coverage needs are met and not negatively impacted by the employee's participation in telework.
- c. The employee will be available and accessible to supervisors, co-workers, and customers at all times while performing work at the telework site.
- d. The employee's most recent performance evaluation is at least Effective.
- e. The employee has not been officially disciplined within the previous twelve (12) months for reasons that would cause management to be concerned about the employee's trustworthiness or dependability.

- f. Costs of such an arrangement are feasible. Costs or cost savings in technology, equipment, and telecommunications are considerations in decisions regarding participation in telework arrangements.
- g. Technology/equipment is available. Existing and evolving technology may allow or prevent an employee from participating in the telework program if the employee requires access to specific equipment and/or technology on telework days. Such equipment/technology may include:
 - o Long distance telephone
 - o Telephone access (other than long distance)
 - o Computer and/or printer assigned to the employee's home
 - o Computer hardware/software
 - o Modem and possible additional computer access
 - o Modifications to the central computer to allow employees to connect
 - o Equipment maintenance and repair
 - o Remote technical assistance
 - o Replacement of damaged or lost equipment
 - o Fax capability
 - o Internet Service Provider
 - o Remote access hardware/software
- h. The designated telework training is completed before the telework agreement is signed, and a certificate of completion is provided to the supervisor. Online telework training can be accessed on LaborNet.

Subchapter 4: Application

When an eligible employee wishes to participate in the telework program, he or she must submit a telework request to his or her immediate supervisor, who will evaluate the request considering the supervisors needs of the office and the conditions and requirements outlined in Subchapter 3. The supervisor and the employee will meet to discuss and review the request. The supervisor's decision is to be provided to the employee within ten (10) workdays.

- a. If the request is approved, the specifications and requirements of the arrangement will be established and discussed by the supervisor and employee. A written agreement will be developed and signed by both the supervisor and employee following completion of the designated telework training. The employee will begin working at the telework site within fifteen (15) workdays after completion of the telework agreement form unless circumstances dictate otherwise.

Supervisors shall provide a copy of the executed telework agreement to the Agency/Regional Telework Coordinator. DOL Telework agreement forms and a list of Agency and Regional Telework Coordinators can be found on LaborNet.

- b. If the request is not approved, the supervisor will provide the employee a written explanation of the reason(s) for denial. Denials should be based on business-related reasons as outlined in Subchapter 3.

Subchapter 5: Appeal Process

Employees who wish to appeal a denial of participation can submit a written request directly to the second level supervisor. The second level supervisor will meet with the employee within ten (10) workdays to hear the appeal of actions taken by management. The second level supervisor will provide a written response to all parties within five (5) workdays after the meeting. The second level supervisor's decision for employees is final.

Subchapter 6: Modifying a Telework Agreement

Any changes to existing telework agreements must be agreed upon by the supervisor and employee. Changes should be documented on the original telework agreement and initialed/dated by both the supervisor and employee. A copy of the revised telework agreement should be kept on file by the supervisor and employee, and forwarded to the appropriate Agency or Regional Telework Coordinator by the supervisor.

Subchapter 7: Recall

Employees participating in telework programs must be accessible and available for recall to their regular offices for work needs and requirements that cannot be met at the telework site. Recall examples include, but are not limited to, training, special assignments or meetings, new work requirements, unanticipated short-term staffing shortages, and emergencies.

Management will take full advantage of existing technology (teleconference, email, fax, collaborative tools, etc.) where possible to minimize recall. A recall shall last no longer than is reasonable to complete the task or purpose of the recall. When possible, management will provide advance notice for all recalls; however, depending on the circumstances, there may be times when advance notice cannot be given. In these cases, management will provide notification as soon as possible.

Subchapter 8: Termination

Employees may voluntarily terminate participation in the telework arrangement at any time; however, employees may be expected to continue working at the telework site for a reasonable period to allow management time to arrange for a work station at the main work site. Supervisors may terminate an arrangement whenever one or more of the following conditions occur:

- a. There is a change in work requirements such that the position no longer meets the eligibility criteria for telework, or the telework arrangement no longer supports the mission.
- b. The employee's performance is rated less than Effective after at least ninety (90) days, the minimum rating period.

- c. The employee has demonstrated conduct problems regarding trustworthiness or dependability.
- d. An employee is officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five (5) days in the calendar year.
- e. An employee is officially disciplined for violation of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.
- f. Costs of the arrangement are no longer feasible.
- g. Technology changes require return to the main office.
- h. The employee does not conform to the terms of his or her telework arrangement.

When terminating a telework arrangement, the following must occur:

- a. To the extent practicable, supervisors will attempt to provide at least five (5) workdays advance notice of the termination of an arrangement.
- b. The Notice of Termination must be in writing and indicate the reason(s) for termination.
- c. When a telework arrangement is terminated, supervisors must notify the respective Agency/Regional Telework Coordinator.

Supervisors should consult with their servicing Human Resources Office for additional guidance on terminating a telework arrangement. Termination of a telework arrangement does not prevent an employee from reapplying as soon as the required criteria are met.

Subchapter 9: Duty Station

There are no Government-wide restrictions on distance for teleworkers. The official worksite for a long-distance teleworker (an employee who works most or all of the time from a different geographic area than his/her official duty station) is the location where he or she would normally work if not teleworking, as long as he or she is regularly scheduled to physically be at that worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular, recurring basis.

However, for permanent long-distance telework arrangements, where the teleworker would not return to the normal worksite twice per biweekly pay period, the official worksite must be reassigned to be the telework location. Teleworkers and their managers should discuss and consider the implications of long-distance telework so that all involved clearly understand the arrangement. This may have an impact on locality pay and payment for travel. If circumstances indicate that a change in duty station may be necessary, management should consult their servicing Human Resources Office for additional guidance. Duty station determinations will be governed by Office of Personnel Management regulations and guidance. See Fact Sheet: Official Worksite for Location-Based Pay Purposes for additional information.

Subchapter 10: Time and Attendance

- a. The governing rules, regulations, and policies concerning time and attendance, leave, and overtime are unchanged by an employee's participation in telework.
- b. Telework schedules can vary and are subject to supervisory approval. An employee may work a fixed work schedule or follow the flexitime work schedule for the office, if applicable. The established hours of work must be described in telework agreements. Employees will not perform overtime or night work at the telework site without advance supervisory approval. If the employee works overtime that has been directed and/or approved in advance, the employee will be compensated in accordance with applicable statutes, rules, or regulations.
- c. Employees are not entitled to an alternate telework day if their regularly scheduled telework day happens to occur on a Federal holiday.
- d. In accordance with the Fair Labor Standards Act, it is the responsibility of the supervisor to exercise appropriate supervision to ensure that only work for which it intends to make payment is performed.
- e. An employee must obtain advance supervisory approval to depart the telework site and complete the remainder of the workday at the main office.
- f. Under 5 U.S.C. 5542(b)(2) and 5 CFR 550.112(g), travel to and from an employee's official duty station may be considered hours of work if the travel is within the days and hours of the employee's regularly scheduled administrative workweek.
- g. If an employee while teleworking is required by his or her supervisor to come in to the office after the official work day has begun, the time traveling is considered hours of work. If the supervisor asks the employee to work from the main office instead of at the telework site before his or her official workday begins, the time traveling before the work day begins is considered commuting time, and is not paid. In either instance, the travel home in the evening after the work day has been completed is considered commuting time and is not compensated.
- h. Employees must check the "telework" flag in the time and attendance system for those days that they work at their telework locations. Entering this data will ensure accurate reporting of hours worked in the DOL Telework Program.
- i. Employees who are required to telework during their regular tour of duty on a day when Federal offices are closed to the public (or when other employees are authorized a delayed arrival or an early departure) are not entitled to receive overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time off for performing work during their regularly scheduled non-overtime hours.
- j. Additional information regarding DOL policy on hours of duty can be found at DPR Chapter 610 – Hours of Duty and Alternative Work Schedules and Spotlight 934. Information on DOL leave policy can be found at DPR Chapter 630 – Absence and Leave.

Subchapter 11: Delayed Arrival, Early Dismissal, and Closure Procedures

Delayed Arrival

- a. Employees scheduled to telework on the day of a delayed arrival, as determined by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM), are expected to begin telework at their regularly scheduled time unless leave has been requested and approved by the supervisor.

Early Dismissal

- b. Employees teleworking during an early dismissal are expected to continue working their regularly scheduled work hours or request leave.

Closure

- c. Telework program participants may not be granted weather and safety leave when employees can safely telework at the approved telework site. All employees with telework agreements are telework program participants. This includes DOL employees with formal telework agreements that allow regularly scheduled telework days and DOL employees with informal telework agreements that allow ad hoc telework days. Telework program participants who can safely perform work at home that do not telework during emergency office closures may not receive weather and safety leave, but they can request to use annual leave, compensatory time off, credit hours, leave without pay, or sick leave (if appropriate).

Teleworkers are expected to take the necessary steps to prepare for teleworking when warnings for severe weather and other emergency events can reasonably be predicted based on information broadcast in advance in the media or through other forms of communication. If emergency conditions could have been reasonably anticipated, and the employee did not take steps within his or her control to prepare to perform telework, weather and safety leave may not be granted. If necessary, telework employees may be given temporary work assignments to perform at the telework site during the emergency event, i.e. LearningLink training.

- d. Telework program participants may be granted weather and safety leave for closures only if DOL determines an employee cannot safely work from home or could not have reasonably anticipated to prepare to perform telework. Examples of when a telework program participant may be granted weather and safety leave include:
 - 1. when the employee is not prepared to telework because the emergency event could not be anticipated;
 - 2. if the telework site is rendered unsafe from occurrences such as a fire, flooding, earthquake, or roof collapse as a result of the severe weather or emergency event;
 - 3. the telework site is no longer an approved telework location due to loss of electricity or wide-spread connectivity issues, or
 - 4. the employee is evacuated due to a hurricane, fire or flood.
- e. Teleworking employees that determine they are unable to successfully perform work at the telework site due to dependent care responsibilities must request to take the appropriate leave (annual leave, compensatory time off, credit hours, leave without pay, or sick leave — if appropriate) to account for non-work hours during his or her tour of duty. Weather and safety leave will not be granted.
- f. Employees occupying positions not eligible for telework and employees who are not telework program participants may be granted weather and safety leave during emergency closures.

Unscheduled Telework

- g. When severe weather conditions or other circumstances disrupt or prevent employees from commuting or reporting to work, the option of unscheduled telework may be offered to telework eligible employees. In this instance, those employees with formal or informal telework agreements who are not already scheduled to telework, may request supervisory approval to perform unscheduled telework, report to their duty station, or take unscheduled leave.

For employees in the Washington, DC area, a manager or supervisor is authorized to grant weather and safety leave for employees occupying positions that have been determined by management not to be eligible to participate in telework.

Additional information on weather and safety leave can be found on LaborNet.

Subchapter 12: Office Coverage

The accomplishment of the Agency's mission is paramount. Management will continue to have responsibility for ensuring the mission of the Department is carried out. While supervisors and managers are encouraged to be progressive in regard to structuring how their offices operate or the manner in which they assign work, there is no contractual or legal requirement obligating the Department to do so to support an employee's request to participate in telework.

Each office will determine adequate coverage during official hours for the purpose of ensuring that the functions of the office and mission of the Department are fulfilled. Some examples of the principal types of coverage are:

- a. Customer service (i.e. answering phones, greeting clients, etc.);
- b. Providing on-site clerical, technical, and professional support;
- c. Providing office representation at essential meetings;
- d. Handling inquiries from the public; and
- e. Conducting on-site program needs based on business necessity.

All employees are obligated to comply with established coverage requirements. Supervisors will determine the necessary scheduled hours to ensure appropriate coverage of the worksite. The determination of who will work which particular hours to ensure such coverage is within the authority of the supervisor, and the equitable sharing of the burden of coverage will be considered. Where personal preference conflicts with office coverage, office coverage shall prevail. The opportunity of each employee to maximize his or her telework participation shall be consistent with the coverage of legitimate work functions as determined by the supervisor.

Subchapter 13: Space

Efficient utilization of office space is a beneficial characteristic of a telework program. Employees who have a formal telework arrangement of 3 days or more a week may not be entitled to a dedicated personal work station. These employees may be required to utilize common/shared work areas where a work surface, personal computer or docking station, phone, and locked storage area will be provided. It is understood that these work areas are not permanently assigned to any specific employee and are utilized as available and as needed when the employee is required to report to the main office.

Should the telework arrangement be terminated, the employee will be placed in assigned workspace which may be different than that occupied prior to entering the telework arrangement.

Subchapter 14: Safety

Employees must make a reasonable attempt to ensure a safe and healthy telework environment. Each employee participating in telework must sign a self-certification checklist that proclaims the telework site is safe. Supervisors may deny an employee the opportunity to participate in telework or may rescind a telework agreement based on safety issues at the telework site.

The Government is not responsible for damages to an employee's personal or real property during the course of performance of official duties or while using Government equipment in the employee's residence, except to the extent the Government is held liable by the Federal Tort Claims Act or claims arising under the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claim Act. Injuries that arise in the performance of duty at the telework site may be subject to the Federal Employees' Compensation Act.

Subchapter 15: Continuity Planning

Telework is an integral component of the Department's Continuity Plan in the event of emergencies affecting DOL personnel or facilities. Employees whose positions have been identified as mission critical under continuity of operations (COOP) or other emergency situations may be required to telework during an emergency situation as permitted by employment conditions, statutes, rules or regulations.

Mission critical personnel should have telework agreements in place and practice teleworking in order to be prepared to telework during an emergency. These mission critical personnel should be resourced to the greatest extent possible, with the appropriate hardware, software, and training necessary to conduct essential functions for the Department via telework, if necessary.

Agencies are encouraged to conduct quarterly telework tests and annual telework exercises to analyze connectivity and accessibility for all teleworkers. Telework exercises will ensure teleworkers have the capability to perform essential functions remotely, especially in response to an emergency. Telework tests and exercises are defined as:

- a. Telework Tests – Activities designed to assess the functionality of telework equipment; the capacity of the teleworker to use the equipment effectively; and the ability of the teleworker to establish connectivity to DOL information technology systems (e.g., email, LaborNet, PeopleTime, etc.) and shared drives, if required.
- b. Telework Exercises – Single or multi-day exercises in which groups of agency or intra-agency teleworkers are given various challenges to address and scenarios beyond those presented by equipment and connectivity testing. These challenges and scenarios should be representative of the type that would normally occur during a real-world event.

Subchapter 16: Information Technology Security

Supervisors and employees must take measures to ensure the security of portable systems while teleworking. Government furnished equipment may be required to access some internal DOL systems. Non-Government furnished equipment may have access limitations. Supervisors and employees must consult with their Agency Information Technology Office for further guidance on technical and information technology security related policies and operations.

Subchapter 17: Sensitive and Personally Identifiable Information

The employee will apply approved safeguards to protect Government/Agency records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with requirements set forth in the Privacy Act of 1974, Public Law 93-579, codified at Section 552a, title 5 U.S.C. and specific DOL and sub-agency confidentiality requirements. The supervisor and employee will discuss these safeguards and other rules of behavior prior to entering into a telework arrangement, including how to report a loss or theft of information while teleworking.

Subchapter 18: Reasonable Accommodation

If an employee requests the ability to telework as a reasonable accommodation for disability, the supervisor should consult with the respective agency EEO Manager to effectively respond pursuant to DLMS 4, Chapter 306 – Reasonable Accommodation for Employees and Applicants with Disabilities.

Subchapter 19: Operating Principles and Responsibilities

The Government is not responsible for operating costs, home maintenance, or any other incidental costs to the employee (e.g., utilities) while the employee is teleworking; however, employees on telework are entitled to reimbursement for authorized expenses (e.g., fees for business-related long distance calls) while conducting Government business.

DOL seeks to purchase technologies and services to enable and promote continued utilization of telework, however, agencies are not required to furnish technologies solely for the use of telework and costs associated with telework are considerations in decisions regarding employee participation in a telework arrangement.

Each DOL Agency and Region will designate a telework coordinator whom employees and supervisors may contact for technical guidance and assistance as telework issues arise.

Supervisor Responsibilities

- a. Supervisors maintain full authority to assign and monitor work to be accomplished while an employee is teleworking. This includes, but is not limited to, identifying desired methods of communication during telework day, assigning specific work products, requiring an employee to provide a brief summary of accomplishments, or supervisory telephone calls as necessary to an employee during times the employee is scheduled to be on duty.
- b. Supervisors shall perform an annual review of telework arrangements to ensure the needs of the office/agency and employee are being met.
- c. Supervisors of teleworkers should participate in telework training for managers. Online telework training can be accessed through LearningLink.

Employee Responsibilities

- d. Employees are responsible for notifying their supervisor if conditions at the telework site impact their ability to successfully complete work assignments, e.g., interruption of electricity or internet service, or unexpected dependent care situations.
- e. For employees who use Government equipment during telework, the employee will use and protect the equipment in accordance with 5 CFR 2635.704. Government-owned equipment will be serviced and maintained by the Government. Employees will ordinarily be given a minimum of 24 hours advance notice regarding required service or maintenance of Government-owned property. Such service or maintenance will occur during the employee's normal work hours unless circumstances dictate otherwise. If the employee uses his/her own equipment, the employee is responsible for its service and maintenance.
- f. Employees on telework are obligated to ensure a safe and healthy work environment and to apply necessary safeguards to protect Government records from damage or unauthorized disclosure.

Telework Program Responsibilities

- g. DOL Telework Managing Officer will serve as advisor to Agency leadership and the primary agency point of contact for OPM on telework matters.
- h. DOL Telework Program Coordinator will provide:
 1. Telework policy development and program guidance in accordance with all applicable statutes, regulations, and other requirements.
 2. Guidance to Agency and Regional Telework Coordinators.
 3. Telework data, as necessary, to assist with telework inquiries and information requests.
- i. Agency and Regional Telework Program Coordinators will:
 1. Provide guidance to respective managers and employees on the implementation and operation of Agency and Regional telework programs.

2. Maintain information on respective agency or regional telework agreements for Agency or Regional employees.
3. Provide data and other requested information to the DOL Telework Program Coordinator as requested.
4. Notify unions of the establishment and termination (if applicable) of telework agreements, as appropriate.

Department of Labor
Collective Bargaining Agreement(s) –
Telework Provisions

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR,
THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES LOCAL 12, THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF FIELD LABOR LOCALS,
AND
THE NATIONAL UNION OF LABOR INVESTIGATORS

Introduction

The Department of Labor and its employees are first and foremost responsible for achieving the mission of the Agency to foster, promote, and develop the welfare of the wage earners, job seekers, and retirees of the United States; improve working conditions; advance opportunities for profitable employment; and assure work-related benefits and rights.

Further, Department of Labor management and its Labor counter parts, the NCFLL, Local 12 and NULI, recognize that in order to achieve this mission, it must ensure that all parts of the mission are covered by its key assets, the Department's talented and hard-working employees.

In its endeavors to achieve this mission, the Department of Labor recognizes that it must be a leading example for demonstrating a commitment to providing a positive workplace for its employees. DOL recognizes the importance of workplace flexibilities for its employees and its responsibility as a model employer. In an effort to attract, empower, and retain a talented and productive workforce in the 21st century, and in support of the Department of Labor's Reentry and Post Reentry Future of Work Plan, we must continue to enable employees to balance their responsibilities to deliver exceptional and efficient service to the American public while meeting family and other needs at home.

This is a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) entered into between the United States Department of Labor (DOL), the American Federation of Government Employees (Local 12), the National Council of Field Labor Locals (NCFLL), the National Union of Labor Investigators (NULI) (collectively "Unions"), in accordance with the applicable provisions of the DOL/Local 12 CBA; DOL/NCFLL CBA; and the OLMS/NULI CBA.

Subject

This MOU concerns the Department of Labor's Expanded Work Schedule Flexibilities, establishes an electronic Telework system which will include a unified Telework Agreement Form and unified Telework Employee Self-Certification Safety Checklist for all DOL bargaining unit employees. This MOU replaces the Mid-Day Flex MOU that became effective October 19, 2016, and the Workplace Flexibilities MOU that became effective on March 24, 2016.

Terms

The mission of the Department must take priority. The parties understand that the need to meet the mission of the Agency is the highest priority and are committed to ensuring this occurs. Due to specific job requirements in some offices, a lack of available work because of the nature of the position, and the varying types of work completed throughout DOL, all employees may not be allowed to utilize the full range of work schedule flexibilities, designated below. Managers and supervisors may require an employee or groups of employees to suspend flexible or compressed schedules temporarily to meet Agency needs. For example, DOL employees required to engage in the following mission-based work and coverage requirements, understand that their use of workplace flexibilities in this MOU may be limited on specific days of the week or hours of the day based on business needs by these and other activities:

- conduct inspections and investigations or survey data collection,
- attend training,
- attend legal proceedings,
- be present at worksites during specific work hours,
- be present at work for blocked periods of time such as the end of the fiscal year or other high-volume time periods for fiscal or other reasons, or
- provide administrative office coverage.

Section I – Flexible Work Schedules

A. Provisions

1. The Department's default work schedule remains the variable work week schedule and requires the following:

All DOL employees will automatically be assigned a variable workweek schedule unless an employee requests and is approved for a fixed work schedule or an Alternative Work Schedule (AWS). If DOL management assigns a different schedule to an employee, it must follow the procedures for doing so in the applicable CBA.

2. All parties agree that the DOL Workplace Flexibilities Frequently Asked Questions and Workplace Flexibilities Guide, serve as guidance and a resource for both employees and management.
3. Employees may work a maximum of 13 ½ hours per workday, unless otherwise directed by management and subject to applicable pay regulations and collective bargaining articles.

B. Definitions

1. Core Hours are time periods during the workday, workweek, or pay period that are within the tour of duty which an employee covered by a flexible work schedule is required by the applicable flexi time plan to be present for work. With the supervisor's approval, an employee may use credit hours or leave to account for absences during core hours as well as absences outside of core hours.
2. Work Band is the time between the first and last hour in a day that an employee may work before receiving overtime pay.

C. Exclusions

Article 25, Section 2.C. of the CBA between NCFLL and DOL specifically discusses the First 40- hour tour of duty for MSHA authorized Representatives and Right of Entry Employees and these employees are excluded from Section I of this MOU. Part Time BLS CPI Economic Assistants, including those covered by the MOU between NCFLL and DOL, dated January 15, 2015, are excluded from Section I of this MOU.

D. Training

New Employees participating in the alternative work schedule program for the first time must complete mandatory training in advance of participation.

E. Dispute Resolution

The parties agree to make best efforts to informally resolve disputes regarding the application of this MOU and the work schedule changes, as follows:

1. Best efforts should be made between first line supervisors and employees to informally resolve the matter.
2. In the event that the matter cannot be resolved informally,

AFGE Local 12 bargaining unit employees' grievances will be treated as Grievance Board Grievances pursuant to Article 44, Section 8 of the CBA between Local 12 and DOL.

NCFLL bargaining unit employees' grievances will be handled in accordance with Article 15 of the NCFLL/DOL CBA.

NULI bargaining unit employees' grievances will be handled in accordance with Article XX of the NULI/OLMS CBA.

F. Variable Work Week

1. The Department's core hours are 10:00am to 2:30pm, Tuesday and Thursday of each work week during the bi-weekly pay period. There are no core hours on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.
2. The Department's work band, excluding those employees on a fixed work schedule, is 6:00 am to 8:00 pm, Monday through Friday. In some DOL locations, utilities (such as HVAC and lighting) may not be available past certain times and will not be extended in buildings where they are shut off prior to 8:00 pm. Employees should take these factors into consideration when planning work schedules and make plans accordingly.
3. Employees on the variable work schedule are required to satisfy a basic work requirement of no less than five days per week, to include hours worked, leave, or a combination of both.
4. Employees on the variable work schedule are required to satisfy a basic workday requirement of no less than four hours, to include hours worked, leave, or a combination of both.
5. Employees who intend on working for four (4) hours on either a Monday, Wednesday, or Friday will notify their immediate supervisor or designee of their planned start time of work no later than 11am (except in an emergency or unanticipated events) the preceding workday. Sufficient notice includes, but is not limited to, emails.

G. Alternative Work Schedule

1. Notwithstanding any contractual provisions to the contrary, the following flexible work schedule, Alternative Work Schedule (AWS), is established and available to all eligible DOL employees. Under AWS, a full-time employee may complete their basic 80-hour work requirement in fewer than 10 work days.
2. The core hours and work band described in Section F. listed above, apply to AWS.
3. Employees participating in AWS may earn and request and use credit hours in accordance with policy and the applicable CBA articles.
4. The employee's schedule – including the regular work day off – will be discussed and established in advance with an employee's immediate supervisor. The employee's schedule – including the regular work day off will be recorded on a standard employee schedule form. [See attachment].
5. To ensure the supervisor is able to plan and assign work within the work unit, the regular work day off will be the same each pay period.
6. If an employee on AWS requests to change a regular work day off and the request is denied due to business reasons, the supervisor must explain the decision in writing and attempt to agree on a different day.
7. If the regularly scheduled day off falls on a federal holiday, the employee is entitled to an "in lieu of" day.
8. To the extent practicable, the work schedules described above will be available to eligible part-time DOL BU employees. Appropriate arrangements will be worked out between the employee and the supervisor, consistent with the needs of the office and the spirit of the program. However, supervisors retain the right to establish and make final decisions relative to any work hour arrangements for part time employees.

9. AWS Day off/Scheduling adjustments/conflicts: When these situations occur, supervisors retain the right to establish and make final decisions relative to any alternative work schedule arrangements, including providing final approval concerning the employee's regularly scheduled day off under an AWS agreement. If conflicts arise as a result of several employees requesting the same regularly scheduled day off, then employee seniority (as defined by the applicable CBA), will be the deciding factor.
- H. This MOU does not supersede contractual, statutory or regulatory provisions related to management's right to assign work or determine work schedules, including the need to ensure office coverage during whatever regular business hours are specified in the applicable CBA or as determined by the individual field offices.

Section II - Expanded Work Schedule Flexibilities

A. Provisions

1. Exclusions

Article 25, Section 2.C. of the CBA between NCFLL and DOL specifically discusses the First 40- hour tour of duty for MSHA authorized Representatives and Right of Entry Employees and these employees are excluded from this Section II of this MOU. Part Time BLS CPI Economic Assistants, including those covered by the MOU between NCFLL and DOL, dated January 15, 2015, are excluded from Section II of this MOU.

2. Employees may, with supervisory approval, utilize the expanded work schedule flexibilities listed below.
3. To be eligible for approval for the expanded workplace flexibilities, employees must have at least a "Fully Successful" summary rating on their most recent rating of record and must not have had a written reprimand or disciplinary actions related to time, attendance, telework, or work schedules within the preceding year.
4. Employees may be denied the use of one or more of the expanded flexibilities if a supervisor identifies that there is an adverse impact on the mission of DOL. Denial does not prevent an employee from requesting the use of expanded flexibilities if the reason for denial has changed.

5. Dispute Resolution

- a. The parties agree to make best efforts to informally resolve disputes regarding the application of this MOU and the work schedule changes, as follows:
 - i. Best efforts should be made between first line supervisors and employees to informally resolve the matter.
 - ii. In the event that the matter cannot be resolved informally between supervisor and employee,
 1. AFGE Local 12 bargaining unit employees' disputes will be handled by the Agency Vice President and servicing Labor Relations Officer.

2. NCFLL bargaining unit employees' disputes will be handled by the Local President and the regional Labor Relations Officer or their designee.
3. NULI bargaining unit employees' disputes will be handled by the Regional Director and NULI Regional Vice President.
- iii. In the event the resolution processes above are not successful, the parties agree to bring concerns to the attention of the Director, DELMR, or their designee, or, for NULI, to the Deputy Director of OLMS, or designee, to discuss and address timely.
- iv. The parties agree that disputes related to expanded work schedule flexibilities are excluded from the negotiated grievance processes in the Local 12/DOL CBA; the NCFLL/DOL CBA; and the NULI/OLMS CBA, and that any outcomes from the dispute resolution process are not subject to grievance and arbitration processes, contingent on the parties following steps (i) through (iii) above. With respect to Local 12, NCFLL or NULI, the Local 12, NCFLL or NULI President will address the issue with the Director, DELMR, and their decision will be final.

6. Expanded Work Band

- i. With advance supervisory approval, the work band for employees on DOL's flexible work schedules (variable week and DOL alternative work schedule (AWS)) is expanded to 5:00 a.m. – 10:00 p.m. Monday – Friday.
- ii. The expanded work band flexibility is only for use when an employee is at their approved telework or remote location and not for on-premises work.
- iii. Except in exigent circumstances, employees must make a request to their first line supervisor or their designee by email no later than 11:00 a.m. on the business day preceding the use of the requested expanded flexibility and indicate their anticipated work schedule. The first line supervisor or their designee will respond in writing as soon as possible. Supervisors may provide advance approval for a proposed work schedule that extends for more than one pay period.
 - a. Saturdays and Sundays are not within the flexible work band and therefore employees may not work on Saturdays and Sundays, unless otherwise required to do so by their supervisor.
 - b. Premium pay rules, including those governing overtime and compensatory time, still apply as appropriate and when approved in advance.
 - c. Credit hour rules still apply (any hours worked past 80 hours up to 24 hours maximum carryover).
 - d. Employees may continue to work a maximum of 13 ½ hours per workday.

7. Mid-Day Flex

- i. With advance supervisory approval, employees on a variable workweek schedule or

AWS may request to take a mid-day flex break on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, or outside of core hours on Tuesday and Thursday of no less than 30 minutes from duties during the regular workday to undertake personal, non-work activities without the employee being required to use leave. During the mid-day flex break, the employee is in an off-duty status and is not eligible for any form of pay, travel costs or reimbursements, paid leave including wages, compensatory time and/or credit time from the Department. Employees participating in a mid-day flex break must continue to meet the basic 80-hour tour of duty work requirement with work hours, approved leave, or accrued credit time.

- ii. Except in exigent circumstances, employees must make a request to use a mid-day flex break by email no later than 11:00 a.m. on the business day preceding the use of the requested expanded flexibility and indicate their anticipated work schedule. The first line supervisor or their designee will respond in writing as soon as possible. Supervisors may provide advance approval for a proposed work schedule that extends for more than one pay period.
- iii. A mid-day flex break may be used either at an approved telework location or an employee's on-site work location. However, employees cannot use mid-day flex breaks to change work locations (i.e., from the on-site work location to a telework site or vice versa).
- iv. Employees will continue to follow all other rules and procedures outlined in the Department's Mid-day Flex Guide on LaborNet.

Section III - Telework and Remote Work

A. Provisions and Definitions

1. Telework is a work arrangement that allows an employee to perform work at an approved alternate worksite, and the employee is expected to report to their official worksite at least twice per bi-weekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis. The alternate worksite for a teleworker is the physical location approved by management as the employee's telework site.
 - i. Note: In the case of a telework employee whose work location varies on a recurring basis (e.g., mobile workers), with supervisory approval, the employee need not report at least twice each biweekly pay period to the regular worksite established by the agency as long as the employee is performing work within the same geographic area (established for the purpose of a given pay entitlement) as the employee's regular worksite.
 1. Mobile (field) work is work which is characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in customer or other worksites as opposed to a single authorized alternative worksite. Examples of mobile (field) work include site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management, and work performed while commuting, traveling between worksites, or on Temporary Duty (TDY). The definition of telework does not include any part of work done while on official travel or mobile (field) work.

- ii. In certain temporary situations, an agency may continue to treat the agency worksite as the official worksite of the employee even though, during that period, the employee is approved to work from an alternative worksite and not returning to the agency worksite at least two days per pay period. Examples of appropriate temporary situations can be found in OPM's Fact Sheet on Official Worksite for Location-Based Pay Purposes

2. Remote work is a work arrangement under which an employee is scheduled to perform work from an alternate worksite (e.g., a place other than where the employee would normally work absent a remote work arrangement) within or outside the local commuting area of the agency worksite, and the employee is not expected to report to the agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis.

The alternate worksite for a remote worker is the employee's home or other physical location from which the employee is authorized to work as their official worksite that is not an agency office or facility.

3. DOL will continue to follow government-wide guidance related to telework and remote work by appropriate Federal entities including, but not limited to the Office of Personnel Management's \(OPM\) Guide to Telework and Remote Work.
4. DOL employees serving a probationary or trial period may be permitted to participate in a formal telework arrangement or remote work arrangement, subject to supervisory approval and all other conditions in applicable statutes, regulations, and collective bargaining agreements, even if the employee has not received a rating of record.
5. As described in the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, 5 CFR 611, DPR 611, and the collective bargaining agreements, from a conduct perspective, employees are ineligible to telework if (1) the employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five (5) days in any calendar year; or (2) the employee has been officially disciplined for violations of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography on a Federal government computer while performing official Federal Government duties. Any other eligibility criteria related to conduct or discipline is captured in the employee's applicable collective bargaining agreement.
6. If an employee has been approved for a remote work arrangement, in line with Departmental Personnel Regulation 611 (Telework Program), outside the local commuting area of the agency worksite and their performance diminishes, the supervisor will promptly discuss those performance deficiencies with the employee and where possible, assist in improving those performance deficiencies before requiring the employee to report to the office as a way to facilitate performance improvement.

7. If an employee was hired into their position at DOL with an expectation outlined in the vacancy announcement that the position was a remote position with no expectation for the employee to report to an official worksite other than their home (except for official travel) and the duties of the position change such that the DOL modifies the employee's official worksite to a DOL office, DOL will pay the applicable relocation costs, if any exist/are required, subject to and in accordance with Federal regulations.
8. When remote work outside the local commuting area of the agency worksite is initiated at the employee's request to accommodate the employee's personal circumstances, the employee agrees that they will not seek or be entitled to relocation costs, either at the beginning or end of the remote work arrangement.

Thus relocation costs will not be provided at the time of establishment of a new remote work arrangement, or if the remote work arrangement is changed or terminated at the employee's or government's initiation, for example because the employee's personal circumstances change, or the government determines that the arrangement is failing to meet government needs or there is a deterioration in the employee's performance.

However, DOL management may consider alternative solutions such as looking for an alternate DOL work site within the employee's commuting area. The parties agree that management retains the right to assign work, including recalling employees from a remote arrangement if work must be conducted on-site.

9. In accordance with the parties' collective bargaining agreements and the DPR 611, employees are responsible for equipment outside of what they need to do their job. Employees are provided laptops which have software to enable telework such as jabber and TEAMS (among others). When the job responsibilities require additional equipment, the agency may provide it. For example, a field investigator may need a mobile phone or tablet. Additional equipment beyond the standard issued laptop should only be provided when there is a need based on the type of work.
10. Employees who are approved for remote work will be provided the following items:
 - Laptop
 - Soft Telecommunication equipment such as VOIP or jabber
 - Headphones
 - Employees will coordinate with their supervisors for any office supplies that are needed.
11. If an employee has been approved for a remote work arrangement and believes that they need specific equipment for remote work due to a disability, and the equipment is not otherwise provided, they may request that equipment through the reasonable accommodation process.

B. Telework Agreement Form

1. In the interest of continuity and best leveraging technology, DOL management is testing and will deploy an electronic Telework system by which employees will submit requests to telework to their supervisors, using the attached Telework Agreement Form and attached Telework Employee Self-Certification Safety Checklist. DOL management plans to deploy this electronic system as soon as February 2022.

2. When the electronic telework system is deployed, DOL employees must request to participate in telework through the electronic system to ensure the data is up to date.
3. The parties agree that the Telework Agreement Form that is an attachment to this MOU replaces all other Telework Agreement Forms in other locations, to include but not limited to: the NCFLL/DOL CBA effective October 1, 2006; the Local 12/DOL CBA effective July 20, 2020; and the NULI/OLMS CBA effective [insert date].
4. The parties agree that the Telework Employee Self-Certification Safety Checklist that is an attachment to this MOU replaces all other Telework Safety Checklists in other locations, to include but not limited to: the NCFLL/DOL CBA effective October 1, 2006; the Local 12/DOL CBA effective July 20, 2020; and the NULI/OLMS CBA effective [insert date].
5. Annual Recertification of the telework agreement is intended to be a review of the telework arrangement. It is intended to make sure that the arrangement is continuing to meet the needs of the office/agency and that the information in the agreement is still accurate and relevant. The parties understand that management retains the right and obligation to review telework arrangements continuously and may modify or terminate telework agreements at any time, subject to the procedures outlined in the applicable CBA.
6. If management intends to change or modify the agreement based on mission needs, there should first be a discussion with the employee, consistent with the applicable collective bargaining agreement. Absent exigent circumstances, supervisors should not modify or terminate a telework arrangement through the recertification process without first discussing the modification or termination with the employee. All changes made by management or the employee, to the agreement will follow what is written in the applicable CBA.

Training

Telework training-When the electronic system is fully implemented training on the new system will be provided to all DOL employees with refresher training occurring bi-annually.

Space

Space issues will be handled under the provisions of each union's CBA.

Section IV - Posting and Information Distribution Requirements

- A. If a Union representative or a bargaining unit employee has questions, they may continue to utilize the flexibilities@dol.gov email box.
- B. DOL will email all employees the link to this MOU on LaborNet.
- C. This MOU establishes no precedent for any other agreement, practice, or procedure.

Section V – Formation of Teams to discuss Future of Work

Joint management/union teams will be formed by each Agency to address what the new work environment will be post COVID. The parties agree to meet 90 days after the first business day of Phase 3 to discuss the teams and how often they will meet. The parties plan to use already existing forums to meet and discuss future of work matters such as Labor Forums, LMR meetings, and Agency meetings.

DOL recognizes its obligations under the Federal Service Labor Management Relations Statute. As such, DOL will provide notice to the Unions regarding changes to processes that may give rise to a bargaining obligation.

Article 11 Telework

Section 1: Introduction

The Department of Labor and its employees are first and foremost responsible for achieving the mission of the Agency to foster, promote, and develop the welfare of the wage earners, job seekers, and retirees of the United States; improve working conditions; advance opportunities for profitable employment; and assure work-related benefits and rights.

Further, Department of Labor management and Local 12 recognize that in order to achieve this mission, it must ensure that all parts of the mission are covered by its key assets, the Department's talented and hard-working employees.

In its endeavors to achieve this mission, the Department of Labor recognizes that it must be a leading example for demonstrating a commitment to providing a positive workplace for its employees. DOL recognizes the importance of workplace flexibilities for its employees and its responsibility as a model employer. In an effort to attract, empower, and retain a talented and productive workforce in the 21st century, we must continue to enable employees to balance their responsibilities to deliver exceptional and efficient service to the American public while meeting family and other needs at home.

This Article supersedes and replaces the Memorandum of Understanding between the United States Department of Labor and the American Federation of Government Employees Local 12, commonly referred to as the "Future of Work" MOU, executed on February 24, 2022.

Section 2: Purpose

DOL Management and Local 12 jointly recognize the mutual benefits of a flexible workplace program to the Department and its employees. In recognizing this benefit, both parties also acknowledge the needs of the DOL to accomplish its mission without diminishing employee performance or the operations of the Agency. Participation in the telework program must be consistent with mission accomplishment and customer service.

The benefits of telework include recruiting new workers, retaining valuable talent, allowing the Federal government to maintain productivity in various situations, balancing work and family responsibilities, providing reasonable accommodation for disabled employees, realizing cost savings to the Government, and meeting environmental, financial, and commuting concerns. In addition, telework helps maintain Continuity of Government (COG) and Continuity of Operations (COOP) and continued productivity during emergency situations (e.g., public health emergencies, localized acts of nature, accidents, etc.).

The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, 5 U.S.C. § 6501-6506, requires Agencies to have telework programs, but nothing in that statute or in this Agreement gives individual employees a right to telework. Telework is a privilege rather than a right. Telework is a voluntary program which permits employees to work at home or at other approved sites away from a Federal agency office location. This does not bar Management from requiring employees whose positions have been identified as mission critical under Continuity or other emergency situations from working at an alternate site as permitted by law, rule, or regulation.

Section 3: Provisions and Definitions

- a. Telework is a work arrangement that allows an employee to perform work at an approved alternate worksite, the employee is expected to report to their official worksite at least twice per bi-weekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis. The alternate worksite for a teleworker is the physical location approved by management as the employee's telework site.
 - 1) Note: In the case of a telework employee whose work location varies on a recurring basis (e.g., mobile workers), with supervisory approval, the employee need not report at least twice each biweekly pay period to the regular worksite established by the agency as long as the employee is performing work within the same geographic area (established for the purpose of a given pay entitlement) as the employee's regular worksite.
 - a. Mobile (field) work is work which is characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in customer or other worksites as opposed to a single authorized alternative worksite. Examples of mobile (field) work include site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management, and work performed while commuting, traveling between worksites, or on Temporary Duty (TDY). The definition of telework does not include any part of work done while on official travel or mobile (field) work.
 - 2) In certain temporary situations, an agency may continue to treat the agency worksite as the official worksite of the employee even though, during that period, the employee is approved to work from an alternative worksite and not returning to the agency worksite at least two days per pay period. Examples of appropriate temporary situations can be found in OPM's Fact Sheet on Official Worksite for Location- Based Pay Purposes at <https://www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/pay-leave/pay-administration/fact-sheets/official-worksite-for-location-based-pay-purposes/>.
- b. Remote work is a work arrangement under which an employee is scheduled to perform work from an alternate worksite (e.g., a place other than where the employee would normally work absent a remote work arrangement) within or outside the local commuting area of the agency worksite, and the employee is not expected to report to the agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis. The alternate worksite for a remote worker is the employee's home or other physical location from which the employee is authorized to work as their official worksite that is not an agency office or facility.

Section 4: Types of Arrangements: Informal and Formal

All telework arrangements require supervisory approval and a written agreement between the employee and their supervisor.

Formal arrangements are regular and recurring in nature and include working at home, telecommuting centers, or other sites approved by the supervisor.

Informal arrangements are sometimes referred to as ad hoc, episodic, or situational. Such arrangements will normally take one (1) day or less, but could last longer if a project or work assignment necessitates more time. Telework performed under an informal telework arrangement requires supervisory approval prior to each authorized telework occurrence. Informal arrangements may be used as trial periods to determine the practicality of formal arrangements. Generally, this trial period will last at least six (6) months to determine the practicality of formal arrangements. However, nothing precludes a supervisor from placing an employee on a formal arrangement in less than six months, nor removing an employee from an informal arrangement for good cause. Employees who have an approved informal telework agreement may work unscheduled telework when OPM or DOL authorizes it to the extent that technology and workload permits, with supervisory approval.

For the purposes of this Article, no distinction is made between probationary and non-probationary employees.

Section 5: Eligibility

- a. Consistent with the parties' goals of fostering a family-friendly workplace, all employees are eligible to participate in the telework program, except for employees whose duties and responsibilities include:
 - (1) required daily access to classified/secured or sensitive information which cannot be transported or accessed remotely;
 - (2) required daily in-person contact with members of the public or the use of equipment at the main worksite; or
 - (3) performance that is otherwise infeasible away from the employee's regular place of employment.
- b. Furthermore, per the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 (public law 111-292) an employee is not eligible to telework if, the employee has been officially disciplined in the previous three (3) years for being absent without permission for more than five (5) days in any calendar year, or has been officially disciplined for violation of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Federal Branch, for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.

- c. DOL employees serving a probationary or trial period may be permitted to participate in a formal telework arrangement or remote work arrangement, subject to supervisory approval and all other conditions in applicable policies, statutes, regulations, and collective bargaining agreements, even if the employee has not received a rating of record.
- d. For those employees determined eligible to participate, the following criteria must also be met:
 - (1) A sufficient amount of the employee's essential functions can be performed at an alternate worksite. It is understood that the accomplishment of the Agency's mission is paramount. While supervisors and managers may agree to permit an employee to telework, there is no contractual obligation or requirement on Management to do so.
 - (2) The employee must be available and accessible to supervisors, coworkers, and customers at all times while performing work at an alternate worksite.
 - (3) The employee's most recent performance evaluation is at least Fully Successful.
 - (4) The employee has not had a conduct problem documented within the previous twelve (12) months that would cause management to be concerned about the employee's trustworthiness or dependability.
 - (5) Costs of such an arrangement must be feasible. The parties recognize that costs or cost savings in technology, equipment and telecommunications are considerations in decisions regarding participation in telework arrangements.

- (6) Technology/equipment needs: Existing and evolving technology(ies) may allow or prevent an employee from participating in the Telework Program. The employee may need access to specific equipment and/or technology on telework days. Management may require employees to conduct work only on government furnished equipment while teleworking. Such equipment/technology, as identified by the employee's supervisor, may include, but is not limited to:
 - (a) Telephone access, including long distance
 - (b) Functional internet access
 - (c) DOL-approved computer hardware/software
 - (d) Equipment maintenance and repair
 - (e) Remote technical assistance
 - (f) Replacement of damaged or lost equipment
 - (g) Fax capability
 - (h) Scanning capability
 - (7) Any required telework training must be completed before the Telework Agreement is signed. Thereafter, employees must take mandatory telework training on a biennial (every other year) basis.
 - (8) Employees must follow applicable policies and procedures when accessing, handling, and disposing of Government or Departmental information. This includes, but is not limited to, confidential data and other information protected by statute.
- e. Consistent with the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, teleworkers and non-teleworkers will be treated the same for purposes of:
- (1) Periodic appraisals of job performance of employees;
 - (2) Training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees;
 - (3) Work requirements; and
 - (4) Other acts involving managerial discretion.

Section 6: Coverage of Office Functions

- a. The parties understand that the need to meet the mission of the Agency is the highest priority and are committed to ensuring this occurs. The parties agree that the types of work completed throughout DOL may significantly vary and therefore, the ability to telework may be limited. For example, DOL employees required to engage in the mission-based work and coverage requirements listed below, understand that they may not be able to participate in telework and/or that their use of telework may be limited. Some examples include, but are not limited to:
 - (1) conduct inspections and investigations;
 - (2) attend training, including initial developmental periods;
 - (3) attend legal proceedings;
 - (4) be present at worksites during specific work hours;
 - (5) be present at worksites for blocked periods of time such as the end of the fiscal year or other high-volume time periods for fiscal or other reasons;
 - (6) answering phones (although the parties recognize that technology may permit this function to be performed remotely);
 - (7) providing receptionist duties, including receiving visitors;
 - (8) providing clerical, technical, and professional support;
 - (9) providing office representation at essential meetings;
 - (10) handling inquiries from the public;
 - (11) fulfilling program needs based on business necessity; and/or
 - (12) dealing with internal and/or external customers during the normal business hours of the office.
- b. Management will continue to have responsibility for seeing that the mission of the Department is carried out. Each office will determine adequate coverage during normal business hours for the purpose of assuring that the functions of the office and mission of the Department are fulfilled.
- c. Employees must meet coverage requirements, if assigned. The determination of who will work which particular hours to ensure such coverage is within the authority of the supervisor. Determining office coverage hours may involve both the office worksite and the telework site. Where practicable, personal preference will be considered when scheduling coverage. Where personal preference conflicts with mission accomplishment or the equitable sharing of the burden of coverage, personal preference shall give way.

Section 7: Time Frames

Upon receipt of a written request for formal telework, the supervisor will normally respond to the employee within fourteen (14) calendar days of the request.

- a. If disapproved, the employee will be advised in writing with the reason(s).
- b. If approved, the specifications of the arrangement will be established, reduced to writing on a Standard Individual Telework Agreement Form, and signed by both the supervisor and the employee. The employee will begin working at the alternate worksite within fifteen (15) workdays after completion of the agreement form unless circumstances dictate otherwise.

Section 8: Telework Agreement Form

- a. In the interest of continuity and best leveraging technology, DOL management uses an electronic Telework system by which employees must submit requests to telework to their supervisors, using the attached Telework Agreement Form and attached Telework Employee Self-Certification Safety Checklist.
- b. DOL employees must request to participate in telework through the electronic system to ensure the data is up to date.

Section 9: Operating Principles

- a. Supervisors maintain full authority to assign work. This includes, but is not limited to, assigning specific work products to be completed or requiring an employee to respond to requests from their supervisor.
- b. The governing rules, regulations and policies concerning time and attendance, overtime, credit hours and leave are unchanged by participation in telework. Employees will not perform overtime or night work without express approval in advance.
- c. For employees who are approved to participate in telework, the employee will normally have the option to work a designated flexible work schedule or other schedules as set forth in Article 5.
- d. Injuries that arise in the performance of duty at the alternate worksite are subject to the Federal Employees' Compensation Act.
- e. The Government is not responsible for operating costs, home maintenance, or any other incidental costs to the employee (e.g., utilities). Employees on telework are entitled to reimbursement for authorized expenses while conducting government business.
- f. For employees who are approved to be on telework, the following applies with respect to equipment:

- (1) Employees are responsible for equipment outside of what they need to do their job. Employees are provided laptops which have software to enable telework such as jabber and TEAMS (among others). When the job responsibilities require additional equipment, the agency may provide it. For example, a field investigator may need a mobile phone or tablet. Additional equipment beyond the standard issued laptop should only be provided when there is a need based on the type of work.
- (2) If the employee uses government furnished equipment, the employee will use and protect the equipment the same as if they were in the office.
- (3) Government-furnished equipment will be serviced and maintained by the government.
- (4) If the employee uses their own equipment, the employee is responsible for its service and maintenance.
- (5) In the event an employee loses connectivity and/or experiences an issue with either government furnished equipment or their personal equipment, the employee must contact the appropriate IT Helpdesk or other vendor as soon as possible to remedy the issue. In addition, the employee must notify their supervisor as soon as practicable.
- (6) Employees will ordinarily be given a minimum of 24 hours advance notice regarding management's service or maintenance of government-furnished equipment. Such service or maintenance will occur during the employee's normal work hours unless circumstances dictate otherwise.
- (7) Employees are obligated to apply necessary safeguards to protect government records from damage or unauthorized disclosure.
- (8) To ensure access to bargaining unit employees participating in telework, the Standard Individual Telework Agreement will state the employee's name; their alternate worksite address(es), including non-DOL telephone number, e-mail and/or fax number. A semi-annual report reflecting the total numbers of Telework Agreements, with the number of days per week and the agency shall be provided to the Union on the first of March and the first of September.
- (9) Management may review the telework agreement at any time to ensure the agreement is continuing to meet the mission and business needs of the Agency. A review must occur no less than annually. The review is intended to make sure that the arrangement is continuing to meet the needs of the office/agency and that the information in the agreement is still accurate and relevant. The parties understand that management retains the right and obligation to review telework arrangements continuously and may modify or terminate telework agreements at any time, subject to the procedures outlined in the applicable CBA.

- (10) If management intends to change or modify the agreement based on mission needs, there should first be a discussion with the employee. Absent exigent circumstances, supervisors should not modify or terminate a telework arrangement through the recertification process without first discussing the modification or termination with the employee.
- (11) In circumstances where OPM or DOL authorizes the use of unscheduled telework, or unscheduled leave, those employees who currently have an approved informal or formal telework agreement in place may request to telework, report to their duty station within DOL, or take unscheduled leave. Employees must notify their supervisor of their plan to telework, report to their duty station within DOL or take unscheduled leave, as soon as practicable after official notification, normally no later than 10:00 A.M.
- (12) DOL will continue to follow government-wide guidance related to telework and remote work by appropriate Federal entities including, but not limited to the Office of Personnel Management's (OPM) Guide to Telework and Remote Work found at:
[<https://www.telework.gov/guidance-legislation/telework-guidance/telework-guide/guide-to-telework-in-the-federal-government.pdf>]

Section 10: Remote Work Considerations

- a. If an employee has been approved for a remote work arrangement, in line with DPR 611 (Telework Program), outside the local commuting area of the agency worksite and their performance diminishes, the supervisor will promptly discuss those performance deficiencies with the employee and where possible, assist in improving those performance deficiencies before requiring the employee to report to the office as a way to facilitate performance improvement.
- b. If an employee was hired into their position at DOL with an expectation outlined in the vacancy announcement that the position was a remote position with no expectation for the employee to report to an official worksite other than their home (except for official travel) and the duties of the position change such that the DOL modifies the employee's official worksite to a DOL office, DOL will pay the applicable relocation costs, if any exist/are required, subject to and in accordance with Federal regulations.
- c. When remote work outside the local commuting area of the agency worksite is initiated at the employee's request to accommodate the employee's personal circumstances, the employee agrees that they will not seek or be entitled to relocation costs, either at the beginning or end of the remote work arrangement. Thus, relocation costs will not be provided at the time of establishment of a new remote work arrangement, or if the remote work arrangement is changed or terminated at the employee's or government's initiation, for example because the employee's personal circumstances change, or the government determines that the arrangement is failing to meet government needs or there is a deterioration in the employee's performance. However, DOL management may consider alternative solutions such as looking for an alternate DOL work site within the employee's commuting area. The parties agree that management retains the right to assign work, including recalling employees from a remote arrangement if work must be conducted on-site.

✚ Employees who are approved for remote work will be provided the following items:

- (1) Laptop
- (2) Soft Telecommunication equipment such as VOIP or jabber
- (3) Headphones

Employees will coordinate with their supervisors for any office supplies that are needed.

e. If an employee has been approved for a remote work arrangement and believes that they need specific equipment for remote work due to a disability, and the equipment is not otherwise provided, they may request that equipment through the reasonable accommodation process.

Section 11: Recall

Employees participating in telework must be accessible and available for recall on a temporary basis to the office based on the needs of the Agency. Recall examples include, but are not limited to, training, special meetings, new work requirements, unanticipated short-term staffing shortages and emergencies. When possible, Management will provide reasonable advance notice of not less than forty-eight (48) hours for all recalls; while there may be circumstances when advance notice cannot be given, the notice should be as soon as practicable.

Section 12: Termination

- a. Employees may voluntarily terminate participation in a telework/remote work arrangement at any time; however, employees may be expected to continue working at the alternate worksite for a reasonable period to allow management time to arrange a work station.
- b. Supervisors may terminate an agreement whenever one or more of the following conditions occur:
 - (1) There is a change in work requirements, or the arrangement no longer supports the mission.
 - (2) The employee's performance is less than Fully Successful after at least ninety (90) days.
 - (3) The employee has demonstrated conduct problems regarding trustworthiness or dependability which have been documented to the extent that they should be removed from the program.
 - (4) Costs of the agreement are no longer affordable.
 - (5) Technology changes require return to the regular office.
 - (6) The employee does not comply with the terms of their agreement.
- c. When Management terminates an agreement:
 - (1) To the extent practicable, Management will provide at least seven (7) calendar days advance notice of the termination of any agreement.
 - (2) The Notice of Termination must be in writing and indicate the reason(s) for termination and advise the employee what steps he or she must take in order to regain eligibility to telework.
- d. Termination of a telework agreement does not prevent an employee from reapplying as soon as the required criteria are met, as described above.

Section 13: Space

As described in Article 32, the following apply. Employees who are scheduled to be away from the office, either through telework and/or regular scheduled day(s) off through AWS, a compressed work schedule, or a part-time schedule, three (3) or more full days a week are not entitled to a dedicated personal work station. These employees may be required to utilize common/shared work areas as described in Article 32. Under this concept, employees will be provided a work area which includes a work surface, a docking station, a phone, and locked storage as provided for in Article 32. It is understood that these work areas are not permanently assigned to any specific employee and are utilized on a daily first come, first served basis, and as needed when the employee is required to report to the office.

Section 14: Safety

- a. Each participating employee must sign a self-certification checklist that certifies that the alternate worksite is safe. Management may deny an employee the opportunity to participate in telework or may recall a telework agreement based on safety concerns at the telework site.
- b. Safety self-certification checklists must be submitted and recertified to the employee's supervisor annually in the Department's automated telework application system.

Section 15: Issue Resolution

- a. Agency managers and Union officials are encouraged to establish creative approaches, including sharing information, to resolve problems regarding telework. Where there are disputes over participation, recall, or termination of a formal telework arrangement, the dispute shall be brought to the Local 12 Agency Vice-President and the employee's second-line supervisor in an effort to resolve the issue informally.
- b. In the event that the matter is not resolved informally, it will be elevated to the Director, OELMR, or designee, and President, AFGE Local 12, or designee, for timely resolution.

Section 16: Grievability

Management's decisions on participation, recall, or termination of formal telework arrangements are grievable and arbitrable before the Grievance Board as set forth in Article 44. Decisions on informal telework arrangements are not grievable unless the employee alleges that the decision is based on a prohibited personnel practice.

Section 17. Standard Individual Telework Agreement Template and Safety Checklist

The Standard Individual Telework Agreement template and self-certification checklist is included in the Department's automated telework application system. If management proposes to change the Standard Individual Telework Agreement template and/or checklist, management will notify the Union.

Department of State
January 2024 Submission

January 26, 2024

OMB Request: Please send a written update that answers these questions. Agencies may provide additional detail or narrative on top of these answers. Responses are due via email to futureofwork@omb.eop.gov no later than January 26, 2024.

Agencies should provide:

(1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

- The Department has met its in-person presence objectives. As of January 23, 2024, with a Mobility Assessment Tool (MAT) completion rate of 100%, the average maximum routine telework a domestic employee is permitted per pay period is 36% -- a decrease from 51% on October 30, 2023.
- We are also tracking payroll data, per OMB request, which indicates that 77% of domestic work hours are performed onsite. Due to the consistency of this metric over recent months despite significant changes in onsite presence requirements, the Department will continue to refine reporting of telework in its time and attendance process.
- On average, domestic Department employees are now expected to work onsite a minimum of 6-7 days per pay period, meeting our in-person presence objective.
- In addition, our overseas workforce of more than 9,000 is limited to situational telework only.

(2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

- Workforce support: The Department continues to strengthen existing lines of effort to support our workforce to make onsite presence meaningful, manage hybrid teams, and highlight the extensive employee resources for work/life integration while also meeting the goal of our mission.

- Infrastructure improvements: The Department continues to improve infrastructure and coordinate with external service providers to support onsite presence, including office and conference room space, parking, transportation, and food options.
- Communications and outreach: Consistent outreach to the workforce is a priority, including direct messaging from senior leaders, targeted support for managers, open forums like town halls, and updated policy guidance.
- Continual policy refinement: The Department will continue to refine guidance on onsite presence to further improve consistency, including working with timekeepers to ensure consistent reporting of telework and onsite work hours. We are also looking at strategically using workplace flexibilities to increase recruitment and retention.

(3) Description of your agency’s approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

- The Department of State uses the MAT to assess the appropriate level of onsite work for each domestic position based on a standardized set of criteria.
- At Secretary Blinken’s direction, the Department recalibrated the MAT in the fall of 2023 to increase meaningful onsite presence.
- All teleworking employees are required to have an active telework agreement, approved by both their supervisor and bureau executive director. The Department will continue to monitor and enhance compliance through targeted outreach.
- Supervisors are also responsible for ensuring that employees follow their approved telework schedules and report to the office as required.
- The Department continues to submit biweekly reports to OMB with a detailed breakdown of telework data.

- The Department is discussing data management improvements that could empower managers and bureaus to better track and enforce telework agreement compliance.

3 FAM 2360

TELEWORK

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)
(Office of Origin: GTM/ER/WLD)

3 FAM 2361 GENERAL INFORMATION

3 FAM 2361.1 Purpose

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)
(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 (Act) required each executive branch agency to establish a policy under which eligible employees are authorized to telework. Telework is primarily an arrangement established to facilitate the accomplishment of work from a location other than the regular worksite. While employees and agencies alike enjoy positive outcomes resulting from telework, agencies retain both the discretion and the obligation to determine employee eligibility for telework subject to business-related, operational needs, as well as the limitations and requirements described in the Act, including 5 U.S.C. 6502(b), and OPM guidance.

3 FAM 2361.2 Authority

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)
(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

Authorities include:

- (1) An Office of Personnel Management (OPM) memorandum to agency personnel directors on October 21, 1993;
- (2) Presidential memoranda to agency heads on July 11, 1994 (Memorandum on Expanding Family Friendly Work Arrangements in the Executive Branch), and June 21, 1996 (Memorandum on Family Friendly Work Arrangements);

- (3) The National Telecommuting Action Plan adopted by the President's Management Council on January 5, 1996;
- (4) Section 359 of Public Law 106-346, October 23, 2000;
- (5) Division B of Public Law 108-447, December 8, 2004;
- (6) The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 signed by the President on December 9, 2010;
- (7) 5 CFR 531.605;
- (8) Information on telework law and telework guidance found on www.telework.gov, the official website of the Federal Government's telework program; and
- (9) Office of Personnel Management (OPM) Guidance released to Agencies, November 2021.

3 FAM 2361.3 Applicability

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. This subchapter applies to:
 - (1) Civil Service and Foreign Service employees who are on assignment in the United States and who are encumbering a position with duties eligible for telework; and
 - (2) U.S. direct-hire employees assigned abroad on a case-by-case basis, at the discretion of management.
- b. For information regarding special considerations pertaining to telework arrangements for employees abroad, refer to 3 FAM 2362.3.
- c. For information regarding Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas (DETOs) refer to 3 FAM 2370.
- d. For information regarding establishing a Remote Work Arrangement, refer to 3 FAM 2380 (Remote Work).

- e. For information regarding telework arrangements for Locally Employed (LE) Staff, refer to 3 FAM 7769.
- f. Telework arrangements as accommodation for a disability must be approved by the Disability and Reasonable Accommodation Division in the Bureau of Global Talent Management, Office of Accessibility and Accommodations (GTM/OAA/DRAD), in accordance with the provisions of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, the Americans with Disabilities Act Amendments Act of 2008, and implementing EEOC regulations at 29 CFR 1630. See 3 FAM 3670 for how to request a reasonable accommodation.

3 FAM 2361.4 Definitions

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

Alternate worksite: A designated location, other than the regular worksite, where employees perform work assignments, such as the employee's home.

Core telework: A telework arrangement in which the employee teleworks on a regularly scheduled basis.

eTelework: Electronic database in GTM Next through which all domestic employees request Telework agreements.

Global OpenNet (GO): The OpenNet Everywhere system that provides subscriber access to Department of State unclassified email, documents, and applications while away from the office or teleworking.

Mobility Assessment Tool (MAT): A tool housed in GTM Next for managers/supervisors to use to determine the maximum telework eligibility for domestic positions using an equitable, standard, and objective process.

Official Worksite: The official worksite is the location where the employee regularly performs their duties as reflected on the employee's Notification of Personnel Action (SF-50). For an employee who is approved for remote work, whether within or outside of the locality pay area of the regular worksite, the location on their SF-50 for their official worksite will generally be their residence. The official worksite may also be referred to as the official duty station.

Regular Worksite: The physical location where an employee would normally report for work if they were not working remotely or teleworking (i.e., the location of the employee's position, such as the Harry S Truman Building). This may also be referred to as the agency worksite.

Remote Worker: A U.S. government direct-hire employee assigned to a domestic position who performs their position's job duties offsite at an approved alternate worksite and who is not expected to report to the regular worksite.

Situational telework: A telework arrangement in which an employee is approved by a supervisor to telework on an ad-hoc/case-by-case and non-routine basis, where the hours teleworked are not part of a previously approved, ongoing, or regular telework schedule. Situational telework is sometimes also referred to as occasional, episodic, intermittent, unscheduled, or ad-hoc telework. Situational telework may be granted even if an employee is already approved for core telework and does not require an amendment to an existing telework agreement. This type of telework also is a component for continuity of operations (COOP) and continuity of government (COG) operational statuses.

Telework: The term 'telework' or 'teleworking' refers to a workplace flexibility under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternate worksite other than the regular worksite, but still reports onsite to their regular worksite at least twice per pay period.

Teleworker: An employee who teleworks but reports to the regular worksite at least twice per pay period.

Telework agreement: A mandatory document that outlines the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement, which are agreed upon between the supervisor and the employee.

Unscheduled telework: Telework performed by an employee with an approved active telework agreement on an unscheduled basis in response to inclement weather or other unexpected emergencies and in accordance with OPM notifications and guidance, with notification to the supervisor. OPM generally makes unscheduled telework announcements in these circumstances to permit (or require) unscheduled telework to be performed, in compliance with agency policy, irrespective of whether the employee was scheduled to telework.

3 FAM 2362 DEPARTMENT POLICY

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

Note: The rest of 3 FAM 2360 addresses only telework. See 3 FAM 2380 for detailed information on remote work.

- a. The Office of Employee Relations, Work Life Division, in the Bureau of Global Talent Management (GTM/ER/WLD) manages the Department's Telework Program and provides telework policy guidance to bureaus. When properly implemented, telework benefits both the employee and the Department by increasing work/life effectiveness, aiding in recruitment and retention, and enhancing morale.
- b. Maintaining a viable telework-ready workforce requires practice and the regular, ongoing testing of equipment and procedures to ensure that teleworkers will be effective and efficient while performing duties at an alternate worksite when required.
- c. Bureaus have management discretion to determine whether telework is an option for their direct-hire employees and contractors. Bureau management officials may develop a bureau telework policy that advances the bureau's mission and meets the bureau's operational needs while supporting telework to the fullest extent practicable. A bureau telework policy must be consistent with, and no more restrictive than, the Department's telework policy in 3 FAM 2360.

3 FAM 2362.1 General Provisions

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. The programmatic requirements of the office must be considered when approving telework arrangements.
- b. Participation in the Telework Program is voluntary.
- c. Telework is not an entitlement, nor does it create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable by a party against management.
- d. Telework agreements outlining the specific work arrangement agreed to for the teleworker must be established between the employee and supervisor.
- e. The telework agreement must be reviewed by the manager and teleworker at a minimum on a yearly basis and/or if there is a material change in position functions.
- f. Employees are responsible for informing supervisors and colleagues how they can be reached during telework or remote work, including by telephone. Employees must provide accurate contact methods in their email signature block to ensure they can be contacted whether working offsite or in the office.*
- g. Supervisors are responsible for implementing measures to maintain open communication with all employees whether onsite or offsite.
- h. Telework arrangements are based on the employee's position duties as evaluated for telework eligibility in the Mobility Assessment Tool.
- i. Telework is not a substitute for dependent care but teleworkers may work from their alternate location even when individuals requiring care (e.g., children or elders) are present. Employees must request leave for time spent actively performing care or personal responsibilities during regular duty hours.
- j. The alternate worksite must be a safe and adequate place to work. Teleworkers must provide sufficient security to protect any U.S. Government-owned equipment that may be lent or issued to them.

- k. Per 3 FAM 3483.2\(a\)\(3\), an authorizing official will not approve Weather and Safety Leave (WSL) when the WSL condition does not prevent the employee from safely traveling to and safely performing work at their regular worksite, even if the affected day is a scheduled telework day. This includes situations where an employee loses internet connectivity at the alternate worksite (except in cases where there is also an office closure at the regular worksite). For teleworkers who lose connectivity at the alternate worksite, Global OpenNet (GO) login and IT connection attempts reported to the IT Service Center are considered hours of work (i.e., Regular Duty) for up to one hour.
- l. All employees, whether working onsite, teleworking, or remote must be treated equally for purposes of periodic appraisals of job performance, training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, work requirements, removing employees, and other acts involving managerial discretion. References to telework or remote work status will be considered inadmissible comments for the purposes of Civil Service performance appraisals and Foreign Service Employee Evaluation Reports (EERs).
- m. A supervisor may cancel, suspend, or modify the telework arrangement in accordance with 3 FAM 2362.2, with prior notification of at least two pay periods, by providing written justification to the employee documenting the rationale for the cancellation or change, such as a substantive change in the position's duties or a performance or conduct issue.
- n. An employee may cancel the telework agreement at any time with prior notification of at least 10 workdays. An employee may request an adjustment of their telework arrangement by providing a written justification to their supervisor for consideration.
- o. A supervisor generally may require the presence of an employee in the office on a day normally scheduled for telework. A supervisor has discretion to allow a make-up core telework day, but there is no requirement to do so. In situations where an employee requests telework as a reasonable accommodation, the supervisor should forward the request to the Office of Accessibility and Accommodations in the Bureau of Global Talent

Management, in accordance with 3 FAM 3673.2. Normally, an employee is notified of such a change in advance, but sometimes advance notice is not feasible.

- p. Teleworkers are subject to workplace requirements, e.g., random drug testing, and must report to the regular worksite when requested. As a general rule, transportation costs from the alternate worksite to the official worksite on a day usually scheduled for telework will not be reimbursed by the U.S. Government.
- q. Teleworking employees must exercise care and judgment with regards to records and information that are Sensitive But Unclassified (SBU) and/or subject to the Privacy Act. Offices allowing employees access to these records offsite must ensure that appropriate administrative, technical, and physical safeguards are maintained to protect the confidentiality and integrity of records (see 12 FAM 540.)
- r. All work-related files, records, or papers produced while working away from the regular worksite are the property of the U.S. Government and are subject to all applicable laws and regulations governing the use, maintenance, access, and destruction of such files, records, and papers.
- s. Employees must adhere to the terms of their Telework Agreement.
- t. A decline in employee performance may result in the modification or cancellation of the telework agreement if the supervisor determines that the decline in performance cannot be adequately addressed while maintaining the employee's telework status and/or if the supervisor determines that telework has diminished employee performance or agency operations. Generally, a supervisor may in their discretion approve an employee to remain on telework status while on a Performance Improvement Plan. Generally, if the employee's telework is an approved reasonable accommodation, it cannot be modified without consulting GTM/OAA/DRAD.*
- u. Telework Agreements are generally cost-neutral arrangements.*

- v. Teleworkers are expected to provide for their own office supplies, equipment, and internet access sufficient to perform the duties of their positions from an alternate worksite. Bureaus may, at their discretion, provide an Enterprise Mobile Device (EMD) or other Department-issued mobile device, equipment, or supplies to an employee.
- w. An employee receiving telework as a reasonable accommodation may consult with the Office of Accessibility and Accommodations in the Bureau of Global Talent Management concerning the types of accommodations which may be available to the employee at the alternate worksite.
- x. When temporarily teleworking for more than 10 consecutive workdays from a location other than the alternate worksite listed in the telework agreement, an employee must obtain pre-approval from their supervisor and should submit, via eTelework, a new telework agreement and Home Safety Checklist for Teleworkers (Form DS-1963) for the additional alternate location(s) to the supervisor. The employee, supervisor, and/or bureau approver should document additional alternate worksite(s) in the Comments field on the eTelework Agreement, addressing the location(s) and timeframe of the alternate worksite(s).

3 FAM 2362.2 Eligibility

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. Domestic telework eligibility is primarily based upon mission needs and the functions of the position that the employee encumbers, as reflected in the position's Mobility Assessment Tool (MAT) designation. Through the MAT process, each domestic position receives a maximum telework eligibility score. Supervisors must conduct a MAT assessment for each domestic position that reports to them, and each such assessment must be approved by the employing bureau Executive Director. Supervisors are required to discuss position MAT scores with each of their direct reports. Employees are not required to telework up to the maximum telework eligibility of their position. If a supervisor limits the frequency of telework permitted in the employee's Telework Agreement to less than the maximum telework eligibility of the position per the MAT assessment, the supervisor must document the reason in the MAT.

- b. An employee's full-time or part-time work status, including participation in a Job Share, does not in and of itself impact telework eligibility.
- c. Foreign Service employees assigned abroad are not eligible for core telework given the nature of diplomacy and work abroad. However, employees assigned overseas may be eligible for situational telework. More detail about telework arrangements abroad is found in 3 FAM 2362.3.
- d. Employees are generally eligible for telework unless:
 - (1) The employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year;
 - (2) The employee is currently on leave restriction;
 - (3) The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties, or for misconduct related to the misuse of public office for private gain, misuse of nonpublic information, misuse of U.S. Government property, or misuse of official time; or
 - (4) The employee's performance is unacceptable AND the supervisor determines that the decline in performance cannot be adequately addressed if the employee is approved for telework.
- e. Employees may be granted situational telework on an ad-hoc, case-by-case basis, with supervisor approval, in addition to the frequency of core telework documented in their Telework Agreement.

Example: An employee is on a core telework agreement, teleworking every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. The employee twists their ankle and is not able to commute on the metro as usual during recovery. They request situational telework on Tuesdays and Thursdays during their recovery period. Because the employee already has a core telework agreement in place, they do not need a new Telework agreement, but the supervisor must approve the temporary additional situational telework.

3 FAM 2362.3 Special Considerations for Telework Abroad

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service, Civil Service Employees and Eligible Family Members hired under Family Member Appointments)

- a. All overseas posts are required to implement a post-specific telework policy, including posts in which telework is not permitted. The decision to permit telework rests with the Chief of Mission. The policy applies to all employees of all agencies who are subject to COM authority.*
- b. Posts must meet the following additional requirements, beyond the generally applicable telework policy, for telework abroad:*
 - (1) The Counter Intelligence Working Group (CIWG) must concur that telework is appropriate for the Mission and approve a policy that allows participation in Remote Access.*
 - (2) The telework policy must be written in consultation with the Mission's Management Section and Regional Security Office. Posts must have telework policies in place in order to permit employees to telework on a case-by-case basis.*
 - (3) The decision whether to notify the host country of a telework arrangement will be made by the Chief of Mission.*
 - (4) Official documents in the employee's residence will be safeguarded (e.g., in a personal locked cabinet) and segregated from personal documents and possessions. In* general, employees will minimize the use/presence of printed official documents outside of post facilities.

- (5) Access to classified electronic material is not allowed at the alternate worksite or home, unless the employee has permission to receive and operate a Department-issued secure communications device, which will permit the use of electronic classified material. Sensitive But Unclassified (SBU) material may be permitted but should be minimized to the extent possible.*
 - (6) Each mission has the authority to designate, via their post telework policy, the highest approving official required on the telework agreement (DS-4230).*
- c. Only situational telework is permitted for U.S. direct-hire employees (e.g., Foreign Service employees), eligible family members hired under Family Member Appointments, and Personal Services Contractors (PSCs) assigned abroad. Core telework arrangements are not permitted.*
 - d. Employees may request situational telework for a variety of reasons (such as security or safety incidents, family situations, etc.), and managers and missions have broad discretion when evaluating these requests.*
 - e. U.S. Direct-hire employees assigned abroad are subject to 3 FAM 2362.3 (Special Considerations for Telework Abroad) and are not DETOs (Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas) as outlined in 3 FAM 2370.
 - f. For information regarding telework arrangements for Locally Employed (LE) Staff, refer to 3 FAM 7769.*
 - g. There are a number of situations that may call for situational telework in the United States while away from post for U.S. direct-hire employees, such as MEDEVACs (3 FAM 2362.5), Emergency Visitation Travel (3 FAM 2362.5), or being "caught out" while on travel in the United States (e.g., when a travel delay prevents immediate return from the United States at the conclusion of R&R). Posts have discretion on whether to allow situational telework in these and similar circumstances and are encouraged to consider these scenarios in their specific policies.*

h. Telework from a country other than the employee's overseas post of assignment (also referred to as third country telework) is generally prohibited due to concerns related to security and privileges and immunities. This should not be confused with work conducted while on TDY orders for employees who are sent TDY to a third country location as part of an authorized or ordered departure.

3 FAM 2362.4 Temporary Telework Arrangements During Medical Evacuation/Emergency Visitation Travel/Other Emergencies Away from Post in the United States

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees and Eligible Family Members (EFM) in the Department of State's Medical Program)

Under certain circumstances, temporary telework arrangements may be approved for employees who are in the United States during a period of medical evacuation ("medevac"), Emergency Visitation Travel (EVT), or other emergencies resulting in an absence from the post of assignment. Allowing such employees to telework in appropriate circumstances facilitates continuity of operations, is an efficient use of human resources, increases employee morale, and diminishes the impact of the employee's absence from post. Managers and supervisors are encouraged to consider short-term telework requests from eligible employees who wish to continue working while on medevac, during EVT, or while otherwise absent from their post of assignment due to other emergencies, i.e., the employee, or a member of the employee's or employee's spouse's immediate family is ill or injured and requires the employee's support.

- (1) Employees who are absent from post in the United States on medevac, EVT, or due to another emergency, and who satisfy the eligibility criteria set forth in 3 FAM 2362.2 and the requirements set forth in 3 FAM 2362.3 may be eligible for a short-term telework arrangement. This does not apply to employees who are away from post in a third country.

- (2) A short-term telework arrangement under this section shall not exceed the period of the medevac, the time spent away from the post of assignment on EVT or due to other emergency, or 180 calendar days, whichever is shorter.
- (3) Employees engaged in a short-term telework arrangement under this section may telework appropriate job duties, bureau-assigned tasks, or a combination of both.
- (4) A short-term telework arrangement under this section is subject to the approval of the employee's supervisor and post's Management Office, in consultation with post's Human Resources Officer, the Bureau of Medical Services, and/or Regional Security Officer, where appropriate, and consistent with post's telework policy in compliance with 3 FAM 2362.3.
- (5) Employees are reminded that telework is not a substitute for leave, and that there is no employee entitlement to telework. See 3 FAM 2362.1.
- (6) Time spent in telework status by an employee on medical travel must not result in any delay in the employee's obtaining the required medical assessments necessary for expeditious completion of the medical evacuation.
- (7) Both the Telework Agreement Form (DS-4230) and the Home Safety Checklist for Telework Form (DS-1963) must be completed prior to beginning telework.

3 FAM 2362.5 Security

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

Telework employees are not permitted to work with classified information (electronic information only) at the telework worksite unless approved to receive and operate a Department-issued secure communications device, and must comply with current standards for remote operations from private residences. Agency security policies do not change and are enforced at the same rigorous level when employees work offsite as when they are at the regular agency worksite. Employees who telework or work remotely need to keep U.S. Government property and information safe, secure, and separated from their personal property and information (see 12 FAM 620, 12 FAM 530, 12 FAM 560, and 5 FAM 840 for additional information).

3 FAM 2362.6 Training

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. Employees eligible for telework must successfully complete mandatory interactive telework training through OPM (www.telework.gov) before applying for a telework agreement and thereafter, at least once each year, e.g., upon renewal of the agreement.
- b. Managers who supervise teleworkers must successfully complete the interactive telework training for managers through OPM (www.telework.gov) at least once each year.
- c. Managers are highly encouraged to complete PT200 - Telework Principles for Supervisors: Managing a Virtual Workforce found in the FSI Registrar's Course Catalogue.

3 FAM 2363 THE ROLE OF EMPLOYEES, SUPERVISORS, BUREAU TELEWORK COORDINATORS, AND THE TELEWORK MANAGING OFFICER

3 FAM 2363.1 Employee

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees only)

Employees are responsible for maintaining an acceptable level of performance and must work with their supervisors to address any concerns related to performance or conduct. Employees must meet organizational requirements regarding communication and accessibility. This includes compliance with established bureau/office core hours and employees' established hours of work. Employees must remain flexible and responsive to the needs of the office and must clarify how they can be reached when teleworking or working remotely.

3 FAM 2363.2 Supervisor

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. Supervisors must be committed, when considering a telework arrangement, to supporting the use of telework to the fullest extent practicable to accomplish work requirements and duties, consistent with the needs of the office and mission. Regular communication between the supervisor and employee and, when required to accomplish the work of the office/bureau, between the employee and Department colleagues, is critical to ensure accountability for work performed and a virtual presence throughout the workday.
- b. Supervisors are required to conduct a MAT assessment of each domestic position to determine the maximum telework eligibility of each position.*
- c. Supervisors are required to discuss the results of the MAT position assessment with their employee and provide the employee with a determination of telework frequency the employee will be permitted, as documented in the employee's Telework Agreement.*
- d. If the frequency of telework permitted in the Telework Agreement is less than the maximum telework eligibility of the position per the MAT assessment, the supervisor must document the reason in the MAT.*
- e. Supervisors must use the same metrics to evaluate the productivity of teleworkers as are used in evaluating employees working at the regular worksite. Periodic status reports may be used within offices to assess work products and productivity.

- f. Supervisors should establish an office-wide communication structure for all employees (whether physically present at the regular worksite or not). This might include notification procedures (e.g., email notification) for reporting for and signing off duty at beginning of workday and end of workday.
- g. In the event of an office closure, supervisors should collaborate with their employees to ensure that employees have sufficient work for their regular duty hours when teleworking or working remotely, including offline work, to the extent possible.

3 FAM 2363.3 Bureau Telework Coordinator

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. The bureau telework coordinator is the subject-matter expert and the first point of contact for each bureau. The bureau telework coordinator provides guidance and answers questions regarding telework and remote work policy, the telework agreement process, and serves as a liaison between the employee, bureau, and the Department's Telework Managing Officer in the Bureau of Global Talent Management.
- b. Bureau telework coordinators ensure that the final Bureau Approver, who is generally the bureau Executive Director (unless delegated to another appropriate official such as the Deputy Executive Director or senior Human Resources Specialist) reviews and approves the Telework Agreement before telework begins.

3 FAM 2363.4 Telework Managing Officer

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. The telework managing officer (TMO) in GTM/ER/WLD is responsible for policy development and implementation related to the Department's telework program.
- b. The TMO is an advisor to agency leadership and a resource for bureau telework coordinators, managers, and employees. The TMO also serves as the primary agency point of contact for the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) on telework matters.

- c. The TMO is responsible for all reporting requirements of the telework program.

3 FAM 2364 TIME AND ATTENDANCE CERTIFICATION

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. A supervisor approves the employee's scheduled hours of duty and certifies the time and attendance of telework employees in the same manner as for employees reporting to the official worksite.
- b. The General Accountability Office (GAO) requires agencies with employees working at alternate sites to provide reasonable assurance that the employees are working when scheduled. This can be done by determining the work output for the time reported and/or clocking in and out each day via telephone or e-mail.
- c. Telework employees remain subject to all applicable laws, regulations, policies, and procedures governing the provision of premium pay to include the existing rules on overtime under 5 U.S.C. 5542 and the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA).

3 FAM 2364.1 Salary and Benefits

(CT:PER-640; 06-07-2011)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

A telework arrangement is not a basis for changing the employee's salary or benefits based on the Civil Service grade or Foreign Service rank of the position. Telework arrangements may have the effect of changing an employee's official worksite in accordance with the definitions set forth in 3 FAM 2361.4 and consistent with 5 CFR 531.605. Changes to an employee's official worksite may, in turn, affect the employee's salary, benefits, travel entitlements, and standing in the event of a reduction-in-force (RIF).

3 FAM 2364.2 Leave

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

Annual and sick leave must be requested in the same manner for all employees, whether they work onsite at the regular worksite or not (see 3 FAM 3310 and 3 FAH-1 H-3310, Leave).

3 FAM 2364.3 Alternate Work Schedules

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. Teleworkers maintain hours of duty consistent with their bureau or post policies on flexible or alternate work schedules. Guidance on flexible and compressed work schedules is provided in 3 FAM 2330. Employees should also consult any applicable collective bargaining agreement in place. The practices of telework and alternate work schedules are not mutually exclusive.
- b. However, employees on alternate work schedules (AWS) with core telework agreements may not substitute their AWS day for a day they are required to be at the regular worksite. For example, an employee required to be onsite two days each pay period may not designate their AWS day as a de facto onsite day. They must still report onsite two days per pay period.

3 FAM 2364.4 Weather and Safety Leave Eligibility for Teleworkers

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. Under the provisions set forth in 3 FAM 3480, the immediate supervisor or other higher-level authorizing official may grant a separate type of paid leave, called weather and safety leave (WSL), when it is determined that employees cannot safely travel to or from, or perform work at, their normal worksite, a telework site, or other approved alternate worksite because of severe weather or another emergency situation, as defined in 3 FAM 3481.1. WSL will generally be used in conjunction with an operating status announcement issued by OPM or the Department. Employees must adhere to the Department's telework policy set forth in 3 FAM 2360.

- b. There are situations in which teleworking employees encounter GO or IT connectivity problems that may prevent them from working during part or all of their workday. If teleworking employees encounter connectivity problems preventing them from working at their regular worksite then they may work at their alternate work site or submit a leave request to their supervisor (DS-71). If the connectivity problems are at their alternate work site, then they may go into their regular worksite or submit a leave slip. If there are connectivity problems at both the regular worksite and the alternate work site, such as a major storm resulting in electricity outages or unsafe roadways, supervisors may approve Weather and Safety Leave requests for the specific period of time.
- c. Per 3 FAM 3483.2\(a\)\(3\), an authorizing official will not approve WSL when the WSL condition affects the alternate worksite but does not prevent the teleworking employee from safely traveling to and safely performing work at their regular work site, even if the affected day is a scheduled telework day. Likewise, telework-ready employees may generally not receive WSL during an office closure if they can safely travel to and work at their alternate worksite.
- d. Requirements to telework for emergency employees and certain other employees with approved and current telework agreements are set forth in 3 FAM 3483.4 - Emergency Employees and Emergency Relocation Group Employees.

3 FAM 2365 EMERGENCY RESPONSE TELEWORK - CONTINUITY OF OPERATIONS (COOP)

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. Telework is an important component to all agency emergency planning. The Department's policy is to implement telework arrangements as broadly as possible to take full advantage of the potential of telework and to ensure that:
 - (1) Equipment, technology, and technical support have been tested;
 - (2) Employees are comfortable with technology and communication methods; and
 - (3) Managers are comfortable managing a distributed work group.
- b. Based on the nature of the emergency, supervisors and managers may leverage telework to carry out the essential functions of the Department. Supervisors and managers will ensure the designation is documented in the telework agreement.
- c. Mission critical team (MCT) members should be appropriately equipped to ensure they can function from any location equipped with internet access.
- d. During any period that an executive branch agency is operating under a continuity-of-operations plan, that plan will supersede any telework policy.

3 FAM 2366 COSTS AND EQUIPMENT

3 FAM 2366.1 Information Technology

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

Bureaus are responsible for the cost of employees' access to GO Virtual accounts.

3 FAM 2366.2 Home as the Alternate Worksite

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. Management is not obligated to provide any electronic or communication equipment to the teleworker. However, the bureau may issue available equipment to employees for use at the alternate worksite.
- b. The employee must agree to protect and not misuse or abuse any U.S. Government-owned equipment and to use the equipment for official purposes. The bureau will, as appropriate, set up, service, and maintain any U.S. Government-owned equipment issued to an employee who teleworks. Ownership and control of the equipment, including hardware, software, and data, remain with the U.S. Government. An employee who separates from the Department must return the USG-owned equipment. The U.S. Government will not be responsible for any other incidental costs (e.g., utilities, internet access) associated with the use of the employee's residence.
- c. The employee is responsible for repair and maintenance of any personal equipment used. The bureau or post may agree to provide the employee with all necessary office supplies.
- d. An employee should be regularly available to their supervisor, (e.g., email, phone/voice, video, and teleconferencing platforms) and should regularly check messages and follow-up on responsibilities, as needed, while at the alternate worksite.

3 FAM 2366.3 Telephone Calls

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. Under 31 U.S.C. 1348, reimbursement of long-distance (domestic and international) telephone expenses are allowed if incurred as a result of official duties. Form OF-1164, Claim for Reimbursement for Expenditures on Official Business, should be completed and approved by the employee's supervisor with a copy of the telephone charges.
- b. To the extent possible, teleworkers should make official long-distance calls using U.S. Government provided resources (e.g., from the regular worksite, using a U.S. Government-issued cell phone, or using other approved IT tools (Microsoft Teams, ZoomForGov, etc.)). This practice will reduce additional costs associated with telework to the Department of State.

3 FAM 2367 WORKERS' COMPENSATION

(CT:PER-1175; 02-12-2024)

(State Only)

(Applies to Foreign Service and Civil Service Employees)

- a. U.S. Government employees suffering work-related injuries and/or damages at the alternate worksite are covered as set forth in the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA) (workers' compensation) and the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act (PCA). Benefits provided under the FECA constitute the sole remedy against the United States for a work-related injury.
- b. A telework agreement and safety checklist (Form DS-1963, Home Safety Checklist for Teleworkers) must be approved by a domestic employee's bureau in the eTelework system. Overseas employees must follow post telework policies for application procedures, including the completion and approval of a telework agreement (DS-4230) and Form DS-1963.
 - (1) An employee who teleworks or works remotely from their residence is responsible for ensuring that their home is a safe and adequate place to work; and
 - (2) When temporarily teleworking for more than 10 workdays from a location other than the alternate worksite listed in the telework agreement, an employee must obtain pre-approval from their supervisor and should submit, via eTelework, a new telework agreement and Home Safety Checklist for Teleworkers (Form DS-1963) for the additional alternate location(s) to the supervisor. The employee, supervisor, and/or bureau approver should document additional alternate worksite(s) in the Comments field on the eTelework Agreement, addressing the location(s) and timeframe of the alternate worksite(s).

- (3) When teleworking for fewer than 10 workdays from a location that is not the alternate worksite listed in the telework agreement (e.g., home), employees should ensure that the alternate worksite(s) comply with the health and safety requirements reflected in the Home Safety Checklist (Form DS-1963).
- c. When injured while working at an alternate worksite, an employee should follow the same procedures as adhered to in the regular worksite when injured. The injured employee must notify their supervisor immediately and complete standard Department of Labor injury forms.

Purpose of the Employee Telework Task Framework

The Employee Telework Task Framework assists Consular Affairs and Passport Services in meeting their goal of improving workplace flexibility through the accomplishment of tasks that are not dependent on an in-office presence. Job functions such as adjudication, adjudication auditing and performance oversight are examples of core tasks that should be prioritized when determining telework assignments. Access to requisite equipment and systems in a remote adjudication environment will play a large role in determining the appropriateness of telework assignments. As Passport Services gains more access to equipment and systems that facilitate remote adjudication activities, telework assignments will be more flexible to include adjudication related activities as a primary focus.

As resources and workload conditions dictate, other non-adjudication related activities may be appropriate for telework activities.

The Passport Services telework initiative aligns with the Functional Bureau Strategy Management Goal to Improve organizational and resource capacity in support of consular services, as well as Passport Services Goals to Modernize Business Processes; Transform the Customer Experience; and Invest in Passport Services' Employees to Further Develop Our World Class Workforce.

Overview of Telework Assignments

Telework assignments are intended to carry out Passport Services' core responsibilities and include workload management (i.e., adjudication), special assignments, and training. Several examples of telework activities include the following

- | | |
| <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Online Passport Renewal Adjudication• Adjudication auditing• Required reading• Required adjudication and fraud training• Rotational assignments• Develop and facilitate local training• Plan and facilitate Consular Leadership Day (CLD) activities | <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Functional mentoring• Team lead• Fulfillment of required annual training (i.e., PC441 Passport Data Security; PK405 Preventing Harassment at State)• Working on a special project (i.e., D.E.I.A initiatives; Change Champions)• Participating in remote detail assignment• Microsoft Office 365 skill training• Remote Outreach assignment |

TELEWORK

Section 1: Purpose

The purpose of this Article is to establish a uniform Telework Policy for CGFS Charleston. Authorities include:

- a. Presidential memoranda to agency heads on July 11, 1994, and June 21, 1996;
- b. An Office of Personnel Management (OPM) memorandum to agency personnel directors on October 21, 1993;
- c. The National Telecommuting Action Plan adopted by the President's Management Council on January 5, 1996;
- d. Section 359 of Public Law 106-346, October 23, 2000;
- e. Division B of Public Law 108-447, December 8, 2004;
- f. The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 signed by the President on December 9, 2010;
- g. 5 CFR 531.605; and
- h. Information on telework law found on the shared OPM and General Services Web site. See the telework legislation listing.
- i. Department of State Telework Policy set forth at 3 FAM 2360.

Section 2: Definitions

- a. Alternate work site: A designated location, other than the official work site, where employees perform work assignments such as the employee's home or an official telework center.
- b. Core telework: The employee teleworks on a regularly scheduled basis, at least 1 day a week, but perhaps more frequently.
- c. FOB: A small security hardware device with built-in authentication or subsequent generation technology, that allows an employee secure access to the employee's network shares and Open Net Everywhere (ONE).
- d. Global OpenNet (GO): The next generation OpenNet Everywhere (ONE) system that provides subscriber access to Department of State unclassified email, documents, and applications while away from the office or teleworking.
- e. Official work site: The official work site is the regular work site for the employee's position of record provided the employee is scheduled to work at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis at the regular work site. For an employee, whose work location varies on a recurring basis, the employee need not work at least twice each biweekly pay period at the regular official work site (where the employees work activities are based) as long as the employee is performing work regularly within the locality pay area for that work site. The official work site for an employee covered by a telework agreement who is not regularly scheduled to report at least twice each biweekly pay period to the official work site is the location of the telework site (e.g., the location of his or her home, telework center, or other alternate work site from which the employee works) except in temporary situations (e.g., extended official travel or recovery from an injury or medical condition).

- f. Situational telework: The employee teleworks on an irregular basis, generally recommended 1 day a month or the average of 12 days per year. Other situations may develop that makes it beneficial for the employee and supervisor to agree on a situational telework opportunity. This type of telework also is a component for continuity of operations (COOP).
- g. Telecenters: Alternative work sites in facilities to provide space for employees to work nearer to their home instead of at their traditional office. Renting telecenter space will be subject to availability of funds. Telecenters are equipped with printers, copiers, fax machines, telephones, video conferencing, and other office essentials. Telecenters also have technical support staff, if needed.
- h. Telework: The term telework or teleworking refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved work site other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work.
- i. Telework agreement: A mandatory document that outlines the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement, which are agreed upon between the supervisor and the employee.
- j. Unscheduled telework: Telework on an unscheduled basis in response to snow or other unexpected emergencies and in accordance with OPM notifications and guidance. Unscheduled telework may be performed when an unscheduled telework announcement is issued, irrespective of whether the employee was scheduled to telework.
- k. Department Policy
 - 1) The Department supports the broadest use of telework consistent with the needs of the Department by eligible agency employees to include supervisors, managers, and executive leadership. When properly implemented, telework benefits both the employee and the Department by increasing work/life effectiveness.
 - 2) Maintaining a viable telework-ready workforce requires practice and the regularly testing of equipment and procedures throughout the year to ensure that teleworkers will be effective and efficient while performing duties at an alternate work site when required.
 - 3) The Telework Program is managed by the Office of Employee Relations, Work Life Division, in the Bureau of Human Resources (HR/ER/WLD).
 - 4) Each bureau may develop a telework policy to address unique internal concerns and processes. The individual bureau policy must be no more restrictive than the overall Department policy and use the same terms and definitions.

Section 3: General Provisions

- a. The programmatic requirements of the office must be a major factor in approving telework arrangements.
- b. Participation in the Telework Program is voluntary.
- c. Telework is not an entitlement, nor does it create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable by a party against management.
- d. Telework agreements outlining the specific work arrangement agreed to must be established between the employee and supervisor.
- e. The telework agreement should be revisited by the manager and teleworker, at a minimum on a yearly basis or if there is a material change in work circumstances (i.e., promotion, new supervisor) to ensure that it is meeting the business needs of the office.
- f. Telework arrangements will normally be approved for no more than one work day per week. The day(s) of the week authorized will be determined by the manager.
- g. An employee's full-time or part-time work status does not impact telework eligibility.
- h. Methods must be in place to maintain open communication between co-workers and teleworkers.
- i. Telework arrangements must be based on the employee's work performance and position duties, not on other personal circumstances.
- j. Telework is not an alternative for child, elder, or dependent care. Employees must not use duty time for any purpose other than official duties and must make other arrangements for such care.
- k. The alternate work site must be a safe and adequate place to work. Teleworkers must provide sufficient security to protect any U.S. Government-owned equipment, such as computers, fax machines, and copy machines, which may be loaned to them.
- l. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers must be treated the same for purposes of periodic appraisals of job performance, training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, work requirements, removing employees, and other acts involving managerial discretion.
- m. A supervisor may cancel, suspend or adjust the telework arrangement by providing written justification to the employee based on eligibility criteria listed in Section 4 at any time with prior notification of at least 10 workdays.
- n. An employee may cancel the telework agreement at any time with prior notification of at least 10 workdays. An employee may request an adjustment of their telework arrangement by providing a written justification to their supervisor for consideration.
- o. A supervisor may require the presence of an employee in the office on a day normally scheduled for telework. Normally, an employee is notified of such a change in advance, but sometimes advance notice is not feasible. Problems maintaining adequate system connectivity in excess of 30 minutes may be a basis for a supervisor to require an employee to report to the office on a day normally scheduled for telework. Teleworkers are subject to workplace requirements, e.g., random drug testing, and must report to the regular duty station when requested. As a general rule, transportation costs from the alternative work site to the official work site on a day usually scheduled for telework will not be reimbursed by the U.S. Government.

- p. Care and judgment must be exercised with regard to records and information that are Sensitive But Unclassified (SBU) and/or subject to the Privacy Act. Offices allowing employees access to these records offsite must ensure that appropriate administrative, technical, and physical safeguards are maintained to protect the confidentiality and integrity of records (see 12 FAM 540.)
- q. All work-related files, records, or papers produced while teleworking are the property of the U.S. Government and are subject to all applicable laws and regulations governing the use, maintenance, access, and destruction of such files, records, and papers.

Section 4: Eligibility

- a. Telework eligibility is based upon, among other factors, the position that the employee encumbers, as well as the employee's performance and conduct. Management has the discretion to designate an employee as ineligible for telework or revoke or modify a telework arrangement for, but not limited to, any of the criteria listed in paragraph b of this section.
- b. Criteria:
 - (1) Position: Positions are generally eligible for telework unless they:
 - (a) Require, on a daily basis (i.e., every work day), direct handling of classified national security information; or
 - (b) Require, on a daily basis (i.e., every work day), on site activity that cannot be handled remotely or at an alternative work site.
 - (c) The parties recognize that there are certain positions which have on-site activities which could occur on any given day, but generally do not. In those situations, telework eligibility determinations will be made keeping in mind that co-workers may be able to perform the on-site activity when it occurs, thus, allowing the position to be telework eligible.
- c. Factors that require an employee to be on site may include, but are not limited to:
 - 1) Systems Access (e.g. Are the electronic systems used as part of the job function able to be adequately accessed from a remote work location using a RSA Token?)
 - 2) Data sensitivity (e.g. Is the data used by this position too sensitive to be accessed remotely? Is the quantity of the SBU or PII data too large to be accessed from a remote work site?)
 - 3) Data availability (e.g. Is the data that supports the function being performed available to the employee electronically from a remote site?)

- 4) Work product (e.g. Is the work of a production nature that requires it to be performed daily at the official work site?)
 - 5) Face to face contact (e.g. Does the position require daily face to face interaction with individuals at the official work site?)
 - 6) Hands on contact (e.g. Does the position require daily hands on contact with equipment at the official work site?)
- d. Employee: Employees are generally eligible for telework unless:
- 1) The employee's most recent performance rating of record is below fully successful or the employee otherwise requires close supervision;
 - 2) The employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year;
 - 3) The employee is currently on leave restriction;
 - 4) The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties, or for misconduct related to the misuse of public office for private gain, misuse of nonpublic information, misuse of U.S. Government property, or misuse of official time; or
 - 5) The employee's absence from the office has placed an undue burden on office operations.

Section 5: Security Concerns

Employees are not permitted to telework with classified information at the telework site, and must comply with current standards for remote operations from private residences. Agency security policies do not change and are enforced at the same rigorous level when employees telework as when they are in the office. Employees who telework from home need to keep U.S. Government property and information safe, secure, and separated from their personal property and information (see 12 FAM 620 and 5 FAM 840).

Section 6: Training

Employees eligible to telework must successfully complete the interactive telework training for employees before entering into a telework agreement. Managers who are supervising teleworkers must successfully complete the interactive telework training for managers.

Section 7: Time and Attendance Certification

- a. A supervisor approves the employee's scheduled hours of duty, and certifies the time and attendance of telework employees in the same manner as for non-telework employees.
- b. The General Accountability Office (GAO) requires agencies with employees working at alternate sites to provide reasonable assurance that the employees are working when scheduled. This can be done by determining the work output for the time reported and/or clocking in and out each day via telephone or e-mail.
- c. Telework employees remain subject to all applicable laws, regulations, policies, and procedures governing the provision of premium pay to include the existing rules on overtime under 5 U.S.C. 5542 and the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA).

Section 8: Salary and Benefits

A telework arrangement is not a basis for changing the employee's salary or benefits based on the Civil Service grade of the position. Telework arrangements may have the effect of changing an employee's official work site in accordance with the definitions set forth in 3 FAM 2361.4 and consistent with 5 CFR 531.605. Changes to an employee's official work site may, in turn, affect the employee's salary, benefits, travel entitlements, and standing in the event of a reduction-in-force (RIF).

Section 9: Leave

Annual and sick leave must be requested by an employee who teleworks in the same manner as for employees not engaged in telework activities.

Section 10: Group Dismissal

- a. Any requirement that a teleworker continue to work if the agency closes to the public, grants liberal leave, or dismisses employees early on his or her telework day, should be included in the employee's formal telework agreement. If an employee is approved to telework when there is an unscheduled telework announcement that should also be included in the employee's formal telework agreement.
- b. When a localized emergency (e.g., fire, flood, etc.) specifically affects only the employee's official work site (when not the employee's telework site) and forces the official work site to close when the employee is scheduled to telework, the employee teleworking at the alternate work site will not be excused unless he or she cannot perform work without regular contact from the official work site and such regular contact is prevented by the localized emergency.
- c. When both the regular office and the alternative workplace are affected by a widespread emergency, (e.g. power failure), the Department will grant the telework employee excused absence identical to that given to employees at the official duty station or regular work site.
- d. When an emergency affects only the alternative work site for a major portion of the workday, the employee must consult with his or her supervisor to determine whether to report to the official duty station or request annual leave or leave without pay (LWOP).

Section 11: Continuity of Operations (COOP)

- a. Telework is an important component to all agency emergency planning. It is the Departments policy to implement remote work arrangements as broadly as possible to take full advantage of the potential of telework for this purpose and to ensure that:
 - (1) Equipment, technology, and technical support have been tested;
 - (2) Employees are comfortable with technology and communications methods; and
 - (3) Managers are comfortable managing a distributed work group.
- b. Based on the nature of the emergency, supervisors and managers may leverage telework to carry out the essential functions of the Department. Supervisors and managers will ensure the designation is documented in the telework agreement.
- c. Mission critical team (MCT) members should be equipped with FOBs (security hardware devices) to ensure they can function from any location equipped with internet access.
- d. During any period that an executive agency is operating under a continuity-of-operations plan, that plan will supersede any telework policy.

Section 12: Home as the Alternate Work Site

- a. Management is not obligated to provide any electronic or communication equipment to the teleworker. However, the executive director of the bureau may loan available equipment (computer, software, or fax) within the bureau to employees for use at home.
- b. The bureau may provide remote access to the Departments system via an FOB (security hardware device) or similar device. The employee must agree to protect and not misuse or abuse any U.S. Government-owned equipment and to use the equipment for official purposes. The bureau will install, service, and maintain any U.S. Government-owned equipment issued to an employee who teleworks. Ownership and control of the equipment, including hardware, software, and data, remain with the U.S. Government. The U.S. Government will not be responsible for any other incidental costs (e.g., utilities) associated with the use of the employee's residence.
- c. The employee is responsible for repair and maintenance of any personal equipment used. Management may agree to provide the employee with all necessary office supplies.
- d. An employee should be easily accessible to his or her supervisor and should frequently check voice mail or e-mail while at the alternate work site.

Section 13: Telephone Calls

- a. Under 31 U.S.C. 1348, reimbursement of long-distance (domestic and international) telephone expenses are allowed if incurred as a result of official duties. Form SF-1164, Claim for Reimbursement for Expenditures on Official Business, should be completed and approved by the employee's supervisor with a copy of the telephone charges.

- b. To the extent possible, teleworkers should make official long-distance calls from the regular work site where less expensive rates apply. This practice will reduce additional costs associated with telework to the Department of State.

Section 14: Workers Compensation

- a. U.S. Government employees suffering work-related injuries and/or damages at the alternative work site are covered as set forth in the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA) (workers' compensation) and the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act (PCA). In cases where FECA or the PCA are not applicable, U.S. Government employees may have a remedy under the Federal Tort Claims Act.
- b. A telework agreement and safety checklist must be on file with the CGFS.
- c. When injured while working at an alternate site an employee should follow the same procedures as adhered to in the traditional office setting when injured. The injured employee must notify his or her supervisor immediately and complete standard Department of Labor injury forms.

ARTICLE 33 TELEWORK

Section 1. Purpose

- a. Telework in the Federal Government started as a pilot program in 1990. The President's Council on Management Improvement (PCMI), in cooperation with the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) and the General Services Administration (GSA), established the Federal Flexible Workplace Pilot Project (Flexiplace).
- b. The nationwide program was established to improve the Federal Government's ability to recruit and retain capable employees by increasing their flexibility to balance work and family priorities, decrease commuting time, traffic congestion, and energy consumption. The telework movement is facilitated by innovations in human resources management, changes in the nature of work, advances in new technology, and requirements for contingency planning.

Section 2. Authority

Authorities include:

- (1) Presidential memoranda to agency heads on July 11, 1994, and June 21, 1996;
- (2) An Office of Personnel Management (OPM) memorandum to agency personnel directors on October 21, 1993;
- (3) The National Telecommuting Action Plan adopted by the President's Management Council on January 5, 1996;
- (4) Section 359 of Public Law 106-346, October 23, 2000;
- (5) Division B of Public Law 108-447, December 8, 2004;
- (6) The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 signed by the President on December 9, 2010;
- (7) 5 CFR 531.605; and
- (8) Information on telework law found on the shared OPM and General Services Web site. See the telework legislation listing.

Section 3. Definitions

- a) Alternate work site: A designated location, other than the official work site, where employees perform work assignments such as the employee's home or an official telework center.
- b) Core telework: The employee teleworks on a regularly scheduled basis, at least 1 day a week, but perhaps more frequently.
- c) FOB: A small security hardware device with built-in authentication or subsequent generation technology, that allows an employee secure access to the employees network shares and Open Net Everywhere (ONE).

- d) Global OpenNet (GO): The next generation OpenNet Everywhere (ONE) system that provides subscriber access to Department of State unclassified email, documents, and applications while away from the office or teleworking.
- e) Official work site: The official work site is the regular work site for the employees position of record provided the employee is scheduled to work at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis at the regular work site. For an employee whose work location varies on a recurring basis, the employee need not work at least twice each biweekly pay period at the regular official work site (where the employees work activities are based) as long as the employee is performing work regularly within the locality pay area for that work site. The official work site for an employee covered by a telework agreement who is not regularly scheduled to report at least twice each biweekly pay period to the official work site is the location of the telework site (e.g., the location of his or her home, telework center, or other alternate work site from which the employee works) except in temporary situations (e.g., extended official travel or recovery from an injury or medical condition).
- f) Situational telework: The employee teleworks on an irregular basis, generally recommended 1 day a month or the average of 12 days per year. Other situations may develop that makes it beneficial for the employee and supervisor to agree on a situational telework opportunity. This type of telework also is a component for continuity of operations (COOP).
- g) Telecenters: Alternative work sites in facilities to provide space for employees to work nearer to their home instead of at their traditional office. Renting telecenter space will be subject to availability of funds. Telecenters are equipped with printers, copiers, fax machines, telephones, video conferencing, and other office essentials. Telecenters also have technical support staff, if needed. For Washington, DC metropolitan area telecenters, see 3 FAH-1 Exhibit H-2361.1, Telecenters.
- h) Telework: The term telework or teleworking refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved work site other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work.
- i) Telework agreement: A mandatory document that outlines the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement, which are agreed upon between the supervisor and the employee.
- j) Unscheduled telework: Telework on an unscheduled basis in response to snow or other unexpected emergencies and in accordance with OPM notifications and guidance. Unscheduled telework may be performed when an unscheduled telework announcement is issued, irrespective of whether the employee was scheduled to telework.

Section 4. Department Policy

- a) The Department supports the broadest use of telework consistent with the needs of the Department by eligible agency employees to include supervisors, managers, and executive leadership. When properly implemented, telework benefits both the employee and the Department by increasing work/life effectiveness.
- b) Maintaining a viable telework-ready workforce requires practice and the regularly testing of equipment and procedures throughout the year to ensure that teleworkers will be effective and efficient while performing duties at an alternate work site when required.
- c) The Telework Program is managed by the Office of Employee Relations, Work Life Division, in the Bureau of Human Resources (HR/ER/WLD).
- d) Each bureau may develop a telework policy to address unique internal concerns and processes. The individual bureau policy must be no more restrictive than the overall Department policy and use the same terms and definitions.
- e) HR/PC will provide the Union with any Bureau telework policy upon request. HR/PC will provide the Union with any new Bureau telework policy within seven (7) days of receipt.

Section 5. General Provisions

- a) The programmatic requirements of the office must be a major factor in approving telework arrangements.
- b) Participation in the Telework Program is voluntary.
- c) Telework is not an entitlement, nor does it create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable by a party against management.
- d) Telework agreements outlining the specific work arrangement agreed to must be established between the employee and supervisor.
- e) The telework agreement should be revisited by the manager and teleworker, at a minimum on a yearly basis or if there is a material change in work circumstances (i.e., promotion, new supervisor) to ensure that it is meeting the business needs of the office.
- f) Telework arrangements may take many forms, such as one or more scheduled/recurring days of the week, a few times a month or on an irregular basis. Full-time telework can be arranged when appropriate.
- g) An employee's full-time or part-time work status does not impact telework eligibility.
- h. Methods must be in place to maintain open communication between co-workers and teleworkers.
- i) Telework arrangements must be based on the employee's work performance and position duties, not on other personal circumstances.

J) Telework is not an alternative for child, elder, or dependent care. Employees must not use duty time for any purpose other than official duties and must make other arrangements for such care.

k) The alternate work site must be a safe and adequate place to work. Teleworkers must provide sufficient security to protect any U.S. Government-owned equipment, such as computers, fax machines, and copy machines, which may be loaned to them.

l) Teleworkers and non-teleworkers must be treated the same for purposes of periodic appraisals of job performance, training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, work requirements, removing employees, and other acts involving managerial discretion.

m) A supervisor may cancel or adjust the telework arrangement by providing written justification to the employee based on eligibility criteria listed in 3 FAM 2362.2 at any time with prior notification of at least 10 workdays. AFGE Local 1534 will be notified at the same time the bargaining unit employee is notified. Justifications for modifications or cancellation may be reviewed upon a change in the conditions that resulted in the original decision to cancel or modify if raised by the Employer, the employee or the Union on behalf of the employee.

n) An employee may cancel the telework agreement at any time with prior notification of at least 10 workdays. An employee may request an adjustment of their telework arrangement by providing a written justification to their supervisor for consideration.

o) A supervisor may require the presence of an employee in the office on a day normally scheduled for telework. Normally, an employee is notified of such a change in advance, but sometimes advance notice is not feasible. Teleworkers are subject to workplace requirements, e.g., random drug testing, and must report to the regular duty station when requested. As a general rule, transportation costs from the alternative work site to the official work site on a day usually scheduled for telework will not be reimbursed by the U.S. Government.

p) Care and judgment must be exercised with regard to records and information that are Sensitive But Unclassified (SBU) and/or subject to the Privacy Act. Offices allowing employees access to these records offsite must ensure that appropriate administrative, technical, and physical safeguards are maintained to protect the confidentiality and integrity of records (see 12 FAM 540.)

q) All work-related files, records, or papers produced while teleworking are the property of the U.S. Government and are subject to all applicable laws and regulations governing the use, maintenance, access, and destruction of such files, records, and papers.

Section 6. Eligibility

Domestic Telework eligibility is based upon, among other factors, the position that the employee encumbers, as well as the employees performance and conduct. If a position has been designated as telework eligible Management has the discretion to designate an employee as ineligible for telework or revoke or modify a telework arrangement based on the criteria listed in 3 FAM 2362.3 paragraph c.

Section 7. Criteria

1. Position: Positions are generally eligible for telework unless they:

(a) Require, on a daily basis (i.e., every work day), direct handling of classified national security information; or

(b) Require, on a daily basis (i.e., every work day), on site activity that cannot be handled remotely or at an alternative work site. A position that requires an employee to be on site may include, but is not limited to, face-to-face contact jobs, customer interface positions with the general public or positions that require the employee to have hands-on contact with machinery, equipment (i.e., special protective equipment), or vehicles to successfully fulfill the job/position requirements; and

2. Employee: Employees are generally eligible for telework unless:

(a) The employees most recent performance rating of record is below fully successful or the employee otherwise requires close supervision;

(b) The employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year;

(c) The employee is currently on leave restriction;

(d) The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties, or for misconduct related to the misuse of public office for private gain, misuse of nonpublic information, misuse of U.S. Government property, or misuse of official time; or

(e) The employees absence from the office has placed an undue burden on office operations.

3. Factors Precluding Approval of a Nonemergency Telework Arrangement:

Telework will be denied where an employee's official duties require on a daily basis (every work day) the direct handling of classified national security information determined to be inappropriate for telework by the Secretary; or on-site activity that cannot be handled remotely or at an alternate work site, except in emergency situations as determined by the Secretary. Under no circumstances does this provision excuse those designated as emergency employees from reporting to their work site on time unless otherwise directed.

4. Security: Employees are not permitted to telework with classified information at the telework site, and must comply with current standards for remote operations from private residences. Agency security policies do not change and are enforced at the same rigorous level when employees telework as when they are in the office. Employees who telework from home need to keep U.S. Government property and information safe, secure, and separated from their personal property and information (see 12 FAM 620 and 5 FAM 840).

5. Training: Employees eligible to telework must successfully complete the interactive telework training for employees before entering into a telework agreement. Managers who are supervising teleworkers must successfully complete the interactive telework training for managers. Employees with a telework arrangement in effect before the Telework Act was signed on December 9, 2010, are exempt from the training requirement.

Section 8. Responsibilities

- a) Employee: Before requesting to be considered for telework, employees must evaluate whether they are well-suited for telework, based on the factors set forth in 3 FAM 2362.2. Employees must maintain an acceptable level of performance and meet organizational requirements regarding communication and accessibility. Employees must remain flexible and responsive to the needs of the office.
- b) Supervisor: A supervisor must be committed to supporting the use of telework to the fullest extent practicable, consistent with the needs of the office. Supervisors must use the same metrics to evaluate the productivity of teleworkers as are used in evaluating a traditional office worker. Periodic status reports may be used within offices to assess work products and productivity.
- c) Bureau Telework Coordinator: The bureau telework coordinator is the subject-matter expert and the first point of contact for each bureau. The bureau telework coordinator provides guidance and answers questions regarding telework policy, the telework agreement process, and serves as a liaison between the employee, bureau, and the telework managing officer. Bureau telework coordinators maintain and access all telework agreements and bureau reports for their respective bureaus via eTelework.

- d) Telework Managing Officer: The telework managing officer (TMO) is devoted to policy development and implementation related to the Departments telework program. The TMO is an advisor to agency leadership, and a resource for bureau telework coordinators, managers, and employees. The TMO also serves as the primary agency point of contact for the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) on telework matters. The TMO is responsible for all reporting requirements of the telework program.

Section 9. Time and Attendance and Certification

- a. A supervisor approves the employee's scheduled hours of duty, and certifies the time and attendance of telework employees in the same manner as for non-telework employees.
- b. The General Accountability Office (GAO) requires agencies with employees working at alternate sites to provide reasonable assurance that the employees are working when scheduled. This can be done by determining the work output for the time reported and/or clocking in and out each day via telephone or e-mail.
- c. Telework employees remain subject to all applicable laws, regulations, policies, and procedures governing the provision of premium pay to include the existing rules on overtime under 5 U.S.C. 5542 and the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA).

Section 10. Salary and Benefits

A telework arrangement is not a basis for changing the employee's salary or benefits based on the Civil Service grade position. Telework arrangements may have the effect of changing an employee's official work site in accordance with the definitions set forth in 3 FAM 2361.4 and consistent with 5 CFR 531.605. Changes to an employee's official work site may, in turn, affect the employee's salary, benefits, travel entitlements, and standing in the event of a reduction-in-force (RIF).

Section 11. Leave

Annual and sick leave must be requested by an employee who teleworks in the same manner as for employees not engaged in telework activities.

Section 12. Alternate Work Schedules

Employees who telework, maintain hours of duty consistent with their bureau or post policies on flexible or alternate work schedules. Guidance on flexible and compressed work schedules is provided in Article 24 of this Agreement. The practice of telework and alternate work schedules are not necessarily mutually exclusive.

Section 13. Group Dismissal

- a. Any requirement that a teleworker continue to work if the agency closes to the public, grants liberal leave, or dismisses employees early on his or her telework day, should be included in the employee's formal telework agreement. If an employee is approved to telework when there is an unscheduled telework announcement that should also be included in the employee's formal telework agreement.
- b. When a localized emergency (e.g., fire, flood, etc.) specifically affects only the employee's official work site (when not the employee's telework site) and forces the official work site to close when the employee is scheduled to telework, the employee teleworking at the alternate work site will not be excused unless he or she cannot perform work without regular contact from the official work site and such regular contact is prevented by the localized emergency.
- c. When both the regular office and the alternative workplace are affected by a widespread emergency, (e.g. power failure), the Department will grant the telework employee excused absence identical to that given to employees at the official duty station or regular work site.
- d. When an emergency affects only the alternative work site for a major portion of the workday, the employee must consult with his or her supervisor to determine whether to report to the official duty station or request annual leave or leave without pay (LWOP).

Section 14. Emergency Response Telework - Continuity of Operations (COOP)

a. Telework is an important component to all agency emergency planning. It is the Departments policy to implement remote work arrangements as broadly as possible to take full advantage of the potential of telework for this purpose and to ensure that:

- (1) Equipment, technology, and technical support have been tested;

(2) Employees are comfortable with technology and communications methods; and

(3) Managers are comfortable managing a distributed work group.

b. Based on the nature of the emergency, supervisors and managers may leverage telework to carry out the essential functions of the Department. Supervisors and managers will ensure the designation is documented in the telework agreement.

c. Mission critical team (MCT) members should be equipped with FOBs (security hardware devices) to ensure they can function from any location equipped with INTERNET access.

d. During any period that an executive agency is operating under a continuity-of-operations plan, that plan will supersede any telework policy.

Section 15. Costs and Equipment

a) Telecenter as the Alternate Work Site: Costs associated with renting space, including equipment, utilities, etc., at a U.S.-based telecenter, will be borne by the agency or bureau, provided funds are available.

b) FOBs or Subsequent Generation Technology: FOBs (security hardware devices) are billed to a central account for core teleworkers, whereas bureaus are responsible for funding the FOBs of situational teleworkers.

c) Home as the Alternate Work Site: Management is not obligated to provide any electronic or communication equipment to the teleworker. However, the executive director of the bureau may loan available equipment (computer, software, or fax) within the bureau to employees for use at home.

1. The bureau may provide remote access to the Departments system via an FOB (security hardware device) or similar device. The employee must agree to protect and not misuse or abuse any U.S. Government-owned equipment and to use the equipment for official purposes. The bureau will install, service, and maintain any U.S. Government-owned equipment issued to an employee who teleworks.

Ownership and control of the equipment, including hardware, software, and data, remain with the U.S. Government. The U.S. Government will not be responsible for any other incidental costs (e.g., utilities) associated with the use of the employee's residence.

2. The employee is responsible for repair and maintenance of any personal equipment used. The bureau or post may agree to provide the employee with all necessary office supplies.

3. An employee should be easily accessible to his or her supervisor and should frequently check voice mail or e-mail while at the alternate work site.

4. Telephone Calls: Under 31 U.S.C. 1348, reimbursement of long-distance (domestic and international) telephone expenses are allowed if incurred as a result of official duties. Form SF-1164, Claim for Reimbursement for Expenditures on Official Business, should be completed and approved by the employee's supervisor with a copy of the telephone charges. To the extent possible, teleworkers should make official long-distance calls from the regular work site where less expensive rates apply. This practice will reduce additional costs associated with telework to the Department of State.

Section 16. Workers Compensation

a) U.S. Government employees suffering work-related injuries and/or damages at the alternative work site are covered as set forth in the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA) (workers' compensation) and the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act (PCA). In cases where FECA or the PCA are not applicable, U.S. Government employees may have a remedy under the Federal Tort Claims Act.

b) A telework agreement and safety checklist must be on file with the employees bureau.

(1) For the safety checklist, see 3 FAH-1 Exhibit H-2361.2(3), Form DS-1963, Home Safety Checklist for Teleworkers.

(2) For domestic telework employees, see 3 FAH-1 Exhibit H-2361.2(1), for the Washington, DC Metropolitan Area Telework Agreement.

(3) For domestic employees teleworking abroad, see 3 FAH-1 Exhibit H-2361.2(2), Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) Core Telework Agreement.

(4) An employee who teleworks is responsible for ensuring that his or her home complies with these health and safety requirements.

c. When injured while working at an alternate site an employee should follow the same procedures as adhered to in the traditional office setting when injured. The injured employee must notify his or her supervisor immediately and complete standard Department of Labor injury forms.

ARTICLE 33 TELEWORK

Section 1. Purpose

- a. Telework in the Federal Government started as a pilot program in 1990. The President's Council on Management Improvement (PCMI), in cooperation with the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) and the General Services Administration (GSA), established the Federal Flexible Workplace Pilot Project (Flexiplace).
- b. The nationwide program was established to improve the Federal Government's ability to recruit and retain capable employees by increasing their flexibility to balance work and family priorities, decrease commuting time, traffic congestion, and energy consumption. The telework movement is facilitated by innovations in human resources management, changes in the nature of work, advances in new technology, and requirements for contingency planning.

Section 2. Authority

Authorities include:

1. Presidential memoranda to agency heads on July 11, 1994, and June 21, 1996;
2. An Office of Personnel Management (OPM) memorandum to agency personnel directors on October 21, 1993;
3. The National Telecommuting Action Plan adopted by the President's Management Council on January 5, 1996;
4. Section 359 of Public Law 106-346, October 23, 2000;
5. Division B of Public Law 108-447, December 8, 2004;
6. The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 signed by the President on December 9, 2010;
7. 5 CFR 531.605; and
8. Information on telework law found on the shared OPM and General Services Web site. See the telework legislation listing.

Section 3. Definitions

- a. Alternate work site: A designated location, other than the official work site, where employees perform work assignments such as the employee's home or an official telework center.
- b. Core telework: The employee teleworks on a regularly scheduled basis, at least 1 day a week, but perhaps more frequently.
- c. FOB: A small security hardware device with built-in authentication or subsequent generation technology, that allows an employee secure access to the employees network shares and Open Net Everywhere (ONE).
- d. Global OpenNet (GO): The next generation OpenNet Everywhere (ONE) system that provides subscriber access to Department of State unclassified email, documents, and applications while away from the office or teleworking.

- e. Official work site: The official work site is the regular work site for the employees position of record provided the employee is scheduled to work at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis at the regular work site. For an employee whose work location varies on a recurring basis, the employee need not work at least twice each biweekly pay period at the regular official work site (where the employees work activities are based) as long as the employee is performing work regularly within the locality pay area for that work site. The official work site for an employee covered by a telework agreement who is not regularly scheduled to report at least twice each biweekly pay period to the official work site is the location of the telework site (e.g., the location of his or her home, telework center, or other alternate work site from which the employee works) except in temporary situations (e.g., extended official travel or recovery from an injury or medical condition).
- f. Situational telework: The employee teleworks on an irregular basis, generally recommended 1 day a month or the average of 12 days per year. Other situations may develop that makes it beneficial for the employee and supervisor to agree on a situational telework opportunity. This type of telework also is a component for continuity of operations (COOP).
- g. Telecenters: Alternative work sites in facilities to provide space for employees to work nearer to their home instead of at their traditional office. Renting telecenter space will be subject to availability of funds. Telecenters are equipped with printers, copiers, fax machines, telephones, video conferencing, and other office essentials. Telecenters also have technical support staff, if needed. For Washington, DC metropolitan area telecenters, see 3 FAH-1 Exhibit H-2361.1, Telecenters.
- h. Telework: The term telework or teleworking refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved work site other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work.
- i. Telework agreement: A mandatory document that outlines the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement, which are agreed upon between the supervisor and the employee.
- j. Unscheduled telework: Telework on an unscheduled basis in response to snow or other unexpected emergencies and in accordance with OPM notifications and guidance. Unscheduled telework may be performed when an unscheduled telework announcement is issued, irrespective of whether the employee was scheduled to telework.

Section 4. Department Policy

- a. The Department supports the broadest use of telework consistent with the needs of the Department by eligible agency employees to include supervisors, managers, and executive leadership. When properly implemented, telework benefits both the employee and the Department by increasing work/life effectiveness.

- b. Maintaining a viable telework-ready workforce requires practice and the regularly testing of equipment and procedures throughout the year to ensure that teleworkers will be effective and efficient while performing duties at an alternate work site when required.
- c. The Telework Program is managed by the Office of Employee Relations, Work Life Division, in the Bureau of Human Resources (HR/ER/WLD).
- d. Each bureau may develop a telework policy to address unique internal concerns and processes. The individual bureau policy must be no more restrictive than the overall Department policy and use the same terms and definitions.
- e. HR/PC will provide the Union with any Bureau telework policy upon request. HR/PC will provide the Union with any new Bureau telework policy within seven (7) days of receipt.

Section 5. General Provisions

- a. The programmatic requirements of the office must be a major factor in approving telework arrangements.
- b. Participation in the Telework Program is voluntary.
- c. Telework is not an entitlement, nor does it create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable by a party against management.
- d. Telework agreements outlining the specific work arrangement agreed to must be established between the employee and supervisor.
- e. The telework agreement should be revisited by the manager and teleworker, at a minimum on a yearly basis or if there is a material change in work circumstances (i.e., promotion, new supervisor) to ensure that it is meeting the business needs of the office.
- f. Telework arrangements may take many forms, such as one or more scheduled/recurring days of the week, a few times a month or on an irregular basis. Full-time telework can be arranged when appropriate.
- g. An employee's full-time or part-time work status does not impact telework eligibility.
- h. Methods must be in place to maintain open communication between co-workers and teleworkers.
- i. Telework arrangements must be based on the employee's work performance and position duties, not on other personal circumstances.
- j. Telework is not an alternative for child, elder, or dependent care. Employees must not use duty time for any purpose other than official duties and must make other arrangements for such care.
- k. The alternate work site must be a safe and adequate place to work. Teleworkers must provide sufficient security to protect any U.S. Government-owned equipment, such as computers, fax machines, and copy machines, which may be loaned to them.
- l. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers must be treated the same for purposes of periodic appraisals of job performance, training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, work requirements, removing employees, and other acts involving managerial discretion.

- m. A supervisor may cancel or adjust the telework arrangement by providing written justification to the employee based on eligibility criteria listed in 3 FAM 2362.2 at any time with prior notification of at least 10 workdays. AFGE Local 1534 will be notified at the same time the bargaining unit employee is notified. Justifications for modifications or cancellation may be reviewed upon a change in the conditions that resulted in the original decision to cancel or modify if raised by the Employer, the employee or the Union on behalf of the employee.
- n. An employee may cancel the telework agreement at any time with prior notification of at least 10 workdays. An employee may request an adjustment of their telework arrangement by providing a written justification to their supervisor for consideration.
- o. A supervisor may require the presence of an employee in the office on a day normally scheduled for telework. Normally, an employee is notified of such a change in advance, but sometimes advance notice is not feasible. Teleworkers are subject to workplace requirements, e.g., random drug testing, and must report to the regular duty station when requested. As a general rule, transportation costs from the alternative work site to the official work site on a day usually scheduled for telework will not be reimbursed by the U.S. Government.
- p. Care and judgment must be exercised with regard to records and information that are Sensitive But Unclassified (SBU) and/or subject to the Privacy Act. Offices allowing employees access to these records offsite must ensure that appropriate administrative, technical, and physical safeguards are maintained to protect the confidentiality and integrity of records (see 12 FAM 540.)
- q. All work-related files, records, or papers produced while teleworking are the property of the U.S. Government and are subject to all applicable laws and regulations governing the use, maintenance, access, and destruction of such files, records, and papers.

Section 6. Eligibility

Domestic Telework eligibility is based upon, among other factors, the position that the employee encumbers, as well as the employees performance and conduct. If a position has been designated as telework eligible Management has the discretion to designate an employee as ineligible for telework or revoke or modify a telework arrangement based on the criteria listed in 3 FAM 2362.3 paragraph c.

Section 7. Criteria

Position: Positions are generally eligible for telework unless they:

- a. Require, on a daily basis (i.e., every work day), direct handling of classified national security information; or
- b. Require, on a daily basis (i.e., every work day), on site activity that cannot be handled remotely or at an alternative work site. A position that requires an employee to be on site may include, but is not limited to, face-to-face contact jobs, customer interface positions with the general public or positions that require the employee to have hands-on contact with machinery, equipment (i.e., special protective equipment), or vehicles to successfully fulfill the job/position requirements; and

Employee: Employees are generally eligible for telework unless:

- a. The employee's most recent performance rating of record is below fully successful or the employee otherwise requires close supervision;
- b. The employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year;
- c. The employee is currently on leave restriction;
- d. The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties, or for misconduct related to the misuse of public office for private gain, misuse of nonpublic information, misuse of U.S. Government property, or misuse of official time; or
- e. The employee's absence from the office has placed an undue burden on office operations.

3. Factors Precluding Approval of a Nonemergency Telework Arrangement: Telework will be denied where an employee's official duties require on a daily basis (every work day) the direct handling of classified national security information determined to be inappropriate for telework by the Secretary; or on-site activity that cannot be handled remotely or at an alternate work site, except in emergency situations as determined by the Secretary. Under no circumstances does this provision excuse those designated as emergency employees from reporting to their work site on time unless otherwise directed.

4. Security: Employees are not permitted to telework with classified information at the telework site, and must comply with current standards for remote operations from private residences. Agency security policies do not change and are enforced at the same rigorous level when employees telework as when they are in the office. Employees who telework from home need to keep U.S. Government property and information safe, secure, and separated from their personal property and information (see 12 FAM 620 and 5 FAM 840).

5. Training: Employees eligible to telework must successfully complete the interactive telework training for employees before entering into a telework agreement. Managers who are supervising teleworkers must successfully complete the interactive telework training for managers. Employees with a telework arrangement in effect before the Telework Act was signed on December 9, 2010, are exempt from the training requirement.

Section 8. Responsibilities

- a. Employee: Before requesting to be considered for telework, employees must evaluate whether they are well-suited for telework, based on the factors set forth in 3 FAM 2362.2. Employees must maintain an acceptable level of performance and meet organizational requirements regarding communication and accessibility. Employees must remain flexible and responsive to the needs of the office.
- b. Supervisor: A supervisor must be committed to supporting the use of telework to the fullest extent practicable, consistent with the needs of the office. Supervisors must use the same metrics to evaluate the productivity of teleworkers as are used in evaluating a traditional office worker. Periodic status reports may be used within offices to assess work products and productivity.
- c. Bureau Telework Coordinator: The bureau telework coordinator is the subject-matter expert and the first point of contact for each bureau. The bureau telework coordinator provides guidance and answers questions regarding telework policy, the telework agreement process, and serves as a liaison between the employee, bureau, and the telework managing officer. Bureau telework coordinators maintain and access all telework agreements and bureau reports for their respective bureaus via eTelework.
- d. Telework Managing Officer: The telework managing officer (TMO) is devoted to policy development and implementation related to the Departments telework program. The TMO is an advisor to agency leadership, and a resource for bureau telework coordinators, managers, and employees. The TMO also serves as the primary agency point of contact for the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) on telework matters. The TMO is responsible for all reporting requirements of the telework program.

Section 9. Time and Attendance and Certification

- a. A supervisor approves the employee's scheduled hours of duty, and certifies the time and attendance of telework employees in the same manner as for non-telework employees.
- b. The General Accountability Office (GAO) requires agencies with employees working at alternate sites to provide reasonable assurance that the employees are working when scheduled. This can be done by determining the work output for the time reported and/or clocking in and out each day via telephone or e-mail.
- c. Telework employees remain subject to all applicable laws, regulations, policies, and procedures governing the provision of premium pay to include the existing rules on overtime under 5 U.S.C. 5542 and the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA).

Section 10. Salary and Benefits

A telework arrangement is not a basis for changing the employee's salary or benefits based on the Civil Service grade position. Telework arrangements may have the effect of changing an employee's official work site in accordance with the definitions set forth in 3 FAM 2361.4 and consistent with 5 CFR 531.605. Changes to an employee's official work site may, in turn, affect the employee's salary, benefits, travel entitlements, and standing in the event of a reduction-in-force (RIF).

Section 11. Leave

Annual and sick leave must be requested by an employee who teleworks in the same manner as for employees not engaged in telework activities.

Section 12. Alternate Work Schedules

Employees who telework, maintain hours of duty consistent with their bureau or post policies on flexible or alternate work schedules. Guidance on flexible and compressed work schedules is provided in Article 24 of this Agreement. The practice of telework and alternate work schedules are not necessarily mutually exclusive.

Section 13. Group Dismissal

- a. Any requirement that a teleworker continue to work if the agency closes to the public, grants liberal leave, or dismisses employees early on his or her telework day, should be included in the employee's formal telework agreement. If an employee is approved to telework when there is an unscheduled telework announcement that should also be included in the employee's formal telework agreement.
- b. When a localized emergency (e.g., fire, flood, etc.) specifically affects only the employee's official work site (when not the employee's telework site) and forces the official work site to close when the employee is scheduled to telework, the employee teleworking at the alternate work site will not be excused unless he or she cannot perform work without regular contact from the official work site and such regular contact is prevented by the localized emergency.
- c. When both the regular office and the alternative workplace are affected by a widespread emergency, (e.g. power failure), the Department will grant the telework employee excused absence identical to that given to employees at the official duty station or regular work site.
- d. When an emergency affects only the alternative work site for a major portion of the workday, the employee must consult with his or her supervisor to determine whether to report to the official duty station or request annual leave or leave without pay (LWOP).

Section 14. Emergency Response Telework -Continuity of Operations (COOP)

- a. Telework is an important component to all agency emergency planning. It is the Departments policy to implement remote work arrangements as broadly as possible to take full advantage of the potential of telework for this purpose and to ensure that:
 1. Equipment, technology, and technical support have been tested;
 2. Employees are comfortable with technology and communications methods; and
 3. Managers are comfortable managing a distributed work group.
- b. Based on the nature of the emergency, supervisors and managers may leverage telework to carry out the essential functions of the Department. Supervisors and managers will ensure the designation is documented in the telework agreement.
- c. Mission critical team (MCT) members should be equipped with FOBs (security hardware devices) to ensure they can function from any location equipped with INTERNET access.
- d. During any period that an executive agency is operating under a continuity-of-operations plan, that plan will supersede any telework policy.

Section 15. Costs and Equipment

- a. Telecenter as the Alternate Work Site: Costs associated with renting space, including equipment, utilities, etc., at a U.S.-based telecenter, will be borne by the agency or bureau, provided funds are available.
- b. FOBs or Subsequent Generation Technology: FOBs (security hardware devices) are billed to a central account for core teleworkers, whereas bureaus are responsible for funding the FOBs of situational teleworkers.
- c. Home as the Alternate Work Site: Management is not obligated to provide any electronic or communication equipment to the teleworker. However, the executive director of the bureau may loan available equipment (computer, software, or fax) within the bureau to employees for use at home.
 1. The bureau may provide remote access to the Departments system via an FOB (security hardware device) or similar device. The employee must agree to protect and not misuse or abuse any U.S. Government-owned equipment and to use the equipment for official purposes. The bureau will install, service, and maintain any U.S. Government-owned equipment issued to an employee who teleworks. Ownership and control of the equipment, including hardware, software, and data, remain with the U.S. Government. The U.S. Government will not be responsible for any other incidental costs (e.g., utilities) associated with the use of the employee's residence.
 2. The employee is responsible for repair and maintenance of any personal equipment used. The bureau or post may agree to provide the employee with all necessary office supplies.
 3. An employee should be easily accessible to his or her supervisor and should frequently check voice mail or e-mail while at the alternate work site.

4. Telephone Calls: Under 31 U.S.C. 1348, reimbursement of long-distance (domestic and international) telephone expenses are allowed if incurred as a result of official duties. Form SF-1164, Claim for Reimbursement for Expenditures on Official Business, should be completed and approved by the employee's supervisor with a copy of the telephone charges. To the extent possible, teleworkers should make official long-distance calls from the regular work site where less expensive rates apply. This practice will reduce additional costs associated with telework to the Department of State.

Section 16. Workers Compensation

- a. U.S. Government employees suffering work-related injuries and/or damages at the alternative work site are covered as set forth in the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA) (workers' compensation) and the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act (PCA). In cases where FECA or the PCA are not applicable, U.S. Government employees may have a remedy under the Federal Tort Claims Act.
- b. A telework agreement and safety checklist must be on file with the employees bureau.
 1. For the safety checklist, see 3 FAH-1 Exhibit H-2361.2(3), Form DS-1963, Home Safety Checklist for Teleworkers.
 2. For domestic telework employees, see 3 FAH-1 Exhibit H-2361.2(1), for the Washington, DC Metropolitan Area Telework Agreement.
 3. For domestic employees teleworking abroad, see 3 FAH-1 Exhibit H-2361.2(2), Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) Core Telework Agreement.
 4. An employee who teleworks is responsible for ensuring that his or her home complies with these health and safety requirements.
- c. When injured while working at an alternate site an employee should follow the same procedures as adhered to in the traditional office setting when injured. The injured employee must notify his or her supervisor immediately and complete standard Department of Labor injury forms.

WORK ENVIRONMENT IMPLEMENTATION DATA CALL

Department of the Interior

January 26, 2024

OMB issued its Organizational Health and Performance Memorandum (M-23-15) last spring as guidance for agencies as they reevaluate their work environment posture to increase in-person presence while optimizing organizational health and performance. As the White House Chief of Staff and OMB have continued to emphasize in the Cabinet, PMC, and other forums, it is essential for agency leaders to be paying close attention to implementation progress and ensuring that updated Work Environment policies are having the intended impact.

In line with M-23-15, OMB requests that agencies that are still implementing in-person presence goals respond to this implementation data call outlining all remaining steps that the agency will take to reach intended work environment postures.

Agencies should provide:

- (1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

Consistent with OMB M-23-15, Measuring, Monitoring, and Improving Organizational Health and Organizational Performance in the Context of Evolving Agency Work Environments, DOI's Work Environment Plan, and other applicable guidance and our Work Environment plan, the Department of the Interior (Department or DOI) is squarely focused on ensuring that the Department and its components are able to most effectively achieve their missions while strengthening for the future, including ensuring that all services continue to meet and exceed customer expectations and needs.

The Department has steadily made progress toward reaching its in-person presence objectives, which we define as employees reporting in-person for at least 50 percent of their regularly scheduled tours of duty during each a pay period. Most recently, the Department announced on December 18, 2023 that, effective the pay period beginning February 11, 2024, all non-bargaining unit teleworkers in the National Capital Region (NCR) must report to DOI offices, DOI field sites, or other Government facilities at least 50 percent of their regularly scheduled tours of duty per pay period. The Department is actively seeking to apply this change to all bargaining unit teleworkers in the NCR, subject to applicable labor-management obligations.

We anticipate that the next step to advance the Department's in-person objectives will be announced by March 1, 2024, and will reflect a change in policy to require all non-bargaining unit teleworkers in Regional or State offices (i.e., remaining headquarters-equivalent offices) to report to DOI offices, DOI field sites, or other Government facilities at least 50 percent of their regularly scheduled tours of duty per pay period. Consistent with this policy posture, the Department will seek to apply this change to bargaining unit teleworkers in the Regional and State offices in accordance with the requirements of the Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute, 5 U.S.C. Chapter 71, and Executive Order No. 14003. Throughout, Departmental leadership has continued to emphasize the importance of meaningful in-person engagement facilitated by core in-office days as key measures that allow the Department to best support the agency's statutory missions and improve organizational health and organizational performance.

- (2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

The Department currently seeks to engage with labor representatives to reach the same terms of telework for bargaining unit employees as non-bargaining unit employees, in accordance with the requirements of the Federal Service Labor-Management Relations Statute, 5 U.S.C. Chapter 71, and Executive Order No. 14003. All DOI return to work policies will be implemented in accordance with Federal anti-discrimination laws.

The Department will utilize targeted pulse surveys as well as continued monitoring of retention data to assess execution and progress of its organizational health and performance objectives and priorities.

- (3) Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

As noted, the Department will continue to undertake targeted pulse surveys of impacted personnel to understand reactions, concerns, and suggestions as implementation proceeds to our in-person objectives. We are also mindful of the recent FEVS survey data which indicates DOI employees are increasingly engaged, reporting increased satisfaction and progress in meeting our diversity, equity and inclusion goals, and our commitment to not just hold steady but improve these numbers. We are working directly with Departmental leaders to assess and resolve any remaining issues of office space for in-person work both in the NCR and in the Department's regional and state core locations.

The Department continues to collect data on telework use as part of its payroll systems. As part of this implementation effort, Bureau leaders and senior managers are tasked with instituting appropriate protocols to ensure regular reviews of the time and attendance data to confirm compliance with the requirement that teleworking employees report to DOI offices, DOI field sites, and in Government facilities for at least 50 percent of their regularly scheduled duty time per pay period. Additionally, all managers will continue to prioritize meaningful in-person engagement, including maintaining core in-office days for teams to collaborate in person in both NCR and Regional / State offices. The Office of the Deputy Secretary meets at least bi-monthly with the Assistant Secretary for Policy Management and Budget and the Chief Human Capital Officer to review in-person data and troubleshoot arising issues.

We believe that managing implementation in this manner keeps the Department in the strongest possible position to recruit and retain talent, to maintain a positive and inclusive work environment for all employees, and to continue to deliver excellent results for our stakeholders, partners, and the American people.

Request. Please send a written update that answers these questions. Agencies may provide additional detail or narrative on top of these answers. Responses are due via email to futureofwork@omb.eop.gov no later than January 26, 2024.

Department of the Interior
Telework Policy(s)

United States Department of the Interior

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY
Washington, DC 20240

PERSONNEL BULLETIN NO: 21-07

SUBJECT: Telework Program

1. Purpose. This Personnel Bulletin (PB) establishes the policy, assigns responsibilities, and prescribes procedural requirements for the Department of the Interior's (DOI or Department) Telework Program. Consistent with the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, this PB establishes the Departmental policy under which eligible employees may be authorized to telework to the extent that the arrangement does not diminish employee or organizational performance. This PB replaces PB 19-02, Telework Program, dated June 14, 2019, and supersedes the existing policy in Departmental Manual (DM) Chapter 370 DM 226, Telework Program, until corresponding changes in the DM are made.

2. Effective Date. This PB is effective on August 23, 2021.

3. Authorities.

- A. Title 5 of the United States Code (U.S.C.), Chapter 63
- B. Title 5 of the U.S.C., Chapter 65
- C. Title 5 of the U.S.C., Chapter 81
- D. Title 40 of the U.S.C., Chapter 5, Section 587
- E. Part 531 of Title 5 Code of Federal Regulations (CFR)
- F. Part 550 of Title 5 CFR
- G. Part 630 of Title 5 CFR
- H. Part 2635 of Title 5 CFR
- I. Part 1630 of Title 29 CFR
- J. PB 18-04, Weather and Safety Leave, dated May 10, 2018
- K. PB 14-01, Reasonable Accommodation for Individuals with Disabilities, dated February 20, 2014
- L. 370 DM 771, Administrative Grievance Procedures
- M. Office of Management and Budget Memorandum M-21-25, Integrating Planning for A Safe Increased Return of Federal Employees and Contractors to Physical Workplaces with Post-Reentry Personnel Policies and Work Environment, dated June 10, 2021

4. Coverage. This policy applies to all DOI employees (including supervisors) and supersedes any other Departmental or Bureau/Office policies or procedures that conflict with this policy. Bureaus/Offices may issue supplemental implementing procedures at their discretion. The Bureau/Office supplemental procedures must be forwarded to the Director of the Department's Office of Human Capital for concurrence prior to implementation.

5. Definitions.

A. Alternative Worksite. A location, other than the employee's official worksite, that has been approved for the performance of assigned official duties as designated on the telework agreement. It may be an employee's home, a telework center, or other approved worksite that is conducive to performing the official duties.

B. Core Telework. A telework arrangement in which eligible employees telework from an approved alternative worksite on a recurring, scheduled basis—i.e., fixed day(s) per week or pay period.

C. Dependent Care. The support and nurturing of persons who cannot meet their own needs such as children, elders, or other dependent adults.

D. Hoteling. An arrangement in which employees are not assigned permanent, dedicated office space at a DOI location, but rather are provided office space by reservation, on an as-needed basis. Also referred to as "shared workstations."

E. Mobile Work. Work that is characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in customer or other worksites as opposed to a single authorized alternative worksite. Examples of mobile work include site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management, and work performed while commuting, traveling between worksites, or on Temporary Duty (TDY). This category of work is not considered telework and is not covered by this policy.

F. Official Duty Station. The official location of an employee's position of record as determined under 5 CFR §531.605. The official duty station is often referred as the "official worksite."

G. Official Disciplinary Action. Any disciplinary action that results in the placement of a document in an employee's electronic Official Personnel Folder (e.g., written reprimand, suspension, removal, reduction in grade/pay).

H. Remote Work. An arrangement under which an employee is scheduled to perform work within or outside the local commuting area of an agency worksite and is not expected to report to an agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis. For a remote worker, the approved remote worksite is the employee's official duty station for pay purposes, even if that location is their home. This category of work is not considered telework and is not covered by this policy.

I. Situational Telework. A telework arrangement in which eligible employees telework without a set schedule (e.g., telework as a result of inclement weather, personal appointment, special work assignment). An employee with an approved situational telework arrangement must obtain advance approval from their supervisor in order to telework on a particular day(s).

J. Telework. A work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work.

K. Telework Agreement (Form DI-3457). A written agreement that outlines the terms and conditions for an employee authorized to telework, as approved by the appropriate management official. Telework agreements are mandatory for an employee's participation in the telework program. Bureaus/Offices may not alter, supplement or modify the Form DI-3457.

L. Teleworker. An eligible employee who has completed the required telework training, has an approved telework agreement in place, and has the required work necessities (e.g., equipment, materials) to effectively perform their duties at an approved alternative worksite. Also referred to as a "telework-ready" employee.

6. Responsibilities. As noted in Section 4, Bureaus/Offices may issue implementing procedures to add additional responsibilities to each of the below roles and/or identify additional roles within their organizational structures in order to implement this policy.

A. Deputy Assistant Secretary for Human Capital and Diversity. The Deputy Assistant Secretary for Human Capital and Diversity, as the Department's Telework Managing Officer, is responsible for:

(1) Overseeing policy development and implementation related to the Department's Telework Program and submission of required reports to the U.S. Office of Personnel Management (OPM) or other government organizations as may be required.

(2) Advising Departmental leadership on the administration of the DOI Telework Program and serving as the Department's primary liaison with OPM on telework matters.

B. Office of the Chief Information Officer is responsible for:

(1) Developing strategies and providing guidance for enterprise information technology capabilities and data security required to support telework.

(2) Overseeing the evaluation of new and emerging technologies that facilitate telework and approving them for Department-wide use, as appropriate.

(3) Establishing criteria and guidelines for using and protecting Government furnished equipment (GFE) and non-GFE, including personally owned equipment to access DOI information systems and networks to perform telework.

C. Departmental Telework Coordinator. Appointed by the Telework Managing Officer, the Departmental Telework Coordinator is responsible for:

(1) Administering the DOI Telework Program in accordance with governing law and Departmental policies.

(2) Serving as a resource for Bureau/Office telework coordinators on telework matters and advising on strategies to overcome barriers to implementing telework within the Bureaus/Offices.

(3) Developing DOI Telework policy and coordinating policy and procedure changes with the Bureau/Office telework coordinators.

(4) Assessing the Department's Telework Program.

(5) Preparing reports on employee telework participation rates and other related metrics, and providing information regarding employee telework agreements as required by OPM, other Federal agencies, Departmental leadership, and the Office of the Solicitor.

(6) In consultation with the Telework Managing Officer, establishing agency telework participation goals.

D. Bureau Directors and Equivalent Office Heads are responsible for:

(1) Ensuring that their organizations are in full compliance with the requirements of this policy.

(2) Establishing implementing procedures, as needed, to maximize appropriate use of telework as a work flexibility arrangement, to include integrating telework into continuity of operations (COOP) plans.

(3) Holding subordinate supervisors and managers accountable for implementing telework in accordance with this policy and applicable Bureau/Office implementing procedures.

(4) Holding subordinate supervisors and managers accountable for evaluating teleworkers and non-teleworkers under the same performance management system and ensuring that teleworkers are afforded the same professional opportunities, assignments, and treatment as non-teleworkers with regard to duties assigned, periodic appraisal of employee performance, awards, training and developmental opportunities, promotions, and retention incentives.

E. Bureau/Office Telework Coordinators. Each Bureau and equivalent Office will designate a Telework Coordinator to serve as the Bureau/Office contact for telework policy and program questions. This individual should be of sufficient position and grade as to allow them access to senior Bureau/Office officials and to speak with authority regarding telework. The Bureau/Office Telework Coordinators are responsible for:

(1) Providing assistance and guidance to Bureau/Office employees and managers regarding telework.

(2) Preparing and submitting periodic reports to the Department's Office of Human Capital on the Bureau/Office telework eligibility and participation rates.

(3) Preparing and submitting reports to Bureau/Office leadership (e.g., Regional Directors or equivalent positions) on telework participation rates and providing information regarding employee telework agreements.

(4) Maintaining Bureau/Office employee telework agreement records.

F. Servicing Human Resources Offices (SHRO) are responsible for:

- (1) Ensuring vacancy announcements and position descriptions contain accurate information regarding the suitability of a position for telework.
- (2) Ensuring that all position and employee telework eligibility codes are correctly reflected in the Federal Personnel and Payroll System.
- (3) Providing assistance and guidance to Bureau/Office managers on managing and supervising teleworkers.

G. Supervisors are responsible for:

- (1) In consultation with the servicing SHRO, determining an employee's eligibility for telework and notifying the employee, as appropriate. Generally, employees must be notified of their telework eligibility within 60 days of starting a new job.
- (2) In consultation with the servicing SHRO, determining whether the duties of a position are suitable for telework. After an initial determination, this determination will be made each time the position description is modified.
- (3) Executing telework agreements with employees who request to and are permitted to telework; ensuring that required telework training is completed prior to allowing the employee to telework; and terminating telework agreements when employees are no longer eligible to telework or the teleworking arrangement fails to meet organizational needs.
- (4) Upon approval of a telework agreement, establishing and communicating clear expectations with employees regarding methods of communication (e.g., customer service, time frames for returning phone calls, email communication), meeting attendance, duty hours, the accurate coding of telework for time and attendance purposes, requesting leave while teleworking, and notification procedures for requesting situational and unscheduled telework.
- (5) Establishing clearly defined performance standards and using existing quality and quantity standards to evaluate work performance of a teleworker. Managing the teleworker remains the same as for employees in the official worksite in that performance is measured by results.
- (6) Treating teleworkers the same as non-teleworking employees concerning performance appraisals, work assignments and requirements, awards and recognition, training and developmental opportunities, promotions, retention, and other employment matters involving management discretion; and treating employees equitably when implementing telework in their organization.

(7) Actively supporting telework and working through minor problems or obstacles that may occur.

(8) Being cognizant of opportunities to achieve savings by monitoring and coordinating teleworker schedules to share office space. Supervisors will be proactive in pairing employees in the same location with opposite schedules (one employee present when another is not) to optimize the use of reduced office space.

(9) Ensuring employees protect and secure agency records and sensitive information consistent with established DOI policies.

(10) Reviewing and recertifying telework agreements annually to validate whether the arrangement is still effective and in the best interest of the agency.

(11) Executing a new telework agreement when an employee is assigned to a new position, a new supervisor, or to effect a permanent change to a telework arrangement (e.g., new alternative worksite, new core telework day).

(12) Ensuring adequate worksite office coverage during business hours so that mission operations continue to be carried out efficiently and effectively.

(13) Maintaining records of direct reports' current telework agreements.

H. Teleworkers are responsible for:

(1) Securing approval of their telework agreement and completing required telework training prior to teleworking.

(2) Providing the same level of support, availability, accessibility to customers, coworkers, and supervisor as if working at the official worksite. This includes, but is not limited to, meeting organizational and individual work requirements, participating in staff meetings, participating in video conferencing, working assigned duty hours, and responding to phone calls, email, instant messaging chats, and voicemail in a timely manner.

(3) Ensuring there is no diminishment of individual performance or agency requirements and that they have sufficient work assignments conducive to telework.

(4) Complying with their approved telework agreement and adhering to Departmental policies while working at the alternative worksite. These policies include but are not limited to: Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch and other applicable ethics laws and regulations; Acceptable Use of the Internet; Conduct and Discipline; Time and Attendance; and Records Management.

(5) Obtaining advance approval from their supervisor for each instance of telework when teleworking under a situational agreement.

(6) Accurately coding their timesheet to reflect the hours teleworked.

(7) Conforming to office requirements for shared space at the employee's official duty location.

(8) Teleworking, if they have a telework agreement in place and are required to do so by the supervisor, when the employee is subject to an investigation or other administrative action that requires the employee to be taken out of the workplace.

(9) Teleworking when prevented from safely traveling to or performing work at their official worksite due to inclement weather or other emergency condition (e.g. building fire at the official worksite, pandemic) that prevents an employee or group of employees from safely traveling to or safely performing work at an approved location if the telework site is not also impacted. This includes preparing and planning ahead, including taking necessary work equipment (e.g., laptop) to the alternative worksite, when severe weather or other emergency situations can be anticipated.

(10) Properly protecting and securing GFE and sensitive information in compliance with Departmental guidance.

(11) Ensuring the alternative worksite is safe, free from hazards, and provides an adequate work environment with regard to connectivity and technology. Employees are expected to provide internet service and other general utility costs at their own expense.

(12) Ensuring appropriate arrangements for the care of dependents while teleworking.

7. Policy. Telework is an effective strategy for mission accomplishment, ensuring COOP in a crisis, and recruiting and retaining valued talent. It is the policy of the DOI to promote telework that does not diminish employee performance or agency operations, or adversely affect the ability of the Department to achieve its mission. Employees do not have a presumptive right to telework. An employee's participation in the telework program is voluntary and must only be approved when it is deemed to be in the best interest of the agency.

There are two types of telework arrangements available at the Department:

- Core Telework
- Situational Telework

Employees, regardless of their telework arrangement, must have an approved telework agreement in place in order to participate in telework. Once the telework agreement is finalized, employees will be considered telework-ready.

An employee approved to telework must physically report to their official duty station at least two full workdays per bi-weekly pay period, except for rare circumstances or as a reasonable accommodation.

A. Telework Eligibility. To the extent that mission requirements are not jeopardized, management officials may permit eligible employees who exhibit suitable work performance and conduct, occupy positions suitable for telework, and have access to an appropriate alternative worksite to telework to the extent feasible. Telework eligibility criteria must be applied impartially and consistently and be based on appropriate business and organizational needs. While telework is a workplace flexibility, it is not an employee entitlement and not all employees are eligible to telework.

The following factors must be evaluated when determining telework eligibility:

(1) Position Suitability. In determining position suitability, supervisors should consider what duties and functions an employee performs, and not simply the occupation, pay plan, series, or grade level of the position. Positions suitable for telework must have:

- Quantifiable, project-oriented, or other portable job tasks that can be performed at the approved alternative worksite (e.g., reading reports, analyzing documents and studies, preparing written documents).
- Limited need for access to classified information.
- Off-site access to needed technology.

While many positions may be suitable for telework, there are certain positions that are not conducive to telework. Positions are not suitable for telework that require on a daily basis (every workday):

(a) Direct handling of classified or other secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by management.

(b) On-site activity that cannot be handled remotely or at an alternative worksite (e.g., face-to-face personal contacts; intake or distribution of mail; hands-on contact with machinery, equipment, or vehicles; law enforcement).

When an employee's position is determined not normally suitable for telework, there may be circumstances or portions of the employee's work (e.g., reading and analyzing documents and preparing reports or other types of correspondence, non-classified assignments) that may be considered for telework on a situational basis if the supervisor deems it to be in the best interest of the agency.

(2) Employee Eligibility. After ensuring that the position is suitable for telework, the supervisor must determine the employee's eligibility to telework. To be considered eligible for telework, an employee must demonstrate characteristics indicating their ability to effectively work away from the official worksite. Employees eligible for telework must display dependability, responsibility, and conscientiousness; the ability to work independently and without close supervision; self-motivation and self-discipline; and the ability to prioritize work and manage time wisely.

(3) Employee Ineligibility. Employees are ineligible to telework if:

(a) Their conduct has resulted in an official disciplinary action taken against them (e.g., written reprimand, suspension, removal, reduction in grade/pay) for any type of misconduct. Disciplined employees may remain ineligible to telework for a maximum of two years from the effective date of the official disciplinary action. When disciplined employees become eligible for telework, supervisors, after consultation with the servicing SHRO, may allow disciplined employees to telework or may continue periods of telework ineligibility until a future date;

(b) Consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 6502(a)(2), they have been officially disciplined for:

- being absent without permission for more than five days in any calendar year; or
- violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading or exchanging pornography, including child pornography on a Federal computer or while performing Federal Government duties

The period of ineligibility for employees who have been officially disciplined for misconduct indicated in Section 7.A.(3)(b) depends on the type of action and whether a non-permanent or permanent record of the discipline is filed in the employee's electronic official personnel folder (eOPF). For non-permanent records (e.g., reprimand), the prohibition from telework exists until the document is removed. For permanent records (e.g., personnel actions documenting suspensions), the prohibition would be permanent; or

(c) They have received less than a Fully Successful performance rating at any time during the rating period or been notified in writing of less than Fully Successful performance (e.g., by receipt of a Notice of Opportunity to Demonstrate Acceptable performance). On a case-by-case basis, employees who are formally notified during the performance year that their performance has improved to the Fully Successful level may resume teleworking, if the supervisor deems telework to be in the best interest of the agency.

Although the above criteria establish when an employee is eligible to participate in telework, eligibility does not equate to an entitlement to telework. The determination regarding the suitability of a position, eligibility of an employee to telework, or approval of an employee's participation in telework resides with management and will be based on the duties of the employee's position, business needs, and/or the employee's ability to fulfill their responsibilities as outlined in Section 6.H. Bureaus/Offices may not supplement these eligibility criteria in their implementing procedures.

B. Establishing a Telework Arrangement. If it is determined that telework is a viable option and in the best interest of the agency, the supervisor and the employee must complete the required training and execute a telework agreement before initiating a telework arrangement.

(1) Complete Telework Training.

(a) Prior to initiating a telework arrangement, employees and their supervisors must complete telework training. The required training courses for supervisors and employees are available via the Department's electronic learning management system. Employees must complete the course titled "Telework Fundamentals – Employee Training," and supervisors must complete the course titled, "Telework Fundamentals – Manager Training." This is a one-time requirement. Once completed, employees and supervisors do not need to repeat the training for the purposes of telework. If employees or supervisors have documentation demonstrating they completed previous training titled "Telework 101 for Employees," or "Telework 101 for Supervisors," or equivalent training, they do not need to complete these courses.

(b) Bureaus/Offices may establish organization-specific telework training to fulfill this requirement.

(2) Complete Telework Agreement.

(a) An approved telework agreement (Form DI-3457) must be in place before an employee is permitted to telework. The telework agreement documents the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement, including the type of telework arrangement approved and the particular days for which the employee is approved to telework, if applicable, and includes a safety checklist for the employee to use in assessing the overall safety of the alternative worksite. The final decision regarding the type of telework arrangement and days an employee is scheduled to telework rests with management. The telework agreement must be completed by the employee and the supervisor. Supervisors should strive to complete the telework agreement form within ten (10) business days of receipt from employee.

(b) A new telework agreement form must be initiated when the employee is assigned a new supervisor or new position. A new telework agreement form must also be initiated to document approved changes to the employee's telework arrangement (e.g., change in approved core telework days, change in type of telework arrangement).

(c) Telework agreements must be reviewed by the supervisor and teleworker on an annual basis to be revalidated, revised, or terminated as appropriate. During this annual review and recertification, the supervisor must verify that the employee is still eligible to participate in telework (e.g., review employee's most recent performance rating to ensure that it is at least Fully Successful). The annual review and recertification should occur on or before the one-year anniversary date that the telework agreement was originally approved. Failure to complete the annual recertification requirement may result in the termination of the telework agreement.

(3) Telework Denial and Termination. Management may deny or terminate a telework agreement at any time. In addition, an employee may voluntarily terminate a telework agreement with proper notice to their supervisor.

(a) Denial or Termination of Telework Arrangement by Management. When an employee's request to telework is denied or an agreement is terminated by management, the reasons for denial or termination will be documented in writing on the Telework Agreement Form (Form DI-3457) and given to the employee. Denial or termination decisions must be based on mission-related reasons and what is in the best interest of the agency (e.g., telework arrangement fails to meet the organization's needs; employee's performance or conduct does not comply with the terms of the telework agreement; employee or their position no longer meets the eligibility criteria; staffing issues lead to inadequate office coverage). For terminations of current agreements, management will strive to give the employee advance notice of at least one business day before effecting the termination, when practicable.

(b) Termination of Telework Arrangement by Employee. Employees may voluntarily terminate their participation in a telework arrangement. Such requests must be submitted in writing to the employee's supervisor. Employees will normally provide at least two (2) weeks' notice so that arrangements can be made to accommodate their return to work at the official worksite, if necessary.

(c) Employee Grievance of Telework Denial or Termination. Employees may grieve the denial of telework or the termination of an existing telework agreement. Bargaining unit employees may file a grievance through negotiated grievance procedures, if provided for in their applicable collective bargaining agreement. If there is no collective bargaining agreement and/or negotiated grievance procedures in place, bargaining unit employees may be permitted to file in accordance with the Department's Administrative Grievance Procedures where the use of these procedures has been agreed to via a written agreement between the appropriate management and union representatives. Non-bargaining unit employees may file a grievance in accordance with the Department's Administrative Grievance Procedures.

C. Equipping for Telework. To the extent permitted by Bureau/Office policies and procedures, Bureaus/Offices will provide the equipment and supplies the supervisor determines necessary for the employee to telework from the approved alternative worksite. The equipment and supplies should be deemed necessary for the performance of the employee's assigned duties, reasonably available, cost effective, and subject to availability of funding. The Bureau/Office agrees to service and maintain any GFE issued to the teleworker.

D. Teleworking from the Approved Alternative Worksite.

(1) Designated Workspace. Teleworkers must have a designated workspace that is safe and conducive for the performance of their duties at the approved alternative worksite. At a minimum, an employee must be able to send, receive and respond to electronic mail and communicate via telephone. The employee's communications from the alternative location should be seamless (e.g., customers should not experience an interruption in service delivery from an employee who is teleworking). Management maintains the right to make on-site inspections of the employee's telework site. Such inspections will be by appointment during the teleworker's normal tour of duty and with advance notice of at least 24 hours.

(2) Dependent Care. Employees cannot personally care for a dependent while teleworking and are responsible for securing appropriate arrangements for any dependents who are unable to care for themselves independently. This does not preclude a teleworker from having a caregiver in the home who provides care to the dependent(s) while the employee teleworks, provided the arrangement does not disrupt the employee's ability to telework effectively. Also, an employee may have a dependent present in the home, provided they do not require constant supervision or care (e.g., older child or adolescent) and their presence does not disrupt the employee's ability to telework effectively.

(3) Costs Associated with Telework at Home. Work-at-home telework may increase certain costs to the employee. The Department assumes no responsibility for any costs associated with the employee's home residence, including home maintenance, insurance, utilities, internet access, and telecommunication costs.

(4) Work-Related Injuries or Illnesses. Teleworkers may be covered by the Federal Employees' Compensation Act for an on-the-job injury or occupational illness sustained while conducting official Government business at the approved alternative worksite. Employees must inform their immediate supervisor of any on-the-job injury or occupational illness sustained at the approved alternative worksite at the earliest time possible. Accidents and on-the-job injuries must be reported using the Safety Management Information System to enable Bureau/Office Safety Managers to track and report incidents. Teleworkers must also visit the Department of Labor's Employees' Compensation Operations & Management Portal to file a workers' compensation claim with the Office of Workers' Compensation Programs.

E. Tour of Duty While Teleworking. Employees who telework must perform official duties at their alternative worksite during their approved, scheduled tour of duty. Work schedules and hours of duty may be changed with the supervisor's approval and in accordance with established Bureau/Office procedures. Telework is compatible with standard and alternative work schedules (e.g., flexible and compressed work schedules). Bureaus/Offices may not establish implementing procedures that prohibit a teleworker from having an alternative work schedule.

F. Telework Schedule Modification. Supervisors may require teleworkers to report to the employee's official worksite on scheduled telework days to accommodate workload demands or for other operational requirements (e.g., to attend mandatory staff event). When possible, the employee will be provided advance notice in writing of any change to their scheduled telework. Requests by the employee to change their scheduled telework day in a particular week or biweekly pay period must be submitted in advance and approved by the supervisor. A permanent change in the telework arrangement requires a new telework agreement to be executed.

G. Telework During Emergency or Closure Situations. In the event the official worksite is closed due to an inclement weather event or other emergency condition (e.g., building fire, pandemic), telework-ready employees must telework each regularly scheduled workday during the emergency situation. As such, telework-ready employees must prepare to telework when a weather or emergency event is forecasted or anticipated (e.g., a major snowstorm is predicted) by bringing home any necessary equipment (e.g., laptop computer) and work files. To the extent that an employee is unable to telework because they failed to make necessary preparations for reasonably anticipated conditions, the employee must use appropriate paid leave, paid time off, or leave without pay. In the event the employee is prevented from safely teleworking from the approved alternative worksite due to conditions related to the emergency (e.g., weather-related damage that makes occupying the employee's home telework site unsafe, loss of electrical power or internet service, evacuation by local authorities), the supervisor may, at their discretion, grant weather and safety leave consistent with Departmental policy.

(1) Unscheduled Telework Operating Status Announcements. When OPM, a local Federal Executive Board, or DOI local operating unit head announces that employees have the option for unscheduled telework or unscheduled leave, telework-ready employees may telework from their approved alternative worksite. When the option is announced, an employee must notify their supervisor of the intent to use unscheduled telework. Employees who are approved to perform unscheduled telework must have the necessary equipment and have a sufficient amount of work to complete in order to telework from the approved alternative worksite. If the employee does not have enough work, they must report to the official worksite or request appropriate unscheduled leave to account for hours not worked.

(2) Dependent Care Arrangements During Weather or Emergency Events. As provided for in Section 7.D(2), employees cannot personally care for a dependent while teleworking and are responsible for securing appropriate arrangements for any dependents who are unable to care for themselves. If a teleworker cannot arrange for appropriate dependent care because of the weather or emergency event affecting the official worksite, any time spent providing personal care to dependents cannot be considered hours of work. The employee is expected to accurately account for work and non-work hours during their tour of duty and to take the appropriate leave (paid or unpaid) to account for any time spent away from normal work-related duties during their scheduled tour of duty. Weather and safety leave may not be granted for this purpose.

H. COOP Planning. Telework can play a vital role for the Department's COOP plan by preserving essential functions and providing an option for designated employees to continue working when a COOP plan has been activated. Bureaus/Offices may designate employees who are critical to operations and should inform employees of their COOP designation well in advance in anticipation of possible emergency events. Consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 6504(d), during any period that the Department is operating under a COOP plan, that plan will supersede the Departmental telework policy.

I. Hoteling. Employees who have core telework agreements for five or more days per bi-weekly pay period may be expected to use hoteling when they report to the official worksite. If there is a business reason for providing a dedicated workspace, such as privacy needs of the position, the supervisor should document the reasons for the decision and maintain that documentation. Hoteling workspaces should be properly equipped and supplied to ensure employees can accomplish work assignments.

J. Reasonable Accommodation. Consistent with applicable law and Departmental policy, employees may request telework as a reasonable accommodation, and the Department must process such requests in accordance with applicable law and Departmental policy.

8. Labor-Management Obligations. Bureaus/Offices are reminded to fulfill their labor-management obligations, as appropriate, in implementing the requirements set forth in this PB.

9. Inquiries. Any Department employee or employee representative seeking further information concerning this policy may contact their Bureau/Office Telework Coordinator and/or servicing SHRO. Bureau/Office Telework Coordinators and servicing SHRO's may contact the Department's Office of Human Capital concerning questions related to this policy.

As you know, in a memorandum dated July 27, 2023, the Department of the Interior welcomed teleworking managers and supervisors in the National Capital Region (NCR) back to government office worksites for at least 50 percent of their regularly scheduled tours of duty per pay period in support of the Office of Management and Budget’s (OMB) Memorandum M-23-15, Measuring, Monitoring, and Improving Organizational Health and Organizational Performance in the Context of Evolving Agency Work Environments.

In a December 2023 memorandum, non-bargaining unit teleworkers in the NCR joined the next phase of changes to expand the requirement to work in government office worksites for at least 50 percent of regularly scheduled tours of duty per pay period.

We appreciate the progress that has been made across the Department, as well as the examples you are setting by increasing in-person meetings and engagement. Today, Acting Deputy Secretary Laura Daniel-Davis announced the next phase in this effort, which includes better performing our mission and service to the American people by increasing meaningful in-person work at: (1) offices that oversee or perform significant support for nationwide Department operations, including nationwide Bureau or Office operations (“National Offices”); and (2) offices that oversee Regional or State operations (“Bureau Regional/State Offices”).

Accordingly, this updated telework policy will become effective the pay period beginning April 21, 2024, and will apply to all non-bargaining unit teleworkers who perform duties for, and report to official duty stations established and approved by, (1) all National Offices and (2) all Bureau Regional/State Offices, listed in Attachment 1. Teleworking employees affected by this updated policy will be required to report to their official duty stations (as defined under Section 5(F) of PB 21-07 to include offices, field sites, or other government facilities) for at least 50 percent of their regularly scheduled tours of duty per pay period.

With limited exceptions listed in Attachment 1 (such as all component and subcomponent offices within the Office of the Secretary), this updated policy will not apply to employees who perform duties for, and report to official duty stations established and approved by, subcomponent offices (such as District Offices, Field Offices, or Area Offices). This updated policy also will not apply to employees who have approved remote work agreements.

No later than March 21, 2024, managers and supervisors will provide affected non-bargaining unit teleworkers with advanced written notice of this updated policy, which the Department will also seek to apply to bargaining unit teleworkers, consistent with applicable labor-management obligations. Managers and supervisors are encouraged to use Attachment 2 (30-Day Notification Template for Teleworkers) to provide the required advanced written notice. In addition to Attachment 2, the Department will provide answers to frequently asked questions as soon as possible.

In order to comply with this policy memorandum, managers and supervisors should, if necessary, revise or terminate non-compliant telework agreements, in writing, on the Telework Agreement Form (Form DI-3457) and provide written termination decisions to impacted employees in accordance with the Department's policy at Section 7(B)(3)(a) of Personnel Bulletin No. 21-07. Managers and supervisors may not terminate telework arrangements that are implemented pursuant to reasonable accommodations, judicial orders, or settlement agreements. Employees who wish to establish new telework agreements consistent with the requirement to report to DOI official duty stations for at least 50 percent of their regularly scheduled tours of duty per pay period may execute new telework agreements with their supervisors, in accordance with the requirements of Personnel Bulletin No. 21-07. Consistent with Section 7 of Personnel Bulletin No. 21-07, employees must have an approved telework agreement in place in order to participate in telework.

An attachment to the July 27, 2023, memorandum instructed all NCR Bureaus and Offices to establish two onsite core days per pay period for SES, SL, ST employees, and managers and supervisors and at minimum one onsite core day per pay period for all other teleworkers to work together in person. Effective April 21, 2024, these instructions apply to all offices listed in Attachment 1.

As explained in the referenced memorandum dated July 27, 2023, the Department adjusted core hours in the NCR to 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m., so that teleworking employees coming into their official duty stations would have flexibility to meet caregiving responsibilities and to avoid peak traffic/commuting times. Effective April 21, 2024, these adjustments to core hours (local time) apply to all National Offices and all Bureau Regional/State Offices listed in Attachment 1.

Nothing in this policy memorandum should be interpreted to apply to, or otherwise affect, employee telework arrangements implemented: (1) to provide a reasonable accommodation; (2) in accordance with a judicial order; or (3) pursuant to a settlement agreement. Managers and supervisors must continue to adhere to obligations imposed by law, including obligations relevant to providing reasonable accommodations. Managers and supervisors who receive requests for reasonable accommodations, or become aware that employees may need reasonable accommodations, regardless of whether employees request accommodations, should contact their servicing human resources office for assistance to appropriately resolve requests for reasonable accommodations consistent with Personnel Bulletin No. 21-03.

As managing change may be stressful for the Department's employees, we ask you to remind employees of the services offered through the Department's Employee Assistance Program, which provides free and confidential counseling and consultation services to help employees resolve life challenges.

Colleagues,

It's been three weeks since the return of the majority of the workforce in the National Capital Region (NCR) to government office worksites for at least 50 percent of their regularly scheduled tours of duty per pay period, in support of the Office of Management and Budget's (OMB) Memorandum M-23-15, Measuring, Monitoring, and Improving Organizational Health and Organizational Performance in the Context of Evolving Agency Work Environments. I know this transition has been a process for all of us, and I appreciate all of the effort that Bureau and Office teams have done to implement a smooth transition.

I have to be honest: it's really nice to see so many of you in person. Yes, the parking lots are filling up earlier, and the elevators are fuller, but I so appreciate the chance to engage with more of our dedicated workforce. It is undeniable that in-person engagement has led to more meaningful interactions across the NCR.

Based on valuable insight gained from implementation of the NCR policies, today the Department is announcing the next phase in this effort, which includes increasing meaningful in-person work at: 1) offices that oversee or perform significant support for nationwide Department operations, including Bureau or Office operations ("National Offices"); and 2) offices that oversee Bureau Regional or State operations ("Bureau Regional/State Offices").

This updated telework policy will become effective the pay period beginning April 21, 2024, and will apply to all non-bargaining unit teleworkers who perform duties for, and report to official duty stations established and approved by, (1) all National Offices and (2) all Bureau Regional/State Offices, listed in Attachment 1.

Teleworking employees affected by this updated policy will report to their official duty stations (offices, field sites or other government facilities) for at least 50 percent of their regularly scheduled tours of duty per pay period.

With limited exceptions listed in Attachment 1 (such as all component and subcomponent offices within the Office of the Secretary), this updated policy will not apply to employees who perform duties for, and report to official duty stations established and approved by, subcomponent offices (such as District Offices, Field Offices, or Area Offices). This updated policy will not apply to employees who have approved remote work agreements.

No later than March 21, 2024, managers and supervisors will provide written information to teleworking employees affected by this updated policy, which the Department will also seek to apply to bargaining unit teleworkers, consistent with applicable labor-management obligations. The National Offices and Bureau Regional/State Offices will continue to offer alternative work schedules and will maintain or provide additional flexibilities, such as adjusted core hours of 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. local time, for affected teleworking employees who report to their official duty stations in accordance with this updated policy.

Part of the benefit of our nation effectively handling the COVID-19 pandemic means that we have the opportunity to return to the type of engagement we enjoyed pre-pandemic. That said, I also understand that workplace changes may create stress on you and your family. As an employee, you have access to, and can make use of, the Employee Assistance Program for free and confidential counseling and consultation.

Secretary Haaland and I deeply appreciate everyone's patience as we work to implement the direction provided to all government agencies. It is our goal for each of you to see meaningful change as you return to increased in-person interactions as we work every day in service to the American people.

Sincerely,

Laura Daniel-Davis (she/her)
Acting Deputy Secretary of the Interior

Department of the Interior
Collective Bargaining Agreement(s) –
Telework Provisions

Article 14

Telework

Section 1. Purpose

- A. Management and the Union jointly recognize the mutual benefits of a flexible workplace program to the Department and its employees. Balancing work and family responsibilities, assistance to the elderly or disabled employees, and meeting environmental, financial, and commuting concerns are among its advantages. In recognizing this benefit, both parties also acknowledge the needs of the Department to accomplish its mission.
- B. Any telework/telecommute program established under this Article will be a voluntary program which permits employees to work at home or at other approved sites away from the office for all or part of the workweek.

Section 2. Telework Agreement

Before beginning work at an alternative worksite, the employee and immediate supervisor must sign a telework agreement. It is the supervisor's responsibility to adequately document the telework arrangement in advance to explain/define the employee's duty status, credit hours, overtime, leave, alternative work schedules, etc. The agreement should specify the terms and conditions of program participation, the performance expectations, and the work schedule information for the individual employee. The telework agreement documents a commitment by the employee and the supervisor to abide by the applicable guidelines and program policies and must be in place before the employee begins working at an alternative worksite. Telework agreement can be found at www.doi.gov.

Section 3 – Participation Criteria for the Telework Program

- A. Consistent with the parties' goals of fostering a family-friendly workplace, all employees may participate in the telework program if the following criteria are met:
 - (1) Whether a sufficient amount of the employee's work, in fact, can be performed at an alternate worksite. It is understood that the accomplishment of the Agency's mission is paramount. While supervisors and managers are encouraged to be progressive in regard to reengineering or restructuring how their offices operate or the manner in which they assign work, there is no contractual obligation or requirement on management to do so to accommodate an employee's request to participate in telework/telecommute.
 - (2) The employee will be available and accessible to supervisors, co-workers, and customers at all times while performing work at an alternate worksite.
 - (3) The employee's most recent performance evaluation is at least Fully Successful and the employee has demonstrated an ability to work alone and without face-to-face supervision.

- (4) There are not conduct problems that would cause management to be concerned about the employee's trustworthiness or dependability.
- (5) Costs of such an arrangement: The parties recognize that costs or cost savings in technology, equipment, and telecommunications are considerations in decisions regarding participation in telework/telecommute arrangements. While it is expected that telework/telecommute will require some costs, the costs involved may be too much to finance an employee on telework/telecommute.
- (6) Technology/equipment needs: The parties recognize that existing and evolving technology(ies) may allow or prevent an employee from participating in the telework/telecommute program. The employee may need access to specific equipment and/or will use the telephone extensively on telework/telecommute days. Such technology/equipment may include:
 - a. Long distance telephone usage
 - b. Telephone usage (other than long distance)
 - c. Computer/Laptop assigned to the employee's home
 - d. Computer software
 - e. Modem
 - f. Equipment maintenance and repair
 - g. Remote technical assistance
 - h. Replacement of damaged or lost equipment
 - i. Fax capability
 - j. Internet service provider

Section 4. Coverage of Office Functions

- A. Management will continue to have responsibility for seeing that the mission of the Department is carried out. Each office will determine adequate coverage during official hours for the purpose of assuring that the functions of the office are fulfilled. Some examples of the principal forms of coverage are:
- (1) Having phones answered;
 - (2) Providing clerical, technical, and professional support;
 - (3) Providing office representation at essential meetings;
 - (4) Handling inquiries from the public; and
 - (5) Providing program needs based on business necessity.
- B. When coverage requirements are established, all employees are obliged to meet coverage requirements. The determination of who will work which particular hours to ensure such coverage is within the authority of the supervisor. Determining office coverage involves both the office work site and the telework/telecommute site. Where practicable, personal preference will be honored in scheduling coverage. Where personal preference conflicts with the equitable sharing of the burden of coverage, personal preference shall give way. The opportunity of each employee to maximize his/her telework/telecommute participation shall be consistent with the coverage of legitimate work unit functions as determined by the supervisor.

Section 5. Time Frames

- A. Upon receipt of a request for telework/telecommute, the supervisor and the employee will meet to discuss and review the request. The supervisor's decision is to be provided to the employee within ten (10) work days of the request. The time frame may be extended by mutual agreement of the employee and supervisor.
- B. If disapproved, the employee will be advised in writing with the reason(s). If the disapproval subsequently becomes the subject of arbitration, the parties will clarify all the issues in accordance with this Master Agreement.
- C. If approved, the specifications of the arrangement will be worked out, reduced to writing, and signed by both the supervisor and the employee. The employee will begin working at the alternate work site within twenty-one (21) work days after completion of the individual telework/telecommute agreement unless circumstances dictate otherwise.

Section 6 . Operating Principles

- A. For employees who are approved to telework/telecommute, the employee will have the option to work the designated telework/telecommute plan/schedule of his/her organization or to opt out of Alternative Work Schedule.
- B. The governing rules, regulations, and policies concerning time and attendance, overtime, and leave are unchanged by participation in telework/telecommute. Employees will not perform overtime or night work without express approval in advance.
- C. Injuries that arise in the performance of duty at the alternate worksite are subject to the Federal Employees' Compensation Act.
- D. The government is not responsible for operating costs, home maintenance, or any other incidental costs to the employee (e.g., utilities). Employees on telework/telecommute are entitled to reimbursement for authorized expenses while conducting government business.
- E. For employees who are approved to telework/telecommute, the following applies with respect to equipment:
 - (1) If the employee uses government equipment, the employee will use and protect the equipment.
 - (2) Government-owned equipment will be serviced and maintained by the Government. This equipment will be required to be brought/returned to the duty station to have any maintenance performed.
 - (3) The employee must comply with Department security and information technology policies and procedures. They must ensure the adequate measures are in place to protect the equipment from being damaged, stolen, or accessed by unauthorized individuals.
 - (4) If the employee uses his/her own equipment, the employee is responsible for its service and maintenance.
 - (5) Employees will ordinarily be given a minimum of 24 hours advance notice regarding management service or maintenance of government-owned property. Such service or maintenance will occur during the employee's normal work hours unless circumstances dictate otherwise.
- F. Employees on telework/telecommute are obligated to ensure a safe and healthy work environment and to apply necessary safeguards to protect government records from damage or unauthorized disclosure.

Section 7. Recall

Employees participating in telework/telecommute programs must be accessible and available for recall to their regular offices for work needs that cannot be performed at the alternate worksite. Examples are training, special meetings, new work requirements, and emergencies. These examples are for illustrative purposes and are not meant to be all-encompassing. Management will take full advantage of existing technology (teleconference, fax, etc.) where possible in order to minimize recall. Management will provide reasonable advance notice of all recalls if possible. Where practicable, not less than 24 hours advance notice will be given but there may be times when advance notice cannot be given.

Section 8. Travel

- A. Travel provisions that apply to employees working at a traditional worksite also apply to employees who telework. A teleworker who is directed to travel to another worksite (including the traditional worksite) during his or her regularly scheduled basic tour of duty would have the travel hours credited as hours of work. If the employee is directed to report to the official duty station, the travel will be at no cost to the Government.

- B. Where an employee teleworks full-time from a location outside of the local commuting area of the traditional worksite, and his or her alternative worksite has been determined as his or her official duty station, the employee's organization would be responsible for all work-related travel outside the employee's normal commuting area, including travel to the traditional worksite.

Section 9. Termination

- A. Supervisors may terminate an agreement whenever:
 - (1) There is a change in work requirements or the arrangement no longer supports the mission.
 - (2) An employee's performance is less than Fully Successful at the progress review or at the end of the annual appraisal period, or if, within at least sixty (60) work days, the employee has demonstrated an inability to work alone and without face-to-face supervision.
 - (3) The employee has demonstrated conduct problems regarding trustworthiness or dependability to the extent that he/she should be removed from the program.
 - (4) Costs of the agreement are no longer affordable.
 - (5) Technology changes require return to the regular office.
 - (6) Employees do not conform with the terms of their agreement.

- B. When terminating a telework/telecommute arrangement, the following must occur:

(1) Management will attempt to provide appropriate advance notice of the termination of any agreement to the extent practicable. If possible, the notice will be at least five (5) work days in advance.

(2) The Notice of Termination must be in writing and indicate the reason(s) for termination.

Section 10 . Grievability

Management's decisions on participation, recall, or termination of formal telework/telecommute arrangements are grievable. Decisions on informal telework/telecommute arrangements are not grievable. However, if the employee alleges that a decision on informal telework/telecommute arrangements is a prohibited personnel practice, such a matter is grievable.

Section 11. Issue Resolution

Agency managers and union officials are encouraged to establish creative approaches to provide information and resolve problems regarding telework/telecommute. Where there are disputes over participation, recall or termination of a formal telework/telecommute arrangement, agency and union officials agree to use alternate dispute resolution methods to resolve such issues.

ARTICLE 7: TELEWORK

SECTION 07.01 GENERAL

- A. The Parties recognize that establishing Telework agreements can be beneficial to the organization and the Employee. The objective of a Telework Agreement is to allow Employees to work at alternative worksites on a regularly scheduled basis when it is to the benefit of the Agency and Employee.
- B. Telework will be in accordance with DOI's Telework Handbook 370 DM 226) and BLM-CA Telework SOP 1400-1.2 (July 2014).
- C. Employees may request to participate in telework. However, telework is not an Employee entitlement, and participation in telework shall be approved by the Employee's Supervisor.
- D. Management may propose telework for Employees, however, participation in the telework program is entirely voluntary and Employees will not be coerced to participate. However, once an Employee starts participating in the telework program and has an approved telework agreement, whether regularly or situational, s/he may be required to telework on days when the Employee's duty stations is closed due to inclement weather or other emergency reasons.
- E. Being eligible for telework does not mean the Supervisor will automatically approve participation in telework.
- F. Since telework is a voluntary arrangement, when entering into a telework agreement, both Management and the teleworking Employee will mutually agree to the telework location.
- G. Unscheduled or occasional performance of work by Employees from an alternative work site does not constitute Telework but may be arranged between the Employee and Supervisor to accommodate short term needs. Telework is a work arrangement in which an Employee regularly performs officially assigned duties at home or at other work sites geographically convenient to the residence of the Employee.
- H. Agency polices that govern the federal workplace apply equally to telework locations; for example, records management, privacy, and security polices apply to government records no matter where they are located.
- I. Hoteling And Shared Offices Definitions:
 - 1. "Hoteling" refers to workstations shared between two or more Employees, which consist of a work surface, computer, and telephone, that are used on an irregular basis by Employees who are not assigned a permanent workstation. Hotel spaces shall be properly equipped and supplied to ensure Employees can accomplish work assignments. Management will have a reservation system in place in order to reserve Hoteling spaces on an efficient and orderly basis. It is management's responsibility to work out any scheduling conflicts which may arise from this type of space arrangement.

2. "Shared Office" refers to workstations in which two Employees that telework (or work part time), reporting to the office on different days, which may be assigned to the Employees as a shared office. A shared office is the same as a typical Permanent Full Time (PFT) office, except that the two Employees assigned will utilize the space on different days. It is management's responsibility to work out any scheduling conflicts which may arise from this arrangement.
 3. In order to reduce unnecessary disruptions to orderly operations, Management will ensure each teleworking Employee is assigned a stable and consistent hoteling or a shared office location at their duty station. The hoteling and shared office locations will have a standard means to access the BLM intranet and network.
 4. A hoteling or shared office Employee will be provided with a permanent business phone number from which calls may be received and messages may be retrieved.
 5. Each teleworking Employee who uses hoteling or a shared office will be provided with reasonable lockable storage/filing space within the office area.
 6. Employees who have telework agreements for core telework for five or more days per pay period, are expected to use hoteling when in the government office, unless item 7 below applies. Employees who core telework three or more days per pay-period should not be assigned a private (single person) workspace.
 7. If the office has surplus or vacant offices or space, teleworking Employees may be assigned an individual (PFT) office space.
- J. If call forwarding from the office is not possible, Teleworking Employees may be assigned cell phones. Teleworking Employees will not be required to provide their personal phone numbers to external parties. Teleworkers may also be given phone cards for the purposes of making long distance calls in support of work assignments. See 07.06 (E) for more information.
- K. When available teleworking Employees maybe provided a laptop computer to use at their teleworking location and at the permanent duty station.

SECTION 07.02 ELIGIBILITY

- A. Employees who are not eligible for Telework are:
1. Employees who have been absent without leave (AWOL) for more than five (5) workdays in a calendar year;
 2. Employees who have been officially disciplined for violations of Subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for reviewing, downloading or exchanging pornography, on a federal computer or while performing Federal Government duties.

3. Employees who have less than a "fully successful" performance rating at any time during the rating period and have been formally notified.
 4. Employees with conduct issues under 370 DM 752 (5 CFR 752); providing documentation exists demonstrating the Employee's conduct issue.
- B. The period of ineligibility depends on the type of discipline taken against the Employee. The periods are:
1. Non-Permanent disciplinary documentation - Employee is ineligible until document is removed from file according to Article 33 in this Agreement.
 2. Permanent disciplinary documentation (Suspension of any length to removal) - Employee is ineligible for a period of two (2) years from the date of the event that was the basis for discipline. At the end of that two-year period, the supervisor, after consultation with the servicing Human Resource Office, may allow the Employee to telework or continue the prohibition until a future date.

SECTION 07.03 APPROVAL AND PARTICIPATION

- A. To initiate a request for Telework, an Employee must submit a Telework Agreement form (DI-3457) to their immediate Supervisor.
- B. Participation and approval for telework will be based on but not limited to:
 1. Duties of the position;
 2. The need to access/use classified information;
 3. Performance maintained at a least "fully" successful; and
 4. Employee demonstrates acceptable work habits, conduct and adherence to Agency polices;
- C. Telework may be canceled when, but not limited to:
 1. Customer service is adversely affected;
 2. The Employee is placed on leave restrictions;
 3. Documented conduct issues arise;
 4. The requirements of the Telework Agreement are not being fulfilled: or
 5. The teleworking Employee requests cancellation.
- D. Within 14 days of receiving a written teleworking request, upon request a signed and dated paper copy of the entire telework agreement (including all applicable terms, restrictions and arrangements) will be given to the Employee at the time of approval or denial. If telework is denied the supervisor must state in detail the reason(s) and justification(s) for the denial in writing and supply this along with the Employee's copy of the signed and dated telework request. Teleworking may not be denied because the supervisor lacks the appropriate teleworking training for supervisors.

- E. Employees are encouraged to read all documentation, be familiar with its contents and seek guidance from their supervisor when they have any questions or concerns.
- F. If a portion of an Employee's assigned duties would limit participation in the Telework but other assigned duties would not limit participation, Supervisors should consider allowing participation on some days of the pay period to allow the non-limiting duties to be performed from a telework location.
- G. Participation in the telework program may be suspended or terminated for certain circumstances, see Section 07.02(A) Eligibility above. When terminating telework, specific reasons and documentation will be provided to the Employee along with at least 48 hours advanced notice.

SECTION 07.04 SCHEDULES AND TIME AND ATTENDANCE

- A. Participation in Telework does not preclude an Employee from requesting the use of any approved Alternative Work Schedule (AWS)
- B. A supervisor may develop accountability methods to ensure that s/he is able to verify an Employee's time and attendance in accordance with the CFR, such as requiring the Employee to keep a daily log of his/her start and end time, or email, or call the supervisor at the start and end of the shift. Supervisors will be consistent when employing time keeping methods/verification among teleworking Employees.
- C. For hours of duties and schedules, see Article 6.

SECTION 07.05 CHANGES TO TELEWORK AGREEMENTS

- A. If it becomes necessary to change the terms of a Telework agreement, a new agreement must be drawn up and signed by the Employee and supervisor. Upon request, a signed and dated paper copy of the agreement detailing all conditions and terms of approval will be provided to the Employee.
- B. If an Employee changes supervisors, the Telework agreement will be reviewed and revised if necessary. A signed and dated paper copy of the agreement detailing all conditions and terms of approval will be provided to the Employee.
- C. When management requires the physical presence of an Employee at the official duty station on an Employee's regularly scheduled Telework day, the Employee will ordinarily be given at least 48 hours advance notice to make any necessary arrangements.

SECTION 07.06 EQUIPMENT AND SUPPLIES

- A. Employees approved for Telework will be given the appropriate equipment necessary to perform the job duties assigned while on telework. The supervisor/manager accepts any additional costs associated with providing equipment, i.e. a laptop PC to an individual rather than a desktop PC.

- B. Employees must possess an acceptable form of wide band access (Digital subscriber line, cable modem, etc.) and are responsible for the full cost. A dial-up connection is inadequate for telework.
- C. Working from home requires the Employee to understand that:
 - 1. He/she shall ensure dependent care requirements are addressed so arrangements are in place and do not impede the Employee's ability to work (Telework is not a substitute for dependent care).
 - 2. Work-at-home telework may increase the Employee's home utility costs. The Department assumes no responsibility for any operational costs associated with the Employee's home residence, including home maintenance, insurance, or utilities.
 - 3. He/she may incur additional expenses that may not be reimbursed such as internet provider and telecommunication costs.
- D. When an Employee requires general office supplies such as, paper, printer ink, binders, page dividers, organizers, the Employee will request authorization to remove these items from the government building to their telework site. Government provided equipment may not be used for personal use, other than that provided for by rule, law, or regulation. Employees may not use their government issued credit cards to purchase office supplies. Supervisors may require Employees to maintain a log of the government provided items.
- E. As determined by Management, Employees will be properly reimbursed for business-related long distance phone calls or will be given a government calling card or government cell phone for such use.

SECTION 07.07 TELEWORKPLACE INSPECTION

Employees will be given at least 48 hours' notice prior to any workplace inspection. Upon request of the Employee to have a Union representative present, the Union will be notified and will be given an opportunity to be present at the inspection. The responsibility to notify and coordinate with the Union is the Employees. A request for Union representation will not delay the inspection.

SECTION 07.08 POSITION DESCRIPTIONS FOR TELEWORKERS

Participation in a Telework program will very seldom require any change in an Employee's Position Description (PD) or performance standards (EPAP). For changes and modifications to an Employee's EPAP, see Article 14. For changes and modifications to an Employee's PD, see Article 13.

Changes in a tour of duty will be made in accordance with applicable Department and Bureau-wide policies and regulations. The Employer will provide a 72-hour notice of a change, if possible.

Section 5. Overtime

A. Except for emergencies, overtime will be offered to qualified employees on a voluntary basis. However, if the number of qualified volunteers is fewer than the number of workers needed and immediately available, overtime will be assigned in accordance with the rotation system.

B. Once volunteers are no longer available or when there are more volunteers than needed for the overtime, management will make every reasonable effort to distribute overtime on a fair and equitable basis among qualified employees and will not use it as reward or punishment. The Employer will schedule overtime based on an equitable rotation system among employees qualified to perform the work. Employees who fall below the established productivity standard for satisfactory performance for (30) thirty days or more will not be eligible for overtime. An employee will be restored to the rotation system after he/she satisfactorily meets productivity standards for a (30) thirty-day period.

C. A record of overtime performed by bargaining unit positions will be maintained by the Employer on a current basis for the preceding twelve (12) months and shall record all overtime assignments on an hourly basis. Unit employees or the Union may review this record of overtime. Each opportunity to work overtime will be noted in the record.

D. Bargaining unit employees may “swap” an overtime assignments with another willing and qualified employee provided it has been approved and cleared through their supervisor.

E. Bargaining unit employees will be compensated for overtime work in accordance with controlling regulations and/or laws. Overtime must be officially ordered and approved by the supervisor prior to being performed by the employee.

F. Bargaining unit employees called back to work on a work or non-work day will be compensated for a minimum of 2 hours of work time which (when it has been worked over and above the required hours) will be considered overtime work.

G. Bargaining unit employees shall be authorized to work overtime in 15-minute increments. Overtime computation will be rounded off to the next higher increment of 15-minutes.

Section 6. Compensatory Time:

A. Non-exempt bargaining unit employees (if requested in writing by the employee) may receive compensatory time earned in lieu of overtime pay for periods that have been approved for overtime pay.

B. Non-exempt employees who have not used compensatory time earned within a six-month period will be paid for the unused amount.

C. Exempt bargaining unit employees (if requested by the employee and approved by the supervisor) under overtime regulations may receive compensatory time earned in lieu of overtime pay.

D. Compensatory time for exempt employees not used within six-months of being earned will be forfeited, unless the failure was due to exigency of the service beyond the employee’s control.

E. Compensatory time must be requested by the employee and approved by the supervisor in advance of the time it is used.

Section 7. Telecommuting

A. Telecommuting, also referred to as Flexible Workplace and Telework, allows employees to work away from the principal office (e.g., home). It is designed to benefit the employee and the organization by meeting employee needs as well as management's organizational and operational requirements. The Bureau will consider the use of Telecommuting for bargaining unit employees; however it is not an employee entitlement.

B. Three types (the names of which may be subject to change) of telecommuting are available for BLM employees:

1. Short Duration – This type of program is designed to help employees to complete assignments such as special projects.
2. Efficiencies and Economies – This type of program is designed for employees who can demonstrate that the productivity will be improved or enhanced by telecommuting.
3. Special Circumstances – There may be “special circumstances” where an employee requests that s/he be allowed to work at home for longer periods. This program may also be used to accommodate employees who are recovering from illness or injury.

ARTICLE 25 – LEAVE

Section 1. General

The employer affirms that it is in the interest of efficient operations to be able to plan ahead to accommodate the leave request of employees consistent with the needs of the Employer. Employees may charge their leave in increments of 15 minutes

Section 2. Annual Leave

- A. It is agreed that the employees are entitled to use their accrued annual leave; however federal employees are not privileged to take it without supervisory approval.
- B. Except in emergencies, an employee must obtain prior approval from the immediate supervisor (or designee) before using annual leave as far in advance of its proposed start as practical. A supervisor may require the use of a Standard Form (SF)-71.
- C. A supervisor may require employees under his/her direction to indicate annually or at other useful intervals, such as semi-annually or quarterly, their plans or tentative plans for vacation or other annual leave use of one week or more.
- D. Conflicts between annual leave requests for bargaining unit employee vacations which are submitted in accordance with paragraph C of this section or at that are received by the supervisor at the same time, will be resolved in favor of the requester with the most seniority by Service Computation Date (SCD) if not resolved informally. If both persons have the same SCD, then the one with the most accrued leave will get the requested leave.
- E. Consistent with the needs of the employee and the Employer, Management will give favorable consideration to requests for annual leave on the day preceding and following a holiday (e.g., Thanksgiving).

Section 3. Administrative Absences

- A. When the appropriate authority has determined that there is a need for early dismissal of non-essential Federal employees, employees in a duty status will be given administrative absence based on the language of the order. This includes bargaining unit employees who are telecommuting, who are at the duty site, or who are scheduled to work at the duty site but have not arrived for duty by the time the dismissal is implemented.
- B. If the dismissal is based on an Executive Order that declares a regular work day as a formal holiday, all employees (including those who are on annual or sick leave) will be considered dismissed for the holiday without charge to leave.
- C. During hazardous weather conditions when there is no closure or when there are major disruptions in public transportation which prevents the unit employee from reporting to work

- E. Bargaining unit employees will be compensated for overtime work in accordance with controlling regulations and/or laws. Overtime must be officially ordered and approved by the supervisor prior to being performed by the employee.
- F. Bargaining unit employees called back to work on a work or non-work day will be compensated for a minimum of 2 hours of work time which (when it has been worked over and above the required hours) will be considered overtime work.
- G. Bargaining unit employees shall be authorized to work overtime in 15-minute increments. Overtime computation will be rounded off to the next higher increment of 15-minutes.

Section 6. Compensatory Time:

- A. Bargaining unit employees (if requested by the employee and approved by the supervisor) under overtime regulations may receive compensatory time earned in lieu of overtime pay.
- B. Compensatory time for exempt employees not used within six-months of being earned will be forfeited, unless the failure was due to exigency of the service beyond the employee's control.
- C. Compensatory time must be requested by the employee and approved by the supervisor in advance of the time it is used.

Section 7. Telecommuting

- A. Telecommuting, also referred to as Flexible Workplace and Telework, allows employees to work away from the principal office (e.g., home). It is designed to benefit the employee and the organization by meeting employee needs as well as management's organizational and operational requirements. The Bureau will consider the use of Telecommuting for bargaining unit employees; however it is not an employee entitlement.
- B. There are situations in which the program may be appropriate. Such situations include where it is necessary to help employee complete special projects, where employees can demonstrate improved or enhanced productivity, situations where employees are allowed to work at home for longer periods to accommodate recovery from illness or injury or, for the purpose of reasonable accommodation.
- C. The employer agrees to allow, upon request, employees to participate in the flexible workplace and telework program to the maximum extent possible, subject to DOI policy, Personnel Bulletin Number 05-02, Telework Policy, dated 2/18/2005, and in instances where there is no adverse impact to the agency.

ARTICLE 19

FLEXIBLE WORKPLACE

Section 1. General: Both the CBDO and the Local agree that under certain conditions the flexible workplace concept can be advantageous to both the Federal Government and Employees of the CBDO. Working at home or other alternative work sites must be in accordance with OPM and other General Accounting Office requirements.

Section 2. Criteria: Proposals submitted by the employee for consideration must demonstrate that the following criteria are met:

a. The performance of the work at home or other alternate workplace must be advantageous to the Federal Government and not solely for personal choice or convenience.

b. Performance of duties does not require close supervision.

c. It must be determined that the use of an alternate workplace will not reduce productivity, diminish customer service, increase cost, or otherwise hamper operations.

d. A schedule of work time must be developed.

e. For periods exceeding five (5) business days a work agreement contract or form in conformance with DOI/BLM guidelines must be signed by the supervisor and the Employee and approved by the Manager.

Section 3. Other Guidance: Existing rules regarding hours of duty, scheduling work, and overtime apply to the flexible workplace. Established standards regarding pay, leave, and allowances must be followed. Work schedules need to be established to identify the days and times the employee will work in each work setting. It is assumed that part of the work schedule will occur at the official duty station. Standards must be established to provide reasonable assurance that employees are working when scheduled and actual work performance can be measured against established quantity and quality norms. Managers, supervisors, and employees must clearly define specific tasks and expectations.

Equipment required and whether this equipment is to be furnished by the Federal Government or the Employee, including maintenance and servicing of the equipment, must be spelled out in the flexible workplace agreement.

Section 4. Procedures: When required, the employee is responsible for initiating a written request for use of an alternate workplace. The request must address items identified in sections 2 and 3, above. The approved agreement will specify the length of time the agreement would be in force. The agreement may be canceled or modified by the manager/supervisor if in the opinion of the manager/supervisor, the conditions of the agreement are not being met. The agreement can be canceled by the Employee at any time. A "Flexible Workplace Work Agreement" form may be established by the CBDO and the Union to document requests. Requests may also be submitted that address the above requirements plus other administrative needs. Administrative concerns to be addressed in the agreement includes such things as cost to the Federal Government, liability, home inspections, accident or injuries, etc.

ARTICLE 6: TELEWORK

SECTION 06.01 - GENERAL

- A. Telework offers the opportunity to enhance the recruitment and retention of a high quality diverse workforce, assists employees in managing their workload and family life schedules, and complements the Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP). Telework agreements can be beneficial to the organization and the Employee. The objective of a Telework Agreement is to allow Employees to work at alternative worksites when it is to the benefit of the Agency and Employee.
- B. Telework will be in accordance with DOI's Telework Handbook (370 DM 226) and BLM-UT IM 2016-009 Telework.
- C. Employees may voluntarily request to participate in telework. However, telework is not an Employee entitlement, and participation in telework shall be approved by the Employee's Supervisor.
- D. Management may propose telework for Employees, however, participation in the telework program is entirely voluntary and Employees will not be coerced to participate. However, every eligible employee should have a signed telework agreement for at least emergency situations within sixty (60) days of employment with DOI. Telework agreements do not expire but should be renewed when the employee is assigned to a new supervisor. Once an Employee starts participating in the telework program and has an approved telework agreement, whether regularly or situational, they may be required to telework on days when the Employee's duty stations is closed due to inclement weather or other emergency reasons.
- E. Being eligible for telework does not mean the Supervisor will automatically approve participation in telework.
- F. Since telework is a voluntary arrangement, when entering into a telework agreement, both Management and the teleworking Employee will mutually agree to the telework location.
- G. There are three (3) categories of telework which an employee may request:
 - 1. Core (which means you telework on regular, scheduled basis for a certain number of days every pay period).
 - 2. Situational (which means you telework when you have a special project but not on a scheduled basis).
 - 3. Emergency or continuity of operations (COOP) (This includes inclement weather, natural disasters, situations when a government facility might be unusable (e.g. fire damage) or similar situations).
- H. Agency polices that govern the federal workplace apply equally to telework locations; for example, records management, privacy, and security polices apply to government records no matter where they are located.
- I. In the event that the Agency decides that it needs to use Hoteling, Hot Desking, Shared Offices, or other type of similar arrangements it will provide notice to the Union prior to the implementation of any such policy and will bargain consistent with law.
- J. If call forwarding from the office is not possible, Teleworking Employees may be assigned cell phones. Teleworking Employees will not be required to provide their personal phone numbers to external parties. Teleworkers will not be required to use their personal phones for the purpose of making long distance calls in support of work requirements.
- K. When available teleworking Employees may be provided a laptop computer to use at their teleworking location.

SECTION 06.02 ELIGIBILITY

- A. Before an employee may begin telework, they must complete the requirements to be telework-ready and be Eligible for Telework.

A Telework-Ready Employee is an employee who has a signed Telework Agreement (form DI-3457), has completed the U.S. Department of the Interior Work-At-Home Telework Safety Checklist Employee Certification signed by the appropriate officials and the employee, and has copies of both the employee as well as the supervisor's mandatory telework training certificates.

- B. An Employee is not eligible to apply for Telework if:
1. The Employee's most recent performance rating of record is below Level 3, and the Employee must maintain at least that level of performance throughout the period for which the telework agreement is in effect.
 2. The Employee is on a performance improvement plan (PIP).
 3. The Employee must not currently be on leave restriction.
 4. An Employee who has been issued disciplinary or adverse action within the previous year (from the date of the request to participate in the telework program) is not eligible to apply. However, the Employee will be given an opportunity to explain why the conduct action should not preclude them from being considered eligible and the Supervisor can make a determination that the conduct issue has no connection with teleworking and that the Employee is eligible.
 5. The Employee has been disciplined for being Absent Without Leave (AWOL) for more than five (5) days in any calendar year.
 6. The Employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.
- C. The period of ineligibility depends on the type of discipline taken against the Employee. The periods are:
1. Non-Permanent disciplinary documentation - Employee is ineligible until document is removed from file according to Article 32 (Investigations, Discipline, and Adverse Actions) in this Agreement.
 2. Permanent disciplinary documentation (Suspension of any length) - Employee is ineligible for a period of two (2) years from the date of the event that was the basis for discipline. At the end of that two-year period, the Supervisor, after consultation with the servicing Human Resource Office, may allow the Employee to telework or continue the prohibition until a future date.

SECTION 06.03 - APPROVAL AND PARTICIPATION

- A. To initiate a request for Telework, an Employee must submit a Telework Agreement form (DI-3457) to their immediate Supervisor.
- B. Participation and approval for telework will be based on but not limited to:
1. Duties of the position;
 2. The need to access/use classified information and/or deal with sensitive information (such as personally identifiable information or proprietary) which cannot be properly safeguarded if you telework;
 3. Performance maintained at a least "fully" successful;
 4. Required to meet the public; and
 5. Employee demonstrates acceptable work habits, conduct and adherence to Agency policies.
- C. Telework may be canceled when, but not limited to:
1. Customer service is adversely affected;
 2. The Employee is placed on leave restrictions;
 3. Documented conduct issues arise;
 4. The requirements of the Telework Agreement are not being fulfilled; or
 5. The teleworking Employee requests cancellation.
- D. Within fourteen (14) days of receiving a written teleworking request, upon request a signed and dated paper copy of the entire telework agreement (including all applicable terms, restrictions and

- arrangements) will be given to the Employee at the time of approval or denial. If telework is denied the Supervisor must state in detail the reason(s) and justification(s) for the denial in writing and supply this along with the Employee's copy of the signed and dated telework request. Teleworking may not be denied because of a Supervisor's refusal to take the appropriate teleworking training.
- E. Employees are encouraged to read all documentation, be familiar with its contents and seek guidance from their Supervisor when they have any questions or concerns.
 - F. If a portion of an Employee's assigned duties would limit participation in Telework but other assigned duties would not limit participation, Supervisors should consider allowing situational telework or participation on some days of the pay period to allow the non-limiting duties to be performed from a telework location.
 - G. Participation in the telework program may be suspended or terminated for certain circumstances, see Section 06.02(A) Eligibility above. When terminating telework, specific reasons and documentation will be provided to the Employee along with at least forty-eight (48) hours advanced notice.

SECTION 06.04 - SCHEDULES AND TIME AND ATTENDANCE

- A. Participation in Telework does not preclude an Employee from requesting the use of any approved Alternative Work Schedule (AWS).
- B. A Supervisor may develop accountability methods to ensure that they are able to verify an Employee's time and attendance in accordance with the CFR, such as requiring the Employee to keep a daily log of their start and end time, or email, or call the Supervisor at the start and end of the shift. Supervisors will be consistent when employing time keeping methods/verification among teleworking Employees.
- C. For hours of duties and schedules, see Article 5 (Hours of Duty and Schedules).

SECTION 06.05 - CHANGES TO TELEWORK AGREEMENTS

- A. If it becomes necessary to change the terms of a Telework agreement, a new agreement must be drawn up and signed by the Employee and Supervisor. Upon request, a signed and dated paper copy of the agreement detailing all conditions and terms of approval will be provided to the Employee.
- B. If an Employee changes Supervisors, the Employee should request a new Telework agreement. If a new agreement is not requested the new Supervisor has a right to review all existing telework agreements with their employees and determine whether they should be continued. A signed and dated paper copy of the agreement detailing all conditions and terms of approval will be provided to the Employee.
- C. When Management requires the physical presence of an Employee at the official duty station on an Employee's regularly scheduled Telework day, the Employee will, when possible, be given at least forty-eight (48) hours advance notice to make any necessary arrangements.

SECTION 06.06 - EQUIPMENT AND SUPPLIES

- A. Employees approved for Telework will be given the appropriate equipment necessary to perform the job duties assigned while on telework. If equipment is not available, this may result in the employee not being able to telework. Employees are not permitted to use their personal computers to access the network in performing their duties while teleworking. The Supervisor/Manager accepts any additional costs associated with providing equipment, i.e. a laptop PC to an individual rather than a desktop PC.
- B. Employees must possess an acceptable form of wide band access (Digital subscriber line, cable modem, etc.) and are responsible for the full cost. A dial-up connection is inadequate for telework.
- C. Working from home requires Employees to understand that:
 - 1. They shall ensure dependent care requirements are addressed so arrangements are in place and do not impede the Employee's ability to work (Telework is not a substitute for dependent care).
 - 2. Work-at-home telework may increase the Employee's home utility costs. The Department assumes no responsibility for any operational costs associated with the Employee's home residence, including home maintenance, insurance, or utilities.

3. They may incur additional expenses that may not be reimbursed such as internet provider and telecommunication costs.
- D. When an Employee requires general office supplies such as, paper, printer ink, binders, page dividers, organizers, the Employee will request authorization to remove these items from the government building to their telework site. Government provided equipment may not be used for personal use, other than that provided for by rule, law, or regulation. Employees may not use their government issued credit cards to purchase office supplies. Supervisors may require Employees to maintain a log of the government provided items.
- E. As determined by the Agency, Employees will be properly reimbursed for business- related long distance phone calls or will be given a government cell phone for such use.

SECTION 06.07 - TELEWORKPLACE INSPECTION

Employees will be given at least forty-eight (48) hours' notice prior to any workplace inspection. Upon request of the Employee to have a Union representative present, the Union will be notified and will be given an opportunity to be present at the inspection. The responsibility to notify and coordinate with the Union is the Employees. A request for Union representation will not delay the inspection.

SECTION 06.08 - POSITION DESCRIPTIONS FOR TELEWORKERS

Participation in a Telework program will very seldom require any change in an Employee's Position Description (PD) or performance standards (EPAP). For changes and modifications to an Employee's EPAP, see Article 13 (Employee Performance Appraisal Plan EPAP). For changes and modifications to an Employee's PD, see Article 12 (Position Descriptions and Classification).

ARTICLE 25 – TELEWORK

The Telework program shall be administered in accordance with PERSONNEL BULLETIN 05-02 and the current Great Plains Region Telework Guidance which can be found on the HR website.

GP Region Telework Guidance allows eligible employees to work at an alternate worksite, including their home, on an occasional basis (situational telework). Telework is not an employee right, and approval or termination is within a supervisor's discretion.

Under this program, participants may work at home or in a satellite office with the supervisor's approval. Participation in the Telework Program must produce a benefit to both the employee and the Government.

Article 18 - Telework

1. The Parties recognize that telework is a beneficial tool that the CGB Region uses to attract and retain employees, meet mission objectives, improve morale, enhance work/life effectiveness, and improve productivity. Management and the Union recognize that efficiencies are realized when employees can work at home free from office distractions. A telework day is equivalent to being in the office. Telework is not an entitlement.
2. The parties agree that employees may telework consistent with the Agency's telework policy, subject to mission requirements, applicable laws, government-wide rules and regulations, and OPM Policy. Employees need to request approval to Telework using the designated electronic form available through the employee's supervisor and the Human Resources Office. Employees need to take the applicable training.
3. Employees need to prepare to Telework by bringing home the necessary equipment, maintaining VPN, forwarding telephones, and responding as is customary to phone calls, emails and other electronic communication while teleworking.
4. Employees need to maintain a suitable workspace while Teleworking, free from external distractions.
5. Telework cannot be used to provide elder or childcare.
6. Employees need to remain flexible and be able to attend work meetings, conferences, and/or training on previously scheduled Telework days.

ARTICLE 25 – TELEWORK

The Telework program shall be administered in accordance with PERSONNEL BULLETIN 05-02 and the current Great Plains Region Telework Guidance which can be found on the HR website.

GP Region Telework Guidance allows eligible employees to work at an alternate worksite, including their home, on an occasional basis (situational telework). Telework is not an employee right, and approval or termination is within a supervisor's discretion.

Under this program, participants may work at home or in a satellite office with the supervisor's approval. Participation in the Telework Program must produce a benefit to both the employee and the Government.

compensatory time as soon as they are aware of the need.

- The employee and supervisor work together to accomplish the needs of the request.
- When it meets the needs of the Employer and the employee, the supervisor will approve the employee's request. Supervisory decisions will not be arbitrary, capricious, or retaliatory in nature.
- The employee will make reasonable efforts to discuss requests with their immediate supervisor (or acting). If the first line supervisor (or acting) is unavailable to respond in a timely manner, does not provide a timely response, or the employee wishes to appeal their supervisor's decision, the employee may approach the second line supervisor (or acting) for assistance in resolution. Decision making criteria above also applies here.
- Flexible compensatory time must be documented and recorded in the Time and Attendance system.

This Article shall not be interpreted to limit the Employer's statutory rights applicable to the assignment of overtime.

Article 6. Telework

Section 1. Telework

Telework (also known as telecommuting and flexiplace) is emerging as an important and attractive work option for the Federal Government and its employees. It has the benefit of providing employees with the flexibility they need to better manage their work and personal responsibilities. The Union and the Employer have established the following procedures under which eligible employees may participate in telework to the maximum extent possible without diminished employee performance.

Section 2. Types of Telework

The Union and the Employer recognize that there are three types of telework as defined by OPM.

- Episodic or Situational. The employee teleworks on an irregular basis. The telework opportunity may be a result of a medical problem, reasonable accommodation, or the need to be focused on a special project. Other situations may develop that makes it beneficial for the employee and supervisor to agree on an episodic telework opportunity.
- Part Time Telework: The employee teleworks on a regularly scheduled basis. This may be one or more days a week, every two weeks or several days in a month.

- Full-Time Telework: The employee completes all or almost all duties outside of a traditional office setting. This may include some work done at home, in customers' offices, or at a telecenter and occasionally coming to the office for a meeting or planning session; however, the duties lend themselves to work away from the office.

Section 3. Position Eligibility

The Employer will approve or disapprove a request to participate in telework by an employee assigned to an eligible position. In acting on an employee's request, the Employer will use reference materials available to the bargaining teams and consider these items when determining eligibility: conduct, performance, leave restriction, office coverage, access to supervisor and customers, team involvement, and costs. If the Employer denies a request, it shall notify the employee in writing and give the reason(s) for the denial.

Section 4. Applying for Telework

Full-Time or Part-Time Telework. Interested employees in positions that have been determined to be eligible for telework are encouraged to find possible telework opportunities that fit the employee's and the Employer's needs. The exchange of information at these discussions is encouraged. If either party needs additional information, they may request that information and can expect to get a timely response. If after these discussions the employee wishes to pursue telework, the employee will use current FWS forms. If the supervisor recommends approval, he or she will submit the request to the RD through applicable supervisory channels.

Episodic or Situational. An employee may request permission to work at an alternative worksite for all or part of the time required to, for example, complete a project. All bargaining unit positions will be considered eligible for episodic or situational telework. Requests should be written whenever possible, but may occasionally be appropriately made by telephone. Whether made in writing or by telephone, the Employer will document all requests and decisions. For this type of telecommuting, the Employer is not obliged to provide any special equipment or reimburse the employee for any related costs.

Section 5. Recall

Employees participating in telework programs must be accessible and available for recall to their regular offices for a variety of reasons. Employees may be called back for emergencies or new work assignments. A recall is not a termination of the flexiplace arrangement.

Section 6. Termination of Agreements

Employees may voluntarily terminate participation in flexiplace arrangements at any time; however, employees may be expected to continue working at their alternative worksite for a reasonable period to allow the Employer time to arrange a work station.

Supervisors may terminate agreements whenever:

- The arrangement no longer supports the mission;
- Performance standards are not being met or conduct is unacceptable;
- Normal production and quality of work are not being maintained;
- Costs of the agreement become impractical;
- Technology changes require return to the regular office;
- Reassignment causes a change of work; or
- Employees do not conform with the terms of their agreements.

The Employer will attempt to provide appropriate advance notice of the termination of an agreement to the extent practicable. The Employer will provide concurrent notification to the employee and the Union when terminating an employee's participation.

Termination of agreements may necessitate shared workstations in the regular office or reassignment to another office.

Article 7. Voluntary Allotments for Payment of Dues

Section 1. Dues Withholding

The Employer agrees to withhold the dues of Union members, as specified below, on a bi-weekly basis through payroll deductions. This article applies to all employees who are employed in bargaining unit positions (See Article I); who voluntarily complete written assignments authorizing the Employer to deduct dues from their pay (Form SF-1187, Request and Authorization for Voluntary Allotment of Compensation for Payment of Employee Organization Dues) which, except as provided for below, may not be revoked for a period of one (1) year from the date on which deductions began, and whose net salary, after other legal and required deductions have been made, is sufficient to cover the dues.

ARTICLE 20 -Telework

- 20.1 For maximum effectiveness and efficiency in accomplishing the work of the Service, modern and progressive work practices are needed. Service policy describes one of these practices to improve employee performance and efficiency as "Telework."
- 20.2 The Parties recognize that the appropriate Management Official makes the decision on the approval of an employee's request for "Telework" by following the process set forth in DOI Manual, Service Manual, and any appropriate Regional Director's Order.
- 20.3 The Parties agree that the types of work that are best suited to Telework are those that have easily quantifiable tasks such as data processing and word processing; project-oriented tasks such as those that primarily require analytical and writing skills; and reading and/or processing tasks such as reading proposals and reviews and conducting research.
- 20.4 The Parties agree that participation in the Telework program will be made on a case-by-case basis, is not an employee right or a condition of employment unless so stated, and that there is no automatic right of the employee to continue participation in the event of a change of supervisor. The Parties also agree that supervisors have the right to require employees to report to their official duty station at any time during their official duty hours regardless of where they were scheduled to work that day, i.e. staff meeting or office coverage needs. Employees who are denied or terminated from participation in this program will receive in writing the reason(s) for denying or terminating their agreement.
- 20.5 The parties acknowledge there are two types of Telework arrangements: Core and Situational. Core means the employee works at the alternative worksite on fixed days. Situational means that the employee works at the alternative worksite as needed and as approved by their supervisor.
- 20.6 When an employee is Teleworking, the supervisor will be able to contact the employee (e.g., telephone, email).
- 20.7 A supervisor may require an employee while Teleworking to read and respond to email and/or perform other functions.
- 20.8 A supervisor may require an employee to prepare and provide the supervisor with a daily log of accomplishments made while Teleworking.
- 20.9 Depending on the tasks to be performed while Teleworking, the equipment needs may vary. Service network and data security policies will be used to determine equipment requirements on a case-by-case basis. The employee needs to supply his/her own Internet access.

20.10 If an employee is Teleworking and there is an early release due to weather or another facility related issue, an employee Teleworking at their residence would continue to work his/her scheduled work day or request leave.

- B. In the event that the number of parking spaces available to the Agency increases during the term of this Agreement, the Agency will provide NTEU with notice and the opportunity to bargain to the extent required by law, regulation, and this Agreement.

Section 43.05

NTEU representatives may request visitor parking passes for matters regarding employee representation.

ARTICLE 44: TELEWORK

Section 44.01

An employee's official duty station is her/his official workplace. Use of a workplace other than the official workplace requires approval under Agency policy. The Agency encourages the use of alternative workplaces, including telework when consistent with the work to be performed, the mission of the Agency and the needs of the individual employee's organization. Employee participation in the telework program is voluntary and the Agency shall not compel an employee's participation. The telework program is governed by the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and applicable law, rule, regulation, and policy consistent with this Agreement.

Section 44.02

Employees may request to telework for up to three (3) days per workweek.

Section 44.03

- A. All employees whose position is eligible for telework may apply for telework unless they:
1. Have been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five (5) days for any calendar year; or
 2. Have been officially disciplined for violation of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography on a federal computer or while performing Federal Government duties; or
 3. Have less than a fully successful (satisfactory) performance rating at any time during the rating period and have been formally notified.
- B. An employee who wishes to telework will initiate a request to telework through her/his immediate supervisor and may do so at any time. The employee will submit the appropriate forms and take the required annual training to participate in the telework program.
- C. Upon receipt of the request, the supervisor or designee will evaluate the employee's and position's suitability for participating in the program. The supervisor will review the application form with the employee and will approve or disapprove the telework request within fourteen (14) calendar days. In the case of the denial of a request to telework, the supervisor will provide a written explanation on the form of the reasons for the denial.
- D. If approved, the employee and supervisor or designee will enter into a telework agreement. The Agency will retain the completed and signed agreement. A copy will be provided to the employee.

Section 44.04

- A. Telework policies and procedures may have no impact on the current work schedule provisions governing covered employees. Employee teleworkers will work tours of duty that are consistent with their tour of duty at their Agency workplace. Supervisors or designees will approve telework schedules in advance to ensure that the employee's time and attendance can be properly certified and to preclude any liability for premium or overtime pay. An employee already on a flexible schedule may vary his/her start and/or stop time with supervisory approval. An employee working a compressed schedule (e.g., 5-4-9, 4-10) is not eligible to vary start and/or stop times.
- B. Time and attendance reporting procedures will remain the same for employees who telework. Employees will document days and hours spent teleworking by entering the appropriate codes on their electronic time sheet each pay period.
- C. During the regular duty hours, absences from the alternative work site (e.g., visits on official business to attend meetings or use of annual or sick leave) will be coordinated with and approved by the supervisor or designee at the earliest time practicable.
- D. All rules governing premium pay apply to teleworkers. Employees will receive overtime or compensatory time off, when ordered and approved in advance, by the supervisor or designee, in accordance with Article 25: Overtime and Compensatory Time.
- E. Employees are expected to attend training, mandatory meetings, meetings where in-person attendance is essential, and workshops at the office or other sites regardless of whether they are working within their approved telework location.

Section 44.05

- A. Intermittent telework is a flexible workplace arrangement that may be approved on a short-term basis for a work situation of limited duration (one (1) to five (5) days) when an employee has a telework agreement in place. Intermittent telework must be approved in advance by the supervisor or designee. Examples of intermittent telework include telework as a result of inclement weather or special work assignments.
- B. Consideration will be given to Ranger requests for intermittent telework to conduct research, participate in mandatory training, complete coursework, and/or perform collateral duties. The parties understand that Ranger availability for coverage on short notice may limit his/her eligibility to telework.

Section 44.06

- A. Employees who are approved to be teleworkers will use a government-issued laptop computer, configured in accordance with specifications established by the Agency, if available. Agency-provided equipment must not be altered or upgraded in any way except by Information Technology staff. The Agency will not be liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property while the employee is working at the telework site. Employees will comply with the applicable Agency Information Technology Policies when working at a telework site.
- B. If there is a problem with the hardware or software applications on the teleworking equipment, the employee is required to contact their immediate supervisor or designee to report the problem. Support may be provided via the telephone during normal business hours. Teleworkers should not expect after-hours and weekend support. If the problem cannot be resolved over the telephone, the employee is required to bring the equipment on-site the next workday so that the problem can be resolved. The employee will report to work at the designated work site (local Park, Regional office) until the computer equipment is repaired and available for use at the telework site.

- C. Approved teleworkers will be required to obtain and maintain internet access through an internet service provider. Access and use of any Agency equipment, software, or internet connection is subject to applicable Agency policies.
- D. Employees need to ensure that they can receive telephone calls while working at the telework site, including during those times the employee is utilizing the internet access. While teleworking, an employee must be able to be reached at the phone number provided in the telework agreement during their hours of duty.
- E. Teleworkers will ensure that all Agency records and information (electronic and hard copy) are protected under the terms of the Privacy Act and Agency information security requirements.
- F. Teleworkers are responsible for taking reasonable precautions in preventing any loss or damage to equipment issued to them.

Section 44.07

If an employee is teleworking and the regular duty station closes due to an emergency situation on the telework day, the teleworker will continue to work until the end of the scheduled workday. If there is an emergency situation (e.g. inclement weather or power outage) at the telework site when the employee is teleworking and the employee's main office is closed due to the emergency situation, the employee may request Weather and Safety Leave in accordance with the Administrative Leave Act of 2016. If there is an emergency situation at the telework site when the employee is teleworking and the employee's main office remains open, the employee may return to the main office or request appropriate leave. Whether an emergency situation exists is the exclusive determination of the Agency.

Section 44.08

Employees understand they are covered under the Federal Employee's Compensation Act if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the regular office or the telework site. The employee agrees to notify the supervisor as soon as practicable usually within twenty-four (24) hours of any accident or injury that occurs at the telework site and to complete any required forms. The supervisor or designee will investigate such a report as required by the regulations of the Office of Worker's Compensation and Agency Policy. The government will not be liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property during the course of performance of official duties or while using government equipment in the employee's telework site, except to the extent the government is held liable by Federal Tort Claims Act claims or claims arising under the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act. Matters arising under this section are not grievable nor are they arbitrable under this Agreement.

ARTICLE 18. TELEWORK

18.1 Policy

18.1.1 For purposes of this Agreement, telework refers to an employee's performing assigned duties at a location other than the official duty station. Such an alternative workplace can include a government or private telework center, or the employee's home to name a few.

18.1.2 Telework for Bargaining Unit employees will be consistent with the Departmental Telework Handbook and Telework policy, and this Agreement.

18.1.3 The IBC Telework Policy is the local established procedure for IBC employees.

18.1.4 Employees who are eligible may participate in telework to the maximum extent possible without diminished employee performance. Participation in the Telework Program will be voluntary on the part of the employee. Employees may only be required to telework in emergency situations when the Employer's Continuity of Operations Program (COOP) has been put in effect. Such employees will be informed in advance of their COOP responsibilities in writing.

18.1.5 All positions are considered suitable for telework.

18.1.6 Employees who telework will be treated the same as employees who do not telework.

18.2 Eligibility

18.2.1 All employees who meet the following criteria are eligible to participate in Telework:

- a. The employee has a performance rating of Fully Successful or better;
 - i) Employees whose performance is below fully successful may not participate in telework
 - ii) Employees on a Notice of Opportunity to Demonstrate Acceptable Performance (NODAP) (Previously known as Performance Improvement Plan (PIP)), as provided in Article 23, Performance Management, are not eligible for telework
- b. The employee has the work space, utilities, equipment and reference materials suitable for the work to be performed at the designated alternative workplace as specified in the Telework Program Agreement;
- c. The employee signs and abides by the Individual Telework Agreement;
- d. The employee has not been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year; and

e. The employee has not been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.

f. The employee does not have any conduct issues under 370 DM 752 (5 CFR 752) and which are documented by the Employer;

18.2.2 The period of ineligibility for telework under Section 18.2.1 paragraph f, (for conduct issues under 370 DM 75 and 5 CFR 752) depends on the type of action taken against the employee. If a non-permanent document in the employee's eOPF, the prohibition from teleworking exists until the document is removed. If the permanent document is in the employee's eOPF, the prohibition for telework is two years from the effective date of the document. At the end of that two year period, the supervisor, after consultation with the servicing HR Office, may allow the employee to telework or continue the prohibition until a future date.

18.3 Requests

Employees may submit a request to perform telework at an alternative workplace on a routine or situational basis at any time. Employees will submit their telework agreement that defines the days, hours, location, etc. The Supervisor will document approval or denial of the request within 10 days of receipt. If the request is disapproved, the supervisor will include the reasons for the denial.

18.4 Training

18.4.1 All employees must have completed the Agency's interactive telework training program before they can telework for the first time. Any employee who has a telework agreement in place as of the effective date of this agreement is exempt from this requirement.

18.4.2 The content of any IBC training will be discussed with and reviewed by the Union prior to implementing to ensure that it addresses the Union's and employees' concerns among which are that the requirements of the Collective Bargaining Agreement are included.

18.5 Individual Telework Agreement

18.5.1 All employees who will telework on a situational or routine basis must complete and sign an individual Telework Agreement. The Agreement must be in place before telework may begin. This Agreement will outline the specific work arrangement on which the employee and the supervisor agree.

18.5.2 Clarifying Points of Telework

a. Workplace inspections

i) Normally, employees will be able to bring to the official worksite portable Government Furnished Equipment (GFE) for maintenance.

ii) Non-portable or fixed equipment may require inspection at the alternative workplace (home.)

iii) Although rare, it may be necessary to inspect the alternative workplace (home) for conformance to safety standards.

b. Safety and Workers' Compensation

i) It may be necessary for an Agency/Employer representative to access the alternative workplace (home) to investigate the report of injury/illness.

ii) For situations involving reasonable accommodation, it may be necessary for an Agency/Employer representative to access the alternative workplace (home) to address the reasonable accommodation need/request.

c. Work Assignments/Performance Assignments

i) Teleworkers will not be required to submit reports that non-teleworkers are not required to submit for evaluating performance.

ii) An example of when less than fully successful performance may be the basis for suspending a telework arrangement is when accessibility to official duty station is necessary due to on-the-job training, assistance, support, etc. from the supervisor or other designee.

iii) In all cases of cancellation/termination of a telework arrangement, the employee will be notified in writing)

d. Termination of Telework Agreement

i) Employees designated as a COOP employee may not voluntarily terminate their telework arrangement; however, all other employees may voluntarily terminate their telework agreement without supervisory approval.

ii) Decisions to terminate/suspend telework arrangements based on conduct will comply with Section 18.2 of this agreement.

iii) Termination/suspension of a telework agreement should be based on business-based legitimate reasons.

iv) Cancellation of the Telework Agreement requires the review and approval/disapproval by the first line supervisor.

e. COOP Requirements

Employees designated as COOP employees will be notified in writing of expectations during a COOP exercise or crisis. The notification will normally be done simultaneously when the employee is notified of their COOP designation.

f. Pandemic/Emergency Closure Requirement

In the context of this element, weather-related closures are not to be confused with early departure, delayed arrival, or temporary closure due to adverse weather conditions.

g. Personal Equipment and Discovery

Teleworkers are required to use Government Furnished Equipment (GFE) for teleworking, therefore employees should not be using personal equipment for teleworking.

18.6 Temporary Changes or Return to Alternative Workplace

18.6.1 Employees may be required to report to their official duty station for previously scheduled or unscheduled training, conferences, other meetings, or to perform work on a short term basis that cannot otherwise be performed at the alternative workplace or accomplished via telephone or other reasonable alternative methods.

18.6.2 Employee may also be required to report to their official duty station for emergency operational exigencies to perform agency work which cannot otherwise be performed on another workday, at the alternative workplace, via telephone or other reasonable alternative methods. In such cases, employees will be provided reasonable advance notice and be provided a reasonable time to report. Employees should make every effort to report as soon as possible. With good and sufficient reasons, the employee will be permitted up to two (2) hours to report.

18.7 Cancellation

Normally employees will not be removed from participation for minor infractions of Telework Program requirements. In such cases, managers will make a bona fide effort to counsel employees about specific problems before cancelling an employee's participation in telework. The counseling will be confirmed in writing.

18.8 Problems Affecting Work Performance

Employees will promptly inform their supervisor whenever any problems arise at the telework site which adversely affects their ability to perform work at the alternative workplace. Examples could include situations such as equipment failure, power outages, telecommunications difficulties, etc. In such cases, the employee may request annual leave or report to the regular work place. If an employee is unable to continue to work that day in the alternative work place, and it is impractical for the employees to report to the regular work place before the end of the work day, the employee may be granted short periods of excused absence up to 59 minutes.

18.9 Self Certification Safety Checklist

The employee will complete the Self Certification Check List to the best of their knowledge.

ARTICLE 11: TELEWORK

Section 1 – General Guidelines

An employee's official duty station is either the government-provided office at the employee's official duty station or his/her remote duty location as designated on the employee's SF-50. Use of a workplace other than the official workplace requires approval under this policy. The Employer encourages the use of alternative workplaces, including telework. Telework changes the environment in which an employee performs the work. Employee participation in the telework program is voluntary, and the Employer shall not compel an employee to participate in the telework program.

- A. Regular telework is telework that occurs as part of an ongoing, regular scheduled written telework agreement.
- B. Situational telework is telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked were NOT part of a previously approved, ongoing and regular telework schedule. Examples of situational telework include telework as a result of inclement weather, doctor appointment, or special work assignments, and is sometimes also referred to as situational, episodic, intermittent, unscheduled, or ad-hoc telework.
- C. "Telework-ready" means that an employee:
 - 1. is eligible to telework;
 - 2. has executed and is currently subject to a written telework agreement;
 - 3. is regularly scheduled to telework or approved for situational telework; and
 - 4. has sufficient portable work.

Section 2 – Eligibility Considerations

The intent of the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 is to encourage agencies to allow employee participation in the telework program to the maximum extent possible without diminished employee performance; therefore, the Employer shall approve all requests for telework that meet eligibility requirements. Considerations for telework eligibility include, but are not limited to:

- A. The extent to which key tasks and processes can be performed outside of the traditional office.
- B. The extent to which needed information can be accessed, sent, or received from outside the office, with the proper technology.
- C. The extent to which support requirements can be fulfilled when the job/function is being performed remotely.

- D. Conditions prompting government agencies to recommend contingency procedures such as moving to an alternate worksite or dispersing the workforce.
- E. Other job specific criteria as appropriate.

Section 3 – Initiating a Telework Agreement

- A. All employees may apply for and be considered for participation in the telework program.
- B. An employee who wishes to telework will initiate a request to telework through his/her immediate supervisor and may do so at any time. The employee will also submit a request via the online Department of Interior Telework Agreement Form (DI-3457) (<https://eforms.doi.gov>). Should DOI change the current form, the Employer shall provide notice to the Union and bargain to the extent required by law, rule and the parties' collective bargaining agreement.
- C. Upon receipt of the request, the supervisor will evaluate the employee's and position's suitability for participating in the program. The supervisor will review the application form with the employee and will approve or disapprove the telework request within fourteen (14) calendar days. In the case of the denial of a request to telework, the supervisor will provide a written explanation on the form of the reasons for the denial.

A supervisor disapproval of the employee's telework request may be appealed for reconsideration at any time with the next higher level of supervision.

- D. If approved, the employee and supervisor will complete the online version of the Department of Interior Agreement (Form DI-3457) and if necessary the Alternate Worksite Work Agreement (Appendix 11-3) and complete the Supervisors Checklist (Appendix 11-4). The agreement will also be signed by the employee and first line supervisor. The Employer will retain the completed and signed agreement and a copy will be provided to the employee.
- E. The employee is responsible for ensuring that his/her home space complies with health and safety requirements; is clean and free from obstructions; complies with all building codes; and is free of hazardous materials.
- F. A supervisor may deny an employee the opportunity to participate or may terminate a telework agreement if the telework workplace hinders an employee's ability to meet work requirements, including the delivery of work products or if there are safety problems or evidence of hazardous materials at the telework workplace.
- G. Telecenters may be approved as alternate worksites.

Section 4 – Impact on Work Schedules

- A. Telework policies and procedures have no impact on the current work schedule provisions governing covered employees. Eligible employees on telework will work tours of duty that are consistent with the established hours of business and authorized work schedules for the Employer. Supervisors will approve telework schedules in advance to ensure that the employee's time and attendance can be properly certified and to preclude any liability for premium or overtime pay.

- B. Time and attendance reporting procedures will remain the same for employees who telework. Employees will document days and hours spent telework at an alternative worksite on their time sheet each pay period. Supervisors will employ methods that provide for a reasonable assurance that employees on telework are working when scheduled, are paid for work performed and that absences from scheduled tours of duty are accounted for (e.g., through e-mail communication; by determining the reasonableness of the work output for the time spent).
- C. During the regular duty hours, absences from the alternative worksite (e.g., visits on official business to attend meetings or use of annual or sick leave) will be coordinated with and approved by the supervisor at the earliest time practicable.
- D. All rules governing premium pay apply to employees on telework. Employees will be paid overtime when ordered and approved in advance by the supervisor. Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that employees on telework request overtime and with the supervisor's approval of overtime only work on agreed upon duties.
- E. Employees are expected to attend scheduled meetings, workshops, etc., at the office or other local site regardless of whether they are working within their telework workplace. However, the Employer is encouraged to promote options for remote participation.

Section 5 – Situational Telework

Situational telework agreements will be approved in advance by the supervisor in accordance with Section 2 above.

Bargaining unit employees will notify and seek approval from supervisors prior to taking a telework day(s) pursuant to a situational telework agreement (unless the situational telework agreement specifies otherwise).

Employees who are injured, recuperating and/or physically limited, may be able to work at home (i.e., telework) and complete work assignments while minimizing time away from the job.

Section 6 – Altering or Terminating an Agreement

If, at any time, it is determined by management that a telework arrangement is having an adverse impact on work operations, the arrangement may be modified or terminated by the supervisor with fourteen (14) calendar day advance written notice.

Section 7 – One-Year Review

After each twelve-month period of participation in the telework program, the supervisor and employee will meet for the purpose of discussing, reviewing and updating the telework agreement. The Supervisor is responsible for initiating the review.

Section 8 – Equipment and Information Technology

- A. Employees who are approved to be on telework will use a government-owned computer and software, configured in accordance with specifications established by the Employer. The Employer's provided equipment must not be altered or upgraded in any way (expanded memory, etc.), except by Information Technology staff, unless otherwise permitted. The Employer will not be liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property while the employee is working at the alternative workplace. Employees will comply with the Employer's Internet Limited Policy when working at a telework site.
- B. The Employer has determined that it will strive to provide a government-owned computer and software to those employees approved for telework. For example, the Employer has determined that when an employee's computer is "refreshed," the employee may select either a desktop computer or a laptop with a docking port.
- C. If necessary, the Employer shall reimburse employees participating in a telework program for the following: the cost of business related long distance phone calls. However, the Employer may choose to provide employees with prepaid phone cards.
- D. If there is a problem with the hardware or software applications on the teleworking equipment, the employee is required to contact their immediate supervisor to report the problem. Support may be provided via the telephone during normal business hours. Employees on telework should not expect after-hours and weekend support. If the problem cannot be resolved over the telephone, the employee is required to bring the equipment onsite the next workday so that the problem can be resolved. From that day until the equipment is repaired or replaced, the employee will report to work at their designated worksite.
- E. Employees approved for telework will be required to obtain and maintain internet access through an internet service provider. This will enable them to access the Employer's email system, reference materials, and other information necessary to ensure the capability to work "virtually" outside of the office. Employees on telework will access the Employer's network through the Network Management Office high-capacity Virtual Private Networking (VPN) and an Internet Service Provider (ISP). VPN connectivity requires availability of a standard telephone line, cable, DSL or other internet access at the alternate worksite.
- F. Employees and supervisors need to ensure the employee that can receive telephone calls while working at the alternative worksite, including during those times the employee is utilizing the internet access. Eligible employees on telework will use Employer issued calling cards for all business-related long distance telephone calls from the alternate worksite.

- G. Employees on telework will ensure that all Employer records and information (electronic and hard copy) are protected under the terms of the Privacy Act and NPS ADP security requirements.
- H. Employees on telework are responsible for taking reasonable precautions in preventing any loss or damage to equipment issued to them.

Section 9 – Office Closure

A. Employees with Telework Agreements.

1. In the event of a delayed arrival or early dismissal, telework-ready employees scheduled to report to work at their official duty station and/or who have already reported to their official duty station, will be granted administrative leave for the authorized timeframe.

In the event of an office closure, delayed arrival or early dismissal, telework-ready employees already scheduled to telework that day are expected to telework the entire workday.

2. The Employer will notify telework-ready employees who are in the traditional worksite by 2 p.m. the prior workday or confirm receipt of actual notice to employees when circumstances arise that may result in a government closure and to bring sufficient equipment and portable work to their alternate worksite (AWS). Such employees who were at their traditional worksite during or after the announcement will then bring sufficient equipment to the AWS and be prepared to work. If the office closes and the Employer did not provide advance notification by 2 p.m. of a potential closure or actual notice as described above, and the employee was not scheduled to telework, and the employee does not have the necessary equipment and work to perform, such employees will be granted administrative leave.
3. Telework-ready employees must advise their supervisors if they are prevented from working due to a disruption (e.g., electricity/internet connectivity issues, childcare/elder care issues) at the AWS during a government closure. Supervisors may grant administrative leave for events that disrupt or prevent work and/or that present a dangerous environment for the teleworker. Administrative leave may not exceed the lesser of the duration of the event or the government closure.
4. As authorized by an OPM or Employer announcement, a telework-ready employee shall be permitted to telework in lieu of taking unscheduled leave when the government is open but the employee is unable to travel to the traditional worksite. The following conditions must be met:

- a. The employee’s supervisor approves telework during the emergency;
 - b. The employee has sufficient work to perform at the AWS;
 - c. The employee has sufficient equipment at the AWS to perform such work; and
 - d. The AWS is operational (e.g., has power).
5. If there is an emergency situation at the AWS when the employee is teleworking, and the main office is open, then the employee must either return to the main office or request appropriate leave. However, where the travel time from the AWS to the main office exceeds the number of hours remaining in the workday, then, the employee may request and will be granted administrative leave.
 6. If the Employer declares or is subject to a work status change whereby the status is “Open with Option for Unscheduled Leave or Unscheduled Telework,” and the employee is telework ready, then the employee will notify his/her supervisor if he/she would like to opt for unscheduled telework that day.

B. Employees Not on Telework Agreements.

Employees who do not have a telework agreement, where the office site is open but an emergency situation (including weather related) results in the employee being subject to dangerous commute conditions, shall have the option to come to the office or be granted unscheduled leave, or advanced leave to the extent permitted by law.

Section 10 – Childcare/Eldercare

Pursuant to law, rule and regulation, telework is not designed to substitute for child or other dependent care. Allowances for temporary work-at-home and emergency work arrangements, including any approval for administrative leave, can be addressed with the immediate supervisor.

During an office closure or other emergency, if a teleworker cannot find child or elder care due to the emergency, the supervisor may approve requests for unscheduled annual leave or, in appropriate circumstances, administrative leave.

Section 11 – Injury Compensation/Liability

Employees understand they are covered under the Federal Employee’s Compensation Act if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the regular office or the alternate worksite. The employee agrees to notify the supervisor promptly of any accident or injury that occurs at the alternate workplace and to complete any required forms. The supervisor agrees to investigate such a report immediately. The Government will not be liable for damages to an employee’s personal or real property during the course of performance of official duties or while using Government equipment in the employee’s residence, except to the extent the

Article 35

Telework

Section 1. General

Telework is an effective strategy for mission accomplishment, ensuring Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP) in a crisis, and recruiting and retaining valued talent. It is the policy of the National Park Service, Department of the Interior (DOI) to promote telework that does not diminish employee performance or agency operations, or adversely affect the ability of the Agency to achieve its mission. Employees do not have a presumptive right to telework. An employee's participation in the telework program is voluntary and must only be approved when it is deemed to be in the best interest of the Agency.

Section 2. Participation

Bargaining Unit Employees (BUE) may telework consistent with the Agency's (DOI) telework policy (Personnel Bulletin 21-07) subject to mission requirements and applicable laws, government-wide rules, regulations, and OPM policy. The Department's telework policy and guidance may be found at Appendix B of this Agreement or be accessed at <https://www.doi.gov/telework>.

ARTICLE 23. TELEWORK

23.1 The Parties recognize the value of teleworking. Accordingly, the Employer agrees to support the use of teleworking by employees, as appropriate, through the Department's telework policy. Employee's participation in telework is voluntary. An employee must have a signed and approved telework agreement in order to telework.

23.2 Employees with a signed telework agreement may be required by their supervisor to telework during emergencies. Employees, who do not have a telework agreement, may not be forced to telework. In cases of emergencies, such as disasters, power failures, etc., wherein management closes an office, employees without a telework agreement will not be required to telework or take leave. In these circumstances, employees will be granted administrative leave, in accordance with OPM and/or Department policy.

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING between NATIONAL TREASURY EMPLOYEES UNION, CHAPTER 340 AND BLM, NEW MEXICO STATE OFFICE REGARDING TELEWORK

Section 1 General Provisions

- A. Purpose This Memorandum of Understanding (Memorandum or MOU) establishes the policy and procedures for participation in the telework program by employees represented by NTEU Chapter 340 and employed by the Bureau of Land Management (Agency). The terms of this Memorandum are subject to the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and may not be read to conflict with it or other applicable law. This Memo is also subject to the Department of the Interior (DOI), Personnel Bulletin No. 21-07, Telework Program (PB 21-07) where the terms do not conflict; in the case of a conflict, the terms of this MOU will govern.
- B. Policy The Parties agree that telework provides benefits to the employer as well as employees. Telework is an effective strategy for mission accomplishment, ensuring COOP (continuation of operations) in a crisis, and recruiting and retaining valued employees. Telework provides a benefit to employees by reducing commute time and expenses and allowing for more flexible work circumstances. Consistent with the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, eligible employees may be authorized to telework to the extent that the arrangement does not diminish employee or organizational performance.
- C. Employee participation in the telework program is voluntary. An employee's request for telework shall be considered in accordance with the terms of this Memorandum and shall not be unreasonably denied. Participating employees may request to end their participation with notice to the supervisor, two weeks in advance where possible to allow time for making arrangements needed to accommodate their return to the office. The Parties acknowledge circumstances may require more than two weeks' time to facilitate an employee's return to the office from a telework arrangement.
- D. Two types of telework arrangements are available to Agency employees, as defined below. For both Core Telework and Situational Telework, the employee's official duty station remains the agency post-of-duty to which they officially are assigned. Remote work, as defined below, is not covered by this Memorandum.

- E. Employees who wish to participate in telework of any kind must meet the eligibility requirements of this Memorandum and enter into a telework agreement. Once a telework agreement is executed by an employee and their supervisor, the employee will be considered telework-ready. Completion of telework training is required before execution of a telework agreement. Exception: following execution of this Memorandum, current teleworkers will have 30 days to complete the DOI telework training and submit form DI-3457 if they have not done so within the last 12 months.

- F. An employee approved to Core telework must physically report to their official duty station at least two days per bi-weekly pay period, except in rare circumstances or as a reasonable accommodation, when the Agency may determine to waive the reporting requirement.

G. Definitions

1. Alternative Worksite A location other than the employee's official worksite that has been approved for the performance of assigned duties as designated in the telework agreement. It may be an employee's home, a telework center, or other approved worksite that is conducive to performing official duties.
2. Core Telework: A telework arrangement in which the eligible employee teleworks from an approved alternative worksite for up to eight days in a pay period on a recurring, scheduled basis, i.e. fixed days each week or pay period.
3. Dependent Care: The support or nurturing of persons who cannot meet their own needs such as children, elders, or other dependent adults.
4. Hoteling: An arrangement in which employees are not assigned a permanent, dedicated office space at an Agency location but rather are provided a shared desk or office space, either assigned or arranged by reservation on an as-needed basis. Also referred to as a shared workstation.
5. Mobile Work: Work that is characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in customer or other worksites as opposed to a single authorized alternative worksite. Examples of mobile work include site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management, and work performed while commuting, traveling between worksites, or on Temporary Duty (TDY). This category of work is not considered telework and is not covered by this Memorandum.
6. Official Duty Station: The official location of an employee's position of record as determined under 5 CFR §531.605. Also referred to as the "official worksite."

7. Remote Work: An arrangement under which an employee is scheduled to perform work within or outside the local commuting area of an agency worksite and is not expected to report to an agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis. For a remote worker, the approved remote worksite is the employee's official duty station for pay purposes, even if that location is their home. This category of work is not considered telework and is not covered by this Memorandum.
 8. Situational Telework: A telework arrangement in which eligible employees telework without a set schedule for up to five days per pay period (e.g. telework as a result of inclement weather, personal appointment, special work assignment, or employee preference). An employee with an approved situational telework arrangement must obtain advance approval from their supervisor in order to telework on a particular day(s). Approval shall not be unreasonably withheld.
 9. Telework: A work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work.
 10. Telework Agreement: (Form DI-3457). A written agreement that outlines the terms and conditions for an employee authorized to telework, as approved by the appropriate management official. Telework agreements are mandatory for an employee's participation in the telework program. Bureaus/Offices may not alter, supplement or modify the Form DI-3457.
 11. Teleworker: An eligible employee who has completed the required telework training, has an approved telework agreement in place, and has the required work necessities (e.g., equipment, materials) to effectively perform their duties at an approved alternative worksite. Also referred to as a "telework-ready" employee.
 12. Days: The term "days" wherever used in this MOU refers to calendar days unless otherwise noted.
 13. Entry-on-duty (EOD): refers to an employee's tenure (seniority) with the Agency measuring from their most recent appointment.
- H. Teleworking employees will be permitted to work at their alternative worksite for all or a portion of a workday. Participation in the telework program will not affect an employee's tour of duty or limit the scheduling options available to them. Telework is compatible with both standard and alternative work schedules (i.e. flexible and compressed schedules).
- I. Managers may direct employees to report to the office on a pre-scheduled or pre-approved telework day when work needs require the employee's presence in the office. Advance notice of the need to report will be provided to the extent practicable. In these circumstances, the employee will be permitted to designate the day as an in-office day and reschedule the canceled telework day. Requests for rescheduled telework days in these instances will normally be granted unless work needs prohibit approval of the employee's request.

- J. Teleworkers may be required to report to their official worksite instead of the alternative worksite when necessary due to equipment malfunction or other circumstances interfering with the successful completion of work. In any unanticipated circumstances where planned telework is no longer appropriate because work or necessary equipment is unavailable, the employee may request leave or use of earned credit hours rather than report to the official worksite for the remainder of the tour-of-duty. Leave and credit hour requests will be submitted and considered consistent with existing practices, applicable policies and negotiated agreements.
- K. Telework is not a substitute for family or dependent care. Teleworking employees may not personally provide care for another while on duty and are responsible for securing appropriate care arrangements for any household members who are not able to care for themselves independently. Such arrangements may include having another caregiver in the home while the employee teleworks, provided the arrangement does not disrupt the employee's ability to telework effectively. Additionally, an employee may have a dependent present in the home provided they do not require constant supervision or care (e.g., older child or adolescent) and their presence does not disrupt the employee's ability to telework effectively.
- L. Teleworkers may be covered by the Federal Employees' Compensation Act for an on-the-job injury or occupational illness sustained while conducting official Government business at the approved alternative worksite. Employees will follow the same policies and procedures for reporting on-the-job injuries or illnesses sustained at the official worksite. Supervisors will provide information about reporting procedures upon approval of a telework agreement.
- M. Because telework potentially reduces the need for office space, employees participating in Core Telework may be asked to give up a personal workstation in favor of a shared workstation or hoteling arrangement. The Agency will provide the Union with advance notice and an opportunity to bargain over any proposal to implement hoteling or shared workstations. Employees will not be required to release a personal workstation as a condition of telework before completion of bargaining by the Parties.

Section 2 Eligibility

- A. An employee requesting to telework must meet the requirements of this Memorandum with respect to their position, work assignments and personal eligibility, and must have an alternative worksite that satisfies the basic requirements. Employees who satisfy these conditions may request telework and their requests may not be unreasonably denied. Furthermore, supervisors evaluating an employee's request for telework will consider the employee's history of successful performance while teleworking, if any.
- B. Position Suitability A position is suitable for telework if there are assigned duties that can be performed successfully at an alternative worksite. Generally, suitable duties include quantifiable, project-oriented, or other portable tasks that can be performed without access to the office (or technology or equipment located only in the office) and with limited need for access to classified information.
1. A position is not suitable for core telework if it requires the following duties on a daily (every workday) basis:
 - (a) Direct handling of classified materials determined to be inappropriate for removal from the Agency office environment.
 - (b) Onsite activity that cannot be handled at an alternative worksite such as face-to-face personal contacts; intake or distribution of mail; hands-on contact with machinery, equipment, vehicles, or facilities; law enforcement.
 2. A position normally unsuitable for Core Telework because of the above daily duties may be deemed eligible for Situational Telework when the employee has suitable work available such as reading, drafting, or analyzing documents, reports and correspondence, or other portable work available and capable of being completed successfully at the alternative worksite, and approval would not jeopardize completion of required onsite duties nor unduly burden others working in the office.
- C. Employee Eligibility An employee with suitable work is eligible for telework if personally able to perform successfully at an alternative worksite. Employees eligible for telework display dependability, responsibility, and conscientiousness; the ability to work independently and without close supervision; self-motivation and self-discipline; and the ability to prioritize work and manage time wisely. An employee with a fully successful performance rating will be deemed eligible absent disqualifying circumstances rendering them ineligible as set forth in Section 2D.
- D. Employee Ineligibility Employees are ineligible for telework if

1. Consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 6502(a)(2), the employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five days in a calendar year (and the discipline remains filed in the employee's OPF), or has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of the Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing Federal Government duties. For the purposes of this provision, "officially disciplined" means any discipline that is recorded in the employee's OPF.
 2. The employee conduct has resulted in an official disciplinary action taken against them (e.g., written reprimand, suspension, removal, reduction in grade/pay) for misconduct that implicates the integrity of the telework program. Disciplined employees may remain ineligible to telework for a maximum of one year from the effective date of the official disciplinary action. Approval of telework will not be used as a substitute for disciplinary action.
 3. The employee has received an annual performance rating of less than Fully Successful or been notified in writing of less than fully successful performance that will lead to placement on a performance improvement plan (i.e., a Notice of Opportunity to Demonstrate Acceptable Performance). In such cases, the employee will be deemed eligible for telework when issued an official rating of Fully Successful or above, or when the supervisor otherwise determines the employee to be eligible.
 4. An employee initially deemed eligible and approved for telework may be suspended from telework participation if they become subject to the above provisions, for such time as the disqualifying conditions continue. The Agency will provide employees suspended from telework with advance notice sufficient to make arrangements needed to facilitate a return to the office.
- E. Alternative Worksite Requirements An eligible employee with suitable work must have an adequate worksite to be approved for telework. A qualifying worksite includes utilities necessary to complete the work such as electricity, telephone service, and internet connectivity, provided at the employee's own expense. Furthermore, the work environment must be generally free from conditions that would disrupt the employee's ability to work. Employees must also ensure privacy and security appropriate for the nature of their work assignments.
- F. Telework agreements will be reviewed for continued suitability and eligibility on an annual basis, and when an employee changes positions or job duties. A change in the employee's assigned permanent supervisor will require a new agreement but will not constitute grounds for terminating or modifying the employee's telework participation or schedule.

Section 3 Management/Supervisory Responsibilities

- A. Supervisors are responsible for acting on employee telework requests within a reasonable timeframe, to include prompt communication of approval or denial, provision of required training, and completion of a telework agreement. Managers will inform new employees of their telework eligibility within 60 days of starting the job.
- B. Supervisors denying a request for telework will provide a reason for the denial in writing to the employee.
- C. Upon approving a telework agreement, supervisors will communicate expectations to the employee regarding methods of communication (e.g., customer service, time frames for returning phone calls, use of email communications), meeting attendance, duty hours, leave requests, and procedures for requesting situational and unscheduled telework. Expectations will be uniformly applied to teleworking and non-teleworking employees.
- D. The employee-supervisor relationship will not be affected by an employee's participation in telework. Supervisors will retain the same authority over teleworking employees as applicable to non-teleworking employees and will not treat teleworking employees differently because of participation in the program. Specifically, supervisors must treat teleworking employees the same as non-teleworking employees with respect to performance appraisals, work assignments and requirements, awards and recognition, promotions, retention, and other employment matters involving management decisions or discretion.
- E. The Agency has determined that managers are responsible for actively supporting telework and working cooperatively through minor problems or obstacles that may occur.
- F. Supervisors may require a new telework agreement from a teleworker on an annual basis, when the permanent supervisory relationship is newly established, when an employee is assigned to a new position, or when operational needs require a change in teleworker arrangements. A change in supervisor alone will not constitute reasons to alter an employee's telework arrangement. Should circumstances require adjustments in teleworking arrangements among employees (e.g., office coverage needs), or conflicts between employee requests arise (e.g., request for same telework day when not all requests can be granted due to office coverage), employee requests will be granted in order of seniority based on Agency entry-on-duty date (EOD), with the most senior employee's request granted first and so on. Employees are encouraged to work things out among themselves where appropriate. The Agency will provide at least 30 days' notice to implement management-directed changes in telework schedules or arrangements.

- G. Ensuring employees protect and secure agency records and sensitive information consistent with established DOI policies.
- H. Ensuring adequate worksite office coverage during business hours so that mission operations continue to be carried out efficiently and effectively.

Section 4

Employee Responsibilities

Teleworking employees are responsible for:

- A. Securing approval of their telework agreement and completing required telework training prior to teleworking, except as provided in Section 1 E.
- B. Providing the same level of support, availability, accessibility to customers, coworkers, and supervisor as if working at the official worksite. This includes, but is not limited to, meeting individual work requirements, participating in staff meetings, participating in video conferencing, working assigned duty hours, and responding to phone calls, email, instant messaging chats, and voicemail in a timely manner.
- C. Complying with their approved telework agreement and adhering to applicable Departmental policies while working at the alternative worksite. These policies include but are not limited to: conduct and ethics laws and regulations; Internet Use policy; Time and Attendance; and Records Management.
- D. Obtaining advance approval from their supervisor for each instance of telework when teleworking under a Situational agreement.
- E. Accurately coding their timesheet to reflect the hours teleworked.
- F. Teleworking, if they have a telework agreement in place and are required to do so by the supervisor, when the employee is subject to an investigation or other administrative action that requires the employee to be taken out of the workplace.
- G. Teleworking when prevented from safely traveling to or performing work at the official worksite due to inclement weather or other emergency condition (e.g., building fire at the official worksite, pandemic) if the telework site is not affected by the same weather or emergency condition. This includes the responsibility for preparing and planning ahead, including taking necessary work equipment (e.g., laptop) to the alternative worksite, when severe weather or other emergency situations are anticipated.

- H. Properly securing and protecting Government-Furnished Equipment (GFE) and sensitive information in compliance with Departmental guidance.
- I. Ensuring the alternative worksite is safe, free from hazards, and provides the appropriate environment, utilities and services required for teleworking as described in Section 2E, at their own expense.
- J. Ensuring appropriate arrangements for the care of household members while teleworking, as needed.

Section 5

Policy: Telework is an effective strategy for mission accomplishment, ensuring COOP in a crisis, and recruiting and retaining valued talent. It is the policy of the DOI to promote telework that does not diminish employee performance or agency operations, or adversely affect the ability of the Department to achieve its mission. Employees do not have a presumptive right to telework. An employee's participation in the telework program is voluntary and must only be approved when it is deemed to be in the best interest of the agency.

There are two types of telework arrangements available at the Department:

- Core Telework
- Situational Telework

Employees under Core Telework arrangement must have an approved telework agreement in place in order to participate in telework. Once the telework agreement is finalized, employees will be considered telework-ready. An employee approved to telework must physically report to their official duty station at least two full workdays per bi-weekly pay period, except for rare circumstances or as a reasonable accommodation.

Section 6 Supplies, Equipment, Furniture

- A. Equipping for Telework. To the extent permitted by the terms of this MOU and Bureau/Office policies and procedures, Bureaus/Offices will provide the equipment and supplies the supervisor determines necessary for the employee to telework from the approved alternative worksite. The equipment and supplies should be deemed necessary for the performance of the employee's assigned duties, reasonably available, cost effective, and subject to availability of funding. The Bureau/Office agrees to service and maintain any GFE issued to the teleworker.

- B. Notwithstanding Section 5A, employees approved for Core telework will be issued a laptop for their use while teleworking if their regular duties in the office require assignment of a computer. Similarly, the Agency will provide printers for employees approved for Core telework for use at their alternative worksite if their normal duties in the office require assignment of a personal printer (e.g., for printing confidential or sensitive documents).
- C. Employees whose duties require handling of sensitive documents will not automatically be disqualified from participation in the telework program, including Core telework, if documents needed at the telework site can be secured in a locking file cabinet or document case. The Agency may provide a cabinet or case to employees to the extent that funding permits.
- D. Costs Associated with Telework at Home. Work-at-home telework may increase certain costs to the employee. The Department assumes no responsibility for any costs associated with the employee's home residence, including home maintenance, insurance, utilities, internet access, and telecommunication costs. Should government or Departmental policy change to authorize subsidy of employee telework costs, the Parties agree to reopen the MOU to address these issues.
- E. Tour of Duty While Teleworking. Employees who telework must perform official duties at their alternative worksite during their approved, scheduled tour of duty. Work schedules and hours of duty may be changed with the supervisor's approval and in accordance with established Bureau/Office procedures. Telework is compatible with standard and alternative work schedules (e.g., flexible and compressed work schedules). Bureaus/Offices may not establish implementing procedures that prohibit a teleworker from having an alternative work schedule.

Telework During Emergency or Closure Situations. In the event the official worksite is closed due to an inclement weather event or other emergency condition (e.g., building fire, pandemic), telework-ready employees must telework each regularly scheduled workday during the emergency situation. As such, telework-ready employees must prepare to telework when a weather or emergency event is forecasted or anticipated (e.g., a major snowstorm is predicted) by bringing home any necessary equipment (e.g., laptop computer) and work files. To the extent that an employee is unable to telework because they were able to but failed to make necessary preparations for reasonably anticipated conditions, the employee must use appropriate paid leave, paid time off, or leave without pay. In the event the employee is prevented from safely teleworking from the approved alternative worksite due to conditions related to the emergency (e.g., weather-related damage that makes occupying the employee's home telework site unsafe, loss of electrical power or internet service, evacuation by local authorities), the supervisor may, at their discretion, grant weather and safety leave consistent with Departmental policy and applicable collective bargaining agreements.

(1) Unscheduled Telework Operating Status Announcements. When the Office of Personnel Management, a local Federal Executive Board, or DOI local operating unit head announces that employees have the option for unscheduled telework or unscheduled leave, telework-ready employees may telework from their approved alternative worksite. When the option is announced, an employee must notify their supervisor of the intent to use unscheduled telework. Employees who are approved to perform unscheduled telework must have the necessary equipment and have a sufficient amount of work to complete in order to telework from the approved alternative worksite. If the employee does not have enough work, they must report to the official worksite or request appropriate unscheduled leave to account for hours not worked.

(2) Dependent Care Arrangements During Weather or Emergency Events. As provided for in Section 1K, employees cannot personally care for a dependent while teleworking and are responsible for securing appropriate arrangements for any dependents who are unable to care for themselves. If a teleworker cannot arrange for appropriate dependent care because of the weather or emergency event affecting the official worksite, any time spent providing personal care to dependents cannot be considered hours of work. The employee is expected to accurately account for work and non-work hours during their tour of duty and to take the appropriate leave (paid or unpaid) to account for any time spent away from normal work-related duties during their scheduled tour of duty. Weather and safety leave may not be granted for this purpose.

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT (MOU)

This agreement is entered into between the Department of Interior, Interior Business Center (Agency) and the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE), Local 1114 (Union), collectively referred to as “the parties.” Consistent with guidance from the Biden Administration and the Office of Management and Budget (M-23-15, Measuring, Monitoring, and Improving Organizational Health and Organizational Performance in the Context of Evolving Agency Work Environments), the Department is taking steps to execute a government-wide effort to increase meaningful in-person work and engagement. As such the parties agree to the following:

1. An all-employee communication will be sent in April 2024 notifying Bargaining Unit Employees (BUEs) of the upcoming 50% in office requirement.
2. The IBC Office of the Director will send impacted BUEs a specific notification in June 2024 including the specific core day requirements. FAQs will be provided to all IBC employees to include supervisors & managers.
3. Impacted BUEs with a telework agreement that does not meet the requirement to be in the office 50% of the time will be canceled effective August 10, 2024. The 50% in office requirement is calculated by hours in the office, so full-time employees would have to be in the office 40 hours during a pay period.
4. Holidays and scheduled leave will not negatively impact employees. There is no requirement to adjust in-office days for employees who are on approved leave during one of their normally scheduled in-office days or if a holiday falls on a scheduled in-office day.
5. BUEs can work with supervisors to determine how they will meet the 40-hour requirement, considering the requirement for at least one core day per pay period.
6. BUEs who are impacted by the 50% in office requirement will need to modify their telework agreement and provide to their supervisor by August 2, 2024, for implementation starting August 11, 2024. Instructions on how to update telework agreements can be found here: Modifying a DOI Telework Agreement.docx \(sharepoint.com\)
7. Once the supervisor approves, the employee will upload a copy in DOI Talent.
8. The supervisor will send a signed copy of the telework agreement to the Human Capital Strategy Office by August 2, 2024, for implementation on August 11, 2024, at telework@ibc.doi.gov.
9. No changes will be made at this time to Article 18, Telework, of the Collective Bargaining Agreement.
10. Telework schedules that are part of an approved reasonable accommodation are outside the scope of this MOU.
11. An all-employee communication will be sent in July 2024 to serve as a reminder of the above mentioned requirements. The draft communication will be provided to the Union for input prior to release.
12. The parties agree this MOU will remain in effect unless/until the parties reach any other signed agreement on the procedures to effect details that may conflict with this MOU.

ARTICLE 17
HOURS OF WORK, SCHEDULING, AND DUTY LOCATION

SECTION 1. Hours of work, work schedules, and work locations will be managed in accordance with both the USGS Attendance and Leave Handbook, and the current DOI Telework Program (Personnel Bulletin 21-07 (doi.gov)).

SECTION 2. All NGTOC Employees are entitled to overtime pay in accordance with the following:

- Overtime for non-exempt Employees is covered by the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA).
 - Department of Labor - Handy Reference Guide to the Fair Labor Standards Act: <https://www.dol.gov/whd/regs/compliance/hrq.htm>
 - Fact Sheet: How to Compute FLSA Overtime Pay: <https://www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/pay-leave/pay-administration/fact-sheets/how-to-compute-flsa-overtime-pay/>
- Overtime for exempt Employees is covered by 5 U.S.C. 5542.
 - Fact Sheet: Overtime Pay, Title 5: <https://www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/pay-leave/pay-administration/fact-sheets/overtime-pay-title-5/>
- USGS requires that these hours be approved in advance by the appropriate Management official.
- When management authorizes overtime, qualified Employees who volunteer shall be assigned overtime before other qualified staff are assigned overtime. If no employees volunteer, overtime shall be assigned fairly and equitably among qualified Employees on a rotating basis.
- Overtime shall be assigned fairly and equitably among qualified Employees on a rotating basis.
- Overtime shall not be distributed or withheld as a reward or a penalty.

All Bargaining Unit positions will be determined to be FLSA “exempt” or “non-exempt” at the time the position is classified. When classification actions are performed and results in a change to the FLSA determination, the changed FLSA determination for the affected Bargaining Unit Employees will be made available to the Employees and the Union within ten business days of the Employer being notified by the Human Resources Office of the classification decision.

SECTION 3. The Parties agree that telework is not an employee entitlement. Decisions on Telework will be consistent and transparent, in accordance with DOI Telework Program (currently Personal Bulletin No: 21-07).

- a. The Parties also agree that Employees sharing spaces will be eligible for consideration for situational telework or core telework, provided that the Employees in the shared spaces and their supervisors agree to coordinate days on-site each pay period amongst themselves.

Teleworkers are required to physically report to the official duty station at least two full workdays per bi-weekly period, except for rare circumstances or as a reasonable accommodation.

Telework is defined as “a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work”.

There are two types of telework: Core telework and situational telework.

Core telework is defined as “a telework arrangement in which eligible employees telework from an approved alternative worksite on a recurring, scheduled basis – i.e., fixed day(s) per week or pay period.’

Situational telework is defines as “A telework arrangement in which eligible employees telework without a set schedule (e.g., telework as a result of inclement weather, personal appointment, special work assignment). An employee with an approved situational telework arrangement must obtain advance approval from their supervisor in order to telework on a particular day(s)’.

An employee with a situational telework agreement should generally plan their telework/in-office schedule to work a minimum of 2 days in the office, even if they take leave during the pay period, because a situational telework arrangement allows for flexible scheduling of the two in-office days required each pay period. There is flexibility in the telework policy for a Supervisor to waive the two-day reporting requirement, but it should not be the norm. The Parties agree that Supervisors that have situational teleworking employees have employees provide their projected telework schedule each pay period so that the supervisor knows when the employees plan to be in the office, can plan workplace safety matters, and meet with the employee, etc. The employee then would seek supervisory approval when there is a deviation from the planned schedule within the current pay period.

A Supervisor can also allow their staff the flexibility to manage their in-office days each pay period. In these instances, the Supervisor should ensure their employees understand they must work two days in the office each pay period.

Leave during situational telework:

If an employee takes leave on a scheduled in-office day, the employee must reschedule their office days during that pay period. If the employee takes leave for the entire pay period, the two-day in office requirement is not necessary.

Leave during core telework:

If an employee takes leave on a scheduled in-office day, they are not required to reschedule the in-office day.

It is the Employer's discretion to approve/disapprove telework. Denial of situational telework in an individual pay period, denial of a situational or core telework agreement, or termination of a situational or core telework agreement by the Supervisor shall be based on business needs, conduct or performance, and not personal reasons. If the first line supervisor denies a telework agreement, the Parties agree that the employee/Union have the right to file a grievance.

- b. In particular, related to reasonable accommodations (In Telework bulletin 21-07 Section 7) telework may be used to allow Employees to recuperate from a work or non-work related medical condition. This includes medical processes related to transgender transition, or to provide reasonable accommodation for Employees with disabilities. This includes Employees who have partially recovered from work-related or other injuries/illnesses and who can perform work on a full or part-time basis from an alternative workplace.

SECTION 4. Weather and Safety Leave

NGTOC agrees to have a reconsideration process if Weather and Safety Leave (per DOI Personnel Bulletin 18-04) is denied by 1st line supervisor. If a telework ready employee is denied Weather and Safety Leave from the 1st Line Supervisor and the employee feels he/she was not able to reasonably anticipate conditions and did not have the work or equipment needed, the employee must submit their request for reconsideration to the 2nd line Supervisor. The request must be in writing, via email, and document the events and factors preventing the employee from reasonably anticipating the condition. The request must be within 5 business days of the day of the event. The 2nd line Supervisor, or his/her designee, will review the documentation and confer with Senior Staff, as appropriate, who are in the same location as the employee,

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT (MOU)

This agreement is entered into between the Department of Interior, Office of the Chief Information Officer, (Agency) and the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE), Local 1114 (Union), collectively referred to as “the parties.” Consistent with guidance from the Biden Administration and the Office of Management and Budget (M-23-15, Measuring, Monitoring, and Improving Organizational Health and Organizational Performance in the Context of Evolving Agency Work Environments), the Department is taking steps to execute a government-wide effort to increase meaningful in-person work and engagement. As such the parties agree to the following:

1. An all-employee communication will be sent in May 2024 notifying Bargaining Unit Employees (BUEs) of the upcoming 50% in office requirement.
2. OCIO immediate supervisors will send impacted BUEs a specific notification in May 2024 including the specific core day requirements.
3. Monday of week 1 in each pay period is the core in-office day.
4. Core hours are between 10am to 2pm.
5. Impacted BUEs with a telework agreement that does not meet the requirement to be in the office 50% of the time will be canceled effective July 27, 2024. The 50% in office requirement is calculated by hours in the office, so full-time employees would have to be in the office 40 hours during a pay period.
6. Holidays and scheduled leave will not negatively impact employees. There is no requirement to adjust in-office days for employees who are on approved leave during one of their normally scheduled in-office days or if a holiday falls on a scheduled in-office day.
7. BUEs can work with supervisors to determine how they will meet the 40-hour requirement, considering the requirement for at least one core day per pay period.
8. BUEs who are impacted by the 50% in office requirement, beginning in May 2024, will need to modify their telework agreement and provide to their supervisor by July 19, 2024, for implementation starting July 28, 2024. Instructions on how to update telework agreements will be provided by their supervisor via electronic mail (e-mail).
9. BUEs will upload a copy of the telework agreement to the applicable course in DOI Talent after the supervisor electronically signs the form approving the telework schedule.
10. BUEs will send a completed form to the Human Capital Branch at ocio_hcb@ios.doi.gov.
11. Telework schedules that are part of an approved reasonable accommodation are outside the scope of this MOU.
12. An all-employee communication will be sent in June 2024 to serve as a reminder of the above-mentioned requirements. The draft communication will be provided to the Union for input prior to release.
13. The parties agree this MOU will remain in effect unless/until the parties reach any other signed agreement on the procedures to effect details that may conflict with this MOU.

January 2024 Submission

TREASURY WORK ENVIRONMENT IMPLEMENTATION DATA CALL RESPONSE

The work environment plans Treasury submitted this summer prioritize mission delivery and workforce engagement. These plans were developed using an internal study done in summer 2023 that examined the impact of telework on Treasury's recruitment, retention, and organizational performance.

Since we implemented the plans, we have seen steady increases in the percentage of in-person hours worked. According to the most recent data, 51 percent of hours are performed in-person by Treasury employees across the Department looking at both nationwide data and in the National Capital Region (NCR). In our headquarters component, Departmental Offices, 71 percent of hours are performed in-person.

(1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

Treasury's plans have been successful in maintaining the appropriate balance of in-person work for Treasury's bureaus and their varied missions. However, we understand there is a particular emphasis from OMB on increasing the percentage of in-person hours performed by employees who have telework agreements in the NCR.

NCR employees represent only 11 percent of total Treasury employees and the total percentage of employees who telework within the NCR represent just 7 percent of Treasury's workforce, but the in-person presence of these employees is lower than Treasury's overall percentages. In order to increase the hours these employees are spending in the office, consistent with OMB's directive, Treasury will modify its posture to require employees who telework to spend at least 50 percent of their time in the office.

This policy change will be announced by the Deputy Secretary the first week in February. He will direct bureaus to establish a baseline that their non-remote personnel with telework agreements work in-person at least 50 percent of the time each month to go into effect no later than May 5th, the start of pay period nine. Allowing bureaus sufficient time to implement this new baseline is essential given that many are in active labor negotiations and that policy revisions must be negotiated under collective bargaining agreements.

Altering Treasury's work environment plan in this way would be greatly facilitated by an OMB directive to agencies that mandates establishing a floor of 50 percent in-office work for telework employees. We have already seen a significant increase in EEO complaints and requests for reasonable accommodations as we have implemented our work environment plans.

(2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

All bureaus are expected to negotiate their policy revisions if required by their collective-bargaining agreements. Further, Treasury recognizes that the in-person work baseline might not be appropriate for every office, employee, or group of employees. Accordingly, the Department will establish a practice of granting bureaus the ability to submit an exception, consistent with the practices established at the Department of Justice and the Department of State, to this new requirement. Treasury will grant exceptions on a case-by-case basis. Exceptions will be granted focused on criteria including, but not limited to, the retention of specialized workers, recruitment of specialized or hard-to-fill positions, office-space/budget limitations, and evidence of potential significant negative impacts on mission delivery or pre-Covid precedent.

(3) Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

Over the next week, the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Management, in close coordination with the Deputy Secretary and Chief of Staff, will finalize the criteria for granting exceptions to the telework policy and will communicate the process to Treasury Bureau leadership.

In parallel, Treasury will continue its process of monitoring compliance with this new guidance through regularly reviewing attendance reporting and other data. We will also continue using our organizational health and performance frameworks to monitor impacts on mission delivery.

Telework Policy(s)

Human Capital Issuance System

Chapter: 301

Transmittal Number: TN-18-001

Date: April 6, 2018

Office: Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Human Resources and Chief Human Capital Officer/ Office of Human Capital Strategic Management

Subject: Treasury Telework Program

1. PURPOSE. This establishes the Department of the Treasury's policy for telework and authorizes the use of telework by the Department of the Treasury's bureaus and offices. This policy permits employees to work at pre-approved locations, other than the official duty station, to accommodate the needs of the agency.

An effective telework program will: (1) meet mission and operational needs; (2) improve the Department's ability to recruit and retain employees- including those with disabilities, in a highly-competitive labor market; (3) achieve management efficiencies and cost savings by reducing real property and associated energy costs needed for office space (e.g., through the use of hoteling); (4) support employee work-life balance and increase employee morale and productivity; (5) contribute to the continuance of the Department's essential functions during any operational disruption; (6) promote the health and safety of employees while providing an alternative work arrangement during an emergency event or major disruption, such as severe weather, a public health emergency, or other threat; and (7) reduce traffic congestion, energy consumption, and air pollution.

2. SCOPE. The provisions of this policy apply to all Treasury employees (as defined in 5 U.S.C. § 2105). Subject to the limitations described in the law, employees eligible to telework (routine, situational, or full-time) may do so regardless of the geographic location where they work (i.e., domestic, overseas). Requests to telework as an accommodation for a disability are governed by the Rehabilitation Act¹ and are subject to different standards and requirements than requests to telework for other reasons. This policy covers the Offices of Inspector General within the Department, but shall not be construed to interfere with the authorities of the Treasury Inspector General, the Inspector General for Tax Administration, or the Special Inspector General for TARP.

3. EFFECTIVE DATE. This policy is effective as of the date of issuance.
4. CANCELLATION. Treasury HCIS, TN-12-004 dated April 19, 2012, is superseded.

6. BACKGROUND. Following a decade of incremental legislative steps, the Act codified a comprehensive framework for the establishment of telework programs by federal agencies. Generally, the conditions for and frequency of telework depend upon the mission of the agency and the roles and responsibilities of a particular bureau and its employees.
7. POLICY. Treasury policy is to provide employees the opportunity to participate in telework when practical and in support of the Department's mission while promoting the health and safety of personnel in the event of an emergency or disruption of normal operations. This policy permits eligible employees to work at pre-approved locations, other than the official duty station, to accommodate Treasury needs. Telework is contingent upon meeting Treasury and its bureaus business needs, including applicable security requirements. This policy shall be read in conjunction with the separately published Treasury Telework Program Supplemental Guidance, which is intended to aid in the implementation of this policy and may be periodically updated.
8. DEFINITIONS.

See Appendix A
9. RESPONSIBILITIES.
 - A. The Deputy Assistant Secretary for Human Resources and Chief Human Capital Officer (DASHR/CHCO) oversees the Treasury Telework Program through TD-12-31, Delegation of Personnel Authority to Deputy Assistant Secretary for Human Resources and Chief Human Capital Officer, as delegated from the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for Management (ASM).
 - B. The Deputy Assistant Secretary (DAS) for Information Systems and Chief Information Officer, or designee, will partner with DASHR/CHCO to provide policy, standards, guidance, and technical assistance to Treasury Department CIOs regarding information systems and services that sustain Treasury's telework program, to ensure system capacity and security in support of fulltime remote work during emergencies as well as routine or situational telework.
 - C. The Deputy Assistant Secretary (DAS) for Treasury Operations, or designee, will partner with DASHR/CHCO to provide policy, standards, guidance, and technical assistance through the Treasury Operations Executive Council to Treasury Bureau Real Property Officers and Emergency Coordinators, related to the consideration of telework in workspace planning; and enable continuance of mission essential functions prior to, during, and following emergencies and other operational disruptions (e.g., severe weather, power outages, pandemics, and regional disasters).

- D. Heads of Bureaus and the Offices of the Inspector General, the Special Inspector General for Troubled Asset Relief Program, and the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration, or their designees, as it relates to their respective bureaus and offices, shall:
- a) Ensure compliance with this issuance;
 - b) Establish a telework program and associated policy;
 - c) Appoint a bureau telework program coordinator(s) to serve as a contact and liaise with the DASHR/CHCO, where possible and appropriate, to support bureau/office missions as outlined in Section 10.H in this issuance;
- E. The Telework Managing Officer (TMO) reports to the DASHR/CHCO or designee to:
- a) Draft policy and oversee implementation related to Treasury-wide telework programs;
 - b) Recommend goals and metrics to evaluate the effectiveness of the program;
 - c) Establish data collection to evaluate program costs and cost savings, as well as quantifiable benefits associated with telework,² in accordance with DASHR/CHCO direction
 - d) perform other duties (e.g. identify training and resources, and coordinate department-wide initiatives and reports as required).
 - e) Serve as:
 - i. an advisor for agency leadership;
 - ii. a resource for managers and employees;
 - iii. a contact for OPM on Treasury-wide telework matters.
- F. The Bureau Telework Coordinator(s) shall confirm:
- a) the designation of telework eligibility for all bureau employees³ (or employee's position-optional) in HR Connect (or similar system);
 - b) that every teleworking employee has an approved telework agreement and has completed mandatory training prior to commencing telework;
 - c) the integration of telework into bureau emergency and continuity plans;
 - d) that telework hours, instances of routine and situational telework, and telework eligibility are transmitted through the bureau's time and attendance system to OPM, via the National Finance Center (NFC), and that the time and attendance codes for telework mirror the reporting requirements as outlined in 5 U.S.C. § 6506 (b)(2)(A)(iii);

² Federal Telework: Better Guidance Could Help Agencies Calculate Benefits and Costs, GAO 16-551, July 15, 2016

³ The Act requires that all employees (not just teleworkers) have a determination of eligibility for telework, and are advised of that designation. Treasury managers use the HR Connect system to record the eligibility determination where it is also visible to the employee. OPM requires the designation to be made at the individual employee level. However, bureaus may also designate their employees by position.

- e) that data collection methods are in place to evaluate program effectiveness, cost savings (e.g., real estate/lease savings), and other quantifiable benefits associated with telework;
- f) that appropriate program compliance monitoring and oversight tools and practices are in place (e.g., a telework agreement library and a means to track and record telework denials);
- g) that the bureau meets all telework reporting requirements for OPM, the Department or any other appropriate requestor;
- h) that the bureau sets annual telework goals and as part of the annual OPM Report to Congress for telework participation and other non-participation goals (e.g., real estate/lease savings and associated energy costs, travel/transit subsidy savings);
- i) that all telework program information, policies, resources and tools are readily available to every employee and manager (e.g., on bureau's intranet); and
- j) that the bureau fulfills all labor obligations at the level of recognition.

10. REQUIREMENTS.

Bureaus must establish policies, procedures and practices that encourage the ability to leverage talent Department-wide. To enhance workplace flexibilities and work-life programs consistent with mission accomplishment, to promote a workplace that attracts, empowers, and retains a productive, engaged, and balanced workforce, each Treasury bureau shall at a minimum:

- A. Establish a telework program and policy that supports its specific mission and is consistent with this policy. The Bureau telework program and policy shall address:
 - a) the requirements of the Treasury policy;
 - b) the responsibilities of the Bureau HRO or designee;
 - c) the responsibilities of the TMO and Bureau Telework Coordinator;
 - d) the responsibilities of supervisors of teleworkers, including the appropriate reasons for denying a requested telework arrangement;
 - e) the responsibilities of teleworking employees, including to maintain an acceptable level of performance, not to negatively impact the work of other members of the work group (e.g., co-workers, supervisors), and to ensure that the telework arrangement supports the accomplishment of the bureau mission;
 - f) the specific criteria governing the eligibility to participate in telework, including the requirements and limitations set forth in the Act;
 - g) the procedures employees must follow to be granted the privilege of becoming a teleworker, including all statutory and bureau mission requirements (e.g., must be telework eligible, must complete a telework agreement, must complete telework training);
 - h) the requirement that telework-ready employees perform emergency telework during operational disruptions or building closures (e.g., severe weather), including before delayed arrival and after early dismissal.⁴ Situations where management may implement emergency telework include:

- (i) an employee is temporarily prevented from regularly commuting to their official worksite (duty station) due to an emergency such as a severe weather emergency (e.g., hurricane, flood, severe heat and humidity), mass transit interruptions, or any other unique situation when the agency is closed or access to the agency facility is compromised;
 - (ii) when business resumption and/or continuity of operations plans are in place.
- i) the teleworker's and the bureau's respective responsibilities for providing support, materials, and equipment in connection with telework (e.g., laptops, printers, phone, supplies, Internet service, etc.);⁵
 - j) telework location safety considerations related to workers' compensation, information technology and cybersecurity guidelines, as outlined in OPM Telework.gov;
 - k) data collection methods for telework reporting and program effectiveness, and the identification of those responsible for the record keeping and reporting requirements for both the daily operational aspects and annual reports to OPM (e.g., the annual Status of Telework in the Federal Government Report to the Congress);
 - l) the availability of fulltime telework option as a tool to support workforce restructuring and real estate cost reductions;⁶
 - m) the option to adopt a sponsored domestic employee teleworking oversees (DETO) telework arrangement (See Appendix B), taking into account IT and security practices and whether doing so is consistent with accomplishment of bureau mission and;
 - n) any other bureau specific requirements.
- B. Determine the eligibility of all bureau employees to participate in telework based on the specific duties of the position.
- C. Communicate the telework eligibility status to every employee through HR Connect or similar system.
- D. Communicate that employees are ineligible to telework if they have been officially disciplined either for being absent without permission for more than five days in any calendar year, or for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.

⁴ All telework-ready employees must either perform scheduled or unscheduled telework during emergencies or use appropriate leave, previously earned credit hours, or previously earned comp time in accordance with bureau policies and/or collective bargaining agreements. Granting excused absence (paid administrative leave) to telework-ready employees is not appropriate unless the telework location is also inoperable due to the same emergency disrupting the government's operations (e.g. power failure due to extreme weather).

⁵ Bureaus may wish to consult with their Counsel concerning the implications of appropriations law for this subject.

⁶ For bureaus interested in developing a fulltime telework policy, guidance is available through the bureau's Telework Coordinator.

- E. Communicate if the employee's performance does not comply with the terms of the written agreement between the manager and employee, the employee may not be permitted to telework.
- F. Integrate telework into emergency and continuity plans.
- G. Designate a bureau Telework Coordinator to: (1) represent the bureau on the Treasury Telework Team; (2) ensure telework program compliance and integrity; (3) act as a resource for bureau managers and employees; and (4) meet bureau and/or Department telework data tracking and reporting requirements to Congress, OPM, Treasury CHCO, or other appropriate requesting authority.
- H. Adhere to the following minimum requirements in connection with telework eligibility and participation⁷:
 - a) minimum employee eligibility criteria includes all employees, except those identified as ineligible under the Act, and all positions conducive to teleworking (i.e., positions that do not require daily handling of sensitive materials, performance of onsite activities that cannot be handled at an alternate worksite);
 - b) participation in telework is voluntary,⁸ but bureaus must ensure that every employee (even if they do not telework) has and maintains a designation of telework eligibility in HR Connect (or other similar system);
 - c) notify new hires of their telework eligibility within the required timeframe;
 - d) employee participation in telework may not alter the terms and conditions of employment, including an employee's base salary, benefits, individual rights or obligations;
 - e) matters regarding pay, such as a change in official duty station, overtime, leave, and travel entitlements, are administered in accordance with current law, rule, and regulations;
 - f) telework may not affect other conditions of employment (e.g., hours of work), specified in a written telework agreement;
 - g) telework may not excuse an employee from performing obligations such as official travel, attending face-to-face meetings and communicating with supervisors, colleagues and customers;

⁷ For additional guidance on participation and eligibility, refer to OPM's A Guide to Telework in the Federal Government

⁸ "Although entering into the telework arrangement is voluntary, once the employee is under such an arrangement, he or she may be required to telework outside of his or her normal telework schedule in the case of a temporary emergency situation if that understanding has been clearly communicated by the agency to the teleworking employee in the written telework agreement." This may also apply for those "circumstances when the position and/or individual has 1) been pre-identified as performing critical essential functions, 2) is an identified member of the Continuity Team or Emergency Relocation Group (ERG), and 3) has committed to continuing performance of their duties following any disruption that affects normal business operations, as possible." (OPM, Guide to Telework in the Federal Government, April 2011)

- h) consideration will be given to suspending, modifying or terminating the telework agreement of an employee who fails to comply with the terms of the telework agreement or whose performance diminishes;
- i) requests to telework as an accommodation for a disability are governed by the Rehabilitation Act⁹ and are subject to different standards and requirements than requests to telework for other reasons. Managers and supervisors must therefore ensure they are aware when a telework request is associated with a request for accommodation. A manager or supervisor that receives a request to telework as an accommodation for a disability will consult with the bureau's reasonable accommodation manager and/or counsel to fully understand managers' and supervisors' responsibilities under the law, including the requirement to engage in an interactive process with the requester.

J. Bureaus must ensure that appropriate practices are in place to monitor telework compliance. For more information refer to the Treasury Telework Program, Supplemental Guidance which is associated with this issuance.

K. Adhere to the following requirements in connection with telework agreements:

- a) Telework agreements are required for an employee to telework to any extent, including situationally and routinely;
- b) The terms and conditions under which an employee will perform work while teleworking must be clearly set forth by the bureau in a written telework agreement that is signed by the supervisor and employee;
- c) Managers are required to respond within 20 business days to employee requests to participate in telework, unless bureau policy requires a shorter response time;
- d) The requirements outlined in the telework agreement must align with the Act, this policy, and any applicable collective bargaining agreements, and may be supplemented to satisfy any additional bureau criteria.

All telework agreements must include the following information:

- a) Telework Location: Provide the details of the telework location options permitted by bureau policy (e.g., at home, satellite office or other approved location), including the address, and contact information.
- b) Telework Type: Routine or Situational. Bureaus who use different terminology for telework types must be able to equate them to one of the above;
- c) Telework Schedule:
 - i. For routine fixed schedule, identify specific hours and/or days per week the employee will work at the alternative work location;
 - ii. For routine flexible schedule, describe the arrangement including a timeline of when the employee must advise the manager in advance of the planned specific hours/days of telework;

⁹ Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, 29 U.S.C. § 791 et seq.

- iii. The employee must report to the official Post of Duty (POD) for a full tour of duty at least twice a pay period, except in the case of a full-time telework arrangement;
- iv. Use of satellite offices does not replace the requirement of the employee to report to the official POD at least twice a pay period;
- v. Routine full-time telework (including temporary or hardship arrangements), requires a personnel action to change the employees pay and approved telework site as the official POD, to occur upon entering the agreement but no later than 120 days of the change in schedule or relocation.
- vi. The arrangement stated above may have consequences for locality pay, local taxes, benefits, travel, and reduction-in-force procedures for the employees of those bureaus who choose to adopt this telework option to include temporary or hardship arrangements.
- vii. Bureaus shall determine, what if any, core hours are required for employees with a full-time telework schedule;
- viii. For situational telework, employees must request approval for each instance of telework in advance.

d) Emergency Telework Requirements: Clearly explain the employee’s obligation to telework in the event of severe weather or other occurrence that disrupts normal business operations (e.g., Continuity Plan activation¹⁰ or pandemic situation) and include any procedures that must be followed. In most cases, telework-ready employees must perform emergency telework, or use previously earned comp time, credit hours or leave in accordance with bureau policies and/or collective bargaining agreements. Use of excused absence (paid administrative leave) for telework-ready employees is disfavored and will be granted only in exceptional circumstances and on a case by case basis, for example:

- i. A fire breaks out in the immediate office of an employee. The employee is immediately evacuated from his/her POD and does not have time to gather his/her laptop and work files to finish teleworking from home. Normally the telework ready employee completes their day at the telework site. In this case, if the manager determines there is no other work the employee can do without a laptop, the employee could be approved for excused absence.
- ii. The employee’s POD is closed due to a severe weather event. The teleworking employee begins to telework and his/her laptop fails. IT cannot resolve the problem remotely, and the manager determines there is no other work for the employee. The employee cannot be directed into the POD and could be approved for excused absence.

¹⁰ “During any period that an executive agency is operating under a continuity of operations plan, that plan shall supersede any telework policy.” 5 U.S.C. § 6504(d)(2).

Washington D.C. based employees will follow OPM guidance found in Washington, D.C. Area Dismissal and Closure Procedures.¹¹

- e) Equipment and Supplies: Identify the office equipment, information technology equipment and supplies required for the employee to telework and identify the party responsible for each;¹²
- f) Safety Checklist: Include a safety checklist signed by the employee, ensuring that his or her home/workspace is safe and in compliance with bureau safety requirements/guide lines. Upon appropriate notice the bureau/office manager or designee has the right to inspect the alternative worksite and equipment to be used by the employee to ensure that the proposed location is safe, all security and records management requirements are met, and all equipment is installed and performing properly;
- g) Communication: Explain the employee's responsibility to be available and to maintain timely communication, as needed, with his supervisor, co-workers and/or customers while teleworking, and identify the communication methods required;
- h) Restrictions: Identify any restrictions while working at the telework location such as he/she cannot work at home with sensitive material or PII, and include a liability statement per bureau policy;
- i) Security, Privacy and Records Management: Include an acknowledgement that the employee will comply with all current information security, privacy and record keeping measures including loss/compromise reporting requirements and any associated bureau policy. Also, include a Privacy Act Notice at the bottom of the telework agreement form identifying the authority for collection and routine use of personal information, as well as the consequences of declining to provide the information.
- j) Recording Telework Hours: Include the requirement that the employee will accurately code all telework time through the bureau's timekeeping system. Bureau telework codes must mirror the reporting requirements outlined in Section 6506(b)(2)(A)(iii) of the Act. A Teleworker may also be a mobile (field) worker, but not concurrently, and will record telework hours and mobile work hours separately in the timekeeping system;
- k) Employee Certification: Include a certification that the employee meets and will maintain the requirements for eligibility to telework, including that he or she has completed any mandatory training prior to commencing telework; the employee will provide the manager with a training completion certificate;
- l) Telework Denials: Include the option for the supervisor to deny the employee's request for telework participation, and provide space for the supervisor to state the business justification in the event he or she does so. The bureau telework coordinator must track all telework denials.

¹¹ OPM's "telework.gov" website features the latest version of the Washington, D.C., Area Dismissal and Closure Procedures

¹² In the case of telework provided as a reasonable accommodation, the reasonable accommodation process will determine what equipment is provided incident to it.

L. Adhere to the following requirements in connection with the denial, termination or suspension of an employee's participation in telework:

- a) A telework agreement between an employee and supervisor may be terminated at the discretion of the supervisor or employee, with proper coordination;
- b) Management decisions to deny, terminate or suspend an employee's participation in telework must be based on the employee not meeting or maintaining bureau telework eligibility requirements and made in accordance with the bureau telework policy and any applicable collective bargaining agreement;
- c) Denials, terminations and suspensions must be provided to the employee in a timely manner and in a writing that includes the reason(s) for the action. A copy of the action must be provided to the bureau telework coordinator. Bureaus are also encouraged to work closely with their labor relations specialists, as applicable;
- d) While employees have the right to withdraw from participating in telework, the employee will provide as much advance notice as is practicable to facilitate the processing of personnel actions and the setting up of a work space, where necessary. Employees retain their "telework-ready" status until the first day of the pay period following the one during which they advise their supervisor of their withdrawal;
- e) Make the established grievance process available to employees who are denied, or have limitations placed on, the opportunity to participate in telework. For employees covered by a collective bargaining agreement that does not exclude telework from the scope of its grievance procedure, the negotiated grievance procedure will govern;
- f) Employees may also file an EEO complaint if they are denied telework and believe it is due to race, color, sex, national origin, religion, protected genetic information, age, disability, or reprisal for prior protected EEO activity.

11. ACCOUNTABILITY. The Department may periodically review a bureau's telework policies, records, and actions to ensure compliance with applicable telework regulations and policies.

12. REPORTING. Bureaus must report on the status of telework programs to DASHR/CHCO as part of routine program management, as required by OPM in preparation for the annual Status of Telework in the Federal Government: Report to Congress, or in response to inquiries from other external entities. Data elements requested may vary. At a minimum, bureaus shall be prepared to provide¹³ DASHR/CHCO:

- i. the total number of employees in the agency;
- ii. the number of employees who are designated as eligible to telework;

¹³ Starting in FY 2017, OPM will require federal agencies to align their time and attendance systems to automatically transmit to OPM (via NFC) telework hours and telework instances for the routine and situational categories, during routine payroll transmissions. This will greatly reduce the burden on agencies to extract telework participation data.

- iii. the number of employees who have an approved telework agreement on file;
- iv. the number and percentage of eligible employees who are actively teleworking;
- v. a count of teleworking employees broken out by the following categories:
 - i) 3 or more days per pay period;
 - ii) 1-2 days per pay period;
 - iii) once a month; or
 - iv) on an occasional, or situational basis
- vi. a list of full-time teleworkers, post of duty, emergency post of duty, and POD locality pay;
 - e.g. John Teleworker, WDC headquarters-duty station/ home/telework location, emergency post of duty building code 12345 within 50 miles of telework location, locality pay, certification for all telework requirements met, and the name of the authorizing official on a bi-annual basis (January and July);
- vii. an assessment of the costs/benefits of telework, taking into account reduced energy use, reduced/avoided real estate costs, commuter cost savings, recruitment and retention, performance, productivity, and employee attitudes and opinions regarding telework; and
- viii. a list of employees who are performing telework as a sponsored DETO, including the approved telework location, home bureau/office, and start and end date of the arrangement.

13. OFFICE OF PRIMARY RESPONSIBILITY. Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Human Resources/Chief Human Capital Officer

Ronald D. Sanchez

Ronald D. Sanchez
 Acting, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Human Resources and Chief Human Capital Officer

Appendix A

DEFINITIONS

- A. Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO): a U.S. government employee assigned to a domestic position, but teleworking from an overseas location. A DETO may be sponsored or independent. A sponsored DETO is on the U.S. Government (USG) orders of a spouse or partner. An independent DETO is not on the orders of a USG spouse or partner. Note: For the purpose of this policy, only sponsored DETO's will be accepted.
- B. Emergency Events: circumstances resulting in the closure or inaccessibility of Treasury or a bureau.
- C. Emergency Telework: the direction to telework ready employees that they must telework temporarily during an emergency.
- D. Full-Time Telework: a telework arrangement under which the employee teleworks full-time, without the requirement to report to any other Post of Duty (POD) at least twice a pay period.
- E. Hoteling: practice of providing shared office space to teleworking employees at their official duty station.
- F. Local Commuting Area: the geographic area that usually constitutes one area for employment purposes. It includes any population center (or two or more neighboring ones) and the surrounding localities within a reasonable commuting distance.
- G. Mobile Work: a work arrangement characterized by routine and regular travel each pay period to conduct work in customer or other worksites as opposed to a single authorized alternative worksite. Examples of mobile work include site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management, and work performed while commuting, traveling between worksites, or on Temporary Duty (TDY).
- H. Official Worksite/Duty Station: the work location used to determine an employee's locality pay rate. For more information, go to OPM's Fact Sheet: Official Worksite for Location-Based Pay.
- I. Remote Work: a work arrangement in which the employee resides and works at a location beyond the local commuting area of the employing organization's worksite or to describe a full-time telework arrangement. Remote work but does not include any part of work done while on official travel or mobile work.

- J. Routine Fixed Schedule: telework scheduled in advance for the same days of the week and hours of the day on an ongoing basis.
- K. Routine Flexible Schedule: telework approved in advance for a fixed number of days or hours per pay period, but permits the employee to change the specific days or hours of telework per pay period with advance approval.
- L. Routine Telework: an ongoing, regular schedule of one or more telework days per pay period with the requirement to report to the Post of Duty (POD) at least twice each biweekly pay period. Note: Full Time telework is also considered routine telework but does not require reporting twice a pay period.
- M. Satellite Office Site: bureau worksite other than the employee's official duty station and at which an employee is approved to telework (if permitted in bureau telework policy).
- N. Scheduled Telework: telework as specified and approved in the telework agreement (fixed schedule or flexible schedule:), or if requested and approved in advance by the manager on a case-by-case basis.
- O. Situational Telework: a telework arrangement under which each instance of telework is requested and approved on a case-by-case basis, including where warranted, same day requests, however, the employee may not telework until the request is approved.
- P. Telework: a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work.
- Q. Telework Agreement: a written (hard copy or electronic) agreement, completed and signed by an employee and his/her manager that outlines the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement.
- R. Telework Eligibility: requirements specified in bureau policy that must be met by the employee as a condition to participating in telework.
- S. Telework-Ready (for emergencies): employees who have an approved Telework Agreement, necessary equipment, and work files at their telework location (or transportable to the telework location) to perform required duties during any emergency that changes operational status.
- T. Teleworker: an employee who, with an approved telework agreement and completion of mandatory training, works at a location(s) or work site(s) other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work, for all or part of the work week.
- U. Temporary Telework Arrangements: situations where an agency may designate the location of the alternative worksite as the official worksite of a routine teleworker. This temporary arrangement is acceptable even though the employee is not able to report at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to the regular worksite. For more details Temporary Telework Arrangements at OPM's Fact Sheet: Official Worksite for Location-Based Pay Purposes

- V. Telework Location: location away from the official duty station that has been approved for the performance of officially assigned duties. Examples may include the employee's home, a satellite office site, or other approved location. Telework locations do not include other non-bureau government offices. (Exception: The approved telework location becomes the official duty station for those employees on permanent Full Time Telework arrangements.)
- W. Treasury Telework Team: team led by the Treasury Telework Managing Officer (TMO) and comprised of one or more bureau appointed telework leads. The team generally meets once per month to address policy issues, program improvements, compliance and oversight, reports and other relevant issues. This team also contributes bureau telework data for the annual Congressional report "Status of Telework in the Federal Government".
- X. Unscheduled Telework: work from the approved telework location on a day the employee is not otherwise approved to telework, when severe weather conditions or other emergency circumstances lead to an official announcement from OPM (or other appropriate authority).

Interim Government-wide Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas (DETO) Guidance

General: Considerations for U.S. government Executive Branch Agency Employees that encumber domestic positions teleworking in foreign areas.

Applicability: This interim guidance applies to all U.S. government Executive Branch agencies and employees. This interim guidance does not apply to USG employees under the command of an area military commander, on the staff of an International Organization, or to Voice of America correspondents on assignment.

Executive Branch Agencies considering arrangements that will result in an employee, assigned to a domestic position, teleworking in a location that is outside of the United States, must meet additional requirements that apply to the conduct of official USG activities and operations in overseas locations. Among other things, these authorities address the Chief of Mission’s (COM) authority over activities, operations, and employees of the U.S. government Executive Branch conducting official business in overseas locations and security responsibility for USG employees and accompanying dependents. These requirements are in addition to the requirements addressed in the Telework Enhancement Act and other applicable telework authority, supporting OPM policy and relevant agency policy. In order to meet required standards, agencies will be responsible for additional costs that, in some cases, may be significant.

Seeking COM Approval:

Permanent Activities: Permanent activities include official government activities that are required or envisioned for one year or more. If an agency intended to establish a telework arrangement for one year or more, it must follow procedures outlined in the National Security Decision Directive 38 (NSDD 38).

Temporary Activities: Temporary activities include official government activities that are required for less than one year. If an agency intends to establish a telework arrangement for less than one year, it must obtain COM approval through the country clearance process.

COM Considerations:

According to Presidential directive and legislation, the COM has specific responsibilities for all USG activities, operations, and personnel conducting official USG business in overseas locations. These responsibilities cannot be waived or delegated. The same directives and legislation require USG Executive Branch agencies conducting official business to fall under the authority of the COM and comply with all COM directives and policies. The authority of the COM is not limited to activities that affect the host country.

Security Responsibility: As with all USG personnel conducting official activities in overseas locations, the COM will consider factors related to safety and security of the USG employee. Presidential directive makes the COM responsible for the security of the employees and requires employees of USG agencies to follow the security and all other directives of the COM. COM directives may include specific policies on the protection of USG information, which may be more restrictive than the parent agency's domestic information technology policies.

Privileges and Immunities: As described in 2 FAM 221, the Department of State, in consultation with the COM, must determine if the employee qualifies for Privileges and Immunities and then weigh and analyze potential risks to employee, the work that the employee performs, and the interests of the USG.

Local Labor and Tax Laws: Local labor and tax laws may apply to the employee's work, and the agency and employee must ensure appropriate compliance (e.g., obtain necessary work visas) before the COM will approve the activity.

Requesting Agency Considerations:

Assignment Location: The official worksite for an employee covered by a telework agreement not scheduled to report at least twice each bi-weekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to the regular worksite typically will be the location of the telework site.

Pay and Allowances: Overseas allowances and differentials for civilian employees are governed by the Department of State Standardized Regulations (DSSR). Employees, as defined in the DSSR, may be eligible for its overseas allowances and differentials. In accordance with DSSR 013, the head of an agency may issue such further implementing regulations as may be necessary, within the scope of the DSSR. This means that agencies can adopt implementing regulations that are more restrictive than the DSSR.

Passport/Visa: Agencies will need to confirm that the teleworking employee has the proper documentation such as passports, visas, or any additional work permits required to perform work for the USG overseas.

Local labor and tax laws: See Above

Contingency Planning: Agencies must be prepared to address any problems with the telework arrangement, including situations when the employee is no longer able or willing to work from their home, when the employee or agency wants to terminate the telework arrangement and/or when the employee return(s) to the United States, or is ordered to depart the country by the COM.

Other costs: Agencies may be responsible for funding security and administrative support for positions located overseas. These costs are generally addressed through the Interagency Cooperative Administrative Support Services (ICASS) system; however, other direct costs may apply to meet required standards. Agencies may be responsible for funding travel expenses during the course of the telework arrangement if he or she must travel to other posts or return to the United States for official duties such as periodic consultations or training.

Unaccompanied or Partially Unaccompanied Posts: Telework from posts or countries that are unaccompanied, partially unaccompanied, or where an authorized or ordered departure is in effect is prohibited unless the Under Secretary of State for Management (M) waives the prohibition in accordance with procedures described in Waivers of Travel Prohibitions (3 FAM 3776). Waivers for unaccompanied posts will only be granted in unusual or compelling circumstances.

Sample DETO Telework Agreement

DETO TELEWORK AGREEMENT

Between the Department of State, the Department of the Treasury, Treasury Bureau _____, and Employee _____ for DETO Telework.

The supervisor and the employee should each keep a copy of the agreement for reference. In addition, a copy should be sent to the Treasury Telework Managing Officer; the Bureau Telework Coordinator of the employing bureau; and the Bureau Budget Office.

1. Voluntary Participation

Employee recognizes that the Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) arrangement is not an employee benefit or entitlement, but is rather an additional workplace flexibility option that the Bureau may approve to allow direct-hire employees assigned to domestic positions to accomplish duties/work from an overseas location. Employee voluntarily agrees to work at the agency-approved alternate work site indicated below and to comply with all applicable Department policies and procedures.

2. Salary and Benefits

Bureau agrees that a DETO arrangement is not a basis for changing the employee's salary or benefits based on the Civil Service grade of the position. Approved DETOs are entitled to their base salary. The employee is not eligible for domestic locality pay, pursuant to 5 C.F.R 531.605, while on DETO arrangement. Employee and supervisor agree to notify bureau Telework Coordinator for purposes of processing a change in duty station to overseas location and taking necessary steps to stop domestic locality pay. Travel entitlements may vary based on factors such as the official worksite (consistent with 5 C.F.R 531.605), and whether the employee is on orders as an eligible family member of a USG spouse or partner. Travel entitlements are governed by the Foreign Affairs Manual, the Foreign Affairs Handbook, and other applicable statutes, regulations, and guidance. Eligibility for overseas/foreign allowances and differentials is governed by the Department of State Standardized Regulations and Foreign Affairs Manual. The employee is not authorized to receive overseas/foreign allowances or differentials as a DETO in his or her own right. In cases where there is a sponsoring spouse or partner who is assigned overseas, however, the sponsor may be eligible for allowances on the DETO's behalf based on family size. The employee will be required to repay the Department for any allowance or differential payments he/she receives to which he/she is not entitled and his/her obligation to repay cannot be waived if he/she knew or should have known that he/she was being erroneously paid and failed to take corrective action.

3. Duty Station and Alternate Work Site

Agency and employee agree that the employee's official assigned position of record is located at:

Employee's approved alternate worksite is:
(Embassy/post/residential address) _____

4. Official Duties

Unless otherwise instructed, employee agrees to perform official duties only at the regular office or agency approved alternate work site. Employee agrees not to conduct personal business during normal working hours at the alternate work site. Post management reserves the option to inspect alternate work sites during normal working hours with prior notice of at least 24 hours for purposes of compliance with the Office of Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) rules and regulations.

Position duties include: (these can either be placed within the agreement or as a separate attachment)

5. Work Schedule and Hours of Duty

Consistent with the bureau's policies on a flexible or alternative work schedules, agency and employee agree upon the following telework schedule:

Employee will receive Washington holidays and is not entitled to local holidays of the overseas location. The employee is not entitled to premium pay or compensatory time off for working their regular hours on a local holiday. If the alternate worksite is the embassy and it is closed due to a local holiday, the employee must work from another worksite approved by the supervisor (e.g., the employee's home) or use annual leave or previously earned compensatory time.

Day(s) working at the alternate work site:

Week 1 (first week of each pay period)

Monday: From: __ am to __ pm

Tuesday: From: __ am to __ pm

Wednesday: From: __ am to __ pm

Thursday: From: __ am to __ pm

Friday: From: __ am to __ pm

Week 2 (second week of each pay period)

Monday: From: __ am to __ pm

Tuesday: From: __ am to __ pm

Wednesday: From: __ am to __ pm

Thursday: From: __ am to __ pm

Friday: From: __ am to __ pm

For full-time employees, each day includes a _____ minute lunch (30 minutes to one hour). For full-time employees, the schedule should clearly indicate 40 hours per week, not inclusive of lunch.

6. Time and Attendance

Supervisor agrees to ensure the DETO (employee's) timekeeper has a copy of the employee's work schedule. Employee agrees to submit notice of hours worked at the alternate site on a biweekly basis to his/her supervisor, and the supervisor agrees to certify the hours worked, consistent with the bureau's policies. Employee agrees to follow established bureau policy and office procedures for requesting and obtaining approval of leave.

7. Overtime

The supervisor may pre-authorize overtime if additional hours of work are necessary. The existing rules governing overtime in Title 5 U.S.C. and the Fair Labor Standards Act apply to telework arrangements.

All overtime must be approved in writing in advance. Officially ordered or pre-approved overtime work performed by an employee who spends all hours of work in a foreign area may be compensable under Title 5.

8. Administrative Support/ Equipment _____ will be enrolled in the (Bureau Specific IT Access) that has been configured for access to _____ unclassified e-mail and directories.

Other support: In cases where there is a sponsoring spouse/partner, for other ICASS services and workload counts unrelated to this telework agreement, post will provide _____ the same level of administrative support as provided to spouses of direct-hire American officers. This includes services such as: CLO services, APO privileges, and accreditation. Any additional services required in support of their official duties would require subscription for the relevant cost centers to be funded by the home bureau.

9. Security/Medical

Employees who are approved for a DETO arrangement will not work on or have access to classified information at the alternate work site unless the approved alternate worksite is at the embassy/consulate and the required security standards have been met and are in place. DETOs will comply with current standards for remote operations as set forth in 12 FAM 625.2-3, Administrative Security – Telecommuting. Care and judgment must be exercised with regard to records and information that are Sensitive But Unclassified (SBU) and/or subject to the Privacy Act. Offices allowing employees access to these records offsite must ensure that appropriate administrative, technical, and physical safeguards are maintained to protect the confidentiality and integrity of records (see 12 FAM 540.)

_____ will make available any residential alternate work site for survey by post Regional Security Officer to ensure that information security requirements are observed and official documents are properly handled.

If _____ qualifies for eligibility for the Medical Program based on family member status pursuant to 16 FAM 122.2, he/she will obtain a medical clearance for the overseas location of _____ from the Office of Medical Services. Copies of the clearance will be provided to Embassy _____ and (bureau) _____.

10. Liability

The employee understands that the U.S. government will not be responsible for damages to an employee's personal or real property while the employee is working at the approved alternate work site, except to the extent the U.S. government is responsible under applicable law.

11. Work Area

The employee agrees to complete Form DS-1963, Safety Checklist for Home Based Telecommuters, certifying conformance with safety standards at the alternate site. The employee should provide a copy of this form to the employing bureau's Telework Coordinator no later than 30 days after commencement of work at the overseas location.

12. Alternate Work Site Costs

The employee understands that the U.S government will not be responsible for any operating costs that are associated with the employee using his or her home as an alternate work site, for example, home maintenance, insurance, or utilities. Work-related long-distance (domestic and international) phone calls will be reimbursed by the bureau in accordance with applicable law, regulations, and policies (See 3 FAM 2367.3). Any ICASS costs incurred in relation to the DETO are the responsibility of the employing bureau, pursuant to 3 FAM 2368.12.

13. Injury Compensation

Employee understands that the U.S. Department of Labor's Office of Workers' Compensation Programs (OWCP) provides eligibility for coverage to federal civilian employees for on-the-job injury, illness, and to eligible survivors in the event of a work-related death. The employee agrees to notify the supervisor immediately of any accident or injury that occurs at the alternate work site and to complete any required workers' compensation claim forms. The supervisor agrees to take appropriate action immediately.

14. Work Assignments/Performance

Employee agrees to complete all assigned work according to procedures mutually agreed upon by the employee and the supervisor and according to guidelines and standards in the performance plan and appraisal, as applicable. The employee agrees to provide regular reports if required by the supervisor to help judge performance. The employee understands that a decline in performance may be grounds for canceling the alternate work site arrangement.

15. Records Management

Employee agrees to protect U.S. government or agency records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. 552a. Sensitive but unclassified (SBU) information will be handled in accordance with 12 FAM 540.

16. Standards of Conduct

Employee agrees he or she is bound by agency standards of conduct while working at the alternate work site. Nothing in this agreement precludes the bureau from taking any appropriate disciplinary or adverse action against an employee who fails to comply with the provisions of this agreement or regulations contained in 3 FAM 2360.

17. Chief of Mission Authority

As a U.S. government Executive Branch employee, while teleworking overseas the employee is subject to Chief of Mission (COM) authority, although the employee will not be included in Post's staffing pattern or considered part of Post's regular staffing compliment. The COM must be notified and agree to the DETO's employment arrangements prior to the DETO's arrival at post through the NSDD 38 or country clearance procedures.

18. Duration and Cancellation

In cases where there is a sponsoring spouse or partner, this telework arrangement terminates automatically upon completion of the employee's spouse or partner's tour of duty in _____ on _____. In all other cases, the DETO arrangement is limited to two years. Additional time, on a biennial basis, may be requested by presenting an amended DETO agreement and seeking permission from the Chief of Mission through the NSDD 38 approval process. This DETO reapproval process also applies in cases where the USG spouse or partner has had his/her posting extended through an amendment of orders. The employee may cancel the telework agreement at any time with prior notification of at least two pay periods by providing a written justification to his/her supervisor for consideration. The employee's supervisor may cancel or adjust the telework arrangement based on the needs of the office at any time with prior written notification of at least two pay periods. Nothing in this agreement precludes the employing office from terminating the telework arrangement and requiring the employee to report to the domestic location of the assigned position of record.

* *This telework arrangement will be reviewed by the employee's supervisor on a semi- annual basis to ensure that it meets the needs of the office and the employee.

Procedures for Submitting a NSDD 38 and Country Clearance Requests for a DETO

Per Presidential Directive and legislation, with some limited exceptions Executive Branch employees conducting official business in foreign areas are subject to Chief of Mission (COM) authority and their presence at post must be approved via the National Security Decision Directive 38 (NSDD 38) or country clearance process.

Domestic employees teleworking their positions overseas fall under this category.

Arrangements for one year or more require COM approval through NSDD 38 procedures. Arrangements for less than one year require COM approval through the country clearance process. Due to the approval process required for domestic employees teleworking overseas, prospective teleworkers should start the process at least three to six months prior to the desired start date of the arrangement. The following procedures must be followed when implementing a domestic employee teleworking overseas (DETO) arrangement.

Arrangements for more than one year - NSDD 38 process

The NSDD 38 process for DETO arrangement requests COM approval for an employee to perform the functions of a domestic position in the relevant foreign areas. Approval of the request confirms that the COM assumes responsibility for direction, coordination, and supervision of the employee performing the official USG function in his/her country of responsibility and agrees to the telework arrangement and any support services required. COM approval is no longer necessary on the individual telework agreement for Department of State arrangements, but all other required parties must approve/sign the telework agreement prior to NSDD 38 submission. For other agencies requesting DETO arrangements, all other required parties must approve/sign the telework agreement and the arrangement should be vetted with the respective regional bureau executive office which will consult with post before the NSDD 38 request is submitted.

When a relative of a COM or Deputy Chief of Mission (DCM) is requesting a DETO arrangement, a nepotism review may be required and should be brought to the attention of the relevant HR office (HR/CDA, HR/CSHRM, HR/OE) when appropriate. In the specific case of an NSDD 38 request for a relative of a COM already in country, approval by the COM would be inconsistent with statutory-based anti-nepotism provisions. Only the COM, or Charge acting in the absence of the COM, has authority to approve or deny an NSDD-38 request. However, the Department may review the substance of the staffing request pursuant to the Department's coordination role under NSDD 38 and the Secretary's role for oversight of post abroad under 22 USC 4802(c) (including establishing appropriate staffing levels), as delegated to the Under Secretary for Management. In these instances, the home bureau must seek approval of the staffing request via an action memorandum to the Under Secretary for Management.

The steps required to establish a DETO arrangement are outlined below:

- If an overseas telework arrangement is supported by the agency (or by the relevant sending bureau in Department of State arrangements), the prospective teleworker or supervisor should first consult with the respective regional bureau executive office which will then consult with the management officer at the post of the telework location. The regional bureau executive offices are the Office of the Executive Director for East Asian and Pacific Affairs (EAP/EX), the Office of the Executive Director for African Affairs (AF/EX), the Office of the Executive Director for Western Hemisphere Affairs (WHA/EX), the Office of the Executive Director for European and Eurasian Affairs and International Organization Affairs (EUR-IO/JEX) and the Office of the Executive Director for Near Eastern Affairs and South Central Affairs (NEA-SCA/EX). A list of contacts can be found at: <http://www.state.gov/documents/organization/112065.pdf>. All issues should be addressed and resolved prior to the NSDD 38 submission. Issues of consideration could include work space at the Embassy, residential security requirements, and/or equipment.
- NSDD 38 requests must be submitted via the online application at: <https://nsdd38.state.gov/>. Requests should be submitted by the agency official responsible for funding the arrangement, on behalf of the employee in the requesting agency.
- Refer to the attached template for guidance on creating the NSDD 38 request specific to a DETO arrangement. Within the justification and position detail sections of the NSDD 38 request, indicate that the request is for a DETO arrangement.
- Once the request is submitted, it is reviewed by analysts in M/PRI and forwarded to the post. Posts are asked to respond to requests within 15 business days, either with an approval or disapproval by cable. COM approval must indicate that the COM confirms that he/she is fully informed and concurs with the terms/support requirements outlined in the DETO agreement and that the DETO agreement is complete and signed by all other required parties.

Arrangements for less than one year – Country Clearance process

Prior to submitting the Country Clearance request, a telework agreement must be approved by all required parties and the arrangement should be vetted with the respective bureau executive office which will consult with post (See NSDD 38 Request DETO Template). The Country Clearance request is the final step in the required approval process for DETO arrangements for less than one year.

- Unclassified country clearance requests must be sent through the State Department's automated eCC (eCountry Clearance) system at:
<https://ecc.state.gov/>

Note: In response to emergency incidences to disaster relief efforts such as hurricanes or similar circumstances where overseas assignment may be necessary, the most appropriate employee assignment is a temporary sponsored DETO. Pursue the standard DETO approval process and seek an eCountry Clearance (eCC) for arrangements.

The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 (the Act), paved the way for many agencies to expand their telework programs. Treasury has a long, successful history with telework, and Treasury employees value the opportunity to telework among their top favorite benefits. This document supplements Treasury HCIS: TN-18-001, Treasury Telework Program, providing additional guidance and tools for all Treasury bureaus and offices.

Freedom To Flex (F2F)

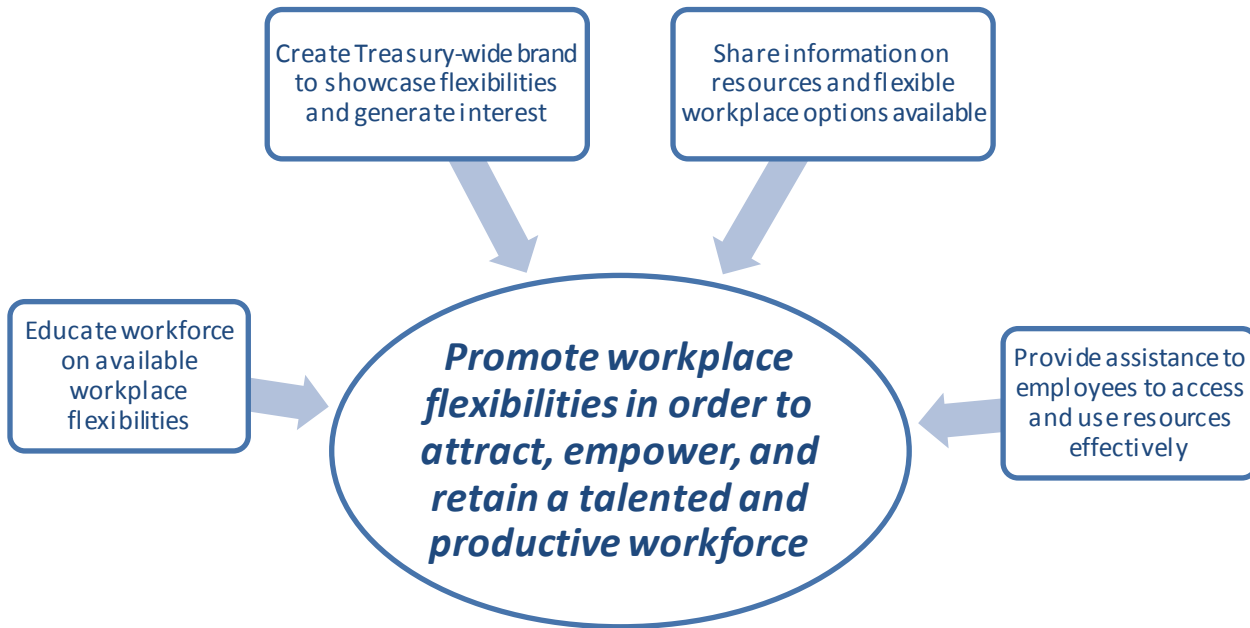

Workplace Flexibilities and Benefits to Achieve Work-Life Balance

The Department of the Treasury understands that today's workforce faces competing demands on their time as they try and balance work and personal priorities. Long commutes, dependent care challenges, staying fit, and managing stress are just some of the issues employees face. To address these concerns, Treasury and its bureaus offer excellent benefits and workplace flexibilities such as telework, to assist employees with achieving a work life balance.

Through the Treasury-wide Freedom To Flex (F2F) initiative, bureaus will use the following F2F branding tools (Images 1-3) to renew employee awareness of the workplace flexibilities available. Examples for bureau use include but are not limited to the following:

- E-mail Signature Block
- Bureau Intranet Posting
- Bureau Newsletter
- Promotional Flyer
- Digital Display
- Posters
- Workplace Flexibilities and Work-Life Programs Fact Sheet

Telework 101

Treasury Telework Program Compliance and Oversight

Telework remains one of the top rated employee benefits at Treasury and across the federal government. It is also a high profile program as indicated by recent GAO audits assessing individual federal agency telework programs and internal program audits within Treasury. The integrity of the Treasury Telework Program is contingent on the ability of each bureau to implement and maintain proper program management. This document supplements HCIS: TN 18-

001, Treasury Telework Program, and establishes specific telework compliance requirements for all Treasury bureaus.

The bureau Telework Coordinator is responsible for oversight of the bureau telework program. When taking action on any employee who is non-compliant with Treasury or bureau telework policies, Telework Coordinators should work closely with their bureau labor relations office, and in accordance with bureau policy and any applicable collective bargaining agreement.

Telework Coordinators should partner with their respective IT office to seek available technology solutions (e.g., SharePoint, PeopleSoft (PeopleTrak)) to establish successful tracking and reporting systems. The following table presents options to consider for ensuring Telework Program compliance:

Telework Program Compliance

Compliance Action	Options to Consider	Frequency of Review	Benefit of Action	Action if Not Compliant
An approved Telework Agreement is in place	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Establish an e-Telework Agreement Library by uploading copies of agreements to permission protected telework database (e.g. SharePoint List). Either manager or proxy can upload, or transmit to TW Coordinator to manage the database 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Ongoing. TW Coordinator receives an alert each time an Agreement is loaded and performs accuracy checks 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Automates tracking and reporting Reduces risk of non-compliance with the Act 	Employee must be removed from telework until requirement is met
All denials of telework requests are tracked	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Same as above but creating a separate e-Telework Denial Library. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Ongoing 	Meet OPM reporting requirements to provide # of denials	N/A

Compliance Action	Options to Consider	Frequency of Review	Benefit of Action	Action if Not Compliant
Mandatory telework training has been completed PRIOR to commencing telework	TW Coordinator generates training completion reports for required telework courses and crosschecks with telework roster.	Monthly, at a minimum	Reduces risk of non-compliance with the Act	Deny initial employee request to telework; suspend continued telework by employee already participating
No official disciplinary action for AWOL > 5 days in any calendar year	Run time and attendance reports for AWOL	Monthly, at a minimum	Reduces risk of non-compliance with the Act	Suspend continued telework for the employee
No official disciplinary action for viewing, downloading or exchanging pornography	Obtain misconduct reports for any cases associated with the infraction from appropriate source	Monthly, at a minimum	Reduces risk of non-compliance with the Act	Suspend continued telework for the employee
Teleworker is meeting minimum performance standards to telework (as established by bureau policy)	Obtain report from HR system and crosscheck with telework roster	Monthly	Ensures teleworkers continue to meet bureau eligibility requirements	Suspend continued telework for the employee until performance meets eligibility standards
Other bureau specific eligibility requirements are met	Each bureau determines how that will be tracked	Monthly, at a minimum	Ensures teleworkers continue to meet bureau eligibility requirements	TBD by bureau

Note: For those bureaus with collective bargaining agreements, changes in working conditions associated with implementing the above requirements may require negotiations. Bureaus should work with their appropriate labor relations points of contact.

Bureaus are responsible for establishing compliance tools to evaluate teleworkers against any other telework eligibility requirements outlined in bureau policy, and take appropriate action when an employee falls below stated eligibility standards. Employees who do not meet and/or maintain compliance with these requirements must be suspended or removed from telework as appropriate. Employees of Federal contractors are not Treasury employees and are therefore not covered by this issuance. Work location policies for contractor employees are determined by the contractor, consistent with any applicable contract requirements.

Note: Data associated with teleworkers who are not federal employees (e.g., contractors) should not be included in any external telework report.

Consistent application of telework oversight and compliance by managers and bureau telework program coordinators is essential. The following is a sample template for a Telework Compliance Plan. Bureaus are encouraged to leverage this document or create a similar plan that covers all aspects of the requirements in the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, the Treasury Telework Policy and the bureau specific telework policy.

Should any bureau be the subject of a third party audit, these practices will assist the bureau to demonstrate its accountability for a properly managed telework program.

Telework Category Compliance

COMPLIANCE	TELEWORK CATEGORY
General	Fulltime TW	Routine TW	Situational TW
Work From Approved Alternate Duty Station/Home	Yes	Yes	Yes
Pay Implications Based on Duty Station ¹	Yes	No	No

¹Routine full-time telework, including temporary or hardship arrangements, requires a personnel action to change the employee's pay and approved telework site as the official Post of Duty (POD), to occur upon entering agreement but no later than 120 days after the change in schedule or relocation.

*The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 specifies two categories of employees who may not be deemed eligible under any circumstances; 1) “an employee who has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year” and; 2) “an employee who has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees in the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties (Public Law 111-292, 6502(a)(2)(A)(B).”

Evaluating and Approving Situational Telework Requests

1. Establish clear boundaries and rules for your team. Determine what your organization’s policy will be regarding requests to telework on days that are not included in a routine fixed or flexible telework schedule. For example, will advance notice be required absent emergent circumstances, and if so, how much and under what circumstances? How should employees communicate such requests (e.g., telephone, email, etc.)? Generally, agencies delegate the responsibility to approve/disapprove telework requests to the immediate supervisor.
2. Develop a policy that accounts both for circumstances where situational telework can and should be planned and approved in advance (e.g. a doctor appointment), and for those circumstances where same-day requests may reasonably be granted (e.g., a contagious illness that does not incapacitate the employee).
3. Exercise appropriate managerial control over your organization and staff. Telework is not an employee right or entitlement and employees may not dictate changes in a telework schedule without management consent.
4. Communication is key — Managers should engage their employees in a dialogue to ensure a complete and accurate mutual understanding of the need and appropriateness of the request for telework.
5. Avoid one-size-fits all solutions. Rigid and absolute rules don’t serve anyone’s best interest. Consider individual employee needs in developing policies and approving requests.
6. Apply the rules equitably and consistently, keeping in mind the difference between equal and equitable.
7. Brief your staff collectively and individually when necessary.
8. Document and keep a log of situational telework requests to help track potential abuse patterns and maintain consistency.
9. Employees should understand that failure to comply with the terms of the telework agreement, failure to comply with workplace policies or rules, or failure to maintain appropriate performance standards while teleworking, may result in suspension or termination of the telework agreement.

10. Document issues and problems and share with the employee involved. Remember your documented concerns put the employee on clear notice that you are paying attention.
11. Consult your Telework Coordinator, HR staff, labor relations staff and others, as appropriate.
12. Act promptly, properly and decisively to solve problems. If you ignore the problem, it will usually get worse. Failing to act may place the bureau at risk and/or establish a past practice, and will ultimately fail to benefit the organization.
13. Make sure your employees are trained to correctly record telework in the bureau's time and attendance system. Accurate and distinct recording of situational and routine telework is critical for meeting timekeeping requirements, as well as for evaluating the telework program and preparing required reports.

Program Guidance for Full Time Telework Pilot

Implementation of a Full Time Telework Program requires careful consideration. Full Time telework may not be appropriate for all bureaus and may work only for certain segments of the employee population, based on employee duties, mission priorities, and the need for "in office" presence. Full Time teleworkers are not required to report twice a pay period to a post of duty (POD) and a personnel action must be created to officially change their POD to their approved telework location.

The purpose of this guidance is to provide a framework for conducting a Full Time telework pilot. Applicable collective bargaining agreements must also be considered. Bureau management should work closely with their Telework Coordinator who can assist in developing and leading the pilot.

Benefits of Full Time Telework:

1. Sustains mission objectives during interruptions in normal business operations
2. Attracts applicants seeking progressive workplace flexibilities or "Freedom to Flex"
3. Enhances recruitment and retention of existing employees
4. Supports employee work/life balance
5. Promotes savings associated with reduction or consolidation of the real estate footprint
6. Positions management to operate efficiently and effectively as technology solutions improve while operating budgets shrink.
7. The employee's duties can be performed without the employee reporting to any bureau POD twice a pay period, and such absence from the POD does not negatively impact the bureau mission, the job duties of co-workers, or the satisfaction of customers. These employees typically occupy positions that are "POD neutral" and work well in a virtual environment.

8. The employee's Full Time telework location is within the commuting area (e.g., 50 miles) of any bureau POD. This serves to minimize any potential relocation costs if the employee must be reassigned back to a POD.

Critical Elements of an Effective Full Time Telework Program:

1. Determine if the program aligns with bureau mission
2. Ensure senior management buy in
3. Define specific eligibility requirements for participation (including those outlined in the Act)
4. Ensure that approvals are done at the appropriate level (e.g. recommend first level executive at a minimum)
5. Create dedicated program lead(s)
6. Develop an intranet website to provide managers and participants with appropriate guidance and tools
7. Establish measurements of pilot success
8. Host focus groups and capture feedback from participants and their managers
9. Evaluate existing practices that may require adjustments to support this category (e.g. building access, office supply procedures, etc.).

Challenges to Overcome

Employees operating full time in a virtual environment must be able to successfully perform their duties in a virtual environment, and be self-sufficient, with no need for face to face interaction with their manager or team members. They cannot require hands-on IT support or the physical equipment/services that are commonly found in a traditional office (e.g. large copiers, mail delivery). In short, their successful performance is not contingent on their presence at a physical bureau office.

C. Time and Attendance/Leave/Credit/Compensatory Hours

I understand that the laws, rules, regulations and Agency policies which govern time and attendance, leave, compensatory time and overtime remain in effect regardless of whether I am working at the (bureau name) POD or from an alternative worksite such as my home. I agree to properly reflect in (timekeeping syst name) hours worked at the approved Telework location(s). I agree to follow the office procedure for requesting annual, sick or other leave. I must inform my supervisor/manager when unable to perform work due to illness or personal reasons during the tour-of-duty and request appropriate leave. FLSA non-exempt employees are not permitted to work any time beyond his or her authorized schedule.

D. Official Work Duties/Assignments

I agree to perform only official duties during my authorized work hours while at the alternative work site, and to establish/maintain communications arrangements that ensure availability to interface with my supervisor/manager and/or official duty station. I am expected to complete all assigned work according to procedures mutually agreed to by me and my supervisor/manager in accordance Form XXXXXXX (2-2017) Catalog Number XXXXXX publish.no.xxx.gov Department of the Treasury - (bureau name) with the guidelines and standards detailed in my performance plan and all applicable policies.

E. Liability

I understand that the (bureau name) is not responsible for covering operating cost associated with the use of my home as an alternate worksite. I understand that the (bureau name) will not be liable for damages to my real or personal property while I am working from the home base POD, except to the extent the agency is held liable by the Military Personnel and Civilian Employee Claims Act.

F. Equipment/Work Area Security

I will ensure that Government-provided equipment/property is used only for authorized purposes. I agree to provide a work area that is safe, secure, free from disturbance and suitable for performance of official duties.

G. Telework Site Visits

Management has the right to meet with employees to give assignments and to review work as necessary at either the official duty station, approved Telework Location, or a mutually agreed upon site. Unless otherwise agreed, a minimum of 24 hours advance notice must be given before management may inspect the employee's home. See (bureau policy ref.) for more details.

H. Security/Privacy

I agree to comply with all established agency policies and directives on security, privacy, and record keeping measures.

I. Suspension/ Modification/Cancellation of Telework Agreement

I understand that my supervisor/manager may temporarily suspend, modify or terminate the Telework arrangement. In addition, should my job duties change where I no longer meet the criteria for a Full Time Telework arrangement, I understand that the Full-Time Telework arrangement will be terminated and I will be reassigned to an appropriate (bureau name) POD.

J. Telework During Emergencies

As a "Telework Ready" employee, I agree to perform emergency telework, usually in support of (bureau name) operations during a weather emergency, emergency response, or continuity of operations, and in accordance with the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and (bureau name) Telework Policies. I understand that I will be required to telework, or request unscheduled leave (annual or leave without pay), previously earned compensatory time, or previously earned credit hours, etc.

K. Designated Workspace

I understand that if I select Full Time telework, I am not entitled to an assigned workspace at any (bureau name) POD.

L. Mobile Worker Designation

In addition to this telework request, I am also a Mobile worker. My job responsibilities encompass mobile (field) work where as part of my official duties, I travel on a regular and routine basis to meet customers to conduct my work. Yes No

M. Additional Requirements-Full Time Telework Only

As a full time teleworker I understand and agree to the following:

- a. I understand that entering into a Full Time Telework arrangement means that my telework location will become my official POD. This change may affect my locality pay, benefits, taxes (federal, state, and/or local), travel allowances, and Reduction-In-Force (RIF) procedures. I am responsible to evaluate the implications prior to requesting Full Time Telework and adhere to any tax obligations resulting thereof.
- b. Should I plan to move from my approved telework location, I will inform my manager and complete a new telework agreement.
- c. I will use all available current or future technology tools for collaboration (e.g. Office Communicator, webcams, etc.) as required.
- d. Should my job duties change where I no longer meet the criteria for a Full Time Telework arrangement, I understand that the Full-Time Telework arrangement will be terminated and I will be reassigned to an appropriate (bureau name) POD.
- e. By signing this agreement, I am certifying that I have read, understand, and agree to abide by all applicable (bureau name) Telework Policies as outlined on this agreement, in (bureau policy ref), and the Full Time Telework Policy Guidance.

Employee Certification*

By signing this Telework Agreement, I affirm that I: (all must be checked to submit this agreement for approval)

- Have read, understand and agree to abide by all applicable (bureau name) Telework Policies as outlined in (insert bureau policy ref). I further agree and understand that Telework is a voluntary program, not an employee entitlement and subject to review and approval by my manager. Have completed required telework training and attached the (bureau name) Telework Training certificate with this request
- Will ensure that my alternative worksite provides a safe work environment, with appropriate connectivity, technology, and security necessary for the performance of my official duties. (See safety checklist)

Full Time Telework Agreement for Non-Bargaining Unit Employees Form Instructions

(Test participants-please go to end of this document for instructions on how to give feedback for improvements to this guidance)

(PLEASE PRINT THIS DOCUMENT TO ASSIST YOU AS YOU FILL OUT THE FORM)

Introduction: A telework agreement is required for every teleworker. Managers and employees work together to arrive at an arrangement that benefits the employee, while at the same time placing a priority of supporting the mission of the (ENTER BUREAU NAME). These instructions will walk you through filling out the Full Time Telework Agreement for the pilot. Note help aids in blue and drop down menus to expedite filling in the form. Most of the fields on the Telework Agreement are required.

Full Time Telework: Involves performing official duties on a full time basis from the approved telework location. There is no requirement to report to an (ENTER BUREAU NAME) office twice a pay period. Employees who participate in the Full Time Telework pilot must submit this form to their manager. Additional training is not required providing that the mandatory (ENTER BUREAU NAME) (enter title of required training) has been completed. Optional Full Time Telework training is encouraged and available on the Full Time Telework site.

The top of the form requires basic information. The free text box is available to describe any additional information or clarifications.

Section A: (ENTER BUREAU NAME) Office Information:

1. In this section, enter the address of your current Post of Duty (POD) on the former (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD line. Include full address.

Note: In Sections A and B enter N/A in fields “County” and “City” when the response is Washington, D.C.

2. Identify an (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD that is within 50 miles of your full time telework location. (If you have multiple options you may choose your preference.) This office will become your (ENTER BUREAU NAME) support office for IT or other support services if needed.
3. Enter the building code of the POD entered for #2 above. You may use the Building Code link to look up and insert the associated Building Code for that POD. Click on “Run Building List” button. You can also capture the address of the (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD to enter later on the form. Lastly, provide your (ENTER BUREAU NAME) business phone number.

Section B: Telework Location

In this section select Personal Residence or Other Location if your site will be different from your personal residence. You may not select both. Fill in all address and contact information. Use of P.O. Box for the telework location address is not permitted. Your telework location must be suitable workspace as defined in (enter your policy reference here) and must be within 50 miles (one way) of any (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD you identified in the (ENTER BUREAU NAME) Office Information section on the form. To confirm this distance, use the Mileage Calculator link to assist you in this determination, and enter the 2(two) zip codes in Location 1 & 2 fields.

Sections C-M:

Take your time and read these sections carefully. Specifically item M. is exclusively for Full Time teleworkers with important information that must be read and understood. If you have any concerns, please discuss with your manager prior to submitting this Agreement for approval.

Additional details for Full Time Telework may be found on the Full Time Telework site or for more general information, on the Telework Portal. If you have any questions, discuss them with your manager or your (enter bureau telework POC) member. You can also submit questions to the Telework Mailbox.

Employee Certification:

Employees must read and certify each of the four statements above the signature line. All must be checked to proceed to the digital signature area. Ensure that you have read and understand the Full Time Telework policies located on the Full Time Telework Test site, the more general Telework policies on the Telework Portal.

To sign your Agreement-enter your (give instructions for electronic signature) in the signature area and the date. You will be prompted to save a copy of this Agreement. Always retain a copy of the final document for your files.

Supervisor/Manager Certification:

Managers must carefully review the Telework request and respond by approving or denying within 20 business days or sooner if possible. There is no additional mandatory training for Full Time teleworkers however; managers are required to confirm that the employee (at a minimum) has completed the required (enter title of required telework training here). The employee should provide a copy of the training certificate as part of the telework request.

Managers of employees participating in the Full Time telework (NBU only) pilot will find additional guidance here under Manager Resources.

To digitally sign this document, enter your (give instructions for digital signature here) into the signature area and select the date. You will be prompted to save a copy of this document for your records.

Manager Instructions: Within 10 business days of approval, copies of all Telework Agreements or Telework Denials must be added to the appropriate electronic library on the Telework Portal . See “For Managers” section on the right menu.

Denying the Telework Request

Most telework requests are approved however, if there is a valid reason for a denial, the denial must include a business justification in the text box provided on the form and a copy provided to the employee. In addition, a copy must be loaded into the Telework Agreement Denial Library. Follow the instructions at that site. Guidelines for denying Telework requests may be found on the Telework Portal under “For Managers” and at the “Learn More” link above the text box provided for the justification. For Full Time Telework denials, please refer to the eligibility criteria in the Full Time Telework Policy to support your denial.

If you have difficulties filling out this form, please click here to ask your question. For additional support on the Full Time Telework Pilot, click here.

Thank you for supporting telework.

Full Time Telework Guidance \(Sample\)

Guidance for Full Time Telework Test

This guidance provides guidance and instructions regarding a Full-Time (FT) Telework test for non-bargaining unit (NBU) employees. FT Telework is a work arrangement in which the telework site is approved as the employee's official POD and governs the employee's locality pay, benefits, taxes, travel, and other personnel matters. As a full-time teleworker, the employee will work full-time outside of an official (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD at his/her approved telework location (i.e., personal residence or another approved telework location). Employees approved for FT Telework do not have the requirement to report to an official (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD twice per pay period as required in the other telework categories; however, employees may be required to report to an official (ENTER BUREAU NAME) post of duty or other work location on a temporary basis, as business needs dictate.

This guidance applies to (set scope here or...) all NBU employees of the (ENTER BUREAU NAME) who have been approved to participate in the Full Time Telework test via a properly executed Telework Agreement for Full Time Telework (NBU). Bargaining Unit employees are not eligible to participate in this test unless and until an agreement with (enter union name if applicable) is reached.

The purpose of this test is to evaluate the viability of having qualifying employees effectively conduct their job duties from an approved telework site on a full-time basis (i.e., never or rarely reporting to an official (ENTER BUREAU NAME) Post of Duty). After the test, (enter lead office here) will gather and review feedback and partner with (ENTER BUREAU NAME) leadership to determine whether (ENTER BUREAU NAME) will permanently establish the FT Telework category as part of the (ENTER BUREAU NAME) Telework Program.

If it is determined that FT Telework is not appropriate for the (ENTER BUREAU NAME) workforce, all FT Telework test participants will be reassigned to an official (ENTER BUREAU NAME) Post of Duty (POD), generally to their former POD before the test, and revert back to their previous telework arrangement (with an updated telework agreement).

Employees participating in FT Telework must meet the eligibility criteria outlined in the Telework Program (enter policy name here) as well as the following additional criteria:

1. The employee's job responsibilities are such that there is no business need requiring the employee to report to an (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD twice a pay period. These employees typically occupy positions that are "POD neutral", work in a virtual environment, and are not co-located with other staff members.
2. FT Telework will have no negative impact on the employee's ability to carry out his/her duties, nor cause a hardship on the mission, co-workers, or customers.
3. The employee's FT Telework location is within the commuting area (e.g., 50 miles) of any official (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD. This requirement serves to minimize travel reimbursements for local travel if/when the employee may be directed to work at the (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD. This also serves to minimize any potential relocation costs if the employee must be reassigned back to an (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD.
4. Employees in any of the following situations, should in most circumstances not be approved for full time telework:
 - a. employees who are required to attend recurring face-to-face meetings in the same (ENTER BUREAU NAME) office
 - b. employees who routinely turn in monies collected or work papers
 - c. employees responsible for on-going non-electronic filing or records management
 - d. employees who routinely retrieve and/or process mail
 - e. employees who give or receive face-to-face on-the-job training
 - f. employees who are co-located and are expected to collaborate face to face with other on-site workgroup members
 - g. employees who provide office coverage on a rotational basis
 - h. employees who routinely interact with the public from an (ENTER BUREAU NAME)

Employees participating in Full Time Telework must also follow these additional guidelines:

1. Employee will identify the approved FT Telework location in HR Connect under My Information/Personal/Address. The accuracy of this information is critical as it impacts locality pay, benefits, taxes (local, state etc.), travel, and Reduction-In-Force (RIF) procedures, and other personnel matters. Employees bear the responsibility to understand any potential impact pertaining to the above factors before entering into the FT Telework test. Note: Use of a PO Box may not be used for home residence information in HR Connect as the FT TW location.

2. The employee will timely file any tax related withholding forms associated with his/her telework site becoming the official POD if applicable.
3. The employee will use all available current and future technology for collaboration (e.g., Office Communicator, webcam, etc.) available to him/her to foster communication with supervisors, workgroup, and customers. Employee will be equipped with the same equipment as specified in the existing guidance for the (enter telework category or name) telework category.
4. Should the employee decide to withdraw from participation in the FT Telework test the employee must request a reassignment to an (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD at least 30 days prior to the requested reassignment date unless an extenuating circumstances prevent him/her from doing so. This will allow the timely processing of Personnel Action Request (PAR) and coordination with Facilities Management and Security Services (FMSS) for office space needs. The reassignment effective date will be dependent upon office space availability. Relocation/travel reimbursement is not allowable for any reassignments to an (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD at the employee's request.
5. Since the FT Telework site is the employee's official POD, the employee must advise management of any intended move from the approved FT Telework location (current official POD) and request approval of the new official POD with a new FT Telework Agreement. If the proposed new FT Telework site is not within the commuting area of an official (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD, the employee may not be eligible for continuation of FT Telework and may be reassigned to an official (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD. If the move from current POD to new POD results in a change in city, county and/or state, the manager must repeat the building code process.
6. Employees approved for FT Telework must withdraw from any public transit subsidy programs.
7. In the event the employee is temporarily unable to work from his FT Telework site, the employee will advise his/her manager and may request to work temporarily from another telework site within the 50 mile radius (e.g. other suitable location or POD identified on the Telework Agreement). The manager will determine (depending on the circumstances and/or length of unavailability) whether the employee should be reassigned, or temporarily allowed to work at an official (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD. Managers are responsible to make arrangements for their employees who need to report to an alternate POD through the local Administrative Officers.

8. If a manager determines that the FT Telework arrangement must end due to business (e.g. new duties) and/or eligibility reasons (e.g. new job or misconduct), the FT teleworker may be directed to an (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD in accordance with (ENTER BUREAU NAME) directed reassignment procedures including necessary personnel actions. A building code ticket is required to determine if the building code needs to be inactivated in the payroll/ (ENTER BUREAU NAME) systems.

9. Employees who work from the FT Telework site must follow the following mail procedures in coordination with the employee's administrative support personnel:
 - a. Incoming official mail originating external to (ENTER BUREAU NAME) cannot be mailed directly to an employee's telework site. All official mail from external (non-(ENTER BUREAU NAME)) sources must be routed through an official (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD prior to being forwarded to the employee's telework location. Exception: Office supplies originating external to (ENTER BUREAU NAME) (e.g. Office Depot) and ordered by the office credit card holder may be mailed directly to an employee's telework site.
 - b. Outgoing mail must be handed to a USPS carrier and deposited in a secure USPS receptacle or hand-delivered to a clerk at a USPS walk-in counter.
 - c. Home addresses should never be used as a mailing or return address for official mail to or from non-(ENTER BUREAU NAME) sources. When mailing to non-(ENTER BUREAU NAME) sources employees must use an (ENTER BUREAU NAME) official POD address as the return address (e.g. wherever the employee will receive administrative support).

10. When FT Teleworkers are required to travel beyond the 50 mile limit for official business, they must follow the travel regulations for authorization and approval.
 - a. Travel to any (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD within 50 miles, or as identified on the Telework Agreement (if requested by management to attend meetings, equipment repair, etc.) would be compensated under local travel rules.
 - b. FT Teleworkers who want to travel to an (ENTER BUREAU NAME) POD for personal reasons (e.g., attend an office retirement celebration) are not entitled to travel reimbursements and must travel on his/her own time outside TOD or take appropriate leave.

Procedures to Request/Approve Full-Time Telework:

1. Review and understand requirements outlined in this document. Managers will benefit from the information provided in the Manager's Checklist. Employees will benefit from information provided in the Participant Guidance.

2. Complete the new FT Telework Agreement referencing the Full Time Telework Agreement Instructions , both on the Full-Time Telework website.
3. Ensure Mandatory (ENTER BUREAU NAME) Telework Training for Employees (Required) in (enter name of training system) is completed (if not previously done) prior to beginning the FT Telework arrangement. Please note there is optional training available specific to FT Telework on the Full-Time Telework website.
4. Managers must approve/sign the FT Telework Agreement form prior to the employee beginning FT Telework.
5. Managers must complete the following steps to document the FT Telework arrangement:
 - 1) Contact your (enter TW POC) to upload the FT Telework Agreement into the Telework Agreement Library within 10 days of signing (Note: the new FT Telework Agreement will supersede any existing telework agreements in the library),
 - 2) Use the (enter tutorial name here) to effect the change in the official post of Duty:

Participant Guidance (Draft)

- Welcome to the Full Time Telework Test. This document will assist you in being well informed, and provide the necessary links to the most important information.
- Test Participants-Go to end of this document to give feedback on this guidance

How do I apply for Full Time Telework test?

Read the Guidance for Full Time Telework (NBU) to ensure eligibility and to understand your requirements. If you meet eligibility requirements, follow the process below. This process may take a month or so to complete. You must wait until your manager notifies you that these actions are complete before you begin your Full-Time telework.

Employee Responsibilities

1. Carefully review all documentation on the FT Telework website. Bookmark this site.
 - The process to change you to a FT teleworker is very labor intensive and involves many updates to various HR and IT systems. Please read the material, ask questions and give careful consideration before submitting your Telework Agreement.
 - Many of the documents you will encounter are in Word format. This is to permit easy editing as we go along.
 - Please do not make edits to the documents-instead-capture your notes and submit all comments to the Telework Mailbox (or enter your communication method). Reference the document title in your email.
 - We will be aggregating comments and will establish a process of adoption which may include asking you to participate in focus groups.
2. You have the option of taking the Full Time Telework Training located on the website. In addition, if you have not completed the mandatory Telework Training for Employees (or enter title of bureau required training) in ELMS, you must take that course.
3. Consider that entering into a Full-Time Telework arrangement may affect your locality pay, benefits, taxes, travel and Reduction in Force (RIF) procedures. Depending on where your telework location is, your pay may stay the same, or go up or down. It is your responsibility to do the research prior to applying for Full-Time telework. See Decision Guide for Pay Implications for Full-Time Telework.
4. You will need to complete a new Full-Time Telework Agreement for NBU. This form is different from the standard telework agreement. Note-there is a link to instructions on the form to assist you.

When you are approved for full time telework, you will no longer retain your current office space (exception during test only). Therefore, the expectation is that the employee will vacate their workspace and in most cases, move their own files/equipment to the telework location. The (enter bureaus move action name) Ticket action also triggers the tracking of the move of IT assets and telecom updates from the POD, to the new telework location. Important: Be sure to enter required information as stated below.

Move Ticket Process: (bureaus enter their own process for executing a “move”)

Employee does the following in OSGetServices (KISAM):

1. Using KISAM, select “Order from the Product and Service”
2. Select My Workplace
3. Select My Desk/Office
4. Select Move – Furniture, Equipment or People
5. Under “Requested For” your SEID defaults in. Confirm your information or click the light blue icon to auto-populate if not already there.
6. Select Add to Cart to proceed.
7. Complete the following fields:
8. Please describe the service needed (free text): Enter: Participating in Full Time Telework Test (NBU).
9. Location (free text): Enter your current location including suite #, floor #, workstation. Give as much information as you have.
10. Does this request require expedite handling?: Select No
11. The following questions reference the employee’s current POD information:
12. Requested Service (drop down) – Select Move people and their equipment
13. Describe why move is needed (free text) – Enter: Employee approved to participate in Full Time Telework Test (NBU). Employee’s telework location is now their POD.
14. What is the requested move date? (calendar pop up) – Insert date 20 business days after PAR effective date. (see your manager for the PAR effective date)
15. Has this person already moved? (drop down) – Select No
16. Number of people moving? (drop down) – Select 1
17. Select from location (building) – Insert your current POD building code
18. Indicate floor location (free text) – Input your current POD floor location
19. Indicate workstation/office location (free text) – Input your current POD workstation/office location. Give as much information as you can.
20. The following questions reference the employee’s telework location:
21. Select to location building – Input your new building code that begins with “TW” provided by your manager.

22. Indicate floor location (free text) – Input NA
23. Indicate workstation/office location (free text) – Input NA
24. Are shared workstations involved? (drop down) – Select No
25. Is a taxpayer assistance center involved? (drop down) – Select No
26. What does the customer want to move? – Full time teleworkers are only entitled to the equipment as specified for Frequent Teleworkers in Telework Program, IRM 6.800.2.
Therefore in most cases select “No” for each list item as you are responsible for moving your own files/equipment.
27. Go back to top of page. Select Save Details and then Submit. After you submit, you will receive a ticket number via email. You will be notified when actions have been taken and the ticket has been closed.
28. You may begin FT Telework on the effective date of your PAR action and/or when the Discovery Directory shows “Full Time Telework (NBU)” as the employee’s Work Address/ “TW” Location Code. You will also get an email as below confirming your change in POD and reminding you to review your Earnings and Leave Statement.

Subject: Location change notice

A Personnel Action has been processed that changed your geographical location code. This is the code that determines state, city and local taxes. The action taken may have affected the tax withholdings being deducted from your pay check. Please take a moment to review your Earnings and Leave Statement to assure that the proper taxes are being deducted for your personal situation. If you determine that you need changes made to your withholdings please contact the (enter bureau help office here) XXXXX by phone or on the Intranet at <http://XXXXXXXX> to open a ticket and request a form to change your city/state tax. We are required to withhold state taxes based on your duty station. Each state provides guidance and withholding forms on its website. You may also refer to the Federation of Tax Administrators website for links to the each state's withholding forms using their 'search' feature.

6. Building Access (50 mile limit): If you identified a different POD on your Telework Agreement than the POD where you were before FT Telework-you will need to follow the process below. Failure to follow the process below may keep you from gaining access should you have a need to go in. If your 50 mile POD is the same as your prior POD-no action required.

To establish your new building access for the POD that you identified on your Telework Agreement (within 50 miles), you will need to....(bureau enters process here)

- XXXXX
 - Send this form to your manager who will return it to you.
7. While you are waiting to be cleared, you will need to pack up your office. Talk to you manager regarding what files should be retained, and where those files will be stored.
 8. You may opt out of this test at any time by notifying your manager and the Telework Program office through the (enter bureau contact process) During the test, an arrangement with (enter facilites POC here) will preserve your current office/work space in the event that you opt out or the test does not lead to adoption. If Full Time telework is adopted, your office/work space will be released as needed by (enter bureau facilites POC here).
 9. Discuss with you manager about your office supply needs and procedures. You may take your initial supplies from your current POD, however going forward you will need to follow your office procedures for placing orders for office supplies. Your office credit card holder will place your order and it may be mailed directly to your telework location. See Office Supply Guidance.
 10. Both you and your manager will be asked to answer survey questions periodically about how you are doing as a Full-Time teleworker. Your answers will reflect your most recent activities and experiences, and some questions only need to be answered the first time you take the survey. While overall trends will be shared with the participants and managers, individual survey responses will not be released. These surveys are located on the left menu of the Full Time Telework website.
 11. A Participant Log (optional) is available on the website to assist you in capturing notes regarding your full time telework experience and any related costs/savings. This will assist you when it comes time to give input to the Participant survey. Print off a copy and have it handy.

Manager Responsibilities

1. The manager will upload the signed employee's Full Time Telework Agreement to the Telework Agreement Library on the Telework Portal. It is important to select the Full Time Telework type from the drop down menu.
2. Once the employee's Agreement is signed and uploaded to the Telework Agreement Library, the manager must initiate a (enter IT system name here) ticket for a new building code based on either a Change of Duty Location or Change of Building Location. After the building code is received the manager executes a PAR Action in HR Connect and the affected employee puts in a "Move ticket" in (enter bureau system here). This is all part of a 3 step process to 1) obtain a new building code 2) change the employee's POD from their office to their approved telework site. (e.g. residence) which is an OPM requirement and 3) align all IT systems and assets to the employee's new location. These processes may take more than a month or so to complete. The employee must wait until the manager has a PAR "effective date" or when the (enter bureau employee address book name here) shows the POD as Full Time Telework (NBU). Please refer to the Full Time Telework website for tutorials and specific guidance on all of these actions.

3. To assist the employee in gaining access to the POD identified on their Telework Agreement, managers will need to (bureau adds process here).
4. Managers of participants will be asked to answer survey questions periodically about how their employee is doing as a Full-Time teleworker. The answers will reflect the prior month activities and some questions only need to be answered the first time you take the survey. While overall trends will be shared with the participants and managers, individual survey responses will not be released. These surveys are located on the left menu of the Full Time Telework website.

Telework and Dependent Care

While telework is not a substitute for dependent care, it can be a valuable flexibility to employees with caregiving responsibilities, by eliminating time required to commute and expanding employees' choices as to dependent care. For teleworkers with in-home dependent care arrangements, it is also important to remember that telework is official work time and a tool for accomplishing work. Bureaus must ensure that while employees are teleworking, all workplace policies remain in place, including telework start/end times, rules regarding time and attendance, and employee expectations concerning performance and conduct. If the level of care needed for a dependent prevents or significantly disrupts work accomplishment, teleworkers should notify their supervisors as soon as possible about the situation preventing the teleworker from continuing work. Teleworkers should then request approval for appropriate leave or previously earned credit hours or previously earned comp time in accordance with bureau policies and/or collective bargaining agreements while performing dependent care responsibilities. Excused absence (paid administrative leave) will not be granted.

Article 36

Telework Program

Section 1 – Definition and Purpose

- A. Telework is a flexible work arrangement that allows an employee to perform work at an approved alternate worksite, away from his/her official duty station. The mission, roles and responsibilities within each division, office, or staff and its employees will determine how often and to what extent telework is used.
- B. The Parties recognize that telework arrangements may:
 - 1. Protect environmental quality and conserve energy by reducing traffic congestion and vehicle emissions;
 - 2. Improve employees' work lives by allowing a better balance of work and family responsibilities and reduce work-related stress;
 - 3. Improve the Employer's ability to recruit and retain a high-quality workforce in a competitive job market; and
 - 4. Provide for continuity of operations during emergencies.
- C. The Parties recognize that the Program may benefit both the Bureau and participants, and will seek to maximize employee participation in the Telework Program. While telework is not an entitlement, the Employer will consider an employee's request to participate in the Program consistent with law, regulations, and the provisions of this Article. Eligible employees may participate in the telework program to the maximum extent possible without diminished employee performance.
- D. Telework is voluntary, unless the employee accepts a position which includes the responsibility for telework, which he/she then agrees is a regular expectation of his/her position, and is no longer voluntary.

Section 2 – Schedules

Schedule options for telework:

- A. Ad Hoc/Episodic – telework performed on an occasional or one-time basis, depending on the needs of the worker and/or demands of the work.
- B. Limited – level of participation whereby the employee works one (1) or two (2) days each biweekly pay period at the approved alternate worksite, and the remainder of the pay period at the official duty station.
- C. Full – level of participation whereby the employee works three (3) or more days each biweekly pay period at the approved alternate worksite, and the remainder of the pay period at the official duty station. Normally, employees will be required to come into the office at least two (2) days each biweekly pay period.

Section 3 – Eligibility and Participation

- A. Opportunity for participation in the Telework Program shall be equitably and broadly available throughout Fiscal Service when practical and consistent with its mission and when doing so will not diminish employee performance.
- B. Eligibility is based on the duties and responsibilities of each position, as determined by management.
 - 1. Positions not eligible for telework are those which require, on a daily basis (i.e., every workday):
 - a. the direct handling of secure materials, or
 - b. other on-site activity that cannot be handled at an alternate worksite, such as duties requiring face-to-face personal contact, use of hands-on machinery, equipment or vehicles, or other duties requiring a physical presence, as determined by management.
 - 2. If the position is deemed telework eligible, the incumbent may request to participate in telework. Participation will depend on the nature of the work to be performed, office coverage, and on the employee's disciplinary and performance history.
- C. Participation in telework cannot be granted if the employee:
 - 1. Has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five (5) days in any calendar year;
 - 2. Has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties; or
 - 3. Is in a position ineligible for telework.
- D. Participation in telework may not be granted if the employee has:
 - 1. Disciplinary or adverse actions based on leave or attendance abuse or that would establish a lack of trustworthiness on the part of the employee (management may make exceptions to this prohibition on a case-by-case basis, considering things such as length of time elapsed, duties of the position, extenuating circumstances, etc.).
 - 2. A less than Meets Expectations performance appraisal for the latest rating of record, the employee is on a Performance Improvement Plan, or the employee has received a written counseling that his/her performance has dropped below Meets Expectations.

Section 4 – Requesting Telework

- A. To be considered for telework, the employee, in a telework eligible position, must complete:

1. Mandatory telework training;
 2. A telework agreement (Form 36-1); and
 3. Other applicable forms required as part of the overall telework program.
- B. The telework agreement identifies the terms and conditions of participation in the telework program. The employee and supervisor should meet to discuss the content of the request, including the expectations of work, communication, etc.

Section 5 – Approval/Denial

- A. The Employer's decision to grant or deny an employee's request for a regular or ad hoc telework arrangement will be based on the nature and content of the employee's job, whether the arrangement interferes with the Employer's ability to meet mission, staffing and workload requirements, and whether the employee's request is otherwise consistent with this Article.
- B. The Employer may deny or limit an otherwise eligible employee's participation in a telework arrangement if he/she:
1. Is undergoing training in a new job, or is serving a probationary period; or
 2. Has work that requires him/her to be at his/her Official Duty Station in order to accomplish his/her duties (e.g., receiving visitors, sorting or delivering mail, making copies of or binding documents, or providing on-site computer support).
- C. The Employer will respond to the request for telework within fourteen (14) days, providing an approval or denial. If a denial, the Employer will provide the employee with the reason(s) for the denial in writing.
- D. If multiple employees in the same work area request similar telework arrangements and, due to workload demands, not all requests can be accommodated by the Employer, such requests will be evaluated by the Employer based on position and total Federal Government Service.
- E. Requests to increase/decrease an approved telework schedule must be approved by the supervisor, and will be considered based on work load, office coverage, etc.
- F. If an employee seeks to discontinue his/her telework arrangement, he/she may notify his/her supervisor at any time.
- G. If the Employer approves an employee's request for a Limited or Full telework arrangement, the employee's telework schedule will remain fixed, unless and until changed in accordance with this Article.

Section 6 – Performance

- A. An employee and his/her supervisor may meet to discuss any issues relating to the employee's performance while on telework. This discussion may include identifying any problems or obstacles, which may be interfering with the employee's ability to perform required work.

- B. If an employee is not performing successfully for example, where the employee consistently fails to meet established deadlines or fails to progress satisfactorily on assignments and the quality of the employee's performance decreases while on telework, management reserves the right to cancel the telework agreement, requiring the employee to work at his/her official duty station. When performance improves, management may consider a new telework agreement, at the request of the employee.

Section 7 – Coming Into the Office

- A. The Employer reserves the right to direct an employee scheduled for telework to report to his/her Official Duty Station in circumstances deemed necessary by the Employer to meet mission, staffing and/or workload requirements such as: meetings, receiving work assignments, training, travel, unscheduled absences of other employees, emergency situations, or other situations deemed necessary by the Employer to meet mission, staffing and/or workload requirements. The Employer will give the employee as much notice as possible of the need to report to the Official Duty Station.
- B. When the Employer directs the employee to report to his/her Official Duty Station (or to a temporary duty location, if applicable) on the employee's scheduled telework day in a given week, the Employer may grant or deny an employee's request to work a different telework day based on mission, staffing and/or workload requirements.
- C. An employee may request to change his/her scheduled telework day to another day in the work week because of mission, staffing and/or workload requirements.

Section 8 – Changing Positions

When an employee with an approved telework arrangement is promoted, reassigned or detailed, he/she must complete a new telework agreement, requesting telework for his/her new position, if the new position is telework eligible.

Section 9 – Equipment and Security

- A. Teleworkers will be provided government issued equipment for working at the alternate worksite. Teleworkers must ensure government-provided property is used only for approved purposes. The Employer will service the government equipment provided to an employee, but the employee is responsible for bringing the equipment to the official duty station.
- B. An employee must comply with all relevant information technology security measures, including password protection and data encryption, so that Privacy Act and other security standards are not compromised.
- C. An employee will ensure that his/her alternate work site is safe and has adequate workspace, lighting, ventilation, temperature controls, telephone service, power, smoke alarms, and security. The Employer will require the employee to complete a safety checklist.
- D. An employee must protect all government records and data against unauthorized disclosure, access, mutilation, obliteration, and destruction.
- E. The Employer will provide, upon the request of the employee working a regular telework schedule, a phone card for making business-related long-distance telephone calls.

- F. The Employer will provide a teleworking employee on a recurring schedule with necessary and routine office supplies. Necessary and routine office supplies include pens, paper, paper clips, file folders, etc., but does not include items such as fax machines, hole punchers, printers, printer cartridges, etc.

Section 10 – Work Schedules and Leave

- A. Teleworkers are required to:
 - 1. Work their approved work schedule consistent with the provisions of Article 35, Hours of Work.
 - 2. Follow the established procedures for requesting and obtaining approval of leave.
 - 3. Obtain advanced approval prior to working overtime or comp-time, consistent with the provisions of Article 29, Overtime.
 - 4. Record all telework in the electronic time and attendance system.
- B. Telework-ready employees who are scheduled to work on a day of a closure announcement must telework the entire workday or request leave, or a combination of both.

Section 11 – Unscheduled Telework

A type of situational or ad-hoc telework that allows employees to work from home or a nearby alternate location, on a non-telework day, when OPM announces a modified operating status due to inclement weather or special events that severely impact commuting.

- A. When an office closure appears likely, a telework-ready employee is expected, when practicable, to take sufficient work home to cover the expected period of closure. A telework-ready employee who is not scheduled to telework on the day of a closure announcement and who has portable work available will normally be required to perform unscheduled telework during the period of the closure. If the work available to a teleworking employee is insufficient to fill the entire workday, the employee will consult with his/her supervisor who will either assign additional work or grant administrative leave for the remaining portion of the day.
- B. If the supervisor does not have additional work to assign, he/she will grant administrative leave for the portion of the workday the employee did not work. Supervisors may also consider other exigent circumstances (e.g., power outages, connectivity issues, etc.) for granting administrative leave to teleworkers.

Section 12 – Suspension of Telework

- A. The Employer may suspend or terminate an employee's telework arrangement if the Employer finds that:
 - 1. The employee's continued participation in the telework arrangement is inconsistent with the provisions of this Article; or

2. The employee's performance has declined (i.e., where the employee consistently fails to meet established deadlines or fails to progress satisfactorily on assignments).
- B. Prior to suspending or terminating an employee's telework arrangement, the Employer will normally give an employee fourteen (14) days advance notice and an opportunity to meet with the Employer to discuss the reason(s) for suspending or terminating the employee's telework arrangement.
 - C. The suspension or termination of an employee's telework arrangement pursuant to this Section is not a disciplinary action.
 - D. An employee who has had his/her telework arrangement terminated may reapply for such an arrangement three (3) months from the date of termination.

Section 13 – Coverage/Liability

- A. The Employer will not be responsible for operating costs, home maintenance, insurance, or any other costs (e.g., utilities, internet service) associated with the use of an alternate work site. The Employer will reimburse a teleworking employee for appropriate and authorized expenses incurred while conducting official duties at the approved alternate work site, as provided for by law and regulations.
- B. A teleworking employee is covered by the applicable provisions of the Federal Employee's Compensation Act if injured while performing official duties at his/her approved alternate work site. An employee will notify his/her supervisor immediately of any such accident or injury and will complete any required forms. The Employer will investigate such an incident promptly.
- C. The Employer will not be liable for damages to a telework employee's personal or real property while the employee is working at an alternate work site, except to the extent the Employer is held liable under the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act.

Section 14 – Reporting

Within sixty (60) days of the end of each Fiscal Year, the Employer will report to the NTEU the number of bargaining unit employees participating in the telework program broken down by name, division/office/regional office; type of telework (e.g., full, limited, or ad hoc/episodic), days per pay-period, and effective dates. In order to accurately collect this data, employees are required to report the number of hours teleworked each pay period via the electronic time and attendance system.

Internal Revenue Service

TELEWORK BRIDGE PILOT MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING

The National Treasury Employees Union (“NTEU” or “Union”) and the IRS Office of Chief Counsel (“Counsel” or “Agency”) (the Parties) hereby enter into this Memorandum of Understanding (“MOU”) concerning a Telework Bridge Pilot program to expand telework opportunities for bargaining unit employees. Based on lessons learned during the pandemic, on July 23, 2021, the Parties entered into a MOU whereby they agreed to work collaboratively to establish a telework bridge pilot that expands telework opportunities for bargaining unit employees beyond the current limits in Article 48 of the 2018 Counsel-NTEU Agreement (the “CBA”).

This MOU supplements Article 48 of the 2018 Counsel – NTEU Agreement. There are new rules/arrangements/procedures in this MOU, but where an issue is not modified by this MOU, Article 48 continues to control. The Telework Bridge Pilot will begin on the date when Counsel employees are first required to physically report to the physical workplace. The Telework Bridge Pilot will last until a successor master agreement to the 2018 Counsel – NTEU Agreement becomes effective, except as identified below with respect to Level 3 telework.

The Parties agree to expand telework opportunities and modify Article 48 of the CBA as follows:

A. TELEWORK ELIGIBILITY – NEW EMPLOYEES AND TRANSFERS TO A NEW DIVISION

1. The one (1) year probationary/trial period restriction in Article 48, Section 2(B) is eliminated. There is no waiting period for employees in their probationary/trial period before they may telework.
2. All employees hired after the start date of the Telework Bridge Pilot MOU may telework for up to two (2) days per week for the first six (6) months of their employment. After the first six (6) months, these new hires are eligible for telework to the maximum frequency permitted under this MOU. However, an employee’s telework may be restricted if the employee receives a negative written review under Article 28.
3. Any employees on the Counsel rolls on or prior to the start date of the Telework Bridge Pilot will not be subject to the 2 days per week limit and are eligible for telework to the maximum frequency permitted under this MOU.
4. The provisions in Article 48, Section 2(C) concerning the four (4) month waiting period for telework when an employee voluntarily transfers to a new Division or Associate Chief Counsel office are eliminated under this MOU.

5. The provisions in Article 48, Section 2(D) are eliminated for probationary/trial period employees who do not have a performance appraisal of record. Those employees will be assumed to be “Fully Successful” or the equivalent for the purpose of telework, unless and until they receive a performance appraisal of record that rates them as below “Fully Successful” or the equivalent.
6. The following two sentences from Article 48, Section 2(A) are eliminated:

~~But, due to the nature of the position, it is important that support staff be in the office. Therefore, support staff only have limited opportunities to telework, due to the nature of their position.~~

Article 48, Section 2(A) will now say:

The employee must occupy a position in which the work performed is “portable.” The Office has no obligation to restructure an employee’s work to fit this requirement except as it pertains to Section 10 (A), (B), and (C) below. There is no blanket prohibition on telework for support staff.

B. DISCIPLINE AND TELEWORK RESTRICTIONS

1. Counsel waives any telework bar under Article 48, Section 2(E)(2) for any discipline imposed on or prior to the date that the Telework Bridge Pilot starts.
2. For any discipline imposed on or after the start of the Telework Bridge Pilot, Section 2(E) will be changed to say:

An employee who is disciplined for telework-related reasons (for example, AWOL, misuse of leave, etc.) may not telework for the following number of months after being disciplined:

- (a) 12 months for any suspension;*
- (b) 6 months for any written reprimand; and*
- (c) 3 months for any written admonishment.*

This means that employees disciplined for issues like tax compliance or failure to follow directions (absent any telework-related impact) will not have any telework bar due to the discipline.

3. Article 48, Section 2(C)(3) imposing telework restrictions for any employee on a leave restriction letter is eliminated.

C. GEOGRAPHICAL LIMITS ON TELEWORK LOCATION

1. All telework within Counsel must be performed within 200 miles of an employee's POD. The exception to this rule is that managers may waive the 200-mile limit for an employee for up to 10 days per calendar year to permit employees to telework from more remote distances. This waiver may be used to telework on consecutive days or nonconsecutive days.
2. Example: An employee assigned to the National Office has a typical telework location in the Maryland suburbs. The employee's family is going to Florida for one week and the employee wants to telework on Monday and Tuesday of that week and take annual leave for the rest of the week. The manager should approve this telework request so long as the employee does not exceed the other telework limits in this MOU.

D. TELEWORK AND SUPPORT STAFF

1. Telework is available for support staff (GS-318, GS-986, and GS-999 series) under Level 1 telework.
2. Generally, support staff in the National Office and Field (GS-318, GS-986, and GS-999 series) may telework for up to 2 days a Monday – Friday work week with managerial approval subject to workload requirements and/or office coverage (e.g., upcoming Tax Court calendar or a need for coverage in a small POD with only 1-2 support staff).
3. Supervisors will be reasonable in exercising this discretion and will try, where possible, to allow at least one day of telework per Monday – Friday work week, provided there is sufficient portable work.

E. TELEWORK AND CREDIT HOURS

1. Consistent with Article 5 and Article 48, Section 7(B)(5), credit hours may be worked by all bargaining unit employees at a telework site, with supervisory approval, so as to vary the length of a work week or workday on an ad hoc basis.
2. An employee's request to work credit hours at a telework site will be approved if management determines that appropriate work is assigned, necessary, and available. As an example, an Operator can work 2 credit hours on a Saturday catching up on CASE-MIS entries and then take 2 credit hours to do school pick-up on the following Monday. This example is designed to illustrate how credit hours could work for a support staff employee and is not the only circumstance for support staff telework credit hours.

F. DESIGNATED “NO TELEWORK” DAYS

Article 48, Section 6 (E) is modified as follows:

Supervisors may designate days when no telework may be worked during core hours. Supervisors will designate no more than one “no telework” day per pay period.

G. TELEWORK AGREEMENTS

1. All employees who want to telework at the start of the Telework Bridge Pilot must sign the attached “Telework Bridge Pilot Agreement” within 45 days after the telework pilot begins. Thereafter, any eligible employee who wishes to telework can sign a “Telework Bridge Pilot Agreement” (subject to L(1)(b) below). Any such employee’s telework would begin after management approval.
2. Once signed, these telework agreements will be effective for the life of the Telework Bridge Pilot and will not need to be renewed or re-signed.
3. However, this will not preclude an employee from voluntarily terminating their telework agreement prior to the end of the Telework Bridge pilot.

H. CHILD/DEPENDENT CARE

Article 48, Section 7(C) is modified as follows:

While telework is not intended to serve as a substitute for child/dependent care or other caregiving responsibilities, this does not preclude employees with such caregiving responsibilities from teleworking solely because the dependent is home.

I. REASONABLE ACCOMMODATION

Article 10, Section 10 (B) is modified to add the following language:

Any temporary exception allowing an employee to telework full-time versus physically report to the POD which was approved by Counsel prior to the start of the Telework Bridge Pilot will continue for 45 days after the Telework Bridge Pilot starts, or for the length of the temporary exception that was previously approved, whichever is later, so that the employee will have an opportunity to request a more permanent reasonable accommodation.

J. LEVEL 2 TELEWORK (3 DAYS/WEEK)

1. The provisions of Article 48, Section 4(B) concerning Level 2 telework are broadened so that additional bargaining unit employees are eligible to telework 3 days a week. All Counsel bargaining unit employees who meet the eligibility requirements will qualify for Level 2 telework except for the following employees:

- a. GS-318, GS-986 and GS-999 Legal Assistants and Secretaries; and
 - b. Employees in their first 6 months with Counsel (except as provided in Section A(3) above).
2. The provisions of Article 48, Section 4(B)(1)(b), (c), and (d) about positions being eligible for Level 2 telework are eliminated as well as the 4-year experience rule and the 125-mile rule.
 3. Level 2 teleworkers will not be required to give up office space unless Counsel determines that it is needed. If Counsel makes the determination that office space occupied by a Level 2 teleworker is needed, then space issues will be addressed pursuant to Article 48, Section 4(B)(3)(a).

K. LEVEL 3 TELEWORK (4 DAYS/WEEK)

1. Through this MOU, the Parties are creating Level 3 telework, which allows up to 4 days/week telework.
2. A limited group of employees may qualify for Level 3 (4 days/week) if they have been with Counsel for at least 3 years. Those employees are:
 - a. Attorneys, Tax Law Specialists, and paralegals; and
 - b. Other bargaining unit non-support staff including Tech Advisors, Budget Analysts, and Librarians.
 - c. The 3 years mentioned in K(2) to be eligible for Level 3 telework are measured as cumulative time meaning the time includes prior service with Counsel even if there has been a break in service. This cumulative rule does not apply if the employee's most recent break in service was more than 10 years ago.
3. The 4 days/week for a Level 3 teleworker must all be regularly scheduled telework days during a Monday – Friday work week. This does not preclude an employee from switching a telework day, with managerial approval.
 - a. Management and the Level 3 teleworker work together to schedule the 4 days.
 - b. If management finds that the employee is needed in the office for business reasons, management could cancel the 4th telework day or all telework days by giving the employee notice in writing of the cancellation and business reason(s) therefore. If this happens, the employee will have no right to reschedule the planned telework days.

- c. However, if management later determines that the business need to be in the office no longer exists (e.g., Tax Court case settled), the employee may telework for the remaining regularly scheduled telework days that were cancelled.
- d. Examples of “business reasons” referred to in (b) above: Attorney needed in the office for Tax Court calendar, collaboration via in-person meeting on large case strategic litigation or guidance project, or in-person training, or other work assignments that require the presence of the employee in the office (e.g., assimilation/mentoring of new employees).

L. SPACE ISSUES FOR LEVEL 3 (4 DAY/WEEK) TELEWORK

1) Notice and Information

- a) Any bargaining unit employee that wants to begin 4 day telework upon reentry must notify management in writing of their intent to request 4 day telework by January 14, 2022 so the parties may address space needs upon reentry post-pandemic.
- b) If an employee did not request Level 3 telework under (a) above, the next opportunity to do so is 6 months after the Telework Bridge Pilot begins (subject to M(2) below).
- c) Counsel will notify NTEU National and the local NTEU stewards via email on or before January 14, 2022 of any specific posts of duty where space is needed such that 4-day teleworkers will have to work in shared space.
- d) Nothing herein shall prevent bargaining unit employees who are approved for 4 day/week telework to voluntarily share an office with another bargaining unit employee where the POD does not currently require office sharing for 4 day/week teleworkers.

2) Procedures for Office Sharing for Employees on Level 3 Telework Determined by NTEU and Bargaining Unit Employees – First 6 Months of Pilot

- a) The BU employees in each POD/Associate office where Counsel has identified there is a need for 4-day teleworkers to share space will hold meetings locally with NTEU. NTEU and the bargaining unit employees will determine how office sharing will work for first 6 months. The Level 3 teleworkers must somehow “share” or “hotel” their space with at least one, and up to two other Level 3 teleworkers, depending on the needs of the post of duty. The local Counsel Stewards/National Steward will resolve any conflicts during the space sharing discussions.

- b) If local bargaining unit discussions over shared space for the PODs identified by Counsel as having space sharing needs are not concluded by the required re-entry date for that post of duty, the space sharing procedures in paragraph 3 will apply.
- 3) Procedures for Office Sharing for Employees on Level 3 Telework if NTEU and Bargaining Unit Employees are Unable to Agree – First 6 Months of Pilot
- a. All employees who elect 4 day/week telework must share their offices, if necessary due to space needs of their POD.
 - b. The Level 3 teleworker has 1 pay period (transition pay period) to clean up his or her office so that one or two other employees can “sit” in that office temporarily for the 6 months.
 - c. The Level 3 teleworker must clear desktop of all personal possessions / files and one file drawer or bookshelf in office.
 - d. For the first 6 months, the Level 3 teleworker is not required to entirely move of his/her old private office but is required to allow other employees to sit there.
 - e. The Level 3 teleworker may be able to sit in their old office on the day they come into office (whether it is “no telework” day or not). As an alternative, the Level 3 teleworker could sit in a cubicle, conference room, or library.
 - f. A Level 3 teleworker is not eligible under Article 46, Section 9 to move offices if there is vacancy during this time period.
 - g. Bargaining unit employees will not share space with non-bargaining unit employees.
 - h. Other details about space sharing will be worked out at local level / Associate Office level (junior person with window etc.) as described above in Section 2(a).
 - i. At the end of the first 6-month period, if 4 day/week telework ends, then the prior Level 3 teleworkers will return to their prior office.
 - j. If Level 3 telework continues beyond the first 6 months, the parties will begin bargaining the details of space sharing at the end of the 2nd 6 month

Telework Bridge Pilot period. Until bargaining is completed, Level 3 teleworkers will continue to follow the space sharing rules agreed to in paragraph 2 or 3 above.

- k. Surplus Offices and Work Stations. In the event that there are surplus or vacant offices and/or work stations after implementation of any local office/desk sharing arrangement, Counsel will make such offices and work stations available to eligible bargaining unit employees in Counsel consistent with Article 46, Section 9.
- l. Return of Offices to Level 3 Teleworkers. In the event 4-day telework is terminated for any employee who is participating in an office/desk sharing arrangement, that employee will be returned to the office/desk they occupied prior to the sharing arrangement on the first full pay period following the termination of 4-day telework. Any employees sharing or occupying that office/desk will be reassigned to a new office/desk sharing arrangement following any locally negotiated procedures for office/desk sharing.
- m. Reasonable Accommodation. Counsel will ensure that when employees have approved reasonable accommodations and a local office/desk sharing arrangement will interfere with such accommodations, the impacted employees will be exempted from participation in the local office/desk sharing arrangement. Example: If an employee has a special chair due to a reasonable accommodation, the chair will be moved aside in the private office so that another employee can share the office. This is an example of when a reasonable accommodation does not except the employee from office/desk sharing.
- n. Equipment. Counsel will ensure that each employee participating in a local office/desk sharing arrangement has sufficient lockable storage space to store his/her files. For any Criminal Tax (CT) employees who are impacted by office/desk sharing arrangements, Counsel will ensure that those employees have secure, lockable storage for grand jury material that is approved by CT Area Counsel.
- o. Sanitation. Counsel will ensure that hand sanitizer and disinfectant wipes are available at all shared work stations.

M. DURATION / TERM

1. This Telework Bridge Pilot lasts until a successor master agreement to the 2018 Counsel – NTEU Agreement becomes effective, except as identified below with respect to Level 3 telework.

2. Level 3 Telework: As an exception to the duration/term provision above, the following will apply to the Level 3 telework provisions:
 - a. Designated NTEU and Counsel representatives will “check in” monthly during the initial 6 months of the Telework Bridge Pilot regarding status.
 - b. At the 6-month point, if the Office determines that the 4 day/week telework arrangement is having a negative operational impact, the Office will send written notice to NTEU of its intention to terminate the 4 day/week telework arrangement and the reasons for the proposed termination.
 - c. In the event such notice is provided, the parties will meet to discuss whether changes to the Level 3 telework provisions can be made in lieu of termination. If there is no agreement within 30 days from the notice date of termination, Level 3 telework will end.
 - d. If Level 3 telework ends, there will at least one full pay period notice given to employees before the change becomes effective.
 - e. If the parties agree to continue Level 3 telework under modified terms, the parties will reassess at the 6-month point (using the same process set forth above) after the modified terms begin.
3. If the Office does not provide the notice described above in Section M(2), the 4 day/week telework arrangement described in this agreement will continue and the same process will apply at the next 6-month point (and at subsequent 6-month points) until a successor master agreement becomes effective.
4. Counsel will collect and compile data during the pilot to assess Level 3 telework, including the frequency and reasons for cancellation of telework days, denials of 4 day/week telework requests and the reasons therefore, and data on which employees participated in 4 day/week telework. The data will be compiled within 15 days after each 6-month period and promptly shared with NTEU.

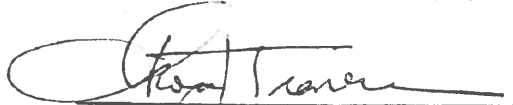

N. GENERAL PROVISIONS

1. Telework limits under this MOU will not apply during any period of time that a telework-eligible employee is required to quarantine due to: a positive COVID-19 test, or where quarantine is recommended by CDC guidelines in place at that time, or where a local public health official orders quarantine.
2. Counsel will promptly send a copy of this MOU via email to all bargaining unit employees once executed, and post and maintain the signed MOU on the Counsel Labor & Employee Relations intranet page and the NTEU Union intranet page.

3. In the event that significant or unanticipated problems or concerns develop in the course of implementation of this MOU, Counsel and NTEU agree to notify each other and promptly meet to discuss and attempt to resolve any problems.
4. This agreement shall become effective upon Agency head review or on the thirty-first (31st) day after execution, whichever occurs first. However, the parties agree the Telework Bridge Pilot will not start until the first day that Counsel bargaining unit employees are required to report to the physical workplace.

CHIEF COUNSEL POLICIES AND PROCEDURES FOR TELEWORK

Time, Leave and Office Closings:

1. I understand while doing telework I must be available to supervisors, customers, clients, and co-workers. Accordingly, I will be available for all business during my regularly scheduled tour of duty while teleworking, except for approved leave or credit hours.
2. I agree to notify my supervisor and request appropriate leave if I am unable to perform work during my tour of duty. I understand that I will be responsible for requesting leave or credit hours in accordance with established office procedures for all periods I do not work during my tour of duty while on approved telework.
3. I understand that I may (in appropriate circumstances) be called back to my official duty station in accordance with the rules and procedures explained in Article 48, Section 6(D).
4. I understand that, when an emergency condition forces the closure of my POD and employees working in that facility are granted administrative leave, the general rule is that I will not receive administrative leave, except for employees occupying a position in the GS-318, GS-986, and GS-999 series (i.e., Legal Assistants and Secretaries), and must instead work at my telework location. More details about these rules are explained in Article 48, Section 10 of the 2018 Counsel – NTEU Agreement.

Safety and Security Issues:

5. I understand that it is my responsibility to observe the required security precautions normally associated with my work. I will apply safeguards to protect any information regarding tax returns and return information as defined in I.R.C. § 6103 and comply with the Privacy Act, 5 USC § 552(a). Due to security standards, I may not use my home computer for Office work.
6. I agree to provide an adequate work area for the performance of my official duties. I understand any accident or injury at the telework site while I am performing work duties must be brought immediately to the attention of my supervisor. I understand that Federal Employee's Compensation Act regulations and procedures will be applied if I am injured while performing work duties.

7. I understand I am responsible for ensuring the safety of the work environment at my telework location and the Government will not be liable for damages to my personal or real property occurring during the course of my performing official duties, or while using Government equipment in my residence, except to the extent that the Government is held liable under the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Military Personnel and Civilian Employee's Claims Act. I also understand a claim for negligent or wrongful acts or omissions that occur while I work at my residence may be covered under the Federal Tort Claims Act.

Costs and Equipment:

8. I understand that the Government will not be responsible for providing high-speed internet access or any operating costs, home maintenance, phone installation, or other incidental costs (e.g., utilities) associated with the use of my residence/alternative work site. This does not preclude reimbursements for authorized expenses incurred while conducting official business for the Office (e.g., long distance phone calls). I understand that I will be responsible for notifying my supervisor of any Government resources or services I may need to use, as well as the amount of expenses for such resources or services, and that any such services or resources (other than long distance phone calls to the office from the alternate work site) must be approved before my securing them. Requests for reimbursement of these services and resources will be substantiated by appropriate receipts.

9. I understand I will be responsible for the protection of any Government equipment provided to me, and that I am solely responsible for the cost, if any, of transporting such Government equipment from my official duty station to my telework location as well as the costs, if any, of returning the equipment to my official duty station.

(For bargaining unit employees only):

I have read and agree to abide by all provisions of Article 48 of the CC – NTEU 2018 Counsel – NTEU Agreement, and 2021 Counsel-NTEU Telework Bridge Memorandum of Understanding.

(If deemed necessary by manager approving form):

Due to employee's specific job, there are requirements on how long files can be kept at a telework location.

Any other unique rules based on employee's particular job

I have discussed the employee's Telework Agreement with him or her and I am approving this Agreement:

Manager Signature

the date of the notice provided to the Union in subsection 2A1 above. The time period for bargaining may be extended, as necessary, upon mutual agreement. The parties may address in bargaining any matters that are not expressly covered by this Agreement, except that matters addressed in Article 39 shall be considered appropriate subjects for bargaining.

3. If the Parties fail to reach agreement following bargaining, the Parties will resolve any impasse through the impasse resolution procedures contained in Article 47, Section 2.

B. Miscellaneous

1. Employees may not substitute annual leave, sick leave, paid administrative leave, compensatory time, credit hours or any other paid leave for furlough hours.
2. If an employee has “use or lose” leave scheduled during the furlough, the employee and their manager shall make every reasonable effort to reschedule the expiring leave during the leave year. In the event that it cannot be rescheduled, the shutdown will qualify as an exigency of the public business and the forfeited leave may be restored in accordance with IRM 6.630.1.3.3.
3. When an administrative furlough impacts the contractual deadlines of this Agreement, all parties will be provided one (1) additional day in which to meet those contractual deadlines for each day of the furlough.

Article 49 | Transfer of Function

Section 1

Purpose and Definition

- A. This Article establishes procedures for movement of work under Transfer of Function (TOF) regulations. Any TOF will be in accordance with applicable law, rule, and regulation.
- B. A TOF means the transfer of the performance of a continuing function from one competitive area and its addition to one or more other competitive areas, except when the function involved is virtually identical to functions already being performed in the other competitive area(s) affected. A TOF is also movement of the competitive area in which the function is performed to another commuting area. In a TOF, the operation of the function must cease in one competitive area and must be carried on in an identical form in another competitive area where it was not being performed at the time of transfer.

Section 2

Notification

- A. When it is determined that a TOF is necessary, management agrees to inform the Union as far in advance as practicable, giving the reason for the action, the appropriate numbers, types and geographic location of positions affected, and the approximate date of the action. At that point the Union will be permitted to invoke negotiations over this change.
- B. The Service will notify impacted employees of the proposed TOF plan in writing. The employee will be able to consider the action and decide whether he or she will transfer with the function or not. Where the TOF is to another commuting area, the employee will not have less than ten (10) days to state his or her intentions.
- C. Affected employees may be covered under the provisions of Article 51 CTAP, and/or may be separated under provisions consistent with 5 C.F.R. §§ 752 and 351.

Article 50 | Telework

Section 1

General

- A. 1. Telework is a program that permits employees to work at home or at other approved locations remote to the assigned post-of-duty (POD). Telework arrangements may include working at home or in satellite office sites or other approved Telework work sites with or without computers and other electronic equipment. The assigned POD of an employee approved for Telework must be an IRS POD and may not be the employee’s residence.
2. For all Telework arrangements approved by the Employer, the Telework location must be within a 200-mile radius of the employee’s assigned POD. Managers have discretion to approve exceptions for up to two pay periods per calendar year. If granted, the reporting requirements in Section 1.A.3-4 and 4.B are waived (all other provisions of this Article apply), and the employee will be required to use their own leave if unable to telework (e.g., power outage). Approvals must be in writing.
3. If requested by the Employer, the employee must be able to report to their office for their normal tour of duty on the following workday at no cost to the Employer. Furthermore, the requirement to report to their POD could be for any number of workdays or consecutive workdays and will not entitle the employee to reimbursement for travel and per diem.

4. Employees on a Telework arrangement are required to report to their assigned POD at least two (2) days each pay period for their full TOD, and may be removed from Telework if they fail to do so. However, managers have discretion to waive the reporting requirement for Teleworkers in accordance with 5 C.F.R. Sec. 531.605(d)(2). Such a waiver will be in writing. Mobile workers who regularly perform work within the locality pay area meet the reporting requirement. If an employee is on an approved absence for all of the day on which they would otherwise have to report to the POD, the requirement to report is satisfied. An employee who has reported to their POD for less than their full TOD to the extent they are on approved leave has met the requirement.
5. A supervisor's official relationship with, authority over, and accountability for an employee participating in the Service's Telework Program is no different than their relationship with, authority over, and accountability for employees who are not participating in the Telework Program. Consistent with the provisions of this Article, the supervisor retains the authority to review, determine, and approve participation in this program.

B. Types of Telework

Employees may be eligible for Frequent Telework, Recurring Telework or Ad Hoc Telework consistent with the criteria set forth in subsections 2F, 2G, 2H, 2I and 2J of this Article.

1. Frequent Telework involves regular and recurring duties that may be performed at the approved Telework site for more than eighty (80) hours each month (not including overtime, credit hours or compensatory time worked).
2. Recurring Telework involves recurring work assignments performed at the approved Telework site for eighty (80) hours or less per month (not including overtime, credit hours or compensatory time worked).
3. Ad Hoc Telework involves instances of non-recurring projects or work assignments that may occasionally be performed at the approved Telework site. Each instance of Ad Hoc Telework must be approved in advance by the supervisor.

- C. Participants will be permitted to work at home or other Telework work sites full days or a portion of a day when approved for a Telework arrangement pursuant to the provisions of this Article.

1. Work schedules for employees participating in Telework must be consistent with the provisions of Article 23 of this Agreement. Employees who Telework for a portion of a day must use non-duty hours (e.g., unpaid lunch or meal period), or otherwise take leave or credit hours for commuting between their POD and approved Telework site.
 2. Unless as otherwise provided by this Article, there is no limitation on how the days worked on Telework may be configured as long as the scheduling is not disruptive to the work that remains in the office nor causes an unreasonable burden on those who choose not to work a Telework arrangement. For example, a Recurring Telework Agreement may include recurring or concurrent days each week, a single day, or a group of single days (e.g., Mondays in October, Tuesdays in November), depending on the nature of the employee's work. Management and employees may decide not to designate specific recurring days but to engage in an ongoing discussion as needed as to which days should be designated based upon the nature of the employee's work.
- D. Work away from the office may vary depending upon the individual arrangements between the employee and the manager.
 - E.
 1. Employee participation in the Telework Program is voluntary. Once an employee enters into a Telework Agreement, the employee may, at any time, terminate, reduce, or request to increase the number of hours and/or days on which the employee performs work at the Telework location. If such modifications change the type of Telework for which the employee has been approved (e.g., from Frequent to Recurring Telework), the employee will be required to execute a new Telework Agreement.
 2. Employees who choose to work Frequent Telework should be prepared to continue in that program for a period of at least twelve (12) months given the impact it could create by returning to the office and requiring office space. Any time an employee on Frequent Telework believes they need to permanently or temporarily return to work in the IRS office, the employee will normally provide the Employer with thirty (30) days notice of the needed change, except in emergency situations such as the loss of space in the home, security reasons or lack of equipment. The Employer will make reasonable efforts to accommodate the employee's needs. Employees returning to the IRS office in these circumstances must recognize that the equipment and workstations that are made available by the Employer may not immediately be the same as the ones they had prior to participating in the Telework Program. Subject to the provisions of Article 11, Section 23 of the Agreement, the Employer is expected to provide the employee a complete work area equal or similar to that of others in their occupation in their assigned POD within a reasonable time frame.

- F. Telework is not a replacement for dependent/family care. Employees with a Telework Agreement are permitted to Telework even if there are dependents/family at the Telework site. However, any interruptions or time spent giving care to such individuals during the employee's tour of duty will not be considered hours of work. The employee is expected to account for such non-work hours as soon as practicable with appropriate leave (paid or unpaid) or other paid time off.

Section 2

Eligibility

To be considered for a Telework arrangement or to continue to work on a Telework arrangement, an employee must meet the following criteria:

- A. An employee must have been in the Service's employ for at least twelve (12) months; however, the supervisor may decide to shorten the one (1) year service requirement on a case-by-case basis.
- B. An employee must have a "fully successful" (or equivalent) performance appraisal. If the employee has worked for more than twelve (12) months and does not have an appraisal, they will be assumed to be "fully successful." If the employee is on a Performance Improvement Plan (PIP), they are not considered to be fully successful and not eligible for participation in the Telework Program.
- C. 1. The employee must not have received any disciplinary/adverse action in the last twelve (12) months that would negatively impact the integrity of the Telework Program, e.g., falsification of time and attendance records or any violation of Section 1203(b) of the RRA of 1998.
2. The employee must not have received a disciplinary action for being absent without permission for more than five (5) days (at least 41 hours) in any one (1) calendar year and the record of the discipline remains in the OPF. For the purpose of this provision, "officially disciplined" means any discipline that is placed in the employee's OPF.

3. The employee must not have ever been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.
4. If the employee's duties have been changed due to a conduct investigation in which management has sufficient evidence of serious wrongdoing that would negatively impact the integrity of the Telework Program, the employee will not be approved for Telework pending resolution of the conduct investigation.
- D. The employee must be at the journey or full working level of their position (e.g., Revenue Officer GS-11) or have been in the position for more than two (2) years, whichever is less. However, the supervisor may decide to shorten the two (2) year time frame in this subsection on a case-by-case basis.
- E. 1. The employee must have a telephone (or capability to make and receive calls) and high-speed internet if the work being performed at the Telework site requires IRS network connectivity; work space suitable to perform work; utilities adequate for installing equipment; and a general work environment that is generally free from interruptions and provides reasonable security and protection for government property. The cost of these will not be paid by the Service. Nothing in this provision prohibits employees who are issued a mobile hotspot or other comparable technology consistent with their IT profile from using it at a Telework location.
2. In addition to the requirements in Section 2E1, above, telephone trained employees (as defined in Exhibit 23-1, Section 2A1) who are assigned incoming/outgoing calls using an automated telephone system must have high-speed internet through a wired connection to their IRS computer if management determines it is necessary. Where the employer has determined a wired connection is necessary, it will provide cables of up to 100' feet, upon request.

F. Frequent Telework Criteria

An employee who meets the eligibility criteria set forth in subsections 2A through 2E, above, is assigned to one of the occupations listed in Exhibit 50-2, and has regular and recurring duties that may be performed at the approved Telework site for more than eighty (80) hours each month will normally be approved for Frequent Telework upon request. Employees may be approved for any number of days and hours between the minimum (more than 80 hours per month) and maximum, consistent with the two-day reporting requirement in Section 1A4, above (e.g., dependent on their job duties, some employees may be required to report to the office more than two days per pay period). However, the parties recognize that some employees in the occupations listed below may be assigned duties that are not appropriate for Frequent Telework. Therefore, the Employer reserves the right to assert on a case-by-case basis that an employee is not eligible for Frequent Telework. Such an assertion must be based upon a determination that the employee's work at the time of the request; (1) does not encompass regular and recurring duties that can be effectively accomplished outside of the traditional office/team setting; or (2) cannot be accomplished by an employee working independently of other co-workers, support staff, and/or their supervisor, without any adverse impact on individual and/or overall team or office productivity or customer service.

The parties at the National level may mutually agree to place other positions on Frequent Telework.

G. Frequent Telework – Other Occupations

Nothing in this section precludes an employee who meets the eligibility criteria in subsections 2A through 2F above, and is assigned to an occupation not listed in Exhibit 50-2, from requesting Frequent Telework. Such requests will be approved or denied based on the criteria listed in subsection 2F, above.

H. Recurring Telework Criteria

1. All IRS employees, including those in occupations listed in Exhibit 50-2, and employees occupying campus positions, who meet the eligibility criteria set forth in subsections 2A through 2E above, and who occupy a position that involves recurring work and assignments for eighty (80) hours or less per month that: (1) can be effectively accomplished outside of the traditional office/team setting; and (2) can be accomplished independently of other co-workers, support staff, and/or the employee's supervisor, without any adverse impact on individual/team or overall office productivity or customer service may request and be approved to work Recurring Telework. Using the criteria listed above, the supervisor will, on a case-by-case basis at the time of the request, either approve or disapprove the request. Employees may be approved for any number of days and hours up to a maximum of 80 hours per month.
2. The hours specified above shall be prorated for part-time employees.

I. Ad Hoc Telework Criteria

All IRS employees who meet the eligibility criteria set forth in subsections 2A through 2E, above, and have work assignments that can be effectively accomplished outside of the traditional office/team setting on an occasional basis such as report writing, document review, a project, preparing course materials for an instructor assignment or drafting correspondence, may work Ad Hoc Telework subject to the approval of their supervisor.

J. Dispute Resolution

Any disputes over the denial of a Telework arrangement will be resolved as follows:

1. The Employer will place in writing its decision to deny a Telework request and provide the written decision to the employee. Within ten (10) workdays of the employee's receipt of the written decision to disapprove the request for Telework, the Union and/or employee may file a request for reconsideration of the denial to the first level Executive or designee in the employee's chain-of-command.
2. The written request for reconsideration must include the reasons that the employee and/or Union believe the denial was not appropriate.
3. If requested by either party, a telephonic meeting will be held to discuss the denial of the Telework arrangement. During the meeting, the Union may present documents to support approval of the Telework arrangement.
4. The meeting shall include a Union steward, the employee, the Executive or designee. A Labor Relations Specialist may also attend at the option of the Executive or designee.
5. The Executive or designee will consider the information submitted by the employee and/or Union and provide a written response to the employee and Union within fifteen (15) workdays of the receipt of the request for reconsideration or the telephonic meeting if one is held.
6. If the Union disagrees with the decision of the Executive or designee, the Union may invoke arbitration in accordance with the streamlined arbitration process of Article 43, subsection 4D of this Agreement. However, conventional arbitration procedures will be followed if either party provides notice of the intent to introduce bargaining history consistent with Article 43, subsection 4A21 of this Agreement.

K. Modification, Suspension, or Termination of Telework Arrangements

A supervisor may temporarily suspend, modify or terminate a Telework arrangement. Decisions to temporarily suspend, modify, or terminate a Telework arrangement must be made by the supervisor on a case-by-case basis and based on business needs or employee performance or conduct. Examples of reasons for a temporary suspension, modification or termination of a Telework arrangement would include:

1. anytime an employee falls below minimum eligibility requirements as defined in this Article;
2. an employee fails to comply with their Telework agreement;
3. failure by the employee to communicate with managers, co-workers and customers consistent with subsection 5A2 of this Article;
4. issuance of a PIP, leave restriction letter, or intent to deny a within-grade increase;
5. an employee who otherwise has portable duties is temporarily required to provide on-site office coverage;
6. the employee's performance declines (e.g., reduction in a mid-year progress review or end-of-year appraisal, two (2) negative recordation's separated by at least sixty (60) days for employees at the journey level or higher; or two (2) negative recordation's separated by at least thirty (30) days for employees below the journey level) and the decline may be reasonably attributed to working on Telework.
7. In the event an employee changes positions, the manager and the employee should review and update the Telework Agreement, as necessary.
8. If the employee's duties have been changed due to a conduct investigation in which management has sufficient evidence of serious wrongdoing that would negatively impact the integrity of the Telework Program, the employee may be suspended from Telework pending resolution of the conduct investigation; and/or
9. Final disciplinary or adverse action based on conduct that negatively impacts the integrity of the Telework Program, e.g., falsification of time and attendance records or any violation of RRA of 1998, Section 1203(b). Under such circumstances, the employee may be suspended from Telework for up to twelve (12) months beginning on the effective date of the discipline.

Section 3

Implementation

- A. Prior to engaging in Telework, employees must individually enter into a Telework Agreement. The Telework Agreement may be found in Exhibit 50-1. Exhibit 50-1 is available electronically as Form 11386. The Telework Agreement will include the current Telework type, location, and day(s) or schedule. Any permanent change that modifies the employee's type of Telework (e.g., Frequent to Recurring, Recurring to Frequent) must be captured in a new Telework Agreement. Changes to Telework days that do not affect the type of Telework for which employees are approved may be made by pen and ink changes on their existing Telework agreement.
- B. Employees who are currently approved for a Frequent or Recurring Telework arrangement may retain that arrangement pursuant to the provisions of this Article.
- C. Training
 1. Employees shall complete IRS Telework training prior to entering into a Telework Agreement.
 2. Subject to workload considerations, employees will be granted up to one (1) hour of administrative time to complete the Telework training.
 3. NTEU Chapters may review the Telework training material by accessing the Agency's online training platform

Section 4

Management Responsibilities

- A. Managers will meet with Telework employees at least once a year for the purpose of discussing, reviewing, and updating the Telework agreement, including capturing any update to a telework location in a new Telework Agreement, if necessary.
- B. The Employer has the right to direct Telework employees to report to the office on their scheduled telework day due to special circumstances, e.g., office assignments, meetings and/or training classes, Filing Season Agreements, and details to other duties. These should be planned to give the employee notice in time to travel to the official duty site during their regular commute time. Time spent traveling will not be considered hours of work if it is commuting. When the employee is scheduled for a full day tour of duty (TOD) at the Telework site and receives notification to report to the official duty station too late to travel during normal commute time, administrative time will be granted.
- C. The Employer has the right to meet with employees to give assignments and to review work as necessary at either the official duty station, approved Telework location, or a mutually agreed upon site.

- D. To ensure that Information Systems and sensitive information procedures are in place at alternate work sites, the Employer may inspect the employee's work site with forty-eight (48) hours notice to the employee. The employee may arrange for an NTEU representative to accompany the Employer at the inspection. If the employee refuses a work site inspection, the Employer may immediately cancel the employee's Telework arrangement and the employee must surrender all Employer equipment and return to the appropriate office setting. The Employer will notify the employee as to the date and approximate time of arrival, the number of management officials coming to their home, the estimated duration of the inspection and other appropriate information. The employee is entitled to forty-eight (48) hours notice of any such visits to the employee's work site except in cases of emergency or similar extraordinary cause. In all cases, as much notice as possible will be given.

Section 5

Employee Responsibilities

- A. 1. Employees must notify the supervisor and/or designee of changes in work locations and conditions that interrupt work (e.g., power or internet outage), and must maintain communications with managers, co-workers and customers during the time the employee is on Telework.
2. Employees may be required to report to the worksite for regularly scheduled meetings.
- B. Employees must protect all Government records and data against unauthorized disclosure, access, mutilation, obliteration, and destruction. Files and other information that are subject to the Privacy Act regulations must be secured in a way that renders these records and data inaccessible to anyone other than the employee. At a minimum, this will require that all records and data be kept under lock and key when not in the possession of the employee.
- C. Employees must comply with all required security measures and disclosure provisions, including computer cable locks, password protection and data encryption so that at no time are the security, disclosure, or Privacy Act requirements of the Service compromised.
- D. Employees must ensure that government provided equipment/property is used only for authorized purposes.

- E. Employees may not use a personal email account to conduct any official business of the Government.
- F. Employees will inform the supervisor when they are unable to perform work due to illness or personal problems during the Telework TOD and requesting appropriate leave. Employees on Telework who experience conditions that prevent work at their Telework site and that do not impact their assigned POD (e.g., power outage, connectivity issues) will contact their manager as soon as practical. Employees may be directed to report to their assigned POD to complete their workday. Employees who are directed to report to their assigned POD to complete their workday will be granted administrative time (duty time) to report to the office. Managers may grant administrative leave, subject to any statute or regulation, in lieu of directing the employee to report to the POD on a case-by-case basis.

Section 6

Time and Attendance, Hours of Duty, and Alternate Work Schedules (AWS)

- A. Existing rules in Title 5 of the U.S. Code and the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) apply to Telework arrangements.
- B. Participants may request any schedule allowed for their positions consistent with Article 23 of this Agreement. Employees may earn credit hours on Telework, if permitted by their work schedule, and consistent with the provisions of Article 23, subsection 5A1 of this Agreement.
- C. Overtime, compensatory time and credit hours must be approved in advance consistent with Articles 23 and 24 of this Agreement.
- D. Regulations and provisions of this Agreement regarding leave remain unchanged under the Telework Program.
- E. Employees will report time spent on Telework on Form 3081 or in the online time-keeping system.

Section 7

Telework Requirements During Weather and Safety-Related Conditions

- A. Whenever it becomes necessary to close an office because of a weather or other safety-related condition, reasonable efforts will be made to inform all employees by private or public media, including email, the IRS Emergency Hotlines, and other methods as appropriate and available. Such notice will be made as soon as practicable. A "weather or other safety-related condition" is one which is general rather than personal in scope and impact. It may be caused by developments such as terror alerts or attacks, heavy snow or severe icing conditions, floods, earthquakes, hurricanes or other natural disasters, air pollution, massive power failure, major fires or serious interruptions to public transportation caused by incidents such as strikes of local transit employees or mass demonstrations that create safety-related conditions consistent with 5 C.F.R. Part 630, Subpart P.

- B. For the purpose of this Section, Telework-ready employees are employees with an approved Telework Agreement who have the necessary equipment (e.g., laptop) and necessary work files (paper or electronic) at their Telework location (or transportable to the Telework location pursuant to Section 7.E, below) to perform required duties at the Telework location at the time of an office closure or at other times as discussed below.
- C. When an employee with an approved Telework Agreement may reasonably anticipate that a weather or other safety-related condition may force the closure of their IRS facility (e.g., forecasted snow storm), the employee must take reasonable steps (within an employee's control) to become Telework-ready – i.e., take necessary work equipment and necessary work files to their Telework location – for the anticipated day(s) the facility may be closed. In such circumstances, managers may authorize employees who are not in their POD to travel on administrative time (duty time) to their POD to obtain necessary work equipment or files to become Telework-ready.
- D. When an employee is Telework-ready and a weather or other safety-related condition forces the closure of their IRS facility, the employee is expected to perform work at their approved Telework location for their entire TOD. Where the employee's telework site is also impacted by the same weather or safety-related condition (e.g. hurricane, wildfire, flood, evacuation) as the POD and the condition prevents the employee from safely working (e.g., power outage, evacuation order), the employee may be granted an equivalent amount of weather and safety leave. If the employee is not Telework ready for all or part of the tour of duty when a weather or safety-related condition forces the closure of the IRS facility, the employee may be granted an equivalent amount of weather and safety leave.
- E. When a teleworking employee experiences a weather or other safety-related condition that prevents them from safely working at their Telework site, the employee must contact their supervisor as soon as practicable. The employee may be directed to travel to the employee's regular worksite – provided they may safely travel under the circumstances – to complete their workday. If directed to travel during regular duty hours, the employee will receive administrative time (duty time) to do so. If the employee is not directed to report to their regular worksite, the employee will be granted weather and safety leave. To be granted weather and safety leave under this provision, the employee may submit Form 10837 or other appropriate documentation (e.g., email) in support of their claim.
- F. In the event the office has an early departure, employees who have a Telework agreement and who are working in the office are required to take their equipment and work files to their Telework location to finish their TOD. Employees required to travel to their approved telework location during regular duty hours will be granted weather and safety leave for the time required to travel home. However, if the employee's telework site is also impacted by the emergency condition (e.g. hurricane, wildfire, flood, evacuation) and the condition prevents the employee from safely working (e.g., power outage, evacuation order), the employee may be granted an equivalent amount of weather and safety leave.
- G. In the event the office has a delayed opening, telework ready employees who were scheduled to report to the office may request to use unscheduled telework for their entire tour of duty or arrive at the delayed opening time to complete their tour of duty in the office.
- H. Unscheduled Telework hours worked due to a weather or safety-related office closure or unscheduled Telework announcement will not count against the employee's maximum number of hours permitted under the Telework Agreement. The unscheduled telework day will count toward the two (2) day per pay period requirement to report to the POD referenced in Section 1A4 of this Article.
- I. Employees who are required to work unscheduled Telework will not have their previously scheduled Telework days changed or cancelled.
- J. Employees on a Telework agreement may cancel preapproved leave or paid time off and be granted the same amount of weather and safety leave as other employees if: (1) the intended purpose of the leave or paid time off is frustrated by the same weather and safety-related condition forcing the office closure; and (2) the employees are not Telework-ready. The manager may request information or documentation to show that granting weather and safety leave is appropriate.
- K. In cases where weather and safety leave is granted for consecutive days, the employee must be reachable by the Employer via telephone or email, provided such services are available. If so, the employee must respond to attempts to communicate within twenty-four (24) hours.

Section 8

Furniture and Equipment

- A. 1. All requests for furniture and equipment will be provided within thirty (30) days of the request contingent upon budget, with the understanding that if it is not provided within the thirty (30) days, it will be provided as soon as possible thereafter.
2. The Employer has determined that employees will not be provided duplicative equipment for purposes of Teleworking. Equipment provided for purposes of mobile work does not constitute duplicative equipment provided for the purpose of this subsection.
3. Equipment provided for use in a POD may not be removed for use in a Telework site except for certain peripheral computer equipment (e.g., cable locks, docking station, mouse, keyboard, or monitor) unless otherwise authorized by this Section.

B. Employees on Frequent Telework

If requested, employees participating in Frequent Telework will be provided the following equipment:

1. a lockable file cabinet purchased by the Employer;
2. for communications, employees will be provided with the capability to make outgoing and receive incoming calls via employer-provided technology;
3. a Government-issued personal computer equipped with technology for remote network access; and
4. the capability to print, scan, fax and/or copy if the Employer determines it is needed for the employee to perform their job duties.

If the equipment/capability provided to the employee becomes inoperative, the Employer will repair or replace it as soon as practicable.

C. Employees on Recurring Telework

If requested and related to their job duties, employees participating in Recurring Telework will be provided with the capability to send and receive voice calls and messages to assist in their communication needs with management and customers, and a lockable file cabinet purchased by the Employer. Based upon the work approved for the Recurring Telework arrangement, and to the extent laptops are available through the loaner laptop program, employees will be provided a loaner laptop if they do not already have a laptop as part of their normal job duties.

D. Employees on Ad Hoc Telework

Employees approved for an Ad Hoc Telework arrangement will not be provided additional equipment and must be able to complete the assigned work at the Telework site using the equipment provided for their normal job duties. However, to the extent laptops are available through the loaner laptop program, employees will be provided a loaner laptop if they do not already have a laptop as part of their normal job duties and a laptop is needed to complete the work.

E. Employees with Field-Based Duties

An employee who works Recurring Telework, and who regularly performs a combination of Telework and field-based assignments for eighty (80) or more hours each month, will also be provided equipment consistent with subsection 8B above.

Section 9

Information

By October 31st of each year, the Employer will provide data for the prior fiscal year showing the employees approved for telework, including their name, BOD, POD, Series, Grade, type of telework (frequent, recurring, or Ad Hoc), and the total number of telework hours worked by each employee

Article 51 | Career Transition Assistance Plan (CTAP)

Section 1

Displaced and surplus employees are afforded career transition assistance and selection priority in obtaining a permanent position either within or outside their commuting area. The definition of displaced and surplus employees and local commuting area may be found in the glossary of terms in Exhibit 51-1.

Section 2

- A. The Service's CTAP provides employees identified as "displaced and/or surplus" with the necessary human resource tools to assist them in obtaining a permanent position either within or outside the Federal Government. The provisions of this Article are to be interpreted consistent with 5 C.F.R. § 330, subpart F.
- B. An employee will be determined eligible for career transition services and selection priority immediately upon receipt of a reduction in force (RIF) notice of separation or notice of proposed separation for declining a directed reassignment or transfer of function outside of the local commuting area, Certificate of Expected Separation, notice of position abolishment, a notice stating that the employee is eligible for discontinued service

Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and

(TTB)

ARTICLE 46: TELEWORK

Section 1 Purpose

Management has determined that it is the policy of the Bureau to provide employees the opportunity to participate in telework to the extent practical in furthering the Bureau's mission and to the extent appropriate for the employee's position. The parties will make every attempt to maximize the amount of work that can be done through telework. Participation in the Telework Program is voluntary on the part of employee (unless made a condition of employment prior to appointment).

The parties recognize that telework can improve the quality of work life and job performance and increase productivity, e.g., reduce office overcrowding and provide a distraction-free environment for reading, thinking, and working; improve morale and reduce stress by giving employees more options to balance work and family demands; extend employment opportunities to people with disabilities, including employees who have partially recovered from work-related injuries who can do the job from off-site location; and decrease commuting times, traffic and parking congestion, energy consumption, and air pollution. Further, by promoting telework the Bureau anticipates savings in space costs and increased productivity without an adverse impact on the level of customer service.

Management officials shall implement the Bureau's Telework Program in a fair and equitable manner. The Parties further recognize that telework can be a means of providing reasonable accommodation to an employee in accordance with Article 11.

Unless otherwise expressly noted, this Article applies to those employees whose official duty station is a Bureau facility and not to fixed teleworkers.

Section 2 Definitions

A. Alternative Worksite: an approved location, e.g. home, telework center or other location, where a regular teleworker continues to perform his or her essential job duties when away from the employee's official duty station.

B. Hoteling: the practice of providing shared office space to teleworking employees at their official duty station. Hoteling can reduce the amount of physical space by reducing the 1-1 employee/office ratio thus lowering real estate costs. Any hoteling program shall include a reservation system as appropriate in order to ensure that office resources are available.

C. Official Worksite: for fixed teleworkers the official worksite is the location where they normally work, typically in their home. For purposes of a RIF, the fixed teleworkers official worksite will be their assigned Federal office. For a regular teleworker, the official worksite is the regular worksite for the employee's position, i.e., the place where the employee would normally work absent a telework agreement.

D. Telework: a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of his or her position and other authorized work activities at an alternative worksite.

E. Regular Teleworker: an employee who has an approved telework agreement and works at one or more approved alternative worksites, i.e. other than the employee's official duty station, for all or part of a work week or on an episodic basis.

F. Fixed Teleworker: an employee who must telework at the pre-approved official worksite as a condition of employment. Fixed teleworkers work from the field. Fixed teleworkers cannot be directed to report back to an office more than 50 miles from the fixed teleworkers official worksite unless the Bureau pays for a permanent change of station, household move, or the employee remains in temporary duty assignment status while in the office, as required by law.

Section 3 Employee Eligibility Criteria

Management has determined that an employee must meet the following criteria to be eligible for both initial and continuing participation in telework and that the following procedures will be used.

A. Before an employee may engage in telework, the employee's position must be designated eligible for telework by Human Resources Division.

B. The employee must meet the eligibility criteria, be approved for telework and have a signed telework agreement with his or her supervisor or their designee.

C. The employee's most recent overall performance appraisal rating must be at the Fully Successful (or equivalent) or higher level and the employee may not be on a performance improvement plan.

D. Generally, the employee may not have been subject to disciplinary or performance action within the last 12 months. Requests for exception to this provision may be submitted for "good cause" by the employee. It must be endorsed by the first level supervisor or their designee and approved by the second level supervisor or their designee.

E. The employee must be able to successfully perform tasks independently without close supervision or extensive input from other employees and must be capable of being at least as productive teleworking as when not teleworking.

F. The employee must have adequate broadband service or the equivalent at their proposed alternate worksite as determined by the Office of the Chief Information Officer.

Section 4 Application Process

A. The official designated to receive, evaluate, review, and approve an employee's application to participate in the Telework Program as a regular teleworker is the first level supervisor or their designee.

B. The regular teleworker's participation is voluntary and shall be reviewed and endorsed by the first level supervisor or their designee. An eligible employee who wishes to participate in the Telework Program must submit a completed Telework Program application to the first level supervisor or their designee for approval.

C. The Telework Program application will specify the employee's work schedule. Any approval will be contingent upon the employee and first level supervisor or their designee agreeing to a mutually acceptable work schedule in accordance with Article 22 of this agreement. Employees on telework are permitted to work any tour of duty or work schedule allowed by Article 22 of this agreement. Advance authorization by the first level supervisor or their designee is required of employees who desire to work overtime or to earn compensatory time in accordance with Fair Labor Standards Act requirements.

D. Upon receipt of the Telework Program application, the first level supervisor or their designee will evaluate and approve or deny the employee's request, normally within two (2) weeks.

Section 5 Approval Process

The Bureau has determined that the supervisor or their designee will ensure that the following criteria are met before approving a telework agreement:

A. The employee's position is one designated as eligible for telework;

B. The employee meets the eligibility criteria specified in Section 3, above; and

C. The Bureau's mission will not be adversely affected by approval. Basis for disapproval can include a demonstrable reduction in customer service standards or reduction in productivity of either the teleworker or his or her section or others in the Bureau, or inefficiencies resulting from the teleworker not being in the official duty station (e.g. by not being able to fairly and equitably share in onsite workload such as meeting with customers).

1. When approved, the employee and first level supervisor or their designee shall sign an agreement that covers the terms and conditions of the approval. This agreement is completed only once, and constitutes a commitment by the employee to adhere to applicable guidelines and policies. The written agreement remains in force until terminated by the terms of the agreement, the participating employee or the first level supervisor or their designee.

2. The application is made via the Telework Program Agreement and Site Safety Checklist (TTB Form 2221.01).

Section 6 Facilities

A. This section applies to both regular teleworkers and fixed teleworkers.

B. Employees will utilize a workspace or work station specially designated for the performance of their bureau responsibilities. The employee is responsible for ensuring that the workspace has adequate and appropriate space, power, light, and is secure. The employee is responsible for any operating costs of the worksite, e.g. maintenance, insurance, utilities etc. except as may be otherwise expressly provided by this agreement or the individual telework agreement. Employees will not use their homes to host meetings with members of the regulated industry or public. Employees are responsible for all official information, protection of any Government-furnished equipment and property, and carrying out the mission of TTB at the approved worksite. Government data and information will be stored and handled in accordance with the TTB O 7250.1, Automated Information Systems Security Program Policy.

C. With 48 hours' notice, a supervisor may visit the alternate duty station to verify compliance with worksite safety and security requirements. The employee may arrange to have a NTEU representative present.

Section 7 Equipment

This section also applies to both regular teleworkers and fixed teleworkers.

A. Regular Teleworkers

Subject to budget availability, the Bureau may provide office equipment to employees and/or pay some of the costs associated with telework, e.g. a portion of the broadband service costs.

The Bureau will service and maintain all government provided equipment. Bureau provided equipment may only be used for authorized purposes and only by Bureau employees or contractors.

B. Fixed Teleworkers

The Bureau will provide equipment and reimburse costs as described in Appendix 1 of this Article.

Section 8 Hoteling

The Bureau may require employees who engage in telework on at least a consistent, weekly basis but less than 100% of the time to engage in Hoteling, as this may reduce costs or create other efficiencies as determined by the Bureau. Prior to implementing hoteling for a particular office, the Bureau will provide notice and opportunity to bargain to NTEU.

Section 9 Teleworker Productivity and Availability

Teleworkers will ensure that they are at least as productive as well as available and responsive to internal as well as external communications while teleworking as they are when in Bureau facilities. As a condition of continued approval for telework, supervisors may require teleworkers to use certain software or equipment as specified, e.g. the forwarding of phones etc., that helps ensure such communication. The Employer has the right to direct regular teleworkers to report to the official duty station to meet mission, staffing and/or workload requirements such as meetings, receiving work assignments, training, travel, unscheduled absences of other employees, emergency situations, or other situations deemed necessary by the Employer to meet mission, staffing and/or workload requirements. Employees should be given as much advance notice as possible, normally not less than twenty-four (24) hours. When the employee is scheduled for a full day tour of duty (TOD) of telework at the alternative worksite and receives notification to report to the official duty station too late to travel during normal commute time, appropriate administrative time will be granted consistent with existing regulation, consistent with Article 2, Section 1B.

When an emergency situation, including inclement weather, closes the official duty station of a regular teleworker, the regular teleworker is required to telework or take unscheduled leave. If a regular teleworker is unable to perform telework due to circumstances (such as children at home or elder care responsibilities) and the closure occurs on a day when the teleworker was scheduled to report to the official duty station, the employee may request administrative leave based on hardship. If not granted, the employee must use annual leave. If a regular teleworker is unable to perform telework due to a power outage or similar circumstances on a day when the official duty station is closed, the employee may request administrative leave based on hardship regardless of whether the employee was scheduled to telework on the day of the closure.

Section 10 Suspension or Termination of Telework

The first level supervisor or higher may suspend or terminate a telework agreement. Decisions to temporarily suspend or terminate a telework agreement must be made by the supervisor on a case-by-case basis and based on a negative impact on mission accomplishment, or when the work section, the position, or the employee no longer satisfy the criteria of Sections 3, 5 or 6 above.

A. Negative impact on mission accomplishment may include misuse of Government provided equipment, violation of the employee code of conduct, repeated failure to conform to the work schedule (minimum of three (3) documented instances), a decline in performance, the working of unauthorized overtime, a reduction in customer service standards, or an adverse impact on the operations or performance of the employee's organizational unit, etc. The supervisor will provide the employee with specific evidence of wrongdoing before he or she is removed from the program.

B. Actions under this section are subject to the following limitations:

1. An employee must normally give his or her supervisor thirty (30) days' written notice of withdrawal under the agreement. Withdrawal may occur for any reason.

2. A supervisor will normally provide the employee fourteen (14) days written notice prior to any suspension or termination of telework becoming effective unless the supervisor determines that a shorter period is appropriate under the circumstances, e.g. when mission needs call for it or the employee requires increased in-person supervision. If the supervisor suspends an employee's authorization to telework, the supervisor will specify the period of the suspension in the notice.

Section 11 Relocation for Fixed Teleworkers

Fixed teleworkers work at the approved official worksite as a condition of employment and may not change the official worksite without the prior approval of the Bureau. A request by a fixed teleworker to change the location of the official worksite will not be unreasonably denied.

Section 12 Appeal Process

Denial of a request for telework or termination or suspension of telework is subject to the negotiated grievance procedure in the bargaining unit agreement.

Article 46 Appendix 1: Equipment for Fixed Teleworkers

As telework is a condition of employment, the Bureau will provide the following equipment and reimburse the following costs for each fixed teleworker:

1. a lockable file cabinet, chair, shredder;
2. a cell phone, calling card or the capability to make outgoing and receive incoming calls (e.g., VOIP phone or other technology as available);
3. a computer with large screen monitor and equipment to connect to the internet/network;
4. necessary office supplies;
5. the capability (e.g., equipment, technology) to print, fax, scan and/or copy if needed for the employee to perform his or her job duties; and
6. once approved, the employee will be reimbursed by the Employer for the monthly cost of the internet; any applicable internet installation costs; mailing and shipping costs; costs of printer paper and ink cartridges; and the cost of other reasonable office supplies.

ARTICLE 47: DURATION AND TERMINATION

Section 1 Effective Date

This Agreement will become effective fourteen (14) calendar days after the date of Treasury approval.

Section 2 Term of Contract

This Agreement shall remain in full force and effect for a period of fifty (50) months from the last signature date of the parties to this Agreement. The expiration date is the next business day if the day fifty (50) months from the last signature date falls on a weekend or Federal holiday.

Section 3 Roll Over

This Agreement will remain in effect for yearly periods thereafter, unless either Party serves the other Party with a written notice, at least one-hundred and twenty (120) days prior to the expiration date, of its desire to terminate or modify the Agreement. In the event such notice is given, the Parties shall begin full-scale negotiations not later than sixty (60) days prior to the expiration date. If negotiations are not concluded prior to the expiration date, this Agreement shall continue in full force and effect until such time as a new Agreement has been concluded and approved.

Section 4 Re-Negotiation

Except for provision(s) rendered invalid by law or regulations of appropriate authorities, the provisions of this Agreement can be amended, supplemented, rescinded or otherwise altered only by mutual agreement of the Parties.

Section 5 Contract Severability

Invalidation of any provision of this Agreement shall have no effect on any other provision.

ARTICLE 48: MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Section 1 Combined Federal Campaign

A. The Employer agrees that participation in the Combined Federal Campaign, and other worthy drives, will be on a completely voluntary basis.

B. It is also agreed that the immediate supervisor may not solicit pledges or contributions from an individual under his/her supervision.

Section 2 Next of Kin Notifications

The Employer will notify a deceased employee's designated next of kin of any benefits to which they may be entitled, including the possibility of social security benefits, and assist them in filing the claims for unpaid compensation, including lump sum leave payments, insurance, and survivorship benefits.

Section 3 Denied Pay or Benefits

The Employer agrees that where it is determined by the Employer, a third party under this Agreement, or regulatory or statutory appeals authority, that through administrative error or oversight an employee is denied benefits or pay to which he/she is otherwise entitled, corrective action shall be taken as expeditiously as possible.

Section 4 Administrative Waivers

A. An employee who receives a monetary payment to which he/she is not entitled because of an administrative error or oversight may request a waiver of repayment.

B. The Parties agree that the final decision rests with the Employer and that the provisions of this section shall not be grievable or arbitrable, except as provided under Article 37, Section 7D.

Section 5 Outside Activity

A. Requests for outside employment or business activity, compensated or uncompensated, must be approved, in writing, by the employer in advance. Employees may participate in such activities where such activity does not create:

1. Interference with efficient performance of their official duties;
2. Possible discredit on or cause unfavorable and justifiable criticism of the Government;

3. A conflict, or apparent conflict of interest, with their official duties; or

4. The unauthorized use or disclosure of classified or sensitive information.

B. The Employer will render a decision on the request within fourteen (14) calendar days. If such a request is denied, the employee may proceed directly to Step 2 of the grievance procedure. If the matter is still unresolved, the union may invoke expedited arbitration unless the denial is based either upon an ethics official's written determination made pursuant to 5 C.F.R. Part 2635 that approval would violate a Government wide standard of conduct or a written determination by an appropriate official made pursuant to security or information disclosure law or Government wide regulation, e.g. under 26 U.S.C. 6103, that approval would violate the underlying law or Government wide regulation.

Section 6 Debts to the Employer

Employees who owe a debt to the Employer due to an administrative error on the part of the agency, shall repay the debt at the rate of 15 percent (15%) or other amount as determined by the applicable law of net earnings (gross wages minus deductions for federal, state and local taxes, contributions to a retirement plan, social security and court-ordered wage deductions). Such payments shall be made by involuntary deductions from the employee's pay during each pay period. It is understood by the parties that the 15 percent (15%) limitation does not apply to levies on wages for back taxes.

Section 7 Public Transit Subsidy Program (PTSP)

Subject to the availability of funding and consistent with the PTSP, the Agency will make public transit subsidy available to eligible employees. Agency changes to the application of the PTSP will be subject to the provisions of Article 39.

Section 8 Student Loan Repayment Program

A. TTB will provide the annual report submitted to Treasury and the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) required by Section 5379 Title V. United States Code (U.S.C.) to NTEU. This will include:

1. The number of Agency employees selected to receive this benefit (broken down by name (if a bargaining unit employee) and bargaining unit status);

2. The job classifications of the employees selected to receive benefits under this part; and

3. The cost to the Federal government for providing benefits under this part.

B. Subject to the budget provided for this program, the amount of loan repayment paid by TTB on behalf of an employee participating in the Program will be up to the maximum yearly limit provided by 5 CFR 537.106(c) per employee. Within these limits, the Employer may repay more than one eligible loan for a recipient.

C. TTB will make recommendations for and grant approval of Student Loan Repayments in a non-discriminatory manner, without regard to a candidate's or employee's race, national origin, gender, religion, sexual orientation, union membership status, age and/or disability status.

D. TTB will apply the criteria for approving Student Loan Repayments and for determining the amount of the loan repayment within the allotted program budget fairly and equitably.

ARTICLE 36

TELEWORK

SECTION 1. General

This Article will be implemented according to applicable law including those outlined in the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and current Agency policy, including any amendments thereto.

The parties recognize that telework can be an important tool to enhance employee performance, engagement, morale, retention and organizational productivity while also enhancing the quality of work life for employees. Accordingly, the parties support the broadest possible use of telework without diminished employee performance or adverse impact on the BEP meeting its mission. Telework will be granted to employees in a fair and equitable manner. Telework provides all employees who meet position eligibility requirements an opportunity to perform official duties away from principal office locations in Washington, DC and Fort Worth, TX.

SECTION 2. Telework Policies

A. An employee's participation in a telework arrangement is voluntary.

B. A telework-ready employee covered by a telework agreement may be required to telework outside of his/her normal telework schedule during a temporary emergency or Federal government weather closures, and similar situations.

C. When considering employee requests to telework, the Agency acknowledges its commitment to approve telework requests consistent with its responsibility for ensuring the successful performance of Agency work at the traditional and alternate work sites.

D. Nothing in this Article prohibits an authorized management official from approving participating employees to telework up to five (5) days per week as a remote worker, in situations deemed appropriate by management. Employees may work any of the work schedules established in accordance with Article 8: Hours of Work while in a telework status. Serving as a remote worker may have implications for the employee's official worksite.

E. The Agency will comply with the Telework Enhancement Act which requires that teleworkers and non-teleworkers be treated the same for purposes of performance and appraisals.

F. An employee may opt out of the telework arrangement at any time.

G. Employees may be permitted to perform union representational work on official time while teleworking if that representational work is portable

SECTION 3. Conduct

Participating employee(s) are bound by Agency standards of conduct while working at the alternate worksite.

SECTION 4. Approvals and Denials

A supervisor shall act upon a request to telework within ten (10) workdays of the request being made by the employee. In the event a telework request is denied by the approving official, the employee will be provided with a written justification supporting the denial.

SECTION 5. Liability

The Agency will not be liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property while the employee is working at the approved alternate worksite, except to the extent the Agency is found liable under by the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act.

Work Environment Implementation Update Responses January 26, 2024

(1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

DOT has one remaining milestone to reach our in-person presence objective. Below is an overview of DOT's and the Federal Aviation Administration's (FAA) approaches and milestones.

- DOT began implementation of our increase in onsite presence in September with an increase to 3 days onsite per pay period (minus FAA).
- On December 4, we implemented the increase to 4 days onsite per pay period for DOT (minus FAA).
- After considerable consultation with its labor unions, agency managers, and employee groups, FAA announced that they will implement the Department-wide requirement of 4 days in-person per pay period beginning on January 28, 2024. FAA determined that increased in-office presence was covered by existing collective bargaining agreements and policy, which afford FAA front line managers the ability to make telework determinations for their individual employees that are in alignment with mission, operational, and business needs of the organization.
- After collective bargaining, DOT reached an agreement with our AFGE union to delay implementation of the second phase of our implementation plan (the increase to 4 days) for AFGE-covered employees until January 28, 2024. That agreement impacts approximately 1,110 employees in the Office of the Secretary, Federal Transit Administration, National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, Federal Motor Carriers Safety Administration and Pipelines and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration -- which represent about 2% of the Department's workforce.
- The last remaining milestone for DOT is on January 28, 2024. On this date, the remaining DOT employees covered by AFGE and FAA employees will increase to 4 days onsite per pay period.

(2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

- After the January 28, 2024 implementation date for AFGE and FAA employees, all Operating Administrations will have successfully implemented DOT's phased approach to increasing onsite presence.
- Senior leadership at the Department will continue to engage with Operating Administrations to ensure that DOT's Work Environment Plan is implemented equitably and consistently across the Department, in accordance with collective bargaining agreements and operational needs.
- Additionally, as part of DOT's Organizational Health and Organizational Performance activities, we are conducting regular assessments, through data analysis, focus groups, and other employee engagement tools, to determine what is working well, what is not, and what can be improved.

(3) Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

- The Secretary and Deputy Secretary continue to be champions for increasing onsite presence. They shared their perspectives on the need to increase in-person work at an employee townhall in May 2023 (a few weeks after the release of OMB Memo M-23-15). They also personally met with Operating Administration leadership multiple times to convey plans to increase onsite presence and their belief about the importance of doing so. When DOT announced our plans to increase onsite presence that announcement included a video message from the Secretary to employees.
- Leadership in the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Administration review DOT's levels of telework based on employee timecards biweekly prior to the submission to OMB and are closely monitoring levels of telework—particularly around our implementation milestones.
- To provide increased visibility to leadership across the Department on levels of telework in their organizations, we created a DOT Telework Dashboard that we have shared with Departmental and OA leadership that allows them to view telework rates in their HQ organizational units.
- One of the most efficient tools in tracking DOT's HQ onsite presence is PIV card badge swipe data. Even prior to the OMB requirement, DOT was tracking the number of onsite personnel daily through badge swipe data. This data is shared daily with senior leadership in the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Administration.

- When we began reentry from the pandemic in April 2022 until the end of August 2023, there were only three instances where we exceeded 1,500 daily badge swipes at DOT HQ. Prior to implementing our increased onsite presence, the last time we broke 1,800 daily badge swipes was pre-pandemic.
 - From September until present, we have exceeded 1,500 badge swipes 23 times:
 - Of those 23 times we broke 1,500 eight times
 - Of those 23 times we broke 1,600 eight times
 - Of those 23 times we broke 1,700 three times
 - Of those 23 times, we broke 1,800 four times.
 - The daily DOT HQ badge swipe data clearly demonstrates that employees have significantly increased their onsite presence.
- FAA is determining the most efficient way to consistently track onsite presence of our telework-eligible workforce across in FAA's DC headquarters and the more than 1,000 facilities nationwide with differing entry systems. Use of timecard data and an internal tracking tool aligned to guidance that was disseminated to managers will be the primary means to assess the status of the increase.
- Nationally, about 70% of employee hours reported on timecards are performed in-person at DOT facilities. This data point reflects the fact that thousands of DOT and FAA employees reported to their worksites throughout the pandemic and continue to do so today. These public servants include air traffic controllers, aviation technical operations specialists; railroad, pipeline, and motor carrier safety inspectors; crane operators; engineers; and many more – all of whom support the safe operations of our transportation system.
- At DOT/FAA headquarters, about 40% of hours reported on timecards are performed in-person. We anticipate the headquarters percentage to increase once the final milestone/phase is implemented beginning January 28, 2024.
- With each phase of implementation, DOT and FAA have communicated with employees reminding them of the change and providing resources and trainings to support them in a hybrid work environment. In these communications, we have stressed the importance of meaningful, in-person collaboration. In FAA's employee communication announcing their upcoming increase to 4 days per pay period, they also included the reasoning behind the change and a link to their Future of In-Person Work page with resources for thriving in a hybrid environment. Additionally, the FAA Administrator held a townhall on January 22, 2024 championing the increase and FAA lines of business and staff offices have hosted individual townhalls for reiterating management guidance.

1. PURPOSE

- a. This Departmental Personnel Manual (DPM) sets forth the policy, authority, criteria, and responsibilities for managing telework in the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT).
- b. This DPM addresses managing telework in all situations, including regular telework, ad hoc telework, unscheduled telework and telework in emergency situations. The goal is to promote telework by DOT employees with appropriate controls for performance accountability, safety, and information security.

2. CANCELLATIONS

5. DEFINITIONS

a. Alternate Work Arrangement

An alternate work arrangement provides flexibility in work locations, work schedules, work hours, and other work arrangements. This may include the use of flexible and compressed work schedules, telework, virtual offices, job sharing, and/or other distributed work arrangements.

b. Alternate Worksite

Classified National Security Information or Classified Information. Information that has been determined pursuant to the provisions of Executive Order 12958, as amended, Classified National Security Information, to require protection against unauthorized disclosure.

c. DOT Components

DOT Operating Administrations (OA), the Office of the Inspector General, and the Office of the Secretary.

d. Emergency Functions.

Functions that must be maintained for the continuity of critical agency operations in dismissal or closure situations.

e. Emergency Situation

A situation when normal facilities are not available or when public health situation guidance requires social distancing to avoid the spread of disease.

f. Emergency Teleworker

An employee, who performs emergency functions and because of those functions may be directed by management to continue to work at his or her alternative worksite during emergency situations when normal facilities are not available.

g. Excess personal property/equipment

Any personal property that is no longer required by the holding agency for the discharge of its responsibilities.

h. Excused Absence

An absence from duty without charge to leave or loss of pay.

i. For Official Use Only (FOUO) Information

Unclassified information and materials that may be exempt from mandatory release to the public under the Freedom of Information Act and/or the Privacy Act.

j. Hoteling

Shared office space used by teleworkers and other personnel, as appropriate, on a drop-in, as needed basis. These non-dedicated, non-permanent workspaces are reserved in advance and are distributed on a first-come, first-serve basis. The space is equipped with standard office technology, such as phones, computers or laptop docking stations, faxes, printers, copiers, computer network connection, internet access, etc.

k. Mission Essential Functions

Functions that must be maintained for continuity of essential services during extended emergencies or other unique situations.

l. Mission Essential Teleworker

A teleworker who is expected to remain in contact with his or her agency at all times during any closure situation and who may be called upon to work at his other alternative worksite during extended emergencies or other unique situations.

m. Official Duty Station

The city or town, county, and State identified as the official location of the employee's position of record. For a teleworker, the official duty station must be determined on a case-by-case basis.

n. Personally Identifiable Information (PII)

Information which can be used to distinguish or trace an individual's identity, such as their name, social security number, biometric records, etc. alone, or when combined with other personal or identifying information which is linked or linkable to a specific individual such as date and place of birth, mother's maiden name, etc.

o. Secure Remote Access (SRA).

The ability of an authorized user to access a DOT network from outside the traditional network security boundary and to maintain that remote access link in a secure fashion.

p. Sensitive Information

Public Law 100-235, the Computer Security Act of 1987, defines sensitive information as any information which, if subject to unauthorized access, modification, loss, or misuse, could adversely affect the national interest, the conduct of Federal programs, or the privacy to which individuals are entitled under Section 552a of Title 5, United States Code (the Privacy Act), but which has not been specifically authorized under criteria established by an Executive Order or an Act of Congress to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or foreign policy. Sensitive data at DOT also include proprietary data.

q. Sensitive Personally Identifiable Information (SPII)

Any personally identifiable information, which if lost, compromised, or disclosed without authorization, could result in substantial harm, embarrassment, inconvenience, or unfairness to the individual to whom such information relates.

r. Sensitive Security Information (SSI)

Information obtained or developed in the conduct of security activities, including research and development, the disclosure of which the Secretary of Transportation, or the Secretary of Homeland Security, or the designee of either, has determined would constitute an unwarranted invasion of privacy (including, but not limited to, information contained in any personnel, medical or similar file); reveal trade secrets or privileged or confidential information obtained from any person; or be detrimental to transportation safety, 49 CFR Part 15, Protection of Sensitive Security Information, is the governing regulation for SSI within DOT.

s. Sensitive Unclassified Information

Within DOT, sensitive unclassified information is a broad term that describes sensitive information as defined above. It also includes information that may be provided to DOT by private individuals or companies with the understanding that, to the extent permitted by law, DOT will not publicly disclose it. It includes law enforcement, contracting, procurement, proprietary, security, financial, PII, and other information that may be exempt from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. Section 552, and information protected from disclosure by the Privacy Act of 1974. DOT currently designates this information as either For Official Use Only or, as applicable, Sensitive Security Information.

t. Telework Center

A facility that provides workstations and other office facilities/services that is utilized by employees from several organizations, and is used as a geographically convenient alternative worksite for its users. The facility is typically on a fee-for-use or service basis.

u. Teleworker

An employee who performs a portion of or all duties at an alternative worksite under a telework agreement. The employee may be approved as a teleworker on a regular, recurring schedule, on an ad-hoc basis (temporary or situational); or as an emergency or mission essential teleworker.

v. Telework

A work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work.

w. Telework Agreement

A written agreement completed and signed by an employee and appropriate official(s) in his or her agency/staff office or OA that outlines the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement.

x. Telework-Ready Employee

A telework eligible employee approved to telework (e.g., on a regular recurring, ad hoc, or emergency basis), who has completed telework training and has an approved telework agreement in place.

y. Unscheduled Telework

An Operating Status announcement (made by OPM, Federal Executive Boards, or authorized DOT officials) for weather-related or other emergencies which allows a telework-ready employee to perform telework on a day he or she would normally report to the office. Employees must notify their supervisor of their intention to perform unscheduled telework and must be prepared to telework for the entire workday, or take unscheduled leave, or a combination of both, for the entire workday, in accordance with their agency's policies and procedures, subject to any applicable collective bargaining requirements.

z. Virtual Office or Virtual Workplace.

A work environment in which employees work cooperatively from different locations using a computer network (in lieu of a single building or other single physical location). The physical location of the employees in the virtual workplace is generally dispersed.

6. POLICY

a. DOT recognizes the importance of Telework

DOT recognizes the importance of telework and encourages the use of telework by its components to the maximum extent possible. Establishing a telework program at DOT is consistent with and supports Departmental mission and performance goals and improves the Department's capability to support homeland and national security requirements. Properly administered, telework improves individual and organizational productivity; helps reduce highway congestion and mobile source emissions; serves as a recruitment and retention tool; and improves work life quality. Moreover, it is an effective and efficient means for continuing Government operations when staff cannot travel to a central office due to geographical incidents, national disasters, extended emergencies, or local incidents such as snowstorms or major traffic problems.

b. DOT modes must establish and implement their own telework policy

Each DOT component must establish and implement a telework policy consistent with Departmental policy. The DOT components' policies shall prescribe a means for identifying telework-eligible positions, employee eligibility for telework, and will require approved telework agreements before an employee may participate in telework. The DOT components' policies may allow employees in a probationary status to telework provided adequate measures are established to observe and evaluate their performance.

c. Employee participation in a telework program is voluntary

Employee participation in a telework program is voluntary. DOT components may not require an employee to participate in telework, even if the duties of the position make that employee eligible for telework.

d. Eligible employees may be able to telework once a pay period or month

Eligible employees, including supervisors and managers, may be provided the option of teleworking at least 1 day per pay period. Eligible employees who are unable to telework once a pay period due to organizational or personal considerations are to be offered the opportunity to practice telework at least 1 day per month.

e. Alternative work schedules are available for telework eligible employees

Employees in telework-eligible positions may be given the opportunity to participate in alternative work schedules, as well as telework, subject to supervisory approval and organizational needs.

f. Injured, recuperating and temporarily disabled telework ready employees

Employees who are injured, recuperating, and/or temporarily disabled may be permitted to work at home and complete work assignments to minimize the use of sick leave.

g. Supervisors shall be responsible for applying the eligibility criteria specified in this policy

Supervisors shall be responsible for applying the eligibility criteria specified in this policy to determine if the job characteristics of a particular position and the incumbent of that position are eligible to telework.

h. DOT Component supervisors are accountable for approving and monitoring telework performance

DOT components will hold executives, managers and supervisors accountable for approving and monitoring employee telework performance. To the extent appropriate, telework work objectives with results-oriented measures will be in the performance plans of supervisors and managers.

i. DOT components may establish additional telework termination criteria

DOT components may establish additional telework termination criteria, as deemed necessary for continued operations. However, a decision to terminate or modify an employee's telework agreement shall not be arbitrary, and it must be in accordance with collective bargaining agreements, where applicable.

j. Management may require scheduled teleworking employees to return to the official duty location

Management reserves the right to require employees to return to the official duty location on scheduled telework days, based on operational requirements.

k. DOT components may provide government equipment to employees approved for telework.

DOT components may provide government equipment to employees approved for telework. It is permissible, but not mandatory, for components to authorize reimbursement for all or part of services such as internet and telephone lines if such services are essential to teleworking. If a component chooses to provide such reimbursement, it must specify eligibility criteria and procedures for obtaining the reimbursement in its telework policy and include the specifics of the individual reimbursement arrangement in the employee's telework agreement.

l. Employees are responsible for operating costs associated with working from home

DOT components are not responsible for any operating costs associated with an employee's use of his or her personal residence as an alternative worksite. This includes home maintenance, insurance and/or home utilities.

m. OCIO will provide Remote computing access to the DOT infrastructure supporting telework

Remote computing access to the DOT infrastructure supporting telework, COOP, and other emergency situations will be provided by the DOT Office of the Chief Information Officer (OCIO) to the Office of the Secretary and the OAs within the Common Operating Environment through the Working Capital Fund. Secure Remote Access technologies including Virtual Private Network (VPN), Virtual Desktop Integration (VDI) and web access provide this capability from most government and non-government computers located outside of traditional DOT facilities. Specific policies and procedures supporting these technologies are provided by the OCIO independently of this telework order.

n. Appropriate information security measures and procedures will be maintained for all teleworking

Appropriate information security measures and procedures will be maintained for all teleworking. DOT components shall ensure that classified information, PII, proprietary information and/or other sensitive data are handled and protected in accordance with applicable laws, regulations and policies. Employees who telework are to use the required security protections, such as encryption, for all classified and sensitive information and follow this and all Departmental policies as they pertain to the protection of information and information system resources.

o. Proper work environment for telework must be maintained by the employee

Telework is not intended to serve as a mechanism to provide child or elder care services at home, or to perform any other activities unrelated to the employee's official duties. It is the responsibility of the employee to ensure that a proper work environment is maintained.

p. Telework shall be considered as an alternative work method during building renovation

Telework, especially hoteling, shall be considered as an alternative work method when planning for any building renovation in the Washington, DC, Metropolitan Area or any other DOT regional or field location.

q. DOT components are encouraged to market the use of telework

DOT components are encouraged to market the use of telework in vacancy announcements as a tool for attracting potential applicants, retaining current employees, as well accommodating employees housed in Federal buildings undergoing renovation projects, emergency situations, and for addressing other needs. In appropriate circumstances, telework may be offered as a reasonable accommodation for employees with disabilities. DOT components shall fulfill their labor relations obligations before implementing telework policies and procedures for bargaining unit employees. Negotiated union/management telework agreements should establish the telework goals and objective.

7. ELIGIBILITY

The following position and employee criteria described in this section shall apply when determining telework eligibility:

- a. Position Eligibility Criteria. Positions that have the following characteristics are eligible for teleworking:
 - (1) Work activities are portable and are not dependent on the employee being at the traditional worksite. Portable work activities and tasks generally suited for telework include, but are not limited to, policy development, research analysis, program analysis, policy analysis, financial analysis, legal analysis, report and brief writing, telephone-intensive tasks (excluding receptionist duties), computer-oriented tasks, data entry, word processing, web page design or data processing.
 - (2) Work activities are conducive to remote supervisory oversight because of clear and measurable performance standards and results.
 - (3) Adequate technology for off-site work is available. Materials and information necessary to perform the duties of the position can readily be moved to and from the Federal office consistent with data and systems security requirements, including Privacy Act Protection requirements.
 - (4) Necessary interaction with co-workers, subordinates, superiors, and customers can be maintained electronically or by telephone without adversely affecting customer service or unit productivity.
 - (5) Other position eligibility criteria that management determines to be appropriate, consistent with the Department's goals and objectives for telework.

- b. Positions not Generally Eligible for Telework. Some characteristics, tasks and duties generally are not suitable for telework. These include, but are not limited to the following:
- (1) Positions that require the employee to have daily, in-person contact with co-workers, supervisory officials, customers, or the general public in order to be effective.
 - (2) Positions where operational requirements dictate employee presence at a specific work location.
 - (3) Positions that require routine access to classified information; unless required storage and equipment are readily available and the employee's servicing security organization has approved the telework arrangement in writing in advance.
- c. Employee Eligibility Criteria. Supervisors are to assess individual performance characteristics and criteria when considering an employee for a telework arrangement. Employee eligibility criteria, at a minimum, shall include the following:
- (1) A performance rating of record of at least fully successful, or the equivalent, with no documented need to improve performance.
 - (2) Demonstrated dependability and the ability to work independently.
 - (3) The ability to prioritize work effectively and utilize good time management skills.
 - (4) Compliance with Federal Government and agency standards of conduct.
- d. Employee Ineligibility Criteria. An employee is prohibited from participating in a telework program if he or she:
- (1) Has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year; or
 - (2) Has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties 5 U.S.C. 6502.
 - (3) Depending on the nature of the disciplinary action, an employee may be permanently prohibited from participating in a telework program.

8. EMPLOYEE EXPECTATIONS

- a. Supervisors must hold employees accountable for achieving the results established in employee performance appraisal plans. Teleworkers are to be treated no differently than non-teleworkers concerning achieving results. If work assignments are written into telework agreements, supervisors and employees must have a common understanding of work objectives, desired results, and evaluation criteria. Measurement tools, such as status reports, progress reviews, and milestones may be used to measure and evaluate employee performance.
- b. Telework employees are required to satisfactorily complete all assigned work, consistent with the approach adopted for all other employees in the work group and according to standards and objectives in the employee's performance plan.
- c. The performance elements and standards for teleworkers shall remain the same as non-teleworkers performing the same or similar duties.
- d. Employees are bound by Federal Government and agency standards of conduct while working at an alternative worksite. By signing a telework agreement, employees acknowledge they understand and accept the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch while working at the alternative worksite.
- e. For work-at-home arrangements, the teleworker is generally required to designate one area in the home as the official work or duty area that is suitable for the performance of official government business. The government's potential exposure to liability is restricted to the official work area.

9. TELEWORK AGREEMENT

- a. A written telework agreement is required for employees who have been approved to telework on a regular or ad-hoc basis, or for an emergency situation. All telework agreements must be signed by the employee and his or her supervisors and returned to their servicing human resource office.
- b. An employee must complete telework training before entering into a telework agreement.
- c. Telework agreements must be reviewed annually by the employee and his or her supervisor and updated as necessary. A permanent change in the telework agreement requires a new or modified telework agreement.

- d. The telework agreement should state the telework days and hours the employee will work. Requests by an employee to change his or her scheduled telework day(s) in a particular week or bi-weekly pay period must be submitted in advance and approved by the supervisor before the employee may telework under the new schedule.
- e. The telework agreement must include a requirement that the employee is expected to work on days when an announcement is made that Federal offices are closed because of severe weather or other emergencies to the extent possible.
- f. If a telework agreement has an adverse impact on employee or agency performance, or an employee no longer meets eligibility criteria, a supervisor can terminate and/or modify the employee's agreement as appropriate, by providing notice to the employee.
- g. A telework arrangement does not alter the terms and conditions of the appointment as specified on the employee's Notification of Personnel Action, Standard Form 50. However, an employee's official duty station may change if he or she does not regularly commute into the office. All pay, leave, and travel entitlements must be based on the employee's official duty station. The telework arrangement must not affect other conditions of employment (e.g., hours of duty) unless otherwise specified in the telework agreement.
- h. All DOT employees who access DOT systems as part of their telework arrangement must sign the Rules of Behavior agreement and agree to the conditions of the DOT Employee Security Awareness Guide issued by the DOT OCIO.

10. TERMINATION OF A TELEWORK AGREEMENT

- a. Telework arrangements may be terminated by either management or the employee by written notification of termination of the telework agreement, except in emergency situations. Reasons for termination of a telework agreement may include a decline in performance or productivity, or if the telework arrangement no longer benefits the organization or the employee's needs.

11. TRAINING

- a. To support an effective telework program, DOT components must ensure that telework eligible employees, and their supervisors, complete an interactive telework training program. The training should include the following:
 - (1) An overview of the telework program including eligibility criteria and standards.
 - (2) Useful tips that help supervisors and employees understand how the program is to function, including: strategies for managing an effective telework arrangement that may include how to manage for results, compatible work projects, perform performance management responsibilities under a telework arrangement, schedule and track work assignments, and ensure effective communication.
 - (3) The security requirements for DOT systems and the protection of Sensitive Security Information, FOUO data, PII, and proprietary information.

12. SECURITY AND EQUIPMENT

- a. Employees who telework are to utilize the required security protections and follow DOT policies as they pertain to the protection of information and information system resources. See DOT Information Technology and Information Assurance Policy Number 2006-22 (or its successor policy). This policy governs employee handling of information and equipment, and applies equally to telework situations. Refer to this policy for a thorough understanding of the applicable requirements. The following is a non-exhaustive list of requirements that may apply in the context of an individual employee's telework:
 - (1) No employee may take classified documents to a telework location unless arrangements have been approved in advance, and in writing, by the component's servicing security organization based upon need and demonstrated compliance with all applicable security requirements.
 - (2) Data on any mobile devices, carrying agency SPII shall be encrypted, unless a waiver is specifically approved by the DOT Chief Information Security Officer. Employees who access information containing SPII remotely shall use SRA, which will be provided by the Office of the CIO.

- (3) Electronic records containing SPII may not be saved to personal equipment or media. Secure Remote Access prevents accessed information from being written to non-government computer storage devices.
- (4) Employees shall not authorize any other person to use any government-furnished equipment.
- (5) The employee is responsible for all installation, service, and maintenance of all personal equipment. The agency shall be responsible for the maintenance of all government furnished equipment. The employee may be required to bring government equipment into the office for maintenance. The employee must return all government furnished equipment and material to the agency at the conclusion of telework arrangements or upon the agency's request.
- (6) The employee must sign appropriate user agreements to install government-furnished software on personal equipment.
- (7) Transfer of sensitive unclassified information, including Sensitive Security Information, FOUO data, PII, and proprietary information to an alternate worksite shall be minimized. An employee should take from the worksite only the sensitive information absolutely necessary for the expected telework. Documents and other information shall be under the continuous direct control of the teleworker whenever it is being transported from the traditional worksite to the alternative worksite. It should be transported only in a closed container (e.g., briefcase or zipped case). At no time should a teleworker openly review sensitive information while using public transportation or in a car or vanpool where unauthorized persons might be able to observe it. Teleworkers are reminded that any files containing sensitive information, including PII, introduced into a computer at an alternative worksite must be permanently deleted before their departure from the site.
- (8) Sensitive unclassified information, including the categories of information mentioned in the above paragraph, shall be stored in a locked desk, briefcase, or file container at the alternative worksite (home, telework center, satellite location, etc.) when not under the employee's direct control. Computer privacy screens which block PC screen visibility to other persons shall be used when sensitive information is displayed on a computer monitor at an alternative worksite where others have access.

- (9) Employees shall minimize transfer of hard copy records containing SPII from the permanent worksite to an alternate worksite. An employee must have a supervisor's specific written approval to take hard copies that contain SPII to an alternate workplace. Employees must transport documents containing SPII in a locked container. Employees may not remove from their worksite documents containing SPII about multiple individuals and may not under any circumstances remove an Official Personnel Folder (OPF) from the government worksite. When teleworking using or accessing an electronic OPF (eOPF), the requirements of paragraph 13b apply. Additionally, the users of eOPF must clear the browser cache and close the browser before leaving the computer.
- (10) Employees must immediately notify their supervisor of any lost or stolen equipment, media, or data. Supervisors are responsible for immediately notifying their servicing security organization and their Operating Administration CIO.
- (11) Some restrictions may be suspended in an emergency situation when more records are needed for continuity of operations. Employees and supervisors shall be notified of any changes.
- (12) Neither family members nor other non-government individuals are authorized to handle and/or view any government sensitive unclassified information.
- (13) Employees shall leave with their supervisor an inventory of sensitive information that they physically take to an alternate worksite so proper notifications may be made regarding the information in the event of its loss or theft.

13. DISPUTES

- a. DOT encourages resolution of all workplace disputes at the lowest possible level. DOT supervisors and employees are encouraged to resolve any disagreements or disputes regarding telework on an informal basis.
- b. DOT components shall identify dispute resolution mechanisms for use when informal resolution of telework disputes is not possible.
- c. DOT components will follow the Telework Eligibility Reconsideration Process, outlined below, for disputes concerning employee telework eligibility. This process will not be used to address disputes over how often a telework-eligible employee may be allowed to telework, performance management issues, or other disputes.

- d. The Telework Eligibility Reconsideration Process does not waive the right of employees, union representatives, managers, or supervisors to use existing alternative dispute resolution, negotiated grievance procedures, or administrative grievance procedure processes. Nor does it waive any other appeal rights that an employee may have including the right to file a complaint of discrimination.
- e. Telework-Eligibility Reconsideration Process. An employee may request reconsideration of telework eligibility from a second-level reviewer if his or her supervisor or manager has determined that the employee, or his or her position, is not telework-eligible. Each OA, OIG, and staff offices within OST shall establish procedures for reconsideration of telework eligibility. Procedures must provide:

- (1) Requests for reconsideration of telework eligibility from a second-level reviewer must be made in writing within 30 calendar days of receiving written notice of a negative determination of telework eligibility. The period for requesting a reconsideration of telework eligibility may be extended only if the employee is prevented from making the request within the established time limits due to circumstances beyond his or her control.
- (2) The second-level reviewer shall be at the SES level or equivalent within the employee's chain of command and in the employee's program office or division.
- (3) Once an employee submits a request for reconsideration to the second-level reviewer, the supervisor/manager who made the negative determination of telework-eligibility shall, within 15 calendar days of the employee's request for reconsideration, construct and provide to the second-level reviewer a telework reconsideration file. The reconsideration file shall contain all pertinent documents related to the negative determination of telework -eligibility. The employee will also provide a copy of the request for reconsideration to his or her manager at the same time the request for reconsideration is submitted to the second-level reviewer.
- (4) The second-level reviewer shall review the reconsideration file and provide the employee with a written response of final decision that includes the reasons for the final decision within 30 calendar days of receipt of the reconsideration file.

- (5) In cases where a negative determination of telework-eligibility has been sustained by the second-level reviewer, the employee may request reconsideration, but no sooner than 180 calendar days after the first-line supervisor's or manager's original telework-eligibility assessment.

14. TELEWORKING IN EMERGENCY SITUATIONS

- a. Under an agency's COOP, Concept of Operations (CONOPS), and emergency evacuation plans employees may be designated as performing emergency or mission essential functions. The designation of functions should be identified in an agency's plan to continue necessary operations in an emergency, extended emergency, or evacuation. Employees performing emergency or mission essential functions should be informed, and an agreement to perform such functions should be reflected in an employee's telework agreement.
- b. Telework to perform emergency functions may be initiated when a worker is notified by supervisory, management, or departmental authorities. Because all emergency situations cannot be anticipated, employees performing emergency functions may be provided less than a 1-business day notice that they should report to their telework duty station. Employees should maintain appropriate equipment, supplies, and reference materials for emergency functions at their telework location.
- c. Telework to perform mission essential functions may be initiated for an extended emergency. Under the COOP and CONOPS, supervisors and managers should develop more than one communication mechanism, such as telephone trees or email alerts, to provide adequate and timely notice to employees that emergency telework to perform mission essential functions has been initiated. If possible, the notice should allow time for employees to obtain appropriate equipment, supplies, and material at their telework locations.
- d. Managers and supervisors may waive criteria for position eligibility and employee eligibility to ensure that emergency and mission essential functions are performed and to effectively implement their agency's COOP, CONOPS, and evacuation plans. Managers and supervisors should take appropriate steps to ensure that effective employee performance is maintained.

15. EARLY DISMISSALS, DELAYED ARRIVALS, OR FEDERAL OFFICES CLOSED.

- a. Early Dismissal. Employees who are teleworking when an early dismissal for severe Weather or other emergency is announced are expected to continue working their scheduled tour of duty from their telework location. Employees who are teleworking at the time of the announcement will not receive excused absence for the remainder of the workday.
- b. Delayed Arrival. Employees who are scheduled to telework or request to work unscheduled telework when a delayed arrival for severe weather or other emergency is announced are expected to begin working at their normal start time. Employees who are scheduled to telework or request to perform unscheduled telework will not be granted excused absence for the period of time of the delayed arrival.
- c. Federal Offices Closed. Telework-ready employees are required to perform telework on a day that Federal offices are closed to the public for severe weather or other emergencies. To the extent possible, telework-ready employees must be prepared to work the entire workday, or take leave, or a combination of both for the entire workday, subject to any collective bargaining requirements.
- d. In the event that an employee is unable to perform telework at his or her telework site due to circumstances beyond his or her control (e.g. power failure or loss of internet connectivity), the supervisor may grant excused absence on a case-by-case basis. If excused absence is not granted to an employee, he or she may request to use leave or other paid time off (e.g., earned compensatory time off or credit hours). With supervisory approval, an employee may request to make up lost hours at a mutually agreeable time and record it as appropriate on his or her time sheet.

16. UNSCHEDULED TELEWORK.

- a. Telework-ready employees may perform telework on a day when an operating status announcement that includes unscheduled leave/unscheduled telework is in effect. OAs are encouraged to allow unscheduled telework, to the extent possible. However, in rare circumstances, an employee may be required to report to the worksite (e.g., planned meetings that cannot be rescheduled or providing a presentation).

- b. Telework-ready employees are required to notify his or her supervisor of their intent to perform unscheduled telework, in accordance with his or her written telework agreement and/or office policies.
- c. A telework-ready employee must have an appropriate amount of work to complete during the workday from home when performing unscheduled telework. If an employee does not have enough work, he or she must either take unscheduled leave for the entire workday or use a combination of unscheduled leave and unscheduled telework to account for hours not worked. Employees are encouraged to prepare telework appropriate work in advance when severe weather is predicted.
- d. Employee telework agreements should clearly state the expectations and procedures to telework-ready employees when requesting to perform unscheduled telework.

17. ORGANIZATIONAL POLICY REQUIREMENTS

Each OA is responsible for the development of a telework policy or the revision of its current policy in accordance with the guidelines established in this Departmental policy. OA policies shall be provided to the Departmental Office of Human Resource Management within 6 months from the issuance of this policy.

18. REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

The head of each DOT component shall submit an annual summary report on telework within their agency or component by March 31 of each calendar year. The report shall be submitted to the Telework Managing Officer through the Departmental Office of Human Resource Management.

To evaluate the overall effectiveness of the DOT Telework Program, DOT components shall collect both qualitative and quantitative information about their internal telework program, including employee perception of the program, concerns from employees and their supervisors, costs, benefits, training programs, and any unanticipated issues that arise.

19. EFFECTIVE DATE AND IMPLEMENTATION

This policy is effective immediately upon signature.

Indicate approved alternate work place: _____

Note: All pay, leave, and travel entitlements are based on the official duty station.

Work Schedule and Tour of Duty as follows

The official tour of duty will be: (Specify days, hours and location.)

Days	Hours	Location

Time and Attendance

The timekeeper, as well as the supervisor and employee, will have copies of the work schedule. The supervisor will certify biweekly the time and attendance for hours worked at the official duty station and the alternate workplace.

Employees will log in, call, or email their supervisor when they begin and end their tour of duty at a telework site.

EARLY DISMISSALS, DELAYED ARRIVALS, OR FEDERAL OFFICES CLOSED

Early Dismissal

Employees who are teleworking when an early dismissal for severe weather or other emergency is announced are expected to continue working their scheduled tour of duty from their telework location. Employees who are teleworking at the time of the announcement will not receive excused absence for the remainder of the workday.

Delayed Arrival

Employees who are scheduled to telework or request to work unscheduled telework when a delayed arrival for severe weather or other emergency is announced are expected to begin working at their normal start time. Employees who are scheduled to telework or request to perform unscheduled telework will not be granted excused absence for the period of time of the delayed arrival.

Federal Offices Closed

Telework-ready employees are required to perform telework on a day that Federal offices are closed to the public for severe weather or other emergencies. To the extent possible, telework-ready employees must be prepared to work the entire workday, or take leave, or a combination of both for the entire workday, subject to any collective bargaining requirements.

In the event that an employee is unable to perform telework at his or her telework site due to circumstances beyond his or her control (e.g., power failure or loss of internet connectivity), the supervisor may grant excused absence on a case-by-case basis. If excused absence is not granted to an employee, he or she may request to use leave or other paid time off (e.g., earned compensatory time off or credit hours).

Unscheduled Telework

To the extent possible, unscheduled telework will be permitted when an unscheduled leave/unscheduled telework operating status is in effect. Telework-ready employees must notify his or her supervisor of their intention to telework on a day when unscheduled telework is announced. In some instances, an employee may be required to report to the worksite when unscheduled telework is announced.

An employee performing unscheduled telework must have an appropriate amount of work to complete during the workday. If an employee does not have enough work, he or she must either take unscheduled leave for the entire workday or use a combination of unscheduled leave and unscheduled telework to account for hours not worked.

Leave

Leave taken during the scheduled work hours must be approved by the supervisor in advance.

Overtime

Overtime will be worked only when ordered or approved by the supervisor in advance.

Equipment and Supplies

The employee will protect any government-furnished equipment and will use the equipment only for official purposes. The DOT Office of the CIO, Information Technology Services Organization (or other designated provider), will conduct training and information to employees on how to install, service, and maintain government-furnished equipment (e.g., Automated Data Processing (ADP), communications equipment). The employee will install, service, and maintain any personal equipment used. The DOT component may reimburse the employee for business related long distance telephone calls and may provide supplies. Government-furnished equipment will need to be brought back by the employee to the designated government maintenance point.

Security

All DOT employees who engage in the telework program shall sign the rules of behavior and agree to the conditions of the DOT Employee Security Awareness Guide.

Any telework involving access to classified information at an alternate worksite shall be approved in writing and in advance by the employee's servicing security organization.

Employees who telework are to utilize the required security protections and follow DOT policies as they pertain to the protection of information and information system resources. DOT components or the CIO should determine if they are required to have Secure Remote Access in order to telework.

Employees are responsible for immediately notifying their supervisors regarding any lost or stolen equipment, media, or data.

Hard copy records or electronic records stored on removable media that contain Sensitive Personally Identifiable Information may not be transported to an alternative worksite unless approved in advance by the employee's supervisor and only under the circumstances and conditions stated in this policy.

Liability

The government will not be liable for damages to personal or real property while working at the approved alternate workplace except to the extent the government is held liable by the Federal Tort Claims Act of the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act. Those employees working at home are subject to all applicable government regulations and DOT orders.

Work Area

The work area should be adequate for the performance of official duties.

Worksite Inspection

The alternative workplace must be inspected by the supervisor, or certified by the employee, that the area is appropriate to conduct assigned work.

In any case where the employee will have access to classified national security information at an alternate worksite, including any residence or other non-government location, the employee agrees to allow his or her servicing security organization to inspect that site for the purpose of ensuring compliance with all regulations governing the protection of classified information. In any case where such an inspection is not permitted, and in any instance where the servicing security organization determines that classified information cannot be or is not being properly protected, the employee may not have access to classified information at that site.

A Safety Checklist should accompany a "work at home" request to ensure that proper safety issues are addressed.

Alternative Workplace Costs

The government will not be responsible for any operating costs that are associated with the employee using his or her home as an alternative work site, for example, home maintenance, insurance, and/or home utilities. However, the employee does not relinquish any entitlement to reimbursement for authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the government, as provided for by statute and regulations. If approved, telework center use will be billed to and paid for by the participant's organization. A Telework Facility Reimbursement Information Sheet must be completed before a telework arrangement can begin using such a center.

Injury Compensation

Federal Employee's Compensation Act provisions apply to persons performing official duties at the official alternate duty station. The supervisor must be notified immediately of any accident or injury that occurs at the alternative workplace. The supervisor will investigate such a report immediately.

Telework during Emergencies

If you are performing functions that are essential to your organization during emergencies, and you will need to operate from an alternate worksite, your organization may need to set-up suitable telecommunication capabilities and equipment at the telework site.

Work Assignments

Please indicate work assignments that will normally be completed in accordance under this telework agreement which the supervisor and employee agree upon. No personal business, dependent care, home repairs or other activities not related to the specific assignments outlined should be conducted at the alternative site.

Task(s)	Brief Description

Emergency or Mission Essential Functions

Please indicate any emergency or mission essential functions that the supervisor and the employee agree that are to be performed by the employee. The employee understands that by performing emergency or mission essential functions, he or she may be directed to telework.

Function(s)	Brief Description

Hard Copies that Contain SPII

Please describe the type of hard copies of documents containing SPII that you take to your telework site.

Performance

The supervisor may require regular status reports. A decline in performance may be grounds for canceling the telework agreement.

Disclosure

Government records should be protected from unauthorized disclosure or damage and should comply with requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. 552a.

Standards of Conduct

Federal standards of conduct apply to employees working at an alternate worksite.

Cancellation

Telework arrangements may be terminated by either management or by the employee with a written notification of termination of the telework agreement, except in emergency situations. Reasons for termination of a telework arrangement may include a decline in performance or productivity or if the arrangement no longer benefits the organization's needs.

Other Action

Nothing in this agreement precludes DOT from taking any appropriate disciplinary or adverse action against an employee who fails to comply with the provisions of this agreement.

Equipment Needed

Please indicate any equipment needed to facilitate telework. Please note that telework centers have computers, telephones, etc.

Equipment	Brief Description

Signature indicates an understanding and acceptance of the provisions of the telework agreement.

Department of Transportation
Collective Bargaining Agreement(s) –
Telework Provisions

ARTICLE 35: TELEWORK

SECTION 1. The Parties agree that Bargaining Unit Employees (BUEs) are entitled to participate in the Employer's Telework Program, however employee participation is voluntary. Policies and procedures regarding telework that are not covered in this section must be in accordance with HRPM WLB-12.3, FAA Telework Program, updated November 29, 2013.

SECTION 2. It is FAA policy to actively encourage the use of teleworking to the maximum extent possible. Because teleworking is a tool used in the accomplishment of work, it must not have an adverse impact on any Employer office or the mission of the FAA. Teleworking is designed to benefit employees, managers, and the community. Some of the benefits that may result from teleworking include:

- a. reduced commuting time and decreases in traffic congestion, air pollution, energy consumption, and costs associated with transportation, parking, and road maintenance;
- b. improved employee morale due to a decrease in commuting-related stress and greater flexibility in balancing work and family demands;
- c. increased productivity fostered by a quieter work environment removed from the distractions and interruptions of the normal work setting;
- d. possible accommodation of employees with ongoing health problems, disabilities, or other situations that make commuting to the normal work setting difficult or impossible;
- e. possible continued work production when commuting is hindered or when the primary worksite is closed due to adverse weather conditions, emergencies, natural disasters, or building-related problems.

SECTION 3. BUEs may participate in one or a combination of the following telework options based upon their manager's approval and as a condition of the telework agreement. Various telework options include:

- a. work at home in a space specifically set aside as an office or workplace;
- b. work at another FAA facility or office that may be closer to the employee's home and where there is available space to accommodate additional Employer employees;
- c. work in a "virtual office or mobile virtual office" situation where the nature of the employee's position requires that his/her primary duties be performed "on the road" or at a customer's worksite. In this situation, the employee reports to a designated worksite only occasionally in order to perform administrative and other functions that cannot be performed while working off-site.

SECTION 4. Each employee who wishes to telework, including employees who telework on an ad-hoc basis and for temporary medical reasons, must complete and sign the FAA Telework Agreement.

The Telework Agreement, which specifies the terms and conditions of participation in the program, is then submitted to the employee's manager for signature. The Telework Agreement documents the employee's and manager's commitment to adhere to applicable guidelines and policies, and must be in place before the employee begins teleworking.

SECTION 5. When a BUE makes a request to telework, the Employer will consider the following criteria in exercising the authority to grant or deny the request:

- a. the reasonableness of the request;
- b. the workability of the request; and
- c. the effect of the request upon the efficiency of the service.

The Employer agrees that all determinations will be made in a fair, objective, and equitable manner, and based on sound business practices, not arbitrary limitations.

SECTION 6. The Employer must respond in writing to Telework requests within thirty (30) working days. Denial and termination decisions must be based on business needs or performance, not personal reasons. The denial or termination must include information about when the employee might reapply, and also if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve his/her chance of approval.

SECTION 7. Employees may change their telework days, with prior approval of their supervisor.

Article 15: Telework

The Agency's telework program is established under the authority of Section 359 of the FY 2001 DOT Appropriations Act, enacted October 23, 2000 (P.L. 106-346).

Section 1 – Introduction

- a) The agency will permit all eligible employees to participate in its telework program, consistent with the policy set forth in NHTSA Order 137-C (Telecommuting Program), dated April 8, 2005.
- b) The agency has the discretion to grant, refuse or withdraw authorization to telework based on work requirements and employee performance. However, the Agency may not do so in a manner that is arbitrary or conflicts with this Article, and must do so in writing.
- c) Supervisors are responsible for applying the eligibility criteria specified in this Article and in NHTSA Order 137-C to determine if job characteristics of a particular position and the incumbent of that position are eligible for telework.
- d) Supervisors, employees, and their representatives will work together to ensure that telework programs meet the work needs of the Agency.
- e) Telework may not be used as a means to provide child or elder care services at home, or to perform any other activities unrelated to an employee's official duties.

Section 2 – Position Eligibility Criteria

Jobs are appropriate for telework if they have the following characteristics:

- a) Work activities are portable;
- b) Data and systems security requirements, including sensitivity and Privacy Act concerns, are adequately addressed;
- c) Necessary material and information can be moved readily to and from the Federal office;
- d) Periodically working on site allows sufficient access to necessary specialized equipment;
- e) Technology for off-site work is available, if needed;
- f) Close supervision or daily input from sources accessible only on site is not required;
- g) Contact with employees and customers can be performed electronically or by telephone without adversely affecting customer service or productivity; and
- h) Other position characteristics that management determines to be appropriate.

Section 3 – Eligible Employees

In order to be eligible for telework, employees must:

- a) Hold a position with characteristics that are appropriate for telework;
- b) Maintain performance of at least Achieved Result or the equivalent, with no Performance Improvement Plan currently in effect;
- c) Comply with the laws, regulations and standards of conduct applicable to Federal and agency employees, including but not limited to the Hatch Act and Standards of Ethical Conduct (5 C.F.R. 2635); and

- d) Comply with the terms of the telework policy set forth in NHTSA Order 137-C.

Section 4 – Information Security

The Agency will ensure that data subject to the provisions of the Privacy Act, proprietary information and other sensitive data are handled and protected in accordance with applicable laws, regulations and policies.

Section 5 – Modification of Telework Agreement

- a) A supervisor may modify or terminate an employee's telework Agreement if the employee no longer meets the eligibility criteria set forth in Section 3 or the Agreement has an adverse impact on agency operations.
- b) A supervisor's decision to modify or terminate a telework agreement may not be made for arbitrary reasons, must be in accordance with the terms of this Article and must be in writing.

Section 6 – Telework Training

- a) The Agency will provide telework training to all eligible employees.
- b) An employee must complete telework training prior to being approved to participate in the agency's telework program and must complete refresher training, if requested.

Section 7 – Special Situations on a Telework Day

A supervisor may require an employee to return to the employee's official duty station on a scheduled telework day to satisfy bona fide operational requirements. However, the decision to do so may not be made arbitrarily.

Section 8 – Performance Expectations

Supervisors must evaluate the performance of employees participating in the agency telework program without regard to telework status.

ARTICLE 33 TELEWORK

Section 1. The Agency and the Union acknowledge their joint commitment to and the Government's requirement for implementing telework as a viable work practice throughout all bargaining units covered by this Agreement. Once implemented, an employee must maintain an acceptable level of performance in order to continue to telework. The Parties agree that bargaining unit employees are entitled to participate in the Agency's Telework Program, with management approval, in accordance with HRPM WLB-12.3, FAA Telework Program, established June 30, 2006 and effective September 7, 2010.

It is FAA policy to actively encourage the use of teleworking to the maximum extent possible. Because teleworking is a tool used in the accomplishment of work, it must not have an adverse impact on any Agency office or the mission of the FAA. Teleworking is designed to benefit employees, managers, and the community. Some of the benefits that may result from teleworking include:

- a. reduced commuting time and decreases in traffic congestion, air pollution, energy consumption, and costs associated with transportation, parking, and road maintenance;
- b. improved employee morale due to a decrease in commuting-related stress and greater flexibility in balancing work and family demands;
- c. increased productivity fostered by a quieter work environment removed from the distractions and interruptions of the normal work setting;

- d. possible accommodation of employees with ongoing health problems, disabilities, or other situations that make commuting to the normal work setting difficult or impossible;
- e. possible continued work production when commuting is hindered or when the primary worksite is closed due to adverse weather conditions, emergencies, natural disasters, or building-related problems.

Section 2. The Agency agrees to maintain a telework program under this labor Agreement which makes telework opportunities the rule rather than the exception.

To work effectively, the FAA Telework Program relies on the integrity and work ethic of participating employees and the active oversight of managers. It is incumbent upon the manager to closely monitor the work products of the employee and upon the employee to exhibit honesty and trustworthiness in complying with the Telework Agreement. The manager must ensure that the employee is producing quality products as agreed in the work plan and the employee must exert the same level of effort he or she does at the normal worksite. Managers are also responsible for ensuring that the FAA Telework Program does not adversely impact the organization's mission, office operations, work productivity, run counter to public service requirements, or threaten the security of FAA data, information or equipment. The program requires this mutual commitment to accomplishing the mission of the organization and to upholding the Telework Agreement. Teleworking is not appropriate in all situations or for all employees but is a benefit that expands work options for employees for whom this type of arrangement is appropriate.

Section 3. The jobs most appropriate to telework possess the following characteristics:

- a. Some work activities are portable and can be performed effectively outside the normal office or facility environment.
- b. Some job tasks are easily quantifiable or primarily project-oriented so that progress can be measured by results rather than by direct observation.
- c. Contact with other employees and customers is predictable and can be performed electronically or by telephone without loss of productivity.

- d. Classified materials are not required for accomplishing the telework tasks.
- e. Appropriate technology is available to perform the job off-site.
- f. The telework tasks do not require access to materials not available at remote worksites (i.e., reference files, manuals, databases, equipment, etc.).
- g. The work has clearly-defined performance measures.
- h. The work flow is steady and will not result in periods of inactivity.
- i. Data and systems involving sensitive, non-classified, and Privacy Act information can be adequately secured outside the normal worksite.
- j. Close supervision or daily input from sources accessible only on site is not required.
- k. Other position characteristics that management determines to be appropriate.

Section 4. Employees who participate in the FAA Telework Program may perform their duties at alternative work locations such as a satellite facility (a telecenter) or at the employee's residence. Various telework options include:

- a. Work at home in a space specifically set aside as an office or workplace.
- b. Work at a teleworking center (often called a telecenter) operated by the federal, state, or local government, by private industry, or by a combination of organizations working together.
- c. Work at another FAA facility or office that may be closer to the employee's home and where there is space to accommodate additional agency employees.
- d. Work in a "virtual office or mobile virtual office" situation where the nature of the employee's position requires that his/her position requires that his/her primary duties be performed "on the road" or at a customer's worksite. In this situation, the employee reports to a designated worksite only occasionally in order to perform administrative and other functions that cannot be performed while working off-site.

Section 5. In addition to the criteria above, employees must:

- a. Maintain performance of at least fully successful, or the equivalent
- b. No documented need to improve performance
- c. Meet Federal Government and agency standards of conduct
- d. Comply with the terms of the Agency's telework policy

Section 6. Participation in the FAA Telework Program by bargaining unit employees shall be voluntary and upon request.

Telework may be terminated at the request of the employee at any time with sufficient reason and appropriate notice (generally two [2] weeks; however, shorter notice or immediate cancellation may be given as the result of personal circumstances). The Agency may initiate action to terminate telework due to work-related circumstances or employee performance issues, or if the employee's job responsibilities are no longer consistent with the criteria in Section 3.

Section 7. To begin the process of becoming a teleworker, follow the procedures in Sections 24a and 24b of HRPW WLB-12.3.

Section 8. The Agency shall respond in writing to telework requests within thirty (30) working days. Denial and termination decisions must be based on business needs or performance, not personal reasons. The denial or termination shall include information about when the employee might reapply, and also if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve his/her chance of approval.

Section 9. Classified National Security Information and materials and documents may not be removed from the Agency's worksite in accordance with FAA Security Order 1600.2E, Safeguarding National Security Classified Information, dated March 13, 2006. Employees are responsible for ensuring proper handling of Privacy Act materials, evidence, or sensitive unclassified material (security information, for official use only, or personally identifiable information) documents in accordance with FAA Security Order Sensitive Unclassified Information dated February 1, 2005, while telecommuting.

Section 10. Program participants agree that it is their responsibility to provide a proper work environment free from regular dependent care obligations, personal disruptions, such as non-government telephone calls and visitors and family responsibilities, and in conformance with the work environment and minimal incidental interruptions found in the normal FAA work sites.

Section 11. Telework work schedules may vary according to the individual arrangements negotiated between the employee and the Agency. All schedules must be approved in advance and shall be in accordance with HRPM LWS-8.15, Alternative Work Schedules, established and effective May 4, 2005, and Article 34, Normal Working Hours and Alternate Work Schedules (AWS).

Section 12. Telework may be used in conjunction with Alternate Work Schedules and other scheduling provisions if permitted by the manager. Some managers may require teleworkers to discontinue working an AWS schedule when working on an optional teleworking basis.

- a. The policies for requesting and using annual leave, sick leave, or leave without pay remain unchanged when an employee teleworks.
- b. For telework employees who are working at a telecenter, administrative leave, dismissals, and emergency closings shall fall under the guidelines of the telecenter.
- c. In the case of emergency administrative closings, home based teleworking employees must continue to work. The Agency shall discuss the impacts of administrative closings, in advance, with the employee prior to implementing the telework work agreement to define clear expectations.

Section 13. The telework employees are expected to use the same precautions to secure and protect their at-home computer equipment and any work related documents (i.e., making sure doors are locked, liquids kept away from the computer, etc.) The employee shall notify the Agency immediately following a malfunction of government-owned equipment.

Article 19
Telework

Introduction

The Parties acknowledge that eligible employees may participate in the telework program as provided for in the Agency's telework policy, issued on June 6, 2012, which was jointly developed through the FMCSA Labor-Management Forum. On the second anniversary of the issuance of the Agency Telework policy, either Party may request to reopen the policy for negotiations.

Section 2—Procedures

- a. The Agency will identify all positions that are eligible to participate in telework and provide the Union with justification for any positions deemed not eligible. Justification will be directly related to the accomplishment of that work unit's mission and demonstrate that the use of telework would degrade the effectiveness of that work if performed anywhere other than the Agency's workplace. Consistent with the current Agency Telework policy, employees may telework up to 3 days per week.
- b. When feasible, eligible employees should be placed on a recurring telework schedule. Ad hoc telework should be assigned on an irregular or project oriented basis, or to address unexpected situations. Ad hoc telework should not normally be used in lieu of scheduling regular recurring telework.
- c. Local Unions may provide input to management on specific needs and requirements for coverage in a particular office environment.
- d. Consistent with the Agency's Telework Policy, the Agency will provide office equipment and supplies to teleworkers.

TELEWORK

The Parties recognize the value that a telework program contributes to helping accomplish the mission, goals, and work objectives of the FRA in a cost effective manner. In that telework has substantially changed the way in which FRA does business, supervisors and employees must work together in a partnership-like atmosphere to ensure that the telework program operates without sacrificing the efficiency of FRA operations and customer relationships. Therefore, the telework program shall be in accordance with FRA Telework Order 3600.3B and the associated implementation plans.

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING
DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION UPDATED GUIDANCE ON WORK SCHEDULES

This Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) is agreed to by the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE), Local 3313, hereinafter referred to as the "Union," and the Office of the Secretary (OST), the Federal Transit Administration (FTA), the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA), the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), and the Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration (PHMSA), hereinafter referred to as "Operating Administrations" or the "Agency," and collectively referred to as the "Parties." This MOU reflects the Parties' agreement on the phased implementation of the minimum requirements for teleworking employees to report to the office in person, and for core days, as specified in DOT's Updated Guidance on Work Schedules disseminated by email on July 20, 2023, to the Departmental workforce by Department of Transportation Assistant Secretary for Administration, Philip McNamara (hereinafter referred to Updated Guidance on Work Schedules (Attachment 1)). The Parties' agreement is described below.

1. The Parties agree that they will continue to engage in impact and implementation (I & I) bargaining in accordance with applicable collective bargaining agreements (CBAs), regulations, and laws with respect to the Agency's Updated Guidance on Work Schedules.
2. The Union agrees that on September 10, 2023, prior to completion of I & I bargaining, the Agency may implement Phase 1 of its Updated Guidance on Work Schedules, requiring employees on telework agreements to report in person to their duty location a minimum of three (3) days per pay period.
3. The Agency agrees to extend to January 28, 2024, the start date of Phase 2 of the Agency's Updated Guidance on Work Schedules, requiring bargaining unit employees on telework agreements to report in person to their duty location a minimum of four (4) days per pay period.
4. The Parties agree that supervisors will update employee telework agreements as needed to reflect the Agency's Updated Guidance on Work Schedules.
5. The Parties agree that the OAs have submitted notification to the Union of the Agency's Updated Guidance on Work Schedules, in accordance with their applicable CBA provisions.
6. The Parties agree to extend the deadline by which the Union's written bargaining proposals in response to the OAs' notices of the Agency's Updated Guidance on Work Schedules are due under the applicable CBAs to Friday, September 22, 2023.
7. The Union agrees that the August 24, 2023, Cease and Desist Memo described below does not constitute written bargaining proposals under the applicable CBAs, and that it will submit negotiable proposals concerning appropriate arrangements by the above-mentioned September 22, 2023, deadline.
8. In addition to notifications of the Agency's Updated Guidance on Work Schedules that the OAs have already submitted to the Union, the OAs agree to notify the Union of any new changes to existing core-day requirements proposed after the execution of this MOU in accordance with their respective CBAs, and to engage in I & I bargaining in accordance with applicable CBAs, regulations, and laws.

9. The Union agrees to rescind its Cease and Desist Implementation of Return-to-Office memorandum delivered via email on August 24, 2023 (August 24, 2023, Cease and Desist Memo (Attachment 2)). Additionally, the Union agrees to withdraw its Unfair Labor Practice Charge against the FTA, electronically filed on August 31, 2023 (August 31, 2023, ULP Charge (Attachment 3)) by September 12, 2023.
10. The Parties agree that any disputes or grievances regarding this MOU will be resolved between the Union and the respective OA per the terms of applicable laws, regulations, and CBAs.
11. This MOU shall continue in force until terminated by mutual agreement or a new MOU or CBA is agreed upon by the Parties.

- a. the reasonableness of the request;
- b. the workability of the request; and
- c. the effect of the request upon the efficiency of the service.

The Agency agrees that all determinations will be made in a fair, objective, and equitable manner, and based on sound business practices, not arbitrary limitations.

Section 6. Denial and termination decisions must be based on business needs or performance, not personal reasons. The denial or termination shall be in writing and include information about the specific business needs or performance reasons as well as information about when the employee might reapply, and also if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve his/her chance of approval.

Section 7. Employees may change their telework days, with prior approval of their supervisor.

- b. work at a teleworking center (often called a telecenter) operated by the federal, state or local government, by private industry, or by a combination of organizations working together. Telecenters typically house employees from a variety of public and private sector employers and provide worksites that reduce commuting time;
- c. work at another FAA facility or office that may be closer to the employee’s home and where there is available space to accommodate additional Agency employees;
- d. work in a “virtual office or mobile virtual office” situation where the nature of the employee’s position requires that his/her primary duties be performed “on the road” or at a customer’s worksite. In this situation, the employee reports to a designated worksite only occasionally in order to perform administrative and other functions that cannot be performed while working off-site.

SECTION 4. Each employee who wishes to telework, including employees who telework on an ad hoc basis and for temporary medical reasons, must complete and sign the FAA Telework Agreement. The Telework Agreement, which specifies the terms and conditions of participation in the program, is then submitted to the employee’s manager for signature. The Telework Agreement documents the employee’s and manager’s commitment to adhere to applicable guidelines and policies, and must be in place before the employee begins teleworking.

A2353

SECTION 5. When a bargaining unit employee makes a request to telework, the Agency will consider the following criteria in exercising the authority to grant or deny the request:

- a. the reasonableness of the request;
- b. the workability of the request; and
- c. the effect of the request upon the efficiency of the service.

The Agency agrees that all determinations will be made in a fair, objective, and equitable manner, and based on sound business practices, not arbitrary limitations.

SECTION 6. Denial and termination decisions must be based on business needs or performance, not personal reasons. The denial or termination shall be in writing and include information about the specific business needs or performance reasons as well as information about when the employee might reapply, and also if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve his/her chance of approval.

SECTION 7. As a matter of normal business, teleworkers should not be required to document every activity, unless all employees have the same reporting requirement. However, managers should address performance issues in the same manner that is used for employees in the office.

SECTION 8. Employees may change their telework days, with prior approval of their supervisor.

ARTICLE 33
TELEWORK

Section 1. The Agency and the Union acknowledge their joint commitment to and the Government's requirement for implementing telework as a viable work practice throughout the bargaining unit covered by this Agreement. Once implemented, an employee must maintain an acceptable level of performance in order to continue to telework. The Parties agree that bargaining unit employees are entitled to participate in the Agency's Telework Program, with management approval, in accordance with HRPM WLB-12.3 , FAA Telework Program.

It is Agency policy to actively encourage the use of teleworking to the maximum extent possible. Because teleworking is a tool used in the accomplishment of work, it must not have an adverse impact on any Agency office or the mission of the Agency. Teleworking is designed to benefit employees, managers, and the community. Some of the benefits that may result from teleworking include:

- a. reduced commuting time and decreases in traffic congestion, air pollution, energy consumption, and costs associated with transportation, parking, and road maintenance;
- b. improved employee morale due to a decrease in commuting-related stress and greater flexibility in balancing work and family demands;
- c. increased productivity fostered by a quieter work environment removed from the distractions and interruptions of the normal work setting;
- d. possible accommodation of employees with ongoing health problems, disabilities, or other situations that make commuting to the normal work setting difficult or impossible;
- e. possible continued work production when commuting is hindered or when the primary worksite is closed due to adverse weather conditions, emergencies, natural disasters, or building- related problems.

Section 2. To work effectively, the FAA Telework Program relies on the integrity and work ethic of participating employees and the active oversight of managers. It is incumbent upon the manager to closely monitor the work products of the employee and upon the employee to exhibit honesty and trustworthiness in complying with the Telework Agreement. The manager must ensure that the employee is producing quality products as agreed in the work plan and the employee must exert the same level of effort he or she does at the normal worksite. Managers are also responsible for ensuring that the FAA Telework Program does not adversely impact the organization's mission, office operations, work productivity, run counter to public service requirements, or threaten the security of Agency data, information or equipment. The program requires this mutual commitment to accomplishing the mission of the organization and to upholding the Telework Agreement. Teleworking is not appropriate in all situations or for all employees but is a benefit that expands work options for employees for whom this type of arrangement is appropriate.

Section 3. The jobs most appropriate to telework possess the following characteristics:

- a. Some work activities are portable and can be performed effectively outside the normal office or facility environment.
- b. Some job tasks are easily quantifiable or primarily project-oriented so that progress can be measured by results rather than by direct observation.
- c. Contact with other employees and customers is predictable and can be performed electronically or by telephone without loss of productivity.
- d. Classified materials are not required for accomplishing the telework tasks.
- e. Appropriate technology is available to perform the job off-site.
- f. The telework tasks do not require access to materials not available at remote worksites (i.e., reference files, manuals, databases, equipment, etc.).
- g. The work has clearly-defined performance measures.
- h. The work flow is steady and will not result in periods of inactivity.

- i. Data and systems involving sensitive, non-classified, and Privacy Act information can be adequately secured outside the normal worksite.
- j. Close supervision or daily input from sources accessible only on site is not required.
- k. Other position characteristics that management determines to be appropriate.

Section 4. Employees who participate in the FAA Telework Program may perform their duties at alternative work locations such as a satellite facility (a telecenter) or at the employee's residence. Various telework options include:

- a. Work at home in a space specifically set aside as an office or workplace.
- b. Work at a teleworking center (often called a telecenter) operated by the federal, state, or local government, by private industry, or by a combination of organizations working together.
- c. Work at another Agency facility or office that may be closer to the employee's home and where there is space to accommodate additional agency employees.
- d. Work in a "virtual office or mobile virtual office" situation where the nature of the employee's position requires that his/her position requires that his/her primary duties be performed "on the road" or at a customer's worksite. In this situation, the employee reports to a designated worksite only occasionally in order to perform administrative and other functions that cannot be performed while working off-site.

Section 5. Participation in the FAA Telework Program by bargaining unit employees shall be voluntary and upon request.

Telework may be terminated at the request of the employee at any time with sufficient reason and appropriate notice (generally two [2] weeks; however, shorter notice or immediate cancellation may be given as the result of personal circumstances). The Agency may initiate action to terminate telework due to work-related circumstances or employee performance issues, or if the employee's job responsibilities are no longer consistent with the criteria in Section 3.

Section 6. Each employee who wishes to telework, including employees who telework on an ad hoc basis and for temporary medical reasons, must complete and sign the FAA Telework Agreement. The Telework Agreement, which specifies the terms and conditions of participation in the program, is then submitted to the employee's manager for signature. The Telework Agreement documents the employee's and manager's commitment to adhere to applicable guidelines and policies, and must be in place before the employee begins teleworking.

Section 7. In addition to the characteristics listed in Section 3, employees must:

- a. maintain performance of at least fully successful, or the equivalent, with no documented need to improve performance;
- b. meet Federal Government and Agency standards of conduct; and
- c. comply with the terms of the telework policy contained in HRPM WLB-12.3 , Telework Program.

Section 8. The Agency shall respond in writing to telework requests within thirty (30) working days. Denial and termination decisions must be based on business needs or performance, not personal reasons. The denial or termination shall include information about when the employee might reapply, and also if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve his/her chance of approval.

Section 9. Classified National Security Information and materials and documents may not be removed from the Agency's worksite in accordance with FAA Security Order 1600.2E, Safeguarding National Security Classified Information. Employees are responsible for ensuring proper handling of Privacy Act materials, evidence, or sensitive unclassified material (security information, for official use only, or personally identifiable information) documents in accordance with FAA Security Order 1600.75 Protecting Sensitive Unclassified Information while telecommuting.

Section 10. Program participants agree that it is their responsibility to provide a proper work environment free from regular dependent care obligations, personal disruptions, such as non-government telephone calls and visitors and family responsibilities, and in conformance with the work environment and minimal incidental interruptions found in the normal Agency work sites.

Section 11. Telework work schedules may vary according to the individual arrangements negotiated between the employee and the Agency. All schedules must be approved in advance and shall be in accordance with HRPM WLB-12.3 and Article 34, Working Hours and Alternate Work Schedules (AWS). HRPM WLB-12.3

Section 12. Telework may be used in conjunction with Alternate Work Schedules and other scheduling provisions if permitted by the manager. Some managers may require teleworkers to discontinue working an AWS schedule when working on an optional teleworking basis.

- a. The policies for requesting and using annual leave, sick leave, or leave without pay remain unchanged when an employee teleworks.

b. For telework employees who are working at a telecenter, administrative leave, dismissals, and emergency closings shall fall under the guidelines of the telecenter.

c. In the case of emergency administrative closings, home based teleworking employees must continue to work. The Agency shall discuss the impacts of administrative closings, in advance, with the employee prior to implementing the telework work agreement to define clear expectations.

Section 13. The telework employees are expected to use the same precautions to secure and protect their at-home computer equipment and any work related documents (i.e., making sure doors are locked, liquids kept away from the computer, etc.) The Agency will maintain government owned-equipment. The employee shall notify the Agency immediately following a malfunction of government-owned equipment.

Article 17: Telework

Section 1—Introduction

- a. The Parties acknowledge that a vibrant telework program is consistent with and supports Departmental and performance goals. Telework reduces congestion and mobile source emission; serves as a recruitment and retention tool; and improves work life quality. More importantly, telework is an effective and efficient means for continuing government operations when employees cannot travel to their duty locations.
- b. This Article will be administered in accordance with the DOT Telework Policy (Chapter 650 of the Departmental Personnel Manual). Employee participation in the telework program is voluntary. Telework can be temporarily or permanently suspended or terminated by the participant, the supervisor, or other senior management in accordance with the provisions of this Article and the terms and conditions of applicable telework agreements.
- c. The Agency will provide training to encourage the effective use of telework consistent with the Agency's mission. The goal will be to develop strategies that will assist supervisors and employees to eliminate barriers that limit the use of telework.
- d. Telework shall be authorized for the maximum number of positions to the extent that mission readiness is not jeopardized. To the broadest extent possible, telework should be made available to eligible employees on a regular and recurring basis.

Section 2—Definitions

- a. Official Duty Station (ODS): the employee's official Agency work site.
- b. Alternate Duty Station (ADS): a management-approved alternate work site that is geographically convenient to the employee's ODS.
- c. Telework Agreement: a written agreement between the supervisor and the employee defining the employee's obligations and responsibilities under the Telework Program.
- d. Portable Work: work normally performed at the employee's ODS that can be effectively performed at the ADS. This work is part of the employee's regular work assignment or approved special work assignments.
- e. Non-Portable Work: Assignments that are not portable include those assignments that require face-to-face customer contact or the employee's physical presence at the ODS.

- f. Government-Furnished Equipment (GFE): A tangible item that is functionally complete for its intended purpose, durable, nonexpendable, and needed for job performance (includes laptop or desktop computer).

Section 3—General

- a. Consistent with operational requirements, upon the employee's request, the Agency will be flexible in approving telework participation.
- b. Eligible employees may be authorized to telework on a regular basis with the approval of their supervisors; employees must have sufficient portable work to support days requested to telework.
- c. An employee approved for full-time work at home will have his or her residence established as the ODS. The change in ODS will be treated as a voluntary work relocation assignment in accordance with Sections 3 and 4 of the Reassignment Article (Article 39) of this CBA. Pay, special salary rates, locality pay, and travel entitlements will be based on the ODS.
- d. All employees are required to complete a written Telework Agreement, have it signed and approved by their supervisor, and complete mandatory telework training before being allowed to telework. Employees must comply with the terms and conditions of the Telework Agreement.
- e. Telework should be seamless as if working in the office; when practical and appropriate, employees should forward their office phones, and respond to phone calls and emails in a reasonable time.
- f. Management reserves the right to direct an employee to report to the official duty location or cancel his or her scheduled Telework day based on operational requirements.
 - 1. Normally, the supervisor will notify the employee at least twenty four (24) hours in advance when requiring the employee to cancel his or her scheduled telework day.
 - 2. Normally, the employee will be allowed to reschedule his or her canceled telework day during the same pay period.
- g. Employees are eligible to simultaneously have alternative work schedules and be on a Telework Agreement. Subject to the supervisor's approval, consistent with organizational needs and DOT policy, an employee may be approved to telework the day before or after an RDO.
- h. An employee's request for a change to his or her Telework Agreements must be approved in advance by the supervisor prior to the date or pay period of the requested change.

- i. Subject to supervisory discretion and approval, employees who are injured, recuperating, or temporarily disabled may be permitted to telework provided they are capable of completing their work assignments.
- j. Employees are responsible for maintaining a proper working environment at their telework work site. Other than for official business permitted by law or government-wide rule or regulation, managers and supervisors will not visit an employee's residence uninvited. For any such visits, management shall provide twenty-four (24) hours advance notice during the teleworker's regular Core Hours. Management will not inspect non-work space in the ADS (residence).
- k. Employees are responsible for adjusting their transportation benefits to appropriately account for their telework schedule. Employees are not to receive transportation benefits for the days they telework.
- l. Employees are covered under FECA if injured while performing official duties during telework. The employee must immediately notify his or her supervisor of any accident or injury that occurs while on duty at his or her approved telework work site.
- m. Teleworkers are in a duty status when teleworking and are expected to have the resources necessary to perform their jobs and concentrate on official duties without interruption. Employees may not use duty time for any purpose other than performing Agency-assigned work.
- n. Management is responsible for supervising work in accordance with the FLSA and the provisions of this CBA.
- o. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers shall be treated the same for the purposes of:
 - 1. periodic annual appraisals of job performance;
 - 2. training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting/reducing in grade, retaining and removing;
 - 3. work requirements; and
 - 4. other acts involving managerial discretion.
- p. Telework-Eligibility Reconsideration Process: In accordance with the DOT Telework Policy, an employee may request reconsideration of telework eligibility from a second-level reviewer if his or her supervisor or manager has determined that the employee, or his or her position, is not telework-eligible.
- q. Telework Evaluation: Upon the establishment of the LMF, the Parties may take up topics including the evaluation of the effectiveness, the marketing of the telework program, and the goals and objectives for the telework program using Pre-Decisional Involvement (PDI). The Union shall be provided a copy of any annual status of telework report provided to DOT within ten (10) business days of issuance.

- r. Right to Grieve: The Grievance Procedures Article negotiated within this CBA will serve as the exclusive process for resolving telework disputes or terminations of telework for Bargaining Unit employees.

Section 4—Eligibility

- a. Position Eligibility Criteria: Consistent with the DOT Telework Policy, position eligibility should be reviewed based on job function. The position and employee criteria described in this Section shall apply when determining eligibility. Positions that have the following characteristics are eligible for teleworking:
 - 1. Sufficient work activities that are portable and are not dependent on the employee being at the traditional work site.
 - 2. Work activities that are conducive to remote supervisory oversight because of clear and measurable performance standards and results.
 - 3. Adequate technology for offsite work is available. Materials and information necessary to perform the duties of the position can be readily moved to and from the Federal office, consistent with data and systems security requirements, including Privacy Act protection requirements.
 - 4. Necessary interaction with coworkers, subordinates, superiors, and customers can be maintained electronically or by telephone without adversely affecting coworkers, customer service, or unit productivity.
 - 5. Other position eligibility criteria that management determines to be appropriate, consistent with the Department's goals and objectives for telework.
- b. Positions generally not eligible for Telework: Some position characteristics, tasks and duties are not generally suitable for telework. These include, but are not limited to the following:
 - 1. positions that require the employees to have daily, in-person contact with coworkers, supervisory officials, customers, Administration officials, Congressional officials, or the general public in order to be effective;
 - 2. positions in which operational requirements dictate employee physical presence at specific work locations; and/or
 - 3. positions that require routine access to classified information; unless required storage and equipment are readily available and the employee's servicing security organization has approved the telework arrangement in writing in advance.

- c. Upon request, the Agency will identify all Bargaining Unit positions that are not eligible to participate in telework and provide the Union with justification for ineligibility.
- d. Employee Eligibility Criteria: Upon approval of the supervisor, eligible employees, including probationary employees, may participate in telework on a voluntary basis. Employees may withdraw from the program at any time by notifying their immediate supervisor.

Supervisors and senior management are to assess individual performance characteristics and criteria when considering an employee for a telework arrangement. A supervisor may defer approving a Telework Agreement for a newly assigned employee for up to ninety (90) days to assess the employee's ability to work independently. In order to be eligible, an employee must meet the following minimum eligibility criteria:

1. have a performance rating of record of at least "Achieved Results";
2. not be under a Performance Improvement Plan (PIP);
3. demonstrate dependability and the ability to work independently;
4. be able to prioritize work effectively and utilize good time management skills;
5. be in compliance with Federal Government and Agency standards of conduct;
6. not have been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties as provided in 5 U.S.C. § 6502;
7. not have been officially disciplined for being absent without leave (AWOL) or disciplined within the preceding 12 months for misconduct or performance issues action that has a nexus to Telework.
8. is not on leave restriction;
9. is not excluded from participation by law, government-wide rule or regulation; and
10. has access and the ability to use the required teleworking equipment and services.

Section 5—Categories

Eligible telework-ready employees may work under the following categories as defined:

- a. Full-Time Work at Home: An employee approved to work from home on a full-time basis, with no regularly scheduled days to report and work from the headquarters building. See Section 3c of this Article.
- b. Regular Telework: An employee approved to telework on a regular, recurring scheduled basis, for any number of days allowed by law, government-wide rule or regulation, or DOT policy, as approved by the supervisor in the Telework Agreement.
- c. Ad hoc or Situational Telework: The employee teleworks on an occasional or intermittent basis at an ADS. Telework may include an approved temporary project, on a case-by-case basis, or for personal emergency or for the purpose of meeting operational requirements, where the employee may work less than a full day at the ADS, and where there is no set schedule of regular telework.

Section 6—ODS Shared Work Space

Employees who telework two (2) or fewer days per week will keep their workstation. Employees who telework more than two (2) days per week may be required to share space with other employees. Shared space will include necessary office automation equipment needed to perform the required duties of the position and access to a locked storage area.

Section 7—Telework Procedures

- a. Work performed under a Telework arrangement may be scheduled or situational.
- b. Employees may request to participate in scheduled telework at any time. Requests shall be considered at the supervisor's discretion.
- c. If the supervisor terminates or the employee voluntarily withdraws from telework, the employee may request to renew the Telework Agreement after one hundred and eighty (180) days.
- d. Requests to Participate in Telework
 1. Employees will request to participate in the Telework program by submitting a Telework Agreement and a Self-Certification Safety Checklist Form (Appendices II and III).

2. The supervisor and employee will meet to discuss and finalize the Telework Agreement.
 3. The supervisor and the employee shall work together to determine the appropriate telework schedule. The amount of day(s) for a regular telework schedule is subject to the availability of an appropriate amount of work that can be suitably performed at an ADS and office staffing requirements.
 4. The supervisor will act on requests within ten (10) working days of the request for scheduled telework. If the employee's request is denied, the supervisor will state his or her business-related reasons for the denial by annotating it on the Telework Agreement. The employee may request a meeting with the supervisor to discuss a modification to the original telework request, e.g., as to the number of days per week requested.
- e. Annual Review: The supervisor will meet with the employee to conduct an annual review of the Telework Agreement. Employees will not have to submit future requests once the original request is approved unless a schedule change is requested by the employee.
 - f. Office Closures: Employees who are "telework ready" and can perform assigned duties are required to telework during government/office closures as directed by the Agency. An employee who is not "telework ready" is able to take administrative leave and is not required to take annual or other unscheduled leave. If circumstances render an employee unable to be telework ready that day because of events outside of his or her control, the employee may be required to provide proof of the exigency at the request of the supervisor.
 - g. Early Dismissal/Late Opening: If there is an early dismissal or late opening at the ODS due to emergency circumstances, and the employee is working at his or her residence as the ADS, the employee is required to complete a full workday, unless the employee takes appropriate leave or is not telework ready.
 - h. Administrative Leave: When Administrative leave is authorized for half-day work, (such as Christmas Eve), the telework employee may also take the administrative leave and is not required to work his or her full day.
 - i. Overtime: An employee may be permitted to work overtime in a telework duty status in accordance with the overtime provisions of this CBA.
 - j. Leave: Requests for leave on scheduled telework days will be handled in accordance with this CBA.

Section 8—Work Assignments

- a. Employees and supervisors will discuss and document, as necessary, the job tasks/assignments that will be carried out or completed while teleworking.

- b. An employee teleworking will complete assigned work according to the work procedures agreed upon by the employee and supervisor and according to the job elements and performance standards established in the employee's performance plan.

Section 9—Restriction and Termination

- a. Barring work performance or disciplinary actions that directly affect job performance, a supervisor's decision to terminate an employee's Telework Agreement will be based solely on operational work requirements.
- b. Telework arrangements may be terminated by either management or the employee by written notification of termination of the Telework Agreement, except under emergency situations. Reasons for termination of a Telework Agreement may include a decline in performance or productivity, or if the telework arrangement no longer benefits the organization or the employee's needs.
- c. The Agency may terminate an employee's Telework Agreement with documentation to support a decline in performance, productivity, or a pending disciplinary action that supports terminating telework.
- d. Employees will suspend telework during travel, temporary duty (TDY), training, and other work assignments outside their normal work environment. Employees on detail may telework with the approval of the detail supervisor and if work requirement permits.
- e. The Agency may temporarily restrict telework for a short period of time for a group or an individual in order to meet operational requirements. Barring an urgent operational requirement, the employees will be provided notice at least five (5) workdays in advance.
- f. The employee's Telework Agreement may be terminated if he or she does not meet one (1) or more of the eligibility criteria or the terms of the Telework Agreement.
- g. Management will counsel employees about specific problems, including a diminishment in performance, before removing an employee from the Telework Program, except in the case of egregious violations.
- h. When an employee's participation in the Telework Program is terminated, the employee will be notified in writing of the reason for termination and the effective date of the termination. Management will consider individual circumstances when considering the effective date of removal from the program.

- i. An employee who has voluntarily terminated his or her participation in the telework program or has been removed from the Telework Program may reapply for Telework after 180 days.

Section 10—Equipment and supplies

- a. Based on funds, equipment availability, and operational requirements, GFE, including computers and other telecommunications equipment, may be provided by OST headquarters for use by employees participating in the teleworking program. GFE is to be used only for official business.
- b. OST headquarters is responsible for the maintenance, repair, and replacement of GFE. Employees are responsible for bringing the equipment into the office for maintenance.
- c. Employees are responsible for repair and maintenance of personally owned equipment and associated costs for telecommunications and internet services.
- d. Approved supplies will normally be procured through established office procedures.
- e. GFE will be signed out and returned in accordance with OST policies and procedures. The employee must return all GFE and material to OST headquarters at the conclusion of the telework arrangements or upon request.
- f. As appropriate, the Agency shall provide GFE in support of a requested and approved reasonable accommodation.

Section 11—Computer and Information Security

- a. Employees who telework are to follow all required security protections and DOT policies to include DOT Departmental Personnel Manual, Chapter 650 as they pertain to the protection of information, equipment, information system resources, classified information, computer security, and the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. 552a.
- b. Employees who access DOT systems as a part of their telework arrangement must sign the Rules of Behavior Agreement (Appendix IV).

Section 12—Telework Forms

After the CBA has been in effect for one (1) year, either Party may reopen this Article to bargain any and all aspects of the Telework Agreement Form or to propose additional forms related to telework. The written notice to reopen this Article must be provided no later than the second anniversary of the effective date of this CBA or the Article will remain in force.

ARTICLE 35
TELEWORK

Section 1. The AJI OKC will administer telework in accordance with Human Resources Policy Manual (HRPM) Volume 12: Work Life and Benefits, WLB-12.3 FAA Telework Program dated September 07, 2010.

Section 2. Management will, on an annual basis, provide the union a report of formal requests for telework including approvals and rejections.

ARTICLE 37
Telework

Section 1. Policies and procedures regarding telework that are not covered in this Article shall be in accordance with HRPW WLB-12.3, FAA Telework Program, and other applicable directives. The Parties agree that bargaining unit employees may request to telework under the Agency's Telework Program.

Section 2. It is FAA policy to actively encourage the use of teleworking to the maximum extent possible. Because teleworking is a tool used in the accomplishment of work, it must not have an adverse impact on any Agency office or the mission of the FAA. Teleworking is designed to benefit employees, managers, and the community. Some of the benefits that may result from teleworking include:

- a. reduced commuting time and decreases in traffic congestion, air pollution, energy consumption, and costs associated with transportation, parking, and road maintenance;
- b. improved employee morale due to a decrease in commuting related stress and greater flexibility in balancing work and family demands;
- c. increased productivity fostered by a quieter work environment removed from the distractions and interruptions of the normal work setting;

- d. possible accommodation of employees with ongoing health problems, disabilities, or other situations that make commuting to the normal work setting difficult or impossible;
- e. possible continued work production when commuting is hindered or when the primary worksite is closed due to adverse weather conditions, emergencies, natural disasters, or building related problems.

Section 3. FAA employees may participate in one or a combination of the following telework options based upon their manager's approval and as a condition of the telework agreement. Various telework options include:

- a. work at home in a space specifically set aside as an office or workplace;
- b. work at a teleworking center (often called a telecenter) operated by the federal, state or local government, by private industry, or by a combination of organizations working together. Telecenters typically house employees from a variety of public and private sector employers and provide worksites that reduce commuting time;
- c. work at another FAA facility or office that may be closer to the employee's home and where there is available space to accommodate additional Agency employees;
- d. work in a "virtual office or mobile virtual office" situation where the nature of the employee's position requires that his/her primary duties be performed "on the road" or at a customer's worksite.

In this situation, the employee reports to a designated worksite only occasionally in order to perform administrative and other functions that cannot be performed while working off-site.

Section 4. Each employee who wishes to telework, including employees who telework on an ad hoc basis and for temporary medical reasons, must complete and sign the FAA Telework Agreement. The Telework Agreement, which specifies the terms and conditions of participation in the program, is then submitted to the employee's manager for signature. The Telework Agreement documents the employee's and manager's commitment to adhere to applicable guidelines and policies and must be in place before the employee begins teleworking.

Section 5. When a bargaining unit employee makes a request to telework, the Agency will consider the following criteria in exercising the authority to grant or deny the request:

- a. the reasonableness of the request;
- b. the workability of the request; and
- c. the effect of the request upon the efficiency of the service.

The Agency agrees that all determinations will be made in a fair, objective, and equitable manner, and based on sound business practices, not arbitrary limitations.

Section 6. Denial and termination decisions must be based on business needs or performance, not personal reasons. The denial or termination shall be in writing and include information about the specific business needs or performance reasons as well as information about when the employee might reapply, and also if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve his/her chance of approval.

Section 7. Employees may change their telework days, with prior approval of their supervisor.

Section 8. An employee with a telework agreement and who is not designated as an Emergency Teleworker shall not be required to work from home when the normal worksite is closed due to severe weather/emergencies on his/her non-telework day, unless he/she is notified in advance by his/her manager to take work home in anticipation of an office closure. Should the office not be closed as anticipated, and the employee is already prepared to telework, the employee may, with management approval, have the option to telework as planned. An employee that is designated on his/her telework agreement as an Emergency Teleworker in the FAA's Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP) is required to telework in accordance with the Agency policy and the COOP. If an employee who is not on his/her regularly scheduled telework day and is not designated as an Emergency Teleworker requests to telework on his/her non-telework day, the employee must have sufficient work to complete for all or part of an unscheduled telework day. Unscheduled telework may be used in conjunction with appropriate leave to ensure the entire work day is accounted for.

Section 9. The first level response to an employee's request to telework must be provided to the employee in writing no more than seven (7) work days after receipt of the employee's request. An employee whose telework request has been denied at the first-level may request reconsideration from, the second-level manager. This does not supersede or waive the right of employees to use the negotiated grievance procedure or any other appeal rights that an employee may have including the right to file a complaint of discrimination. The second-level manager shall respond to the employee's appeal for reconsideration within seven (7) work days of receipt of the appeal request. The response shall be a written response that includes the reasons for the decision.

- a. If the reconsideration is denied, the employee may grieve the denial in accordance with the applicable grievance process.
- b. If the reconsideration is approved, a telework agreement must be signed and put into place prior to teleworking. The employee's teleworking-eligible status will be effective at the beginning of the next pay period following date of that second-level decision and the signing of the telework agreement.

Section 10. Although a change in manager requires a new or modified telework agreement, an employee's telework agreement will not be cancelled by the new manager without written notice to the employee stating the reason. Upon receipt of the new manager's intent to modify or cancel the existing telework agreement, the employee may request reconsideration of that decision by the second-level manager in accordance with Section 9 of this Agreement. Until the second-level manager decision is received, the employee's current telework agreement will stay in effect.

ARTICLE 51

Telework

SECTION 1. Policies and procedures regarding telework that are not covered in this Article shall be in accordance with HRPM WLB-12.3, FAA Telework Program, and other applicable directives. The Parties agree that bargaining unit employees may request to telework under the Agency's Telework Program.

SECTION 2. It is FAA policy to actively encourage the use of teleworking to the maximum extent possible. Because teleworking is a tool used in the accomplishment of work, it must not have an adverse impact on any Agency office or the mission of the FAA. Teleworking is designed to benefit employees, managers, and the community. Some of the benefits that may result from teleworking include:

- a. reduced commuting time and decreases in traffic congestion, air pollution, energy consumption, and costs associated with transportation, parking, and road maintenance;
- b. improved employee morale due to a decrease in commuting related stress and greater flexibility in balancing work and family demands;
- c. increased productivity fostered by a quieter work environment removed from the distractions and interruptions of the normal work setting;
- d. possible accommodation of employees with ongoing health problems, disabilities, or other situations that make commuting to the normal work setting difficult or impossible;
- e. possible continued work production when commuting is hindered or when the primary worksite is closed due to adverse weather conditions, emergencies, natural disasters, or building related problems.

SECTION 3. Employees may participate in one or a combination of the following telework options based upon their manager's approval and as a condition of the telework agreement. Various telework options include:

- a. work at home in a space specifically set aside as an office or workplace;
- b. work at a teleworking center (often called a telecenter) operated by the federal, state or local government, by private industry, or by a combination of organizations working together. Telecenters typically house employees from a variety of public and private sector employers and provide worksites that reduce commuting time;

- c. work at another FAA facility or office that may be closer to the employee's home and where there is available space to accommodate additional Agency employees;
- d. work in a "virtual office or mobile virtual office" situation where the nature of the employee's position requires that his/her primary duties be performed "on the road" or at a customer's worksite. In this situation, the employee reports to a designated worksite only occasionally in order to perform administrative and other functions that cannot be performed while working off-site.

SECTION 4. Each employee who wishes to telework, including employees who telework on an ad hoc basis and for temporary medical reasons, must complete and sign the FAA Telework Agreement. The Telework Agreement, which specifies the terms and conditions of participation in the program, is then submitted to the employee's manager for signature. The Telework Agreement documents the employee's and manager's commitment to adhere to applicable guidelines and policies, and must be in place before the employee begins teleworking.

SECTION 5. When a bargaining unit employee makes a request to telework, the Agency will consider the following criteria in exercising the authority to grant or deny the request:

- a. the reasonableness of the request;
- b. the workability of the request; and
- c. the effect of the request upon the efficiency of the service.

The Agency agrees that all determinations in assessing these criteria will be made in a fair, objective, and equitable manner, and based on sound business practices, not arbitrary limitations. The Agency will respond to such requests in a timely manner.

SECTION 6. Denial and termination decisions must be based on business needs or organizational/individual performance, not personal reasons. The denial or termination shall be in writing and include information about the specific business needs or performance reasons as well as information about when the employee might reapply, and also, if applicable, what actions the employee should take to improve his/her chance of approval.

SECTION 7. An employee on an approved Ad Hoc Telework Agreement may request a specific telework day(s) that satisfies the irregular and/or project oriented needs of a work assignment. The Agency will respond to such requests in a timely manner. Employees on an approved Optional Telework Agreement may change their telework days, with prior approval of their supervisor.

SECTION 8. Teleworkers will be treated fairly and equitably in the application of Agency policy and as compared to non-teleworkers will be treated equitably with respect to:

- a. formal feedback discussions (e.g., Mid-Cycle Progress Review, End-of-Year Performance Summary);
- b. training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees; and
- c. The quantity, quality and timeliness of work assignments.

Telecommuting

Section 1. Subject to RITA Order 1501.1, RITA Telecommuting Policy, employees desiring to work at home or at an alternative work site, known as “telecommuting”, may do so in accordance with the procedures contained in the Order. When requested by an employee, telecommuting may be approved at the discretion of the supervisor. Employees will be required to execute a written agreement which is signed by the employee and the supervisor which lists the conditions of telecommuting agreed to by both parties. A copy of the agreement will be given to the time and attendance clerk, and a copy will be sent to the Human Resources Division.

January 2024 Submission

WORK ENVIRONMENT IMPLEMENTATION DATA CALL

January 18, 2024

OMB issued its Organizational Health and Performance Memorandum (M-23-15) last spring as guidance for agencies as they reevaluate their work environment posture to increase in-person presence while optimizing organizational health and performance. As the White House Chief of Staff and OMB have continued to emphasize in the Cabinet, PMC, and other forums, it is essential for agency leaders to be paying close attention to implementation progress and ensuring that updated Work Environment policies are having the intended impact.

In line with M-23-15, OMB requests that agencies that are still implementing in-person presence goals respond to this implementation data call outlining all remaining steps that the agency will take to reach intended work environment postures.

Agencies should provide:

- (1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

Effective October 8, 2023, Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) non-bargaining unit employees in the National Capital Region (NCR) increased their onsite presence to at least 5 days (or 50%) of their total workdays per biweekly pay period. This included Senior Executive Service (SES), SES Equivalents (SES EQV), and Senior Leaders (SL) in the NCR on either telework agreements or virtual arrangements.

As of December 3, 2023, VA SES, SES EQV, and SL outside the NCR, on telework or virtual arrangements, and SES, SES EQV, and SL within 50 miles of the NCR on remote work agreements were required to increase their onsite presence to at least 5 days or 50% of their total workdays per biweekly pay period.

Additionally, all remaining SES, SES EQV, and SL on remote work agreements (including those outside the NCR) will change to telework agreements and report to the agency worksite at least five days per biweekly pay period no later than March 31, 2024.

NOTE: VA has not implemented any changes to Bargaining Unit Employees (BUE) who have not increased their onsite presence due to continued negotiations with American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE) Local 17. Negotiations with AFGE began in October 2023 and mediation is scheduled to begin on February 5, 2024. VA is reviewing options to support facilitating a solution that increases onsite presence of BUE while addressing the concerns raised by our labor partners.

VA telework policy defines the NCR as the following VA Central Office locations: 810 and 811 Vermont Avenue NW, 425 I Street NW, 1800 G Street NW, 1100 First Street

NE, 801 I Street NW, and 1575 I Street NW, Washington, DC; and Landover Warehouse, 7100 Landover Road, Landover, MD. Approximately 85% of the employees in these locations have updated their telework agreements to comply with policy.

VA recognizes that OMB's definition of NCR for data and reporting purposes is outlined in the National Capital Planning Act of 1952 and includes the District of Columbia and 11 local jurisdictions in the State of Maryland and the Commonwealth of Virginia. As of pay period ending December 30, 2023, VA employees with duty stations in the NCR who teleworked performed 54% of their hours in-person. VA continues to validate the data each pay period and improve the accuracy of the information reported.

- (2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

In June 2023, guidance was issued to pause establishing and filling remote positions in the NCR until a review of remote positions in the NCR was completed. Following completion of the review, the VA Deputy Secretary issued a memorandum in December 2023, outlining the process for establishing, filling, or converting a position to remote in the NCR. The Office of the Chief Human Capital Officer (OCHCO) published implementing guidance to support the Deputy Secretary memorandum.

The memorandum and implementing guidance require new requests for remote positions in the NCR to be submitted to the Deputy Secretary for approval. Requests submitted to the Deputy Secretary will be reviewed to determine whether other options for filling the position were considered, including why a position cannot be filled with a telework employee, data to support why the position is hard to fill, and an explanation of the potential impact of not filling the position in a timely manner.

In December 2023, VA administered a pulse survey to NCR non-bargaining unit employees on the increased in office presence policy. The response rate was 45%. Themes included concerns about commuting to include time and cost associated with the commute, physical safety traveling to and from the agency worksite, cleanliness of the agency worksite, psychological safety at work, and the costs of childcare. The survey results are currently being reviewed and analyzed to determine appropriate action.

Additionally, VA conference rooms have been configured for TEAMS meetings, and VA has transitioned to a new reservation system for booking conference rooms.

- (3) Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

VA is tracking implementation progress and ensuring staff comply with stated policies by monitoring time and attendance records, reviewing telework agreements for employees working in the NCR to ensure the current telework agreement reflects the 5-day (or 50% on-site requirement) per pay period and the appropriate official worksite/duty station. This is being monitored on an ongoing basis.

VA also reviews daily computer logins at VA Central Office's eight buildings in the NCR to monitor trends in employees' on-site presence. VA has noted a 45% increase in on-site presence at headquarters buildings since implementation of the requirement to increase onsite presence to at least 5 days or 50% of their total workdays per biweekly pay period, with the exception of the end of the calendar year when many employees were on scheduled leave.

As mentioned above, VA estimates that 85% of its impacted NCR workforce (non-bargaining unit employees and senior executives) have updated their telework agreements. This is monitored on an ongoing basis and during the VA Organizational Health and Organizational Performance meetings and we continue to work on improving data accuracy.

Request. Please send a written update that answers these questions. Agencies may provide additional detail or narrative on top of these answers. Responses are due via email to futureofwork@omb.eop.gov no later than January 26, 2024.

Telework Policy(s)

UPDATE TO POLICIES AND PROCEDURES FOR TELEWORK IN VA HANDBOOK 5011

1. PURPOSE: The purpose of this Notice is to announce revised policies and procedures for telework. Compliance with this policy will be documented using the VA Form 0740, Telework Request/Agreement (or the electronic equivalent), outlining the terms and conditions of a telework arrangement. Virtual work arrangements are also documented on the VA Form 0740 and subject to the terms and conditions of this Notice.

2. POLICY: The mission of the Department requires National Capital Region (NCR) employees with telework agreements to be on-site at least five days per biweekly pay period. The National Capital Region (NCR) is defined as the VA headquarters buildings located in the Washington, D.C., area at the following locations: 810 Vermont Avenue, NW; 811 Vermont Avenue, NW; 1575 I Street, NW; 801 I Street, NW; 425 I Street, NW; 1100 First Street, NE; 1800 G Street, NW and 7100 Landover Road, Landover, MD. NCR employees on virtual work agreements will report to the VA facility to which they are assigned at least five days per biweekly pay period. Regular and recurring telework for positions aligned to the NCR are defined as an approved telework schedule where eligible full-time employees work at an alternative worksite on a regular, recurring basis and report to the agency worksite no less than five days per biweekly pay period. This policy does not apply to the Washington DC VA Medical Center or VA employees located in the Washington, D.C. locality pay area who perform work directly providing or supporting the delivery of services and benefits to Veterans as determined and approved by the Under Secretaries, Assistant Secretaries or Other Key Officials. This policy may apply to employees outside the NCR performing related functions as those within the NCR as determined and approved by their respective Under Secretary, Assistant Secretary or Other Key Officials.
 - a. For part-time employees, the five-day reporting requirement is prorated based on the number of regularly scheduled workdays in a biweekly pay period (e.g., an employee working 6 days per biweekly pay period must report to the agency worksite a minimum of 3 days per biweekly pay period).
 - b. Employees may be on an alternative work schedule and participate in telework. However, employees on compressed work schedules who have the basic work requirement scheduled for less than 10 workdays must maintain an onsite presence at the agency worksite that allows for at least half of the employee's total workdays to be spent at the agency worksite per biweekly pay period.
 - c. Employees on telework agreements may work overtime (e.g., time in excess or the prescheduled and authorized tour of duty) when ordered and approved in advance by the supervisor. Employees are not required to work half of their overtime hours at the agency worksite. Overtime may be worked at the agency worksite or alternative worksite.

- d. Per VA Handbook 5011 and VA Form 0740, supervisors are encouraged to support employees with flexibility when employees request to change their scheduled telework days in a particular week or biweekly pay period consistent with mission requirements. Telework arrangements must be documented in the VA Time and Attendance System (VATAS).
 - e. Telework as a reasonable accommodation for employees with qualifying disabilities is covered under VA Handbook 5975.1.
3. RESPONSIBLE OFFICE: Office of the Chief Human Capital Officer (006), Worklife and Benefits Service (058).
4. RELATED HANDBOOK: VA Handbook 5011, Hours of Duty and Leave, December 22, 2022.
5. RESCISSION: This Notice will be rescinded, and guidance incorporated into VA Handbook no later than one year after the date of publication.

Subj: Updates to Telework Policies and Procedures for Political Appointees, Senior Executive Service, Senior Executive Service Equivalents and Senior Leaders (VIEWS 10991422)

To: Under Secretaries, Assistant Secretaries and Other Key Officials

1. On April 13, 2023, the Office of Management and Budget issued Memorandum M-23-15, Measuring, Monitoring, and Improving Organizational Health and Organizational Performance in the Context of Evolving Agency Work Environments, which communicates steps agencies will take to improve organizational health and performance and increase meaningful in-person work in Federal offices. In support of that effort, the mission of the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) requires the following:

- a. As previously communicated, political appointees are expected to report in-person to their place of work a minimum of 4 days per week.
- b. Effective as of October 8, 2023:
 - i. Senior Executive Service (SES), SES Equivalents (SES EQV) and Senior Leaders (SL), who are in the National Capital Region (NCR)¹ and on telework agreements and virtual work arrangements, report to an Agency worksite a minimum of 5 days per bi-weekly pay period.
- c. Effective no later than December 3, 2023:
 - i. SES, SES EQV and SL, who are outside the NCR and on telework agreements and virtual work arrangements, report to an Agency worksite a minimum of 5 days per bi-weekly pay period;
 - ii. SES, SES EQV and SL, on remote agreements and arrangements with current official duty stations within 50 miles of the NCR will change to telework agreements and report to an Agency worksite a minimum of 5 days per bi-weekly pay period.
- d. Effective no later than March 31, 2024:
 - i. All remaining SES, SES EQV and SL on remote work agreements and arrangements will change to telework agreements and report to an Agency worksite a minimum of 5 days per bi-weekly pay period.

Page 2.

Subj: Updates to Telework Policies and Procedures for Political Appointees, Senior Executive Service, Senior Executive Service Equivalents and Senior Leaders (VIEWS 10991422)

2. Additional time to comply (e.g., identify appropriate office space) or any other exceptions may be authorized in writing by an Under Secretary, Assistant Secretary or Other Key Official.

3. This shift represents an adjustment for many in this Department; however, these changes will allow us to harness the benefits of enhanced flexibilities that we experienced during the COVID-19 pandemic, while ensuring we have the in-person time we need to build a strong culture, trust and interpersonal connections.

4. The 5-day reporting requirement is prorated for part-time SES, SES EQV and SL based on the number of regularly scheduled workdays in a bi-weekly pay period. Also, official travel counts towards the in-office requirement.

5. All political appointees, SES, SES EQV and SL employees must update their telework agreements and official duty location, where applicable, to reflect the new requirements. VA Form 0740, Telework Request/Agreement (or the electronic equivalent), outlines the terms and conditions of a telework/virtual arrangement. You must follow the procedures in Part II, Chapter 4, Section 13 of VA Handbook 5011, Hours of Duty and Leave, when terminating a remote work agreement.

6. If terminating a remote agreement would conflict with another legally controlling document or policy, it may not be impacted by this requirement and a case-by-case review of those should be conducted with the Office of General Counsel. For example, individuals with a reasonable accommodation for a qualifying disability covered in VA Handbook 5975.1, Processing Requests for Reasonable Accommodation and Personal Assistance Services for Employees and Applicants with Disabilities, are not impacted by this requirement. You must follow the procedures in VA Handbook 5975.1 in addressing requests for reasonable accommodation.

7. Terminating a remote agreement may result in relocation expenses. VA Handbook 5011 and VA Financial Policy must be followed.

8. The Corporate Senior Executive Management Office is available to assist with questions related to terminating a remote work agreement and processing reasonable accommodation requests.

9. The requirements in this memorandum will be codified in VA Handbook 5011 within 1 year of issuance of this memorandum.

Subj: Process for Establishing, Filling, or Converting a Remote Position in the National Capital Region (VIEWS 11150292)

To: Under Secretaries, Assistant Secretaries, and Other Key Officials

1. In response to guidance from the Office of Management and Budget, on May 24, 2023, the Secretary announced a transition to an increased in-person presence for employees in the National Capital Region (NCR)¹. Subsequently, on June 23, 2023, the Chief Human Capital Officer (CHCO) issued guidance to pause establishing and filling remote positions in the NCR until a review of remote positions in the NCR was completed.

2. Based on the review, the following approval levels² will be applied to positions in the NCR categorized as Headquarters³ and Enterprise Support⁴:

- a. Requests to establish a new remote position⁵ must be approved by the Deputy Secretary (DEPSEC).
- b. Requests to backfill an existing remote position or convert an existing position to remote that meets the justification criteria in 3a or 3b below must be approved by the Under Secretary, Assistant Secretary, or Key Official.
- c. Requests to backfill an existing remote position or convert an existing position to remote that do not meet the justification criteria in 3a or 3b must be approved by the DEPSEC.

3. The justification to establish a new remote position, backfill an existing remote position, or convert a position to remote must include evidence that:

¹ NCR is defined as the following Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) Central Office locations: 810 and 811 Vermont Avenue NW, 425 I Street NW, 1800 G Street NW, 1100 First Street NE, 801 I Street NW, and 1575 I Street NW, Washington DC; and Landover Warehouse, 7100 Landover Road, Landover, Maryland. The NCR does not include the Washington, DC Medical Center or VA employees located in the Washington, DC locality pay area who perform work directly providing or supporting the delivery of services and benefits to Veterans.

² This approval process does not apply to requests for remote work as a reasonable accommodation or remote work approved as part of a settlement agreement.

³ Headquarters positions work for components that establish Administration-wide or VA policy, request and provide the initial distribution of resources from Congress or external organizations, assess organizational performance, collaborate with interagency partners, conduct inspections, and/or provide oversight across the Administration or VA.

⁵ A remote position covered by this memorandum may be filled by one or multiple employees.

Page 2.

Subj: Process for Establishing, Filling, or Converting a Remote Position in the National Capital Region (VIEWS 11150292)

- a. The position is a VA mission critical occupation or a shortage occupation; or
- b. At least one attempt was made to fill the position(s) in the NCR in the last year and was unsuccessful.
- c. If the criteria in paragraphs 3a and 3b are not met and the Under Secretary, Assistant Secretary, or Key Official still wants to pursue a remote position, they may submit a memorandum to the DEPSEC that explains why the position cannot be filled with a telework employee, data supporting the hard to fill aspects of the position, and the potential impact of not getting the position filled in a timely manner.

4. Upon approval, documentation to establish, backfill, or convert a remote position must be submitted to the Human Resources Servicing Office with a Request for Personnel Action for recruitment. A remote work agreement (VA Form 0740) must be completed once the candidate is onboard. The component head is the final approval of the remote work agreement.

5. A report will be submitted to the Office of Human Resources and Administration/ Operations, Security, and Preparedness by each Administration and Staff Office on the 15th of each month documenting the number of remote position backfills and conversions approved by the Under Secretary, Assistant Secretary, or Key Official and the duty location.

6. Thank you for your attention to this important matter. Questions concerning this memorandum may be directed to Ms. Tracey Therit, CHCO, at Tracey.Therit@va.gov.

CHAPTER 4. ALTERNATIVE WORKPLACE ARRANGEMENTS (TELEWORK [AND REMOTE WORK])

- 1. PURPOSE. This chapter sets forth Departmental policies and procedures on alternative workplace arrangements (telework [and remote work]). Telework [and remote work] provide[] employees with the opportunity to perform their work at locations other than the traditional office setting.
- 2. COVERAGE. This chapter covers all VA employees in telework [and remote work] suitable positions.
- 3. EXCLUSIONS.
 - a. Employees who have been officially disciplined for absence without approved leave (AWOL) for more than [five] days in any calendar year after December 9, 2010.
 - b. Employees who have been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.
- 4. RESPONSIBILITIES.
 - a. Under Secretaries, Assistant Secretaries, Other Key Officials, or their designees, are responsible for the administration of telework [and remote work] programs and [for implementing] this policy within their organizations; [including for employees in VA Central Office, the Office of Information and Technology, and Program Offices of the Veterans Health Administration. Administration of telework and remote work programs includes approving or discontinuing alternative work arrangements,] ensuring that managerial, logistical, organizational, or other barriers to implementation and successful functioning of the telework [or remote work] program[s] are removed. [The responsibility for approving or discontinuing telework or remote work arrangements may be delegated as far down as first level] supervisors. Each Administration and Staff Office will be required to ensure employee telework [and remote work] data is being recorded in a timely manner in [the VA personnel system of records (currently HR·Smart)] and the VA electronic time and attendance systems.
 - b. [Where responsibility for approving or discontinuing telework or remote work arrangements is delegated to] Facility Directors, [they] are responsible for [the administration of telework and remote work] programs [for employees under their jurisdiction]. [Facility Directors will] periodically remind employees of the workplace flexibilities available. The responsibility for approving or discontinuing telework [or remote work] arrangements may be delegated as far down as first level supervisors. The approval of telework [and remote work] arrangements must be coordinated with facility Human Resources Officers and supervisors.

PART II

CHAPTER 4

- c. The [Chief Human Capital Officer, Human Resources and Administration/ Operations, Security and Preparedness shall] advise management and operating officials on the policies and procedures in this chapter.
- d. Supervisors [shall]:
 - (1) [D]etermin[e] position suitability and employee eligibility for telework [and remote work] arrangements;
 - (2) Coordinat[e] the completion of the User's Remote Computing Security Agreement with employees (available in the "VA Remote Access Guidelines.");
 - (3) Ensur[e] that the employee has remote access;
 - (4) Ensur[e] adequate coverage during public business hours; that operations continue to be carried out in an efficient and economical manner; and that participating and non-participating employees are treated equitably;
 - (5) [Verify employee required training is completed and complete supervisor telework training, as indicated on VA Form 0740;
 - (6) Ensure VA Form 0740 (or electronic equivalent) is complete prior to employee starting telework or remote work;]
 - (7) Coordinat[e] updates to the telework indicator code in HR·Smart with their servicing Human Resources (HR) office[, including the submission of a request for processing personnel action when an employee's telework or remote work request requires a change in duty station location for locality-based pay]; and
 - (8) Coordinat[e] changes to employee telework [or remote work] schedules with their servicing timekeeper.
- e. Timekeepers are responsible for coding employee timecards with the appropriate descriptors for regularly schedule[d] telework or ad-hoc/situational telework each pay period.
- f. Employees [shall]:
 - (1) Maintain productivity and fulfill their obligation to account for their scheduled daily tour of duty. Participants may be permitted to work at home or other telework worksites full days or a portion of a day. Leave [must] be requested for the period of time not worked;
 - (2) Work[] with their supervisor in completing the remote access request through the Remote Access Self Service Portal;

- (3) Request permanent and temporary changes to their telework schedules through their supervisors; and;
- (4) [Ensure that they are working from the approved alternative worksite location and to request supervisory approval in advance for any temporary changes to the alternative worksite location.]

5. DEFINITIONS.

- a. Ad Hoc Telework. Telework that occurs on an occasional, non-routine basis. Telework that occurs to complete short-term special assignments or to accommodate special circumstances even though the telework arrangement may occur continuously for a limited and specific period of time.
- b. [Agency Worksite. The official agency location where the employee reports and work activities are based, absent a telework agreement.]
- c. Alternative Work[s]ite. [The location where the employee is approved to work when not at the agency worksite. Generally, this is the employee's residence (home).]
- d. Classified Documents. Documents that have been officially designated as either Confidential, Secret or Top Secret.
- e. Continuity of Operations Planning (COOP). Planning to ensure that the capability exists to continue agency essential functions across a wide range of emergencies, either natural or declared.
- f. Docking Station. A piece of equipment that is used with an agency issued laptop computer to allow for the convenient and quick connection of peripheral and/or telecommunications.
- g. Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) Arrangement. A telework arrangement wherein an employee temporarily performs the work requirements and duties of their domestic civil service position from an approved [foreign] overseas location. Employees may not telework from a foreign location without an approved DETO agreement.
- h. DETO Agreement. A written agreement, in addition to the VA Form 0740, Telework Agreement, which is required for all VA employees conducting official U.S. Government business in a foreign location. DETO agreements are extremely rare but may be approved on a case-by-case basis in accordance with the guidance and procedures specified in VA financial policy Volume XIV, Chapter 6 and U.S. Department of State policy guidelines.]
- i. [Locality Payment. A locality-based comparability payment payable under 5 U.S.C. § 5304 and 5 C.F.R. § 531.605. An employee's locality payment is the difference between the employee's locality rate and the employee's scheduled annual rate of pay.]

CHAPTER 4

- j. Mobile Work. Work which [requires] routine and regular travel to conduct work [with] customers or [several] worksites as opposed to a single authorized alternative worksite. Examples of mobile work include site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management, and traveling between worksites, or on Temporary Duty (Note: Normal commuting time from home to work and from work to home is not counted as hours of work).
- k. Official Worksite. The official worksite where the employee regularly performs their duties as determined by 5 C.F.R. § 531.605. For most employees, the official worksite is the agency worksite, including a teleworker. For a remote employee, the official worksite is the worksite to which the supervisor and employee agreed (e.g., the employee's residence) for location-based pay entitlements and travel. See [VA Handbook 5007, Chapter 9, Part III for guidance on official worksite determinations for pay purposes.]
- l. Regular and Recurring Telework. An approved telework schedule where eligible employees work at an alternative work site on a regular, recurring, and ongoing basis. []
- m. Remote Work. [An alternative work arrangement in which an employee, under a written remote work agreement, is scheduled to perform their official duties at an alternative worksite and is not expected to perform work at an agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis. A remote worker's official worksite may be within or outside the commuting area of an agency worksite.
- n. Remote Work Agreement. A required written agreement, completed and signed by an employee and appropriate officials, outlining the terms and conditions of a remote work arrangement. VA Form 0740 or the electronic equivalent will be used to document the remote work agreement.]
- o. Telework. An [] arrangement under which an employee[, under a written telework agreement,] performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved [alternative] worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work. [Unlike remote work, the employee is expected to report to the agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis. If less than two-days a pay period, this may impact locality payments.]
- p. Telework Agreement. A required written agreement, completed and signed by an employee and appropriate officials, outlining the terms and conditions of an alternative workplace arrangement (telework). VA Form 0740 or the electronic equivalent will be used to document the telework agreement.]
- q. Telework Coordinator. A VA employee designated in each organization to handle the responsibilities of maintaining a record of employees under telework agreements and any other duties requested by management to help manage a facility's telework program.

PART II
CHAPTER 4

- r. Virtual Work. Work performed on a full-time basis using a VA-leased space or at a VA facility other than the facility that hired the employee.

6. POLICIES AND PROCEDURES [FOR TELEWORK].

- a. It is [VA] policy [] to encourage the use of [telework as an] alternative workplace arrangement[]. Managers and supervisors should permit eligible employees to participate in telework to the maximum extent possible provided it does not diminish employee performance or Departmental operations. Telework supports VA goals for improving environmental stewardship and providing employees with greater worklife flexibilities, as well as providing [] cost savings and an effective and efficient means to continue performing mission critical functions during local or national incidents.
- b. Managers and supervisors must determine whether a position is suitable for telework and whether the employee is eligible to participate in a telework arrangement. Managers and supervisors also must issue notification letters and/or emails to employees apprising them of their eligibility to participate in telework (see sample letters in appendices A and B of this part). The procedures for the notification may be determined at the local level with appropriate bargaining unit involvement.
- c. Telework is not an employee entitlement. An employee's participation in telework is voluntary, and approval will be based on management's determination that [participation in] telework supports the mission of the organization and [is consistent with individual performance, team, and organizational work requirements]. Management may disapprove or terminate a [telework] arrangement if it is not compatible with or does not contribute to the organization's mission [or results in diminished individual, group, team, or organizational performance.] Telework notification letters should be provided in writing and include the business-based rationale for the decision. This is a matter for local negotiation.
- d. Employees who meet the criteria for telework may participate in telework arrangements in accordance with applicable laws and collective bargaining agreements. Participation in a telework arrangement is subject to supervisory approval. Whenever appropriate, management may consider establishing telework arrangements to meet its needs as well as those of employees. Telework provides managers, supervisors, and employees with alternatives to the [agency] worksite in accomplishing work objectives.
- e. Adequate coverage must be maintained. Teleworkers, therefore, may be required to return to the [agency] worksite on scheduled telework days based on the needs of the office. In such instances, a recall to the office for operational reasons or in support of a mission requirement is not a termination of the telework agreement. Requests by teleworkers to change their scheduled telework days in a particular week or bi-weekly pay period should be accommodated by the supervisor where practicable, and consistent with mission requirements.

- f. [] Telework may be used as a reasonable accommodation for employees with qualifying disabilities under the [Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended. Telework may also be used as an accommodation under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Pregnancy Discrimination Act]. Detailed guidance on [requests for] reasonable accommodation [related to disability] is found in VA Handbook 5975.1. Refer to [VA Directive 5975 for guidance on requests related to religious accommodation or pregnancy.]
- g. [With supervisory approval,] telework arrangements may be established at the employee's residence, satellite centers, and other temporary alternative workplace arrangements such as hoteling (workspaces assigned for use by reservation on an as-needed basis), hot desking (locating workspaces assigned on a first come, first served basis), [and] hotel rooms [] when determined by work unit supervisors to be consistent with the mission of VA.
- h. Prior to initiating, modifying, or terminating a telework arrangement that affects employees in a collective bargaining unit, appropriate labor relations obligations must be fulfilled.
- i. It is recommended that telework agreements be reviewed at least annually, but no more than quarterly (unless there are specific concerns with the agreement) to determine the impact on work operations.
- j. If management determines that a telework arrangement is not meeting the operational needs of the organization, the arrangement will be modified no sooner than two weeks after the employee is notified, or in accordance with the required notice periods specified in applicable collective bargaining agreements. Supervisor modification or termination of the arrangement or an employee's request to terminate an arrangement requires two weeks' notice except where:
 - (1) Otherwise specified in a collective bargaining agreement;
 - (2) Work-related circumstances require otherwise, e.g., an emergency situation;
 - (3) Management determines that the teleworker is not meeting performance criteria;
 - (4) The employee breached information security protocol or;
 - (5) The employee works overtime without prior advanced approval [See Part I, Paragraph 4r]. Employees are not authorized to work overtime unless ordered and approved by the supervisor in advance. Unauthorized overtime will not be credited. Telework agreements may be terminated for employees who work unauthorized overtime. The decision to terminate the agreement should be made on a case-by-case basis based upon the circumstances after discussion with the employee.

CHAPTER 4

- k. Equal employment opportunity principles are fully applicable to the operation of this program.
- l. Employees with mission-critical duties and those who may be required to telework in the case of a Continuity of Operations (COOP) event, office closure to the public due to adverse or inclement weather, or pandemic health crisis must have an approved telework agreement in place.
- m. A new telework agreement should be completed if the employee is assigned to work under a new supervisor or if the terms of the telework agreement change.
- n. Telework is not intended to serve as a substitute for dependent/elder care. [The primary intent of the telework program is to support the mission of the office in an alternative work setting. Telework may not be used as an alternative to or in lieu of dependent care/elder care. Employees may not telework with the intent of or for the sole purpose of meeting dependent care responsibilities while performing official duties. While performing official duties, employees are expected to arrange for dependent care/elder care in the same manner as they would if they were working at an agency worksite].
- o. The opportunity to participate in telework is offered only with the understanding that it is the responsibility of the employee to ensure that a proper work environment is maintained (e.g., dependent/elder care arrangements are made so as not to interfere with the work, personal disruptions such as non-business telephone calls and visitors are kept to a minimum, etc.). [While the presence of dependents in the home is not an absolute bar to teleworking, employees must not engage in dependent care/elder care activities when performing official VA duties. Employees may take leave, with supervisory approval, or adjust their work schedule under a flexible schedule to complete a full workday while attending to dependent care/elder care responsibilities.] A special exception may only be authorized in circumstances such as a pandemic or other emergency. When telework is authorized under such exception, the employee is expected to account for work and non-work hours during the tour of duty and take appropriate leave (paid or unpaid) to account for time away from normal work-related duties. Supervisors and employees should discuss this scenario in advance to determine the limits of the employee's ability and how communication and workflow will be affected.
- p. [An employee may participate in telework while working an alternate work schedule such as a compressed or flexible work schedule.]

7. TELEWORK CRITERIA.

- a. Participation. Employee participation in a telework arrangement is voluntary. Managers should allow eligible employees to telework to the maximum extent practicable without diminished employee or organizational performance.
- (1) VA employees authorized for telework arrangements must occupy a suitable position []. Employees may be denied eligibility to telework if they do not have a history of being “reliable, responsible, and able to work independently.” Both full-time and part-time employees may participate in a telework arrangement. Telework is not recommended for trainee or intern positions or during the first 90 calendar days of any probationary period. However, under emergent or extenuating circumstances there may be authorized exceptions on a case-by-case basis.
 - (2) The employee’s immediate supervisor is responsible for determining the requirements and expectations of a telework arrangement to include the appropriate number of days and which job duties may or may not be performed remotely by the employee. This should be done in collaboration with the employee. Each arrangement to telework is to be considered individually and documented in a written agreement [, on VA Form 0740 or the electronic equivalent (through the appropriate VA personnel system of record). The supervisor should maintain a copy of the agreement and provide a copy] to the employee. The supervisor shall [also] inform the timekeeper so that telework is recorded appropriately in the electronic time and attendance system. [Paper submissions on VA Form 0740 additionally require the supervisor provide information to the HR office so the telework agreement is coded into the VA personnel system of record HR Smart.]
 - (3) All teleworkers and their immediate supervisors must receive training designed to provide the employee and supervisor with a smooth transition to telework. The training module is available via the Talent Management System (TMS) [under course title TMS Training for Employees (VA 1367006) and TMS Training for Managers (VA 1366994).]
- b. Position Suitability.
- (1) Management officials are responsible for determining which positions are [eligible] for telework arrangements consistent with labor relations obligations. Position suitability must be reviewed by management officials based on the functions and job duties of the position rather than the title alone. Tasks that can be performed away from the traditional office are generally more suited for a telework arrangement. Even positions that are generally not suitable for telework may have tasks that may be deemed suitable. This approach to “job reengineering” can assist in providing appropriate avenues toward telework. Guidelines for determining position suitability include but are not limited to:

CHAPTER 4

- (a) Work activities must be portable and can be performed effectively outside the traditional office location;
 - (b) Job tasks are quantifiable or primarily project-oriented;
 - (c) Contact with other employees, the supervisor or manager, and serviced clientele is predictable and normally scheduled;
 - (d) The computer technology needed to perform work off-site is currently available or can be acquired;
 - (e) Employees may be linked electronically to the traditional office location using Government Furnished Equipment (GFE) or a personal computer via the internet, based on specific guidance contained in VA Directive 6500, or if VA network access is not required, the employee may simply take approved work to the alternative worksite;
 - (f) Classified documents may not be taken to, used or stored at an employee's home office or [alternative worksite]. The employee must return to the [agency worksite for classified work] to access and work on such documents or materials; and
 - (g) Privacy Act materials, evidence or sensitive documents (hard copy or electronic) may be accessed, and if required, printed remotely, provided the employee agrees to protect Government/VA records from unauthorized disclosure, loss, compromise or damage, and will comply with the security requirements in the Telework Agreement, all applicable VA and local facility policies, Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, and all applicable Federal laws and regulations, VA Directive and Handbook 6210, and other applicable VA policies. Any hard copy or printed sensitive material shall be kept securely at the alternative site and retained in accordance with the National Archives and Records Administration, facility Records Management guidelines, and VA and facility sensitive material disposition.
- (2) Telework may not be suitable for some positions. However, these positions may be eligible for telework on an ad hoc basis or in an emergency situation. These positions require on a daily basis:
- (a) Extensive [in-person] contact with supervisors, co-workers, clients and Veterans;
 - (b) Special facilities or equipment that can not readily or economically be provided; or
 - (c) Frequent access to classified material and/or sensitive information.

8. PROCESS FOR ESTABLISHING A TELEWORK AGREEMENT.

- a. Management must first identify an employee's position as suitable for telework, determine whether the employee is eligible to participate in telework, and notify the employee of the employee eligibility in writing, regardless of whether the employee has submitted a request to telework.
- b. Eligible employees interested in telework should discuss the matter with their supervisor and, if they would like to telework, submit a request in writing on a [VA Form 0740 (or the electronic equivalent) before completing the training or requesting remote network access.]
- c. The supervisor will consider the request and determine whether telework is an appropriate work arrangement. When the supervisor and employee agree that the alternative workplace arrangement is an acceptable option, additional discussions should be held regarding the employee's work schedule, work requirements and job expectations.
- d. Upon completion of the mandatory telework training course, including the Information Security Awareness Training and Veterans Health Administration (VHA) Privacy Policy Training, as applicable, the employee must complete VA Form 0740, Telework Agreement, [or the electronic equivalent] which lists all terms and conditions for the telework alternative workplace arrangement, and collaborate as needed with the facility's Telework Coordinator.

9. PROCEDURES TO REQUEST A TELEWORK AGREEMENT.

- a. Employees must submit a written request to their immediate supervisor to telework. [Submission of the electronic equivalent of the VA Form 0740 is encouraged for non-bargaining unit employees. Use of an electronic equivalent to the VA Form 0740 for bargaining unit employees is defined in collective bargaining agreements and/or memoranda of understanding.] The request must state the specific work schedule, as well as the proposed workdays, hours, etc. as applicable.
- b. The immediate supervisor must meet or confer directly with the requesting employee within ten business days after receipt of a written request to telework to understand fully the nature of and need for the requested flexibility.
- c. The supervisor must carefully consider the request and any supporting information provided by the employee and provide a written decision to the employee within 20 business days after receipt of the initial request, or within the timeframes set forth in an applicable collective bargaining agreement. Supervisors must consider VA's mission-related requirements and the impact on VA operations when rendering a decision.
- d. If the supervisor is unable to grant the employee's request due to mission-related requirements and the impact on VA operations, the supervisor should work with the employee to determine if there are alternatives available that are beneficial to VA and the employee. If the supervisor denies the employee's request to telework the employee has the right to file a grievance in accordance with the procedures outlined in VA Handbook 5021, Part IV, or applicable collective bargaining agreement.

[10. POLICIES AND PROCEDURES FOR REMOTE WORK.

- a. VA fully supports and promotes remote work arrangements for employees occupying remote work eligible positions. The remote work policy as described in this Handbook is intended to enhance the worklife balance for employees. While employees and organizations benefit from remote work arrangements, such arrangements are subject to the business case and operational needs of the VA organization and budget allocation.
- b. Remote work arrangements should be cost-neutral or low-cost, to the extent practical, after factoring in the net cost savings accrued moving each employee to a remote arrangement.
- c. Managers and supervisors must determine whether a position is suitable for remote work and whether the employee is eligible to participate in a remote work arrangement. Remote work is an arrangement under which an employee is scheduled to perform their position's job duties at an approved alternative worksite (typically the employee's residence) and is not expected to perform work at an agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis. A remote worker's official worksite may be within or outside the commuting area of an agency worksite.
- d. Remote work arrangements may be established when the supervisor hires the employee to work from a remote worksite location or approves the employee's change in duty location. Remote work is not an employee entitlement. The approval will be based on management's determination that remote work supports the mission of the organization and does not diminish either employee performance or agency operations.
- e. Employees who meet the criteria for remote work may participate in remote work arrangements in accordance with applicable laws, regulations, and collective bargaining agreements. Participation in a remote work arrangement is subject to supervisory approval. Prior to initiating, modifying, or terminating a remote work arrangement that affects employees in a collective bargaining unit, appropriate labor relations obligations must be fulfilled.
- f. With supervisory approval, remote work arrangements may be established at the employee's residence or other approved locations when determined by work unit supervisors to be consistent with the mission of VA.
- g. Remote work arrangements may be used for a variety of business reasons, including, but not limited to:

PART II
CHAPTER 4

- (1) Retaining high performing employees who must move for personal reasons and would otherwise leave the VA;
 - (2) Recruiting employees with specialized skills, who may not want or be able to relocate for personal reasons;
 - (3) Achieving VA Administration or Staff Office real estate cost savings, or other business cost reductions (e.g. utility costs or reduction in leased space);
 - (4) Reducing costs associated with filling vacancies when employees must relocate; and
 - (5) Increasing employee work-life balance, resulting in increased morale.
- h. It is recommended that remote work agreements be reviewed at least annually, but no more than quarterly (unless there are specific concerns with the agreement) to determine the impact on work operations.
 - i. A new remote work agreement should be completed if the employee is assigned to work under a new supervisor or if the terms of the remote work agreement change.
 - j. Remote work is not intended to serve as a substitute for dependent/elder care. The primary intent of the remote program is to support the mission of the office in an alternative work setting. Remote work may not be used as an alternative to or in lieu of dependent care/elder care. Employees may not participate in remote work with the intent of or for the sole purpose of meeting dependent care/elder care responsibilities while performing official duties. Refer to Paragraph 6 under Telework Policy and Procedures for dependent care/elder care guidance.
 - k. Equal employment opportunity principles are fully applicable to remote work programs.
 - l. Remote work may be used as a reasonable accommodation for employees with qualifying disabilities under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Detailed guidance on reasonable accommodation may be found in VA Handbook 5975.1.
 - m. An employee may participate in remote work while working an alternate work schedule such as a compressed or flexible work schedule.
 - n. Remote employees must be treated equitably for appraisals of job performance, training, awards, reassignment, promotions, changes in grade, work requirements, approval of overtime work, flexible and compressed work schedules, and other actions within management's discretion.

11. REMOTE WORK CRITERIA.

- a. Participation. Employee participation in a remote work arrangement is voluntary. Managers should allow eligible employees to participate in remote work to the maximum extent practicable without diminished employee or organizational performance.
 - (1) Position Suitability. At a minimum, the following conditions or criteria will be considered when a remote work arrangement is requested or when included in a Job Opportunity Announcement (JOA):
 - (a) (a) As part of the ongoing position management processes, each VA Administration and Staff Office will review positions to determine eligibility for a remote work arrangement. Eligibility must be determined prior to posting a JOA; and
 - (b) (b) VA Administrations and Staff Offices must consider the job duties that only can be performed onsite and the amount of time required to complete such duties in a typical bi-weekly pay period;
 - (c) (c) The amount of time required each week to participate in other aspects of the work unit operations such as training, meetings or collaboration, including collaboration with stakeholders that cannot be conducted virtually; the type and frequency of travel associated with the position.
 - (d) (d) Employees with mission-critical duties and those who may be required to work in the case of a COOP event, office closure to the public due to adverse or inclement weather, or pandemic health crisis must have an approved telework agreement in place.
 - (2) Employee eligibility. Employees are [also] eligible for remote work arrangements pursuant to management's determination that the duties and responsibilities of the position can be successfully performed from an alternative worksite. Employees must be capable of accomplishing work assignments without close on-site supervision or continual in-person interaction with other staff.
- b. All remote workers and their immediate supervisors must receive the telework training designed to provide the employee and supervisor with a smooth transition to remote work. The training module is available via the TMS under course title TMS Training for Employees (VA 1367006) and TMS Training for Managers (VA 1366994).
- c. In considering remote work requests, the following factors should be evaluated:
 - (1) Whether remote work is in the best interest of the agency.

- (2) Potential impact to the organization and/or work unit.
- (3) Whether remote work is cost neutral or low cost.
- (4) Characteristics and competencies of the employee align with being a remote worker. Whether other pay and human resources flexibilities have been considered and why they would not be effective for recruiting or retaining an employee in the position.
- (5) Whether an employee requested relocation to a remote work location is for the employee's own convenience and benefit. Pursuant to Federal Travel regulations (41 C.F.R. Chapter 302), VA is prohibited from paying relocation expenses to a new remote work location.

12. PROCESS FOR ESTABLISHING A REMOTE WORK AGREEMENT.

- a. The VA Form 0740 or the electronic equivalent will be used to document the remote work agreement. Upon completion of the mandatory telework training courses, including the Information Security and Awareness Training and Privacy Act Training, as applicable, the employee must complete VA Form 0740, Telework Agreement (or the electronic equivalent), outlining the terms and conditions of a remote work arrangement. The agreement must be completed and signed by the employee and appropriate official(s), with the supervisor maintaining a copy of the agreement and providing a copy to the employee. The supervisor shall also inform the timekeeper so that remote work is recorded appropriately in the electronic time and attendance system. Paper submissions on VA Form 0740 additionally require the supervisor provide information to the HR office so the remote work agreement is coded into the VA personnel system of record, HR Smart.
- b. The official duty station is the location of the employee's alternative worksite. The alternative worksite determines certain location-based pay entitlements, such as the amount of General Schedule locality pay an employee will receive. The locality pay for those employees who are remote work employees will be the employee's alternative worksite as determined at the time of hire. Servicing HR personnel must process the following required actions:
 - (1) Update OF-8 to reflect the Remote Duty Station (Block 5)
 - (2) Process SF-52, changing "Duty Station" blocks 38 and 39 of the SF-50 and
 - (3) Process SF-52 to document position reclassification action when necessary
 - (4) Update HR database(s) to reflect change in telework status codes, etc.
- c. Remote work employees generally will not have an assigned or dedicated workspace at the VA organization staff office worksite.

PART II
CHAPTER 4

- d. Although remote employees generally are not expected to report to the agency worksite, the supervisor can require the presence of a remote employee at the worksite in certain situations, e.g., training, or an official meeting. Supervisors should provide as much advance notice as possible but at least 24 hours. If applicable, this should be stated in the Supervisor/Employee Specific Terms and Conditions section of the agreement. When a supervisor authorizes a remote employee to travel to an office worksite for official duty, the agency will pay travel costs consistent with applicable travel regulations and policies.

13. PROCEDURES TO REQUEST OR MODIFY A REMOTE WORK AGREEMENT.

- a. Recruitment. HR personnel, in coordination with the hiring manager, must ensure that all VA JOAs indicate whether the position is suitable for remote work and identify:
 - (1) Eligibility for a remote work arrangement; and
 - (2) Whether a remote work arrangement is required for the position. Candidates accepting a position where a remote work arrangement is required must accept the arrangement as a condition of employment.
- b. Employee Requests. VA employees may request to work remotely, change an existing remote work arrangement, or terminate their remote work arrangement by submitting a VA Form 0740 (or the electronic equivalent) to the supervisor. Relocation expenses are not authorized for voluntary change in worksite requests, including for remote work requests due to reasonable accommodations.
 - (1) The employee requesting a change must:
 - (a) Discuss the request with their supervisor. Changing the employee's duty station likely will affect the employee in several ways (e.g., locality pay, Reduction-in-Force (RIF) competitive area, bargaining unit status, unemployment compensation). When discussing such requests with the employee, management must address other available workplace flexibilities, including but not limited to, alternative work schedules, details, leave options (e.g., extended leave without pay (LWOP)), and shared leave programs, if applicable.
 - (b) The employee then may submit a request for a remote work arrangement, change to a remote work arrangement, or termination of a remote work arrangement in writing. The request must include the proposed duty station and effective date. Supervisors may consider, however, whether there is a need to limit the geographic location of the duty station for the remote work arrangement due to travel or other mission requirements.

PART II
CHAPTER 4

- (c) Following approval, the employee will be responsible for notifying their supervisor of any changes in address within 48 business hours of the official change of location and for ensuring locality pay is accurately reflected in official documentation. Failure to notify the supervisor of any changes in address may result in disciplinary action, up to and including removal from Federal Service. Note: The official worksite must be located within the United States, including Alaska or Hawaii, and Puerto Rico unless the employee has an approved DETO request to conduct official VA business from an alternative worksite located in a foreign country.
 - (d) Denial of a remote work request should not prevent an employee from requesting to telework on a regular and recurring and/or ad hoc basis.
 - (2) Supervisory considerations of employee requests to establish, change or terminate a remote work arrangement include:
 - (a) That the proposed creation or change of a remote work arrangement does not negatively affect the VA Administration or Staff Office's budget or ability to execute its mission;
 - (b) Supervisors considering establishing or changing a remote work arrangement must first coordinate with their chain of command prior to providing a final determination to the employee(s) request and adhere to any collective bargaining unit obligations. Under Secretaries, Assistant Secretaries, Other Key Officials, or their designees are authorized to approve and discontinue remote work arrangements. The responsibility may be redelegated to lower management official(s). Facility directors and field facility heads are authorized to approve or discontinue remote work arrangements for employees under their jurisdiction. The authority to approve, modify, or terminate remote work arrangements may be re-delegated to lower management official(s); and
 - (c) Employee requests to terminate a remote work arrangement may be denied due to space limitations within a VA Administration or Staff Office worksite.
 - (3) Remote workers may still be eligible for telework with supervisory approval, if they wish to regularly or on an ad hoc basis work from an additional alternative site (i.e., a co-working arrangement). Travel back to their work unit's primary worksite is covered by travel policy.
- c. Termination Due to Business/Organizational Needs. Remote work agreements may be terminated by management with adequate prior advanced notice to the employee when necessary due to changing business or organizational needs, or other mission/business related reasons. In such circumstances the affected employee will be offered a position at the same grade and pay in the commuting area of the current official worksite or will be offered the opportunity to move to the agency worksite.

- (1) If the employee accepts an offer to move, relocation costs will be paid by VA in accordance with regulation and VA Financial policy.
- (2) If there is no suitable position available in the local commuting area, or the employee declines a suitable position and the offer to move to the agency worksite, management will initiate appropriate action to separate the employee for failure to accept a management-directed reassignment outside the commuting area in accordance with applicable regulations, policies, and collective bargaining agreements. The employee will be entitled to transition assistance in accordance with applicable regulations, policies, and collective bargaining agreements, including the VA Career Transition Assistance Plan (CTAP). In addition to transition services, CTAP provides selection priority for positions announced within the employee's commuting area, for which the employee applies and is well-qualified.

d. Termination due to Performance or Misconduct. Remote work arrangements may be terminated by management at any time when it can be demonstrated that the work arrangement has contributed to performance that falls below the fully successful level, or to misconduct as outlined in VA Handbook 5021, Employee Management Relations. Managers who are considering termination of a remote work arrangement will consult with the servicing human resources office before taking any action. When the decision is made to terminate the remote work arrangement, the employee will be directed to report to the agency worksite or may be offered a position at the same grade and pay within the commuting area of the employee's current official worksite/duty station.

- (1) If the employee accepts an offer to move the agency worksite, any relocation expenses will be paid by the employee in accordance with GSA Federal Travel Regulations (see § 302-1.1 \(b\)).
- (2) If the employee declines to move to the agency worksite, management will initiate appropriate action to separate the employee for failure to accept a management-directed reassignment outside of the commuting area, in accordance with applicable regulations, policies, and collective bargaining agreements.
- (3) Remote work may be temporarily suspended to address performance issues. Management considering suspension of a remote work arrangement will consult with the servicing human resources office before taking any action, including whether the employee will work from the closest VA location or the agency worksite.

- e. Prior to initiating, modifying or terminating a remote work arrangement that affects employees in a collective bargaining unit, appropriate labor relations obligations must be fulfilled.]

[14. OTHER CONSIDERATIONS FOR TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK].

- a. Automated Information System Security. Each Administration and Staff Office with a telework [or remote work] program will ensure that Departmental information security policies, established by the Office of Information and Technology, are strictly enforced and that telework employees are informed that periodic remote computer surveillance may be conducted on GFE to ensure information security policy compliance. Technical requirements for computer connections to the VA network by teleworkers will be published and issued by the Chief Information Officer (CIO). Offices sponsoring telework [or remote work] must also ensure that adequate technological security protections are in place on all electronic devices issued to telework [or remote work] participants. If Federal and VA information security policies, procedures and guidelines are not followed, telework [and in some cases, remote work arrangements,] must be terminated. Prior notice to the employee is not required for enforcement and reporting of security violations. Additional security policy information and clarification can be obtained from the VA Office of Information and Technology, [Information Security Knowledge Service Portal at: <https://dvagov.sharepoint.com/sites/OITOIS/KnowledgeService/Pages/Home.aspx>] (see also VA Directive 6500, Automated Information Systems Security).
- b. Security and Privacy Considerations.
 - (1) Classified documents (hard copy or electronic) may not be taken to, used or stored at an employee's home office or telecenter. The employee must return to the traditional office to access and work on such documents or materials. Privacy Act materials, VA sensitive data and systems may be accessed remotely provided that the employee agrees to protect Government/VA records from unauthorized disclosure or damage. See paragraphs 7.b.(1)(f) and (g) for the differences between classified and sensitive material. The employee must also comply with all policy and legal requirements (in accordance with the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. § 552a and the policies and procedures set forth in VA Directive and Handbook 6500). Prior notice to the employee is not required to terminate telework [and remote work] arrangements due to security violations.
 - (2) If any legal requirements are made to the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, or if there are any updates to VA Directive and Handbook 6500, or other Departmental policies and procedures, the employee, upon proper notice, must agree to comply with the changed requirements. Failure to do so constitutes a basis for potential termination of the telework [or remote work] agreement.

PART II
CHAPTER 4

- c. Emergency Closure and Dismissal Impact on Telework [and Remote Work]. On a day when the official duty station facility is closed for all or part of a day, the following weather and safety rules apply:
- (1) Unscheduled Leave and Unscheduled Telework. In the event of an emergency, Government agencies may be closed to the public with telework [and remote] employees continuing to work. Employees are expected to perform unscheduled telework [or remote work] for the entire workday at the alternative work site, take other leave (paid or unpaid) or other time off, or use a combination of telework and leave or other paid time off. Telework [and remote work] program participants do not receive weather and safety leave when a closure is announced unless an exception in subparagraph (4) below applies.
 - (2) Late Openings. On a day when an employee is scheduled to work at the alternative worksite and the employee's official duty station facility opens late, the employee is required to perform their full alternative worksite schedule if scheduled to work from that alternative location.
 - (3) Late Arrivals and Early Dismissals. On days when a late arrival or early dismissal occurs, the employee is required to perform their full alternative worksite schedule if scheduled to work from that alternative location.
 - (4) Emergency Situations. On a case-by-case basis, a supervisor may excuse a telework [or remote work] employee from duty during an emergency if the emergency adversely affects the telework [or remote work] site (e.g., disruption of electricity, loss of heat, etc.). Under these circumstances, employees excused from duty may be granted weather and safety leave in accordance with Part III, Chapter 2, paragraph 12.u. and Chapter 3 paragraph 9.o. of this handbook.
 - (5) Ad Hoc Arrangements. All employees approved for regular and recurring telework are eligible for ad hoc telework. An employee who does not have an agreement for scheduled telework must have an ad hoc agreement in place before the employee can telework on an ad hoc basis. Exceptions to the telework agreement requirement may be authorized during emergent situations, when one or more employees are evacuated from their worksite and perform work from their home (or at an alternative location mutually agreeable to the supervisor and employee). In these circumstances, the ad hoc telework agreement should be completed as soon as practicable. An employee approved only for ad hoc telework should telework periodically throughout the year to ensure that the employee is prepared for ad hoc telework. While ad hoc telework is generally used for unforeseeable and unavoidable emergency circumstances, management may approve ad hoc telework for any reason for an employee with an approved telework agreement. The type of assignments that employees are expected to perform should be determined prior to approval of ad hoc telework.

- [(6) Remote Work. An employee on a remote work agreement whose home is considered the employee's official duty station (i.e., a 100 percent telework employee) will generally not be granted weather and safety leave unless the employee is unable to safely perform work at their official duty station due to the conditions described in Part III, Chapter 2, paragraph 12(u)(1)(a) (e.g., employee is unable to safely perform remote work due loss of power as a result of a hurricane).]

d. The Alternative Worksite.

- (1) An alternative worksite must be suitable for conducting business. Before a telework [or remote work] agreement is approved, the employee must complete the Telework Self-Certification Safety Checklist, included on VA Form 0740, [or the electronic equivalent] certifying that the location where work will be accomplished meets the safety and security criteria, and submit it to the immediate supervisor.
- (2) The supervisor and employee will identify resources needed to facilitate the work assignment, assuring all property and equipment needs are satisfied in accordance with the telework [or remote work] agreement.

e. Expenses and Equipment.

- (1) Basic computer equipment and software (either GFE or owned by employee [OE]) must be coordinated with the Office of Information and Technology (OIT) to ensure all information and technology (IT) requirements are satisfied. The decision to provide GFE may be based on the availability of equipment and possibly the availability of purchasing funds. Where applicable, OE may be used in conjunction with VA OIT approved gateway access that permits secure access to VA systems. An option for GFE may be to request OIT to provide the employee with a docking station. The employee then is able to use the same computer at the [official duty station/agency worksite] and the [alternative worksite].
- (2) Remote printing is permitted for employees on approved telework [and remote work] agreements when the ability to create and/or print documents is required as part of the employee's assigned job duties. Supervisors seeking authorized remote printing for [an employee with a proposed or existing telework or remote work agreement] must certify the employee's position requires remote printing on the VA Form 0740, Telework Request/Agreement [(Section IX, Technology/Equipment Checklist) or the electronic equivalent] and obtain a second level supervisory [approval,] in accordance with VA OIT guidelines (which may be indicated in block 8a, Comments, of Section IX of [VA Form 0740)]. Printer supplies such as ink and paper will be provided by the employee's program office. A GFE shredder is also required if the employee will print documents that may contain VA sensitive and/or personally identifiable information that are not deemed official Government records. The shredder is to be issued by the employee's VA program office in addition to the printing supplies. The following guidance applies to remote printing:

- (a) The use of personally owned printers is strictly prohibited.
 - (b) Employees approved for remote printing as part of their assigned job duties must comply with VA and local facility policies regarding information security or the appropriate storage and destruction of printed VA sensitive and personally identifiable information in a remote setting. Remotely printed documents containing VA sensitive and/or individually identifiable information that are not deemed official Government records (i.e., working papers) must be shredded when no longer of use. Shredding is to be done in accordance with VA and local facility policy. GFE shredders will be purchased and assigned to authorized full-time remote or telework staff by their program office.
 - (c) Employees who participate in telework on a less than full-time basis must ensure documents requiring destruction are securely transported to their official duty station to be shredded and disposed of in accordance with VA and local facility policy.
- (3) The supervisor must determine the level of telephonic support necessary for the teleworker [and employees on remote work agreements]. Local and toll-free calls can be made on employee equipment. Long distance dialling may be supported by OIT provision of a cell phone, calling card, voice over internet protocol or other modality as determined by OIT.
 - (4) Employees will incur the cost of utilities (such as electricity, monthly service charges for telephone, cable or internet service providers) associated with working at home. In some limited situations, VA (through the office responsible for the teleworker [or employee on a remote work agreement]) may pay for telephone installation when the service is considered essential and the employee agrees that the installed telephone will only be used for work assignments and contact with the VA office.
- f. Travel. Travel entitlements are based on the employee's official duty station as indicated on the employee's Standard Form (SF)-50, Notification of Personnel Action for the purposes of determining travel entitlements. Telework and remote work employees will follow the travel policy as outlined in [VA Financial policy.]
 - g. Liability and Worker's Compensation. Employees on telework or [remote work] arrangements are covered under the Federal Tort Claims Act and the Federal Employees' Compensation Act [if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the agency worksite or the alternative worksite]. As with injuries which occur in the traditional office setting, for injuries that occur during telework arrangements, supervisors may only attest to what they reasonably know.

[15. PAY, HOLIDAYS, TRAVEL, AND TIME AND ATTENDANCE.

- a. The basic rate of pay of a remote employee is determined by the pay rate setting rules applicable to the remote employee's appointment type for their official duty station of record, as recorded on the employee's OPM SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action. For remote employees, the official duty station typically is their residence. Teleworker and remote workers are required to follow Departmental policies and procedures for requesting and using approved leave. Leave should be requested and approved in accordance with standard leave approval procedures, with leave hours accurately recorded in the time and attendance system.
- b. VA organization staff offices generally should not pay relocation expenses related to remote work arrangements such as expenses to relocate to a new official duty station or to return to the VA organization staff office worksite when such arrangements were requested by the employee and is not the result of a directed reassignment. VA policy on the payment of relocation expenses is found in VA Handbook 5007.
- c. Remote work employees traveling on official business are eligible for the same travel benefits as non-remote work employees. Supervisors should, whenever possible and to the greatest extent, leverage alternate communication technologies to minimize travel unless necessary. However, if a position requires travel, travel should not be minimized specifically because the employee is a remote worker. VA policy on travel is found in VA Financial Policy, Volume XIV.

16. DOMESTIC EMPLOYEES TELEWORKING OVERSEAS (DETO).

- a. A DETO arrangement is an overseas work arrangement that allows Federal Executive Branch employees to perform the work requirements and duties of their positions temporarily from an approved foreign overseas location via a DETO agreement. Employees have no authorization to telework from a foreign location without approval from VA and the Department of State (DOS).
- b. Employees interested in teleworking from an overseas location must follow guidance and procedures outlined in VA Financial Policy Volume XIV, Chapter 6 and DOS policy guidelines, as well as complete the VA Form 0740, Telework Agreement form.
- c. DETO agreements are extremely rare and employees should allow adequate time to complete the DETO process, prior to the date upon which they request to begin working overseas. Employees may not telework from a foreign location without an approved DETO agreement. HR Offices should contact the VA Travel Office for additional information on current processing timeframes.]

ELIGIBLE TO TELEWORK

DATE:

TO: Employee

FROM: Deciding Official

SUBJ: Telework Notification Letter – Employee Eligible to Telework

1. The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 (Public Law 111-292) requires the Department of Veterans Affairs to determine the eligibility of all employees to participate in telework and notify all employees of their eligibility to telework. In order for an employee to be approved to telework, the employee's position must be identified suitable for telework and the employee must be determined eligible to telework. After careful review of your duties and responsibilities I have determined that you are eligible to telework.

2. This decision does not grant you permission to telework. Before you may be approved to telework, you must complete employee telework training in the Talent Management System. You must also submit VA Form 0740, Telework Request/Agreement, [or the electronic equivalent] to your supervisor for evaluation.

3. You may begin teleworking only after you have completed the required telework training and have an approved Telework Agreement. Mission needs, availability of equipment and internet access to the VA network will be considered when evaluating your request to telework.

SUBJ: Telework Notification Letter – Employee Not Eligible to Telework

1. The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 (P.L. 111-292) requires the Department of Veterans Affairs to determine the eligibility of all employees to participate in telework and notify all employees of their eligibility to telework. In order for an employee to be approved to telework, the employee's position must be identified suitable for telework and the employee must be determined eligible to telework. After careful review of your duties and responsibilities I have determined that you are not eligible to telework for the following reason(s):

- Your position requires you to be present on-site for the performance of your duties every workday
- Your position requires access every workday to classified and/or sensitive information that cannot be accessed remotely or has not been approved for remote access
- Your position requires the use of special facilities and equipment that VA cannot readily or economically provide at an alternative work location
- Your position requires in-person contact with supervisors, co-workers, Veterans and/or clients every workday
- Your position requires oversight/observation every workday
- You have been officially disciplined for being absent without leave (AWOL) for more than 5 days in a calendar year []
- You have been officially disciplined for violations of Subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal government computer or while performing official Federal government duties (required by law)

ARTICLE 20 - TELEWORK

Section 1 - General

- A. The Department and the Union jointly recognize the mutual benefits of a flexible workplace program to the Department and its employees. Balancing work and family responsibilities, assistance to the elderly or disabled employees, and meeting environmental, financial, and commuting concerns are among its advantages. In recognizing these benefits, both parties also acknowledge the needs of the Department to accomplish its mission. The primary intent of the telework program is to support the mission of the Department in an alternative work setting. Telework must not be used as an alternative to or in lieu of dependent care. Employees who telework will be permitted to take care of personal matters in the same way as employees who do not telecommute. The Department Telework Program will be governed by applicable law, government-wide rules and regulations, VA Directives and Handbooks, and this article.
- B. Any Telework Program established under this article will be a voluntary program which permits employees to work at home or at other approved sites away from the office for all or a part of the workweek.
- C. The parties agree that employees participating in telework are performing the same duties as their counterparts working at VA facilities. In the interest of fairness and equity, employees shall not be disadvantaged on their performance expectations because of their participation in telework. The Department shall use the same measurements of work for employees who are on telework as are used for those employees who perform those same tasks at their Official Duty Station (ODS).

Section 2 - Definitions

- A. Telework
The terms “telework” and “telecommuting” are synonymous and include working at home or in satellite office sites or other approved telework work sites.
- B. Alternate Duty Station (ADS)
A worksite other than the employee’s official duty station, such as employee’s residence (defined as a specific room or area within an employee’s primary residence), a telecommuting center, a facility established by state, local, or county governments, private sector organizations for use by teleworkers, or an established satellite location including other VA facilities. The alternative worksite must be mutually agreeable to the employee and their supervisor.

C. Official Duty Station (ODS)

A telecommuting employee's official duty station continues to be the permanent duty station. Generally, the official worksite for an employee covered by a telework agreement is the location of the regular worksite for the employee's position (that is, the place where the employee would normally work absent a telework agreement), as long as the employee is scheduled to report physically at least twice a pay period on a regular and recurring basis to that regular worksite. Employees should refer to 5 CFR 531.605 for application of special situations.

D. Telework Center

The Department satellite facility that the General Services Administration (GSA) establishes to provide federal employees an opportunity to work at an alternative location that is geographically convenient to the employee's residence. The space at the telework center is owned or leased by one or more federal agencies.

E. Regular and Recurring Telework

Regular and recurring telework means the employee works at an ADS on a regularly scheduled basis (for example, one or more days per week, the second Wednesday of each pay period, Tuesday afternoon, two hours per day, etc.), at a home, a telework center, or other offsite location.

F. Short-Term or Temporary Telework

Short-term or temporary telework is when an employee is prevented from reporting to the regular worksite due to an injury, recuperation from surgery, etc., for short periods of time (usually no more than three to six months). Employees participating in this type of telework may work full-time or may combine part-time work with leave use depending on the circumstances of the individual and the portability/availability of work at the alternative site.

G. Periodic or Intermittent Telework

Periodic or intermittent telework is ad-hoc in nature and can be used when a project or assignment requires intense concentration or weather conditions are unfavorable.

Section 3 - Criteria

If employees meet the criteria for telework, the Department may approve their participation in telework arrangements in accordance with applicable law and this article. Department officials are responsible for determining which positions are appropriate for telework arrangements, consistent with labor relations obligations. The guidelines for approving telework arrangements are based on, but not limited to, the following:

- A. Work activities to be performed at an ADS must be portable (may be performed away from the traditional worksite, either in whole or in part, and can be evaluated by the supervisor);
- B. The position's contact with other employees, the supervisor or manager, and serviced clientele is predictable and normally scheduled and can otherwise be accomplished via telephone or videoconferencing;
- C. The technology needed to perform work offsite must be available;
- D. Employees may be linked electronically to the traditional office location by computer or may simply take work to the ADS, requiring no computer;
- E. Privacy Act materials, evidence, or sensitive documents (hard copy or electronic) may be accessed remotely, provided the employee agrees to protect government/VA records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with the requirements of the Privacy Act and all other applicable federal laws and government-wide regulations and other applicable VA Policies and Directives;
- F. The employee volunteered (or concurred with the supervisor's recommendation) to perform work at the ADS;
- G. An employee has a "fully successful" (or equivalent) performance appraisal. If the employee has worked more than 12 months and does not have an appraisal, they shall be assumed to be "Fully Successful" for purposes of telework;
- H. The employee must have a telephone, workspace suitable to perform work, utilities adequate for installing equipment, and space that is free from interruptions and provides reasonable security and protection for government property;
- I. The employee is willing to sign and abide by the Telework Program Agreement concerning participation in the Telework Program.

Section 4 - Furniture and Equipment

- A. Employees participating in the Telework Program will be provided equipment necessary to perform their duties, consistent with the telework proposal, VA Form 0740 (August 2022) and the Alternative Workplace Telework Agreement.
- B. The Department will allow each employee on telework to use an assigned Department computer at the employee's ADS. If an employee prefers to use a personal computer, or if a portable computer is unavailable, the Department will load and maintain all software to the personal computer that is necessary for accomplishing the job. A phone line and portable computer will be provided.

- C. Any time the Department gives up space or otherwise downsizes the office, any excess equipment or furniture may be made available to employees in this program, subject to the limitations of Paragraph A above. Agreements between the local union and the facility will address how the equipment will be assigned.

Section 5 - Telework Program Agreement

- A. Prior to participating in the Telework Program, employees will be required to complete, on a one-time basis, a Telework Program Agreement that has been negotiated between the Department and the local union. A new Telework Program Agreement must be completed if significant changes occur (e.g., change in ADS address/location, change in supervisor, and/or change in official duty station). Continued participation in telework shall be subject to periodic review by the supervisor for compliance with the requirements of this article.
- B. The Agreement documents a commitment by the employee and the supervisor to abide by the applicable guidelines and must be in place before the employee begins working at an alternative worksite.
- C. Participants may be permitted to work at home or other telework worksites full days or a portion of a day.
- D. At a minimum, Telework Agreements must contain the following:
 - 1. ADS location such as the employee's home address or the address of the telecenter;
 - 2. The location of the ADS must be of mutual agreement to the employee and the Department;
 - 3. A telework schedule which identifies the days the employee will work each week, pay period, or month. For intermittent arrangements, the agreement should prescribe the procedures that will be used for approval of specifically requested days to be worked at the ADS. Agreements for short term/temporary use should identify the time period (from/to date), number of days, and hours per week or pay period during which work will be performed;

4. Procedures for administrative processes such as leave approval from the ADS, time and attendance reporting, weather dismissal time and attendance, etc;
 5. Privacy Act/security provision;
 6. Description of the work to be performed at the alternative worksite that can include specific duties or projects to be completed and any deadlines for delivery that may apply;
 7. Any procedures required for work processes such as a requirement to submit progress reports, submission, and review of completed work, participation in meetings, conference calls, etc.; and,
 8. The duration of the employee's participation.
- E. Teleworkers must complete and sign the Telework Self-Certification Safety Checklist (contained in VA- 0740) certifying that the ADS is safe and that all requirements to do official work at home are met. The employee agrees to permit inspections by representatives of the Department, as required, during normal working hours to insure proper maintenance of any government-owned property and conformance with safety standards.
- The employee will be provided advance notice of any inspection. The local union has the right to be present at the inspection. The date of the safety inspection will be coordinated between the safety inspector and the employee within five days of the day that the inspection has been determined to be needed. The date of this inspection will be provided to the local union.

Section 6 - Hours of Work and Leave

- A. Employees performing work at the alternate worksite will follow established procedures for requesting and obtaining approval of leave, consistent with Article 35 - Time and Leave of this Agreement.
- B. Employees performing work at the alternate worksite are subject to the same maximum workday limits as they would be if they were performing work at their official duty station, consistent with Article 21 - Hours of Work and Overtime of this Agreement.
- C. The number of days each week, pay period, or month an employee will work at an alternative worksite will vary depending on the individual arrangement made between the employee and the supervisor. Employees may work as few as one day per month or as many as five days per week for full time telework.
- D. Employees on duty shall be available to participate in regular staff meetings and other meetings necessary to the accomplishment of work; have direct interaction with the supervisor, coworkers, and customers; and access equipment, files, and reference materials not available at the ADS. Supervisors will consider deviations from this requirement to include such circumstances as accommodating physical disabilities, recovery from illness or injury, field work, etc.

- E. With supervisory approval, employees may choose to change their scheduled work hours, or change to or from an Alternative Work Schedule. For example, an employee may begin their work at an earlier time when working from home since no time is spent commuting to the worksite.

Section 7 - Pay Issues

- A. An employee's pay will not be negatively impacted solely by the employee's decision to telework. Overtime pay, premium pay, special salary rate, and other entitlements continue while the employee telecommutes as long as the employee remains eligible under Federal pay laws/authorities for overtime pay, premium pay, special salary rates, and other entitlements. Employees will be notified by the Department prior to accepting telework of any consequences to their pay entitlements that will result from telework.
- B. The governing rules, regulations, and policies concerning attendance, leave, and overtime are unchanged by participation in telework. Hours of duty must be addressed in telework agreements. Employees will be compensated for overtime or night work performed with approval in advance.
- C. To claim expenses related to the business use of part of the employee's home, the employee must meet specific requirements as found in the appropriate Internal Revenue Service's publications, currently IRS Publications 17 and 587. It is advisable to consult a tax advisor to see if a deduction might be available.

Section 8 - Position Descriptions and Performance Standards

- A. Telecommuting will seldom require changes in position descriptions, but may affect factors such as supervisory controls or work environment. An employee is not relieved of and is expected to meet the performance standards established for their position at the official duty station.
- B. When there are no employees performing similar tasks at the ODS, the performance standards for telecommuting employees should be results-oriented and should describe the quantity and quality of expected work products and the method of evaluation.

Section 9 - Temporary Recall from ADS

- A. Employees who are on duty may be required to report to their ODS for previously scheduled training, conferences, other meetings, or to perform work on a short term basis that cannot otherwise be performed at the ADS or accomplished via telephone or other reasonable alternative methods.
- B. Employees may also be required to report to their ODS for valid operational needs to perform agency work which cannot otherwise be performed on another workday, at the ADS, via telephone, or other reasonable alternative methods. In such cases, employees will be provided reasonable advance notice and be provided a reasonable time to report. Employees should make every effort to report as soon as possible.
- C. When requiring an employee to report on short notice, the employee's needs will be considered along with the reason for the change in work location.

Section 10 - Requests to Telework

The employee will submit a standard request form, Telework Proposal (VA- 0740) for their assignment to be performed at the ADS. The request will describe the duties to be performed and the specific day(s) involved. The request will be submitted to the Department for approval. The Department will document approval or denial of the request as soon as possible. Employees must make the request to work at the ADS at least one workday in advance; however, this time frame may be waived at the discretion of the Department.

If the assignment is initiated by the Department, and the employee concurs, the employee is still responsible for submitting a Telework Program Work Assignment Request (VA-0870a) in addition to signing the Telework Program Agreement described in Section 5 of this article.

Section 11 - Removal from Program

- A. The Department may remove an employee from the Telework Program based on the employee's failure to adhere to the requirements specified in the Telework Program Agreement and/or a decline in overall performance below the fully successful level. Normally, employees will not be removed from participation for single, minor infractions of Telework Program requirements. Supervisors will counsel employees about specific problems before effecting removal. The counseling will be confirmed in writing. When a decision is made to remove an employee from the Telework Program, the employee must be given written notice indicating the reason(s) for removal. The employee may reapply for Telework Program participation 30 calendar days after removal from the program, provided that their performance is at least fully successful.

- B. Any time an employee believes they need to permanently or temporarily return to work in the ODS, the employee will normally provide the Department with 30 calendar days notice of the needed change, except in emergency situations. The Department will make reasonable efforts to accommodate the employee's needs. Employees returning to the ODS in these circumstances must recognize that the equipment and workstations that are made available by the Department may not immediately be the same as the ones they had prior to participating in the Telework Program. The Department is expected to provide the employee a complete work area equal or similar to that of others in their occupation in their assigned work area within a reasonable timeframe.

Section 12 - Problems Affecting Work Performance

Employees will promptly inform supervisors whenever any problems arise which adversely affect their ability to perform work at the ADS. Examples could include situations such as equipment failure, power outages, telecommunications difficulties, etc.

Section 13 - Emergency Closing/Group Dismissal

- A. A telecommuting employee will sometimes, but not always, be affected by an emergency requiring the main office to close. When both the main office and the ADS are affected by a widespread emergency, the Department should grant the telecommuting employee excused absence as appropriate.
- B. When an emergency affects only the ADS for a major portion of the workday, the Department can require the telecommuting employee to report to the main office, approve annual leave or leave without pay, or authorize an excused absence.
- C. The telework site may be unaffected by emergencies that lead to closings and dismissals at the ODS. If work can proceed at an ADS, then the employee may not be excused from duty just because other employees elsewhere have been dismissed or excused from reporting.

Section 14 - Telecommuting Centers

The parties agree to discuss the feasibility of telecommuting centers.

Section 15 - Emergency Situations

In the event of a local emergency situation such as a transit strike or a natural disaster which adversely affects an employee's ability to commute to the workplace, the parties agree to immediately discuss possible temporary telework arrangements for affected employee(s).

Section 16 - Evaluation of Program

The parties agree to meet six months after the implementation of this Agreement to assess any concerns relevant to employees working at their residence such as availability of laptop computers.

Section 17 - Union Notification

The local union will be notified when employees are placed on telework and taken off telework.

Section 18 - Local Telework Negotiations

Upon the effective date of this Agreement, the local parties may begin negotiations over the following issues:

- A. Application and selection procedures for participation in the telework and the alternative work schedule and compressed work schedule. These procedures may include, but are not limited to, issues such as negotiating procedures for breaking ties if the number of applicants exceeds the number of opportunities available;
- B. Methods for resolving conflicting employee requests for specific work at home schedules;
- C. Methods for rewarding increased productivity of telecommuters;
- D. Procedures for disbursing excess equipment or furniture;
- E. Determining the eligibility of other positions, if any, for telework, alternative work schedules, and compressed work schedules that are not listed as currently eligible for telework;
- F. Determining the feasibility of establishing a local telework committee for oversight of telework; and,
- G. Any other issues affecting the bargaining unit not otherwise covered in this Article.

Section 19 - Grandfather Clause

On the effective date of this Agreement, employees currently working at an ADS are not required to reapply for telework.

ARTICLE 18: TELEWORK

Section 1: General

- A. The Department telework program will be governed by applicable law, government-wide rules and regulations, and VA policy. Any telework program established under this Article will be a voluntary program which permits employees to work at home or at other approved sites away from the office for all or a part of the work week. Federal telework programs are established primarily to meet the Department's mission and operational requirements.
- B. While telework is not an entitlement, the Department will consider an employee's request to participate in the Department's telework program consistent with law, government-wide regulations and VA policy. Telework is an arrangement established first and foremost to facilitate the accomplishment of work.
- C. Moreover, while telework should provide greater options to employees seeking to balance their work and family demands, telework may not be used for dependent or family care, nor may it be used to conduct other personal business while the employee is in an official duty status at an approved alternative duty station.
- D. If a duty to bargain is triggered under the Statute regarding the VA's telework program, the Department will provide notice and bargain as appropriate

Section 2: Definitions

- A. Telework – consistent with 5 USC 6501, the term telework or teleworking refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved work site other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work.
- B. Telework arrangement for an employee will be documented on VA Form 0740, including but not limited to, the type of arrangement such as regular and recurring, ad hoc, and partial days, as well as the length of the agreement.

Section 3: Request to Telework

- A. Bargaining unit employees shall receive a written decision concerning their telework request normally within 10 business days but no later than 20 business days after the Department receives a completed telework request / agreement (VA Form 0740) located in Appendix C of VA Handbook 5011, Part II, Chapter.

- B. In accordance with this Agreement, Locals will be notified in writing when employees enter into telework agreements and when such agreements are terminated, normally within 10 business days.
- C. All requests for telework will be submitted in writing using VA Form 0740. If after review, the request is denied, an explanation will be provided in writing to the employee in accordance with Section 3A above.
- D. If an employee's position is otherwise suitable for telework and an employee is a qualified individual with a disability or an employee has an approved claim from the Department of Labor Office of Workers Compensation for a work related injury, the employee may request to telework consistent with this Article. Nothing in this Article shall preclude the Department from offering telework in these situations. If a telework arrangement is approved due to a disability or medical condition it will be documented on VA Form 0740

Sections 4: Criteria

Employees who meet the criteria below may be eligible to participate in the program if the Department determines that the employee's position and particular work assignment(s) are appropriate for telework:

- A. The employee volunteered (or concurred with the supervisor's recommendation) to telework;
- B. The employee must occupy a suitable position;
- C. Department officials are responsible for determining which positions are appropriate for telework arrangements consistent with labor relations obligations;
- D. The employee must have a history of being reliable, responsible and being able to work independently;
- E. The employee is not a trainee or intern;
- F. The employee is not in the first 90 days of any probationary period;
- G. Sufficient work activities must be portable and be performed effectively outside of the traditional office;
- H. Job tasks must be quantifiable or primarily project oriented;
- I. Contact with other employees, the supervisor or manager and services clientele is predictable and normally scheduled;

- J. The technology needed to perform the work off-site is available;
- K. The work does not require taking classified documents out of the traditional office;
- L. The employee agrees to protect government records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and comply with the Privacy Act of 1974;
- M. The employee has successfully completed the mandatory Telework Training Course including the Information Security Awareness Training and VHA Privacy Policy Training;
- N. The employee has not breached information security protocol;
- O. Telework arrangements do not have any negative impact on the work of other members of the employee's workgroup;
- P. The employee has a fully successful or better official rating of record for the most recent rating period;
- Q. The employee has workspace and utilities at home suitable for performing work;
- R. The employee is willing to sign and abide by the Telework Program Agreement concerning participation in the Telework Program;
- S. The employee is willing to sign and abide by the Self-Certification Safety Checklist;
- T. An employee who has been disciplined for being absent without leave for more than five days in any calendar year is not eligible for telework;
- U. An employee who has been disciplined for reviewing, downloading or exchanging pornography on a federal government computer or while performing official federal government duties is not eligible for telework;
- V. The assignment will meet the operational needs of the organization;
- W. Employees participating in the Telework Program will be provided equipment necessary to perform their duties, consistent with VA Form 0740; and,
- X. If the Department is unable to provide a laptop or the employee requests and is subsequently approved to use a personal computer, the Department will provide and maintain all software necessary for performing his or her duties, consistent with applicable VA regulations.

Section 5 – Telework Program Agreement

- A. Prior to participating in the Telework Program, employees will be required to complete VA Form 0740. A new Telework Program Agreement must be completed if significant changes occur (e.g., change in telework site address/location, change in supervisor, and/or change in official duty station). Continued participation in telework shall be subject to periodic review by the supervisor for compliance with the requirements of this Article.
- B. Employees are responsible for maintaining productivity and for fulfilling their obligation to account for a full day's work.
- C. Teleworkers must complete and sign the Telework Self-Certification Safety Checklist (VA Form - 0740) certifying that the telework site is safe and that all requirements to do official work at home are met. The employee agrees to permit inspections by representatives of the Department, as required, during normal working hours to insure proper maintenance of any government-owned property and conformance with safety standards. The employee will be provided advance notice of any inspection. The Local has the right to be present at the inspection. The date of the safety inspection will be coordinated between the safety inspector and the employee within five days of the day that the inspection has been determined to be needed. The date of this inspection will be provided to the Local.

Section 6 – Situational Telework Assignment Request

Situational telework is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked are not part of a previously approved, ongoing and regular telework schedule. The Department may require employees to submit a separate request for each specific assignment to be performed at the telework site. The request will describe the nature of the duties to be performed and the specific days involved. The request will be submitted to the supervisor for approval. The supervisor will document approval or denial of the request as soon as possible. Employees must make the request to work at the telework site at least one workday in advance; however, this time frame may be waived at the discretion of the supervisor. If the assignment is initiated by the supervisor and the employee concurs, the employee is still responsible for submitting and completing VA Form 0740.

Section 7 – Removal From Program

- A. Telework is not an employee entitlement. The Department may terminate a telework arrangement if it is not compatible with or does not contribute to the organization's mission. Telework termination letters will be provided in writing and include the business-based rationale for the decision.

- B. When a decision is made to remove an employee from the telework program, the employee must be given at least a two week advance written notice indicating the reason(s) for removal. Immediate removal may be made in cases of emergencies, breach of information security protocol or the employee works overtime without prior advanced approval.
- C. An employee who is otherwise eligible may reapply for telework program participation 30 calendar days after removal from the program. The Department will determine if the employee is capable of meeting the telework program agreement and if his or her performance is at least fully successful/satisfactory.
- D. Normally, supervisors will counsel employees about known performance issues before terminating a telework arrangement, unless it involves one of the three exceptions in Section 7B. It is a mutual responsibility to discuss any concerns regarding the effectiveness of a telework arrangement.
- E. The Department may suspend or terminate an employee's telework arrangement if the Department finds that:
 - 1. The employee's continued participation in the telework arrangement is inconsistent with the criteria section above;
 - 2. The employee's performance has declined (for example, where the employee fails to meet established performance criteria or fails to progress satisfactorily on assignments);
 - 3. The employee fails to adhere to the provisions of his or her Telework Program Agreement or otherwise fails to meet his or her obligations under the program;
 - 4. Organizational and budgetary situations that dictate removal from telework assignments; or,
 - 5. The employee fails to truthfully report time worked.
- F. The Department will not act in an arbitrary fashion. Before removing an employee from the program the Department will speak with the employee and determine it is acting on reliable information.
- G. Except for instances involving organizational or budgetary reasons, when an employee's telework arrangements is suspended or terminated an employee may file a grievance consistent with Article 40: Grievance Procedure. Additionally, consistent with EO 13522, the Department will predecisionally discuss organizational and budgetary concerns regarding telework to the greatest extent practicable.

Section 8 – Problems Affecting Work Performance

It is the responsibility of employees to inform supervisors as soon as practicable whenever any problems arise which adversely affect their ability to perform work at the telework site. Examples include situations such as equipment failure, power outages or telecommunications difficulties.

Section 9 – Hours of Work and Leave

- A. Employees performing work at a telework site will follow established procedures for requesting and obtaining approval of leave, consistent with Article 17: Time and Leave.
- B. Employees performing work at the telework site are subject to the same maximum workday limits as they would be if they were performing work at the Official Duty Station (ODS), consistent with Article 15: Hours of Work.
- C. Employees are only authorized to work overtime or compensatory time when the Department approves the overtime or compensatory time in advance in accordance with Article 16: Overtime.
- D. Employees are only authorized to work credit hours while on telework when the Department approves the credit hours in advance and consistent with Article 15: Hours of Work.
- E. Unauthorized overtime, credit hours and compensatory time will not be credited. Telework agreements may be terminated for employees who work unauthorized overtime, credit hours or compensatory time. The decision to terminate the agreement should be made on a case-by-case basis based upon the circumstances after discussion with the employee.
- F. An employee on an approved telework arrangement will be able to participate in regular staff meetings and other events that involve his or her work unit to the greatest extent practicable. This may involve participation electronically, telephonically or require the employee to travel to the duty station.
- G. Consistent with Article 15: Hours of Work, an employee may request to work an alternative work schedule while teleworking or to request a change to an existing, approved alternative work schedule while teleworking. Supervisory approval will be done consistent with this Article, as well as Article 15: Hours of Work and Article 16: Overtime.

Section 10 – Program Requirements

- A. The employee will be available to supervisors, coworkers, and the public, as applicable, by telephone, voicemail, email, or other communications media during the scheduled daily tour of duty.
- B. The employee must provide his or her supervisor with a telephone number where he or she can be reached at all times while on duty.
- C. The employee must check his or her voicemail frequently, both at the telework site and the ODS if there is a separate voicemail at the ODS.
- D. Where available, the employee is expected to forward his or her office telephone to the telework site. When work calls have been forwarded, the employee will answer the telephone at his or her telework site in the same professional manner as he or she would at the ODS.

Section 11 – Emergency Closing/Late Openings/Early Dismissals

- A. On a day when an employee is scheduled to work at the telework site and their official duty station facility is closed for all or part of a day, the following rules apply:
 - 1. Full Day Closing - A telecommuting employee will sometimes, but not always, be affected by an emergency requiring his or her official duty station to close. When both the official duty station and the telework site are affected by a widespread emergency, the Department should grant the telecommuting employee excused absence as appropriate.
 - 2. Late Openings - When an emergency affects only the telework site, the Department can require the telecommuting employee to report to his or her official duty station, approve annual leave or leave without pay, or authorize an excused absence.
 - 3. Late Arrivals and Early Dismissals - On days when a late arrival or early dismissal occurs, the employee is required to perform his or her full telework site schedule, if located at telework site.
- B. In the event of a local emergency situation such as a transit strike or a natural disaster which adversely affects an employee's ability to commute to the workplace, the Department and the Local agree to meet as soon as practicable to discuss possible temporary telework arrangements for affected employee(s).

Section 12 – Telecommunication Centers

The Department and the Local agree to continue to discuss the feasibility of telecommuting centers.

Section 13 – Evaluation of Program

The Department, at the appropriate level(s), will periodically evaluate its telework program to determine impact on work operations, to evaluate the effectiveness of the program, and to present any relevant concerns to employees working under the telework program. Information gathered in accordance with 5 USC 6506(b) will be shared with the Union upon request.

Section 14 – Priority

- A. When there are limitations on selections for requests to approve telework arrangements to fewer than the number of employees requesting telework, selections will be made by seniority, consistent with Article 60: Seniority.
- B. The Parties agree that employees official tour of duties will be decided (specific days, hours and locations) consistent with VA Form 0740.

Section 15 – Grandfather Clause

On the effective date of this Agreement, employees currently working on a telework agreement are not required to reapply for telework and are bound by the terms of this Article.

- A. Telework will be administered in accordance with law, government-wide regulations and the VA policy in VA Directive and Handbook 5011.
- B. The above-cited telework policy provides employees with the opportunity to perform their work at locations other than the traditional office settings, and may include home-based telecommuting, community-based tele-centers, and mobile/virtual offices. This does not preclude the Employer from assigning work in accordance with the statute.
- C. Participation in a telework arrangement is not an employee right; however, whenever appropriate, the Employer may consider establishing telework arrangements. Telework benefits both the Employer and employees by providing an alternative work situation which may improve services to the veterans, improve productivity, recruit and retain personnel and improve the quality of life for participants.
- D. Union officials are not precluded from participation in telework. Such participation will be the subject of local negotiations.

Article 18: Alternative Workplace Arrangements (Telework)

Section 1: General

- A. Telework refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which a RN performs the duties and responsibilities of such RN's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the RN would otherwise work. Telework within the Department must be administered in accordance with The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 (Public Law 111-292), which is aimed at increasing telework in the Federal Government, and VA Handbook 5011.
- B. Telework may benefit the Department and RNs by providing an alternative work situation, which may improve services to Veterans, improve productivity, help with recruitment and retention, and improve the quality of life of RNs. The primary intent of the program is to support the mission of the Department in an alternative work setting.
- C. Telework must not be used as an alternative to, or in lieu of, dependent care.
- D. Flexi-place, telecommuting, work-at-home, and telework all refer to paid employment away from the traditional office. The terms are synonymous and may be used interchangeably.
- E. A community based telecenter is an office, typically in a space owned or leased through General Services Administration (GSA), and/or other Federal Government facility, which may be shared by multiple agencies, or a satellite office of a single agency where a RN works one or more days in the workweek.
- F. Home-based/work-at-home telework means allowing RNs to use information technology and communication packages to work one or more days in the workweek at the RN's place of residence.
- G. Mobile/virtual office means a location or environment, which may include customer sites, hotels, cars, or at home, etc., where a RN performs work through the use of portable information technology and communication packages.

- H. Official duty station means the official duty station for a RN's position of record as indicated on the most recent notification of personnel action.

Section 2: Telework Guidelines

- A. Department officials are responsible for determining whether a position is suitable for telework, notifying newly hired RNs of position suitability for telework, and deciding whether a RN is eligible for telework. 38 USC 7422 applies to telework.
- B. Consistent with law and VA policy, certain RNs are not eligible for telework. This includes:
1. A RN who has been officially disciplined for absence without approved leave for more than five days in any calendar year;
 2. A RN who has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties; and
 3. RNs with a performance rating less than successful or equivalent.
- C. RN participation in a telework arrangement is voluntary. RNs who volunteer and those who do not volunteer for telework will be treated equitably.
- D. Prior to teleworking, RNs must complete all required VA forms, including a Telework Request/Agreement form currently found in VA Handbook 5011, Part II, Chapter 4.
- E. Telework agreements must be completed with each RN participant. The agreement must include, but is not limited to;
1. A preamble statement of voluntary participation;
 2. The identity of the signatories, duty station and alternative worksite;
 3. A description of the work schedule and tour of duty;
 4. A description of required equipment/supplies an explanation of the responsible provider;
 5. The parameters of work assignments to be performed as well as performance criteria. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers will be treated the same for purposes of performance criteria; and,

6. The provisions describing requirements for leave, overtime, liability, work area (for work at home only), worksite inspection, alternative worksite costs, injury compensation, cancellation, privacy obligations, standards of conduct, and paragraph on appropriate disciplinary or adverse action.
- F. Telework may be used as a reasonable accommodation for employees with qualifying disabilities under the Americans with Disabilities Act, 42 USC 12101.
 - G. To the extent that there is not a 38 USC 7422 issue involved in modifying or terminating a telework arrangement that affects RNs, that change is a grievable issue.
 - H. The Department should notify the RN of any modification or termination of the telework arrangement. This notice should be given as soon as practicable, but normally at least two weeks in advance. A RN may terminate his/her telework arrangement at any time. However, the RN must provide at least two weeks advance notice to the Department.
 - I. There will be no change in telework arrangements based solely on a change in supervision.
 - J. Department officials are responsible for assisting the RN with completion of the User's Remote Computing Security Agreement. The agreement is available in the "VA Remote Access Guidelines". Department officials will assist the RN in coordinating the request for remote access through the Information Security Officer. The RN is responsible for working with the Department official to complete the required forms.
 - K. Appropriate Department officials may conduct safety inspections, as required, during normal working hours, to ensure proper maintenance of any Government-owned property and conformance with safety standards. The safety inspection will be limited to ingress, egress and the telework area. The RN will be provided advance notice of any safety inspection.
 - L. Full-time, part-time, and temporary RNs may request a telework arrangement. Each arrangement for telework is to be considered individually.
 - M. The Department is encouraged to provide training to facilitate the use of telework.
 - N. If appropriate, the opportunity for RNs to voluntarily use their own personally owned equipment will be explored to decrease the cost of the telework program. To the extent possible, security inspections of personally owned equipment will be strictly limited to sections of the equipment used for telework.

- O. Periodic work reviews between Department officials and the RN are encouraged.
- P. The RN's time and attendance will be recorded as performing official duties at the official duty station or alternative worksite, as applicable. To verify attendance at the alternative worksite, Department officials may periodically contact the RN and/or permit RN self-certification. To help ensure that RNs on telework arrangements work as scheduled, Department officials should focus on the completion of work products, as applicable.
- Q. Based on work requirements, the Department may arrange telework schedules to allow RNs to work on a telework arrangement one day per pay period, one day per week, or as often as five days per week. Department officials may also approve alternative work schedules for RNs on telework arrangements when doing so is consistent with work requirements. Consistent with VA Handbook 5011, Department may change telework schedules, including an alternative work schedule which is part of the RN's telework agreement, normally with a two week notice to the RN.
- R. With regard to emergency situations that may impact official duty stations and/or alternative duty stations, the following rules apply:
 - 1. A telecommuting RN will sometimes, but not always, be affected by an emergency requiring his/her official duty station to close. When both the official duty station and the alternative duty station are affected by a widespread emergency, the Department should grant the telecommuting RN excused absence as appropriate.
 - 2. When an emergency affects only the alternative duty station for a major portion of the workday, the Department can require the telecommuting RN to report to his/her official duty station, approve annual leave or leave without pay, or authorize an excused absence.
 - 3. The telework site may be unaffected by emergencies that lead to closings and dismissals at the official duty station. If work can proceed at the alternative duty station, then the RN may not be excused from duty just because other employees elsewhere have been dismissed or excused from reporting.
- S. When the Department determines exigent circumstances exist (for example, a RN's sudden illness precluding work at the official duty station), the Department may institute an ad hoc telework arrangement without completion of required documentation. Ad hoc arrangements should only be instituted to assist RNs and management in unforeseeable and unavoidable emergency circumstances, and to ensure improvement of services to Veterans, increase productivity, recruit and retain RNs, and improve their quality of life. After effecting an ad hoc arrangement, a telework agreement should be completed at the earliest possible opportunity. Ad hoc telework can also be done on an occasional, episodic or short-term basis. These situations include, but are not limited to; specific projects, reports or short-term assignments. Such situations may occur throughout the year or be a one-time event.

T. Expenses and Equipment

1. The Department may issue and/or pay for equipment, software, equipment maintenance, and repair based on the availability of funds and equipment. The decision to purchase or provide Government issued equipment is discretionary on the part of the Department.
2. When needed, the Department may pay expenses associated with working at home such as: pens, paper, printer cartridges, printer, phone charges (long-distance and other); and the cost of computers, fax machines, computer software, modems, and equipment maintenance and repair.
3. The RN will incur the cost of utilities associated with working at home.

U. When acting within their official capacity, RNs on telework arrangements are covered under the Federal Tort Claims Act and the Federal Employees Compensation Act. RNs are required to submit reports of OCWP injury/illness consistent with facility policy.

WORK ENVIRONMENT IMPLEMENTATION DATA CALL

January 18, 2024

OMB issued its Organizational Health and Performance Memorandum (M-23-15) last spring as guidance for agencies as they reevaluate their work environment posture to increase in-person presence while optimizing organizational health and performance. As the White House Chief of Staff and OMB have continued to emphasize in the Cabinet, PMC, and other forums, it is essential for agency leaders to be paying close attention to implementation progress and ensuring that updated Work Environment policies are having the intended impact.

In line with M-23-15, OMB requests that agencies that are still implementing in-person presence goals respond to this implementation data call outlining all remaining steps that the agency will take to reach intended work environment postures.

Agencies should provide:

- (1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).
- (2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.
- (3) Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

Request. Please send a written update that answers these questions. Agencies may provide additional detail or narrative on top of these answers. Responses are due via email to futureofwork@omb.eop.gov no later than January 26, 2024.

(1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

EPA issued its Work Environment Plan (WEP) on July 13, 2023. The highlights of the plan have been shared widely with the workforce through mass mailer and townhall meetings, and are currently available on the EPA intranet. The EPA WEP gradually increased in-person presence for all supervisory and management officials at the Agency, starting in August 2023. The final increase in the number of required in-office days took place as of December 31, 2023, when supervisors and managers were required to report in-person at least 4 days per pay period. EPA's political appointees are expected to be working in person at least 50 percent of the time.

In October 2023, the Agency also shared an expansive training agenda for supervisors on a myriad of topics including managing in a hybrid work environment, change management, creating an inclusive work environment and maintaining high levels of engagement. The training also included a refresher on the Agency's telework and remote work policies. Nearly three-quarters of the EPA workforce is covered by collective bargaining agreements with telework and remote work articles in effect until late 2025 or later.¹ This limits management's ability to require an increased in-person presence. Despite this limitation, the Agency is actively working to make in-person work more attractive and meaningful for all employees to increase voluntary reporting to the office and will continue to evaluate the effectiveness of our current WEP design as part of ongoing implementation.

Additionally, the Agency has also deployed a WEP Dashboard to track employees' compliance with minimum in-person work requirements per the Agency's WEP, EPA policy and OPM telework guidance. Finally, new Agency policy, implemented in September 2023, requires DC area employees to report to the Office five days per period or more to retain a dedicated workstation or office.² Employees who do not meet this criterion will either share space or use swing space. The Agency anticipates employees' desire to retain their dedicated workspaces will increase in-person reporting.

(2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

The Agency has met all milestones in the WEP implementation timelines and will continue to evaluate the effectiveness of our current WEP design as part of ongoing implementation. The only notable exception is EPA's Region 4 office in Atlanta, which remains in expanded telework status due to outstanding health and safety concerns in the office space. EPA is working with GSA to address these issues and expects Region 4 employees' return to the office in June 2024.

² Similar agreements have been reached with unions in Regions 3, 4, 5, and 7.

The Agency's existing contractual obligations with its unions affected its development of the WEP. The WEP was and is being considered in negotiations over the duration of those contracts. Maintaining a flexible, equitable workplace and a supported workforce capable of effectively delivering the Agency's mission are priorities shared by the Agency and its unions as the parties contemplate future adjustments to telework and remote work policies and union agreements.

To increase in-person presence for the non-bargaining population, the Agency is considering the following options: increase mandatory in-person presence to 50% for managers and supervisors; align reporting requirements for Title 42 employees to the current requirements of managers and supervisors; and/or align reporting requirements for senior non-bargaining unit, non-supervisory/non-managerial employees to those of managers and supervisors. Because each of these approaches would only have a marginal impact on the Agency's overall reporting and could introduce a greater element of inequity to EPA's Work Environment Plan, the Agency's senior leadership is carefully considering these options.

(3) Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

To track compliance with communicated policies and ensure alignment with the Agency's WEP, EPA deployed a WEP Dashboard providing EPA senior leaders a user-friendly tool to track time and attendance at the organizational level, and then more easily view hours worked at the individual employee level by time reporting code. This dynamic tool updates each pay period and helps programs and regions systemically track telework, remote work and in-office presence. The Agency has socialized the tool and has conducted training for all identified dashboard users. The users are actively reviewing data for their respective organizations. They then engage with groups with below-average alignment to the WEP, focusing on teams with low in-person presence, drilling down to individuals to ensure adherence to work schedules. The overall data is shared with the senior management team monthly during a regularly scheduled meeting.

I. PURPOSE

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is committed to being a model employer, which prioritizes the health, safety, and physical and mental wellbeing of its workforce. An effective telework policy is central to this commitment. A successful telework program can yield many benefits, including cost savings, increased productivity and performance, enhanced recruitment and retention, heightened employee morale, improved emergency preparedness and reduced energy use. The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 requires the head of each executive agency to establish a telework policy for eligible employees.

II. SCOPE

This policy addresses regular, situational, and medical telework. It also addresses telework when used to accommodate employees with disabilities under the agency's reasonable accommodation process. This policy covers employees, supervisors, and managers in the competitive, excepted, and Senior Executive Service. This policy also covers Senior Level and Scientific and Professional employees, Public Health Service Officers, Schedule C, Administratively Determined employees and non-EPA employees serving on Intergovernmental Personnel Act assignments to the EPA. This policy does not cover employees of the Office of Inspector General, or agency employees on details or IPAs to Congress, other agencies, departments, or organizations.

Generally, employees covered by this policy are expected to report to their official duty station or worksite at least twice in a biweekly pay period, in accordance with federal requirements. Portions of this policy may allow for full-time telework on a temporary basis (except in the case of telework as a reasonable accommodation when a determination is made full-time telework without time limits is appropriate under the EPA's separate reasonable accommodation process). For work arrangements where the employee is not expected to report to their official duty station or worksite on a regular and recurring basis (i.e., does not meet the two times per biweekly pay period requirement nor a temporary full-time telework arrangement), please refer to the agency's remote work policy.

If provisions of this order conflict with the provisions of a collective bargaining agreement, the provisions of the agreement must be applied.

III. POLICY

The EPA is committed to advancing innovative workplace flexibilities, including telework. Going forward, the agency intends to maximize flexibility around telework where doing so will not interfere with the mission of the agency and will benefit the employee. The eligibility of employees to participate in telework is based on 1) the extent they have sufficient portable work to support the requested telework schedule; and 2) the employee meets the eligibility requirements outlined in this policy. Since telework requires full and effective collaboration between management and employees, both parties have responsibilities in its successful implementation and operation. An employee's participation in telework is voluntary. Teleworkers will receive the same treatment and opportunities as non-teleworkers (e.g., work assignments, awards and recognition, development opportunities, promotions, etc.) and are expected to perform and accomplish all assignments and responsibilities associated with their position, whether in the office or on an approved telework agreement.

IV. DEFINITIONS

- a. Telework: An arrangement where eligible employees perform the duties and responsibilities of their position during regular, paid hours from an approved worksite other than the official worksite (e.g., home or telework center).
- b. Alternative Work Location or Alternative Worksite (AWL): The AWL is an approved work location other than the employee's official worksite. An AWL will generally be an employee's residence or other approved worksite and will generally be within the local commuting area, such as a facility established by state, local or county government or private organization for use by teleworkers. Employee requests to work at an AWL outside of the local commuting area may be approved by the appropriate approving official as noted in section VI.
- c. Local Commuting Area (LCA): The geographic area usually constituting one area for employment purposes. It includes any population center (or two or more neighboring ones) and the surrounding localities where people live and can reasonably be expected to travel back and forth daily to their official worksite.
- d. Portable Work: Work which can be performed either at the employee's official worksite or at another location with equal effectiveness with respect to quality, quantity, timeliness, customer service, and other aspects of accomplishing the employee's responsibilities and EPA's mission. Such work is part of the employee's regular assignments and does not involve a change in duties or the way the assignments are performed without supervisory approval.
- e. Official Worksite: The official location of an employee's position of record as determined under 5 CFR 531.605. Official worksite is the "official duty station" as the term is used in Title 5, United States Code, Section 5305(i).
- f. Position of Record: An employee's official position defined by grade, occupational series, employing agency, law enforcement officer status and any other condition determining coverage under a pay schedule (other than official worksite), as documented on the employee's most recent Notification of Personnel Action (Standard Form 50 or equivalent) and current position description, excluding any position where the employee is temporarily detailed.
- g. Regular Office or Worksite: The office (program, region, lab, and HR Shared Service Center) where the employee reports on a regular and recurring basis, receives direction, returns to if the supervisor recalls the employee, terminates the telework agreement, or the employee chooses to no longer telework.
- h. Telework-Ready Employee: Any employee who has a telework agreement currently in effect authorizing any type of telework.

V. ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

- a. EPA Telework Managing Officer (TMO): The Assistant Administrator for the Office of Mission Support (or designated representative) shall serve as the TMO. The TMO serves as the primary telework point of contact between the agency and the Office of Personnel Management. The TMO is responsible for overall policy development and implementation of the agency's telework policy and programs and serves as an advisor for agency leadership on the full range of telework issues as well as a resource for managers and employees.

- b. Agency Telework Coordinator: The Office of Human Resources in the Office of Mission Support executes the duties of the agency telework coordinator, who is responsible for overseeing the agency's telework program. The coordinator may periodically review telework approvals and disapprovals to ensure consistency of application, direct changes as necessary, and ensure any necessary training is provided as required.
- c. Program/Regional Office Telework Coordinators: These individuals are responsible for ensuring all participants are aware of their responsibilities, have taken appropriate training, and have agreements in place. Upon request, these telework coordinators are required to provide participation data including documented approvals and disapprovals to allow monitoring of the program.
- d. Assistant Administrators, the Chief Financial Officer, the Chief of Staff to the Administrator, the General Counsel, and Regional Administrators or their equivalents or designated representatives: These executives are responsible for selecting program/regional office telework coordinators and may assign and locate telework coordinator duties anywhere in their respective organizations. However, if a manager does not designate a telework program coordinator, they must ensure the telework program coordinator's responsibilities are appropriately delegated to and performed by one person who will serve as a point of contact for the agency's telework coordinator.
- e. EPA Human Resources Shared Service Centers (SSCs): HR SSCs are responsible for ensuring all position descriptions are reviewed for telework eligibility prior to initiating recruitment and reassignment actions and are so noted in job advertisements. The HR SSCs must also document an employee's official worksite via Notification of Personnel Action (Standard Form 50) as required by this policy and 5 CFR 531 subpart F.
- f. Supervisors and Managers: Supervisors and managers are responsible for the overall management of teleworking within their work units, including:
 - (1) Working with their regional human resources officer, HR SSC, and program management officer to identify positions eligible for telework and ensuring such designations are identified on position descriptions and in job announcements.
 - (2) Taking into account work-related needs, approving, or disapproving new or revised requests to telework (up to and including requests for up to 80 percent telework) within a reasonable timeframe (i.e., normally within 15 calendar days) and in cases of disapproval, providing the rationale to the employee, if requested.
 - (3) Reviewing and recertifying employee telework agreements every 12 months (or earlier if a particular organization's annual recertification time period is sooner, so all employees can be recertified at the same time).
 - (4) Overseeing day-to-day telework operations, modifying individual telework agreements to meet mission needs, accomplish workload, or changing circumstances, and maintaining records and information necessary for evaluation of the program.
 - (5) Ensuring teleworkers agree to comply with all existing security policies and procedures, regarding IT security, personally identifiable information, and confidential business information.

- (6) Ensuring proper use of appropriate telework time reporting codes to document hours teleworked; and
- (7) Monitoring performance by ensuring appropriate management controls and reporting procedures are in place before employees begin telework assignments. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers are treated identically for the purposes of monitoring and assessing job performance; however, supervisors and managers may need to use different mechanisms for communicating with teleworking employees.
- (8) Initiating a personnel action to be affected by the servicing HR SSC to change an employee's official worksite as required by this policy and 5 CFR 531 subpart F.

g. Employees: Employees are responsible for the following:

- (1) Completing a telework agreement and waiting for approval from their supervisor prior to teleworking.
- (2) Performing an assessment of the AWL and answering the required questions on the Self-Certification Safety Checklist.
- (3) Adhering to the telework policy, procedures, terms, and conditions of the approved telework agreement.
- (4) Notifying their supervisor if modifications are necessary or potentially necessary to their telework agreement.
- (5) Working with their supervisor to recertify the telework agreement every 12 months or earlier if requested.
- (6) Being available during scheduled work hours by telephone, email, and other applicable agency-approved technology and communication methods (e.g., Teams, etc.) in order to communicate with their supervisor to receive assignments and complete their work in accordance with the supervisor's instructions and to be accessible to co-workers and customers.
- (7) Maintaining communication with the supervisor while teleworking and working with the supervisor to overcome problems or obstacles as they occur so the work of the organization is accomplished in an effective and timely manner.
- (8) Complying with all existing agency security policies and procedures, including those relating to personally identifiable information and confidential business information.
- (9) Being prepared to telework in the event OPM or the agency announces changes to its operating status, including changes to dismissal and closure procedures.
- (10) Planning ahead, including taking any necessary equipment (e.g., laptops) home prior to a forecasted weather event.
- (11) Arranging for dependent care if, dependent care would otherwise interrupt or interfere with the employee's work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWL and/or requesting leave or work schedule adjustments for periods when the employee is not able to work due to dependent care responsibilities; and
- (12) Complying with all applicable policies and regulations including but not limited to policies governing information technology security and use of government equipment/materials.

VI. TYPES OF TELEWORK

Supervisors and managers may authorize the following types of telework based on their work-related needs, the employee's responsibilities and preferences, and considerations of maximizing both productivity and flexibility:

- a. Regular/Routine Telework: Under this type of telework, employees may request approval to perform their duties at an AWL on a regular and recurring basis, on predetermined days each pay period. Regular telework may range from one day per pay period up to and including 80% telework (at least 2 days at the official worksite per pay period.) Regular telework will typically be on the same days each pay period. However, managers may authorize adjustments when requested, as long as the employee meets the 2 days in the office per pay period requirement.

As noted in section IV, AWLs are typically located within the LCA. However, supervisors or managers may approve regular telework for employees outside the LCA if there is a reasonable expectation that the distance from the official worksite will not hinder the employee's ability to report there at least 2 days per period. Supervisors and managers should use good judgment but should remember employees may be recalled to the official worksite with 24 hours or less notice based on mission needs. There are exceptions to approving AWLs outside the LCA. Please see the example directly below and the section on situational telework for guidance.

Example: An employee working at EPA headquarters in Washington, D.C. has a residence in Richmond, Virginia, and asks to perform regular telework at the residence as the AWL. Richmond is outside the Washington, D.C. locality area but the employee regularly reports to the official worksite according to their work schedule with no documented issues. It is reasonable for the supervisor to approve the Richmond residence as the AWL. If an employee requests to regularly telework from an AWL in Juneau, Alaska, but the official worksite is Washington, D.C., this would be an unreasonable request because the distance and ability to recall the employee are impacted by the proposed location of the regular telework AWL.

- b. Situational Telework: This type of telework is appropriate for work or assignments of specific limited duration on an occasional, emergency, or ad hoc basis, as opposed to a regular telework schedule as defined above. Situational telework cannot be used in a routine manner to extend an employee's regular telework schedule. An employee must have an approved situational telework agreement in place and receive approval in advance each time they wish to telework. An employee may be approved for both situational and regular telework.

Under certain conditions, supervisors or managers may approve temporary situational telework arrangements at an AWL outside of the local commuting area even if the employee isn't able to report 2 times a pay period. This determination will be made by the supervisor on a case-by-case basis, provided the employee meets all eligibility requirements contained in this policy or any applicable CBAs.

The temporary exception should generally be used in cases where: (1) the employee is expected to return to work at the official worksite in the near future; or (2), the employee is expected to continue teleworking but will be able to report to the regular worksite at least 2 times per biweekly pay period. Examples of appropriate temporary situations include:

- Recovery from an injury or medical condition.
 - Emergency situations preventing the employee from regularly commuting to the official worksite, such as a severe weather emergency or a pandemic health crisis.
 - An extended period of approved absence from work (e.g., paid leave).
 - When the employee is in temporary duty travel status away from the official worksite.
 - When an employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than a location covered by a telework agreement.
 - As a flexibility to allow employees to care for elderly or ill family members, outside official work hours.
- c. Unscheduled Telework: This type of telework is not scheduled in advance but is performed when the agency announces changes to its operating status, including changes to dismissal and closure procedures pursuant to OPM or local management operating status announcements. Any telework-ready employee must perform unscheduled telework.
- d. Medical Telework: Allows for the continued accomplishment of agency work while an employee has a physician-certified medical condition not affecting the employee's ability to perform their regular work assignment at an AWL. This type of telework may be the equivalent of full-time, but it is a temporary telework arrangement and may not exceed 12 months in duration within any 3-year period. Medical documentation justifying the need for medical telework must be provided to the supervisor. Also, a telework agreement and a safety checklist must be submitted and approved by the supervisor prior to the start of the arrangement.

The initial medical telework arrangement is valid for 90 calendar days (or less depending on the medical documentation) and may be extended in 90-calendar day increments if the medical certification justifies such at each extension (i.e., medical documentation must be submitted every 90 calendar days if warranted). The total maximum allowable time for a medical telework agreement is 12 months within any 3-year period. Employees with medical conditions lasting more than a year should contact the local or national reasonable accommodation coordinator to see if their situation may warrant telework as a reasonable accommodation. Please note, medical telework is not the same as telework as a reasonable accommodation. Medical telework is a temporary arrangement whereas telework as a reasonable accommodation is not subject to time limits if the condition justifying the arrangement persists. Please see the section on reasonable accommodation below.

In limited circumstances for medical telework, supervisors may approve employees to work at an AWL outside the local commuting area. This determination will be made by the supervisor on a case-by-case basis, provided the employee meets all eligibility requirements contained in this policy or any applicable CBAs.

- e. Official Worksite for Pay Purposes: Generally, if the employee does not physically report to the regular office or worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period, their duty station will change to the AWL and locality pay may be impacted, (5 CFR 531.605). An exception to this requirement is not appropriate in all time-limited situations as addressed above. If a supervisor has questions about the designation of the official worksite, they should consult their local telework coordinator or the national telework coordinator in the Office of Human Resources.

- f. Reasonable Accommodation under the Telework Program: Telework can be used to accommodate qualified employees with disabilities under the agency's reasonable accommodation process. Employees seeking to telework as a reasonable accommodation should contact their immediate supervisor or the national or local reasonable accommodation coordinator. Employees teleworking as a reasonable accommodation will follow the general requirements contained in this policy to the extent such requirements are consistent with the reasonable accommodation. Employees must, at a minimum, submit a telework application, training certificate, and safety checklist. Employees approved to telework as a reasonable accommodation are required to have a valid, signed telework agreement.
- g. EPA Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP): Telework is an important part of the agency's COOP. It enables employees to work from AWLs during emergencies such as a natural disaster, a terrorist attack, disruption to facilities or a pandemic health crisis. It is a key tool in continuing the agency's vital role in the federal government in the face of an emergency. In such an emergency, any employee—with or without a telework agreement—may be required to telework. (Note: during any period, the EPA is operating under a COOP, the COOP shall supersede this policy).

VII. PORTABLE WORK: DESIGNATING AND NOTIFYING EMPLOYEES

Although many positions may be suitable for some degree of telework, not all aspects of all jobs can be performed effectively at an AWL and therefore, considered portable. Also, the portability of an employee's work can change over time due to project or mission needs. Each supervisor must identify the positions within their organization suitable for telework and those not suitable, and notify each employee, including new employees, of their eligibility to telework based on the portability of their work. Supervisors must use the notification memorandum (Appendix E) to notify employees of their ineligibility, if applicable. Supervisors are also responsible for working with their HR SSC to identify new positions eligible for telework and ensuring such designations are identified on position descriptions and in job announcements.

- a. Work Suitable for Telework: Portable work performed at another location with equal effectiveness with respect to quality, quantity, timeliness, customer service, and other aspects of accomplishing the EPA's mission. Work suitable for telework depends on job content, rather than job series or title, type of appointment, or work schedule. It is possible that within identical or related occupational series, one position or portion of a position may be determined to be eligible for telework, and another may not, depending on individual job requirements.

Employees may have some duties suitable for telework and others not suitable. For these employees, supervisors will need to determine how many days per pay period an employee is eligible to work at an AWL as part of regular telework.

- b. Duties Not Suitable for Telework: Work that is not portable cannot be performed at another location with equal effectiveness. As with portable work, it is possible that within identical or related occupational series one position or portion of a position may be determined to be eligible for telework, and another may not, depending on individual job requirements. Examples of duties not suitable to be performed away from the regular office or worksite include, but are not limited to, the following:

- (1) Requiring face-to-face contact with the supervisor, colleagues, clients, or the general public in order to perform their job effectively. These duties cannot otherwise be achieved by e-mail, telephone, video calls, collaboration technology, or other electronic means.
- (2) Accessing classified information or a classified installation; [Note: Secure materials are those materials where there exists a written policy, at the government, agency, or organizational level, restricting use/access outside of a specific government installation or area within a government installation, and including sensitive PII].
- (3) Involving the construction, installation, maintenance, or repair of EPA facilities.
- (4) Involving the physical protection of EPA facilities or employees; or
- (5) Involving other physical presence/site-dependent activity (e.g., emissions testing, site inspections, or work that must be performed in a laboratory).

VIII. EMPLOYEE ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS

a. Basic Eligibility Requirements: An EPA employee may be authorized to telework if:

- (1) The employee has sufficient portable work for the amount of telework requested (if the requested amount cannot be authorized, supervisors may approve a lesser amount).
- (2) The telework arrangement does not create any impediment to the effective accomplishment of the employee's and their organization's work.
- (3) The employee agrees to return to the regular office or worksite on a telework day if required to do so by their supervisor.
- (4) The employee continues to comply with the terms of their written and approved telework agreement; and
- (5) Arrangements are in place for dependent care, if dependent care would otherwise interrupt or interfere with the employee's work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWL.

b. Employees may not telework if:

- (1) The employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year: or
- (2) The employee has been officially disciplined for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a federal government computer or while performing official federal government duties.

Additionally, the supervisor or management official may terminate the employee's telework arrangement in order to meet the organization or unit's specific operating needs. The supervisor or management official should consult and receive guidance from the servicing labor and employee relations office before terminating the employee's telework arrangement when there are documented misconduct or performance issues, or the employee fails to comply with the provisions in this policy.

- (1) For terminations resulting from misconduct or performance issues or for the employee's failure to comply with the provisions of this policy, employees may reapply at the supervisor or management official's discretion.
- (2) For terminations resulting from organizational or operating needs, the employee may reapply if or when any such issues are resolved.

IX. PREPARING FOR THE TELEWORK ARRANGEMENT

EPA Eligible Employees: All eligible agency employees who wish to telework must meet the following conditions. Failure to comply with any one of the conditions listed below may result in the denial or termination of a telework arrangement:

- (1) Complete the required employee telework training prior to applying for the telework program.
- (2) Submit the "EPA Telework Application/Agreement" and the "Employee Self-Certification Safety Checklist" to their supervisor for approval.
- (3) Ensure all necessary dependent care arrangements are maintained and do not interfere with the employee's work performance while working at the AWL.
- (4) Have properly working equipment at the AWL to ensure compliance with the EPA's information technology policies and procedures.
- (5) Comply with established pay and administration policies on work schedules.
- (6) Comply with telework time reporting code requirements.
- (7) Comply with established policies for requesting leave.
- (8) Ensure working from the AWL causes no disruption in the efficiency of work, and the employee is available to their customers, co-workers and supervisors or managers. This means, for example, the teleworking employees cannot make their regular teleworking hours unavailable for calls, meetings or virtual meetings in their electronic calendars or put "out of office" messages on e-mail and voice mail systems indicating they are unavailable. All communication must be seamless.
- (9) Use call forwarding technology.
- (10) Maintain organizational requirements regarding communication and accessibility and respond in a timely manner to their team leaders, supervisors or managers, co-workers, agency customers and the public.
- (11) Be capable of joining and be available to join virtual meetings or conference calls while working at the AWL.
- (12) Safeguard agency equipment (if provided) and use it only for official purposes in accordance with established policies.
- (13) Be willing to telework in case of an emergency.
- (14) Be willing and able to leave the AWL and return to the regular office or worksite if requested by their supervisor.
- (15) Agree to report to the regular worksite as needed, as determined by the agency and
- (16) Participate in the annual recertification process as required by this policy and in any other telework program monitoring or evaluation processes required by the agency or other authoritative entities (e.g., OPM, Government Accountability Office, Congress).

Each new telework agreement will be reviewed on an individual basis. Decisions will be made based on eligibility criteria outlined in this policy and in applicable bargaining unit agreements. The process for application and re-certification will also follow those processes outlined in this policy and in applicable bargaining unit agreements.

X. DEPENDENT CARE

Telework may be used as a flexibility to help employees with dependent care responsibilities meet their family obligations and work responsibilities. However, it is not appropriate to use telework if the employee is unable to work due to dependent care responsibilities. Instead, the employee must request leave or work schedule adjustments for periods when the employee is not able to work due to dependent care responsibilities. If dependent care would otherwise interrupt or interfere with the employee's work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWL, they must arrange for dependent care. If appropriate and an option, employees may also consider requesting a maxiflex work schedule to provide additional assistance with meeting their biweekly work requirement. Maxiflex is a separate policy from telework, so employees should consult the agency's work schedules policy or applicable CBAs for more information.

Example 1: An employee has children in the home on a regular or situational telework day due to a school closure. Other than general oversight and occasional brief breaks to tend to family matters, the employee is able to complete work assignments during the daily tour of duty. Leave or work schedule adjustments aren't necessary.

Example 2: An employee has children in the home on a regular or situational telework day due to a school closure. One child needs more than minimal assistance with a school assignment during the employee's tour of duty. The employee will need to take leave or adjust their work schedule for the time they were unable to work.

Example 3: An employee requested a temporary AWL at their parent's residence so they can help their father provide assistance to their mother post-surgery. The employee may telework when not providing care for their mother and must take leave or adjust their work schedule when taking her to doctor appointments or caring for her when the father must run errands or needs a break during the employee's tour of duty.

XI. TELEWORK TRAINING

Training sessions on the basics of telework will ensure a common understanding of its requirements. Participating employees must complete the agency-approved training and obtain a certificate of training before participation. The employee's record of the required training must be attached to the telework agreement. Supervisors or managers must also complete agency-approved telework training and obtain a certificate of training. Refresher training may be required on occasion by the agency.

XII. ESTABLISHING THE TELEWORK AGREEMENT

- a. Regular and Situational Telework: The following actions are to be taken when establishing a regular or situational telework agreement:
 - (1) The employee submits a completed application to their immediate supervisor.
 - (2) The employee and supervisor discuss the proposed telework agreement and the type of work to be completed by the employee at an AWL.
 - (3) If a suitable arrangement is reached, the employee completes the application/agreement, safety checklist and the required training. Once all requirements are completed, the telework agreement is signed and dated by the employee and supervisor.
A separate agreement for each telework episode is not necessary if the employee has signed an agreement to telework on a situational basis.
 - (4) Employees may request more than one AWL. Employees requesting to work at an alternate work location not previously approved must submit a telework agreement and checklist for the new location to the supervisor for approval; and
 - (5) Employees are to obtain information and implement all procedures for accessing the secured operations of the regular office or worksite.

b. Medical Telework: The following actions are to be taken when establishing a medical telework agreement:

(1) The employee must submit a physician-certified written statement:

- a) Providing a description of the diagnosis of the medical condition necessitating the telework arrangement.
- b) Summarizing the prognosis, including the expected return-to-work date, and, as appropriate, discussing medical management—including how the temporary medical condition might interrupt the employee's work schedule.
- c) Listing restrictions necessary for work performed at the AWL, if applicable.
- d) Stating the employee is able to perform the duties of the position at an AWL; and
- e) Describing the benefit to the employee's medical condition from working at an AWL, or the reduction of health risks to other employees, if any, derived from this arrangement.

(2) Medical telework may be authorized for up to 80 hours per pay period for up to 90 calendar days. After 90 calendar days, a medical telework agreement may be extended for up to three additional 90-calendar day periods (i.e., nine months) if the additional medical certification justifies such at each extension (i.e., every 90 calendar days). The total maximum allowable time for a medical telework agreement is 12 months within any three-year period.

(3) Based on the employee's condition, the supervisor may grant the employee sick leave or approve a combination of sick leave and telework to cover the situation.

(4) Medical telework is appropriate for employees with non-work-compensable injuries. Employees with work compensable injuries will be managed under applicable workers' compensation regulations.

XIII. TELEWORK AGREEMENTS

The telework agreement covers the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement. It also constitutes an agreement by the employee to adhere to applicable guidelines and policies. The telework agreement includes items such as the voluntary nature of the arrangement; duration of the telework agreement; hours and days of duty at each work location; leave approval and requests for overtime and compensatory time; performance requirements; and proper use and safeguards of government property and records. When any aspect of the work agreement changes (e.g., position, work assignment, supervisor, alternate work location, etc.), the employee and supervisor will reassess the employee's work to determine telework suitability and continued approval.

Individual telework agreements must be renewed every 12 months. Employees who are designated essential for inclement weather or other emergencies or are emergency response employees for COOP purposes must have signed telework agreements in place to facilitate continuity of operations in the event of emergencies. Employees designated for COOP purposes may be required to telework, irrespective of telework status/agreement.

The supervisor must retain a copy of the signed telework agreement and a copy must be provided to the employee. A copy of the signed telework agreement must also be provided to the program/regional office telework coordinator who is responsible for maintaining telework records in the organization.

XIV. TIME, ATTENDANCE AND OTHER MISCELLANEOUS ISSUES

- a. Recording Telework Hours and Control of Time and Attendance: Proper recording, monitoring and certification of employee work time are critical to the success of the program. Employees are responsible for recording all telework time into the time and attendance system using the appropriate telework time reporting codes.
- b. Telework Time Reporting Codes: The time reporting codes all teleworking employees must use to document and certify their work hours are provided below. There are separate TRCs for regular, situational/episodic, medical, and unscheduled telework as well as for overtime telework and telework as a reasonable accommodation. EPA's approved TRCs are as follows:
 - (1) TMREG: Telework Medical Regular.
 - (2) TOHRW: Telework Overtime Hours.
 - (3) TWRAC: Telework for Reasonable Accommodation.
 - (4) TREGW: Telework Regular Hours.
 - (5) TWCTU: Telework Comp Time Used.
 - (6) TWCTE: Telework Comp Time Earned.
 - (7) TWEHR: Telework Episodic Hours (for situational/episodic); and
 - (8) TWUSH: Telework – Unscheduled.
- c. Hours of Duty and Work Schedules: Employees who telework will work the same schedule they work at the regular office or worksite, including compressed or flexible schedules. Circumstances may warrant work schedules to be changed with the supervisor's approval and in accordance with established procedures. Unstructured arrangements where employees work at the AWL without prior supervisory approval are not permitted. Employees should refer to the agency's work schedules policy or applicable CBA for more information.
- d. Overtime during Telework - Eligibility Requirements: Approval in advance of overtime work is required; overtime work not ordered and approved in advance by the supervisor, in writing, will not be compensated. Detailed information on overtime can be found in the EPA Pay Administration Manual (EPA Order 3155). In rare circumstances, an employee working at their AWL on a regular or situational telework day may be directed by the supervisor to perform work requiring more time than the employee's regularly scheduled number of hours for the day. The supervisor, in making the assignment, may order overtime for the employee. Employees may not perform unauthorized overtime work while teleworking (i.e., overtime not ordered and approved by the supervisor in advance and in writing).
- e. Leave: Procedures for requesting leave are the same for employees participating in telework and employees working at the regular office or worksite. Employees are responsible for obtaining leave approval in advance and reporting leave usage appropriately on their timecards. See the EPA Leave Manual (EPA Order 3165) for details.
- f. Workers' Compensation: Employees who telework are covered by the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Federal Employees Compensation Act and qualify for continuation of pay for workers' compensation for injuries sustained while performing their official duties. For this reason, it is vital that a specific AWL be approved in advance and adhered to by the employee.

The supervisor's signature on the request for compensation attests only to what the supervisor can reasonably know, specifically whether the event occurred at the regular office or worksite or at an AWL during official duty. Typically, supervisors or managers are not present when an employee sustains an injury. Employees, in all situations, bear responsibility for informing their immediate supervisor of an injury at the earliest time possible, seeking appropriate medical attention and filing the appropriate workers' compensation claim form.

Telework arrangements can also result in employees who are currently receiving continuation of pay or worker's compensation returning to work, thus taking them off the workers' compensation rolls. Supervisors may be able to find work such employees are able to perform at home or restructure existing work so some of it may be completed at home.

g. Requirement to Return to the Regular Office or Worksite on a Scheduled Telework Day:

Employees participating in the telework program must be accessible and available for recall to their regular office or worksite for a variety of reasons such as, but not limited to: meetings, briefings, special assignments, training, travel, unscheduled absence of other employees, emergencies or other situations deemed necessary by the supervisor to meet mission, staffing, and workload requirements. Under these circumstances, the following should occur:

- (1) A supervisor may recall an employee to the regular office or worksite by notifying them at least 24 hours in advance. A supervisor may recall an employee to the regular office or worksite with fewer than 24 hours when recall is essential for the agency to meet its mission and the employee is not prevented from commuting to the regular office or worksite.
- (2) If an employee is unable to telework from their AWL due to being required to be at the regular office or worksite on a regularly scheduled telework day, or being on approved leave, the employee is not entitled to another telework day. At their discretion, the supervisor may approve another telework day within the same work week or pay period.

h. Travel: The travel provisions applicable to employees working at the official worksite also apply to employees who telework. If an employee is unable to telework from their AWL due to being on approved travel, the employee is not entitled to another telework day.

i. Monitoring Performance: GAO guidelines require agencies to establish a method providing the supervisor with reasonable assurance employees are working when scheduled. Appropriate management controls and reporting procedures must be in place before employees begin telework assignments. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers should be treated identically for the purposes of monitoring and assessing job performance. Some approved techniques, potentially applicable to telework arrangements, include:

- (1) Supervisory telephone calls or e-mail messages to an employee during times the employee is scheduled to be on duty.
- (2) Visits by the supervisor to the employee's AWL; and
- (3) Use of performance management systems, including regular workload/accomplishments reports for teleworking and non-teleworking employees, to determine reasonableness of work output for time spent, project schedules, key milestones, quality of the work performed, and team reviews.

XV. EMERGENCIES: UNSCHEDULED TELEWORK/DISMISSALS/CLOSURES

- a. Unscheduled Telework/Closures: In the event of an office closure, telework-ready employees already scheduled to telework on the closure day are required to do so. Telework-ready employees not scheduled to telework on the closure day are required, in coordination with their supervisor, to utilize unscheduled telework to the maximum extent possible, subject to available portable work. If there is insufficient portable work as determined by the supervisor, the employee may be granted an appropriate category of administrative leave (e.g., weather and safety) to cover all or a portion of the scheduled workday.

Employees who are required to work during their regular tour of duty on a day when federal offices are closed to the public (or during delayed arrivals or early dismissals) are not entitled to overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time off for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours. Employees reporting to an AWL other than the employee's primary residence during the workweek will follow the closure or dismissal procedures of the AWL.

- b. Late Arrivals/Early Dismissals at the Regular Office or Worksite: When the agency announces early closure of or late arrival to the regular office or worksite, telework-ready employees already scheduled to telework on the early closure or late arrival day are required to telework their regularly scheduled non-overtime hours. Telework-ready employees not scheduled to telework on the early closure or late arrival day will be required, in coordination with their supervisor, to utilize unscheduled telework to the maximum extent possible, subject to available portable work as determined by the supervisor. If there is insufficient portable work as determined by the supervisor, the employee may be granted an appropriate category of administrative leave (e.g., weather and safety) for their regularly scheduled non-overtime hours when the regular office or worksite is closed. Early release for the holidays must be granted to those on telework to the same extent as granted to those employees working at the regular office or worksite.
- c. Unscheduled Telework Announced: In the event the regular office or worksite is open, but there is an announcement of the option for unscheduled telework, telework-ready employees not otherwise scheduled to telework may come into the regular office or worksite or request approval from the supervisor for unscheduled telework or the use of annual, credit, or other leave.
- d. Other Emergencies or Disruptions to the Regular Office or Worksite: In the event of a disruption to normal office operations (e.g., national, or local emergency, emergency event involving inclement weather, or any situation with the potential to disrupt normal office operations), employees approved for regular and situational telework are expected to telework if instructed by the supervisor to do so. In COOP situations, telework may be required.
- e. General Provisions: It is recommended supervisors and employees coordinate in advance if there is an anticipated event with the potential to disrupt normal office operations to ensure employees have portable work and the necessary equipment to perform telework during a regular office or worksite closure to the extent possible.

As with scheduled telework, an employee performing unscheduled telework must have sufficient portable work to perform throughout the workday when teleworking. An employee who does not have enough portable work must report to the regular office or worksite if it is open, contact their supervisor for additional work, request annual leave, credit time, or other leave, or adjust their work schedule (if applicable).

When severe weather or other circumstances prevent work from the AWL (e.g., loss of electricity, employee must evacuate, infrastructure/connectivity and dependent care issues) or there is a lack of portable work as determined by the supervisor, and the regular office or worksite is closed to employees, a telework-ready employee may be granted an appropriate category of administrative leave (e.g., weather and safety) by their supervisor.

XVI. MODIFICATION AND TERMINATION OF THE TELEWORK AGREEMENT

Telework agreements may be modified, adjusted, or terminated at any time by management based upon an employee's failure to adhere to telework requirements or based upon any other consideration affecting employee eligibility. Telework agreements may also be modified, adjusted, or terminated without prejudice at any time when requested by the employee. Before removing an employee from telework for performance or conduct issues, supervisors should consult their servicing labor and employee relations office for guidance.

Management shall provide sufficient notice (typically 7 calendar days), when feasible, before terminating a telework agreement to allow the affected employee to make necessary arrangements. The reason for termination will be documented, signed by the supervisor, manager and/or approving official, and furnished to the affected employee. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect.

When any significant aspect of an employee's work changes (e.g., position, work assigned, AWL), the supervisor will reassess the portability and suitability of employee's work for continued telework approval.

An employee may withdraw an application for telework, or terminate an approved telework agreement, at any time without prejudice, and return to the regular office or worksite. The employee must notify the supervisor in writing, and the supervisor should in turn acknowledge the employee's notice in writing, to prevent misunderstandings about work location.

XVII. REPORTING

As OPM and other federal organizations seek telework reports, the agency's TMO and agency telework coordinator will serve as the primary liaisons between EPA, OPM, and other federal organizations. EPA's telework coordinator will serve as the agency's central coordinating point and will work with telework coordinators across the agency to prepare comprehensive telework information.

XVIII. FACILITIES AND EQUIPMENT

- a. Alternative Work Location Office Space: Requirements will vary depending on the nature of the work and the equipment needed to perform the work. At a minimum, employees should have adequate internet speed and be able to easily access the intranet, agency systems, communicate by telephone, email, and established collaboration tools (currently Microsoft O365 suite) with the supervisor, coworkers, and serviced clients when working from their

AWL. In addition, employees are responsible for verifying and ensuring their work areas comply with health and safety requirements (see the "Employee Self-Certification Safety Checklist"). Home work areas must be clean and free of obstructions, in compliance with all building codes, and free of hazardous materials. An employee's request to telework may be disapproved or rescinded based on safety problems or the presence of hazardous materials. A supervisor or designated safety official may inspect the home office or other AWL for compliance with health and safety requirements when deemed appropriate.

- b. Regular Office or Worksite Space Sharing: The organizational unit where an employee is assigned may implement space-saving initiatives in regard to employees who have approved telework agreements and who are regularly teleworking more than 40 percent per bi-weekly pay period. Such space-saving options may include shared workstations, smaller workstations, or unassigned touchdown/hoteling situations. If management seeks to implement any such space-saving initiatives, they will notify the unions and bargain to the extent required by CBAs, local agreements, applicable law, rule, and regulation.

Percentage of Telework by Work Schedule

Number of Telework Days Per Pay Period	Straight 8 or 10-day Maxiflex Work Schedule	Compressed 5/4-9 (or Maxiflex mirroring) Work Schedule	Compressed 4/10 (or Maxiflex mirroring) Work Schedule
1	10%	11%	12%
2	20%	22%	25%
3	30%	33%	37%
4	40%	44%	50%
5	50%	55%	62%
6	60%	66%	75%
7	70%	77%	87% (Not Permitted)
8	80% (Maximum Permitted)	88% (Not Permitted)	100% (Not Permitted)

Note: This policy is limited to telework not to exceed 80 percent of the employee's work schedule. This means the employee must report to the regular office or worksite at least twice per biweekly pay period based on their approved work schedule as noted in the percentage chart above (unless there is an exception as covered in section VI above). An employee being on approved leave does not impact the percentages noted above.

- c. Government-Furnished Equipment: The agency is under no obligation to provide GFE to its employees solely for the purpose of teleworking, but most employees will receive a government-issued laptop at a minimum. Supervisors may authorize additional GFE for the individual teleworker where legally permissible, as necessary to meet mission needs, and if budget permits.

Employees who have an agency-issued laptop or mobile phone assigned to them should use such equipment while teleworking and shall take reasonable safeguards against theft and damage when they do so. Government issued mobile phones may be monitored to ensure they are being utilized in connection with agency business. All agency-issued equipment and supplies remain the property of the agency and the EPA remains responsible for service and maintenance of the equipment. The EPA is also under no obligation to service or maintain equipment belonging to the employee, even if the employee uses it for agency work.

If an employee furnishes their own equipment/workstation at the AWL, the government will not reimburse the employee for the purchasing costs of the equipment/workstation. In addition, the employee is responsible for the maintenance, repair, and replacement of privately-owned equipment. The agency will not reimburse the employee for such costs, including broadband.

The EPA may not reimburse employees for the utility costs (e.g., heating, air conditioning, lighting, and the operation of government-furnished computers) for AWLs. Utility costs include the monthly service charges for telephone or specific telephone charges. Teleworking employees should use agency meeting and conferencing tools, communication options like EC-500, or government-issued mobile phones to conduct official government business with customers and contacts in other locations. The agency will also not reimburse employees for miscellaneous office supplies. Employees requiring pens, paper, paper clips, notebooks, etc., may use the supplies provided by the agency; however, there should be no expectation of reimbursement for items purchased or for the agency to ship goods to an employee's AWL.

For employees working at an AWL outside of the LCA, the agency is responsible for service and maintenance of GFE. In cases where GFE needs repair and upgrade, the agency will make all reasonable efforts to initiate repairs and upgrades remotely. However, should on-site assistance be required, employees must either return to their regular office or worksite or make other arrangements with their supervisor to ensure repairs and upgrades can be made expeditiously. In consultation with the employee, supervisors or managers will make determinations over questions such as the employee's duty status, appropriate work assignments and potential temporary equipment during the interim period between when repairs and upgrades are required and when they are completed.

Note: Consistent with the agency's Records Management Policy, official agency business should first and foremost be done on official EPA information systems. The Federal Records Act prohibits the creation or sending of a federal record using a non-EPA electronic messaging account unless the individual creating or sending the record either: (1) copies their EPA email account at the time of initial creation or transmission of the record, or (2) forwards a complete copy of the record to their EPA email account within 20 days of the original creation or transmission of the record.

XIX. INFORMATION SECURITY

The EPA Chief Information Officer issues and maintains information security directives for protecting EPA information and information systems to include when users are teleworking and accessing systems remotely. These directives outline the responsibilities of each program office, region or other organization, and users in protecting EPA systems and information. Other pertinent supporting information security directives may be issued by users' program offices, regions, or other organizations.

Users agree their responsibilities, described in the agency's information security directives, apply while on telework status. Teleworkers must minimize security risks to all agency information and systems.

The AWL workplace and workstation and other devices used with agency information must be configured to ensure all agency information in any form or format is properly protected at all times and in accordance with all agency directives.

XX. RECORDS MANAGEMENT

When working at an AWL, agency employees must continue to comply with the agency's records management policy and any other applicable policies related to using, creating, maintaining, and disposing of records. Employees shall also comply with the Federal Records Act, Freedom of Information Act, the terms of any litigation hold, discovery in litigation, and any requests for records by the Office of the Inspector General. Any record removed from the regular office or worksite for telework assignments remains the property of the agency and any information generated from telework assignments is the property of the agency. Employees are responsible for maintaining the integrity of their records and for producing records on demand.

Disposal of Telework Program Records: EPA Records Schedule 0039, Alternate Worksite Records, authorizes the disposal of records related to requests or applications to participate in an alternate worksite program (i.e., telework). This includes agreements between the agency and an employee, records relating to the safety of the worksite, the installation and use of equipment, hardware and software, and the use of secure, classified information or data subject to the Privacy Act.

XXI. POLICY UPDATING PROVISION

In accordance with the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, this provision authorizes the assistant administrator of OMS, who has been re-delegated management authority for the agency's directives system, the ability to independently update the agency telework policy as required by other relevant federal organizations, including, but not limited to, the Office of Management and Budget, OPM, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the National Archives and Records Administration, and the GSA. The AA for OMS may also re-delegate the authority to update the policy to the director of the Office of Human Resources. This authority also may be re-delegated further as appropriate.

XXII. WAIVER

Any request to waive the requirements of this policy must be submitted in writing by the AA/RA (or designee) and approved by the OMS AA (or designee).

Telework Policy

I. PURPOSE

The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 requires the head of each executive agency to establish a telework policy for eligible employees. A successful telework program can yield many benefits, including cost savings, increased productivity and performance, enhanced recruitment and retention, heightened employee morale, improved emergency preparedness and reduced energy use.

II. SCOPE

This policy addresses regular, situational, and medical telework. It also addresses telework when used to accommodate employees with disabilities under the agency's reasonable accommodation process. Generally, employees covered by this policy are expected to report to the agency worksite at least twice in a biweekly pay period. This policy covers U.S. Environmental Protection Agency employees, supervisors, and managers in the competitive, excepted, and Senior Executive Service. This policy also covers Public Health Service Officers, Schedule C, Administratively Determined employees and non-EPA employees serving on Intergovernmental Personnel Act assignments to the EPA. This policy does not cover employees of the Office of Inspector General or agency employees on details or Intergovernmental Personnel Agreements (IPA) to other agencies, departments, or organizations.

Portions of this policy may allow for full-time telework on a temporary basis (except in the case of telework as a reasonable accommodation when a determination is made full-time telework without time limits is appropriate under the EPA's separate reasonable accommodation process). For telework arrangements where the employee is not expected to report to the agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis (i.e., does not meet the two times per biweekly pay period requirement nor a temporary full-time telework arrangement) please refer to the agency's remote work policy.

When this policy and a collective bargaining agreement conflict, the Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA) shall govern unless the parties mutually agree otherwise.

III. POLICY

The EPA supports the use of telework. The eligibility of employees to participate in telework is based on: 1) the extent they have sufficient portable work to support the requested telework schedule; and 2) the employee meeting the eligibility requirements outlined in this policy. Since telework requires collaboration between management and employees, both parties have responsibilities in its successful implementation and operation. An employee's participation in telework is voluntary. Teleworkers will receive the same treatment and opportunities as non-teleworkers (e.g., work assignments, awards and recognition, development opportunities, promotions, etc.) and are expected to perform and accomplish all assignments and tasks associated with their position, whether in the office or on an approved telework agreement.

IV. DEFINITIONS

Telework – An arrangement where eligible employees perform the duties and responsibilities of their position during regular, paid hours from an approved worksite other than the official worksite (e.g., home or telework center).

Alternative Work Location or Alternative Worksite (AWL) – The AWL is an approved work location other than the employee’s official worksite. An AWL will generally be an employee’s residence or other approved worksite and will generally be within the local commuting area, such as a facility established by state, local, or county government or private organization for use by teleworkers. Employee requests to work at an AWL outside of the local commuting area may be approved by the appropriate approving official as noted in section VI.

Local Commuting Area – The geographic area usually constituting one area for employment purposes. It includes any population center (or two or more neighboring ones) and the surrounding localities where people live and can reasonably be expected to travel back and forth daily to their official worksite.

Portable Work – Work normally performed at the employee’s official worksite but can be performed at another location with equal effectiveness with respect to quality, quantity, timeliness, customer service, and other aspects of accomplishing the EPA’s mission. Such work is part of the employee’s regular assignments and does not involve a significant change in duties or the way the assignments are performed without supervisory approval.

Official Worksite – The official location of an employee’s position of record as determined under 5 CFR 531.605. Official worksite is the “official duty station” as the term is used in Title 5, United States Code, Section 5305(i).

Position of Record – An employee’s official position defined by grade, occupational series, employing agency, law enforcement officer status and any other conditions determining coverage under a pay schedule (other than official worksite), as documented on the employee’s most recent Notification of Personnel Action (Standard Form 50 or equivalent) and current position description, excluding any position where the employee is temporarily detailed.

Official Agency Worksite – The office (program, region, lab, HR Shared Service Center) where the employee reports on a regular and recurring basis, receives direction, or returns to if the supervisor recalls the employee or terminates the telework agreement.

Telework-Ready Employee – Any employee who has a telework agreement currently in effect, authorizing any type of telework.

V. ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

EPA Telework Managing Officer (TMO): The Assistant Administrator for the Office of Mission Support (or designated representative) shall serve as the TMO. The TMO serves as the primary telework point of contact between the agency and the Office of Personnel Management. The TMO is responsible for overall policy development and implementation of the agency’s telework policy and programs and serves as an advisor for agency leadership on the full range of telework issues as well as a resource for managers and employees.

Agency Telework Coordinator: The Office of Human Resources in the Office of Mission Support

executes the duties of the agency telework coordinator, who is responsible for overseeing the agency telework program, identifying issues as necessary and ensuring any necessary training is provided as required.

Program/Regional Office Telework Coordinators: Are responsible for ensuring all participants are aware of their responsibilities, have taken appropriate training, and have agreements in place. Upon request, these telework coordinators are required to provide participation data including documented approvals and disapprovals to allow monitoring of the program.

Assistant Administrators, the Chief Financial Officer, the Chief of Staff to the Administrator, the General Counsel, and Regional Administrators or their equivalents or designated representatives:

These executives are responsible for selecting program/regional office telework coordinators and may assign and locate telework coordinator duties anywhere in their respective organizations. However, if a manager does not designate a telework program coordinator, they must ensure the telework program coordinator's responsibilities are appropriately delegated to and performed by one person who will serve as a point of contact for the agency's telework coordinator.

EPA Human Resources Shared Service Centers: HR SSCs are responsible for ensuring all position descriptions are checked for telework eligibility prior to initiating recruitment and reassignment actions and are so noted in job advertisements.

Supervisors and Managers: Supervisors and managers are responsible for the overall management of teleworking within their work units, including:

- Working with their regional human resources officer, HR SSC, and program management officer to identify positions eligible for telework and ensuring such designations are identified on position descriptions and in job announcements;
- Approving or disapproving new or revised requests to telework in accordance with this policy and within a reasonable timeframe (i.e., normally within 5 work days). In cases of disapproval, providing the rationale to the employee in writing;
- Reviewing and recertifying employee telework agreements when revisions are necessary.
- Overseeing day-to-day telework operations, modifying individual telework agreements to meet mission needs, accomplish workload, or changing circumstances, and maintaining records and information necessary for evaluation of the program;
- Ensuring teleworkers agree to comply with all existing security policies and procedures, regarding IT security, personally identifiable information and confidential business information;
- Ensuring proper use of appropriate telework time reporting codes to document hours teleworked; and
- Monitoring performance by ensuring appropriate management controls are in place before employees begin telework assignments. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers are treated identically for the purposes of monitoring and assessing job performance; however, supervisors and managers may need to utilize different mechanisms for communicating with teleworking employees.
- Supervisors should complete the appropriate process for performance or conduct issues prior to considering revoking an employee's telework agreement in accordance with this policy.

Employees: Employees are responsible for the following:

- Completing a telework agreement and waiting for approval from their supervisor prior to

- teleworking;
- Performing an assessment of the AWL and answering the required questions on the Self-Certification Safety Checklist;
 - Adhering to the telework policy, procedures, terms and conditions of the approved telework agreement;
 - Complying with EPA policies for information technology security and use of government equipment/materials;
 - Notifying their supervisor if modifications are necessary or potentially necessary to their telework agreement;
 - Working with their supervisor to recertify the telework agreement when revisions are necessary.
 - Being available during scheduled work hours by telephone, email, and other applicable agency-approved technology and communication methods (e.g., Teams, etc.) in order to communicate with their supervisor, to be accessible to co-workers and customers, and overcome problems or obstacles as they occur.
 - Complying with all existing agency security policies and procedures, including those relating to personally identifiable information and confidential business information;
 - Being prepared to telework in the event OPM or the agency announces changes to its operating status, including changes to dismissal and closure procedures;
 - In coordination with supervisors, planning ahead, including taking any necessary equipment (e.g., laptops) home prior to a forecasted weather event; and
 - Make reasonable efforts to arrange dependent or elder care, if dependent care or elder care would otherwise interrupt or interfere with the employee's work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWL, and/or requesting leave or work schedule adjustments for periods when the employee is not able to work due to dependent or elder care responsibilities.

VI. TYPES OF TELEWORK

Supervisors and managers may authorize the following types of telework based on their work-related needs:

Regular/Routine Telework: Under this type of telework, employees may request approval to perform their duties at an AWL on a regular and recurring basis, on predetermined days each pay period. Regular telework will typically be on the same days each pay period. However, managers may authorize adjustments when requested, as long as the schedule provides for reporting to the office at least 2 days per pay period.

As noted in section IV, AWLs are typically located within the LCA. However, supervisors or managers can approve regular telework for employees outside the LCA if it will not hinder the employee's ability to report to the official worksite at least two (2) days per period. Supervisors and managers should use good judgment but should remember employees may be recalled to the official worksite with at least 48 hours' notice based on mission needs. There are exceptions for approving AWLs outside the LCA. Please see the section on situational telework for guidance.

Situational Telework: This type of telework is limited in duration on a non-routine, occasional, emergency, or ad hoc basis, as opposed to a regular telework schedule as defined above. Situational telework cannot be used in a routine manner to extend an employee's regular telework schedule. An employee must have an approved situational telework agreement in place and notify their supervisor in advance, if feasible, each time they wish to telework. An employee may be approved for both situational and regular telework.

Supervisors or managers may approve temporary situational telework arrangements at an AWL outside of the local commuting area even if the employee isn't able to report 2 times a pay period. This determination will be made by the supervisor on a case-by-case basis, provided the employee meets all eligibility requirements contained in this policy or any applicable CBAs.

The temporary exception should generally be used in cases where: (1) the employee is expected to return to work at the official worksite in the near future; or (2), the employee is expected to continue teleworking but will be able to report to the regular worksite at least 2 times per biweekly pay period. Examples of appropriate temporary situations include:

- Recovery from an injury or medical condition.
- Emergency situations preventing the employee from regularly commuting to the official worksite, such as a severe weather emergency or a pandemic health crisis.
- An extended period of approved absence from work (e.g., paid leave).
- When the employee is in temporary duty travel status away from the official worksite.
- When an employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than a location covered by a telework agreement.
- As a flexibility to facilitate a work/life balance for employees.

Unscheduled Telework: This type of telework is not scheduled in advance but is performed when the agency announces changes to its operating status, including changes to dismissal and closure procedures pursuant to OPM or local management operating status announcements. Any telework-ready employee must perform unscheduled telework to the extent possible or take appropriate leave. In unique situations such as lack of electricity, infrastructure disruptions, or connectivity issues at the AWL, the employee should contact their supervisor as soon as possible to request weather and safety leave.

Medical Telework: Allows for the continued accomplishment of agency work while an employee has a medical condition certified by an appropriate medical provider not affecting the employee's ability to perform their regular work assignment at an AWL. The initial telework arrangement is valid for up to 90 calendar days (depending on the medical documentation) and may be extended in 90-calendar day increments if the medical certification justifies such at each extension (i.e., medical documentation must be submitted every 90 calendar days if warranted). This type of telework may be the equivalent of full-time, but it is a temporary telework arrangement and. Medical documentation justifying the need for medical telework must be provided to the supervisor. Also, a telework agreement and a safety checklist must be submitted and approved by the supervisor prior to the arrangement.

Please note, medical telework is not the same as telework as a reasonable accommodation. Medical telework is a temporary arrangement whereas telework as a reasonable accommodation is not subject to time limits if the condition justifying the arrangement persists. Please see the section on reasonable accommodation below.

In limited circumstances for medical telework, supervisors may approve employees to work at an AWL outside the local commuting area. This determination will be made by the supervisor on a case-by-case basis, provided the employee meets all eligibility requirements contained in this policy or any applicable CBAs.

Official Worksite for Pay Purposes: Generally, if the employee does not physically report to the official worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period, their duty station will change to the AWL and locality pay may be impacted. (5 CFR 531.605). An exception to this requirement is not appropriate in all time-limited situations as addressed above. If a supervisor has questions about the designation of the official worksite, they should consult their local telework coordinator or the national telework coordinator in the Office of Human Resources.

Dependent and Elder Care: Telework may be used as a flexibility to help employees with dependent or elder care responsibilities meet their family obligations and work responsibilities. However, it is not appropriate to use telework if the employee is unable to work due to dependent or elder care responsibilities. If dependent care or elder care would otherwise interrupt or interfere with the employee's work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWL, they must arrange for dependent or elder care. The employee must request leave or work schedule adjustments for periods when the employee is not able to work due to dependent or elder care responsibilities. If appropriate and an option, employees may also consider requesting an Alternative Work Schedule (i.e. flexible work schedule or a compressed work schedule) to provide additional assistance with meeting their biweekly work requirement. Work Schedules is addressed in a separate policy from telework, so employees should consult the agency's work schedules policy or applicable CBAs for more information.

Example 1: An employee has children in the home on a regular or situational telework day due to a school closure. Other than general oversight and occasional brief breaks to tend to family matters, the employee is able to complete work assignments during the daily tour of duty. Leave or work schedule adjustments aren't necessary.

Example 2: An employee has children in the home on a regular or situational telework day due to a school closure. One child needs more than minimal assistance with a school assignment during the employee's tour of duty. The employee will need to take leave or adjust their work schedule for the time they were unable to work.

Example 3: An employee requested a temporary AWL at their parent's residence so they can help their father provide assistance to their mother post-surgery. The employee may telework when not providing care for their mother and must take leave or adjust their work schedule when taking her to doctor appointments or caring for her when the father must run errands or needs a break during the employee's tour of duty.

Reasonable Accommodation under the Telework Program: Telework is an available way to accommodate qualified employees with disabilities under the agency's reasonable accommodation process. Employees seeking to telework as a reasonable accommodation should contact their immediate supervisor or the national or local reasonable accommodation coordinator. Employees teleworking as a reasonable accommodation will follow the general requirements contained in this policy to the extent such requirements are consistent with the reasonable accommodation. Employees must, at a minimum, submit a telework application, training certificate, and safety checklist. Employees approved to telework as a reasonable accommodation are required to have a valid, signed telework agreement.

EPA Continuity of Operations Plan: Telework is an important part of the agency's COOP. It enables employees to work from AWLs during emergencies such as a natural disaster, a terrorist attack, disruption to facilities or a pandemic health crisis. It is a key tool in continuing the agency's vital role in the federal government in the face of an emergency. In such an emergency, any employee—with or without a telework agreement—may be required to telework. (Note: during any period the EPA is operating under a COOP, the COOP shall supersede this policy.)

VII. PORTABLE WORK: DESIGNATING AND NOTIFYING EMPLOYEES

Although most positions may be suitable for telework, not all aspects of all jobs can be performed effectively at an AWL and therefore, be considered portable. Also, the portability of an employee's work can change over time due to project or mission needs. Each supervisor must identify the positions within their organization eligible for telework based on this policy and those not eligible, and notify each employee, including newemployees, of their eligibility to telework based on the portability of their work. Supervisors must use the notification memorandum (Appendix E) to notify employees of their ineligibility, if applicable. No notification is required if the employee is eligible to participate in telework. Supervisors are also responsible for working with their HR SSC to identify new positions or portions of positions eligible for telework and ensuring such designations are identified on position descriptions and in job announcements.

Work Suitable for Telework: Portable work performed at another location with equal effectiveness with respect to quality, quantity, timeliness, customer service, and other aspects of accomplishing the EPA's mission. Work suitable for telework depends on job content, rather than job series or title, type of appointment, or work schedule.

Employees may have some duties suitable for telework and others not suitable. For these employees, supervisors will need to determine how many days per pay period an employee is eligible to work at an AWL as part of regular telework.

Duties Not Suitable for Telework: Work that isn't portable can't be performed at another location with equal effectiveness. Examples of duties not suitable to be performed away from the agency worksite include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Requiring frequent in-person contact with the supervisor, colleagues, clients, or the general public in order to perform their job effectively. These duties cannot otherwise be achieved by e-mail, telephone, video calls, collaboration technology, or other electronic means;
- Accessing classified information or a classified installation [including those materials subject to a written policy, at the government, agency or organizational level, restricting use/access outside of a specific government installation or area within a government installation];
- Involving the construction, installation, maintenance, or repair of EPA facilities;
- Involving the physical protection of EPA facilities or employees; or
- Involving other physical presence/site-dependent activity (e.g., emissions testing, laboratory trials).

VIII. EMPLOYEE ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS

Basic Eligibility Requirements: An EPA employee may be authorized to telework if:

- The employee has sufficient portable work for the amount of telework requested;
- The telework arrangement does not create any impediment to the effective accomplishment of the employee's and their organization's work;
- The employee agrees to return to the agency worksite on a telework day if required to do so by their supervisor with at least 48 hours' notice;
- The employee continues to comply with the terms of their written and approved telework agreement; and
- Arrangements are in place for dependent/elder care, if dependent care or elder care would otherwise interrupt or interfere with the employee's work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWL.

Employees may not telework work if:

- The employee has been officially disciplined (i.e. a disciplinary action that results in the placement of a document in an employee's official personnel file) for being absent without permission for more than five days in any calendar year;
- The employee has any documented performance or conduct deficiencies related to telework within the preceding 12 months, such as letters of reprimand, or leave restrictions;
- The employee has been officially disciplined for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a federal government computer or while performing official federal government duties; or
- The employee has been officially disciplined for misuse of a government computer in the preceding 12 months.

IX. TELEWORK TRAINING

Standardized training sessions for supervisors and employees will be jointly developed by the unions and management on the basics of telework to ensure a common understanding of its requirements. Participating employees must complete the agency-approved training and obtain a certificate of training before participation. The employee's record of the required training must be attached to the telework agreement. Supervisors or managers must also complete agency-approved telework training and obtain a certificate of training.

X. ESTABLISHING THE TELEWORK AGREEMENT

Regular and Situational Telework: The following actions are to be taken when establishing a regular or situational telework agreement:

- The employee submits a completed application to their immediate supervisor;
- The employee and supervisor discuss the proposed telework agreement and the type of work to be completed by the employee at an AWL;
- If a suitable arrangement is reached, the employee completes the application/agreement, safety checklist and the required training. Once all requirements are completed, the telework agreement is signed and dated by the employee and supervisor;
 - A separate agreement for each telework episode is not necessary if the employee has signed an agreement to telework;
- Employees may request more than one AWL. Employees requesting to work at an alternate work location not previously approved must submit a telework agreement and checklist for the new location to the supervisor for approval.
- Employees are to obtain information and implement all procedures for accessing the secured operations of the agency worksite; and
- If the AWL is a telework center, arrangements must be made by the employee's organization to cover costs of using the center and to reserve a workstation for the employee.

Medical Telework: Medical telework may be authorized for up to 80 hours per pay period for up to 90 calendar days. After 90 calendar days, a medical telework agreement may be extended for additional 90-calendar day periods if the additional medical certification justifies such at each extension (i.e., every 90 calendar days).

The following actions are to be taken when establishing a medical telework agreement:

- The employee must submit a written statement from a licensed physician or other licensed healthcare practitioner:
 - Providing a description of the medical condition necessitating the telework arrangement;
 - Summarizing the prognosis, including the expected return-to-work date, and, as appropriate, discussing medical management—including how the temporary medical condition might interrupt the employee's work schedule;
 - Listing restrictions necessary for work performed at the AWL, if applicable;
 - Stating the employee is able to perform the duties of the position at an AWL; and
 - Describing the benefit to the employee's medical condition from working at an AWL, or the reduction of health risks to other employees, if any, derived from this arrangement.
 - Generally, the information provided will be sufficient for the supervisor to make a decision on the request for medical telework; however, management reserves the right to seek additional information if needed per 5 CFR § 339.102–104.
- Based on the employee's condition, the supervisor may grant the employee sick leave or approve a combination of sick leave and telework to cover the situation.
- Medical telework is appropriate for employees with non-work-compensable injuries. Employees with work compensable injuries will be managed under applicable workers' compensation regulations.

XI. TELEWORK AGREEMENTS

The telework agreement covers the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement. It also constitutes an agreement by the employee to adhere to applicable guidelines and policies. The telework agreement includes items such as the voluntary nature of the arrangement; duration of the telework agreement; hours and days of duty at each work location; leave approval and requests for overtime and compensatory time; performance requirements; and proper use and safeguards of government property and records. When any significant aspect of the work agreement changes (e.g., position, work assignment, alternate work location, etc.), the employee and supervisor will reassess the employee's work in accordance with this policy to determine telework suitability and continued approval.

Employees may have a telework agreement that allows them to telework from an AWL part of their day and work in an official agency worksite part of their day (split-day) as long as they comply with relevant authorities on work schedules and leave.

Employees designated for COOP purposes may be required to telework, irrespective of telework status/agreement.

The supervisor must retain a copy of the signed telework agreement and a copy must be provided to the employee. A copy of the signed telework agreement must also be provided to the appropriate telework coordinator who is responsible for maintaining telework records in the organization.

XII. TIME, ATTENDANCE AND OTHER MISCELLANEOUS ISSUES

Recording Telework Hours and Control of Time and Attendance: Proper recording, monitoring and certification of employee work time are critical to the success of the program. Employees are responsible for recording all telework time into the time and attendance system using the appropriate telework time reporting codes.

Telework Time Reporting Codes: The time reporting codes all teleworking employees must use to document and certify their work hours are provided below. There are separate TRCs for regular, situational/episodic, medical and unscheduled telework as well as for overtime telework and telework as a reasonable accommodation. EPA's approved TRCs are as follows:

- a. TMREG: Telework Medical Regular;
- b. TOHRW: Telework Overtime Hours;
- c. TWRAC: Telework for Reasonable Accommodation;
- d. TREGW: Telework Regular Hours;
- e. TWCTU: Telework Comp Time Used;
- f. TWCTE: Telework Comp Time Earned;
- g. TWEHR: Telework Episodic Hours (for situational/episodic); and
- h. TWUSH: Telework – Unscheduled.

Hours of Duty and Work Schedules: Employees who telework will maintain a single type of schedule (e.g., compressed, flexible work schedule) whether at the Official Agency Worksite or the AWL. Unstructured arrangements where employees work at the AWL without prior supervisory approval are not permitted. Employees should refer to the agency's work schedules policy or applicable CBA for more information.

Overtime during Telework - Eligibility Requirements: Just as at the Official Agency Worksite, overtime work conducted at an AWL must be approved in advance; overtime work not ordered and approved in advance by the supervisor, in writing, will not be compensated. Detailed information on overtime can be found in the EPA Pay Administration Manual (EPA Order 3155) and applicable CBAs.

Workers' Compensation: Employees who telework are covered by the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Federal Employees Compensation Act and qualify for continuation of pay for workers' compensation for injuries sustained while performing their official duties. For this reason, it is vital a specific AWL be approved in advance and adhered to by the employee.

The supervisor's signature on the request for compensation attests only to what the supervisor can reasonably know, specifically whether the event occurred at the agency worksite or at an AWL during official duty. Typically, supervisors or managers are not present when an employee sustains an injury. Employees, in all situations, bear responsibility for informing their immediate supervisor of an injury at the earliest time possible, seeking appropriate medical attention and filing the appropriate workers' compensation claim form.

Telework arrangements can also result in employees who are currently receiving continuation of pay or worker's compensation returning to work, thus taking them off the workers' compensation rolls. Supervisors may be able to find work such employees are able to perform at home or restructure existing work so some of it may be completed at home.

Requirement to Return to the Agency Worksite on a Scheduled Telework Day: Teleworking employees working at an AWL may be recalled to the Official Agency Worksite as a last resort to meet time-critical mission, staffing, and workload requirements that cannot be performed at the AWL and cannot be re-scheduled. Under these rare circumstances, the supervisor shall notify the employee as early as possible, but not less than 48 hours in advance, if they are subject to a recall to the Official Agency Worksite in an effort to provide the employee sufficient time to make necessary arrangements.

A supervisor may, on rare occasions, recall an employee to their Official Agency Worksite with fewer than 48 hours notice when the purpose of the recall is unforeseeable and essential for the agency to meet its mission.

If an employee is required to be at the Official Agency Worksite on a regularly scheduled telework day, the employee may request, and the supervisor may approve, a situational telework day in the pay period.

Monitoring Performance: GAO guidelines require agencies to establish a method providing the supervisor with reasonable assurance employees are working when scheduled. Appropriate management controls and reporting procedures must be in place before employees begin teleworking. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers shall be treated identically for the purposes of monitoring and assessing job performance by the following methods:

- i. Supervisory telephone calls, video calls, or e-mail messages to an employee during times the employee is scheduled to be on duty; and
- ii. Use of performance management systems, including regular workload/accomplishments reports for teleworking and non-teleworking employees, to determine reasonableness of work output for time spent, project schedules, key milestones, quality of the work performed, and team reviews.

Routine performance monitoring will not include use of video or audio recording of employee activities at their work stations, keystroke counting, or monitoring of “availability” status on Teams.

XIII. EMERGENCIES: UNSCHEDULED TELEWORK/DISMISSALS/CLOSURES

Unscheduled Telework/Closures: In the event of an unexpected office closure, telework-ready employees already scheduled to telework on the closure day are required to do so. Telework-ready employees not scheduled to telework on the closure day but scheduled to work at the official duty location are required, in coordination with their supervisor, to utilize unscheduled telework to the maximum extent possible. If necessary, (e.g., there is insufficient portable work) the employee’s supervisor may grant an appropriate category of administrative leave (e.g., weather and safety) to cover all or a portion of the scheduled workday.

Employees who are required to work during their regular tour of duty on a day when federal offices are closed to the public (or during delayed arrivals or early dismissals) are not entitled to overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time off for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours. Employees reporting to an AWL other than the employee’s primary residence during the workweek will follow the closure or dismissal procedures of the AWL.

Late Arrivals/Early Dismissals at the Agency Worksite: When the agency announces early closure of or late arrival to the agency worksite, telework-ready employees already scheduled to telework on the early closure or late arrival day are required to telework their regularly scheduled non-overtime hours to the maximum extent possible. Telework-ready employees not scheduled to telework on the early closure or late arrival day will be required to utilize unscheduled telework to the maximum extent possible. If necessary (e.g., there is insufficient portable work), the employee’s supervisor may grant an appropriate category of administrative leave (e.g., weather and safety) for their regularly scheduled non-overtime hours when the agency worksite is closed. Early release for the holidays must be granted to those on telework to the same extent as granted to those employees working at the agency worksite.

Unscheduled Telework Announced: In the event the regular office/worksite is open, but there is an announcement of the option for unscheduled telework, telework-ready employees not otherwise scheduled to telework may telework, come into the regular office/worksite or use annual leave, credit hours, or other appropriate leave.

Other Emergencies or Disruptions to the Agency Worksite: In the event of a disruption to normal office operations (e.g., national or local emergency, emergency event involving inclement weather, or any situation with the potential to disrupt normal office operations), employees approved for regular and situational telework are expected to telework to the extent possible if instructed by the supervisor to do so. InCOOP situations, telework may be required.

General Provisions: It is recommended supervisors and employees coordinate in advance if there is an anticipated event with the potential to disrupt normal office operations to ensure employees have portable work and the necessary equipment to telework during a agency worksite closure to the extent possible.

As with scheduled telework, an employee performing unscheduled telework must have portable work to perform throughout the workday when teleworking. An employee who does not have enough portable work may report to the agency worksite if it is open; may contact their supervisor for additional work; may request annual leave, credit hours, or other appropriate leave; or may adjust their work schedule (if applicable).

When severe weather or other circumstances prevent work at the AWL (e.g., loss of electricity, employee must evacuate, infrastructure/connectivity and child/elder care issues) or there is a lack of portable work as determined by the supervisor, and the agency worksite is closed to employees, a telework-ready employee may be granted an appropriate category of administrative leave (e.g., weather and safety) by their supervisor.

XIV. MODIFICATION AND TERMINATION OF THE TELEWORK AGREEMENT

Telework is a voluntary program and not an employee entitlement. Employees who telework do not have an automatic right to continue teleworking. Telework agreements may be modified, adjusted or terminated at any time by management based upon an employee's failure to adhere to telework requirements or based upon any other consideration affecting employee eligibility under this policy. Telework agreements may also be modified, adjusted or terminated at any time when requested by the employee. Participation in telework will be terminated if the employee no longer meets the eligibility criteria. Before removing an employee from telework for performance or conduct issues, supervisors will complete the necessary processes to address the issues and consult their servicing labor and employee relations office for guidance.

Management shall provide sufficient notice (typically at least one full pay period when feasible) before terminating a telework agreement to allow the affected employee to make necessary arrangements. The reason for termination will be documented, signed by the supervisor, manager and/or approving official, and furnished to the affected employee and the servicing labor and employee relations office. The servicing labor and employee relations office will notify the president of any applicable union of the name of the employee and the reason(s) for the termination. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect. An employee whose telework agreement was terminated may re-apply for telework.

When any significant aspect of an employee's work changes (e.g., position, work assigned, AWL), the supervisor will reassess the portability and suitability of employee's work for continued telework approval.

An employee may withdraw an application for telework, or terminate an approved telework agreement, at any time without prejudice, and return to the agency worksite. The employee must notify the supervisor in writing, and the supervisor should in turn acknowledge the employee's notice in writing, to prevent misunderstandings about work location.

XV. REPORTING

As OPM and other federal organizations seek telework reports, the agency's TMO and agency telework coordinator will serve as the primary liaisons between EPA, OPM and other federal organizations. EPA's telework coordinator will serve as the agency's central coordinating point and will work with telework coordinators across the agency to prepare comprehensive telework information.

XVI. FACILITIES AND EQUIPMENT

Alternative Work Location Office Space: Requirements will vary depending on the nature of the work and the equipment needed to perform the work. At a minimum, employees should have adequate internet speed and be able to easily access the intranet, agency systems, communicate by telephone, email and established collaboration tools (currently Microsoft O365 suite) with the supervisor, coworkers and serviced clients when working from their AWL. In addition, employees are responsible for verifying and ensuring their work areas comply with health and safety requirements (see the "Employee Self-Certification Safety Checklist"). Home work areas must be clean and free of obstructions, and free of hazardous materials. An employee's request to telework may be disapproved or rescinded based on documented safety problems or the presence of hazardous materials.

A supervisor or designated safety official may inspect the AWL for compliance with health and safety requirements in the very rare circumstance that this may be deemed appropriate. The need for a scheduled site visit by the supervisor or designated safety official to the employee's AWL during work hours may occur only in very rare circumstances where an employee's compliance with health and safety requirements raises reasonable concerns substantiating the need, and only after the supervisor receives concurrence from the servicing LER specialist or other human resources official and provides notice to the employee's representative union, if applicable.

Agency Worksite Space Sharing: If management seeks to implement any space-saving initiatives, they will notify the unions and bargain to the extent required by CBAs, local agreements, applicable law, rule and regulation. Such space-saving options will be based on space availability and may include shared workstations, smaller workstations or unassigned touchdown/hoteling situations.

If an employee ceases to telework, the employee will be assigned to an office space similar or equivalent to the office they had before any space-saving initiatives were implemented.

Government-Furnished Equipment: The agency is under no obligation to provide GFE to its employees solely for the purpose of teleworking, but most employees will receive a government-issued laptop at a minimum. Supervisors may authorize the purchase and distribution of additional equipment or supplies (e.g. printers, printer cartridges, monitor, etc.) for the individual teleworker where legally permissible, as necessary, and if budget permits.

Employees who have an agency-issued laptop or mobile phone assigned to them may use such equipment while teleworking and shall take reasonable safeguards against theft and damage when they do so.

All agency-issued equipment and supplies remain the property of the agency and the EPA remains responsible for service and maintenance of the equipment. The EPA is also under no obligation to service or maintain equipment belonging to the employee, even if the employee uses it for agency work.

If an employee furnishes their own equipment/workstation at the AWL, the government will not reimburse the employee for the purchasing costs of the equipment/workstation. In addition, the employee is responsible for the maintenance, repair and replacement of privately-owned equipment. The agency will not reimburse the employee for such costs, including broadband.

The EPA may not reimburse employees for the utility costs (e.g., heating, air conditioning, lighting and the operation of government-furnished computers) for AWLs. Utility costs include the monthly service charges for telephone or specific telephone charges. Teleworking employees should use agency meeting and conferencing tools, communication options like EC-500, or government-issued mobile phones to conduct official government business with customers and contacts in other locations. The agency will also not reimburse employees for miscellaneous office supplies. Employees requiring pens, paper, paper clips, notebooks, printer cartridges, etc., may use the supplies provided by the agency; however, there should be no expectation of reimbursement for items purchased or for the agency to ship goods to an employee's AWL.

For employees working at an AWL outside of the LCA, the agency is responsible for service and maintenance of GFE. In cases where GFE needs repair and upgrade, the agency will make all reasonable efforts to initiate repairs and upgrades remotely. However, should on-site assistance be required, employees must either return to their agency worksite or make other arrangements with their supervisor to ensure repairs and upgrades can be made expeditiously. In consultation with the employee, supervisors or managers will make determinations over questions such as the employee's duty status, appropriate work assignments and potential temporary equipment during the interim period between when repairs and upgrades are required and when they are completed.

Note: Consistent with the agency's Records Management Policy, official agency business should first and foremost be done on official EPA information systems. The Federal Records Act prohibits the creation or sending of a federal record using a non-EPA electronic messaging account unless the individual creating or sending the record either: (1) copies their EPA email account at the time of initial creation or transmission of the record, or (2) forwards a complete copy of the record to their EPA email account within 20 days of the original creation or transmission of the record.

XVII. INFORMATION SECURITY

The EPA CIO issues and maintains information security directives for protecting EPA information and information systems to include when users are teleworking and accessing systems remotely. These directives outline the responsibilities of each program office, region or other organization, and users in protecting EPA systems and information. Other pertinent supporting information security directives may be issued by users' program offices, regions or other organizations.

Users agree their responsibilities, described in the agency's information security directives, apply while on telework status. Teleworkers must minimize security risks to all agency information and systems.

The AWL workplace and workstation and other devices used with agency information must be configured to ensure all agency information in any form or format is properly protected at all times and in accordance with all agency directives.

XVIII. RECORDS MANAGEMENT

When working at an AWL, agency employees must continue to comply with the agency's records management policy and any other applicable policies related to using, creating, maintaining and disposing of records. Employees shall also comply with the Federal Records Act, Freedom of Information Act, the terms of any litigation hold, discovery in litigation and any requests for records by the Office of the Inspector General. Any record removed from the agency worksite for telework assignments remains the property of the agency and any information generated from telework assignments is the property of the agency. Employees are responsible for maintaining the integrity of their records and for producing records on demand.

Disposal of Telework Program Records: EPA Records Schedule 0039, Alternate Worksite Records, authorizes the disposal of records related to requests or applications to participate in an alternate worksite program (i.e., telework). This includes agreements between the agency and an employee, records relating to the safety of the worksite, the installation and use of equipment, hardware and software, and the use of secure, classified information or data subject to the Privacy Act.

XIX. POLICY UPDATING PROVISION

In accordance with the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, this provision authorizes the assistant administrator of OMS, who has been re-delegated management authority for the agency's directives system, the ability to independently update the agency telework policy as required by other relevant federal organizations, including, but not limited to, the Office of Management and Budget, OPM, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the National Archives and Records Administration, and the GSA. The AA for OMS may also re-delegate the authority to update the policy to the director of the Office of Human Resources. This authority also may be re-delegated further as appropriate.

XX. WAIVER

Any request to waive the requirements of this policy must be submitted in writing by the AA/RA (or designee) and approved by the OMS AA (or designee).

Telework Article

Section 1. Purpose

The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 requires the head of each executive agency to establish a telework policy for eligible employees, and the current Administration has directed federal agencies in their evaluation of the Future of Work to evaluate how telework can be a beneficial tool for agency operations and the workforce. A successful long-term telework program can yield many benefits, including cost savings, protection of environmental quality by reducing commutes and in turn reducing traffic congestion and vehicle emissions, reduction in the agency's carbon footprint, increased productivity and performance, enhanced recruitment and retention, heightened employee morale, increased work/life balance, enhanced health and safety (reduced viral transmission), additional time for focused work, and improved emergency preparedness. Use of maximum telework by EPA has enabled the Agency to continue most of its operations remotely without interruption throughout the COVID-19 pandemic. Telework and remote work can be leveraged as a tool to enhance talent recruitment and retention, and advancing diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility in the EPA workforce.

Section 2. Scope

- A. This Article addresses regular, situational, and medical telework for AFGE bargaining unit employees. It also addresses, but does not limit, telework when used to accommodate AFGE-represented employees with disabilities under the agency's reasonable accommodation process. Generally, employees covered by this Article are expected to report to the Official Agency Worksite at least twice in a biweekly pay period.
- B. This Article also addresses full-time telework used on a temporary basis (such as medical telework) and telework as a reasonable accommodation (telework as a fulltime accommodation is considered in the Remote Work Article and under the EPA's separate reasonable accommodation process.). With the exception of these arrangements, arrangements where the employee is not expected to report to the Official Agency Worksite on a regular and recurring basis two times per biweekly pay period are addressed in the Remote Work Article.
- C. When the Agency's policies and this collective bargaining agreement conflict, the CBA shall govern unless the parties mutually agree otherwise.

Section 3. Policy

- A. The EPA supports the use of telework for the benefit of the environment, agency operations, cost savings and work/life balance of its workforce. The extensive and successful use of telework agencywide during the COVID-19 pandemic has made telework one of the principal operating modes for the Agency and use of telework has been shown to be appropriate for a broader range of types of work than the Agency had previously used. Telework and remote work can improve the Agency's ability to recruit and retain a highly qualified and diverse workforce.
- B. The Agency's telework program has become a routine way of doing business at EPA. The eligibility of individual employees to participate in telework is based on:

1. The extent they have sufficient portable work to support a requested telework schedule; and
2. The employee eligibility requirements outlined in this article. Telework eligibility shall be based on job functions and not managerial preference.

Because telework requires collaboration between management and employees, both parties have responsibilities in its successful implementation and operation. An employee's participation in the Agency's telework program is voluntary. Teleworkers will receive the same treatment and opportunities as non-teleworkers (e.g., work assignments, awards and recognition, development opportunities, promotions, etc.) and are expected to perform and accomplish all assignments and tasks associated with their position, whether in the Official Agency Worksite or at an approved alternative work location.

Section 4. Definitions

- A. Telework – An arrangement where eligible employees perform the duties and responsibilities of their position during regular, paid hours from an approved worksite (e.g., residence, telework center) other than the Official Agency Worksite.
- B. Alternative Work Location (AWL) or Alternative Worksite – An AWL is an approved work location other than the employee's Official Agency Worksite. An AWL will generally be a single location (e.g., a residence), a group of locations (e.g., a campus, industrial park), or other approved worksite (such as a facility established by state, local or county government or private organization for use by teleworkers) and will generally be within the local commuting area. Employee requests to work at an AWL outside of the local commuting area may be approved by the appropriate approving official as noted in section VI. An employee may have more than one approved AWL.
- C. Local Commuting Area – As defined in 5 CFR 351.203, the Local Commuting Area is the geographic area usually constituting one area for employment purposes. It includes any population center (or two or more neighboring ones) and the surrounding localities where people live and can reasonably be expected to travel back and forth daily to their Official Agency Worksite.
- D. Portable Work – Work that can be performed with equal effectiveness with respect to quality, quantity, timeliness, and other aspects of accomplishing the EPA's mission at the employee's Official Agency Worksite or at an AWL. Portable work is part of the employee's regular assignments and does not involve a change in duties or the way the assignments are performed without supervisory approval.
- E. Official Worksite – The official location of an employee's position of record as determined under 5 CFR 531.605. Official worksite is the "official duty station" as the term is used in Title 5, United States Code, Section 5305(i).
- F. Position of Record – An employee's official position defined by grade, occupational series, employing agency, law enforcement officer status and any other condition determining coverage under a pay schedule (other than official worksite), as documented on the employee's most recent Notification of Personnel Action (Standard Form 50 or equivalent) and current position description, excluding any position where the employee is temporarily detailed.

- G. Official Agency Worksite – The EPA office (program, region, lab, HR Shared Service Center) where the employee reports on a regular and recurring basis, receives direction, or returns to if the supervisor recalls the employee or terminates the telework agreement.
- H. Telework-Ready Employee – Any employee who has a telework agreement currently in effect, authorizing any type of telework.

Section 5. Roles and Responsibilities

- A. EPA Telework Managing Officer: The Assistant Administrator for the Office of Mission Support (or designated representative) shall serve as the TMO. The TMO serves as the primary telework point of contact between the agency and the Office of Personnel Management. The TMO is responsible for overall policy development and implementation of the Agency’s telework policy and programs and serves as an advisor for agency leadership on the full range of telework issues as well as a resource for managers and employees.
- B. Agency Telework Coordinator: The Office of Human Resources in the Office of Mission Support executes the duties of the agency telework coordinator, who is responsible for overseeing the agency telework program. The coordinator may periodically review telework approvals and disapprovals to ensure consistency of application, direct changes as necessary, and ensure any necessary training is provided as required. To the extent that the Agency Telework Coordinator prepares a report to OPM regarding approvals and disapprovals of OPM, the Agency will share such a report with AFGE, and the Agency commits to providing participation data to AFGE including documented approvals and disapprovals to allow monitoring of the program when such data is compiled.
- C. Assistant Administrators, the Chief Financial Officer, the Chief of Staff to the Administrator, the General Counsel, and Regional Administrators or their equivalents or designated representatives: These executives are responsible for selecting program/regional office telework coordinators and may assign and locate telework coordinator duties anywhere in their respective organizations. However, if a manager does not designate a telework program coordinator, they must ensure the telework program coordinator’s responsibilities are appropriately delegated to and performed by one person who will serve as a point of contact for the Agency’s telework coordinator.
- D. Supervisors and Managers: Supervisors and managers are responsible for the overall management of teleworking within their work units, including:
 - 1. Working with their regional human resources officer, HR SSC, and program management officer to identify positions eligible for telework and ensuring such designations are identified on position descriptions and in job announcements;
 - 2. Taking into account position eligibility for telework, work-related needs, approving or disapproving new or revised requests to telework (up to and including requests for telework wherein an employee seeks an arrangement where they report to their assigned EPA worksite at least twice in a biweekly pay period) within a reasonable timeframe (i.e., normally within 7 calendar days), and, in cases of disapproval, providing written justification to the employee;

3. Reviewing and, when necessary, recertifying employee telework agreements:
 - a. When there is a change in AWL or in-person work requirements;
 - b. Every 12 months (or less frequently, at the discretion of management); or
 - c. To synchronize annual recertifications if a particular organization's annual recertification time period is sooner than 12 months, so all employees can be recertified at the same time;
4. The supervisor shall provide the employee with a signed copy of the Telework Agreement;
5. Ensuring teleworking employees are provided the equipment necessary to successfully telework, including laptop computers and communications technology needed to communicate with supervisors and colleagues. The Agency agrees to examine the expansion of communications technology to facilitate communication with the public and will involve AFGE in that process;
6. Overseeing day-to-day telework operations; modifying individual telework agreements to meet mission needs, accomplish workload, in response to employee requests, or due to changing circumstances; and maintaining records and information necessary for evaluation of the program;
7. Ensuring teleworkers agree to comply with all existing security policies and procedures, regarding IT security, personally identifiable information and proprietary/confidential business information;
8. Ensuring proper use of appropriate telework time reporting codes to document hours teleworked; and
9. Monitoring performance by ensuring appropriate management controls and reporting procedures are in place before employees begin telework assignments. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers are treated identically for the purposes of monitoring and assessing job performance; however, supervisors and managers may need to utilize different mechanisms for communicating with teleworking employees.
10. Requests under this Article will not be unreasonably denied.

E. Employees: Employees are responsible for the following:

1. Completing a telework agreement and waiting for approval from their supervisor prior to teleworking;
2. Performing an assessment of the AWL and answering the required questions on the Self Certification Safety Checklist;
3. Adhering to the terms and conditions of the applicable telework policy, procedures, terms and conditions of the approved telework agreement;
4. Complying with EPA policies for information technology security and use of government equipment/materials;

5. Informing their supervisor if any terms under the telework agreement have changed, such as AWL, changes to answers in the safety checklist, and portability of work;
 - a. Notifying their supervisor if modifications are necessary to their telework agreement;
 - b. Reviewing and when necessary recertifying employee Telework Work Agreements:
 - i. When there is a change in AWL;
 - ii. Every 12 months (or less frequently, at the discretion of management); and
 - iii. To synchronize annual recertifications if a particular organization's annual recertification time period is sooner than 12 months, so all employees can be recertified at the same time.
 - c. Being available during scheduled work hours by telephone, email, and other applicable agency-approved technology and communication methods (e.g., Teams, etc.) in order to communicate with their supervisor to receive assignments and complete their work in accordance with the supervisor's instructions and to be accessible as they would be in the Official Agency Worksite;
 - d. Maintaining communication with the supervisor while teleworking and working with the supervisor to overcome problems or obstacles as they occur so the work of the organization is accomplished in an effective and timely manner;
 - e. Complying with all existing agency security policies and procedures, including those relating to personally identifiable information and proprietary/confidential business information;
 - f. When conditions set forth in 5 CFR § 630.1603 can be reasonably anticipated or the agency provides reasonable notice regarding changes to its operating status, taking reasonable steps within the employee's control to have necessary equipment and work-related materials (e.g., laptops, documents) available to allow them to telework from their AWL per 5 CFR § 630.1605; and
 - g. Arranging for dependent or elder care, if caregiving activities would otherwise interfere with the employee's work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWL and/or requesting leave or work schedule adjustments for periods when the employee is not able to work due to dependent or elder care responsibilities.

Section 6. Types of Telework

Supervisors and managers may authorize the following types of telework based on position eligibility for telework and work-related needs:

- A. Regular/Routine Telework: Regular/routine telework is the type of telework the employees may request approval for to perform their duties at an AWL on a regular and recurring basis, on predetermined days each pay period. Regular telework may range from one day per pay period up to and including employees scheduled to report at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to the Official Agency Worksite. Any holiday, day in paid leave status (e.g., annual, sick, credit hours, etc.) or official travel will not count as a day away from the official worksite for the purpose of this requirement. Regular telework will typically be on the same days each pay period; however, managers may authorize adjustments to this type of telework when requested.

1. As noted in section IV, AWLs are typically located within the LCA. However, supervisors or managers may approve regular telework for employees outside the LCA if:
 - a. there is a reasonable expectation the distance from the Official Agency Worksite will not hinder the employee's ability to report to their Official Agency Worksite at least 2 times per biweekly pay period;
 - b. there is a reasonable expectation the distance from the Official Agency Worksite will not hinder the employee's ability to report to the Official Agency Worksite should they be recalled on a scheduled telework day or (3) the employee is doing temporary situational telework or medical telework (see below);
 - c. Employees may be recalled to their Official Agency Worksite with fewer than 24 hours notice when recall is essential for the agency to meet its mission. Where conditions outside of an employee's control prevent an employee from commuting to their Official Agency Worksite, the employee may be asked to request leave or perform portable work.
 - d. Example: An employee working at EPA headquarters in Washington, D.C. has a residence in Richmond, Virginia, and asks to perform regular telework at the residence as the AWL. Richmond is outside the Washington, D.C. locality area but the employee regularly reports to their Official Agency Worksite according to their work schedule with no documented issues. It is reasonable for the supervisor to approve the Richmond residence as the AWL. If an employee requests to regularly telework from an AWL in Juneau, Alaska, but the Official Agency Worksite is Washington, D.C., this would be an unreasonable request because the distance and ability to recall the employee are impacted by the proposed location of the regular telework AWL. Depending on the circumstances, the employee's situation may involve Temporary Situational Telework Under Special Circumstances (see below) or Remote Work (see Remote Work Article).

B. Situational Telework: This type of telework is appropriate for work or assignments of specific limited duration on a non-routine, occasional, emergency, or ad hoc basis, as opposed to a regular telework schedule as defined above.

1. Situational telework may be used to accommodate work/life balance needs (e.g., medical appointments, parent/teacher conferences, etc.) when commuting to the Official Agency Worksite before or after such events is impractical.
2. Situational telework can be used to extend an employee's regular telework schedule for a limited duration where appropriate, such as during pandemic health crises (e.g., COVID-19) and prolonged weather events (e.g., unhealthy air due to wildfires).

3. An employee must have an approved situational telework agreement in place and, except in Limited Exceptions to Preapproval Requirements as discussed below, receive approval in advance each time they wish to telework.
4. An employee may be approved for both situational and regular telework.

C. Temporary Situational Telework Under Special Circumstances (Retention of Locality Pay):

Supervisors or managers may approve situational telework arrangements at an AWL within or outside of the local commuting area where the employee is not expected to report to the Official Agency Worksite two times per biweekly pay period for a discrete time period.

1. This arrangement may be approved by the supervisor or manager on a case-by-case basis, provided the employee meets all eligibility requirements contained in this Article.
2. Temporary telework arrangements generally should not exceed 6 months (exception noted in the bullet below), and approvals for extension of these arrangements must be renewed by the supervisor or manager at least each 30 days.
3. Employees needing temporary telework arrangements for extended periods should work with their manager or supervisor to determine if their situation may warrant telework as a reasonable accommodation or consider applying for remote work.
4. The situational telework exception allowing telework from an AWL outside of the LCA should generally be used in cases where:
 - a. the employee is expected to return to work in the LCA in the near future; or
 - b. the employee is expected to continue teleworking but is able to report to the regular worksite at least 2 times per biweekly pay period.
5. The intent of this special circumstance is to address situations where the employee retains a residence in the commuting area but is temporarily unable to report to the Official Agency Worksite for reasons beyond the employee's control. The agency will determine a telework employee's official worksite on a case-by-case basis. Such determinations are within the sole and exclusive discretion of the authorized agency official (generally the employee's supervisor), subject only to OPM review and oversight. 5 CFR § 531.605(d)(4).
6. Unreasonable denials can be grieved through the process detailed in the Grievance Article of the MCBA. Examples of appropriate temporary situations include:
 - a. Emergency situations preventing the employee from regularly commuting to the Official Agency Worksite, such as a severe weather emergency or a pandemic health crisis.
 - b. The employee is on personal travel outside the local commuting area and is available to telework at an approved AWL (e.g., a second home, the host residence) (approval of situation telework in these special circumstances will usually not exceed 60 days in any 12-month period).

- c. When needed to allow the employees to provide care for family members.
7. Other circumstances not involving situational telework where an employee is not reporting twice per pay period to the Official Agency Worksite but may maintain their locality pay include:
- a. When an employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than a location covered by a telework agreement.
 - b. An extended period of approved absence from work (e.g., leave).
 - c. When the employee is in temporary duty travel status away from the Official Agency Worksite.

8. Limited Exceptions to Preapproval Requirement:

- a. Employees should make every reasonable effort to request situational telework in advance and generally should not perform unscheduled telework without preapproval.
- b. In rare situations, where an employee is prepared to telework and has sufficient portable work, an employee may request approval for unscheduled telework by the time they begin work if the employee is unable to connect with their supervisor in advance after good faith efforts. Such rare instances may include, but are not limited to the following:
 - i. A significant disruption in mass transit service.
 - ii. Hazardous conditions (e.g., freezing rain, wildfire smoke, or extremely low wind chills) exist or are forecasted for the commuting area.
 - iii. A dependent is home due to mild illness or school closure (see Caregiving section for further discussion).
 - iv. The employee has a mild illness (e.g., common cold) that does not interfere with working from an AWL.
- c. In rare situations, a supervisor may decline an employee's situational telework request after the employee has begun working. The employee will be credited for the time they have already worked if they had sufficient portable work to perform. An employee may either come into their Official Agency Worksite or request leave if their situational telework is denied in these circumstances.
- d. If a supervisor documents an employee's abuse of this provision or an employee has insufficient portable work, then a supervisor, at their sole discretion, may prohibit an employee from utilizing situational telework without preapproval.

D. Unscheduled Telework: This type of telework is not scheduled in advance but is performed when the Agency announces changes to its operating status, including changes to dismissal and closure procedures pursuant to OPM or local management operating status announcements. Any telework-ready employee that is able to safely travel to and work at their approved AWL must perform unscheduled telework as provided in 5 CFR 630.1605, except as provided for in 5 CFR 630.1605(a)(2), or request leave as appropriate.

- E. Medical Telework: Medical telework allows for the continued accomplishment of Agency work while an employee has a medical condition not affecting the employee's ability to perform their regular work assignment at an AWL.
1. Medical documentation certified by a licensed physician or other licensed health practitioner justifying the need for medical telework must be provided to the supervisor unless waived by the supervisor, as provided in Section XI below.
 2. This type of telework may be the equivalent of full-time, but it is a temporary telework arrangement and generally may not exceed 12 months in duration within any three-year period for any individual condition.
 3. A telework agreement and a safety checklist must be submitted and approved by the supervisor prior to the start of the arrangement.
 4. Supervisors will endeavor to approve medical telework requests on an expedited basis to allow the employee to continue working from an AWL.
 5. The initial telework arrangement is valid for up to 90 calendar days (depending on the medical documentation) and may be extended in 90-calendar day increments if the medical certification justifies such at each extension (i.e., medical documentation must be submitted every 90 calendar days if warranted). The total maximum allowable time for a medical telework agreement generally is 12 months within any three-year period for any individual condition.
 6. Exceptions to these limits will not be unreasonably denied where there is more than one medical issue giving rise to the request.
 7. Employees with medical conditions lasting more than a year should contact the local or national reasonable accommodation coordinator to determine if their situation may warrant telework as a reasonable accommodation rather than extension of medical telework or may consider applying for remote work.
 8. Please note, medical telework is not the same as telework as a reasonable accommodation. Medical telework is a temporary arrangement whereas telework as a reasonable accommodation is not subject to time limits if the condition justifying the arrangement persists. Please see the section on reasonable accommodation below.
 9. If there is sufficient justification (e.g., location of a medical provider, location of family to assist in care) for medical telework to be conducted at a location outside the LCA, supervisors may approve an employee to work at an AWL outside the LCA.
 - a. This determination will be made by the supervisor on a case-by-case basis, provided the employee meets all eligibility requirements contained in this CBA.

- b. The agency will determine a telework employee's official worksite for locality pay purposes on a case-by- case basis. Such determinations are within the sole and exclusive discretion of the authorized agency official (generally the employee's supervisor), subject only to OPM review and oversight. 5 CFR § 531.605(d)(4).
10. Unreasonable denials can be grieved through the process detailed in the Grievance Article of the MCBA.
11. Based on the employee's condition, the supervisor may grant medical telework, leave or a combination of leave and telework to cover the situation.
12. Medical telework is appropriate for employees with non-work-compensable injuries. Employees with work compensable injuries will be managed under applicable workers' compensation regulations.

F. Remote Work: Remote work is a special type of alternative work arrangement by which an employee is scheduled to perform work within or outside the local commuting area of an agency worksite and is not expected to report to an agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis. Remote work does not include temporary telework arrangements as explained above. The Remote Work Article is a separate article in the MCBA. Please refer to OPM Guidance on Telework and Guidance on Remote Work for further information.

G. Other Issues Affecting Telework

1. Official Worksite for Pay Purposes: Generally, if the employee does not physically report to the Official Agency Worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period, their duty station may change to the AWL and locality pay may be impacted. (5 CFR 531.605). An authorized Agency official (generally the employee's supervisor) may make an exception to a locality pay adjustment pursuant to 5 CFR 531.605(d)(2) and as discussed above for temporary situational telework arrangements or medical telework. Not all temporary telework or medical telework situations are appropriate circumstance for this exception unless approved by the supervisor.
2. Caregiving, including Dependent and Elder Care: Telework may be used as a flexibility to help employees with caregiving responsibilities including dependent or elder care responsibilities to meet their family obligations and work responsibilities. However, it is not appropriate to use telework if the employee is unable to work due to caregiving responsibilities. If caregiving responsibilities would otherwise interfere with the employee's work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWL, they must arrange for other care or request leave or work schedule adjustments for those periods when the employee is not able to work due to caregiving responsibilities. Where appropriate, employees may also consider requesting a Maxiflex work schedule to meet their biweekly work hour requirement. Work schedules are separate from telework, and employees should consult the Work Schedules Article of the CBA for more information on available schedules.

- a. Example 1: An employee has children in the home on a regular or situational telework day due to a school closure. Other than general oversight and occasional brief breaks to tend to family matters, the employee is able to complete work assignments during the daily tour of duty. Leave or work schedule adjustments in this example are not necessary.
 - b. Example 2: An employee has children in the home on a regular or situational telework day due to a school closure. One child needs more than minimal assistance with a school assignment during the employee's tour of duty. The employee will need to request leave or adjust their work schedule for the time they are unable to work.
 - c. Example 3: An employee requests a temporary AWL at their parents' residence so they can help their father provide assistance to their mother post-surgery. The employee may telework when not providing care for their mother and must request leave or adjust their work schedule when taking her to doctor appointments or caring for her when the father must run errands or needs a break during the employee's scheduled work hours.
 - d. Example 4: An employee has an adult family member in the home who is recovering from a serious illness. The employee may telework when not providing care and must request leave or adjust their work schedule for times they are unable to work such as when taking the family member to medical appointments.
3. Reasonable Accommodation under the Telework Program: Telework can be used as a way to accommodate qualified employees with disabilities under the Agency's reasonable accommodation process. Employees seeking to telework as a reasonable accommodation should contact their immediate supervisor or the national or local reasonable accommodation coordinator. Employees teleworking as a reasonable accommodation will follow the general requirements contained in this Article to the extent such requirements are consistent with the reasonable accommodation. Employees must, at a minimum, submit a telework application, record of completion of training, and safety checklist; however, the Agency shall not be constrained in accommodating persons with disabilities by the provisions contained in this Article. Employees approved to telework as a reasonable accommodation are required to have a valid, signed telework agreement.
4. EPA Continuity of Operations Plan: Telework is an important part of the Agency's COOP. As was demonstrated during the COOP for COVID-19, telework enables EPA employees to continue to work from AWLs during emergencies, such as a natural disaster, a terrorist attack, disruption to facilities or a pandemic health crisis, and telework proved to be a key tool in continuing the Agency's vital role in the federal government in the face of an emergency. During a declared COOP, any employee—with or without a telework agreement—may be required to telework. During any period the EPA is operating under a COOP, the COOP may supersede relevant elements of the EPA-AFGE MCBA Telework and Remote Articles. 5 USC 7106(a)(2)(D).

Section 7. Portable Work: Designating and Notifying Employees

- A. Although most positions may be suitable for telework, not all aspects of all jobs can be performed as effectively at an AWL and therefore be considered portable. Also, the portability of an employee's work can change over time due to project or mission needs.
- B. Supervisors must use the notification memorandum to notify employees of their ineligibility to telework, if applicable. No notification is required if the employee is eligible to participate in telework.

C. Work Suitable for Telework:

- 1. Work that is suitable for telework is Portable Work that can be performed at a location other than the Official Agency Worksite with equal effectiveness with respect to quality, quantity, timeliness, customer/client services, and other aspects of accomplishing the EPA's mission.
- 2. Work suitable for telework depends on job content, rather than job series or title, type of appointment, or work schedule.
- 3. It is possible within identical or related occupational series, one position or portion thereof may be determined to be eligible for telework and another may not, depending on individual job requirements.
- 4. Work that is generally suited for telework includes, but is not limited to:
 - a. Reviewing and writing
 - b. Policy development
 - c. Report writing
 - d. Research
 - e. Analytical work
 - f. Telephone-intensive tasks and virtual meetings
 - g. Computer technology-oriented tasks
 - h. Online training

D. Duties Not Suitable for Telework:

- 1. Work that is not suitable for telework is work that cannot be performed at a location other than the Official Agency Worksite with equal effectiveness.
- 2. As with portable work, it is possible within identical or related occupational series one position or portion thereof may be determined to be eligible for telework, and another may not, depending on individual job requirements.
- 3. Examples of duties not suitable to be performed away from their Official Agency Worksite include, but are not limited to, the following duties:

- a. Requiring face-to-face contact with the supervisor, colleagues, clients, or the general public that cannot otherwise be achieved as effectively by e-mail, telephone, video calls, collaboration technology, or other means;
 - b. Accessing classified information or a classified installation;
 - c. Involving the construction, installation, maintenance or repair of EPA facilities;
 - d. Involving the physical protection of EPA facilities or employees; or
 - e. Involving other physical presence/site-dependent activity (e.g., emissions testing, laboratory trials).
- E. Employees may have some duties suitable for telework and others not suitable. For these employees, supervisors will need to work with employees to determine how many days per pay period an employee may work at an AWL as part of a regular telework arrangement.

Section 8. Employee Eligibility Requirements

A. Basic Eligibility Requirements: An employee may be authorized to telework if:

1. The employee has sufficient portable work for the amount of telework requested;
2. The telework arrangement does not create any impediment to the effective accomplishment of the employee's and their organization's work;
3. The employee agrees to return to their Official Agency Worksite on a telework day if required to do so by their supervisor. Generally at least 24 hours notice, though less notice may be available;
4. The employee continues to comply with the terms of their written and approved telework agreement; and
5. Arrangements are in place for caregiving duties, if those duties would otherwise interfere with the employee's work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWL.

B. An Employee shall not telework if:

1. The employee has any documented performance or conduct deficiencies within the preceding 12 months that was related to the employee's telework status including, but not limited to, letters of reprimand, written warnings, or leave restrictions;
2. The employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without leave for more than five days in any calendar year;
3. The employee has been officially disciplined for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a federal government computer or while performing official federal government duties; or
4. The employee has been disciplined for misuse of a government computer that the supervisor determined was related to the employee's telework status, within the prior five years. The suspension from telework will be based on the severity of the offense and may not exceed five years.

Section 9. Preparing for the Telework Arrangement

A. Eligible Employees: All eligible agency employees who wish to telework must meet the following conditions. Failure to comply with any one of the conditions listed below may result in the denial or termination of a telework arrangement:

1. Complete the required employee telework training prior to applying for the telework program;
2. Submit the “EPA Telework Application/Agreement” and the "Employee Self- Certification Safety Checklist” to their supervisor for approval;
3. Ensure all necessary dependent/elder care arrangements are maintained and do not interfere with the employee’s work performance while working at the AWL;
4. Ensure compliance with the EPA’s information technology policies and procedures;
5. Comply with EPA policies and the CBA regarding pay, work schedules, time reporting code requirements, leave requests, and other administrative requirements in the same manner as employees working in their Official Agency Worksite;
6. Ensure working from the AWL causes no disruption in the efficiency of work and appears seamless. The employee should be as available to their clients/customers, co-workers and supervisors or managers as they would be at the Official Agency Worksite. This means, for example, the teleworking employees cannot designate their regular teleworking hours unavailable for calls, meetings or virtual meetings in their electronic calendars any differently than they would at their Official Agency Worksite or put “out of office” messages on e-mail and voice mail systems indicating they are unavailable;
7. Utilize call forwarding technology;
8. Maintain organizational requirements regarding communication and accessibility and respond in a timely manner to their team leaders, supervisors or managers, co-workers, agency customers, clients, and the public;
9. Be capable of joining and be available to join virtual meetings or conference calls while working at the AWL;
10. Safeguard agency equipment (if provided) and use it only for official purposes in accordance with established policies;
11. In the event agency equipment is not functioning, properly and promptly seek remote assistance. If remote assistance is ineffectual, the employee should take the steps necessary to obtain functioning equipment.

12. Be willing to telework in case of an emergency;
13. Be willing and able to leave the AWL and return to the Official Agency Worksite if requested after reasonable notice (e.g., generally at least 24 hours, though less notice may be available) by their supervisor;
14. Agree to report to the Official Agency Worksite as needed, as determined by the agency; and
15. Participate in the annual recertification process and in any other required telework program monitoring or evaluation processes required by the agency or other authoritative entities (e.g., OPM, Government Accountability Office, Congress).

B. Telework Agreement: Each new telework agreement will be reviewed on an individual basis. Decisions will be made based on eligibility criteria outlined in this Article. The process for application and re-certification will also follow those processes outlined in this Article.

Section 10. Telework Training

Training sessions on the basics of telework will ensure a common understanding of its requirements. Participating employees must complete the agency-approved training and obtain a record of completion of training before participation. The employee's record of the required training must be attached to the telework agreement. These documents should be maintained by both employees and supervisors. Supervisors or managers of those teleworking must also complete agency-approved telework training and obtain a certificate of training regardless of whether they themselves telework. Refresher training may be required on occasion by the agency.

Section 11. Establishing the Telework Agreement

A. Regular and Situational Telework: The following actions are to be taken when establishing a regular or situational telework agreement:

1. The employee submits a completed application (Appendix A) (<https://work.epa.gov/sites/default/files/2021-12/Telework-Appendix-A-EPA-Form-3181-2.pdf>) to their immediate supervisor;
2. The employee and supervisor discuss the proposed telework agreement and the type of work to be completed by the employee at an AWL;
3. If a suitable arrangement is reached, the employee finalizes the application/agreement, safety checklist (Appendix B) (<https://work.epa.gov/sites/default/files/2022-04/Telework-Appendix-B-EPA-Form-3181-3.pdf>) and the required training. Once all requirements are completed, the telework agreement is signed and dated by the employee and supervisor;
4. A separate Telework agreement for each situational telework event is not necessary if the employee has signed an agreement to telework on a situational basis;
5. A request for Situational Telework may be approved verbally but must be followed up with written approval via email or through a request to adjust the employee's schedule (e.g., screenshot of the employee's People Plus) detailing the day(s) and time(s) an employee is requesting to telework.

6. Employees may request more than one alternative work location. Employees requesting to work at an AWL not previously approved must update the telework agreement and submit a checklist for the new location to the supervisor for approval.
 7. Employees are to obtain information and implement all procedures for accessing the secured operations of their Official Agency Worksite; and
 8. If the employee receives approval for an AWL at a telework center, arrangements must be made by the employee's organization to cover costs of using the center and to reserve a workstation for the employee.
- B. Medical Telework: When establishing a medical telework agreement, the employee must submit a written statement as defined by 5 CFR § 339.104 from a licensed physician or other licensed health practitioner unless waived by the supervisor, generally including the following information (Appendix C may be used by AFGE employees seeking medical telework):
1. The diagnosis of the medical condition necessitating the telework arrangement;
 2. How the medical condition might interrupt the employee's ability to go to the Official Agency Worksite and might interrupt the employee's work schedule;
 3. Providing either the expected date when medical telework should no longer be necessary and the employee should be able to resume work at the Official Agency Worksite, or the expected timeframe for treatment and how that might impact the telework status;
 4. Listing restrictions necessary for work performed at the AWL, if applicable;
 5. Stating the employee is able to perform the duties of the position at an AWL (the duties relayed to the medical provider should also be shared with the employee's supervisor); and
 6. Describing the benefit to the employee's medical condition from working at an AWL, or the reduction of health risks to other employees, if any, derived from medical telework.

Section 12. Telework Agreements

- A. The telework agreement covers the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement for the individual employee and constitutes an agreement by the employee and manager to adhere to applicable guidelines and policies. The telework agreement includes items such as:
1. The voluntary nature of the arrangement;
 2. Duration of the telework agreement;
 3. Schedule of duty at each work location;

4. Leave approval and requests for overtime and compensatory time;
 5. Performance requirements; and
 6. Proper use and safeguards of government property and records.
- B. When any aspect of the work agreement changes (e.g., position, work assignment, supervisor, alternate work location, etc.), the employee and supervisor will reassess the employee's work to determine telework suitability and continued approval, however this may not require a new telework agreement.
- C. Employees who are designated essential for inclement weather or other emergencies or are emergency response employees for COOP purposes must have signed telework agreements in place to facilitate continuity of operations in the event of emergencies. Employees designated for COOP purposes may be required to telework, irrespective of telework status/agreement.
- D. The supervisor must retain a copy of the signed telework agreement including the record of training and a copy must be provided to the employee. The supervisor must also provide a copy of the signed telework agreement to the program/regional office telework coordinator who is responsible for maintaining telework records in the organization, if any.

Section 13. Time, Attendance and Other Miscellaneous Issues

- A. Recording Telework Hours and Control of Time and Attendance: Proper recording, monitoring and certification of employee work time are critical to the success of the program. Employees are responsible for recording all telework time into the time and attendance system using the appropriate telework time reporting codes.
- B. Hours of Duty and Work Schedules: Employees who telework will maintain a single type of schedule (e.g., compressed, flexible work schedule) whether at the Official Agency Worksite or the AWL. Unstructured arrangements where employees work at the AWL without prior supervisory approval are not permitted. Employees should refer to the Parties' Work Schedules Article for more information.
- C. Overtime during Telework - Eligibility Requirements: Just as at the Official Agency Worksite, overtime work conducted at an AWL must be approved in advance; overtime work not ordered and approved in advance by the supervisor, in writing, will not be compensated. Detailed information on overtime can be found in the EPA Pay Administration Manual (EPA Order 3155) and CBA Article.
- D. Leave: Procedures for requesting leave are the same for employees when participating in telework and when working at the Official Agency Worksite. See CBA Leave Article the EPA Leave Manual (EPA Order 3165) for details.
- E. Workers' Compensation:
1. Employees who telework are covered by the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Federal Employees Compensation Act and qualify for continuation of pay for workers' compensation for injuries sustained while performing their official duties. For this reason, it is vital a specific AWL be approved in advance and adhered to by the employee.

2. The supervisor's signature on the request for compensation attests only to what the supervisor can reasonably know, specifically whether the event occurred at the Official Agency Worksite or at an AWL during official duty. Typically, supervisors or managers are not present when an employee sustains an injury. Employees, in all situations, bear responsibility for informing their immediate supervisor of an injury at the earliest time possible, seeking appropriate medical attention and filing the appropriate workers' compensation claim form.
3. Telework arrangements can also result in employees who are currently receiving continuation of pay or worker's compensation returning to work, thus taking them off the workers' compensation rolls. Supervisors may be able to find work such employees are able to perform at AWL or restructure existing work so some of it may be completed at an AWL.

F. Requirement to Return to the Official Agency Worksite on a Scheduled Telework Day:

Teleworking employees working at an AWL may be recalled to the Official Agency Worksite to meet mission, staffing, and workload requirements. Under these circumstances, the following should occur:

1. Supervisors should notify employees as soon as possible if they are subject to a recall to the Official Agency Worksite in an effort to provide the employee sufficient time to make necessary arrangements. A supervisor may recall an employee to the Official Agency Worksite by notifying them generally at least 24-hours in advance. A supervisor may recall an employee to their Official Agency Worksite with fewer than 24 hours when recall is essential for the agency to meet its mission. Where conditions outside of an employee's control prevent an employee from commuting to their Official Agency Worksite, the employee may be asked to request leave or perform portable work.
2. If an employee is unable to telework from their AWL due to being required to be at the Official Agency Worksite on a regularly scheduled telework day, or being on approved leave, the employee is not entitled to another telework day. Likewise, the employee is not prohibited from requesting another telework day. At their discretion, the supervisor may approve another telework day within the same workweek or pay period.

G. Travel: The travel provisions applicable to employees working at the Official Agency Worksite also apply to employees when teleworking. If an employee is unable to telework from their AWL due to being on approved travel, the employee may request another telework day, and the supervisor may approve another telework day within the same work week or pay period at the supervisor's discretion.

H. Monitoring Performance: GAO guidelines require agencies to establish a method providing the supervisor with reasonable assurance employees are working when scheduled. Appropriate management controls and reporting procedures must be in place before employees begin telework assignments. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers should be treated identically for the purposes of monitoring and assessing job performance, but different modes of communication may be appropriate for those teleworking. Some approved techniques, potentially applicable to telework arrangements, include:

1. Supervisory telephone/video calls or e-mail messages to an employee;
2. Supervisory video meetings with an employee during times the employee is scheduled to be on duty and be available;
3. The need for a scheduled site visit by the supervisor to the employee's AWL during work hours may occur only in very rare circumstances where an employee's performance raises reasonable concerns substantiating the need, and only after the supervisor receives concurrence from the servicing LER specialist or other human resources official; and
4. Use of performance management systems, including regular workload/accomplishments reports for teleworking and non-teleworking employees, to determine reasonableness of work output for time spent, project schedules, key milestones, quality of the work performed, and team reviews.

Section 14. Emergencies: Unscheduled Telework/Dismissals/Closures

A. Unscheduled Telework/Closures:

1. In the event of a closure at the Official Agency Worksite, telework-ready employees already scheduled to telework on the closure day are required to do so except as provided for in 5 CFR 630.1605(a)(2). Telework-ready employees not scheduled to telework on the closure day are required, in coordination with their supervisor, to utilize unscheduled telework to the maximum extent possible, subject to available portable work and suitability of the AWL. If there is insufficient portable work as determined by the supervisor or the AWL is impacted as provided for in 5 CFR 630.1605(a)(2), the employee may be granted an appropriate category of administrative leave (e.g., weather and safety leave) to cover all or a portion of the scheduled workday.
2. Employees who are required to work during their regular tour of duty on a day when federal offices are closed to the public (or during delayed arrivals or early dismissals) are not entitled to overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time off for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours. Employees reporting to an AWL other than the employee's primary residence during the workweek will follow the closure or dismissal procedures of that AWL.

- B. Late Arrivals/Early Dismissals at the Official Agency Worksite: When the agency announces early closure of or late arrival to the Official Agency Worksite, telework-ready employees already scheduled to telework on the early closure or late arrival day are required to telework their regularly scheduled non-overtime hours. Telework-ready employees not scheduled to telework on the early closure or late arrival day will be required, in coordination with their supervisor, to utilize unscheduled telework to the maximum extent possible, subject to available portable work as determined by the supervisor. If there is insufficient portable work as determined by the supervisor, the employee may be granted an appropriate category of administrative leave (e.g., weather and safety leave) for their regularly scheduled non-overtime hours when the Official Agency Worksite is closed. Early release for holidays or other like situations must be granted to those on telework to the same extent as granted to those employees working at the Official Agency Worksite.

- C. Unscheduled Telework Announced: In the event the Official Agency Worksite is open, but there is an announcement of the option for unscheduled telework, telework-ready employees not otherwise scheduled to telework may come into the Official Agency Worksite or request approval from the supervisor for unscheduled telework or the use of annual, credit, or other leave.
- D. Other Emergencies or Disruptions to the Official Agency Worksite: In the event of a disruption to normal office operations (e.g., national or local emergency, emergency event involving inclement weather, or any situation with the potential to disrupt normal office operations), employees approved for regular and situational telework are expected to telework if instructed by the supervisor to do so except in the case of situations where the emergency could not be reasonably anticipated and the employee could not make the necessary preparations, as provided for in 5 CFR 630.1605(a)(2). In COOP situations, telework may be required.
- E. General Provisions:
1. It is recommended supervisors and employees coordinate in advance if there is an anticipated event with the potential to disrupt normal office operations to ensure employees have portable work and the necessary equipment to perform telework during an Official Agency Worksite closure to the extent possible.
 2. As with scheduled telework, an employee performing unscheduled telework must have sufficient portable work to perform throughout the workday when teleworking.
 3. An employee who does not have enough portable work must report to their Official Agency Worksite if it is open, contact their supervisor for additional work, request appropriate leave, or adjust their work schedule (if applicable).
 4. When severe weather or other circumstances prevent work from the AWL (e.g., loss of electricity, employee must evacuate, infrastructure/connectivity and child/elder care issues) or there is a lack of portable work as determined by the supervisor, and the Official Agency Worksite is closed to employees, a telework-ready employee may be granted an appropriate category of administrative leave (e.g., weather and safety leave) by their supervisor.

Section 15. Modification and Termination of the Telework Agreement

- A. Employees who telework do not have an automatic right to continue teleworking.
- B. Determination of telework eligibility should be based on job functions, and not managerial preference.
- C. Telework eligibility should be based on equitable, function-based criteria.
- D. Telework agreements may be modified, adjusted, or terminated by management based upon an employee's failure to adhere to telework requirements or based upon any other consideration affecting employee eligibility. Telework agreements may also be modified, adjusted, or terminated at any time when requested by the employee.

- E. Management has the right at any time in accordance with this agreement to end an employee's use of telework. Participation in telework will be terminated when the employee no longer meets the eligibility criteria.
- F. Management shall provide sufficient notice when feasible, before terminating a telework agreement in an effort to allow the affected employee to make necessary arrangements.
 - 1. Typically, sufficient notice will be three pay periods; however, individual circumstances may warrant more time to allow the affected employee to make arrangements or if the situation involves work exigencies or documented misconduct the supervisor believes is related to telework then the notice period is at management's discretion.
 - 2. Leave in these instances should be granted liberally. The reason for termination will be documented, signed by the supervisor, and furnished to the affected employee.
 - 3. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect.
- G. When any significant aspect of an employee's work changes (e.g., position, work assigned, AWL), the supervisor will reassess the portability and suitability of employee's work for continued telework approval.
- H. An employee may withdraw an application for telework, or terminate an approved telework agreement, at any time without prejudice, and return to the Official Agency Worksite. The employee must notify the supervisor in writing, and the supervisor must in turn acknowledge the employee's notice in writing, to prevent misunderstandings about work location and official workstations per applicable agreements and policy.

Section 16. Facilities and Equipment

- A. Alternative Work Location Office Space: Requirements will vary depending on the nature of the employee's work and the equipment needed to perform that work.
 - 1. At a minimum, employees are responsible for the AWL having adequate internet speed in order to easily access the intranet, agency systems, communicate by telephone, email and established collaboration tools (currently Microsoft O365 suite) with the supervisor, coworkers, and the public when working from their AWL.
 - 2. In addition, employees are responsible for verifying and ensuring their work areas comply with health and safety requirements (see the "Employee Self-Certification Safety Checklist").
 - 3. Home work areas must be clean and free of obstructions, in compliance with all building codes, and free of hazardous materials.
 - 4. An employee's request to telework may be disapproved or rescinded based on safety problems or the presence of hazardous materials. A supervisor or designated safety official may inspect the AWL for compliance with health and safety requirements in the very rare circumstance that this may be deemed appropriate. The need for a scheduled site visit by the supervisor or designated safety official to the employee's AWL during work hours may occur only in very rare circumstances where an employee's compliance with health and safety requirements raises reasonable concerns substantiating the need, and only after the supervisor receives concurrence from the servicing LER specialist or other human resources official.

B. Worksite Space Saving:

- a. If management seeks to implement space-saving initiatives related to Remote Work and telework, management will notify the union at both the National and relevant local levels prior to implementing space-saving plans.
 - i. Management and unions will participate in pre-decisional involvement (PDI) for the development and implementation of space-saving plans.
 - ii. Wider telework participation may provide the Agency an opportunity to reduce environmental impact of office space and save substantial taxpayer money in reducing workspace. To that end, the Parties reached ground rules (Appendix D) for pre-decisional involvement and local level negotiations should the Agency seek to implement any space-saving initiatives specifically based on telework levels.

 - iii. The parties agree local level negotiations are appropriate because of the unique circumstances of each location.
- b. Space-saving initiatives must first be considered for those conducting Remote Work before those on Telework.
- c. Space-saving options will become effective only after bargaining obligations have been met per the ground rules, attached as Appendix D.
- d. The parties agree, space-saving initiatives do not alleviate the Agency's responsibility to provide workspace, computer equipment (if appropriate) and telephones for employees required to report to the office at various times.
- e. When an employee is working under an approved regular telework agreement and the employee routinely works at the Official Agency Worksite five times per pay period or fewer, employees should be aware that on this basis in particular the Agency may utilize space-saving options for the employee's workspace to be negotiated at the local level as described above.

C. Government-Furnished Equipment:

- a. All employees with an approved telework agreement who require a laptop to conduct Agency work or to communicate with supervisors will receive a government-issued laptop at a minimum.
- b. Supervisors may authorize additional GFE for the individual teleworkers as necessary to meet mission needs if budget permits.

- c. Agency will use excess property to the greatest extent practicable for AWLs.
- d. Employees who have an agency-issued laptop or mobile phone assigned to them may use such equipment while teleworking and shall take reasonable safeguards against theft and damage when they do so.
- e. All agency-issued equipment and supplies remain the property of the agency, and the EPA remains responsible for service and maintenance of the equipment. Government issued equipment may be monitored to ensure they are being utilized in connection with Agency business.
- f. If an employee furnishes their own equipment/workstation at the AWL, the government will not reimburse the employee for the purchasing costs of the equipment/workstation and the equipment remains the employee's. The EPA is under no obligation to service or maintain equipment belonging to the employee even if the employee uses it for Agency work.
- g. The EPA may not reimburse employees for the utility costs (e.g., heating, air conditioning, lighting, and the operation of government-furnished computers) for AWLs. Utility costs include the monthly service charges for telephone or specific telephone charges. The Agency will not reimburse the employee for privately supplied costs, including broadband.
- h. Teleworking employees should use Agency meeting and conferencing tools, communication options like EC-500, or government-issued mobile phones to conduct official government business in other locations.
- i. Employees requiring pens, paper, paper clips, notebooks, and other supplies may use those provided by the Official Agency Worksite.
- j. For employees working at an AWL outside of the LCA, the Agency is responsible for service and maintenance of GFE. In cases where GFE needs repair and upgrade, the Agency will make reasonable and timely efforts to initiate repairs and upgrades remotely. However, should on-site assistance be required, employees must either return to their Official Agency Worksite or make other arrangements with their supervisor to ensure repairs and upgrades can be made expeditiously.
- k. In consultation with the employee, supervisors or managers will make determinations over questions such as the employee's duty status, appropriate work assignments and potential temporary equipment during the interim period between when repairs and upgrades are required and when they are completed.

Section 17. Information Security

- A. The EPA CIO issues and maintains information security directives for protecting EPA information and information systems to include when users are teleworking and accessing systems remotely. These directives outline the responsibilities of each program office, region or other organization, and users in protecting EPA systems and information. Other pertinent supporting information security directives may be issued by users' program offices, regions or other organizations.

- B. Users agree their responsibilities, described in the agency’s information security directives, apply while on telework status. Teleworkers must minimize security risks to all agency information and systems.
- C. The AWL workplace and workstation and other devices used with agency information must be configured to ensure all agency information in any form or format is properly protected at all times and in accordance with all agency directives.

Section 18. Records Management

When working at an AWL, agency employees must continue to comply with the agency’s records management policy and any other applicable policies related to using, creating, maintaining, and disposing of records. Employees shall also comply with the Federal Records Act, Freedom of Information Act, the terms of any litigation hold, discovery in litigation and any requests for records by the Office of the Inspector General. Any record removed from the Official Agency Worksite for telework assignments remains the property of the agency and any information generated from telework assignments is the property of the agency. Employees are responsible for maintaining the integrity of their records and for producing records on demand.

Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) between US EPA and National Treasury Employees Union: US EPA Telework and Remote Work Article

This agreement is entered into between the United States Environmental Protection Agency (“EPA”) and National Treasury Employees Union (“NTEU” or “the Union”), regarding implementation of the EPA’s Telework and Remote Work Policies. The Telework and the Remote Work Policies dated March 8, 2022, (and attached as Appendix A), were developed in part from employee listening sessions and pre-decisional involvement with the Union.

Terms of this MOU including existing agreements that the Parties agree to modify are as follows:

1. Telework Policy. The Parties agree the Telework Policy referenced above is adopted in its entirety and in conjunction with the Remote Work Policy referenced above, supersedes Article 54 of NTEU’s October 8, 2015, Collective Bargaining Agreement with EPA (“the Union’s CBA”).
2. Remote Work Policy. The Parties agree the Remote Work Policy referenced above also is adopted in its entirety, and in conjunction with the Telework Policy referenced above, supersedes Article 54 of the Union’s CBA.
3. Agency Head Review has already occurred for the Telework Policy and Remote Work Policy, and EPA approved each policy. The Parties reiterate their agreement signed on March 31, 2022, regarding the staged physical return to office.
4. The Agency will promptly review and update any telework and remote work forms, as may be necessary to ensure they reflect terms contained in Appendix A and this MOU.
5. Employees on remote work who wish to come to the office periodically for work-related reasons may do so with supervisory approval.
6. The Agency will meet with NTEU, upon request, to discuss issues or concerns with the telework and/or remote work policies.
7. The Parties will continue negotiating over work schedules with the goal of expediting those negotiations to reach agreement for a new article in the Union’s CBA addressing such matters.
8. This MOU will be in effect concurrent with the Union’s CBA, unless otherwise agreed to.

Telework Policy

I. PURPOSE

The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 requires the head of each executive agency to establish a telework policy for eligible employees. A successful telework program can yield many benefits, including cost savings, increased productivity and performance, enhanced recruitment and retention, heightened employee morale, improved emergency preparedness and reduced energy use.

II. SCOPE

This policy addresses regular, situational, and medical telework. It also addresses telework when used to accommodate employees with disabilities under the agency's reasonable accommodation process. Generally, employees covered by this policy are expected to report to the agency worksite at least twice in a biweekly pay period. This policy covers U.S. Environmental Protection Agency employees, supervisors, and managers in the competitive, excepted, and Senior Executive Service. This policy also covers Public Health Service Officers, Schedule C, Administratively Determined employees and non-EPA employees serving on Intergovernmental Personnel Act assignments to the EPA. This policy does not cover employees of the Office of Inspector General or agency employees on details or Intergovernmental Personnel Agreements (IPA) to other agencies, departments, or organizations.

Portions of this policy may allow for full-time telework on a temporary basis (except in the case of telework as a reasonable accommodation when a determination is made full-time telework without time limits is appropriate under the EPA's separate reasonable accommodation process). For telework arrangements where the employee is not expected to report to the agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis (i.e., does not meet the two times per biweekly pay period requirement nor a temporary full-time telework arrangement) please refer to the agency's remote work policy.

When this policy and a collective bargaining agreement conflict, the Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA) shall govern unless the parties mutually agree otherwise.

III. POLICY

The EPA supports the use of telework. The eligibility of employees to participate in telework is based on: 1) the extent they have sufficient portable work to support the requested telework schedule; and 2) the employee meeting the eligibility requirements outlined in this policy. Since telework requires collaboration between management and employees, both parties have responsibilities in its successful implementation and operation. An employee's participation in telework is voluntary. Teleworkers will receive the same treatment and opportunities as non-teleworkers (e.g., work assignments, awards and recognition, development opportunities, promotions, etc.) and are expected to perform and accomplish all assignments and tasks associated with their position, whether in the office or on an approved telework agreement.

IV. DEFINITIONS

Telework – An arrangement where eligible employees perform the duties and responsibilities of their position during regular, paid hours from an approved worksite other than the official worksite (e.g., home or telework center).

Alternative Work Location or Alternative Worksite (AWL) – The AWL is an approved work location other than the employee’s official worksite. An AWL will generally be an employee’s residence or other approved worksite and will generally be within the local commuting area, such as a facility established by state, local, or county government or private organization for use by teleworkers. Employee requests to work at an AWL outside of the local commuting area may be approved by the appropriate approving official as noted in section VI.

Local Commuting Area – The geographic area usually constituting one area for employment purposes. It includes any population center (or two or more neighboring ones) and the surrounding localities where people live and can reasonably be expected to travel back and forth daily to their official worksite.

Portable Work – Work normally performed at the employee’s official worksite but can be performed at another location with equal effectiveness with respect to quality, quantity, timeliness, customer service, and other aspects of accomplishing the EPA’s mission. Such work is part of the employee’s regular assignments and does not involve a significant change in duties or the way the assignments are performed without supervisory approval.

Official Worksite – The official location of an employee’s position of record as determined under 5 CFR 531.605. Official worksite is the “official duty station” as the term is used in Title 5, United States Code, Section 5305(i).

Position of Record – An employee’s official position defined by grade, occupational series, employing agency, law enforcement officer status and any other conditions determining coverage under a pay schedule (other than official worksite), as documented on the employee’s most recent Notification of Personnel Action (Standard Form 50 or equivalent) and current position description, excluding any position where the employee is temporarily detailed.

Official Agency Worksite – The office (program, region, lab, HR Shared Service Center) where the employee reports on a regular and recurring basis, receives direction, or returns to if the supervisor recalls the employee or terminates the telework agreement.

Telework-Ready Employee – Any employee who has a telework agreement currently in effect, authorizing any type of telework.

V. ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

EPA Telework Managing Officer (TMO): The Assistant Administrator for the Office of Mission Support (or designated representative) shall serve as the TMO. The TMO serves as the primary telework point of contact between the agency and the Office of Personnel Management. The TMO is responsible for overall policy development and implementation of the agency’s telework policy and programs and serves as an advisor for agency leadership on the full range of telework issues as well as a resource for managers and employees.

Agency Telework Coordinator: The Office of Human Resources in the Office of Mission Support

executes the duties of the agency telework coordinator, who is responsible for overseeing the agency telework program, identifying issues as necessary and ensuring any necessary training is provided as required.

Program/Regional Office Telework Coordinators: Are responsible for ensuring all participants are aware of their responsibilities, have taken appropriate training, and have agreements in place. Upon request, these telework coordinators are required to provide participation data including documented approvals and disapprovals to allow monitoring of the program.

Assistant Administrators, the Chief Financial Officer, the Chief of Staff to the Administrator, the General Counsel, and Regional Administrators or their equivalents or designated representatives: These executives are responsible for selecting program/regional office telework coordinators and may assign and locate telework coordinator duties anywhere in their respective organizations. However, if a manager does not designate a telework program coordinator, they must ensure the telework program coordinator's responsibilities are appropriately delegated to and performed by one person who will serve as a point of contact for the agency's telework coordinator.

EPA Human Resources Shared Service Centers: HR SSCs are responsible for ensuring all position descriptions are checked for telework eligibility prior to initiating recruitment and reassignment actions and are so noted in job advertisements.

Supervisors and Managers: Supervisors and managers are responsible for the overall management of teleworking within their work units, including:

- Working with their regional human resources officer, HR SSC, and program management officer to identify positions eligible for telework and ensuring such designations are identified on position descriptions and in job announcements;
- Approving or disapproving new or revised requests to telework in accordance with this policy and within a reasonable timeframe (i.e., normally within 5 work days). In cases of disapproval, providing the rationale to the employee in writing;
- Reviewing and recertifying employee telework agreements when revisions are necessary.
- Overseeing day-to-day telework operations, modifying individual telework agreements to meet mission needs, accomplish workload, or changing circumstances, and maintaining records and information necessary for evaluation of the program;
- Ensuring teleworkers agree to comply with all existing security policies and procedures, regarding IT security, personally identifiable information and confidential business information;
- Ensuring proper use of appropriate telework time reporting codes to document hours teleworked; and
- Monitoring performance by ensuring appropriate management controls are in place before employees begin telework assignments. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers are treated identically for the purposes of monitoring and assessing job performance; however, supervisors and managers may need to utilize different mechanisms for communicating with teleworking employees.
- Supervisors should complete the appropriate process for performance or conduct issues prior to considering revoking an employee's telework agreement in accordance with this policy.

Employees: Employees are responsible for the following:

- Completing a telework agreement and waiting for approval from their supervisor prior to

- teleworking;
- Performing an assessment of the AWL and answering the required questions on the Self-Certification Safety Checklist;
 - Adhering to the telework policy, procedures, terms and conditions of the approved telework agreement;
 - Complying with EPA policies for information technology security and use of government equipment/materials;
 - Notifying their supervisor if modifications are necessary or potentially necessary to their telework agreement;
 - Working with their supervisor to recertify the telework agreement when revisions are necessary.
 - Being available during scheduled work hours by telephone, email, and other applicable agency-approved technology and communication methods (e.g., Teams, etc.) in order to communicate with their supervisor, to be accessible to co-workers and customers, and overcome problems or obstacles as they occur.
 - Complying with all existing agency security policies and procedures, including those relating to personally identifiable information and confidential business information;
 - Being prepared to telework in the event OPM or the agency announces changes to its operating status, including changes to dismissal and closure procedures;
 - In coordination with supervisors, planning ahead, including taking any necessary equipment (e.g., laptops) home prior to a forecasted weather event; and
 - Make reasonable efforts to arrange dependent or elder care, if dependent care or elder care would otherwise interrupt or interfere with the employee's work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWL, and/or requesting leave or work schedule adjustments for periods when the employee is not able to work due to dependent or elder care responsibilities.

VI. TYPES OF TELEWORK

Supervisors and managers may authorize the following types of telework based on their work-related needs:

Regular/Routine Telework: Under this type of telework, employees may request approval to perform their duties at an AWL on a regular and recurring basis, on predetermined days each pay period. Regular telework will typically be on the same days each pay period. However, managers may authorize adjustments when requested, as long as the schedule provides for reporting to the office at least 2 days per pay period.

As noted in section IV, AWLs are typically located within the LCA. However, supervisors or managers can approve regular telework for employees outside the LCA if it will not hinder the employee's ability to report to the official worksite at least two (2) days per period. Supervisors and managers should use good judgment but should remember employees may be recalled to the official worksite with at least 48 hours' notice based on mission needs. There are exceptions for approving AWLs outside the LCA. Please see the section on situational telework for guidance.

Situational Telework: This type of telework is limited in duration on a non-routine, occasional, emergency, or ad hoc basis, as opposed to a regular telework schedule as defined above. Situational telework cannot be used in a routine manner to extend an employee's regular telework schedule. An employee must have an approved situational telework agreement in place and notify their supervisor in advance, if feasible, each time they wish to telework. An employee may be approved for both situational and regular telework.

Supervisors or managers may approve temporary situational telework arrangements at an AWL outside of the local commuting area even if the employee isn't able to report 2 times a pay period. This determination will be made by the supervisor on a case-by-case basis, provided the employee meets all eligibility requirements contained in this policy or any applicable CBAs.

The temporary exception should generally be used in cases where: (1) the employee is expected to return to work at the official worksite in the near future; or (2), the employee is expected to continue teleworking but will be able to report to the regular worksite at least 2 times per biweekly pay period. Examples of appropriate temporary situations include:

- Recovery from an injury or medical condition.
- Emergency situations preventing the employee from regularly commuting to the official worksite, such as a severe weather emergency or a pandemic health crisis.
- An extended period of approved absence from work (e.g., paid leave).
- When the employee is in temporary duty travel status away from the official worksite.
- When an employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than a location covered by a telework agreement.
- As a flexibility to facilitate a work/life balance for employees.

Unscheduled Telework: This type of telework is not scheduled in advance but is performed when the agency announces changes to its operating status, including changes to dismissal and closure procedures pursuant to OPM or local management operating status announcements. Any telework-ready employee must perform unscheduled telework to the extent possible or take appropriate leave. In unique situations such as lack of electricity, infrastructure disruptions, or connectivity issues at the AWL, the employee should contact their supervisor as soon as possible to request weather and safety leave.

Medical Telework: Allows for the continued accomplishment of agency work while an employee has a medical condition certified by an appropriate medical provider not affecting the employee's ability to perform their regular work assignment at an AWL. The initial telework arrangement is valid for up to 90 calendar days (depending on the medical documentation) and may be extended in 90-calendar day increments if the medical certification justifies such at each extension (i.e., medical documentation must be submitted every 90 calendar days if warranted). This type of telework may be the equivalent of full-time, but it is a temporary telework arrangement and. Medical documentation justifying the need for medical telework must be provided to the supervisor. Also, a telework agreement and a safety checklist must be submitted and approved by the supervisor prior to the arrangement.

Please note, medical telework is not the same as telework as a reasonable accommodation. Medical telework is a temporary arrangement whereas telework as a reasonable accommodation is not subject to time limits if the condition justifying the arrangement persists. Please see the section on reasonable accommodation below.

In limited circumstances for medical telework, supervisors may approve employees to work at an AWL outside the local commuting area. This determination will be made by the supervisor on a case-by-case basis, provided the employee meets all eligibility requirements contained in this policy or any applicable CBAs.

Official Worksite for Pay Purposes: Generally, if the employee does not physically report to the official worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period, their duty station will change to the AWL and locality pay may be impacted. (5 CFR 531.605). An exception to this requirement is not appropriate in all time-limited situations as addressed above. If a supervisor has questions about the designation of the official worksite, they should consult their local telework coordinator or the national telework coordinator in the Office of Human Resources.

Dependent and Elder Care: Telework may be used as a flexibility to help employees with dependent or elder care responsibilities meet their family obligations and work responsibilities. However, it is not appropriate to use telework if the employee is unable to work due to dependent or elder care responsibilities. If dependent care or elder care would otherwise interrupt or interfere with the employee's work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWL, they must arrange for dependent or elder care. The employee must request leave or work schedule adjustments for periods when the employee is not able to work due to dependent or elder care responsibilities. If appropriate and an option, employees may also consider requesting an Alternative Work Schedule (i.e. flexible work schedule or a compressed work schedule) to provide additional assistance with meeting their biweekly work requirement. Work Schedules is addressed in a separate policy from telework, so employees should consult the agency's work schedules policy or applicable CBAs for more information.

Example 1: An employee has children in the home on a regular or situational telework day due to a school closure. Other than general oversight and occasional brief breaks to tend to family matters, the employee is able to complete work assignments during the daily tour of duty. Leave or work schedule adjustments aren't necessary.

Example 2: An employee has children in the home on a regular or situational telework day due to a school closure. One child needs more than minimal assistance with a school assignment during the employee's tour of duty. The employee will need to take leave or adjust their work schedule for the time they were unable to work.

Example 3: An employee requested a temporary AWL at their parent's residence so they can help their father provide assistance to their mother post-surgery. The employee may telework when not providing care for their mother and must take leave or adjust their work schedule when taking her to doctor appointments or caring for her when the father must run errands or needs a break during the employee's tour of duty.

Reasonable Accommodation under the Telework Program: Telework is an available way to accommodate qualified employees with disabilities under the agency's reasonable accommodation process. Employees seeking to telework as a reasonable accommodation should contact their immediate supervisor or the national or local reasonable accommodation coordinator. Employees teleworking as a reasonable accommodation will follow the general requirements contained in this policy to the extent such requirements are consistent with the reasonable accommodation. Employees must, at a minimum, submit a telework application, training certificate, and safety checklist. Employees approved to telework as a reasonable accommodation are required to have a valid, signed telework agreement.

EPA Continuity of Operations Plan: Telework is an important part of the agency's COOP. It enables employees to work from AWLs during emergencies such as a natural disaster, a terrorist attack, disruption to facilities or a pandemic health crisis. It is a key tool in continuing the agency's vital role in the federal government in the face of an emergency. In such an emergency, any employee—with or without a telework agreement—may be required to telework. (Note: during any period the EPA is operating under a COOP, the COOP shall supersede this policy.)

VII. PORTABLE WORK: DESIGNATING AND NOTIFYING EMPLOYEES

Although most positions may be suitable for telework, not all aspects of all jobs can be performed effectively at an AWL and therefore, be considered portable. Also, the portability of an employee's work can change over time due to project or mission needs. Each supervisor must identify the positions within their organization eligible for telework based on this policy and those not eligible, and notify each employee, including newemployees, of their eligibility to telework based on the portability of their work. Supervisors must use the notification memorandum (Appendix E) to notify employees of their ineligibility, if applicable. No notification is required if the employee is eligible to participate in telework. Supervisors are also responsible for working with their HR SSC to identify new positions or portions of positions eligible for telework and ensuring such designations are identified on position descriptions and in job announcements.

Work Suitable for Telework: Portable work performed at another location with equal effectiveness with respect to quality, quantity, timeliness, customer service, and other aspects of accomplishing the EPA's mission. Work suitable for telework depends on job content, rather than job series or title, type of appointment, or work schedule.

Employees may have some duties suitable for telework and others not suitable. For these employees, supervisors will need to determine how many days per pay period an employee is eligible to work at an AWL as part of regular telework.

Duties Not Suitable for Telework: Work that isn't portable can't be performed at another location with equal effectiveness. Examples of duties not suitable to be performed away from the agency worksite include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Requiring frequent in-person contact with the supervisor, colleagues, clients, or the general public in order to perform their job effectively. These duties cannot otherwise be achieved by e-mail, telephone, video calls, collaboration technology, or other electronic means;
- Accessing classified information or a classified installation [including those materials subject to a written policy, at the government, agency or organizational level, restricting use/access outside of a specific government installation or area within a government installation];
- Involving the construction, installation, maintenance, or repair of EPA facilities;
- Involving the physical protection of EPA facilities or employees; or
- Involving other physical presence/site-dependent activity (e.g., emissions testing, laboratory trials).

VIII. EMPLOYEE ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS

Basic Eligibility Requirements: An EPA employee may be authorized to telework if:

- The employee has sufficient portable work for the amount of telework requested;
- The telework arrangement does not create any impediment to the effective accomplishment of the employee's and their organization's work;
- The employee agrees to return to the agency worksite on a telework day if required to do so by their supervisor with at least 48 hours' notice;
- The employee continues to comply with the terms of their written and approved telework agreement; and
- Arrangements are in place for dependent/elder care, if dependent care or elder care would otherwise interrupt or interfere with the employee's work duties during the time the employee is working at an AWL.

Employees may not telework work if:

- The employee has been officially disciplined (i.e. a disciplinary action that results in the placement of a document in an employee's official personnel file) for being absent without permission for more than five days in any calendar year;
- The employee has any documented performance or conduct deficiencies related to telework within the preceding 12 months, such as letters of reprimand, or leave restrictions;
- The employee has been officially disciplined for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a federal government computer or while performing official federal government duties; or
- The employee has been officially disciplined for misuse of a government computer in the preceding 12 months.

XIX. TELEWORK TRAINING

Standardized training sessions for supervisors and employees will be jointly developed by the unions and management on the basics of telework to ensure a common understanding of its requirements. Participating employees must complete the agency-approved training and obtain a certificate of training before participation. The employee's record of the required training must be attached to the telework agreement. Supervisors or managers must also complete agency-approved telework training and obtain a certificate of training.

XX. ESTABLISHING THE TELEWORK AGREEMENT

Regular and Situational Telework: The following actions are to be taken when establishing a regular or situational telework agreement:

- The employee submits a completed application to their immediate supervisor;
- The employee and supervisor discuss the proposed telework agreement and the type of work to be completed by the employee at an AWL;
- If a suitable arrangement is reached, the employee completes the application/agreement, safety checklist and the required training. Once all requirements are completed, the telework agreement is signed and dated by the employee and supervisor;
 - A separate agreement for each telework episode is not necessary if the employee has signed an agreement to telework;
- Employees may request more than one AWL. Employees requesting to work at an alternate work location not previously approved must submit a telework agreement and checklist for the new location to the supervisor for approval.
- Employees are to obtain information and implement all procedures for accessing the secured operations of the agency worksite; and
- If the AWL is a telework center, arrangements must be made by the employee's organization to cover costs of using the center and to reserve a workstation for the employee.

Medical Telework: Medical telework may be authorized for up to 80 hours per pay period for up to 90 calendar days. After 90 calendar days, a medical telework agreement may be extended for additional 90-calendar day periods if the additional medical certification justifies such at each extension (i.e., every 90 calendar days).

The following actions are to be taken when establishing a medical telework agreement:

- The employee must submit a written statement from a licensed physician or other licensed healthcare practitioner:
 - Providing a description of the medical condition necessitating the telework arrangement;
 - Summarizing the prognosis, including the expected return-to-work date, and, as appropriate, discussing medical management—including how the temporary medical condition might interrupt the employee's work schedule;
 - Listing restrictions necessary for work performed at the AWL, if applicable;
 - Stating the employee is able to perform the duties of the position at an AWL; and
 - Describing the benefit to the employee's medical condition from working at an AWL, or the reduction of health risks to other employees, if any, derived from this arrangement.
 - Generally, the information provided will be sufficient for the supervisor to make a decision on the request for medical telework; however, management reserves the right to seek additional information if needed per 5 CFR § 339.102–104.
- Based on the employee's condition, the supervisor may grant the employee sick leave or approve a combination of sick leave and telework to cover the situation.
- Medical telework is appropriate for employees with non-work-compensable injuries. Employees with work compensable injuries will be managed under applicable workers' compensation regulations.

XXI. TELEWORK AGREEMENTS

The telework agreement covers the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement. It also constitutes an agreement by the employee to adhere to applicable guidelines and policies. The telework agreement includes items such as the voluntary nature of the arrangement; duration of the telework agreement; hours and days of duty at each work location; leave approval and requests for overtime and compensatory time; performance requirements; and proper use and safeguards of government property and records. When any significant aspect of the work agreement changes (e.g., position, work assignment, alternate work location, etc.), the employee and supervisor will reassess the employee's work in accordance with this policy to determine telework suitability and continued approval.

Employees may have a telework agreement that allows them to telework from an AWL part of their day and work in an official agency worksite part of their day (split-day) as long as they comply with relevant authorities on work schedules and leave.

Employees designated for COOP purposes may be required to telework, irrespective of telework status/agreement.

The supervisor must retain a copy of the signed telework agreement and a copy must be provided to the employee. A copy of the signed telework agreement must also be provided to the appropriate telework coordinator who is responsible for maintaining telework records in the organization.

XXII. TIME, ATTENDANCE AND OTHER MISCELLANEOUS ISSUES

Recording Telework Hours and Control of Time and Attendance: Proper recording, monitoring and certification of employee work time are critical to the success of the program. Employees are responsible for recording all telework time into the time and attendance system using the appropriate telework time reporting codes.

Telework Time Reporting Codes: The time reporting codes all teleworking employees must use to document and certify their work hours are provided below. There are separate TRCs for regular, situational/episodic, medical and unscheduled telework as well as for overtime telework and telework as a reasonable accommodation. EPA's approved TRCs are as follows:

- a. TMREG: Telework Medical Regular;
- b. TOHRW: Telework Overtime Hours;
- c. TWRAC: Telework for Reasonable Accommodation;
- d. TREGW: Telework Regular Hours;
- e. TWCTU: Telework Comp Time Used;
- f. TWCTE: Telework Comp Time Earned;
- g. TWEHR: Telework Episodic Hours (for situational/episodic); and
- h. TWUSH: Telework – Unscheduled.

Hours of Duty and Work Schedules: Employees who telework will maintain a single type of schedule (e.g., compressed, flexible work schedule) whether at the Official Agency Worksite or the AWL. Unstructured arrangements where employees work at the AWL without prior supervisory approval are not permitted. Employees should refer to the agency's work schedules policy or applicable CBA for more information.

Overtime during Telework - Eligibility Requirements: Just as at the Official Agency Worksite, overtime work conducted at an AWL must be approved in advance; overtime work not ordered and approved in advance by the supervisor, in writing, will not be compensated. Detailed information on overtime can be found in the EPA Pay Administration Manual (EPA Order 3155) and applicable CBAs.

Workers' Compensation: Employees who telework are covered by the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Federal Employees Compensation Act and qualify for continuation of pay for workers' compensation for injuries sustained while performing their official duties. For this reason, it is vital a specific AWL be approved in advance and adhered to by the employee.

The supervisor's signature on the request for compensation attests only to what the supervisor can reasonably know, specifically whether the event occurred at the agency worksite or at an AWL during official duty. Typically, supervisors or managers are not present when an employee sustains an injury. Employees, in all situations, bear responsibility for informing their immediate supervisor of an injury at the earliest time possible, seeking appropriate medical attention and filing the appropriate workers' compensation claim form.

Telework arrangements can also result in employees who are currently receiving continuation of pay or worker's compensation returning to work, thus taking them off the workers' compensation rolls. Supervisors may be able to find work such employees are able to perform at home or restructure existing work so some of it may be completed at home.

Requirement to Return to the Agency Worksite on a Scheduled Telework Day: Teleworking employees working at an AWL may be recalled to the Official Agency Worksite as a last resort to meet time-critical mission, staffing, and workload requirements that cannot be performed at the AWL and cannot be re-scheduled. Under these rare circumstances, the supervisor shall notify the employee as early as possible, but not less than 48 hours in advance, if they are subject to a recall to the Official Agency Worksite in an effort to provide the employee sufficient time to make necessary arrangements.

A supervisor may, on rare occasions, recall an employee to their Official Agency Worksite with fewer than 48 hours notice when the purpose of the recall is unforeseeable and essential for the agency to meet its mission.

If an employee is required to be at the Official Agency Worksite on a regularly scheduled telework day, the employee may request, and the supervisor may approve, a situational telework day in the pay period.

Monitoring Performance: GAO guidelines require agencies to establish a method providing the supervisor with reasonable assurance employees are working when scheduled. Appropriate management controls and reporting procedures must be in place before employees begin teleworking. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers shall be treated identically for the purposes of monitoring and assessing job performance by the following methods:

- i. Supervisory telephone calls, video calls, or e-mail messages to an employee during times the employee is scheduled to be on duty; and
- ii. Use of performance management systems, including regular workload/accomplishments reports for teleworking and non-teleworking employees, to determine reasonableness of work output for time spent, project schedules, key milestones, quality of the work performed, and team reviews.

Routine performance monitoring will not include use of video or audio recording of employee activities at their work stations, keystroke counting, or monitoring of “availability” status on Teams.

XXIII. EMERGENCIES: UNSCHEDULED TELEWORK/DISMISSALS/CLOSURES

Unscheduled Telework/Closures: In the event of an unexpected office closure, telework-ready employees already scheduled to telework on the closure day are required to do so. Telework-ready employees not scheduled to telework on the closure day but scheduled to work at the official duty location are required, in coordination with their supervisor, to utilize unscheduled telework to the maximum extent possible. If necessary, (e.g., there is insufficient portable work) the employee’s supervisor may grant an appropriate category of administrative leave (e.g., weather and safety) to cover all or a portion of the scheduled workday.

Employees who are required to work during their regular tour of duty on a day when federal offices are closed to the public (or during delayed arrivals or early dismissals) are not entitled to overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time off for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours. Employees reporting to an AWL other than the employee’s primary residence during the workweek will follow the closure or dismissal procedures of the AWL.

Late Arrivals/Early Dismissals at the Agency Worksite: When the agency announces early closure of or late arrival to the agency worksite, telework-ready employees already scheduled to telework on the early closure or late arrival day are required to telework their regularly scheduled non-overtime hours to the maximum extent possible. Telework-ready employees not scheduled to telework on the early closure or late arrival day will be required to utilize unscheduled telework to the maximum extent possible. If necessary (e.g., there is insufficient portable work), the employee’s supervisor may grant an appropriate category of administrative leave (e.g., weather and safety) for their regularly scheduled non-overtime hours when the agency worksite is closed. Early release for the holidays must be granted to those on telework to the same extent as granted to those employees working at the agency worksite.

Unscheduled Telework Announced: In the event the regular office/worksite is open, but there is an announcement of the option for unscheduled telework, telework-ready employees not otherwise scheduled to telework may telework, come into the regular office/worksite or use annual leave, credit hours, or other appropriate leave.

Other Emergencies or Disruptions to the Agency Worksite: In the event of a disruption to normal office operations (e.g., national or local emergency, emergency event involving inclement weather, or any situation with the potential to disrupt normal office operations), employees approved for regular and situational telework are expected to telework to the extent possible if instructed by the supervisor to do so. InCOOP situations, telework may be required.

General Provisions: It is recommended supervisors and employees coordinate in advance if there is an anticipated event with the potential to disrupt normal office operations to ensure employees have portable work and the necessary equipment to telework during a agency worksite closure to the extent possible.

As with scheduled telework, an employee performing unscheduled telework must have portable work to perform throughout the workday when teleworking. An employee who does not have enough portable work may report to the agency worksite if it is open; may contact their supervisor for additional work; may request annual leave, credit hours, or other appropriate leave; or may adjust their work schedule (if applicable).

When severe weather or other circumstances prevent work at the AWL (e.g., loss of electricity, employee must evacuate, infrastructure/connectivity and child/elder care issues) or there is a lack of portable work as determined by the supervisor, and the agency worksite is closed to employees, a telework-ready employee may be granted an appropriate category of administrative leave (e.g., weather and safety) by their supervisor.

XIV. MODIFICATION AND TERMINATION OF THE TELEWORK AGREEMENT

Telework is a voluntary program and not an employee entitlement. Employees who telework do not have an automatic right to continue teleworking. Telework agreements may be modified, adjusted or terminated at any time by management based upon an employee's failure to adhere to telework requirements or based upon any other consideration affecting employee eligibility under this policy. Telework agreements may also be modified, adjusted or terminated at any time when requested by the employee. Participation in telework will be terminated if the employee no longer meets the eligibility criteria. Before removing an employee from telework for performance or conduct issues, supervisors will complete the necessary processes to address the issues and consult their servicing labor and employee relations office for guidance.

Management shall provide sufficient notice (typically at least one full pay period when feasible) before terminating a telework agreement to allow the affected employee to make necessary arrangements. The reason for termination will be documented, signed by the supervisor, manager and/or approving official, and furnished to the affected employee and the servicing labor and employee relations office. The servicing labor and employee relations office will notify the president of any applicable union of the name of the employee and the reason(s) for the termination. Consent or acknowledgement via signature by the affected employee is not required for the termination of telework to take effect. An employee whose telework agreement was terminated may re-apply for telework.

When any significant aspect of an employee's work changes (e.g., position, work assigned, AWL), the supervisor will reassess the portability and suitability of employee's work for continued telework approval.

An employee may withdraw an application for telework, or terminate an approved telework agreement, at any time without prejudice, and return to the agency worksite. The employee must notify the supervisor in writing, and the supervisor should in turn acknowledge the employee's notice in writing, to prevent misunderstandings about work location.

XV. REPORTING

As OPM and other federal organizations seek telework reports, the agency's TMO and agency telework coordinator will serve as the primary liaisons between EPA, OPM and other federal organizations. EPA's telework coordinator will serve as the agency's central coordinating point and will work with telework coordinators across the agency to prepare comprehensive telework information.

XVI. FACILITIES AND EQUIPMENT

Alternative Work Location Office Space: Requirements will vary depending on the nature of the work and the equipment needed to perform the work. At a minimum, employees should have adequate internet speed and be able to easily access the intranet, agency systems, communicate by telephone, email and established collaboration tools (currently Microsoft O365 suite) with the supervisor, coworkers and serviced clients when working from their AWL. In addition, employees are responsible for verifying and ensuring their work areas comply with health and safety requirements (see the "Employee Self-Certification Safety Checklist"). Home work areas must be clean and free of obstructions, and free of hazardous materials. An employee's request to telework may be disapproved or rescinded based on documented safety problems or the presence of hazardous materials.

A supervisor or designated safety official may inspect the AWL for compliance with health and safety requirements in the very rare circumstance that this may be deemed appropriate. The need for a scheduled site visit by the supervisor or designated safety official to the employee's AWL during work hours may occur only in very rare circumstances where an employee's compliance with health and safety requirements raises reasonable concerns substantiating the need, and only after the supervisor receives concurrence from the servicing LER specialist or other human resources official and provides notice to the employee's representative union, if applicable.

Agency Worksite Space Sharing: If management seeks to implement any space-saving initiatives, they will notify the unions and bargain to the extent required by CBAs, local agreements, applicable law, rule and regulation. Such space-saving options will be based on space availability and may include shared workstations, smaller workstations or unassigned touchdown/hoteling situations.

If an employee ceases to telework, the employee will be assigned to an office space similar or equivalent to the office they had before any space-saving initiatives were implemented.

Government-Furnished Equipment: The agency is under no obligation to provide GFE to its employees solely for the purpose of teleworking, but most employees will receive a government-issued laptop at a minimum. Supervisors may authorize the purchase and distribution of additional equipment or supplies (e.g. printers, printer cartridges, monitor, etc.) for the individual teleworker where legally permissible, as necessary, and if budget permits.

Employees who have an agency-issued laptop or mobile phone assigned to them may use such equipment while teleworking and shall take reasonable safeguards against theft and damage when they do so.

All agency-issued equipment and supplies remain the property of the agency and the EPA remains responsible for service and maintenance of the equipment. The EPA is also under no obligation to service or maintain equipment belonging to the employee, even if the employee uses it for agency work.

If an employee furnishes their own equipment/workstation at the AWL, the government will not reimburse the employee for the purchasing costs of the equipment/workstation. In addition, the employee is responsible for the maintenance, repair and replacement of privately-owned equipment. The agency will not reimburse the employee for such costs, including broadband.

The EPA may not reimburse employees for the utility costs (e.g., heating, air conditioning, lighting and the operation of government-furnished computers) for AWLs. Utility costs include the monthly service charges for telephone or specific telephone charges. Teleworking employees should use agency meeting and conferencing tools, communication options like EC-500, or government-issued mobile phones to conduct official government business with customers and contacts in other locations. The agency will also not reimburse employees for miscellaneous office supplies. Employees requiring pens, paper, paper clips, notebooks, printer cartridges, etc., may use the supplies provided by the agency; however, there should be no expectation of reimbursement for items purchased or for the agency to ship goods to an employee's AWL.

For employees working at an AWL outside of the LCA, the agency is responsible for service and maintenance of GFE. In cases where GFE needs repair and upgrade, the agency will make all reasonable efforts to initiate repairs and upgrades remotely. However, should on-site assistance be required, employees must either return to their agency worksite or make other arrangements with their supervisor to ensure repairs and upgrades can be made expeditiously. In consultation with the employee, supervisors or managers will make determinations over questions such as the employee's duty status, appropriate work assignments and potential temporary equipment during the interim period between when repairs and upgrades are required and when they are completed.

Note: Consistent with the agency's Records Management Policy, official agency business should first and foremost be done on official EPA information systems. The Federal Records Act prohibits the creation or sending of a federal record using a non-EPA electronic messaging account unless the individual creating or sending the record either: (1) copies their EPA email account at the time of initial creation or transmission of the record, or (2) forwards a complete copy of the record to their EPA email account within 20 days of the original creation or transmission of the record.

XVII. INFORMATION SECURITY

The EPA CIO issues and maintains information security directives for protecting EPA information and information systems to include when users are teleworking and accessing systems remotely. These directives outline the responsibilities of each program office, region or other organization, and users in protecting EPA systems and information. Other pertinent supporting information security directives may be issued by users' program offices, regions or other organizations.

Users agree their responsibilities, described in the agency's information security directives, apply while on telework status. Teleworkers must minimize security risks to all agency information and systems.

The AWL workplace and workstation and other devices used with agency information must be configured to ensure all agency information in any form or format is properly protected at all times and in accordance with all agency directives.

XVIII. RECORDS MANAGEMENT

When working at an AWL, agency employees must continue to comply with the agency's records management policy and any other applicable policies related to using, creating, maintaining and disposing of records. Employees shall also comply with the Federal Records Act, Freedom of Information Act, the terms of any litigation hold, discovery in litigation and any requests for records by the Office of the Inspector General. Any record removed from the agency worksite for telework assignments remains the property of the agency and any information generated from telework assignments is the property of the agency. Employees are responsible for maintaining the integrity of their records and for producing records on demand.

Disposal of Telework Program Records: EPA Records Schedule 0039, Alternate Worksite Records, authorizes the disposal of records related to requests or applications to participate in an alternate worksite program (i.e., telework). This includes agreements between the agency and an employee, records relating to the safety of the worksite, the installation and use of equipment, hardware and software, and the use of secure, classified information or data subject to the Privacy Act.

XIX. POLICY UPDATING PROVISION

In accordance with the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, this provision authorizes the assistant administrator of OMS, who has been re-delegated management authority for the agency's directives system, the ability to independently update the agency telework policy as required by other relevant federal organizations, including, but not limited to, the Office of Management and Budget, OPM, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the National Archives and Records Administration, and the GSA. The AA for OMS may also re-delegate the authority to update the policy to the director of the Office of Human Resources. This authority also may be re-delegated further as appropriate.

XX. WAIVER

Any request to waive the requirements of this policy must be submitted in writing by the AA/RA (or designee) and approved by the OMS AA (or designee).

WORK ENVIRONMENT IMPLEMENTATION DATA CALL

January 18, 2024

OMB issued its Organizational Health and Performance Memorandum (M-23-15) last spring as guidance for agencies as they re-evaluate their work environment posture to increase in-person presence while optimizing organizational health and performance. As the White House Chief of Staff and OMB have continued to emphasize in the Cabinet, PMC, and other forums, it is essential for agency leaders to be paying close attention to implementation progress and ensuring that updated Work Environment policies are having the intended impact.

In line with M-23-15, OMB requests that agencies that are still implementing in-person presence goals respond to this implementation data call outlining all remaining steps that the agency will take to reach intended work environment postures.

Agencies should provide:

- (1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).
- (2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.
- (3) Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

Request. Please send a written update that answers these questions. Agencies may provide additional detail or narrative on top of these answers. Responses are due via email to futureofwork@omb.eop.gov no later than January 26, 2024.

Work Environment Implementation Data Call Response

1. Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

GSA is currently operating in a steady state with respect to in-person objectives, while closely monitoring organizational performance and health metrics – as well as shifts by our customers – to ensure continued high levels of mission delivery and customer satisfaction. Eligible employees at GSA worked with their supervisors to establish schedules for telework in alignment with their designated position category and to update Telework and Remote Work Agreements accordingly. Employees are scheduled to undergo a Telework and Remote Work Agreement Recertification Process this spring, where agreements will be reviewed for accuracy and approved by direct supervisors.

2. Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

GSA's Work Environment Council is continuing to evaluate and strengthen the agency's current set of Organizational Health and Performance Measures. The Council and GSA Leadership review these metrics on a quarterly basis and identify opportunities for improvement when measures do not meet intended targets.

The Council is also committed to GSA's ability to attract and retain top talent, effectively train staff and supervisors, and actively promote organizational health in the hybrid environment. The Workforce Planning working group is performing preliminary assessments of our hybrid onboarding and training processes to ensure our employees are equipped to succeed in a hybrid environment. Additionally, evaluations are underway to test various strategies, such as core days and onsite immersion programs, aimed at strengthening meaningful in-person experience.

3. Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

GSA uses a full complement of information sources to track employee work status and compliance with communicated policies. This includes our time and attendance system, payroll system data, and badge-swipe data (where available). Supervisors across GSA have been instructed to monitor staff adherence to Telework and Remote Work Agreements each pay period when approving time and leave. Telework Agreement Audits are performed on a quarterly basis to identify incorrect use of time codes, improper duty stations and transit benefits errors. We are continuing to evaluate any gaps in compliance to diagnose and resolve as needed.

DRAFT and DELIBERATIVE

U.S. General Services Administration (GSA)

GSA Order: Telework and Remote Work Policy
HRM 6040.1C
Office of Human Resources Management gsatelework@gsa.gov

Purpose:

This Order issues and transmits General Services Administration (GSA) policy governing the use of telework and remote work.

Background:

Based on the provisions of Public Law No. 111-292, known as the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, as amended by the Administrative Leave Act of 2016, this policy provides guidelines for implementation of telework and remote work within GSA.

Applicability:

This Order applies to all GSA employees in the performance of their duties, except for the employees in the following independent offices within GSA:

1. The Office of Inspector General. The Office of Inspector General (OIG) has independent personnel authority. See Section 6 of the Inspector General Act of 1978, (5 U.S.C. App. 3), as amended (Inspector General is authorized "to select, appoint, and employ such officers and employees as may be necessary for carrying out the functions, powers, and duties of the Office of Inspector General") and GSA Order ADM P 5450.39D GSA Delegations of Authority Manual (Delegations Manual), Chapter 2, Part 1 ("the Inspector General has independent authority to formulate policies and make determinations concerning human capital issues within the [OIG]" and GSA determinations/delegations do not limit that authority). Similarly, GSA specifically recognizes that the Inspector General has independent authority to formulate policies and make determinations concerning training, employee development, and career management; and
2. The Civilian Board of Contract Appeals. This policy applies to the Civilian Board of Contract Appeals (CBCA) only to the extent that the CBCA determines it is consistent with the CBCA's independent authority under the Contract Disputes Act and it does not conflict with other CBCA policies or the CBCA mission.

Cancelation:

This Order supersedes HRM 6040.1B, GSA Telework and Remote Work Policy dated December 21, 2021.

Summary of Changes:

This Order incorporates the GSA's Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) policy, including DETO definitions, responsibilities and timelines.

Roles and Responsibilities:

1. The Office of Human Resources (OHRM) is responsible for ensuring the order is carried out in accordance with applicable laws, regulations, and bargaining obligations.

1. Introduction

1.1. GSA recognizes telework and remote work as strategic management tools and workplace flexibilities for attracting, retaining, and engaging talent and accomplishing organizational goals.

1.2. GSA continues to assume a leadership role in support of telework and remote work to fully enable GSA to meet its mission. Telework and remote work are critical to:

- a. Performance-based business outcomes for individuals, work teams, and organizations;
- b. Continuity planning;
- c. Sustainability;
- d. Recruitment and retention;
- e. Employee engagement; and
- f. Work/life balance.

1.3. GSA supports the use of telework and remote work to the extent that it is consistent with the business needs of the organization and the individual work requirements of the employee.

1.4. This policy is designed to facilitate agency, organizational, and individual performance by providing the structure needed for effective implementation of telework and remote work for GSA. Successful telework and remote work requires communication and collaboration between employees, their supervisors, and affected work groups. Each has responsibilities for successful implementation and related performance outcomes. Organizations must ensure compliance with the provisions of this policy, support of agency guidance, and fulfillment of applicable labor relations obligations.

1.5. Telework and remote work are not an entitlement or right of individual employees.

1.6. Telework and remote work are established to facilitate the accomplishment of work, while balancing the needs of the workforce.

1.7. Heads of Services and Staff Offices make position categorization determinations to align the workforce to the mission.

1.8. Supervisors are responsible for making determinations in regard to telework and remote work participation, work schedules, and frequency, with consideration for individual, team, and position categorization requirements, as stated in paragraph 4.6.a.

1.9. Employees are responsible for accomplishment of work pursuant to their performance plans, and for appropriately using telework and remote work, as stated in paragraph 6.1.

1.10. The use of telework and remote work by GSA employees is restricted to the United States and its territories and possessions only. The only possible exceptions are if a GSA employee is serving on an overseas tour or working under an approved Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas (DETO) agreement.

3. Definitions

3.1. Agency Worksite. The regular worksite associated with the employee's position of record; the physical address or place where the employee would work if not teleworking or working remotely. The agency worksite is generally considered a centralized location of an employee's assigned organization.

3.2. Appropriate Alternative Worksite. A worksite other than the agency worksite, typically the employee's residence, that supports work and provides appropriate information technology (IT) connectivity and security precautions in support of the work.

3.3. Commuting Area. Pursuant to 5 CFR 550.703, the commuting area is defined as the geographic area surrounding a worksite that encompasses the localities where people live and reasonably can be expected to travel back and forth daily to work, as established by the employing agency based on the generally-held expectations of the local community.

3.4. Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas \(DETO\). U.S. Government Civil Service employee assigned to a domestic position, teleworking from an overseas location for a limited period of time. Although the domestic employee is not assigned or detailed to the overseas location, the DETO's duty station is temporarily changed to reflect the overseas alternate worksite for the duration of the DETO arrangement.

- a. Independent DETO. An employee not included on Orders of a U.S. Government sponsoring employee. GSA policy prohibits independent DETOs, because of the security risks and the associated costs to the agency involved.
- b. Sponsored DETO. An employee who is the spouse of a sponsoring employee assigned overseas. A sponsored DETO is covered by the U.S. Government orders of the sponsoring employee.
- c. Sponsoring Employee. Either 1) A Civil Service employee, who is, or will be, assigned (not temporary duty, i.e., TDY) to a U.S. mission abroad under Chief of Mission (COM) authority or an office of the American Institute in Taiwan, or 2) a DoD employee or uniformed service member who is or will be assigned (not TDY) to a military base or U.S. mission abroad.

3.5. Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) Agreement. An official agreement documenting the terms and conditions of the DETO arrangement.

3.6. Emergency Employees. Employees who are expected to report to their worksite or begin telework (as permitted) on time unless otherwise directed by GSA. Emergency employees should be designated and notified in advance on an annual basis.

3.7. Emergency Situation. An event, incident, or circumstance that interrupts or compromises operations at, or travel to or from, the agency worksite or appropriate alternative worksite. This may include a range of situations including, but not limited to: civil disruptions, inclement weather and associated travel conditions, national security situations, natural disaster, public health emergencies, power outages, unusual traffic situations, water main breaks, or other incidents where access to the agency worksite or appropriate alternative worksite is compromised.

Emergency situations also include, but are not limited to, circumstances that result in an official operating status announcement that permits unscheduled telework, as defined in this policy and outlined annually in GSA Dismissal and Closure Procedures, based upon the guidelines published by the Office of Personnel Management's (OPM') Governmentwide Dismissal and Closure Procedures. Information Technology (IT) incident response is addressed within Incident Response (IR) [CIO IT Security 01-02]. For clarification, emergency situations and continuity events can be found within ADM 2430.1A The U.S. General Services Administration Continuity Program and ADM 2430.3 The U.S. General Services

Administration Emergency Management Program.

3.8. Mobile Work. Work that is characterized by the regular travel to and from work in customer locations or designated worksites as opposed to an agency worksite. Mobile work may consist of work such as: site audits, site inspections, and investigations. It is distinguished from telework in that the work being done by the employee is specific to a designated worksite or location. Mobile work may be combined with telework.

3.9. Official Worksite/Duty Station. Pursuant to the OPM definition, and as set forth in 5 CFR 531.605, the official worksite is the location where the employee regularly performs their official work duties. Changes in an employee’s official worksite may affect the employee’s pay and/or travel funding responsibilities and must be processed by the servicing Human Resources Office. Designating the official worksite is determined on a case-by-case basis using the following decision matrix:

Employee	Official Worksite/Duty Station
Scheduled to report physically at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis	Agency worksite for the employee’s position—the place where the employee would normally work if not teleworking
Not scheduled to report at least twice each biweekly pay period to the agency worksite (includes remote workers)	Appropriate alternative worksite (except in certain temporary duty situations)
Scheduled to report to varied work locations on a recurring basis (mobile work), and who does not report at least twice each biweekly pay period to the agency worksite	Agency worksite, as long as the employee is performing work within the same geographic area (established for the purpose of a given pay entitlement) as the agency worksite

3.10. Personally Identifiable Information (PII). PII can be used to distinguish or trace an individual’s identity, either alone or when combined with other information that is linked or linkable to a specific individual as defined in OMB Circular A-130. (See GSA’s PII policy at insite.gsa.gov/pii)

3.11. Position Categorization. Heads of Services and Staff Offices categorize positions based upon each position’s duties and business requirements. Positions are aligned into one of the following categories:

- a. Onsite Required. Positions with job functions that must be executed at an agency worksite on a daily/regular basis. The official duty station is an agency worksite.
- b. Onsite Flexible. Positions with job functions that must be executed within specific geographic locations. The official duty station is usually an agency worksite or an appropriate alternative worksite (typically the employee's home).
- c. Offsite. Positions with job functions that do not need to be executed within a specific geographic location and can be executed without reporting to an agency worksite. The official duty station is typically the employee's home.

3.12. Remote Work. Work performed on a full-time basis by an employee who does not report to the agency worksite at least two times a pay period on a regular and recurring basis (e.g., employee works from home full-time). Remote Work must be recorded in GSA's electronic time and attendance system.

3.13. Remote Worker. An employee who teleworks on a full-time basis and does not report to the agency worksite at least two times a pay period on a regular and recurring basis (e.g., employee works from home full-time). A remote worker's official worksite/duty station is an appropriate alternative worksite, typically the employee's home.

3.14. Telework. A work flexibility or arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position from an approved alternative worksite (typically their home), rather than an agency worksite.

Telework does not include:

- a. Any part of work performed while on temporary duty official travel (i.e., the Federal Travel Regulations (41 CFR Part 301) and GSA travel policy, GSA Order 5700.1B OAS, take precedence over telework policy);
- b. Work performed while commuting to and from an agency worksite; or
- c. Mobile work as defined above (including site audits, site inspections, and investigations).

3.15. Telework-Ready Employee. An employee with an approved telework agreement that identifies the employee as both eligible to telework (whether on a remote work, routine, or situational basis, and regardless of the employee's choice to telework or decline telework), and having the appropriate IT tools and equipment, which includes the completion of the necessary training, to telework.

3.16. Types of telework. GSA employees may participate in emergency, routine, or situational telework. For timekeeping purposes, employees are required to designate individual instances of telework participation as emergency, routine, or situational, as defined below.

- a. Emergency telework. Emergency telework is telework performed in response to an authorized emergency situation, as outlined in paragraph 3.7. Examples of emergency telework include unscheduled telework (see paragraph 3.17) (a) in response to an operating status announcement based on weather or other conditions, as outlined in GSA's Dismissal and Closure Procedures, or (b) at the discretion of the GSA Administrator, according to current GSA policies. Instances of emergency telework must be recorded in GSA's electronic time and attendance system.
- b. Routine telework. Telework performed as part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular schedule. Instances of routine telework must be recorded in GSA's electronic time and attendance system.
- c. Situational telework. Telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked are not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular telework schedule. Examples of situational telework include telework to accommodate scheduling issues such as appointments or special work assignments away from the office. Situational telework is sometimes also referred to as episodic, intermittent, or ad-hoc telework. Instances of situational telework must be approved by the supervisor and recorded in GSA's electronic time and attendance system.

3.17. Unscheduled telework. A form of telework that allows employees to telework without previous supervisory approval in response to specific announcements by OPM or local agency authorizing officials regarding approved emergency situations as outlined in paragraph 3.7. This form of telework allows for continuity of operations during approved emergency operations. (See guidance on the use of unscheduled telework in GSA Dismissal and Closure Procedures.) Instances of unscheduled telework are considered emergency telework and must be recorded as such in GSA's electronic time and attendance system.

3.18. Weather and Safety Leave. The Administrative Leave Act of 2016 (the Act), created four new categories of leave, including weather and safety leave (5 U.S.C. 6329c). The Act provides Federal agencies with the authority to “approve the provision of leave to an employee or a group of employees without loss or reduction in the pay of the employee or employees, leave to which the employee or employees are otherwise entitled, or credit to the employee or employees for time or service only if the employee or group of employees is prevented from safely traveling to, or performing work at, an approved location due to: (1) an act of God; (2) a terrorist attack; or (3) another condition that prevents the employee or group of employees from safely traveling to or performing work at an approved location.”

- a. Weather and safety leave will not be provided to a telework-ready employee who is not prevented from working safely at an appropriate alternative worksite.
- b. GSA may consider providing weather and safety leave to a telework-ready employee in exceptional situations, including: (a) when in the agency’s judgment the telework-ready employee could not have reasonably anticipated the emergency condition and does not have the necessary equipment at the appropriate alternative worksite, or (b) when the home or other appropriate alternative worksite of a telework- ready employee is also affected by the event such that the employee is prevented from safely teleworking there (such as a power or Internet service outage).

4. Responsibilities

The following officials and components are responsible for administering this policy in accordance with the appropriate statutes and regulations:

4.1. Telework Managing Officer (TMO) will:

- a. Advocate telework;
- b. Develop and implement policy related to agency telework programs;
- c. Provide expertise and guidance to agency leadership;
- d. Serve as the primary senior level agency point of contact for OPM on telework matters; and
- e. Serve as a resource for managers and employees on telework matters.

4.2. Agency Telework Coordinator will:

- a. Serve as a point of contact with OPM and provide advocacy, implementation support, and data collection on implementation of this policy, at the agency level;
- b. Serve as a resource for managers and employees on telework matters.
- c. Provide information to and receive support from the TMO.
- d. Manage the Telework and Remote Work Program mailbox.

4.3. Local Telework Coordinators will:

- a. Serve as points of contact providing advocacy, local telework implementation support, and data collection on implementation of this policy, at the Regional, Service, or Staff Office level;
- b. Provide information to and receive support from the agency telework coordinator and the TMO.

4.4. Office of Human Resources Management (OHRM) will:

- a. Ensure that all GSA employees and supervisors are aware of the opportunity for telework and the parameters for implementing telework as outlined in this policy, for new and current employees;
- b. Provide guidance, support, and evaluation to support fair and consistent implementation of this policy;
- c. Provide training for employees and supervisors; and
- d. Administer internal controls including reporting to ensure compliance with this policy.

4.5. Heads of Services and Staff Offices (HSSOs) will:

- a. Have the delegated authority to implement telework within their organizations in accordance with this policy;
- b. Delegate this authority further if required.

4.6. Supervisors will:

- a. Meet with the employee to share position categorization and obtain input on telework and/or remote work participation, as applicable;
- b. Make final determinations in regard to telework schedules and remote work participation in alignment with position categorization;
- c. Prepare a plan, in collaboration with the employee, for returning the employee to telework eligibility when telework is denied or suspended on a temporary basis, based on such reasons as outlined in paragraph 7.2;
- d. Ensure that all new employees complete the following:
 - i. Required telework training; and
 - ii. Submit appropriate agreement in the GSA-approved telework and remote work agreement system within 60 calendar days of entrance on duty;
- e. Ensure that all employees complete the required biennial refresher training;
- f. Approve the appropriate agreements in the GSA-approved telework and remote work agreement system, by:
 - i. Reviewing and discussing submitted telework and remote work agreements within 20 calendar days of their submission;
 - ii. Ensuring that the telework and remote work agreements reflect the arrangement, are modified and re-submitted as necessary, and are approved within 30 calendar days of the original submission; and
 - iii. Ensuring that employee participation in telework and/or remote work is suspended in the event an approved telework and/or remote work agreement is not in place.
- g. Treat all employees (whether teleworking, working remotely or not) the same in actions involving managerial discretion, including but not limited to:

- i. Equitable distribution of assignments among all employees in the work unit;
 - ii. Manage and evaluate each employee's performance consistently and in alignment with GSA's performance management policy and the performance expectations identified in their performance plan; and
 - iii. Use appropriate work tracking and communication tools. GSA will not determine, at the agency level, specific communications practices, but encourages individual organizations to consider what types of communication work best in support of individual and organizational performance, utilizing the many tools available to GSA employees;
- h. Ensure that all work locations support individual, team, and organizational performance, as part of overall performance management. This includes the authority to deny an employee's selection of an appropriate alternative worksite if, in the supervisor's opinion, the selected location is not business-appropriate and/or fails to provide a working environment compliant with the conditions outlined in paragraph 3.2 of this policy;
- i. Work with all employees to ensure that work locations do not place a burden or hardship on other employees;
 - j. Review and approve time and attendance information submitted by employees or timekeepers to ensure its accuracy, including the correct coding of telework and remote work participation in accordance with GSA's Time & Leave Administration Policy;
 - k. Review transit subsidy applications submitted by employees to ensure they accurately reflect telework participation and work schedule; and
 - l. Manage work in accordance with the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA).

4.7. Employees will:

- a. Accomplish work assigned regardless of work location;
- b. Understand that telework and remote work are in fact an official duty status, and that all employment rules remain in effect;

- c. Provide input to supervisor on the telework schedule and/or remote work participation based on position categorization;
- d. Adhere to the mutually agreed upon decisions on telework participation, schedules, and frequency, and the terms of the approved telework agreement;
- e. Adhere to the mutually agreed upon decisions on remote work participation and the terms of the approved remote work agreement;
- f. Complete mandatory biennial telework refresher training, regardless of their eligibility for telework or decision to telework or decline to telework. Failure to complete biennial telework training will result in discontinuation of telework until such training is completed. New employees must complete mandatory telework training within 60 calendar days of their entrance on duty;
- g. Submit the appropriate agreement in the GSA-approved telework and remote work agreement system, on a biennial basis, regardless of eligibility for telework or decision to telework or decline to telework;
- h. Submit a telework and/or remote work agreement in the GSA-approved telework and remote work agreement system within 60 calendar days of entrance on duty;
- i. Revise and resubmit telework and remote work agreements in the GSA-approved telework and remote work agreement system to reflect any changes requested by supervisor, so that the supervisor is able to approve the agreement;
- j. Submit updated telework and/or remote work agreements in the GSA-approved telework and remote work agreement system to reflect changes that occur prior to the biennial recertification, including change in position, organization, and/or duty station;
- k. Safeguard secure materials, including PII, in accordance with Office of Management and Budget (OMB) M-06-19 and GSA Privacy Act Program;
- l. Ensure that the appropriate alternative worksite provides appropriate information technology (IT) connectivity and security infrastructure in support of the work;

- m. Acknowledge that supervisors retain the authority to deny an employee's selection of a particular alternative worksite location if, in the supervisor's opinion, the selected location is not business-appropriate and/or fails to provide a working environment compliant with the conditions outlined in paragraph 3.2 of this policy. Any changes in the alternative worksite location, whether temporary or permanent, must be approved by the supervisor;
- n. Meet individual, team, and organizational requirements, including but not limited to all requirements regarding communication, accessibility, and collaboration, as required by the supervisor;
- o. Maintain flexibility and responsiveness to the needs or requirements of the supervisor, employing organization, work team, and customers. As with all work, employees are accountable for required individual contributions to the efforts of their work team, and must communicate and collaborate as appropriate or directed with team members, ensuring that telework supports the work of the team and does not result in diminished individual, group/team, or organizational performance;
- p. Report to the agency worksite, or other required location, pursuant to agency needs, for all or part of the workday during which they would otherwise telework or work remotely, as required by management;
 - i. Instances of canceled or interrupted telework require appropriate advance notice to the employee, as outlined in the telework agreement. Such instances do not:
 - 1. Constitute a termination of the telework arrangement, or
 - 2. Entitle the employee to a "replacement" or "in lieu of" telework day.
 - ii. Prior to approval of the telework or remote work agreement, the employee and supervisor should discuss how much advance notice is appropriate. The discussion should consider individual circumstances, including the travel distance, commute time, and availability of public transit. The GSA-approved telework and remote work agreement system will "default" to a 2-hour advance notice unless otherwise updated by the supervisor;
- q. Understand & act in accordance with the GSA Dismissal and Closure Procedures, to include:
 - i. Being familiar with operating status announcements;

- ii. Preparing and planning ahead, including taking necessary equipment such as laptops to the appropriate alternative worksite, when severe weather or other emergency situation can be anticipated;
 - iii. Notifying the supervisor of employee status when an operating status announcement is made; and
 - iv. Accurately reporting and accounting for work time in GSA's electronic time and leave administration system;
- r. Accurately record telework and remote work participation in GSA's electronic time and leave administration system, or ensure that timekeepers accurately record participation based on local timekeeping procedures;
- s. Ensure individual application for transit subsidy accurately reflects telework participation and work schedule. Applications must reflect anticipated telework days and not include requests for transit subsidy for those days. Remote workers are not eligible for participation in GSA's Transit Subsidy Program;
- t. Work with supervisors to ensure that no work, regardless of the location from which it is performed, will place added burdens or hardship on other employees; and
- u. Follow established office practices, agency policies, and laws for requesting and obtaining approval of leave, overtime, or any change to the work schedule.

5. Union Representative

5.1. Union representatives who telework or work remotely while performing union activities are responsible for adhering to applicable policies and negotiated agreements consistent with their performance of union activities at the agency or appropriate alternative worksite.

6. Eligibility

6.1. Employees are eligible to telework and/or receive approval for remote work pursuant to position categorization, without diminished individual, team, or organization performance, with the exceptions outlined in subparagraph 6.2 below. Supervisors are required to make telework determinations based on appropriate business needs.

6.2. In certain specific situations based on the criteria below, the following positions or employees may be identified as ineligible for telework:

- a. Employees in positions that require, on a daily (every work day) basis,:
 - i. Direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by HSSOs or designees. Secure materials are those materials:
 1. For which there exists a written policy (at the government, agency, or organizational level) restricting the use/access outside of a specific government installation or area within a government installation; and/or
 2. For which appropriate mitigating IT security measures do not exist and which may also include PII.
 - ii. Onsite work activity that cannot be handled remotely or at an appropriate alternative worksite, e.g., positions that are full-time customer-facing positions.
 - iii. In emergency or other unforeseen situations, an employee in such a position as defined in 6.2(a)(i) and 6.2(a)(ii) may be authorized to telework to the extent possible without accessing secure materials. This may include other duties as assigned including, but not limited to, self-paced and/or online training.
- b. Employees will be identified as ineligible for telework and remote work under any circumstance for conduct resulting in the employee being officially disciplined (i.e., a warning, reprimand, suspension, or removal) for:
 - i. Being absent without leave (AWOL) for more than five (5) days in any calendar year (by statute); or
 - ii. Violating subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch; or
 - iii. Viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.
- c. Employees disciplined for conduct identified in paragraph 6.2(b) are ineligible for telework under any circumstances, including emergency situations such as continuity activation. In such cases the employee must report to their regular official agency worksite or, with supervisory approval, be provided with alternative officing in an agency location or, if neither is feasible, placed on administrative leave until such time as official alternative officing in an agency or other Federal location is available.

7. Denials, Suspensions, or Limitations

7.1. Supervisors are responsible for making final determinations regarding employee participation in telework that are consistent with individual performance, team, and organizational work requirements. This includes alternative work schedules (AWS), telework and/or remote work.

7.2. Supervisors may deny, suspend, or limit telework and/or remote work participation for individual employees on a permanent or temporary basis based on business needs that include, but are not limited to:

- a. Business and/or customer requirements, including appropriate office coverage;
- b. Lack of employee responsiveness/accountability while teleworking and/or working remotely;
- c. Receipt of final disciplinary action (i.e., warning, reprimand, suspension, or removal) within the past calendar year;
- d. Telework has been demonstrated to have resulted in diminished individual, work team, or organizational performance;
- e. Disciplinary action for time and attendance issues and/or AWOL (of less than 5 days) within the past calendar year;
- f. Ineffective supervisory management of subordinate staff. Supervisors should consult with their servicing employee relations specialist when making determinations regarding denial, suspension, or limitation of telework participation.

7.3. When the denial, suspension, or limitation of telework is anticipated to be on a temporary basis, the supervisor, in consultation with their servicing employee relations specialist and the employee, must prepare and document a plan designed to improve the telework-related performance.

7.4. The limitations on eligibility even in emergency or other unforeseen situations set forth in paragraph 6 are not intended to constitute an exhaustive listing of all of the possible reasons for limiting, temporarily suspending, or restricting telework.

8. Recruitment

8.1. All GSA job announcements must indicate whether the position is eligible for telework, based on the criteria in paragraph 3.11. If a position is categorized as "Offsite," the vacancy announcement must indicate whether the official worksite/duty location is:

- a. Negotiable after the selection (i.e., official worksite/duty location is the residence of the selectee), or
- b. Must be in one of several potential official worksites/duty stations (for example, a regional office city).

If (8.1.b), the potential official worksites/duty stations must be listed in the announcement. The selectee's worksite/duty location must be one of the listed locations and may not be altered after a selection is made.

8.2. A request by the selected employee to initiate a new remote work agreement at a different official worksite/duty station may not be considered until the employee has been in the position at the original worksite/duty station for a minimum of 90 calendar days.

9. Telework

9.1. General Terms.

- a. Telework is voluntary except in certain emergency situations. Employees are usually not required to telework. An exception to this may be in response to emergency situations as defined in paragraph 3.7 and outlined in paragraph 6.2. Eligible employees (see paragraph 6) may:
 - i. Choose to telework;
 - ii. Decline to telework (except in specific emergency situations);

- iii. Select the appropriate alternative worksite(s) from which to telework in accordance with paragraph 3.2; and
 - iv. Be required to telework in the event of an emergency or other unforeseen situation that prevents access to the agency worksite as outlined in paragraph 6.2.
- b. The appropriateness of telework and the frequency of telework is based upon a mutually agreed upon decision between the supervisor and the employee.
 - c. Telework is work time (i.e., hours of duty) and is not to be used for any purposes other than performance of official duties.
 - d. For covered positions, work must be supervised in accordance with the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA).
 - e. Telework hours must be documented correctly, using the appropriate telework code in GSA's electronic time and attendance system. Hours teleworked must be recorded as outlined in the definition of "types of telework" in paragraph 3.16.

9.2. Telework in emergency situations/use of unscheduled telework.

- a. GSA's Dismissal and Closure Procedures are consistent with OPM's Governmentwide Dismissal and Closure Procedures. Employees are responsible for following the GSA guidance which provides guidance on the following:
 - the use of unscheduled telework;
 - definitions of emergency employees and telework-ready employees;
 - pay and leave information;
 - expectations when Federal offices are open and when Federal offices are closed; and
 - expectations related to dismissal and closure procedures.

- b. Telework-ready employees as defined in paragraph 3.15 are required, when there is an announcement of an operating status under which Federal offices are closed, to telework, take leave or other time off, or reschedule their alternative work schedule, as outlined in the GSA Dismissal and Closure Procedures.
- c. Employees determined to be ineligible (based upon the criteria outlined in paragraph 6.2(i)) may, in emergency or other unforeseen situations, be required to telework to the extent possible without accessing secure materials. This may include other duties as assigned including, but not limited to, self-paced and/or online training.

9.3. Telework Agreement

- a. All employees must have a telework agreement approved through the GSA-approved telework and remote work agreement system before they will be eligible to telework for any reason.
- b. The telework agreement must be approved in the GSA-approved telework and remote work agreement system by the employee's supervisor within 60 calendar days of an employee's entrance on duty.
- c. Telework agreements must reflect the current agreement between the employee and their supervisor.

10. Remote Work

10.1. General Terms

- a. The official worksite/duty station of a remote worker is the appropriate alternative worksite (typically the employee's home), pursuant to paragraph 3.2 and may or may not be within the same region as the agency worksite.
- b. Remote Workers are entitled to travel reimbursement if required to travel to the agency worksite, pursuant to GSA policy, OAS 5700.1B OAS Temporary Duty \(TDY\) Travel Policy.
- c. Remote work must be recorded in GSA's electronic time and attendance system.
- d. Remote Workers are not eligible for participation in GSA's Transit Subsidy Program.

- e. Remote Workers must follow the requirements and the responsibilities in ADM 2430.1A The U.S. General Services Administration Continuity Program and ADM 2430.3 The U.S. General Services Administration Emergency Management Program when the GSA Administrator activates the COOP Plan for a continuity event or when an emergency is declared.

10.2. Remote Work Agreement. A remote work agreement and a change in Duty Station PAR are required for all remote work arrangements for more than 120 consecutive days in duration.

10.3. Remote Work Analysis Tool. The Remote Work Analysis Tool (Appendix C) is required when an employee is requesting to work remotely outside of their current locality pay area for a short- or long-term arrangement. Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that the Remote Work Analysis Tool is accurately completed to include:

- a. Reviewing the position categorization to ensure that the duties of this position can successfully be performed offsite.
- b. Ensuring that employees requesting remote work (employees not selected from job announcements that were advertised as remote work) have been in their current position at the advertised agency worksite for a minimum of 90 calendar days prior to consideration of a remote work request.
- c. Determining the direct costs and/or savings of a remote work arrangement as required in the Remote Work Analysis Tool (Appendix 3).
- d. Providing justification for arrangements resulting in direct cost to GSA. Remote work that would result in greater cost to GSA than if the employee were located outside of the current locality pay area must include the organization's justification, demonstrating that the benefits of the agreement to the organization outweigh the direct costs. The justification should include all background information pertinent to the benefits of establishing the remote work, and may reflect:
 - i. Savings in transit subsidy costs (if applicable);
 - ii. Proximity of the official worksite/duty station to customers/necessary work locations;

- iii. Enhancing an organization's ability to recruit or retain talent. Those costs will be reviewed in the same manner as Recruitment, Retention, or Relocation (3R) incentives. Such a justification may include the following:
 - 1. The particular requirements of the position being filed, and how they contribute to difficulty in hiring or retaining quality candidates;
 - 2. Labor market factors that may affect the ability to attract and retain quality candidates at the agency worksite;
 - 3. The potential use of incentives (e.g., 3R incentives) in lieu of a remote work arrangement to address recruitment or retention issues and the costs of such incentives compared to the cost of a remote work arrangement;
 - 4. Negative impact to agency, customers, or business productivity if the position were to become vacant;
 - 5. Support of sustainability program targets or goals;
 - 6. Justification for establishment of remote work arrangements for current employees shall also include:
 - a. The likelihood that the employee will depart the agency (e.g., relocation of spouse, job offer) absent a remote work arrangement; and
 - b. The unique qualifications or positive attributes (e.g., consistently superior performance) of the employee.

10.4. Approval of Remote Work Analysis Tool. All Remote Work Analysis Tools, regardless of the potential financial impact, must be approved by:

- a. The employee's chain of command, defined as the immediate supervisor through Regional Commissioner (RC), or Assistant Commissioner, or equivalent (SES level) in Staff Offices. All requests must be submitted to the servicing HR Director for action (concurrence or denial) by the chain of command within 20 calendar days of the initial request from the employee for consideration of the remote work arrangement;

- b. The servicing HR Director. Requests approved by the chain of command require action (concurrence or denial) by the servicing HR Director within 7 calendar days of their receipt of the request; and
- c. Requests approved by the servicing HR Director require action (concurrence or denial) of the CHCO or designee(s) within 21 calendar days of their receipt of the request.

10.5. Termination of Remote Work.

- a. Remote work may be terminated if management determines that termination is necessary due to changing business or organizational needs, or other mission/business reasons. In this instance, the affected employee will be offered a position at the same grade and pay in the commuting area of the current official worksite/duty station or will be offered the opportunity to move to the agency worksite.
 - i. If the employee accepts an offer to move, relocation costs will be paid by GSA in accordance with regulation.
 - ii. If the employee declines a suitable position and the offer to move to the agency worksite, management will propose the employee's removal for failure to accept a management- directed reassignment outside the commuting area in accordance with applicable regulations, policies, and collective bargaining agreements. The employee will be entitled to transition assistance in accordance with applicable regulations, policies, and collective bargaining agreements, including the GSA Career Transition Assistance Plan (CTAP). In addition to transition services, CTAP provides selection priority for positions announced within the employee's commuting area, for which the employee applies and is well-qualified.
- b. Remote work may be suspended by management for a limited period to address performance issues. Managers considering suspension of a remote work arrangement will consult with their servicing HR office before taking any action, including determining whether the remote worker will work from the closest GSA office or the agency worksite.

- c. Remote work may be terminated by management at any time when it can be demonstrated that the work arrangement has contributed to performance that falls below the fully successful level, or to misconduct as outlined in HRM 9751.1A, Maintaining Discipline. The policy identifies specific instances of misconduct that require the termination of a telework agreement. Managers who are considering termination of a remote work arrangement will consult with their servicing HR office before taking any action. When the decision is made to terminate the remote work arrangement, the employee will be directed to report to their agency worksite or may be offered a position at the same grade and pay within the commuting area of the employee's current official worksite/duty station.
 - i. If the employee accepts an offer to move to the agency worksite, any relocation expenses will be paid by the employee.
 - ii. If the employee declines to move to the agency worksite, management will propose the employee's removal for failure to accept a management-directed reassignment outside of the commuting area, in accordance with applicable regulations, policies, and collective bargaining agreements. The employee, if eligible, may be entitled to transition assistance in accordance with applicable regulations, policies, and collective bargaining agreements, including the GSA CTAP. CTAP provides selection priority for positions announced within the employee's commuting area, for which the employee applies and is well-qualified. An employee must have a current performance rating of at least fully successful to qualify for the selection priority provisions of CTAP.

11. Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO)

11.1. Overview. The Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas (DETO) arrangement is a workplace flexibility in which GSA will consider sponsored DETO arrangements on a case-by-case basis according to the criteria laid out in this policy.

- a. Sponsored DETO approvals may take upwards of 6 months to a year.
- b. Employees seeking DETO approval should consult with their immediate supervisor immediately upon notice of upcoming overseas tour to allow ample time for processing the request.

11.2. DETO Basics.

- a. DETO arrangements are not an entitlement.
- b. The employees must receive approval of a sponsored DETO agreement from the Department of State prior to working for GSA in the host country and follow the Information Technology policies as indicated in Section 17. GSA employees, who have relocated to the host country with the sponsoring employee prior to GSA and Department of State approval, must use the appropriate leave or leave without pay (LWOP).
- c. The employee's duty station must be temporarily changed to reflect the overseas duty station for the duration of the approved DETO arrangement and documented on a Form SF-50 by the servicing HR Specialist.
- d. The employee is eligible for DETO locality pay as outlined in Public Law No. 117-81, Section 6202, of December 27, 2021 \(National Defense Authorization Act\).
- e. The employee is ineligible for foreign allowances and post differentials under 5 U.S.C. Chapter 59.
- f. The employee must comply with all Department of State Chief of Mission (COM) authority and security policies and directives.

11.3. Employee Eligibility. GSA will consider the following eligibility factors:

- a. Tenured status and time in Agency service
- b. Job Duties/Mission Needs
- c. Type of Appointment
- d. Performance and Conduct
- e. Cost

11.4. Ineligibility.

- a. Positions ineligible for telework due to onsite work activity and/or handling of classified materials.

- b. Position requirements that conflict or overlap in host country or post affairs.
- c. Unaccompanied posts and most partially unaccompanied posts.
- d. Posts where US employees have been authorized or ordered to depart.

11.5. Responsibilities.

- a. Agency Telework Coordinator will:
 - i. Serve as a point of contact with Department of State and provide advocacy, implementation support, and data collection on implementation of this policy at the agency level;
 - ii. Provide guidance and support to supervisors and employees.
- b. Supervisor will:
 - i. Complete supervisor section of the DETO agreement and approve DETO Agreement;
 - ii. Submit a duty station PAR request once the DETO arrangement is approved by the Department of State;
 - iii. Notify OMA and GSA IT of the effective date of the approved DETO arrangement.
- c. Employee will:
 - i. Provide a copy of the sponsor's orders;
 - ii. Provide required information to supervisor on the DETO arrangement;
 - iii. Immediately notify their supervisor regarding any changes in sponsor's orders which could change DETO arrangement.

11.6. Approvals.

- a. All DETO arrangements must be approved by:

- i. The employee's chain of command, up to the Heads of Services and Staff Offices (HSSOs) or designee.
 - ii. Once approved by the HSSO or designee, the DETO Agreement must be submitted to the Telework and Remote Work Program mailbox at gsatelework@gsa.gov.
 - iii. The final approval is the OCHCO. Once the CHCO approval is received, the DETO Agreement is submitted by the TMO or the Telework Coordinator to the Department of State.
 - iv. Agency approval does not guarantee Department of State approval. Agency approval does not permit the employee to perform work on behalf of the agency.
- b. All DETO arrangements require approval from the Department of State. The Department of State is not obligated to approve DETO arrangements.

11.7. Duration and Termination.

- a. The duration of a sponsored DETO arrangement must be specified on the DETO agreement, and may not exceed the overseas assignment period of the sponsoring employee, nor extend beyond five years, whichever is less. Additional time may be requested by presenting an amended DETO agreement and seeking COM approval in cases where the sponsoring employee has had their posting extended through an amendment of orders.
- b. Supervisors may cancel or amend the DETO arrangement by providing written justification within 2 pay periods notice.
- c. Employees may cancel a DETO arrangement at any time with prior notification to their supervisor of at least 2 pay periods.

12. GSA-Approved Telework and Remote Work Agreements

12.1. The GSA-approved telework and remote work agreement system combines the Telework and Remote Work Agreements into a single agreement that adapts as users respond to questions about their telework situation. Upon approval, the system will generate copies of the approved Telework Agreement and Remote Work Agreement, as appropriate. The system allows employees to modify and recertify their Telework and Remote Work Agreements.

13. Biennial Recertification of Telework and Remote Work Agreements

13.1. All employees must recertify and/or update telework and remote work agreements through the GSA-approved telework and remote work agreement system on a biennial basis.

13.2. In addition to the biennial recertification, telework and remote work agreements must be updated when an employee changes position, organization, and/or duty station.

14. Continuity Plan and Business Plan

14.1. GSA is fully dedicated to leveraging telework and remote work capabilities to augment, when feasible, continuity of operations and emergency efforts under the Presidential Policy Directive 40 (PPD-40) Federal Continuity Directives 1 and Federal Continuity 2. The use of telework and remote work shall be situation specific in accordance with ADM 2430.1A The U.S. General Services Administration Continuity Program and ADM 2430.3 The U.S. General Services Administration Emergency Management Program. Due to the nature of GSA's mission, certain functions must be performed in disaster areas or at dedicated continuity facilities.

14.2. The Orders listed in paragraph 14.1 above supersede all other guidance provided within the GSA Telework and Remote Work Policy during any period that GSA is operating under a continuity activation or emergency situation.

15. Safety

15.1. When teleworking or working remotely, the condition, safety, and security of the appropriate alternative worksite are the responsibility of the teleworker or remote worker. Teleworkers and remote workers are strongly encouraged to evaluate the space to ensure that it is safe and appropriate for the intended teleworking activity.

15.2. While in the act of performing official duties at an appropriate alternative worksite, teleworkers and remote workers may, depending on the facts, be covered by the:

- a. Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act of 1964, as amended (31 U.S.C. 3721);

- b. Federal Tort Claims Act (28 U.S.C. 2671-2680);
- c. Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA), 5 U.S.C. Chapter 81.

16. Reasonable Accommodation

16.1. Based on the situation, the agency may determine that telework or remote work is an appropriate reasonable accommodation to address an employee's work limitation(s). Employees seeking a reasonable accommodation are required to follow procedures outlined in GSA policy, HRM 2300.1 CHGE 3 Policy and Procedures for Providing Reasonable Accommodation for Individuals with Disabilities.

17. Information Technology (IT)

17.1. Reference OAS 9900.1A, Government Furnished Information Technology \(IT\) Equipment for Use Outside GSA Agency Worksites, regarding issuance of government equipment for telework and remote work purposes.

17.2. GSA employees are accountable for completing their Annual Security Awareness Training which includes training on how to report a security incident to the GSA Service Desk.

17.3. Employees have a continuing responsibility to safeguard Government property and are responsible for the care, security, and effective utilization of the Government property, including computers and related equipment they use to perform official duties (see 5 C.F.R. §§ 2635.101(b)(9) and 2635.704(a)).

17.4. The Office of GSA IT Local Support will not provide equipment installation outside an agency worksite. Teleworkers will be provided with installation instructions and all required software will be installed at an agency worksite (or by remote control) by GSA IT Local Support. If additional maintenance or repair is required, the teleworker may be required to:

- a. Bring the GSA-provided equipment to an agency worksite; or
- b. Ship the product as directed by the GSA IT Service Desk to a location where an IT technician can provide complete support for the device.

17.5. Issuance of equipment such as cellular phones, smartphones, or other mobile devices is based on job requirements. Employees whose jobs require such equipment must request it through a GSA Service Catalog request.

17.6. Employees may use non-GSA provided computers and peripherals (printers, etc.) subject to the restrictions in CIO Order 2100.1P and the information provided on the GSA InSite Telework Technology Tips page. Employees using non-GSA provided equipment are responsible for its service and maintenance. The IT Service Desk will provide only basic connectivity support and will not troubleshoot or repair non-GSA provided equipment.

17.7. Employees may request that printer driver software be installed on their GSA laptop via a Service Desk ticket to enable them to use non-GSA provided printers while teleworking or working remotely.

17.8. Network communication lines for teleworkers and remote workers:

- a. Teleworkers and remote workers whose positions require access to GSA electronic files or business applications are expected to personally provide internet service at the appropriate alternative worksite.
- b. If high-speed internet service is not available at the appropriate alternative worksite, and lack of availability would adversely affect the employee's ability to perform the job, telework will not be an option unless and until high-speed internet service or an appropriate alternative can be identified in coordination with the supervisor and local IT manager.
- c. "Tethering" (connecting a computer to a cell phone to access the internet using the cellular network) is acceptable on an occasional, ad-hoc basis, but not as a daily/regular means of accessing the internet.

17.9. IT security requirements:

- a. IT security requirements defined in GSA Orders CIO 2100.1P GSA IT Security Policy, CIO 2104.1B CHGE 2 GSA Information Technology \(IT\) General Rules of Behavior, and CIO 2100.2C GSA Wireless Local Area Network \(WLAN\) Security apply to telework or remote work. Teleworkers and remote workers are responsible for complying with these policies, regardless of where this equipment is used, including appropriate alternative worksites.

- b. Any GSA-provided IT device or electronic media discovered lost or stolen must be immediately reported to the GSA IT Service Desk as outlined in GSA Orders CIO 2100.1P GSA IT Security Policy.
- c. Remote access to the GSA domain must be restricted to secure methods using approved identification and authentication methods to provide detection of intrusion attempts and protection against unauthorized access.

18. Evaluation and Recordkeeping

18.1. OHRM will provide updates from appropriate GSA tracking tools as appropriate reflecting approved and pending telework and remote work agreements.

18.2. OHRM will prepare and submit annual reports to OPM regarding telework as required.

18.3. OHRM will conduct periodic accountability reviews of telework and remote work to analyze use, policy compliance, and the degree to which telework and remote work are supporting agency requirements.

18.4. OHRM will maintain all telework and remote work data and records.

Article 7, Sect. 4, dated 4/7/22

Article 34, Sects. 1 & 4, dated 1/9/23

2. Compressed Work Schedules. For a full-time employee, overtime work consists of all hours of work in excess of the established compressed work schedule. Conditions of approval are the same as those described in J1 above.

Section 7. Time Spent on Standby Duty or in an On-Call Status

- A. An employee will be considered on duty and time spent on standby duty shall be considered hours of work if:
 1. The employee is restricted to the Agency's premises, or so close thereto that the employee cannot use the time effectively for his or her own purposes; or
 2. The employee, although not restricted to the Agency's premises:
 - i. Is restricted to his or her living quarters or designated post of duty;
 - ii. Has his/her activities substantially limited; and
 - iii. Is required to remain in a state of readiness to perform work.
- B. An employee will be considered off duty and time spent in an on-call status shall not be considered hours of work if:
 1. The employee is allowed to leave a telephone number or to carry an electronic device for the purpose of being contacted, even though the employee is required to remain within a reasonable call-back radius; or
 2. The employee is allowed to make arrangements such that any work, which may arise during the on-call period, will be performed by another person.
- C. Normally, volunteers will be used to perform on-call duty before assigning such duty to non-volunteers.
- D. Scheduled on-call will be rotated among qualified employees in a work unit. Records of on-call shall be maintained by Management and made available to the Union upon request.

Section 8. Clean-Up Time

The Agency will provide reasonable time, depending upon the nature of the work being performed and the location of the work site, for employees to clean up prior to lunch and the end of the workday.

Section 9. Telework Program

The Parties will follow GSA Order HCO 6040.1 (The Agency Mobility and Telework Policy), dated October 31, 2011, as modified by this Section.

- A. The Agency Mobility and Telework Policy establishes the foundation from which the Agency will enable an optimally responsive and productive workforce in delivering best value, services, and products to our customers and the American people through employee mobility and telework. This Policy applies to all Agency components, all Agency employees, and is designed to provide the structure needed for effective implementation and operation of telework for the Agency. Successful telework requires collaboration between employees, their supervisors and impacted work groups and each has responsibilities for successful implementation. Organizations must ensure compliance with the provisions of this Policy, supporting Agency guidance, and fulfillment of applicable labor relations obligations.

- B. Telework is critical to:
 - A. Performance based business outcomes for individuals and work teams;
 - B. Continuity Of Operations Planning (COOP) and Business Continuity Plan;
 - C. Sustainability; and
 - D. Employee balance of work and non-work responsibilities.

The Agency is committed to providing reasonable accommodation to ensure that individuals with disabilities enjoy full access to equal employment opportunity at the Agency. Telework is one of many types of accommodations supporting equal employment opportunities. Employees seeking a reasonable accommodation are required to follow procedures outlined in ADM P 2300.3 Policy and procedures for providing reasonable accommodation for individuals with disabilities, found at the Agency's internal website under the area of Directives.

- C. The Agency supports the broadest possible use of telework, up to and including full-time telework, by eligible Agency employees, if the available technological components, resources and equipment are suitable for the work effort and the employee is aware of and agrees to his/her responsibilities related to telework.

It is the responsibility of the employee to safeguard secure materials, including Personally Identifiable Information (PII).

Eligible employees may telework up to the maximum extent possible without diminished employee or organizational performance. Eligible employees (defined in paragraph 7) may:

- a. Choose to telework;
- b. Decline to telework;
- c. Select the alternative worksite(s) from which to telework; and
- d. Be required to telework in the event of an emergency or other unforeseen situation that prevents access to the agency worksite.

The appropriateness of telework and the amount of telework is a joint decision between the supervisor and the employee.

D. Definitions

Worksite:

- A. "Agency worksite" - the regular worksite for the employee's position of record; the physical address or place where the employee would work if not teleworking.
- B. "Alternative officing" - a work arrangement in which an employee has no dedicated/assigned workspace at the regular (Agency) worksite, but instead uses one of the following arrangements when working at that location:
 - 1. "Desk-Sharing" - an arrangement in which two or more employees share use of a single workspace where each employee has a designated day or time for use of the workspace;
 - 2. "Hoteling" - an arrangement where employees use non-dedicated, non-permanent workspaces assigned for use by reservation on an as-needed basis;

3. “Hot-Desking” (also known as “free address” or “touchdown workstations”) - an arrangement in which employees use non-dedicated, non-permanent workspaces assigned on an unreserved first come, first served basis (typically drop-in).
- C. “Alternative worksite” - worksite other than the Agency worksite, including employee’s residence or other work location. Alternative worksites may include, but are not limited to libraries, telework centers, and other business appropriate locations that support productive work and provide an environment, connectivity, and security appropriate to the work effort.
 - D. “Employing organization” - the specific organizational unit within the Agency to which the employee reports as listed in the official Human Resources (HR) Documents located in the Human Resources Information Technology System.
 - E. “Official Worksite/Duty Station” - pursuant to the OPM’s definition, official worksite is the location where the employee regularly performs his or her official work duties. Changes in an employee’s official worksite may affect employee pay, locality pay and travel funding responsibilities and must be processed by the servicing Human Resources Office (HRO).
 1. Designation of the official worksite must be assessed on a case-by-case basis using the following considerations:
 - a. The official worksite is the location of the Agency worksite for the employee's position - the place where the employee would normally work if not teleworking - as long as the employee is scheduled to report physically at least twice each biweekly pay period to that Agency worksite;
 - b. The official worksite for an employee who is not scheduled to report at least twice a biweekly pay period to the Agency worksite (includes virtual workers/full time teleworkers) is the location of the alternative worksite (except in certain temporary duty situations);
 - c. The official worksite for an employee whose work location varies on a recurring basis (mobile work), and who does not report at least twice each biweekly pay period to the Agency worksite, is the Agency worksite, as long as the employee is performing work within the same geographic area (established for the purpose of a given pay entitlement) as the Agency worksite.
 - F. “Telework Center” - a facility established for use by teleworkers. Telework Centers may be fee-based and employee use of such a (fee-based) facility must have prior supervisory approval to commit Agency funding.
 - G. “Virtual Officing/Distributed Work Environment”- a work arrangement in which a work group, team, or organization has no permanent physical worksite (building or other physical location) to which the employees report for meetings or other work related matters. Instead, the work setting is characterized by employees using a communications medium such as computer network access and/or other communications applications that enable collaborative work and/or other interpersonal business interactions. The physical locations of employees working in a virtual office may be any alternative worksite.

- H. "Emergency situation" - a planned or unplanned event, incident or circumstance that interrupts or compromises operations at, or travel to or from the Agency or alternative worksite. May include a range of situations including, but not limited to civil disruptions, inclement weather and associated travel conditions, national security situations, natural disaster, public health emergencies, power outages, unusual traffic situations, water main breaks, or other incidents where access to the Agency or alternative worksite is compromised. Emergency situations include but are not limited to those that result in an official announcement of an operating status under which unscheduled telework is allowed, as defined below. Emergency situations that rise to the level of COOP activation fall outside of telework policy, as outlined in paragraph 11.
- I. "Mobile Work" - work which is characterized by regular travel to and work in customer or target [designated] worksites as opposed to the Agency worksite. Mobile work may consist of work such as site audits, site inspections, investigations, and property management. It is distinguished from telework in that the work being done by the employee is specific to a target site or location. Mobile work may be combined with telework.
- J. "Remote Worker" – an employee whose official worksite (duty station) is an Agency or federal facility other than the location of the owning organization. For example, an employee who works for a GSA Central Office organization, but whose official worksite (duty station) is a regional office building, is a remote worker. Remote workers are not teleworkers.
- K. "Telework"- a work arrangement that allows an employee to conduct work, during any part of regular, paid hours, at an alternative worksite, as defined above. Telework does not include:
 - 1. Any part of work done while on official travel (travel regulations and policy takes precedence over telework);
 - 2. Work done while commuting to and from work (except as stipulated in paragraph 8.g.iv);
 - 3. Mobile work as defined above (including site audits, site inspections, investigations, and property management); or
 - 4. Extended work (work done outside of regular, paid hours of duty).
- L. "Unscheduled Telework" - a means for Agency employees to continue work operations and maintain productivity during emergency or other unforeseen situations, e.g., inclement weather. Unscheduled telework allows eligible employees to telework without previous supervisory approval in response to specific announcements by OPM or other local government deciding/authorizing officials regarding emergency or other unforeseen situations. Employees utilizing unscheduled telework are required to notify their supervisor or designee within the locally- prescribed amount of time.

1. Employees not eligible for telework or who do not have work, resources, or an appropriate environment to telework in the event of an announcement of Unscheduled Telework, and who choose not to commute to the Agency worksite, may choose to cover the period of time specified in the Unscheduled Telework announcement by:
 - a. Using available appropriate leave;
 - b. Using earned compensatory time off;
 - c. Using credit hours (if permitted);
 - d. Using Leave Without Pay (LWOP); or
 - e. Subject to supervisory approval, rescheduling their alternative work schedule (AWS) day off.
 - M. "Virtual Worker" - a full- time teleworker whose official worksite (duty station) is an alternative worksite. The alternative worksite may be inside or outside the local commuting area of the Agency worksite and include such places as the employee's residence.
 - N. Employees in a telework status are to be treated the same as all other employees for Fair Labor Standards Act and all other overtime purposes.
 - O. "Telework Agreement" - a documented agreement completed collaboratively by an employee and their supervisor or designee. The Agreement details the specific terms, conditions, responsibilities and technical requirements of the employee and supervisor. The Agreement is also used to assess information technology and telecommunications needs and capabilities.
- E. Eligibility
- A. All bargaining unit employees are eligible for telework, with the exceptions outlined in paragraph (b).
 - B. In certain specific situations based on the criteria below, as set forth in The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, positions or employees may be identified as ineligible for telework as follows:
 1. An employee in a position that requires, on a daily, every work day, basis:
 - a. Direct handling of secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework by the Administrator of General Services or designee. Secure materials are those materials (a) for which there exists a written policy (at the Government, Agency or organizational level) restricting the use/access outside of a specific government installation or area within a government installation, (b) for which appropriate mitigating IT security measures do not exist. Secure materials may include PII.
 - C. In emergency or other unforeseen situations, an employee in such a position may be required to telework to the extent possible without accessing secure materials.

This may include other duties as assigned including, but not limited to self-paced and/or on-line training.

1. On-site work effort activity that cannot be handled remotely or at an alternative worksite.
2. In certain specific situations based on the criteria below, as set forth in The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, positions or employees may be identified ineligible for telework under any circumstance for conduct resulting in the employee being officially disciplined with a warning, reprimand, suspension or removal, for:
 - a. Being absent without leave (AWOL) for more than five (5) days in any calendar year; or
 - b. Violations of subpart G of the Standard of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.
3. Employees disciplined for conduct identified in 7.b.ii above are ineligible for telework under any circumstances, including emergency situations including COOP activation. In such cases the employee must be provided with alternative officing in an Agency location or offered administrative leave until such time as official alternative officing in an Agency or other federal location is available.
4. An employee may be considered ineligible for telework in the event telework can be demonstrated to have resulted in diminished individual or organizational performance. In such situations, the supervisor and employee must prepare a plan for performance improvement with a goal of returning the employee to telework eligibility.

D. All GSA job announcements will indicate whether the position is eligible for telework, based on the criteria in paragraph 7.b.i above.

E. All employees regardless of their tenure or designation (e.g. intern or detail) are eligible to telework pursuant to the criteria in paragraphs 7.a and 7.b above.

F. The limitations on eligibility even in emergency or other unforeseen situations set forth in paragraph 7.b.ii above are not intended to constitute an exhaustive listing of all of the possible reasons for limiting or restricting telework.

F. Terms of telework participation

A. Telework is voluntary except in certain emergency situations.

1. Based on the eligibility criteria in paragraph 7, employees may choose to telework or decline to telework.
2. The appropriateness of telework and amount of telework is a joint decision between the supervisor and the employee.

3. Employees may not be required to telework, except in response to emergency situations as defined in paragraph 6, and subject to statutory exceptions.
 4. The requirement to telework in response to emergency situations must be reflected in the employee's Telework Agreement.
- B. All bargaining unit employees are required to complete a Telework Agreement.
1. Employees who decline to telework will complete a Telework Agreement and may be required to telework in an emergency situation as defined in paragraph 6.
 2. Employees whose positions are determined to be ineligible to telework based on criteria set forth in paragraph 7.b.i. will complete a Telework Agreement and may be required to telework in emergency situations.
 3. Employees determined to be ineligible to telework based on the criteria set forth in paragraph 7.b.ii will complete a Telework Agreement indicating that they are ineligible to telework, and will not be required to telework in emergency situations.
- C. Subject to space and availability at the Agency worksite, employees utilizing an assigned workspace for two or fewer days per week may be required to participate in alternative officing as defined in paragraph 6. Employees utilizing an assigned workspace for more than two days per week may volunteer for alternative officing.
- D. Supervisors and teleworkers will ensure that telework does not place a hardship or extra workload on other employees.
- E. Supervisors will be responsible and accountable, pursuant to The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and this Agreement, for treating all employees, whether teleworking or not, the same (refraining from treating employees differently based on their decision to participate in telework or not) for purposes of all decisions involving managerial discretion, including but not limited to:
1. Distribution of assignments among all employees in the work unit, whether working at the Agency worksite or at alternative worksites.
 2. Use of appropriate work tracking and communication tools, provided they are required of all employees in the work unit, regardless of whether they telework. Supervisors may not impose specific reporting requirements or other unique requirements on teleworkers.
 3. Performance management. Good performance management practices, including appropriate formal and informal feedback, are essential for all employees to work effectively. As outlined in GSA's performance appraisal system policy for all bargaining unit employees, performance standards are to be based on results and describe the quantity, quality and timeliness of expected work products and the method of evaluation. All bargaining unit employees (teleworkers and non-teleworkers) must complete work satisfactorily and in accordance with performance standards and guidelines in their performance plan.

4. Treatment of teleworkers and non-teleworkers for purposes of other issues involving managerial discretion, including training, reassignment, promotions, reduction in grade, retention and removal of employees.

F. Employee responsibilities include:

While teleworking, employees are in an official duty status. Failure to adhere to applicable policy may result in, among other things, the imposition of specific limitations on telework, the termination of a Telework Agreement, and/or other penalties as outlined in the Agency's discipline policy

1. Union representatives who telework while performing union activities (during which they are not in an official GSA duty status) are responsible for adhering to applicable policies and the Telework MOU (November 16, 2010, see Appendix F) consistent with their performance of Union activities at the Agency or alternative worksite.
2. It is the employee's responsibility to ensure that the alternative worksite provides the work environment, connectivity, technology, resource access, and security consistent with the work effort in which the employee is engaged. Supervisors retain the authority to overrule an employee's selection of a particular alternative worksite location if in the supervisor's opinion that location is not a business appropriate location and/or fails to provide a working environment compliant with the conditions outlined in this Policy.
3. As outlined in paragraph 15.f, employees are expected to procure and provide internet service appropriate to the work effort at their own expense. An exception to this rule can be found in Section 13F.I.
4. Employees are responsible for meeting organizational and work team requirements, including but not limited to all requirements regarding communication, accessibility, and collaboration.
5. Employees are responsible for maintaining flexibility and responsiveness to the needs of the supervisor, employing organization and work team. As with all work, employees are accountable for required individual contributions to the efforts of their work team, and must communicate and collaborate as appropriate with team members, ensuring that telework supports the work of the team and does not result in diminished individual, group/team or organizational performance.
6. Employees may be required to report to the Agency worksite, or other required location, pursuant to legitimate Agency needs, for all or part of the workday during which they would otherwise telework. Cases of cancelled or interrupted plans to telework require appropriate advance notice to the employee, as outlined in the Telework Agreement. Such cases do not (a) constitute a termination of the telework arrangement or (b) entitle the employee to a "replacement" or "in lieu of" telework day.

7. Employees are responsible for documenting their telework in accordance with established processes, including Agency-determined codes and tracking/reporting processes, e.g., completion and submission of time sheets or entering telework codes in GSA's electronic time and attendance system.
8. Telework is work time (hours of duty) and is not to be used for any purposes other than official duties. There is no prohibition against the presence of dependents, home service or maintenance providers, or others, at the alternative worksite during work hours.
9. HR rules are unchanged by telework. The governing rules, regulations, and policies concerning time and attendance, leave, compensatory time, and overtime remain in effect, regardless of whether the employee works at the Agency worksite or alternative worksite.
10. Management is responsible and accountable for supervising work in accordance with the FLSA. All employees (teleworking or not) are required to follow established office practices, Agency policies and law for requesting and obtaining approval of leave, overtime, or any change to the work schedule.
11. Commuting time from home to work and from work to home is not hours of work and is not compensable, except:
 - a. A FLSA non-exempt employee may be compensated for commuting time if he or she is officially directed to perform work while commuting (e.g., productive work of a significant nature that is an integral and indispensable part of the employee's principal activities);
 - b. A FLSA-exempt employee's commuting time may be hours of work if he or she is officially directed to perform work while commuting.

G. Alternative Work Schedules (AWS). Employees may work approved AWS as set forth in this Agreement in combination with telework without restriction to either arrangement (telework/AWS) if consistent with organizational and work team needs.

H. Telework in Emergency Situations. Agency or building closures to the public, delayed arrivals or early dismissals due to emergency or other unforeseen situations as defined in paragraph 6 do not normally affect the employee's ability to work at an alternative worksite. Teleworkers will continue to work during these situations and will not be granted administrative leave. However, if conditions at the Agency impact the ability to work at alternative worksites (e.g., the servers are shut down), employees working at alternative worksites will be treated in the same manner as those at the Agency worksite. If these conditions limit the employee's ability to perform their duties, supervisors will grant requests for unscheduled annual leave and will consider requests for administrative leave consistent with employees not in a telework status.

Teleworkers may be granted administrative leave in the following emergency situations (1) early dismissal, late arrivals or closure situations in which both the Agency worksite and the alternative worksite are inaccessible/unavailable, or (2) situations in which the teleworker's duties are such that he or she cannot continue to work without contact with the Agency worksite.

- I. Use of Unscheduled Telework. Eligible employees may use unscheduled telework (as defined in paragraph 6) when an official announcement is made (by OPM, the local Federal Executive Board (FEB), RA, or other authorized official) of an operating status allowing Unscheduled Telework. Operating status announcements allowing unscheduled telework are:

1. Open with option for unscheduled leave or unscheduled telework;
2. Open with (as specified) hour delayed arrival with option for unscheduled leave or unscheduled telework;
3. Federal Offices are closed to the public.

When one of these operating status announcements is made, telework- eligible employees may choose:

1. To telework (announcements shown at 8.j.i, 8.j.ii, or 8.j.iii);
2. To commute to the Agency worksite within the parameters of the official announcement (announcements shown at 8.j.i and 8.j.ii);
3. To request appropriate leave, earned compensatory time off, credit hours (if permitted), LWOP, or subject to supervisory approval, reschedule their AWS day off (announcements shown at 8.j.i, 8.j.ii, or 8.j.iii).

J. Telework Agreement

- a. Telework Agreements remain in effect indefinitely, but may be modified in accordance with an employee's request to telework, changes in position eligibility or employee eligibility, or to address the impact of telework on individual or organizational performance.
- b. The Telework Agreement is signed by the employee, the employee's supervisor and approved by the HSSO, RA, RC, IT manager, or designee. This authority may be delegated at the discretion of individual HSSOs, RAs or RCs, pursuant to paragraph 5.

K. Telework Management Panels

The Telework Management Panels established under the Policy, do not apply to employees in the AFGE bargaining unit. Any disputes concerning telework issues will be discussed at the quarterly AFGE Labor-Management meetings or through the negotiated grievance procedure.

L. Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP) and Business Continuity Plan

Activated COOP involvement supersedes the telework program in this Agreement

M. Safety

- a. The Agency encourages a proactive approach by teleworkers to ensure safe alternative worksites as well as safe work habits.

- b. While in the act of performing official duties at an alternative worksite, teleworkers may be covered by the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act of 1964, Federal Tort Claims Act, or the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA) for injuries suffered by teleworkers.
- N. Telework training GSA telework training, as required by The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and specified by the Agency Telework Managing Official (TMO), is required for all employees. Employees are required to complete GSA telework training as part of the Telework Agreement development and approval process and to undertake such refresher or modified training as may be specified by the TMO.
- O. The default format for all internal Agency meetings (whether local or long distance) will include the option of virtual attendance when practicable. If virtual attendance is not practicable, employees may be required to report to the worksite .
- P. Information Technology (IT)
- a. The Agency will provide and support one computer per employee. No additional computer will be provided for telework.
 - b. Agency employees are responsible and accountable for reading, understanding, and complying with the IT Security Home User's Guide . (See paragraph 15.h).
 - c. Employees have a continuing responsibility to safeguard government property and are responsible for the care, security and effective utilization of the government property, including computers and related equipment, they use to perform official duties. Employees may be financially liable for the property if it is stolen, damaged, lost or destroyed as a result of negligence, improper use or other willful actions.
 - 1. Office of the Chief Information Officer (OCIO) Local Support will not provide equipment installation outside an Agency worksite. Teleworkers will be provided with installation instructions and all required software will be installed at an Agency worksite (or by remote control) by OCIO Local Support. Teleworkers will be expected to plug in cables, add paper and ink/toner and perform basic user maintenance on their own at the alternative worksite. If additional maintenance or repair is required, the teleworker may be required to:
 - 1. Bring the GSA-provided equipment to an Agency worksite, or
 - 2. Ship the product as directed by the GSA service desk, to a location where an IT technician can provide complete support of the device.
 - 2. Employees who telework are expected to provide their own printers or other peripherals, if required to successfully telework. Services/Staff Offices retain the option, on a case-by-case basis, to pay for an employee's printer or other peripheral, depending on job requirement, business need, and funding availability, particularly for those employees who are full time teleworkers or whose Agency worksite is not in a GSA facility. Services/Staff Offices will be expected to fund any peripherals they desire for their teleworkers out of business line funds, as funding for these non-standard devices is outside of the S/SO OCIO MOU funding model.

3. Issuance of equipment such as cellular phones, smart phones (e.g., BlackBerry), or other mobile devices is based on job requirements. Employees whose jobs require such equipment must request it through a Service Catalog request for approval by his/her supervisor
4. Teleworkers may use non-Agency provided computers and peripherals (printers, etc). Teleworkers using non-Agency provided equipment are responsible for its service and maintenance. The IT Service Desk will provide only basic connectivity support, and will not troubleshoot or repair non-Agency provided equipment. Teleworkers should also be aware that access to IT resources, applications, networks, etc., may be limited for those working from non-Agency provided equipment, thereby limiting the effectiveness of their telework experience.
5. Teleworkers using non-Agency provided computers must:
 1. Enable an up-to-date commercially available firewall;
 2. Have installed an up-to-date version of a commercially- available virus scan product; and
 3. Maintain current security (patch) levels for the computer's operating system and any application software prior to connecting to the Agency network.
6. Teleworkers may request that printer driver software be installed on their Agency-issued laptop via a Service Desk ticket, to enable them to use non-GSA provided printers while teleworking. The Agency will not issue toner/ink or paper for employees using non-Agency provided printers.
7. GSA's OCIO retains ownership and control of all Agency-provided IT hardware, software and peripherals and is responsible for maintaining, providing support for and repairing the equipment regardless of whether it is used in an Agency worksite or at an alternative worksite. IT support for Agency-provided equipment is provided by Agency IT employees or authorized contractors.
8. When an IT issue cannot be resolved remotely, employees working at alternative worksites may be directed to bring their Agency-provided devices to the nearest Agency worksite, or to ship the product, as directed by the GSA service desk, where local support and/or replacement parts can be dispatched. The Agency will not provide on-site IT support at alternative worksites.

9. Support for teleworkers using telework centers or similar facilities is dependent on whether the teleworker is using telework center supplied computers or using a GSA-provided computer and just plugging into a network jack at the telework center. Teleworkers using telework center supplied computers must obtain support from the Telework Center and not from the national IT Service Desk. Teleworkers using their Agency-provided laptop and simply plugging into a network jack at the telework center should contact the GSA IT Service Desk for support.
10. Teleworkers whose positions require access to Agency electronic files or business applications are expected to personally provide internet service. Services/Staff Offices retain the option, on a case-by-case basis, to pay for employee's internet service, depending on job requirement, business case and funding availability, particularly for those employees who are full time teleworkers or whose official duty station is not in an Agency worksite. To enable maximum productivity, a 'persistent' broadband internet connection such as cable, DSL or Verizon FiOS is required for all teleworkers. Dial up, and tethering, e.g., BlackBerry, is not acceptable as a regular telework communications solution.
11. If high-speed internet service is not available, and lack of remote access would adversely impact an employee's productivity, alternative options, including the use of telework centers, should be explored with the local IT manager and management, as appropriate.
12. Regular Agency IT security requirements apply to telework. (See paragraph 15(h)). Teleworkers are responsible for reading, understanding and complying with these requirements, regardless of where this equipment is used, including alternative worksites. These policies are available on the Agency internal website.
13. Any Agency-provided IT device or electronic media discovered lost or stolen must be immediately reported to the appropriate Information System Security Officer (ISSO) or the employee's OCIO IT Manager, as stipulated in the current IT Security Incident Handling Guide. If the incident occurs outside of business hours, initial notification should be to the IT Service Desk. This is vital, both to ensure that appropriate Agency personnel are aware of the potential data breach, as well as to attempt to recover the lost or stolen GSA IT asset.
14. Employees who access any Agency data through wireless local area networks, either at an alternative worksite or at a contractor facility, must comply with current Agency security policy.
15. Employees accessing the Agency network through an Agency Virtual Private Network (VPN) connection must allow a full Agency security scan of the accessing computer that checks for the presence of a running, installed firewall, up-to-date virus protection software and up-to-date security patches. This Agency security scan is a process that will run every time a VPN enabled computer connects to the Agency network. The Agency security scan will verify that no malicious software

(e.g., trojans, worms, malware, spyware, etc.) is present on the computer. Computers (Agency, and non- Agency -provided) that fail this scan will not be allowed access to the Agency network.

16. Only employees and authorized contractors are allowed to use GSA-provided computers, an Agency VPN connection, or an Agency -provided internet connection. Employees may not, under any circumstances, allow any unauthorized personnel (including family members or friends) to use an Agency -provided computer, or to connect to the Agency network via any means.

17. All remote access connections into the Agency network will automatically terminate within 30 minutes of "inactivity". Inactivity is defined as no mouse movement or clicks or keyboard keys pressed within a set period. When an employee is logged onto the Agency network via VPN or Citrix and will not be working on the computer for a period of time to exceed 30 minutes, the employee should log off of all applications to ensure that unsaved data is not lost.

Q. Reporting Requirements

- a. The Agency will establish reporting requirements in accordance with OPM and Agency-determined data collection elements and metrics.
- b. Employees and supervisors will monitor, track and report telework as required by the Agency in support of this policy.

Article 26
Leave

Section 1. General

Employees may charge annual and sick leave usage in increments of 6 minutes.

Section 2. Annual Leave

- A. It is agreed that the use of accrued annual leave is a right rather than a privilege, subject to Management's approval.
- B. Consistent with the needs of the employee and the Agency, annual leave requested in advance will be approved. Except in the event of an emergency or a serious work interruption, annual leave which has been approved will not be cancelled. The supervisor canceling approved annual leave will make every effort to reschedule the leave at times desired by the employee.
- C. Consistent with the needs of the employee and the Agency, Management will approve annual leave requests for up to 30 consecutive days.
- D. Employees may submit requests for projected annual leave for increments of 32 hours or more by the end of January, each year of this contract, for the remainder of the leave year.

ARTICLE 32
FITNESS and WELLNESS

Section 1. Fitness and Wellness Program

The Agency may develop and/or maintain a program and/or facilities to foster employee fitness and wellness. If the Agency decides to develop and/or maintain a program and/or facilities, the Union may submit suggestions for the program and GSA will consider those recommendations.

Section 2. Fitness Related Amenities

Where a GSA facility in which employees work has a gym or other fitness related amenities controlled by GSA which is available to all GSA employees, the Agency will ensure that all GSA employees in the bargaining unit have equal access and be treated in the same manner as other GSA employees. When there is a change to such amenities or programs, the Union will be provided notice and an opportunity to bargain in accordance with law.

Section 3. Employee Participation

Employee participation in fitness and wellness programs or use of fitness facilities will be on a voluntary basis.

ARTICLE 33
TELEWORK

The Parties incorporate and make a part of this Agreement the Memorandum of Understanding dated January 12, 2012 concerning the implementation of the GSA Mobility and Telework Policy, GSA Order HCO 6040.1A. This Memorandum of Understanding applies to all employees and is appended to this Agreement as Appendix A.

In addition to the provisions in the MOU, the Parties agree to the following:

1. Requests to telework - Employees will submit requests to telework in a manner prescribed by the Agency. If requested, a meeting to discuss the request will normally occur within 7 days of the request and the request should be acted upon timely, but not more than within 5 calendar days after the meeting. The supervisor and employee may mutually agree that a meeting is not necessary. Each individual request should be considered on its own merits and in view of the operational needs.
2. Requests to telework, including the number of days per week the employee will telework, should not be modified or denied for arbitrary reasons.
3. Regular days off will not be denied or revoked for arbitrary reasons.
4. When a permanent telework arrangement is revoked, an employee normally must be given 10 days' notice. Agency will give the 10 days' notice unless an emergency or immediate operational need requires shorter notice. Such notice is not required for temporary changes due to meetings or other events requiring attendance in person.

5. Employees in the same work unit and with the same supervisor will be treated in a fair and equitable manner in the type of telework arrangements that are approved.
6. Employees who choose to end telework or have their telework revoked will be provided an assigned space as business considerations permit, in the location where similarly situated employees are located.
7. Employees will be able to utilize any location that ensures the employee is able to complete all work assignments and is in accordance with Agency policy.
8. An employee's neglect to maintain a "green" designation on a chat window or similar technology shall not be the sole basis to revoke telework.
9. Telework agreements will not be automatically revoked because of performance deficiency.
10. Subject to applicable laws, regulations and Agency policy, an employee's position should not necessarily preclude all telework. (E.g. an employee whose job is primarily based in the field may nonetheless be eligible for telework on days the employee completes reports or other paperwork.)
11. The Employer will provide not less than one month's notice of the need to complete required training before suspending an employee's telework eligibility.

ARTICLE 34 ORIENTATION of NEW EMPLOYEES

Section 1. Initial Processing and Orientation

All new employees shall be informed by the Agency's Human Resources Office that NFFE is the exclusive representative of employees and shall be given the link to the current Collective Bargaining Agreement on the Agency Intranet. The Union may address employees for thirty (30) minutes during Agency conducted on-boarding orientation sessions and provide them with accurate and factual information and a packet of Union materials, relative to Union membership. If no formal on-boarding or orientation session is held or if a new employee missed the session, the Agency agrees that the Union has the right to request an opportunity to meet with the employee for up to thirty (30) minutes, during duty time with no charge to leave, and provide the employee with a packet of Union information. Should the Agency conduct national or regional orientations, other than the standard on-boarding orientation meetings, the Union will be invited and provided an opportunity to attend and participate consistent with this Article.

Section 2. Employee Update

The Agency shall furnish the Union the following information, regarding new bargaining unit employees, no later than the second full pay-period following the entrance on duty:

1. (EOD) date;
2. Full Name;
3. Title, Series and Grade;

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN
THE GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION (GSA)
AND
THE NATIONAL FEDERATION OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEES (NFFE)

The National Federation of Federal Employees (NFFE) and the General Services Administration (GSA) enter into the following agreement on the right of employees who are Union Representatives to be able to telework in accordance with the provisions of the GSA Mobility and Telework Policy, GSA Order HCO 6040.1, while on official time:

1. The GSA Mobility and Telework Policy will apply to Union Representatives except as specifically provided for in this Agreement and the GSA/NFFE Mobility and Telework Policy MOU.
2. Union Representatives shall be allowed to telework while on official time in accordance with the terms of this Agreement.
3. Union Representatives on telework status receive the equipment and upgrades in accordance with the provisions of Agency Policy and the Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA).
4. The use of personal and government equipment will be consistent with the GSA Mobility and Telework Policy and other relevant Agency policies as well as the CBA.
5. A separate telework agreement will not be required for Union representatives.
6. The National Council President or his/her designee will determine the Union Representatives' eligibility to telework while on official time. The National Council President or his/her designee may authorize Union Representatives to work in telework status. The rules with respect to release and use of official time apply while in telework status.
7. Any disputes with respect to Union Representatives' right to telework on official time will initially include a discussion with the National Director of Labor Relations.
8. Each Party is responsible for communicating to its constituents how to operate under this Agreement.
9. The provisions of this Agreement stay in effect to the extent they are consistent with law. The Parties agree that should the law with relation to Union Representatives' right to telework on official time change, the Parties will reopen this Agreement and bargain consistent with law.
10. The provisions of this Agreement will be incorporated into the successor CBA.
11. This Agreement is effective on January 12, 2012.

3.c. WORK ENVIRONMENT CHECK-IN

NASA's Response to the Work Environment Implementation Data Call, January 2024

Original Submission:

As previously reported to OMB, NASA has a long-established telework program that predates the pandemic. The Agency's telework and remote policies remain largely the same today as they were in 2014. Under those policies, about 98 percent of NASA civil servants are telework ready, while more than 50 percent of NASA's work is occurring on-site. Within our teleworking practices and policies, NASA's leadership has empowered Agency organizations and supervisors to determine the appropriate workplace flexibilities to accomplish their individual missions efficiently and effectively within the boundaries of Federal law, regulation, Office of Personnel Management guidance, and NASA policy. NASA's senior leaders remain committed to developing new ways to measure and evaluate Agency performance in concert with our new hybrid environment. Additionally, NASA will continue to prioritize mission success during this new hybrid work environment, making course corrections as necessary.

Updates:

None.

Preface

P.1 Purpose

This directive establishes procedural requirements and responsibilities for the administration of the Agency's telework program in accordance with 5 U.S.C. Chapter (ch.) 65. Consult with Human Resources (HR) for further information and guidance.

P.2 Applicability

- a. This directive is applicable at NASA Headquarters and NASA Centers, including Component Facilities and Technical and Service Support Centers.
- b. Any reference to Center Director(s) includes the Executive Director for Headquarters Operations and the Executive Director of the NASA Shared Services Center (NSSC).
- c. In this directive, all document citations are assumed to be the latest version, unless otherwise noted.
- d. In this directive, all mandatory actions (i.e., requirements) are denoted by statements containing the term "shall." The terms: "may" or "can" denote discretionary privilege or permission, "should" denotes a good practice and is recommended, but not required, "will" denotes expected outcome, and "are/is" denotes descriptive material.

P.3 Authority

Telework, 5 U.S.C. Chapter (ch.) 65.

P.4 Applicable Documents and Forms

- a. Telework Managing Officer, 5 U.S.C. § 6505.
- b. Determining an Employee's Official Worksite, 5 CFR § 531.605.
- c. Definitions, 5 CFR 550.703.
- d. Weather and Safety Leave, 5 CFR Part (pt.) 630, Subpart (subpt.) P.
- e. NPR 1800.1, NASA Occupational Health Program Procedures.
- f. NPR 3713.1, Reasonable Accommodation Procedures.
- g. NPR 9710.1, General Travel Requirements.
- h. Office of Personnel Management (OPM) Guide to Processing Personnel Actions.
- i. Notification of Personnel Action, OPM Standard Form (SF) 50.

P.5 Measurement/Verification

The Chief Human Capital Officer (CHCO) establishes Agency goals and reporting requirements to monitor and evaluate the effectiveness of NASA's Telework Program in accordance with 5 U.S.C. ch. 65, specifically with regard to increasing participation to the extent practicable and actions to identify and eliminate barriers to maximizing telework opportunities.

P.6 Cancellation

NPR 3600.2A, NASA Telework Program, dated December 19, 2014.

Chapter 1. General

1.1 Overview

Telework can benefit both managers and employees in the following ways: enhance the recruitment and retention of a high-quality diverse workforce; assist in providing reasonable accommodations to individuals with disabilities, including employees who have temporary or continuing health conditions; provide for the continuity of operations during national or regional emergencies; reduce transportation-related stress and costs; improve morale by allowing employees to balance work and family demands; and encourage the highest employee productivity toward the accomplishment of the Agency's mission.

1.2 Alternative Work Arrangements

1.2.1 The Agency Telework Program includes the following alternative work arrangements:

- a. Routine telework - work that is performed at an approved alternative worksite (normally the employee's home residence) on an approved recurring schedule (e.g., one or more days per week or pay period). Routine teleworkers must be scheduled, and report, to work at the official worksite for a minimum of two days per pay period unless the employee has an approved absence, is on travel, or is covered by an approved exception outlined in Chapter 5.2 of this NPR.
- b. Situational telework - work that is performed at an approved alternative worksite on an occasional, one time, or irregular basis. It includes emergency telework as a result of inclement weather; a medical appointment; or a special work assignment. Situational telework is also referred to as episodic, intermittent, unscheduled, or ad-hoc telework. Situational teleworkers must be scheduled, and report, to work at the official worksite for a minimum of two days per pay period unless the employee has an approved absence, is on travel, or is covered by an approved exception outlined in Chapter 5.2 of this NPR.
- c. Remote work - For the purpose of this directive, a work arrangement in which the employee works at an approved alternate worksite (e.g. residence). The employee is not expected to regularly report to the regular worksite at least twice in a biweekly pay period. To be considered remote work, a temporary exception has not been granted and the approved alternate worksite is documented on the employee's SF-50.

1.2.2 Eligibility for the Agency telework program does not confer an entitlement; participation is voluntary and subject to supervisory approval based on the needs of the organization to perform its mission. Eligibility requirements are described in chapter 3 of this directive.

Chapter 2. Responsibilities

2.1 CHCO

2.1.1 The CHCO is responsible for:

- a. Ensuring that the Agency Telework Program and this directive comply with 5 U.S.C. ch. 65 available and accessible to the workforce.
- c. Developing and implementing Agency-wide telework/remote work agreements.
- d. Ensuring procedures are in place for collecting and reporting data and analysis to support Agency requirements or in response to external reporting requirements.

2.2 Telework Managing Officer (TMO)

The TMO serves as NASA's telework program key advisor and policy developer and performs the duties outlined in 5 U.S.C. § 6505.

2.3 Chief Information Officer (CIO)

The CIO is responsible for providing information technology infrastructure, policies, and tools that support and enable the workforce to effectively perform their assigned duties while in a telework/remote work status at an approved alternative worksite.

2.4 Officials-in-Charge of Headquarters Offices (OICs) and Center Directors

2.4.1 OICs and Center Directors are responsible for:

- a. Ensuring that subordinate managers and supervisors fully support and encourage telework as an alternative work arrangement for eligible employees.
- b. Ensuring that all eligible employees have the opportunity to participate in the telework program to the maximum extent possible without diminishment in performance or negative impact to the Agency's mission.

2.5 Servicing Human Resources Directors (HRDs)

2.5.1 Servicing HRDs (or designees) are responsible for:

- a. Implementing telework in accordance with 5 U.S.C. ch. 65 and this directive.
- b. Advising and assisting management officials on the program requirements and providing timely reports to the TMO to meet Agency data collection requirements.

c. Annually, or more frequently as required, evaluating their local telework program to assess participation trends against Agency goals and identify and recommend program improvements, as necessary.

2.6 Supervisors

2.6.1 Supervisors are responsible for:

a. Determining employee eligibility to participate in the telework program in accordance with chapter 3 of this directive and documenting that determination in the time and attendance system.

b. Prior to approving an employee's request for telework or remote work:

(1) Ensuring the time and attendance system reflects that the employee is eligible to participate in the telework program.

(2) Reminding telework-ready employees (i.e., employees on approved telework agreements) of the requirement to be prepared to telework when there is an anticipated weather or safety-related event.

(3) Ensuring employees who are approved for telework/remote work at NASA on or after December 9, 2010, have completed required telework training, available in the System for Administration, Training, and Educational Resources for NASA (SATERN).

(4) Using the telework or remote work agreement as a framework for discussion. The discussion should include:

(a) Expectations on maintaining contact with the organization and customers while in a telework/remote work status.

(b) Work assignments that are conducive for telework.

(c) Equipment and technical support, including the handling of equipment problems.

(d) Telework schedule.

(e) Procedures for requesting telework/remote work or changing an approved agreement.

(f) Leave requests while in a telework status.

(g) Recording telework/remote work hours in the time and attendance system.

(h) Expectations during an emergency situation.

c. Approving telework or remote work requests by completing the relevant Agency Agreement.

d. Consulting with the Center Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) Office Disability Program Manager in accordance with NPR 3713.1 when an employee requests to telework/work remotely based on the need for reasonable accommodation due to a disability or medical condition.

e. Ensuring that teleworkers utilize the same time and attendance rules as non-teleworkers, including procedures for requesting leave, overtime, or compensatory time.

f. Ensuring that telework/remote work hours worked by an employee are coded accurately to reflect use of telework/remote work prior to approving an employee's timesheet in the time and attendance system.

- g. Coordinating requests from employees for remote work with HR prior to approving such requests in accordance with this directive.
- h. Upon approving remote work for a current employee, submitting a request for personnel action to HR to document the change to the employee's duty station to the approved alternative work location (e.g., the employee's home city/county/state).
- i. Coordinating decisions to authorize a remote work arrangement for a recruitment action in accordance with this directive.
- j. Terminating a telework or remote work agreement any time the work arrangement fails to meet the needs of the organization or when an employee's eligibility status changes based on the criteria in chapter 3 of this directive.
- k. Periodically reviewing an established telework/remote work agreement with the employee.
- l. Complying with the terms of the supervisor certification as specified in telework/remote work agreement.
- m. Ensuring that teleworkers, remote workers, and non-teleworkers are treated the same for purposes of job performance appraisals, work assignments and requirements, training, development, awards, advancement, reduction in grade, retention, removal, and other employment matters involving managerial discretion.
- n. Ensuring teleworking employees report to the official worksite for a minimum of two days per pay period unless the employee is on approved leave or covered by an approved exception outlined in Chapter 5.2 of this NPR. Supervisors may make individual determinations on an employee's telework arrangements based on the employee's work schedule, the hours an employee is scheduled to work on a telework day, etc.

2.7 Employees

2.7.1 Employees are responsible for:

- a. Completing mandatory telework training prior to establishing an agreement to participate in the telework program in accordance with this directive.
- b. Requesting approval for telework or remote work by completing the applicable Agency-approved agreement request located in the time and attendance system; no other agreements are authorized.
- c. When a request for telework or remote work is based on the need for reasonable accommodation due to a disability or medical condition, following the procedures described in NPR 3713.1.
- d. Being prepared to telework during an anticipated weather/safety event.
- e. Recording telework/remote work hours worked with the appropriate labor code and payroll designation code on their timesheets in the time and attendance system.
- f. Complying with the terms of an approved telework/remote work agreement.
- g. Adhering to all Agency and Center policies, procedures, security requirements, and property management regulations, concerning the removal and safeguarding of NASA property and equipment.

h. Being accessible and available to the supervisor, organization, and customers during established working hours while in a telework status.

i. For situational or routine teleworkers, understanding that they may be required to report to their official worksite due to workload demands or other official purposes in lieu of scheduled telework.

j. Understanding that working at an alternative worksite is not a substitute for dependent or elder care.

Chapter 3. Eligibility Requirements

3.1.1 All civil-service employees are eligible to participate in the telework program with the following exceptions:

a. The position requires regular and recurring handling of classified materials.

Note: employees whose duties primarily involve classified materials may telework to perform non-classified work assignments or training.

b. The employee performs onsite activities on a daily basis that cannot be conducted at an alternative worksite.

c. The employee has been officially disciplined for absence without leave exceeding five days in a calendar year.

d. The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.

3.1.2 Although the above criteria establish when an employee is eligible to participate in the telework program, eligibility does not equate to an entitlement for telework or remote work. Employee's participation is voluntary and subject to supervisory approval. A supervisor may deny an eligible employee's request for mission-related reasons and when it is in the best interest of the organization, e.g., based on staffing needs.

3.1.3 Prior to approving or denying telework for the below, supervisors must contact the Servicing HR Office to coordinate whether telework will best support the organization for:

a. Employees who have been disciplined for actions not covered by 3.1.1.

b. Supervisors who have concerns about an employee's performance.

Chapter 4. Training Requirements

Employees shall successfully complete telework training (currently available in SATERN) before entering into a written telework or remote work agreement, unless the employee was approved for and working under a telework or remote work agreement at NASA before December 9, 2010.

Chapter 5. Worksite and Equipment

5.1 Worksite/Duty Station

5.1.1 For employees covered by a telework agreement for routine or situational telework, the permanent duty station (PDS) is the location of the regular worksite of the employee's position (i.e., the place where the employee would normally work absent a telework agreement). PDS for remote work arrangements is defined in Section 6.1.1 of this NPR.

5.2 Temporary Exceptions to Telework Arrangements

5.2.1 An authorized management official may approve an exception to the twice-in-a-pay-period requirement to address certain situations in accordance with 5 CFR § 531.605. For example, when an employee is recovering from an injury or medical condition or the employee is affected by an emergency situation, which temporarily prevents the employee from commuting to his or her regular worksite.

5.2.2 Management officials may only authorize a temporary exception when the employee retains a residence in the commuting area of the regular worksite and the employee is expected to return to the worksite in the near future (i.e., within one year) or when otherwise authorized under law or regulation (e.g., during an investigation.)

5.2.3 For employees who have received approval by an authorized management official for a temporary exception to the twice-in-a-pay-period reporting requirement to the regular worksite, the PDS is the location of the regular worksite of the employee's position (i.e., the place where the employee would normally work absent a telework agreement).

5.3 Equipment/Information Technology (IT)

5.3.1 To the extent permitted by Federal laws, regulations, and Agency policies and procedures, IT and/or communication equipment, software, etc., will be provided by the Agency to a teleworker or remote worker. The equipment should be determined necessary for the performance of the employee's assigned duties, reasonably available, cost effective, and subject to the availability of funding.

5.3.2 While working at an alternative worksite, teleworkers/remote workers shall comply with Government-wide regulations and Agency policies and procedures for the safeguarding of information technology resources and information, including the appropriate use of removable media and cloud computing.

5.3.3 The Agency assumes no responsibility for any operating costs, including home maintenance, insurance, personal equipment, utilities, internet and phone services associated with an employee's use of a personal residence as an alternative worksite.

Chapter 6. Remote Work

6.1 Overview

6.1.1 This chapter provides procedural requirements for the request and approval of a remote work arrangement that allows an employee to perform work at an approved alternative location (i.e., employee's residence) on a long term basis. The employee's official PDS is the location of the remote work site.

6.1.2 Although remote workers are not technically considered teleworkers, they administratively fall under the Agency telework program. Telework requirements in this directive, including eligibility, employee requests, training, equipment, agreements, and reporting apply to remote workers. Participation is voluntary and subject to supervisory approval based on the needs of the organization to perform its mission effectively and efficiently.

6.1.3 Remote work may be authorized to help organizations recruit new employees with hard-to-find skill-sets in the local commuting area or to retain current employees who may otherwise leave the Agency due to relocation. For recruit actions, the authorization of remote work will be clearly stated in the vacancy announcement.

6.1.4 Employees on approved remote work agreements are expected to work during a weather/safety event affecting the employing organization. The employee may be approved for weather/safety leave only if the supervisor determines that a weather/safety event directly impacts the employee's ability to perform work at the approved alternate worksite.

6.1.5 This chapter does not cover employees on a telework agreement that have been approved to telework full time under a temporary exception in accordance with section 5.2 of this directive.

6.1.6 Remote work shall only occur within the United States and its territories.

6.1.7 The next step is to perform a cost analysis by determining the direct cost and/or savings of a remote work arrangement outside the commuting area. The local commuting area is defined in 5 CFR 550.703 as an area in which employees live and can reasonably be expected to travel back and forth to work on a daily basis. The Servicing Human Resources (HR) office is responsible for coordinating with the Office of the Chief Finance Office and the Center Office of the Chief Counsel or the Office of General Counsel (for Headquarters personnel), to determine the local commuting area.

6.2 Management Considerations

When considering approval of a remote work arrangement, management should be aware that required relocation costs are likely to be much greater than the cost of occasional trips back to the regular worksite. Therefore, unless there is a major problem with the remote work arrangement, such as the employee no longer meets eligibility requirements, management should ensure to the best of their ability that the arrangement is beneficial to all parties prior to approving the remote work arrangement because it will be expensive and disruptive to terminate.

6.3 Change in Duty Station

6.3.1 Approval of remote work for a current Agency employee requires a documented change in the employee's official PDS, which may impact the employee in a number of ways, including pay, travel reimbursement, Reduction-in-Force competitive area, and unemployment compensation.

6.3.2 The supervisor shall document the change by submitting a request for personnel action to change the employee's PDS to be effective at the beginning of the pay period when the employee is approved to start work at the new permanent duty location. The personnel action may reflect a change in duty station; however, when an employee moves to a PDS that causes a locality pay change, a pay adjustment is required in accordance with the OPM Guide to Processing Personnel Actions.

6.4 Travel Reimbursement

6.4.1 The employee's official worksite or PDS is the official location of the employee's position of record as stated on the employee's SF-50. Supervisors considering remote work locations for their employees need to take into consideration budget implications based on how often the employee will need to physically report to the regular (i.e., organization's) worksite.

6.4.2 Travel costs for remote workers traveling back and forth to the regular worksite will be reimbursed in accordance with NPR 9710.1. Additionally, if management decides to relocate the employee back to the regular worksite, the employee is entitled to a Government reimbursed move based on a management-directed reassignment. For example, if the employee's regular worksite is in Washington, DC, and the remote PDS is in Boston, MA, the employee is entitled to receive travel and/or relocation benefits when required to travel back to Washington, DC, or relocate to the DC worksite permanently.

6.4.3 Remote work is a voluntary program; relocation expenses to the alternative worksite are not authorized. If an employee voluntarily moves back to the regular worksite, a Government reimbursed move is not authorized.

6.4.4 When considering employees for remote work, supervisors will complete a cost and benefit analysis that includes cost of travel back to the regular worksite. The analysis should also estimate travel costs to other locations where the employee is reasonably expected to travel from their remote work location as compared to travel costs from the organization's location.

6.5 Procedures

6.5.1 Employees should initiate a request to their supervisor at least 60 days prior to the desired effective date of a remote work arrangement.

6.5.2 When deciding on whether or not to support a request or to offer a remote work arrangement for recruitment purposes, supervisors need to assess each case carefully. In addition to evaluating the potential benefits that serve the best interest of the Government, the supervisor needs to consider potential costs and pitfalls to approving a remote work arrangement on a permanent basis.

6.5.3 To begin the assessment process, supervisors will review the job duties to determine if they can be successfully performed remotely and determine the business based reason to enter a remote work agreement. For example, will it result in retaining an employee who would otherwise leave the Agency. Supervisors should also consider whether or not approval of a remote work arrangement negatively impacts the work/mission of the organization or other employees currently assigned to the organization.

6.5.4 At a minimum, the documented cost assessment should include the following data:

- a. Estimated annual travel costs to and from the remote worksite to the regular (i.e., organization's) worksite.
- b. Any change in salary based on the pay locale of the remote worksite.
- c. Any additional expenses associated with IT services, software, and/or hardware to support the remote work arrangement.
- d. Document the benefits of the work arrangement that provide evidence that approval of remote work will either result in cost savings or outweigh any additional costs to the Agency's budget.

6.6 Approval Authority

6.6.1 First-level supervisors may support or deny a request for remote work. Requests that are supported by the supervisor shall be coordinated with HR and approved by a higher level management official.

6.6.2 Centers, Headquarters Organizations, and Mission Support Enterprise Organizations have discretion in determining the final approval level. The approving official will be at least one level above the first level supervisor and documented on the remote work agreement.

6.7 Discontinuation of a Remote Work Arrangement

6.7.1 Once a remote work agreement is approved, a subsequent management decision to discontinue or terminate the work arrangement that requires the employee to relocate to the organization's worksite (i.e., a management-directed reassignment outside of the commuting area) will be coordinated with HR and the OCC (OGC for Headquarters) to ensure all statutory and regulatory requirements are met.

6.7.2 A management-directed reassignment entitles the employee to a government reimbursed move, unless:

- a. The remote work arrangement is temporary in nature in accordance with section 5.2 of this directive.
- b. The remote work arrangement is terminated at the request of the employee. This is considered an employee voluntary action.
- c. When the work arrangement has directly contributed to a performance issue.

6.7.3 If an employee declines to relocate to the organization's location, management may propose the employee's removal from Federal service for failure to accept a management-directed reassignment in accordance with applicable regulations.

Chapter 7. Workers' Compensation and Liability

7.1 Teleworkers and remote workers are covered by the Federal Employees Compensation Act. On-the-job injuries or accidents will be brought to the immediate attention of the employee's supervisor and are subject to investigation. Specific requirements for employees and supervisors are detailed in NPR 1800.1.

7.2 The Agency is generally not liable for damages to the employee's real and/or personal property while the employee is working at the approved alternative worksite. Requests for advice and assistance regarding legal claims or other liabilities will be referred to the Office of the General/Chief Counsel.

Chapter 8. Schedule Modification and Termination of Telework Agreements

The following only applies to routine or situational teleworkers:

- a. Supervisors may require employees approved for routine or situational telework to report to their regular worksite on a scheduled telework day to accommodate workload demands or for other official purposes.
- b. Employees may request a change to their scheduled telework day(s) in a particular week or biweekly pay period or alternative worksite. Supervisors should accommodate these requests, whenever possible, consistent with mission requirements.
- c. Termination of a telework agreement can be initiated by either the supervisor or the employee. If the supervisor decides to terminate a telework agreement, they will provide advance notice to the employee along with the reason(s) for termination.

Chapter 9. Continuity of Operations (COOP) during National and/or Regional Emergency Situations and Excused Absences

9.1 COOP

9.1.1 During an emergency situation, including a Pandemic Health Crisis, the telework program will play a vital role for the Agency's COOP by preserving essential Agency, Headquarters, and/or Center functions and providing an option for employees to continue working during times when they may be prevented from reporting to their regular worksite.

9.1.2 COOP supersedes telework policy during an emergency situation. Supervisors may direct employees to telework during a COOP or pandemic health crisis situation. Telework agreements, mandatory training, and other telework policy requirements are not required in these situations.

9.1.3 An employee directed to telework during a COOP or pandemic health crisis situation does not imply that the employee is eligible for participation during nonemergency periods.

9.2 Excused Absence, Administrative Dismissal, and Emergency Closings

9.2.1 One of the major goals of the telework program is to improve continuity of operations during emergency situations that cause a disruption of Government operations, including inclement weather or safety-related events.

9.2.2 Telework-ready employees (i.e., employees on approved telework agreements) are expected to be prepared to work from home during an anticipated weather/safety event and will not be granted weather/safety administrative leave when a weather or safety event can be reasonably anticipated in accordance with 5 CFR pt. 630, subpt. P.

9.2.3 Authorized management officials may grant weather/safety leave to telework-ready employees only when, in the management official's judgement, the event could not be reasonably anticipated or if the supervisor determines that a weather/safety event directly impacts the employee's ability to perform work at the approved alternate worksite.

Chapter 10. Reporting Requirements

10.1 The Office of the CHCO is responsible for establishing and communicating Agency reporting requirements on the impact of telework on emergency readiness, energy use, recruitment and retention, performance, productivity, and employee attitudes and opinions regarding telework.

10.2 Servicing HR offices will provide the data necessary for routine and situational telework and remote work arrangements for Agency consolidation and analysis as requested to meet Agency and external reporting requirements.

10.3 Reports will be retained for two years.

Appendix A. Definitions

Local Commuting Area. For the purpose of this directive, the area that has been established by the servicing HR office in which employees live and can reasonably be expected to travel back and forth to work on a daily basis.

Permanent Duty Station (PDS). Also referred to as the official worksite, is the location where the employee regularly performs work. For most employees, this will be the location of the employing organization's worksite. The PDS is documented on the employee's SF-50. The official worksite or duty station for a remote worker is the place (city/town, county, State) where they are approved to work on a regular basis in accordance with 5 CFR § 531.605.

Reasonable Accommodation. A reasonable accommodation is any change made in the work environment to assist a qualified individual with a disability to apply for a job, perform the essential functions of a job, or enjoy the benefits and privileges of employment. Regular Worksite. For the purpose of this directive, the employing organization's worksite/duty station for the employee's position of record; the physical address or place where the employee would work if not a remote worker.

Remote Work. For the purpose of this directive, a work arrangement in which the employee works at an approved alternate worksite (e.g. residence) on a long term basis. The employee is not expected to regularly report to the regular worksite at least twice in a biweekly pay period. To be considered remote work, a temporary exception has not been granted and the approved alternate worksite is documented on the employee's SF-50.

Remote Work Agreement. A written Agency-approved agreement between a management official and an employee that outlines duties, obligations, responsibilities, and conditions of the remote work arrangement. This agreement is completed and approved by an authorized official before the remote work arrangement is implemented.

Telework-Ready. Employees enrolled in the telework program with an approved telework agreement.

Collective Bargaining Agreement(s) –
Telework Provisions

3.b. CURRENT LABOR AGREEMENTS

NASA does not have any collective bargaining agreements with labor unions that impacted or overridden agency processes or missions due to telework or remote work provisions. However, NASA has current labor agreements that include clauses about telework. The following are excerpts from those collective bargaining agreements that cover telework:

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN GODDARD SPACE FLIGHT CENTER & AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES LOCAL 22 -

“The Parties agree that the application of the Agency Revised Telework Agreement will not adversely affect the rights and accommodations provided by the collective bargaining agreement covering the Center’s implementation of Office of Management and Budget (OMB) directive M-21-25, subsection 531.605 of 5 CFR, and governmentwide regulations (e.g., Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, Rehabilitation Act, etc.) promulgated and enforced by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC).”

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AGREEMENT BETWEEN NASA AMES RESEARCH CENTER AND AMES FEDERAL EMPLOYEES’ UNION, INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF PROFESSIONAL AND TECHNICAL ENGINEERS (IFPTE), IFPTE LOCAL 30 -

Article XXXV (TELECOMMUTING) -

“The Union and Center recognize that telecommuting can enhance employee productivity and agree to negotiate a policy to expand the telecommuting program at the Center. The parties agree to conduct a joint survey of telecommuting practices at the Center to provide an empirical basis for such a policy. The telecommuting program shall address issues of government provided versus employee-owned hardware and software, workweek, and overtime.”

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING BETWEEN GODDARD SPACE FLIGHT CENTER & AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES LOCAL 1923

This Memorandum of Agreement (MoU) is entered into, by and between, Goddard Space Flight Center (GSFC), Wallops Flight Facility (WFF) (“Employer” or “Agency”) and the American Federation of Government Employees (AFGE), Local 1923 (“Union”), also referred to as the parties.

The purpose of this MOU is to identify the negotiated and agreed to terms and conditions, by the parties, pertaining to the Center Implementation of Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Management Directive M-21-25, Integrating Planning for A Safe Increased Return of Federal Employees and Contractors to Physical Workplaces with Post-Reentry Personnel Policies and Work Environment at Goddard Space Flight Center.

The parties agree to the following:

1. The Employer shall permit employees that are immunosuppressed, immunocompromised, have homecare issues, etc. to continue teleworking to the fullest extent practicable.
2. The Employer shall permit those employees who do not feel comfortable returning to work on-site to continue teleworking, and that alternate work arrangements, to the fullest extent practicable, will be provided by their management.
3. As directed by M-21-25 and OPM instruction on the subject, all telework decisions shall be based on the job in question, and not the preference of a manager.

4. Management shall provide a specific, written basis for i) excluding any positions or individuals from the presumption of expanded telework and work-schedule flexibility, or ii) limiting the frequency/duration of the telework arrangement/work-schedule flexibility respective to the one requested by an employee. In either instance, the burden of establishing, by a preponderance of evidence, that a requested telework arrangement or work-schedule flexibility is not acceptable, shall reside with management.
8. For the foreseeable future, no employee will be required to relinquish their onsite office as a condition for telework; and that the agency's implementation of M-21-25 currently does not obligate employees to relinquish their onsite office as a condition for being granted a telework request of their choice.

If this changes, management recognizes the Future of Work (FOW) guidance will require local bargaining in accordance with the Statute and the CBA, prior to any implementation of this change. Toward this end, management shall fulfill its duty to bargain such changes in accordance with the Statute, CBA and negotiated ground rules; and after the fulfillment of the agency's national consultation obligations with the Union regarding these changes.

9. Management will not directly or indirectly intimidating, threatening, coercing, or attempting to intimidate, threaten, or coerce any employee for the purpose of interfering with such employee's rights to request or not request telework.
10. The Center will strongly encourage its supervisors to telework to the maximum extent practicable.
11. The Center will ensure teleworking employees are not disadvantaged in personnel practices or overlooked for leadership opportunities in favor of employees who choose to work exclusively in the office.
12. The Center will clearly communicate and publicly endorse the flexibilities and work schedule(s) that are available to employees, along with their expectations for those electing to use any new flexibilities. An employee's decision to telework shall not be a factor in decisions related to hiring, promotions or other advancement, and management shall provide clear guidance to employees in that regard.
14. Whereas teleworking during the pandemic a) has demonstrated that employees are completing work remotely and b) has debunked any myths that employees are not completing work successfully or regularly abuse telework privileges, management shall avoid imposing upon teleworkers an additional burden of reporting requirements beyond those imposed on employees preponderantly working in the office.
15. The Center will improve and invest in conferencing equipment for meeting rooms so that employees working in person can, to the extent practicable, seamlessly engage with remote colleagues. The Employer agrees not to remove and limit this capability so as to justify an arbitrary disapproval of a requested telework arrangement (e.g., "We can no longer operate Microsoft Teams/Polycons every day, so you need to come onsite more often to meet", etc.) or to otherwise discourage telework in this regard. All meetings which can be conducted remotely, will maintain the capability to be conducted remotely.

Management concurs and commits to following the guidance the agency Future of Work team develops to support increased virtual interactions and to ensure that employees can continue to be productive outside of the office.

2020 AGREEMENT JOHN F KENNEDY SPACE CENTER NASA AND LOCAL 513, AMERICAN FEDERATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES – Article 10 Telework

Article 10: Telework

Section 1. The parties agree that BU employees may telework consistent with to mission requirements and applicable laws, Agency-wide rules, government-wide rules and regulations, and OPM policy. As such telework can:

- a. Improve employees' work lives by allowing a better balance of work and family responsibilities and reduce work-related stress while at the same time achieving the goals of the Employer;
- b. Improve the Employer's ability to recruit and retain employees;
- c. Help reduce traffic congestion, energy consumption, and air pollution; and
- d. Allow the Employer to respond to the changing demands of the workplace and respond to emergency situations where physical access to the Employer building or work site may not be possible.

Section 2. Employees who have been given the opportunity to demonstrate acceptable performance under 5 C.F.R. Part 432 are not eligible to request a telework arrangement. In addition, employees must not have any conduct issues that would have a negative impact on a telework arrangement. This does not preclude telework as an accommodation under the reasonable accommodation process whether or not the employee is serving a period under an opportunity to demonstrate acceptable performance under 5 C.F.R. Part 432.

Section 3. The nature of the employee's work must be appropriate for teleworking. Work that requires reading, reviewing, analysis, development of written products, telephone-intensive tasks, or computer-oriented tasks are examples of work that would be feasible for a telework arrangement. Work that may not be appropriate includes:

- a. Work that requires face-to-face contact,
- b. Work that requires access to material that cannot be removed from the regular office such as classified documents, or
- c. Work that requires a level of computer or other security that cannot be duplicated at the alternate workplace.

Section 4. When reviewing the appropriateness of a telework arrangement, the Employer will consider the Employer's organizational needs. The telework arrangement might not be appropriate at certain times if the absence of the employee would create additional work or hardship which adversely affects other employees. Therefore, employees must be flexible and willing to adjust their telework arrangements to meet these needs.

Section 5. Employees may terminate their telework arrangement at any time.

Section 6. For any telework arrangement, in the event that unforeseen dependent care situations arise while an employee is teleworking, the employee must record appropriate leave charges for the time spent providing the dependent care.

Section 7. Employees must submit either continuing or episodic telework applications using the Agency's electronic application process. If the request for either arrangement is denied, the reasons for the denial will be communicated to the employee in writing.

Section 8. Employees who seek a telework arrangement to accommodate a special circumstance for a single continuous period of time (short-term arrangement) may apply at any time. The outcome of the review process will be noted on the application and the applicant will be notified accordingly. If the request for the arrangement is denied, the reasons for the denial will be communicated to the employee in writing.

Section 9. The Employer may require the employee to change the approved telework arrangement for short periods of time to meet Employer or Agency mission needs.

Section 10. The Employer may cancel an employee's approved telework arrangement if the Employer finds that:

- a. The employee's continued participation is inconsistent with the requirements of this Article or the employee fails to adhere to his or her telework agreement;
- b. The employee's performance has declined (for example, where the employee fails to meet established deadlines or fails to progress satisfactorily on assignments, but excluding insignificant fluctuations or declines in performance);

- c. The employee fails to truthfully report time worked or engages in other misconduct; or
- d. Changes in duties or organizational needs require the employee's physical presence.

Section 11. By submitting the request, the employee agrees to the terms and conditions of the telework arrangement that cover such items as the voluntary nature of the arrangement; official duty station; performance requirements; leave approval; overtime; proper use and safeguards of government property; safety standards that apply to the alternate work site; and policies and procedures for capturing, managing, and controlling documentation, agency records, and/or sensitive information.

Section 12. As unexpected circumstances arise, due to personal circumstances, or inclement weather, it may be difficult to reach a manager. If the employee has work available that can be done at home or a temporary alternate location, the employee must make a good faith effort to contact his or her manager to request approval, such as by e-mail or voice mail message, with a brief description of the planned work. Under these circumstances, if the employee does not receive a response by the beginning of core hours (9:00 am), he or she may telework.

Section 13. Teleworking does not change the terms or conditions of employment. An employee participating in a telework arrangement will be available to management, co-workers and others for Employer business by telephone, voice mail, and/or e-mail during his or her scheduled tour of duty. The employee must provide the manager with a telephone number where he or she can be reached. The employee must check frequently for any voice mail or email messages.

Section 14. A new telework agreement must be completed if the employee changes work units, or if there is a significant change to any item in the telework agreement. If an employee requests a short-term telework arrangement for medical reasons, the employee should provide medical documentation using the reasonable accommodation procedure.

Section 15. When an emergency or other unforeseen circumstance such as loss of electricity or connectivity affects the alternate work site, but not the official duty station, the circumstances and timing dictate the course of action. Options include having the employee report to the official duty station or other approved location, or approving the use of leave.

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING (MOU), BETWEEN THE NATIONAL AERONAUTICS AND SPACE ADMINISTRATION, GODDARD SPACE FLIGHT CENTER AND THE INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF PROFESSIONAL AND TECHNICAL ENGINEERS, LOCAL 29 ON THE NASA TELEWORK PROGRAM

The parties to this MOU are the NASA GSFC (hereafter, Management) and the IFPTE, Local 29 (hereafter, Goddard Engineers, Scientists, and Technicians Association or GESTA). This MOU applies to Bargaining Unit Employees (hereafter, Employees) covered by the Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA) between Management and GESTA and constitutes the entire understanding of the parties regarding the NASA Telework Program.

In addition to the provisions described in accordance with NASA guidelines (currently NPR 3600.2, NASA Telework Program), the parties hereby agree to the following addition.

- 1) Supervisors will approve or deny an eligible employee's request for either an Episodic or Core Telework Agreement within two pay periods unless there are extenuating circumstances (i.e. unique circumstances or extended absences) which preclude disposition within two pay periods. Whenever possible, immediate supervisors should notify the employee of the need to delay approval/denial of a Telework Agreement request and/or refer the request to an alternate management official having authority to approve or deny the request, as appropriate.
- 2) Supervisors will document approvals and denials of Telework Agreement requests in NASA's automated time and attendance system in accordance with NASA guidelines.
- 3) If an employee is denied Teleworking, then the employee's Supervisor shall provide a written justification of the denial to the employee within 10 workdays of that decision.
- 4) Telework denials may be grieved by employees in accordance with the Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA).
- 5) All Telework Agreements regarding employees shall be made on a fair and equitable basis without discrimination or personal bias.

This MOU becomes effective immediately, upon signature by the Ranking Union Official and the Agency Representative authorized to enter into binding agreements with GESTA. Further agreements between the parties related to this matter shall be documented as addenda to this MOU or as independent MOU/MOA, as determined by mutual agreement.

January 2024 Submission

U.S. National Science Foundation
Work Environment Implementation Data Call
January 24, 2024

- (1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

NSF completed implementation of its new Telework and Remote Work Policy on October 23, 2023 and is in a steady state aligned with its in-person presence objectives.

- (2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

No updates or additional steps are planned at this time.

- (3) Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

The NSF Organizational Health and Organizational Performance Team monitors in-person presence metrics and includes them in quarterly review discussions with the leadership team. Senior leaders also work with their staff to establish practices that optimize in-person and telework time, such as establishing core days for teams and work units, developing norms for working in a hybrid environment and holding formal and informal in-person events to provide staff more opportunities for in-person interaction.

National Science Foundation
Telework Policy(s)

Subchapter 500 – Telework and Remote Work

I. Introduction

A core belief of the National Science Foundation (NSF) is that “work is what we do, not where we are,” and in support of this, NSF recognizes the many benefits of a telework and remote work program. Balancing work and family responsibilities, enhancing NSF’s mission, promoting recruitment and retention efforts, and meeting environmental, financial, and commuting concerns are among the recognized benefits and advantages of a robust telework and remote work program.

In recognizing these benefits, NSF also acknowledges that the needs of the Agency are essential to accomplishing its mission. While management is responsible for the efficient and effective operation of the organization, including maintaining customer service expectations and remaining highly adaptive, at NSF we strive to exemplify that telework and remote work can enhance employee satisfaction and productivity and help facilitate the Agency’s mission.

II. Program Summary

This subchapter provides the Agency telework and remote work policy and guidance specific to all NSF employees. Intergovernmental Personnel Act (IPA) assignees are also subject to this policy and guidance. The provisions of the NSF telework and remote work program will be administered in accordance with public law and applicable regulations, Office of Personnel Management (OPM) guidelines, and other relevant guidance on telework in the Federal Government.

III. Definitions

Alternate Worksite	Worksite approved for telework or remote work, other than NSF Headquarters (HQ), including an employee’s residence or other work location that supports productive work and provides an appropriate environment, connectivity, and security for the work effort.
Core Telework (also known as Regular)	Approved telework that occurs on a regular, recurring, and ongoing basis on an established schedule of at least one (1) day per pay period.
Duty Station	The location where an employee regularly performs their official work duties. The duty station for a remote worker is the approved alternate worksite.

CHAPTER 8.500 – TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

Family Member	An individual with any of the following relationships to the employee: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Spouse, and parents thereof. 2. Sons and daughters, and spouses thereof. 3. Parents, and spouses thereof. 4. Brothers and sisters, and spouses thereof. 5. Grandparents and grandchildren, and spouses thereof. 6. Domestic partner and parents thereof, including domestic partners of any individual listed in items 2 through 5 of this definition. 7. Any individual related by blood or affinity whose close association with the employee is the equivalent of a family relationship.
Local Commuting Area	The geographic area surrounding a worksite that encompasses the localities where people live and reasonably can be expected to travel back and forth daily to work. This is defined as anywhere within a fifty (50) mile radius of NSF HQ in Alexandria, VA.
Long-Term Temporary Remote Work	Long-Term Temporary Remote Work is intended to address certain situations where the employee is temporarily unable to report to NSF HQ for reasons beyond the employee's control and is expected to last more than one (1) year. The duty station is the approved alternate worksite.
Maximum Telework	Eight (8) days of telework per pay period.
Official Travel	Travel to conduct U.S. government business for authorized and official purposes, including Independent Research and Development (IR/D), via an obligated travel authorization between an official duty station or other authorized point of departure to a temporary duty location and return, including travel weather delays.
Onsite Day	A minimum of five (5) hours in the NSF HQ building or an official business status equates to an onsite day.
Reasonable Accommodation	A modification or adjustment to the work environment or work process that enables a “qualified individual with a disability” to perform the essential functions of the job.

CHAPTER 8.500 – TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

Remote Work	A workplace flexibility allowing an employee to work at an approved alternate worksite, within or outside the local commuting area of the NSF HQ, with no expectation to report to the Agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis.
Situational Telework (also known as Periodic)	An instance of telework that is approved on a case-by-case basis, where the hours worked were not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular telework schedule.
Telework	A flexible work arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of their position and other authorized activities from an approved alternate worksite other than the location of NSF HQ, where the employee would otherwise work. The duty station is NSF HQ.
Telework/Remote Work Agreement	A formal agreement between an employee and management establishing a telework or remote work arrangement.
Telework Managing Officer (TMO)	An established position within the Division of Human Resource Management (HRM), the incumbent of which is responsible for telework advocacy; policy development and implementation related to the Agency telework and remote work program; the provision of telework expertise and guidance to staff, supervisors and managers, and NSF leadership; and who serves as the primary Agency point of contact to OPM on telework and remote work matters.
Telework-Ready	The capability for an employee to work from an alternate worksite to continue operations through the efficient and effective use of information technology and telecommunication.
Temporary Ninety (90) Day Remote Work	Temporary Ninety (90) Day Remote Work is intended to address certain situations where the employee is temporarily unable to report to NSF HQ for reasons beyond the employee's control and is not expected to last more than one (1) year. The duty station is NSF HQ.
Tour of Duty	The timeframe in which an employee must complete their basic work requirement during a workday.

IV. Responsibilities

Telework Managing Officer (TMO)	The TMO is responsible for: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Providing oversight of the telework and remote work program. 2. Providing telework and remote work advocacy, policy development, and implementation related to the NSF telework and remote work program. 3. Providing expertise and guidance to staff, supervisors, managers, and NSF leadership. 4. Resolving discrepancies with policy implementation for staff and supervisors. 5. Serving as a primary, senior-level Agency point of contact to OPM on telework and remote work matters. 6. Reporting on telework and remote work data and activities.
Supervisor	The SUPERVISOR is responsible for: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Treating employees equitably regardless of telework, remote, or onsite work status for purposes of performance management, work assignments, and other issues involving managerial discretion. 2. Promptly evaluating initial and modification requests for telework and remote work in a reasonable, fair, and consistent manner and ensuring that approvals or denials are based on sound business and/or mission-related reasons. 3. Making known to employees seeking remote work or Maximum Telework that the Office of Equity and Civil Rights (OECR) provides reasonable accommodations. 4. Setting clear expectations for employees about communication and performance standards. 5. Monitoring employees’ performance by focusing on goals and outcomes rather than physical presence and activity. 6. Ensuring employees complete mandatory training prior to engaging in work from an approved alternate worksite. 7. Reaching out to the TMO in HRM to address any concerns with telework, including policy interpretation. 8. Verifying the employee’s recorded instances of telework and remote work in the electronic time and attendance system.

Employee	The EMPLOYEE is responsible for: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Completing mandatory telework training and obtaining all required approvals on the Telework/Remote Work Agreement prior to engaging in work from an approved alternate worksite. 2. Recording instances of telework and/or remote work in the electronic time and attendance system. 3. Complying with the terms of the approved Telework/Remote Work Agreement. 4. Being responsive to calls from the office (e.g., from supervisors, colleagues, and customers) unless the supervisor has approved the employee to work on an assignment without interruptions. 5. Using all technology tools, as necessary, to make and receive phone calls, messages, and emails, as well as collaborate during the workday. 6. Ensuring appropriate dependent care arrangements are in place when teleworking. 7. Honoring reasonable requests for call-back to the office when required and for arranging their schedule to be physically present for meetings or activities, as needed. 8. Submitting initial requests and modifications to a Telework/Remote Work Agreement in the Telework and Work Schedule System (TAWSS).

V. Eligibility

NSF has determined that all positions are eligible for telework, however not all employees or positions will meet the telework and/or remote work eligibility criteria established by law, regulation, or Agency policy. The frequency of telework (and remote work) may differ from position to position based on assigned duties, and some positions may have duties that make the position eligible for situational telework only.

Work suitable for telework or remote work depends on job duties rather than job series or title, type of appointment, or work schedule. Entering into a Telework/Remote Work Agreement is voluntary. Before engaging in any type of telework or remote work, the employee must receive prior Agency approval through the TAWSS.

Permanent Ineligibility

An employee who has been disciplined for the following reasons may not telework or be approved for remote work in accordance with the Telework Enhancement Act:

CHAPTER 8.500 – TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

1. The employee has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five (5) days in any calendar year.
2. The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of Subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography on a Federal Government computer, or while performing official Federal Government duties.

VI. Telework Training

Telework training is required and must be completed before approval of a request for telework or remote work. Employees participating in any level of telework, including remote work, must have an approved telework or remote work agreement in place in the TAWSS.

On an as needed basis, supervisors may require an employee to re-take training due to performance concerns.

VII. Position Assessment for Eligibility

A. Position Category Designations

There are two (2) position category designations determining eligibility for telework or remote work: Telework and Remote. A specific position category designation does not serve as approval for an employee for said designation. Employees must submit a request in the TAWSS and receive supervisory approval to engage in telework or remote work. IPAs may not engage in telework or remote work from their home institutions.

1. Telework. Positions with job functions that must be executed at NSF HQ on a regular basis (reporting onsite at least twice per pay period). Employees in this type of position may request approval for situational or core telework and may not telework more than eight (8) days per pay period. These positions will always have a duty station of Alexandria, VA.
2. Remote. Positions with job functions that can be executed without reporting to NSF HQ on a regular basis – generally reporting onsite no more than two (2) times per fiscal year. These positions may have an alternate worksite outside of the local commuting area.

B. Criteria for Position Category Designations

Supervisors must assess position eligibility against the business needs of the organization, ensuring that the frequency of work at a location other than NSF HQ continues to improve organizational health and performance; supports delivery of NSF statutory mission; contributes to talent recruitment and retention; and does not negatively impact the effective accomplishment of work for other employees.

Considerations for eligibility include whether physical presence at NSF HQ is required:

1. To meet infrastructure and/or equipment support needs.
2. To participate in and/or support onsite collaboration requirements for internal stakeholders.

CHAPTER 8.500 – TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

3. To participate in and/or support meetings or events at NSF HQ or within the local commuting area that require physical presence to manage local external partnerships and/or meet with local external stakeholders.
4. To ensure customer-facing service requirements are met.
5. To perform classified duties or handling of classified documents and/or information.
6. For duties that require manual labor.
7. For oversight of onsite contractor personnel.
8. To supervise onsite staff.

Considerations for eligibility also include distinctive attributes of a specific Office or Division that facilitate the viability of telework or remote work.

Supervisors may designate a new position as remote or change the position category of an existing position when the position description is re-classified or attrition occurs. For new recruitments, positions must be designated as remote before the recruitment process begins. This includes formal recruitments through USAJobs and informal recruitments via Dear Colleague Letters and direct hire authorities. To request approval for a remote position, supervisors must complete NSF Form 1741, Position Category Designation, and submit it to the TMO for approval. The Staffing Specialist should be copied on the request. Once approved, the recruitment process may proceed. When submitting a formal request for recruitment in the automated staffing system, a note indicating that the position is remote must be included in order for the vacancy announcement to indicate the position is remote. Position Category Designation forms submitted after the recruitment process has started will not be considered for approval.

VIII. Telework

Before submitting a request for telework, employees and supervisors are encouraged to discuss the employee's assigned position duties, the handling of any workload or customer service requirements that cannot be completed while teleworking (if applicable), the ability to maintain effective communication, and expectations for accessibility and responsiveness while teleworking.

Employees are expected to adhere to business hours and core hours on the Eastern Time zone (ET) (see Hours of Work and Work Schedules PER Chapter). Supervisors are expected to set reasonable deadlines to allow for asynchronous collaboration and reasonable expectations for response time for employees.

A. Situational Telework Requests

The immediate supervisor may approve an employee's request for situational telework. Any employee approved for core telework is automatically approved to request situational telework. Decisions to approve situational telework requests are made on a case-by-case basis and must be approved by the employee's immediate supervisor in advance, prior to the employee teleworking. In the event unanticipated circumstances arise on the day of the need for situational telework, employees should make an effort to request supervisory approval as far in advance as possible, but at least one (1) hour prior to the normal tour of duty.

CHAPTER 8.500 – TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

There are many different scenarios in which an employee can request supervisory approval for instances of situational telework. Examples include, but are not limited to:

1. An employee has a short-term need for uninterrupted time to complete work on a complex project or report.
2. An employee is recovering from an illness or injury and is temporarily unable to report onsite to NSF HQ.
3. An employee notifies their supervisor that they would like to use the option for unscheduled telework following an OPM announcement that the status of Federal Government operations in the Washington, D.C. area is "Open with Option for Unscheduled Leave or Unscheduled Telework" due to inclement weather. (This particular example generally requires supervisory notification, not approval.)

Employees and supervisors should establish the preferred communication process for submitting requests for situational telework, (including identifying alternate points of contact in the event an employee's immediate supervisor is unavailable), to ensure a timely approval/denial of the request can be communicated to the employee.

B. Core Telework Requests for 1 – 6 Days Per Pay Period

The immediate supervisor may approve an employee to telework for one (1) to six (6) days per pay period. The immediate supervisor is the final approving official for such requests. Any employee approved for core telework is automatically considered eligible for situational telework and does not need to submit a separate request in the TAWSS.

C. Core Telework Requests for 7 – 8 Days Per Pay Period

The Assistant Director (AD) or Office Head (OH) may approve an employee to telework from seven (7) to eight (8) days per pay period. The request must first be approved by the immediate supervisor and Division Director (if applicable). The next level supervisor is the approving official for the AD/OH.

D. Independent Research and Development (IR/D)

Employees and IPAs with approved IR/D plans may use their home institution office to conduct IR/D activities.

E. Reporting Onsite to NSF HQ

When reporting onsite to NSF HQ, employees are expected to work a full day in the office, however, they must at least work a minimum of five (5) hours in the building or an official business status for it to count as an onsite day. Every position is not suitable for maximum flexibility; therefore, employees should discuss work hours with their supervisors to ensure the mission of the organization is not negatively impacted.

F. Requests to Switch Telework Days

An employee may request to switch their telework day for circumstances that would require the employee to forfeit a scheduled telework day (e.g., position duties requiring the employee report onsite to NSF HQ, scheduled training, or conference requirements, etc.). Alternate telework days must be discussed and agreed upon by both the immediate supervisor and the employee prior to the employee switching telework days.

G. Call-backs to NSF HQ while on Approved Telework

A supervisor may call back an employee to the office for duties that cannot be accomplished offsite, such as training, meetings that uniquely require in-person attendance, retreats, and other team building exercises. In such instances, supervisors should provide as much advanced notice as possible, but no less than one (1) business day (where possible) and consider travel requirements.

IX. Remote Work

Employees are expected to adhere to business hours and core hours on the Eastern Time zone (ET). Supervisors are encouraged to set reasonable deadlines to allow for asynchronous collaboration and to set reasonable expectations for response time for employees.

A. Requests for Permanent Remote Work

All requests for permanent remote work must be approved in the TAWSS by the immediate supervisor, second-level supervisor, AD or OH, and the TMO in HRM.

B. Requests for Temporary Ninety (90) Day Remote Work

Temporary Ninety (90) Day Remote Work is intended to address certain situations where the employee is temporarily unable to report to NSF HQ for reasons beyond the employee's control. The Division Director, in consultation with the AD/OH, may approve requests from staff for temporary remote work for up to ninety (90) calendar days, not to exceed four (4) consecutive requests (totaling one [1] year). Consecutive means that the employee has not had a break in between ninety (90) day requests of less than six (6) months. If the approval lasts one (1) year, the employee must wait ninety (90) days before requesting Temporary Ninety (90) Day Remote Work again. The duty station will not be changed. The immediate supervisor is the approving official of the Division Director or higher.

Criteria for approving such requests are as follows:

1. The work can temporarily be performed offsite without impact to customers or internal and external stakeholders; and
2. The employee is expected to continue teleworking and to be able to report onsite on a regular recurring basis within one (1) year; and
3. The employee has identified an inability to work onsite due to one of the below unanticipated personal circumstances:
 - a. Victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

CHAPTER 8.500 – TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

- b. Spouse’s job (including military deployment) involuntarily located outside the Washington, D.C. locality as defined by OPM.
- c. Temporarily caring for a family member who is incapacitated as a result of physical or mental illness, injury, or pregnancy.

Examples of documentation to support the request include (but are not limited to) the following:

Reason	Examples of Documentation
Personal Circumstance	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Police report• Court order or Order of Protection• Documentation from a licensed medical professional, counselor, or victim advocate• Address protection program documentation
Spouse’s Job Relocation	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Signed statement on company letterhead that includes the location of spouse’s transfer and effective date• Military orders
Care of Family Member	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Signed statement from physician that includes the name of the person being treated, diagnosis, location of treatment, and any limitation of reporting onsite. To the extent that information is available to physician: prognosis, beginning date of the medical condition, anticipated end date (if one), and duration of treatment.

Employees must submit a request through TAWSS to initiate a formal request. Documentation must be submitted to the TMO in HRM to substantiate the request. Approved requests must be recertified every ninety (90) days.

C. Change in Duty Station

Employees approved for permanent remote work will have their duty station changed to their approved alternate worksite. The effective date of the change in duty station will be the beginning of the following pay period in which it is approved and may result in higher or lower locality pay. Employees may not designate more than one (1) official alternate worksite. If an employee has multiple approved alternate worksites, the alternate worksite that is used at least fifty-one (51) percent of the time will be identified as the official duty station. Employees are responsible for ensuring that the proper state tax changes are made after their remote work agreement has been approved.

D. Newly Hired Employees

Upon officially beginning employment with NSF, new hires may not be granted approval for Temporary Ninety (90) Day Remote Work or Long-Term Temporary Remote Work

CHAPTER 8.500 – TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

(not including reasonable accommodations) unless the event that warrants the request occurs after the entry-on-duty date.

E. Call-backs to NSF HQ while on Approved Remote Work

A supervisor may call back an employee to the office for duties that cannot be accomplished offsite, such as training, meetings that uniquely require in-person attendance, retreats, and other team building exercises. In such instances, supervisors should provide as much advanced notice as possible, but no less than ten (10) business days for employees designated as Remote (where possible). Exceptions to this are mission-critical work needs that arise unexpectedly.

If an employee is permanently called back from remote work by NSF management, the employee will be given one (1) year to transition to an approved telework arrangement.

X. Requests for Exceptions

Employees that meet the criteria identified below may request Long-Term Temporary Remote Work or Maximum Telework. The AD/OH, in consultation with HRM, is the approving official for requests. Criteria for approving such requests are as follows:

- A. The work can be performed offsite on a long-term basis, with minor modifications to the duties, and without impact to customers and internal and external stakeholders; and
- B. The employee has identified an inability to work onsite due to one of the below unanticipated circumstances:
 - 1. Victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.
 - 2. Spouse's job (including military deployment) involuntarily located outside the Washington, D.C. locality as defined by OPM.
 - 3. Provide care for a family member who is incapacitated as a result of physical or mental illness, injury, or pregnancy.

The ninety (90) day waiting period for Temporary Ninety (90) Day Remote Work is not required when the employee is transitioning from Temporary Ninety (90) Day Remote Work to Long-Term Temporary Remote Work.

Employees must submit a request through TAWSS to initiate a formal request. Documentation must be submitted to the TMO in HRM to substantiate the request.

Examples of documentation to support the request include (but are not limited to) the following:

Reason	Examples of Documentation
Personal Circumstance	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Police report • Court order or Order of Protection • Documentation from a licensed medical professional, counselor, or victim advocate • Address protection program documentation
Spouse’s Job Relocation	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Signed statement on company letterhead that includes the location of spouse’s transfer and effective date • Military orders
Care of Family Member	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Signed statement from physician that includes the name of the person being treated, diagnosis, location of treatment, and any limitation of reporting onsite. To the extent that information is available to physician: prognosis, beginning date of the medical condition, anticipated end date (if one), and duration of treatment.

Approved requests must be recertified annually. If/when the employee’s reason for the request is no longer in effect, the employee will be given one (1) year to transition to an approved telework arrangement.

Change in Duty Station

Employees approved for Long-Term Temporary Remote Work will have their duty station changed to their approved alternate worksite. The effective date of the change in duty station will be the beginning of the following pay period in which it is approved and may result in higher or lower locality pay. Employees may not designate more than one (1) official alternate worksite. If an employee has multiple approved alternate worksites, the alternate worksite that is used at least fifty-one (51) percent of the time will be identified as the official duty station. Employees are responsible for ensuring that the proper state tax changes are made after their remote work agreement has been approved.

Employees approved for Maximum Telework will maintain their duty station at NSF HQ in Alexandria, VA.

XI. Reasonable Accommodation

An employee may request a reasonable accommodation for Maximum Telework or remote work due to a disability or medical condition, including employees who have temporary or continuing health conditions, following the procedures described in the NSF Policy on Reasonable Accommodation. Allowing an employee to work at an alternate worksite may be a reasonable accommodation where, for example, commuting every day is demonstrated to be aggravating to the person's disability and the job, or parts of the job, can be performed from an alternate worksite without causing significant difficulty or expense.

CHAPTER 8.500 – TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

Reasonable accommodations are governed by Section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (Rehabilitation Act), which was made applicable to Federal employees pursuant to the Americans with Disabilities Act. Reasonable accommodations do not apply to an employee's family members.

If an employee is approved for remote work as a reasonable accommodation, the duty station will change only if the approval is for one (1) year or more. This will be outlined in the agreement that is signed by the employee, supervisor, and the Disability Program Manager in the Office of Equity and Civil Rights (OECR). A remote work approval as a reasonable accommodation does not change the employee's position category.

XII. Travel and Relocation Costs

A. Travel Costs

Employees approved for remote work (including approvals through the reasonable accommodation process) or Long-Term Temporary Remote Work, with an approved alternate worksite outside the local commuting area will be reimbursed for commuting costs to and from NSF HQ if the travel is directed by the supervisor. Employees required to be in a travel status for twelve (12) hours or longer may be entitled to per diem. Refer to the NSF Travel Policy for specific guidance. Employees who voluntarily travel to and from NSF HQ may not be reimbursed for commuting costs.

B. Relocation Costs

If an employee is approved for permanent or Long-Term Temporary Remote Work and is later directed by the Agency to return onsite and the duty station is changed to NSF HQ, the Agency must cover applicable relocation expenses, such as moving expenses. For Long-Term Temporary Remote Work, the agency will not pay relocation costs once the approval has expired. The agency will only pay relocation costs if the agency directs the employee to come back prior to the expiration of the approval.

XIII. Telework/Remote Work Agreements

All employees are required to have an approved Telework/Remote Work Agreement in place in the TAWSS prior to engaging in telework or remote work. Employees and supervisors are responsible for ensuring agreements remain accurate. Agreements remain in effect until superseded by a new agreement or the employee is deemed permanently ineligible. Approvals and denials of Telework/Remote Work Agreements are made on a case-by-case basis and after a business case analysis.

A. Approvals and Denials

Supervisors will consider and approve or deny employee telework or remote work agreement requests via the TAWSS. Supervisors, normally, will make a determination on an employee's telework or remote agreement request within ten (10) business days. Supervisors may send the request back to the employee to make modifications, as necessary. The TMO has ten (10) business days to approve remote work requests in the TAWSS.

CHAPTER 8.500 – TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

Supervisors are responsible for determining the work objectives of their organization. Supervisors, with the involvement of their employees, should discuss how telework or remote work will work for the organization. A supervisor can deny a request for core telework if the employee has required onsite position duties that do not lend themselves to a core telework agreement and there are business-based reasons to support the denial. Examples of business reasons for denials include (but are not limited to):

1. The duties of the position are not amenable to a high frequency of telework and/or remote work.
2. The mission and/or operational needs of the organization have changed.
3. There is inadequate office coverage.
4. The employee's duties require constant in-person interaction with NSF employees or external stakeholders, and/or the use of equipment that will not enable them to effectively telework or work remotely.
5. The performance of classified duties or handling of classified documents and/or information.
6. For oversight of onsite contractor personnel.
7. To supervise onsite staff.

B. Updating Telework/Remote Work Agreements

Substantive changes that require a new agreement include when an employee:

1. Starts a new position.
2. Changes an alternate worksite. If the employee was previously approved for remote work and subsequently changes their alternate worksite, they will continue to remain as a remote worker.
3. Changes the telework frequency or reporting frequency to NSF HQ (remote work).

Minor and temporary adjustments to a telework schedule may be initiated by the employee or supervisor and do not require a formal change in the telework agreement in TAWSS, such as when the telework schedule conflicts with official travel or training, when there are call-backs to NSF HQ, switching telework days, or when there is a one-time change in the alternate worksite.

C. Suspension of Telework/Remote Work Agreements

A supervisor may temporarily suspend an employee's telework agreement when operational requirements require extended onsite presence for "busy seasons" or short-term projects. Supervisors will provide the employee with written notice of the suspension, generally at least one (1) pay period in advance. The original telework agreement is restored once the "busy season" or short-term project has been completed.

D. Termination of Telework/Remote Work Agreements

An employee may voluntarily terminate their telework or remote work agreement at any time. An employee who voluntarily terminates their agreement may not request approval for a new telework or remote work agreement in the current organization for a period of six (6) months.

Supervisors may terminate a telework agreement if the employee becomes permanently ineligible in accordance with the Telework Enhancement Act or repeatedly fails to abide by the terms and conditions of the telework agreement. A written justification explaining the supervisor’s basis for the termination must be documented and provided to the employee via the TAWSS. Reasons for terminating an agreement may include a change in circumstances of the organization (e.g., reorganization) or change in the employee’s position description.

In the event modification or termination of a telework or remote work agreement results in a change in employee eligibility for an assigned workspace in the NSF HQ building, the employee shall be assigned either a temporary or permanent workspace in accordance with the Agency Workspace Management Policy.

XIV. Family Care

While teleworking or performing official duties, employees are expected to have dependent care arrangements in place. However, there may be unplanned or temporary circumstances (e.g., an unscheduled telework day in which schools are closed) when telework may be an appropriate, short-term workplace flexibility for employees with caregiving responsibilities. These short-term temporary circumstances should represent the exception and not the rule.

If a situation arises that requires the employee to attend to a dependent at the telework site during scheduled duty hours, the employee shall promptly notify the supervisor and arrange to take leave or reschedule the work hours. It should also be noted that the immediate supervisor can exercise discretion in determining whether an employee can accomplish only some of their duties in these types of situations. In these cases, the employee may be allowed to telework during the time they are not responsible for dependent care responsibilities and be required to take appropriate leave while performing dependent care responsibilities that day.

XV. Performance Management

As with other workplace flexibilities, good performance management practices and transparency can provide a solid foundation for an effective telework or remote work situation.

A. Supervisors

Supervisors must hold all employees to the same performance standards regardless of their telework or remote work status. Supervisors must manage the workforce by focusing on goals and outcomes and not physical presence, and supervisors must treat employees consistently regardless of location.

Supervisors must maintain open lines of communication and provide all employees with objective feedback regarding performance expectations. Any management decisions regarding telework and remote work eligibility and participation should focus on results-oriented performance management and accountability measurement principles that are clearly addressed in the employee's performance plan.

CHAPTER 8.500 – TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

An employee's request for telework or remote work is not the appropriate time to address initial performance or conduct concerns.

B. Employees

Employees, whether working remotely or in the office, are held accountable for their performance and conduct. Employees should remember that workplace policies and performance expectations are the same regardless of the employee's telework, remote, or onsite work status.

XVI. International Telework

Due to increased security concerns and costs to employing agencies, employees are not permitted to telework in a foreign country, requiring a Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO). Individuals traveling internationally for reasons other than official business are not permitted to engage in such international travel with the intent to telework. This provision applies to all Agency personnel, which includes federal employees, IPAs, Visiting Scientists, Engineers, and Educators (VSEEs), external detailees, and American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) Fellows. Failure to comply with this policy could result in disciplinary action.

Staff traveling overseas for official business to a non-high-risk country (as determined by the U.S. State Department) are permitted to use their NSF-issued devices and/or personal devices to access NSF systems, provided that their primary work while in-country remains the work for which the travel was authorized. Staff traveling overseas to a high-risk country (as determined by the U.S. State Department) must follow the guidance issued by the Division of Information Systems (DIS).

Official business does not include leave time added to the beginning or end of official business or time spent recovering from an illness or injury that occurred during official business. If quarantine for a communicable disease (e.g., COVID-19) is required at the travel destination, staff may telework from that location, provided that their country clearance request for such official travel states an intent to telework during quarantine on matters unrelated to the purpose of travel but not affecting the destination country. If telework is not a feasible option, weather and safety leave may be used during that time. Expenses associated with quarantine will be paid by NSF.

In accordance with guidance issued by the Department of State, overseas telework that requires a DETO agreement is distinct from mobile work. Checking NSF email from a personal or NSF-issued device; virtually attending or calling into NSF meetings for any purpose, including to stay informed; and contacting NSF coworkers by phone, email, or other means for business reasons are considered performing mobile work and not telework.

Employees traveling internationally for reasons other than official business must leave their NSF-issued laptops and mobile devices at home. Employees who use their personal devices to access NSF email should disable NSF email on their devices before departing the United States. NSF-issued personal laptops and mobile devices configured to access NSF email should not be taken to countries deemed as high risk (as determined by the U.S. Department of State) for electronic devices; loaner laptops can be reserved for high-risk travel.

On extremely rare occasions, the Chief Operating Officer (COO) in the NSF Office of the Director (OD) may approve exceptions to this policy when a critical NSF mission need outweighs the concerns and costs to the Agency. COO approval will permit only the amount of telework needed to accomplish the critical mission need. Exceptions for unforeseen, extreme emergencies may be necessary and must be reported to the supervisor and OD as soon as possible. Requests for exceptions must be in writing and submitted to the COO for approval via the Document Routing System (DRS). The DRS submission should include concurrence from the Assistant Director/Office Head of the submitting organization. The Division of Human Resource Management (HRMTelework@nsf.gov) and the Division of Information Systems (DISInternationalTeleworkExemptions@nsf.gov) should be copied in the workflow in DRS.

XVII. Inclement Weather and Other Emergencies

In the event of unscheduled leave, unscheduled telework, delayed arrival, early departures, or federal offices are closed to the public, telework-ready employees should begin working at their scheduled start-time and should work their entire regularly scheduled workday, unless their physical telework site is impacted by the emergency.

A. Weather and Safety Leave

Employees are eligible for weather and safety leave if the employee's alternate worksite is impacted by inclement weather, an emergency (e.g., power outage, flooding, evacuation, local security concerns, or other related emergencies), or childcare requirements (i.e., schools are closed) due to the related incident.

B. Emergency Closures and Early Dismissals Affecting NSF HQ Only

If work is disrupted at NSF HQ (e.g., by power outages, fire, flood, equipment failure, etc.) and employees are excused, employees who began the workday in a telework status will complete the workday.

C. Disruptions at an Approved Alternate Worksite

If work is disrupted at an approved alternate worksite, the employee must contact their immediate supervisor to discuss the nature of the disruption and the appropriate course of action (e.g., the possibility of completing other work, taking leave, or reporting to NSF) depending on the expected duration of the disruption and the urgency of the day's work.

If an employee's alternate worksite is impacted by a local emergency (e.g., evacuation) the employee should notify their supervisor (to the extent possible) and will be granted the use of weather and safety leave throughout the duration of the emergency.

XVIII. Time and Attendance

The tour of duty while teleworking can be different from the onsite hours of work and should be addressed in the telework agreement. For example, an employee may wish to begin their tour of duty earlier while teleworking than they would if they were scheduled to be onsite due to reduced commute times. In addition, an employee and supervisor may agree upon a flexible work arrangement where an employee is onsite for part of the workday and teleworks for the remainder of the workday.

Employees are expected to adhere to business hours and core hours on the Eastern Time (ET) zone regardless of the geographic location (within the United States).

XIX. Terms and Conditions

Employees are responsible for providing a safe and appropriate alternate worksite, practicing safe work habits, and ensuring they have the necessary resources to engage in a telework or remote work arrangement. The alternate worksite(s) may be the employee's residence or other approved work location that supports productive work and provides an appropriate environment and level of security to accomplish the work.

The Agency will not be responsible for operating costs, home maintenance, or any other incidental cost (e.g., utilities) associated with the use of the approved alternate worksite location. The Agency will confirm that employees have the proper hardware, resources, and technology for employees to maintain their productivity and work performance while engaging in remote work or while teleworking comparable to when they are onsite at the NSF HQ building. As described below, resources are a shared responsibility between the employee and NSF.

A. Hardware and Software

NSF will make a good-faith effort to provide adequate hardware suitable for teleworking as resources permit. NSF is not required to duplicate equipment available onsite at NSF HQ to employees for their alternate worksite(s).

Unless security policies dictate otherwise, employees may use their own hardware and devices with Agency-approved software. NSF will provide software required to remotely access NSF systems and services. Employees using their own equipment are responsible for its service and maintenance and for the cost of such service and maintenance. Employees must ensure that personal equipment meets NSF information technology (IT) safety and security standards.

The Agency will not be liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property during the performance of official duties or while using government equipment at an approved alternate worksite, except to the extent the Agency is held liable for claims filed under the Federal Tort Claims Act (28 U.S.C. §§ 2671 et seq.) or claims arising under the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act (31 U.S.C. §§ 3721 et seq.).

NSF will provide standard software necessary for teleworking on government-owned equipment. Such equipment will be serviced and maintained by NSF. Employees located within the local commuting area may be required to transport equipment to NSF HQ for servicing if necessary. Remote employees outside of the local commuting area may be required to ship the equipment back to NSF HQ at the government's expense if the equipment cannot be serviced remotely. In addition, situations of equipment failure or malfunction that prevent work must be reported to the supervisor to discuss the appropriate course of action.

CHAPTER 8.500 – TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

B. Collaboration Tools

Employees must use all technology tools provided by NSF, as necessary, to make and receive phone calls, messages, and emails and to collaborate during the workday. Employees engaged in telework or remote work should be responsive and accessible similar to employees who are working onsite in the NSF HQ Building. Supervisors must not use collaboration tools as a means to track employee productivity and location.

C. Use of Webcams During Meetings

Employees are expected to have webcams turned on during meetings in order to cultivate a meaningful employee-supervisor relationship and to build trust. Meeting organizers should be understanding that there will be circumstances where having webcams on are not conducive to a productive meeting (e.g., meetings where there are large groups, phone calls using a collaborative tool or recorded, etc.).

D. Workspace

Employees approved for remote work will forfeit having an assigned workspace in the NSF HQ building.

For employees approved for telework, the Division of Administrative Services (DAS) will provide a threshold for the maximum number of days of telework allowed in order to retain assigned workspace in the building. Please refer to the DAS Workspace Management Policy for more information.

E. Equipment

All employees will be provided with government-furnished equipment regardless of telework or remote work status. Printers will not be provided.

F. Furniture

Furniture (i.e., chair and desk) will be provided to staff when they report to NSF HQ. Furniture will not be provided for alternate worksites for teleworkers or employees approved for remote work. Employees who request telework and remote work are attesting that they have the space and home-setup sufficient to carry out the duties of their position. Employees may request a reasonable accommodation for special furniture (e.g., ergonomic chair, anti-fatigue floor mat, or desk riser) from the Disability Program Manager. Medical documentation will be required to substantiate the request.

G. Office Supplies

NSF will provide general office supplies (e.g., pens, paper, sticky notes, etc.) regardless of the remote work or telework status. Supplies will be mailed to remote workers only.

H. Safety

Employees must certify the safety of all alternate worksite(s) via the Safety Checklist that is a part of the Telework/Remote Work Agreement. Employees working at home will be covered under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA) if injured while performing official duties at the approved alternate worksite to the extent provided under the Act.

CHAPTER 8.500 – TELEWORK AND REMOTE WORK

Article 11, Telework and Remote Work Program

Section 1 General.

The Parties recognize the benefits of the telework program. Telework is a flexible work arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of his/her position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternate worksite, other than the location of NSF headquarters where the employee would otherwise work.

Remote Work is a workplace flexibility allowing an employee to work at an approved alternate worksite, within or outside the local commuting area of the Agency worksite, with no expectation to report to the Agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis.

Telework and Remote Work are important tools for achieving a resilient and results-oriented workforce. Balancing work and family responsibilities and meeting environmental, financial, and commuting concerns are among its advantages.

In recognizing these benefits, both Parties also acknowledge that the needs of the Agency to accomplish its mission are essential. Management is responsible for the efficient and effective operation of the organization, including customer service expectations and remaining highly adaptive. The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 does not establish telework as a right, and as such it is voluntary. The provisions of the Telework and Remote Work Program for bargaining unit employees under this agreement will be administered in accordance with Agency's Telework and Remote Work policy. Details of this policy may be found in the NSF Personnel Manual at Chapter 8 – Work/Life Programs Subchapter 500 – Telework and Remote Work.

Employees engaging in Telework and Remote Work will be treated the same as onsite employees regarding workplace policies and practices.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

New Management Directive (MD) 10.166, “Telework,” is being issued to provide the telework policy. This directive incorporates the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and ensures that telework is incorporated as part of the agency’s Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP) in the event of an emergency.

There is no handbook for this MD; however, the NRC’s Telework Web site provides detailed guidelines for the NRC Telework program. The NRC’s Telework Web site is available at <http://www.internal.nrc.gov/HR/telework.html>.

I. POLICY

It is the policy of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission to implement a telework program, whereby approved participants are allowed to work at home or at other approved offsite locations, that is consistent with applicable laws and regulations and that strikes an appropriate balance between agency and employee needs and interests.

II. OBJECTIVES

- Provide guidance for designing, developing, and implementing telework agreements at the NRC.
- Ensure compliance with any applicable law or regulation regarding telework.
- Define the roles and responsibilities of those who approve telework agreements.
- Ensure the agency’s interests are properly addressed in establishing telework agreements.
- Incorporate telework as a component of emergency planning.

III. ORGANIZATIONAL RESPONSIBILITIES AND DELEGATIONS OF AUTHORITY

A. Executive Director for Operations (EDO)

Designates a telework managing officer within the Office of the Chief Human Capital Officer (OCHCO) who is a senior official of the agency with direct access to the Chairman, as required by the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010.

B. Office of the General Counsel (OGC)

Provides legal advice and assistance to the offices responsible for establishing procedures to support the telework program.

C. Inspector General (IG)

Establishes and manages the telework program for the Office of the Inspector General.

D. Chief Human Capital Officer (CHCO)

1. Serves as the telework managing officer for the agency; advises agency leadership, and is responsible for policy development and implementation related to the agency's telework program.
2. Serves as the agency's primary point-of-contact for the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) on telework matters.
3. Develops and implements telework policy. Manages the agency telework program and serves as a resource for managers and employees.
4. Ensures telework is incorporated into the agency's Continuity of Operations Plan.
5. Designates a telework coordinator to coordinate the day-to-day activities under the telework program.
6. Ensures that an interactive telework training program is provided to all employees eligible to participate in the telework program and all managers of teleworkers.
7. Submits reports to OPM on telework.

E. Director, Office of Administration (ADM)

Reviews and concurs on all proposed full-time telework agreements and special circumstances agreements, as appropriate, to ensure that each agreement meets the agency's requirements under the Drug Testing Policy. (See MD 12.3, "NRC Personnel Security Program.")

F. Chief Information Officer (CIO)

1. Establishes and maintains information technology systems and related procedures to support the agency's telework program.
2. Reviews and concurs on all proposed full-time telework agreements and special circumstances agreements, as appropriate.
3. Establishes and maintains cybersecurity and computer security requirements and procedures to support the agency's telework program.

G. Office Directors and Regional Administrators

1. Ensure overall office and regional participation is consistent with established telework procedures.

2. Notify the OCHCO telework coordinator of participants in the program.
3. Submit documentation of telework agreement approvals required to be approved at the OD/RA level to OCHCO for employees within their organization. An alternate management contact may be identified.

H. Supervisors and Managers

1. Inform staff of the telework program and ensure completion of telework training.
2. Approve fixed and project-based telework agreements, as appropriate. Submit documentation of approvals at the first or second line supervisory level to OCHCO for employees within their organizations. (For definitions of telework types, see “Types of Telework” available on the NRC’s Telework Web site <http://www.internal.nrc.gov/HR/telework.html>.)
3. Evaluate employee requests for telework participation in a fair and equitable manner ensuring that restrictions or denials are based on mission-related criteria, guidelines and applicable agency policies. Examples include but are not limited to portability of work, office coverage and employee performance.
4. Establish clear expectations and objectives to ensure telework agreements outlining the terms and conditions of the arrangement.
5. Ensure that applicable policies and procedures are followed under a telework agreement, including the removal or accountability of Government property (e.g., laptops and printers), maintenance of telework records and documents, and approval of overtime, leave, and alternative work schedules.
6. Monitor and evaluate the employee’s performance as based on the employee’s performance appraisal plan and the telework agreement.
7. Communicate with employees working at alternative worksites, and ensure that they are informed regarding dismissal or closure procedures during emergencies.

I. Employees

1. Complete telework training.
2. Conduct an assessment of their telework capabilities and submits appropriate telework forms.
3. Adhere to agency, office and region policies, direction, and guidance while teleworking.

IV. APPLICABILITY

The provisions of this directive apply to and must be followed by all NRC employees. To the extent that the provisions of this directive conflict with or are modified by the negotiated agreement with the employees' exclusive representative, the negotiated agreement (Collective Bargaining Agreement Between U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission and National Treasury Employees Union) will govern the treatment of personnel for bargaining unit positions.

V. DIRECTIVE HANDBOOK

The NRC's Telework Web site serves as the handbook for this directive. The Web site provides detailed guidance for the NRC's Telework program and is available at <http://www.internal.nrc.gov/HR/telework.html>.

VI. TELEWORK ENHANCEMENT ACT OF 2010

The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, Public Law 111-292, enacted on December 9, 2010, requires the head of each Executive agency to establish a policy under which eligible employees of the agency may be authorized to telework, determine the eligibility for all employees of the agency to participate in telework, and notify all employees of the agency of their eligibility to telework within 180 days after the date of enactment.

Article 7 Telework

7.1 GENERAL

This Article pertains to the implementation of a Telework Program whereby participants are allowed to work at home or at other approved offsite locations, including other NRC facilities not associated with an employee's position of record. For the purposes of this Article the terms "telework" and "telecommuting" can be used interchangeably, and can include "work- at-home."

NRC and NTEU jointly recognize the benefits of the Telework Program which can, among other things, provide the opportunity to enhance workplace efficiency, increase employee morale, and reduce traffic congestion. In recognizing these benefits, both parties acknowledge the need of the Commission to accomplish its mission.

Participants in the Telework Program will receive the same treatment as non-participants for the purposes of performance evaluations, training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees, work requirements, and other acts involving managerial discretion. While teleworking, all workplace policies remain in place, including start/end times, rules regarding time and attendance, and employee expectations concerning performance and conduct.

7.2 MANAGEMENT DISCRETION

Telework is subject to approval by management and is not an employee entitlement. Approval or denial of an employee's request to telework will be based on telework not diminishing the employee's performance or agency operations, applicable law, regulation, and the provisions of this Article.

Management has the discretion in deciding whether a particular position or class of positions is appropriate for the Telework Program based on the content of the work, consistent with the criteria set forth in this Article.

Although an employee may request a particular day(s) and/or time to telework, NRC management has final approval.

7.3 TYPES OF TELEWORK

The following telework schedules are available:

- 7.3.1 Fixed – a recurring telework arrangement with a fixed schedule that designates the day(s) and hours each pay period in which work will be performed at the employee's home or approved offsite location, including other NRC facilities not associated with an employee's position of record. A request for approval of a fixed telework schedule shall be submitted to the first line supervisor.
- 7.3.2 Project-based – short-term telework, when an employee's work assignments, or a portion thereof, can be performed remotely for a short period of time. The duration of an approved project-based telework arrangement can be measured in terms of hours or a few days.
 - 7.3.2.1 A request for project-based telework shall be submitted to the first-line supervisor.
 - 7.3.2.2 The employee must request and receive management's approval for each project-based telework occurrence. The supervisor must document each specific project-based telework arrangement.
- 7.3.3 Special Circumstances – a non-permanent telework arrangement for a relatively short period of time due to personal incapacitation or a personal hardship.
- 7.3.4 Continuity of Operations (COOP) – telework performed to ensure that the Agency can continue to perform critical functions during a wide range of emergencies, including but not limited to, acts of nature, accidents, and technological or attack-related emergencies.

7.4 ELIGIBILITY

- 7.4.1 Any employee, on any work schedule, including a part-time employee and phased retirement participants, may request a telework arrangement under any of the above listed types of telework. Subject to the provisions set forth in Section 7.2, an employee will be eligible for a telework arrangement if:
- 7.4.1.1 They have sufficient duties that are portable that can be effectively performed outside of the traditional office setting (e.g., face-to-face contact with others that is predictable or can be managed through other means of communications and access to necessary materials is readily available through alternative means that will not violate any law, regulation, or policy). While an employee's position may not have sufficient portable duties to provide eligibility to telework regularly on a fixed schedule, the employee may still have portable duties associated with a particular assignment that would be eligible for project-based telework (e.g., on-line mandatory training).
- An employee who routinely or regularly deals with classified, confidential, or sensitive documents or data or information that is not available from home (e.g., personnel and/or payroll records, non-public (NRC restricted) information, or information protected from unauthorized disclosure by the Privacy Act of 1974 and its implementing regulations) must be authorized to remove such documents from an NRC facility or have sufficient other work to justify the requested telework schedule.
- 7.4.1.2 The employee's absence from the work site does not unduly interfere with the efficient operation of the organization, or the employee does not require frequent face-to-face interaction with supervisors, coworkers and/or others, or use of specialized equipment.
- 7.4.1.3 The employee's latest rating of record in all critical elements is "fully successful" or better, and the employee has demonstrated and maintained acceptable work habits, conduct, and adherence to agency policies. Failure in any of these areas must have been documented in writing prior to the date of the employee's telework request to justify denial.
- 7.4.2 In accordance with the provisions of Public Law 111-292 (otherwise known as the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010), an employee is not eligible to telework under any circumstances if they have been officially disciplined (i.e., a warning, reprimand, or suspension):
- 7.4.2.1 For being absent without leave (AWOL) for more than 5 days in any calendar year; or
- 7.4.2.2 For violation of Subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal government computer or while performing official government duties.
- 7.4.3 Telework may not be used for dependent or childcare. However, merely having a child or dependent in the home with the teleworker is not a sufficient reason to deny a telework request. A teleworker must continue to make arrangements for child or dependent care to the same extent as if they were working at the traditional office. If a situation arises where the employee must attend to a dependent at the alternative worksite during scheduled duty hours, the employee shall immediately notify the supervisor and arrange to take leave, credit hours, or make other arrangements. If an employee uses telework to provide for dependent or childcare, they will be ineligible for telework until such time as arrangements for care are made.

7.5 TRAINING

All employees are required to complete training to participate in the Telework Program.

7.6 REQUEST TO PARTICIPATE IN THE TELEWORK PROGRAM

- 7.6.1 An employee requesting a project-based, fixed schedule or special circumstances telework arrangement must submit a signed telework request.
- 7.6.2 The employee may also submit a request for telework as a reasonable accommodation directly to the Agency Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator.
- 7.6.3 The employee must submit a new telework request when either of the following occurs:
 - 7.6.3.1 the employee is promoted, reassigned, detailed to a different position, or goes on a rotation to a different position; or
 - 7.6.3.2 the employee wishes to make any change to the telework agreement, such as the number of days or hours of telework, the location of the alternative worksite, etc.
- 7.6.4 The Agency will review telework agreements for accuracy as needed.

7.7 RESPONSES TO REQUESTS TO PARTICIPATE IN THE TELEWORK PROGRAM

The employee's request will be reviewed and discussed with the employee. In deciding whether to grant or deny a request, the applicable official will consider the factors set forth in Sections 7.2 and 7.4 of this Article.

Requests to participate in the fixed and special circumstances Telework Program will normally be reviewed and responded to within fifteen (15) workdays of the request. Requests for more than three (3) days of fixed telework per week, including full-time telework requests, will normally be reviewed and responded to within thirty (30) workdays, unless the request is to telework from an international location.

7.7.1 Approvals of Requests for Telework

The telework agreement forms document the terms and conditions of participation in the program. The agreement must be signed by both parties and approved in accordance with the provisions of this Article prior to the start of the telework arrangement.

Employees approved for telework must agree to abide by the terms of the telework agreement and agency drug testing policy, complete an offsite safety checklist and complete an information security checklist.

7.7.2 Denials of Requests for Telework

- 7.7.2.1 If a request to participate in the Telework Program is denied, within ten (10) days of the denial, the employee will be provided an explanation in writing for the denial, specifying the reason(s) for the denial, specifically identifying which of the criteria set forth in Section 7.4 the employee has failed to meet.
- 7.7.2.2 The management official's final decision is grievable in accordance with Article 46, Grievance Procedures.
- 7.7.2.3 Upon request submitted to the Chief, Policy and Labor Employee Relations Branch, the Agency will provide the Union a copy of the management official's final decision as described in 7.7.2.2.

- 7.7.2.4 In the event management determines that a class of positions may not participate in the Telework Program, it will first provide NTEU with written notice and upon request, meet to discuss its rationale. Upon request, the Agency will provide a written explanation to the Union for excluding a class of positions from telework eligibility.

7.8 MODIFICATION OR TEMPORARY SUSPENSION OF THE AGREEMENT

A supervisor may modify or temporarily suspend, for a specified period of time, a telework arrangement. Management retains the right to make decisions to modify or temporarily suspend a Telework arrangement on a case-by-case basis and based on business needs. Where a telework schedule is modified or temporarily suspended, advance written notice will be provided where practicable. Supervisors and employees should work together to find a mutually acceptable alternative telework schedule where possible. Such modifications or temporary suspensions are expected to be short in duration and infrequent.

7.9 TERMINATION OF THE AGREEMENT

- 7.9.1 A supervisor may terminate the employee's telework arrangement if:
- 7.9.1.1 the employee fails to adhere to any of the provisions of the telework agreement;
 - 7.9.1.2 the employee's performance in any critical element falls below a rating of Fully Successful;
 - 7.9.1.3 Appropriate work is no longer available, or a specific project has been completed;
 - 7.9.1.4 Office coverage requirements are not being met;
 - 7.9.1.5 The employee fails to truthfully report his or her time worked;
 - 7.9.1.6 The employee misuses government equipment;7.2.2.
 - 7.9.1.7 The employee refuses to use an agency specified electronic means of communication (e.g. email, Microsoft Teams, etc.) while teleworking; or
 - 7.9.1.8 The employee fails to meet any of the telework eligibility requirements outlined in 7.4 above.
- 7.9.2 Participation may be terminated by the employee at any time. In order to terminate their telework agreement, the employee must inform their supervisor of the discontinuation.
- 7.9.3 If an employee's performance falls below Fully Successful in any critical element, the employee's telework will be terminated after the employee is provided the memorandum required under Article 25.9.4 or Article 25.10.
- 7.9.4 If a Telework arrangement is terminated, the management official's final decision is grievable in accordance with Article 46, Grievance Procedures.
- 7.9.5 Employees may reapply for telework 90 days after the decision to terminate participation.

7.10 FULL-TIME TELEWORK

- 7.10.1 Any employee who meets the criteria listed in Section 7.4 may request a full-time telework schedule. To be approved, the employee must have duties that are 100% portable. Management has the sole discretion to determine whether duties are 100% portable and to approve or deny such request. Management also has the discretion to terminate the full-time telework agreement if the work is no longer 100% portable or for any reason described above. Management will not deny such requests in an arbitrary or capricious manner. In the event the agreement is terminated, the employee is responsible for all costs associated with returning to the original official duty station. The supervisor will provide written notice of termination, and the employee will normally have at least 30 but not less than 15 days to report to the original official duty station. An employee may request in writing additional time to report to the official duty station. The supervisor will consider any such request on a case-by-case basis.

- 7.10.2 The official duty station for an employee with a telework agreement who is not scheduled to report at least twice per pay period to the NRC facility associated with their position of record is the location of the telework site. The official duty station will be used to determine employee pay, locality pay, and official travel funding responsibilities and will be documented in the employee's Official Personnel Folder. Any relocation costs associated with moving are the sole responsibility of the employee.
- 7.10.3 If the NRC office associated with their position of record and the alternative worksite are within a reasonable commuting distance, then travel between the NRC office and the alternative worksite is considered local travel, and there is no travel reimbursement for travel expenses.
- 7.10.4 A request for full-time telework at a location outside of the United States is subject to U.S. Department of State approval and if the Department of State approves, such approval may take several months to procure. An employee requesting such a telework arrangement will not be able to begin to telework internationally until the State Department approval has been procured.

7.11 SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES WORK AT HOME

- 7.11.1 All special circumstances work at home arrangements require a telework agreement and well-documented evidence and may be subject to review by an independent expert on behalf of the NRC. 7.11.2. Medical documentation must include the number of hours and/or days an employee would be capable of working during the workday/pay period and the duration of the situation or circumstance giving rise to the work at home request.
- 7.11.2 All special circumstances work at home plans are non-permanent arrangements for relatively short periods of time. There is no minimum period for which a plan can be approved.
- 7.11.3 Generally, work at home arrangements will be approved for the duration of the special circumstance, which should not be a period exceeding six (6) months. Determinations regarding the duration of all work at home plans will be made on a case-by-case basis. In unusual circumstances where the need continues beyond 6 months, an employee may request an extension. The request for an extension must be accompanied by medical or other relevant documentation to support the extension.
- 7.11.4 All special circumstances work at home requests, including extensions, must be submitted to the first-line supervisor and be approved prior to the start of the arrangement or extension. If an employee with a disability requests special circumstances telework to enable him or her to perform the essential functions of his or her position, this is a request for reasonable accommodation that may also be submitted to the Agency Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator.

7.12 PERFORMANCE OF WORK

- 7.12.1 Performance requirements for teleworking employees are the same as those for non-teleworking employees. When an employee participates in telework, expectations related to accountability do not differ by virtue of the telework arrangement. Nothing in this Article shall affect management's right to assign work or make reasonable requests to ascertain the status of work assignments.
- 7.12.2 A teleworking employee must be available at a specified alternative worksite to supervisors, co-workers, and the public by telephone, voicemail, email, other electronic communication or conferencing systems, as specified by the Agency, and other communications mediums during their regularly scheduled hours of work. An employee will not be subject to enhanced electronic tracking or surveillance solely because they are teleworking. This provision does not apply to the OIG or security-related activities of the Agency.

- 7.12.3 Time spent teleworking must be accounted for and reported in the same manner as if the employee reported for duty at the NRC worksite. Normal procedures regarding the requesting and approval of overtime, credit hours, leave, and other paid time off apply when an employee is teleworking.

7.13 TECHNOLOGY, EQUIPMENT, AND SUPPLIES

- 7.13.1 The employee will be responsible for all home maintenance, operating costs, insurance, or any other costs (e.g., utilities, internet service) associated with the use of an alternative worksite. The Agency will provide the IT equipment determined necessary by the Agency for participating employees to perform their assigned duties. An employee is not prevented from supplementing Agency equipment with the employee's personally owned equipment, in accordance with NRC's applicable guidance, policy, and procedure regarding use of personal devices (such as keyboards, headphones, monitors or mice). Employees wishing to utilize basic agency office supplies, such as paper and pens, that would otherwise be provided in the NRC supply room may retrieve such items from the supply room for use while teleworking. The Agency will not deliver to employees or reimburse employees for the cost of office supplies.
- 7.13.2 The teleworking employee must comply with all applicable information technology and information management law, rules, regulations, and NRC policies, guidance and processes concerning information technology and information management.

7.14 TELEWORK IN CONTINUITY OF OPERATIONS AND OTHER WEATHER OR EMERGENCY CONDITIONS

Agency closures due to weather, road conditions, or other emergency conditions do not normally affect an employee's ability to telework. Therefore, all employees with an approved telework agreement are expected to work their normal tour of duty by teleworking on those days when the government has unscheduled leave/unscheduled telework, delayed arrival, early dismissal, or Federal offices are closed to the public. All such employees will not normally be granted weather and safety leave. If an emergency occurs at the telework site that impacts an employee's ability to perform official duties, the employee will notify their supervisor as soon as practicable. The supervisor may direct the employee to another work site, grant weather and safety leave, or allow the employee to request appropriate leave, e.g., annual leave or LWOP.

Telework is a vital part of the NRC's COOP plan. When the agency is operating under COOP, the COOP Plan will supersede the telework policy.

7.15 REPORTS

The Union will be provided with a copy of any OCHCO reports or data regarding telework participation provided to any other government entity (e.g., OPM, OMB, GSA, or Congress). However, internal NRC reports that are management advice and guidance are not covered by this section.

MEMORANDUM

To: Jeff Zients
Chief of Staff to the President

From: Rob Shriver
Deputy Director, OPM

Re: Work Environment Implementation Update for the Office of Personnel Management

On behalf of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM), I am pleased to submit the following information in response to your email of January 19, 2024. As described more fully below, OPM has fully implemented the changes to employee work arrangements necessary to achieve a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments.

Work arrangements for OPM employees have transitioned through three phases since the start of the pandemic: maximum telework in March 2020 to safeguard employee health and safety, return to the office in Spring of 2022 to demonstrate that employees could safely return to in-person work, and recalibration of work arrangements to advance organizational health and performance in the Fall of 2023. Our new steady state represents OPM's commitment to increasing in-person work while continuing to make appropriate use of workforce flexibilities to recruit, retain, and develop a productive workforce that delivers results for the American people. I am pleased to report that these efforts have led to continued significant improvements in both organizational health and performance.

- Our workforce is more engaged. When comparing our 2023 and 2021 Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey results, OPM's overall Employee Engagement score increased by three percentage points. Other employee experience and customer-facing measures also increased, including Q37: My organization is successful at accomplishing its mission (+ three percentage points).
- Our workforce is more productive. During this time frame, OPM also saw productivity increases at the office level. For example, last year, Retirement Services processed nearly 100,000 cases and successfully lowered the retirement claims inventory to its lowest level in six years. OPM HR reduced time to hire by 18% (bringing the agency average to under 80 days) and went from being ranked sixth (among 24 CFO Act agencies) on GSA's Mission Support Satisfaction survey results in 2021 to being ranked first in 2023. We develop and issue policies faster and the volume of major policy issuances (such as regulations) has increased substantially. We are proud of the gains we continue to make, while recruiting, retaining, and developing the workforce we need to deliver on our mission efficiently and effectively.

Though pleased with our progress to date, we continue to evaluate how our work arrangements are contributing to organizational health and performance. The answers to your specific questions are provided below.

(1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

OPM's senior leadership is committed to encouraging meaningful in-person work and a consistent on-site presence. Overall, OPM employees assigned to headquarters are consistently on-site as much as they are teleworking. The most recent payroll data indicates that the percentage of hours performed in-person by all OPM employees assigned to headquarters, excluding OIG personnel, is 50.65%.

We met this metric by implementing our in-person work requirement in two phases. On July 26, 2023, OPM Director Kiran Ahuja announced to the OPM workforce the new agency-wide requirement to work a minimum of two days per week onsite. On September 25, 2023, all senior executives, senior leaders, managers, and supervisors on telework agreements were required to report in person to their duty location a minimum of two days per week. After completing our collective bargaining obligations, effective October 23, 2023, the remainder of the OPM workforce on telework agreements, in all geographic locations, reported in person to their duty location a minimum of two days per week.

In addition to updating telework agreements to reflect the two-day in-person policy, OPM employees are engaging in project-focused in-person work. For example, we anticipate an increase in Retirement Services personnel working onsite from January through April, during the annual surge in retirement applications. Personnel with critical roles will serve on "Tiger Teams" that work onsite up to five days per week. Other organizations also continue to convene their teams onsite for gatherings such as staff all-hands, strategic planning sessions, and agency-wide recognition events.

(2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

Though we continue to evaluate the impact of work arrangements on organizational health and performance, our current plan has been fully implemented across the entire agency (including for bargaining unit employees) and no additional steps are required. OPM's on-site work requirement applies to all employees on a telework agreement, no matter their post of duty. Accordingly, the policy applies not only to our Washington, DC, headquarters building, but also to all field offices and worksites across the nation. All employees on telework agreements are required to report to their duty station a minimum of two days per week, equitably and consistently applying the requirement across geographical and organizational boundaries.

(3) Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

OPM's senior leaders regularly review data on implementation of in-person requirements and highlight activities such as project-related in-person work, all-hands, retreats, townhalls, and employee recognition activities that optimize in-person time and increase employee engagement. Senior leaders report on a weekly basis on employee engagement activities that involve in-person work, and OPM's Deputy Director highlights this engagement at weekly senior leadership meetings. OPM's Director and Deputy Director are active and regular participants in the President's Management Council and review OPM's data on a monthly basis as part of the preparation for PMC meetings, where government-wide and agency-specific data is often shared and discussed.

OPM's Human Resources Office established a comprehensive quality control process for telework coordinators in each organization to verify compliance with the minimum reporting requirement for telework-eligible employees. This process tracks compliance with reporting requirements and applies quality control measures, including: verifying that all eligible employees have accurate and approved telework agreements; confirming that each eligible employee reports in person to their duty station for at least two days per week; and reviewing alignment and accuracy of telework agreements and additional time sheet reporting codes.

To support this quality control review, we have provided a dedicated resource page, access to telework agreement reports from the personnel system, and a Power BI dashboard for visualizing telework agreement status and timesheet coding. Telework coordinators conduct quality control reviews on a bi-weekly basis and report their findings. This information helps OPM senior leaders monitor implementation and progress.

SUBCHAPTER 1. GENERAL PROVISIONS

1-1. General

This chapter provides guidance on the establishment, management and maintenance of telework within the U.S. Office of Personnel Management (OPM or Agency). The telework program allows OPM employees to work at alternative/telework sites as part of their regular tour of duty. This may include their homes, satellite telecommuting centers or other approved sites away from the office. Other common names for telework include work-at-home, flexiplace, and telecommuting.

1-2. Background

a. On October 23, 2000, Public Law 106-346 was enacted. This law provides that each executive agency shall establish a policy under which eligible employees of the agency may participate in telecommuting to the maximum extent possible without diminished employee performance.

b. Pursuant to Public Law 106-346 Section 359, OPM issued a memorandum dated February 9, 2001, instructing Federal agencies to review telework barriers, act to remove them, increase participation, and establish eligibility criteria, and noting that, subject to any applicable agency policies or bargaining obligations, employees who met the criteria and wanted to participate had to be allowed that opportunity if they were satisfactory performers.

c. The Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 (Act), Public Law 111-292 was enacted December 9, 2010. It requires the head of each agency to establish and implement a policy under which employees may be authorized to telework, to determine each employee's eligibility to participate under that policy, and to notify each employee of his or her eligibility status. The law requires that the agency policy ensure that telework does not diminish employee performance or agency operations and sets two other statutory limitations on an employee's ability to telework. The law also specifies roles, responsibilities and expectations for all Federal executive agencies with regard to telework policies, employee eligibility and participation, and program implementation. The provisions of OPM's Telework Policy have been developed to address the requirements of the law to include designating a Telework Managing Officer (TMO) as a senior official of the agency who has direct access to the head of the agency, requiring telework eligibility determinations on all employees in the agency, notifying all employees of their eligibility status; and ensuring telework training is available.

1-3. References

OPM and the General Services Administration (GSA) work together to support telework in Federal agencies. The joint OPM/GSA website www.telework.gov provides information to agencies, managers, and employees about how to effectively implement telework programs and arrangements.

SUBCHAPTER 2. OPM POLICY

2-1. Policy

- a. OPM strongly supports the full range of telework options, to the extent consistent with applicable law. All OPM organizations are covered by the provisions of this policy. OPM's telework program, like all telework programs, is voluntary. It is an option that may be used to provide flexibility to assist in the effective and efficient accomplishment of Agency business; to improve continuity of operations; to reduce, where possible, management costs such as real estate expenditures, and employee turnover; and to increase our employees' ability to manage their work and life obligations.
- b. Telework as used in this chapter allows OPM employees to work at telework sites as part of their regular tour of duty, generally at home.
- c. All OPM employees have a responsibility to report waste, fraud and abuse within the Agency to the Office of the Inspector General (OIG). The same principle applies in the context of telework.
- d. Telework may not be used for home-based, employee owned businesses or independent contracting or consulting arrangements.
- e. An employee's request to work from home or from some other alternative location as a reasonable accommodation is not a request for telework as the term is normally understood. Such requests for reasonable accommodation should be processed through OPM's Reasonable Accommodation Manager.
- f. Subject to space and availability at the Agency worksite, employees utilizing assigned workspace for two or fewer days per week may be required to participate in "alternative officing" (i.e., the use of an office space that is shared by one or more individuals who also telework).

2-2. Benefits

Recognized benefits of telework for the organization may include:

- Continuity of daily operations
- Continuity of Operations to ensure we can continue to perform our Mission Essential Functions to support the Federal workforce during a wide range of emergencies (COOP)
- Improved employee retention and recruitment

- Real estate cost savings
- Improved employee productivity
- Increased organizational flexibility
- Reduced health care costs
- Responsiveness to customers and stakeholders at all times

Recognized benefits of telework for the employee may include:

- Improved job satisfaction
- Fewer sick days
- Improved health with reduced stress
- Increased personal flexibility
- Financial savings
- Enhanced options for employees when dismissal/closure announcements are issued
- Greater safety during severe weather conditions

Telework helps the community by reducing traffic congestion and air pollution.

2-3. Definitions

- Telework. The term ‘telework’ or ‘teleworking’ refers to a work flexibility arrangement under which employees perform the duties of their position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work.
- Telework Eligibility. Most positions at OPM include some duties that can be successfully accomplished at a telework site. However, there may be duties, job related characteristics, or ineligibility criteria that prevent employees who would otherwise be telework eligible from participating or limits the extent of their participation. This eligibility determination is based on a number of factors, including the limitations set out in the Telework Enhancement Act, the employee’s position, the need for face-to-face interaction with customers and coworkers, office coverage, and the employee’s performance level. Specific eligibility categories are outlined in section 2-4 of this Subchapter.
- Remote Worker. Work arrangement in which the employee regularly works from an approved remote work site (usually the employee’s residence) and is not expected to regularly report to an OPM brick and mortar site at least twice in a biweekly pay period. Remote workers differ from mobile workers in that mobile workers are characterized by routine and regular travel to customers or other worksites instead of a single agency worksite (e.g., site audits, site inspections, investigations, and property management). In general, arrangements for remote work must be worked out on a case by case basis, and a remote worker is not considered to be a teleworker for the purposes of this policy. If the employee is a remote worker, the employee's official worksite must be the remote location (but see 5 CFR 531.605 (d)(2) for exceptions to the twice-each-biweekly-pay period official worksite determination requirement for situations of a temporary nature). Changing the official worksite may affect an employee in a number of ways, including rates of pay, Reduction in Force (RIF) competitive areas, travel reimbursement, and unemployment compensation. See OPM HR Handbook, Chapter 369, Remote Worker, when considering requests/decisions to approve an employee to work from a remote worksite.

- d. Official Worksite. The official worksite for a teleworker remains the place where he or she would normally work, not the telework site, as long as the employee is scheduled on a regular and recurring basis to be at that official worksite for the employee's position of record at least twice each biweekly pay period.
- e. Telework Site. A telework site is the alternative to the regular worksite as specified in the telework agreement. It may be the employee's home or another location, such as a satellite office owned or leased by the Agency that is closer to the employee's home than the regular worksite.
- f. Regular Worksite. The regular worksite for the employee's position of record; a location where an employee would work absent a telework agreement.
- g. Reasonable Accommodation. Any change in the work environment or in the way things are customarily done that would enable a qualified individual with a disability to enjoy equal employment opportunities.
- h. Telework Managing Officer. An OPM employee who, as part of his or her official duties, is an advocate for telework and ensures that the Agency optimizes its mission accomplishment capability through effective use of telework. The Telework Managing Officer (TMO) serves as an advisor for Agency leadership, including the Chief Human Capital Officer. As a senior official of the Agency, the TMO has direct access to the head of the agency. The TMO is responsible for policy development and implementation related to the Agency telework program, is a resource for managers and employees, is the primary point of contact to OPM on telework matters and is responsible for collecting telework data for the annual telework report to Congress.
- i. Weather and Safety Leave. Weather and safety leave is authorized only to the extent consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 6329(c); OPM Weather and Safety Leave Regulations at 5 CFR § 630.1601-1607, Subpart P; 83 FR 15291; and the OPM Government-wide Dismissal and Closure Procedures (November 2018). Weather and safety leave may be provided when employees are prevented from safely traveling to or safely performing work at an approved location. This type of leave is generally granted in conjunction with an agency or OPM operating status announcement. Such an operating status announcement may allow for a delayed arrival or early departure and the use of weather and safety leave to cover the short period of absence.

- j. Administrative leave means paid leave authorized at the discretion of an agency that is provided without loss or reduction in pay, other leave, or service credit and that is exclusive of leave authorized under any other provision of statute or Presidential directive.

2-4. Telework Eligibility

- a. At least annually, OPM HR will require a telework eligibility determination/telework agreement review to be conducted whereby supervisors meet with each employee to discuss and determine telework eligibility and update telework agreements, if needed. If schedules need to be modified due to eligibility determination review, refer to section 2- 6 (c), “Modifying Telework Agreement.”

Supervisors will meet with new employees as soon as possible after their entry on duty to discuss and determine telework eligibility. Supervisors will notify employees of their eligibility status resulting from eligibility discussions referenced above.

- b. Eligibility categories: Although the Act requires the Agency to ensure that its telework policy “does not diminish employee performance or agency operations,” the Act otherwise encourages a broad interpretation of eligibility except in those cases where an employee “has been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year; or the employee has been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.” [Public Law 111-292, 6502(a)(2)(A)(B)(b)]. While the intent of Act is generally to promote and encourage telework, employees should understand that participation is not a right; OPM managers base eligibility decisions upon sound business and performance management principles. The categories outlined below are based upon these principles. Current telework eligibility determinations can be changed at any time in accordance with eligibility/non-eligibility criteria outlined in the eligibility categories below. In accordance with the statute, the Agency may have to modify the policy to comply with the Act, e.g., performance decline.

1. Telework Eligible

- i. Fully Eligible. Employees must be performing at the Fully Successful level or above in order to be Fully Eligible teleworkers. Fully Eligible teleworkers also have duties and job-related characteristics that enable them to telework. In many positions, employees perform portable duties on a regular basis. These jobs tend to lend themselves to routine telework arrangements in which telework can occur as part of an ongoing, regular schedule. The degree of portability of an employee's work factors into determining how often the employee may be permitted to telework on a routine basis each pay period. Depending on duties and job-related characteristics, there are two levels of participation supervisors may authorize to ensure continued effective operations:

- Routine telework. An employee engages in telework according to an ongoing, regular schedule outlined in the telework agreement (e.g., 1 to 4 days per week); and
- Situational telework. Telework is approved on a case by-case basis, where the hours worked were NOT part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular telework schedule. For example, if an employee needs a block of uninterrupted time to complete the writing and/or editing of a document, or an employee has a business or personal appointment during the day and cannot reasonably commute to and from the office, the employee may request situational telework. The employee would take leave for the period of the personal appointment but otherwise telework the remainder of the day.

- ii. Unscheduled Telework Eligible. Unscheduled Telework Eligible is a special category of situational telework in which employees are only approved to telework in response to an announced change in OPM operating status, Associate Director/Office Head determination of operating status for field locations, or Director's memorandum that permits unscheduled telework. The unscheduled telework option may be provided for severe weather conditions, special events, pandemic evacuation situations, or other conditions the Director deems appropriate. Supervisors are encouraged to be creative and work with employees to identify, as appropriate, work assignments that could be accomplished via telework during unscheduled telework/emergency situations, even for employees whose work might not obviously appear to lend itself to a telework arrangement or for employees whose duties/responsibilities place them in the Temporarily or Permanently Ineligible category for reasons unrelated to conduct determined to be in violation of the Act (see below). Where appropriate, supervisors should consider designating new employees as Unscheduled Telework Eligible if they have duties that will eventually place them in the Fully Eligible category once they are trained and acclimated to OPM.

2. Telework Ineligible

- i. Temporarily Ineligible. Temporarily Ineligible employees are employees whose performance is below Fully Successful or who have been officially disciplined after December 9, 2010, for disqualifying conduct as set forth in the Act (i.e., being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year, or for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch regarding relating to pornographic activity).

Employees who are Temporarily Ineligible for the performance and conduct reasons mentioned above are not eligible for unscheduled telework and are subject to OPM's guidance on dismissal and closure procedures for non-telework employees. Telework participation ineligibility based on conduct after December 9, 2010 identified in the Act that results in official discipline (i.e., being absent without permission for more than five days in any calendar year or for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch relating to pornography) remains in effect as long as the official discipline document remains in the employee's Official Personnel Folder (OPF), unless the document has expired (e.g., a reprimand is usually removed from the OPF after one or two years).

Employees may also be Temporarily Ineligible if they are currently performing tasks that would require the employee to be in the office (e.g., special project that temporarily requires on site presence, acclimating to professional work environment, or required on the job training). Employees who are Temporarily Ineligible under these circumstances may be identified as Unscheduled Telework Eligible, as appropriate.

Additionally, employees in this circumstance will be notified as soon as practicable (generally within 5 days unless extenuating circumstances prevent notification) when a change to eligibility determination will be required. In these circumstances, employees will be provided a timeframe when the telework eligibility determination will be re-evaluated.

Telework Eligibility Determinations Affected by Performance Below Fully Successful. When telework eligibility is affected by performance below Fully Successful, employees will be provided specific performance related information regarding the reason behind the below Fully Successful performance. Suggestions to assist the employee to raise the performance will be provided to the employee as soon as he or she is notified of the eligibility determination or at the same time that the telework agreement is temporarily terminated. When suggestions are provided to assist the employee to raise performance for this reason a timeframe to re-visit the performance level/telework eligibility will be determined within 30 to 90 days. This provision, however, will not preclude the agency from taking an adverse action under chapter 75 in reliance upon the same performance concerns that prompted the revocation of telework eligibility. Additionally, in the absence of such suggestions, the agency retains the authority to take any actions necessary for the efficiency of the service.

- ii. Permanently Ineligible. Permanently Ineligible employees have work responsibilities/duties that require them to be in the office due to the essential functions of their position. Employees who are Permanently Ineligible are not eligible for unscheduled telework and are subject to the OPM's guidance on dismissal and closure procedures for non-telework employees. As noted above, telework participation ineligibility based on conduct after December 9, 2010 identified in the Act (i.e., AWOL for more than five days and violation of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct of Employees of the Executive Branch) remains in effect as long as the official discipline document stays in the employee's OPF (e.g., a suspension or termination never comes out of an employee's OPF, which would result in a permanent prohibition on telework participation)
- iii. Mobile. Mobile workers are not considered teleworkers. The work is characterized by routine and regular travel to customers or other worksites instead of a single agency worksite (e.g., site audits, site inspections, investigations, and property management). Mobile workers should consult with their supervisors regarding expectations in emergency situations.

- d. The TMO is a resource to supervisors and employees on telework eligibility determination situations.

While supervisors and employees are encouraged to involve the TMO as an intervention resource, doing so does not stop or change the timeframes established by the EEO process, the negotiated grievance process, the negotiated ADR process in lieu of the negotiated grievance procedure (if such a negotiated process is in effect), and/or the administrative grievance process unless otherwise agreed to by the parties and not precluded by law, rule or regulation.

OPM employees have the right to grieve their telework eligibility determination. Bargaining unit employees may contact their respective union officials regarding disputes which arise from the eligibility determination. Non-bargaining unit employees may follow the administrative grievance procedures located in the OPM Human Resources Handbook in Chapter 771.

2-5. Guidance for Approving Requests to Telework

- a. Under OPM’s telework program, supervisors will approve, modify, disapprove or discontinue telework arrangements (including frequency/schedule) on a case-by-case basis. Under OPM’s telework program, supervisors will approve, modify, disapprove or discontinue telework arrangements (including frequency/schedule) on a case-by-case basis. Supervisors will approve or deny employee requests to telework within 10 work days of receipt. If denied, the supervisor will include a written explanation of the reasons for denial through the Telework Request/Agreement Part B form.

The Telework Request/Agreement Form and instructions are at Appendix A of this Chapter. This form must be used to document telework eligibility, request telework arrangements, document employee decision not to telework, and to approve, modify or disapprove telework requests.

- b. Employees who are performing at less than the Fully Successful level are not eligible to telework. Employees who have been officially disciplined after December 9, 2010 for conduct in violation of the Act (i.e., being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year or for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties) are not eligible to telework as long as the disciplinary document pertaining to this misconduct remains in the employee’s OPF. Generally, full eligibility for telework will not be appropriate for new employees (e.g., employees who need to be in the office to learn the organization, employees who require on-the-job training, etc.).
- c. Supervisors should consider the effect of teleworking on all employees in the work unit, especially if it means there are fewer employees in the physical office to handle in-person customer requests or if technological barriers exist so that fewer employees are capable of responding to virtual requests for information via telephone, email or other means of communication. Supervisors and teleworkers must be able to establish effective lines of communication just as they must effectively communicate when in the office.
- d. Work performed by teleworkers and non-teleworkers is measurable in terms of results and outcomes. The employees’ current performance standards will be used to measure performance of teleworkers and non-teleworkers. Decline in performance may be a factor for maintaining telework eligibility.
- e. All Government records, which may include files, references and databases, should be transferable to the telework site or available through some form of technology. The telework agreement must identify specific items (phone, computer, fax, data, etc.)

needed to complete assignments at the telework site. In addition, the agreement must include types of work assignments to be accomplished and means of communication with the employee when teleworking (phone, fax, email, etc.). [NOTE: Classified data may not be taken to telework sites. Privacy Act, Personally Identifiable Information (PII), and sensitive non-classified data may be taken to telework sites with supervisory approval if required precautions are taken to protect the data.]

- f. An employee who would like to use a telecenter must complete a telework request/agreement and work with OPM HR and the employee's supervisor to approve and establish the agreement between the individual office and the telecenter. OPM HR maintains a copy of approved telecenters, including their locations and their contacts.
- g. In cases where an employee is requesting to work from home or from some other alternative location due to injury or is a qualified individual with a disability, the employee should follow OPM's reasonable accommodation procedures. OPM's reasonable accommodation policy (<http://theo.opm.gov/handbooks/ch714.asp>) fully complies with the requirements of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, 29 U.S.C. §§ 791, et seq., and Executive Order 13164.
- h. The TMO, OPM HR, and local unions are available to assist employees and managers with telework eligibility determinations and approval concerns.
- i. Telework, whether from home, a telecenter, or other remote worksite is not a substitute for dependent care services. Those employees who work from a telecommuting center may not take dependents to the center. See Subchapter 3, section c for unscheduled telework provisions.
- j. Teleworkers who work from home must have a specific room or area of a room designated to perform their official duties. OPM will not use appropriated funds to pay for the increased costs of utility services due to an employee teleworking from home.
- k. If deemed necessary, teleworkers may be provided with a method for making long distance calls when the employee would otherwise incur work-related costs.

2-6 Guidance for Denying, Terminating, Modifying, or Withdrawing Telework Agreement

- a. Denying Telework Requests.

Supervisors are responsible for denying telework requests that are not compatible with telework eligibility requirements, work requirements, and/or office coverage needs within 15 days of receipt of the request. Specific reasons for the denial will be provided to employees in writing.

Supervisors are encouraged to interact with employees and be flexible and creative in resolving coverage conflicts (e.g., draw straws, rotate days, seniority, etc.). The TMO will monitor denials and will consult with supervisors, the Chief Human Capital Officer, and/or Agency leadership when inconsistent application of telework requirements is identified.

b. Terminating Telework Agreement.

If something occurs to change the employee's current telework eligibility category, either at the annual review or earlier as needed (e.g., performance falls below Fully Successful, disqualifying conduct, work exigency, conduct/disciplinary situation), the supervisor will meet with the employee to have an updated eligibility discussion. Specific reasons for the eligibility change will be provided to the employee (see section 2-4 (c) (2) (i) if eligibility change is due to performance below the Fully Successful level). If the eligibility category is no longer compatible with the telework request/agreement, the supervisor will terminate the agreement. Alternatively, the supervisor may reconsider a revised request/agreement submitted by the employee. Employees will be provided 1 pay period to transition to the termination of telework or the approved revised schedule unless legal requirements or other pressing circumstances require more immediate transition back to OPM offices.

If the termination is temporary, the expected duration will be identified in the updated eligibility discussion and at the employee's request provided in writing. If the temporary termination is for 2 pay periods or less – the provisions in section 2-6 (c) (2) of this Subchapter will be used.

c. Modifying Telework Agreement.

- 1) If a permanent or long-term change to a telework schedule (i.e., more than 2 pay periods) is needed to address work requirements and/or office coverage needs, the supervisor will notify the employee of the change and the specific reasons. The employee will be provided an opportunity to submit a revised telework request/agreement, if appropriate. Supervisors are responsible for approving revised telework agreements that meet telework eligibility categories and address the specific work requirements. Employees will be provided 2 pay periods to transition to the approved revised schedule.
- 2) If a temporary change to a telework schedule (i.e., 2 pay periods or less) is needed in unexpected and/or urgent situations, supervisors can immediately require temporary modifications. The supervisor will judiciously use this provision, work with employees to strike the right balance, and may when possible, provide alternative days/times to replace changes to regular telework schedules. Employees are expected to be flexible and accommodate needed temporary modifications. Supervisors should also be flexible when possible in situations where employees need modifications for unexpected or urgent personal matters.

- d. Withdrawing. Employees may withdraw their requested telework schedule/agreement at any time.
- e. The TMO is a resource to supervisors and employees on denial and termination of telework agreement situations. While supervisors and employees are encouraged to involve the TMO as an intervention resource, doing so does not stop or change the timeframes established by the EEO process, the negotiated grievance process, and/or the administrative grievance process unless otherwise agreed to by the parties and not precluded by law, rule or regulation.

OPM employees have the right to grieve the denial or termination of their telework agreement. Bargaining unit employees may contact their respective union officials regarding disputes which arise from the denial or termination of the telework agreement. Non-bargaining unit employees may follow the administrative grievance procedures located in the OPM Human Resources Handbook in Chapter 771.

2-7. Roles and Responsibilities

- a. Supervisors. The Supervisor is required to complete supervisory telework training. This requirement may be satisfied by using the on-line training option “Telework Fundamentals for Managers” on the OPM Learning Connection at the following link:

<https://learningconnection.opm.gov/course/view.php?id=32464>

Supervisors are responsible for approving, modifying, or disapproving telework requests/agreements in accordance with the eligibility categories and provisions in this Chapter. Supervisors are also responsible for ensuring the employees who telework complete employee telework training prior to starting their telework arrangement. This requirement may be satisfied using the on-line training option “Telework Fundamentals for Employees” on the OPM Learning Connection at the following link:

<https://learningconnection.opm.gov/course/view.php?id=32465>

This requirement may be waived for employees who are currently under a successful telework arrangement. Supervisors are responsible for communicating with telework employees, assigning work, and providing the same treatment and opportunities to telework employees as non-telework employees (e.g., work assignments, awards and recognition, developmental opportunities, promotions). Supervisors are responsible for certifying employees’ telework time in the time and attendance system and for reviewing telework agreements annually and as needed to address applicable changes.

b. Employees. Employees are responsible for completing the telework request/agreement after the supervisor makes the eligibility determination. Employees who are approved to telework are responsible for managing their workload, performing work during all duty hours (except for allowed breaks), and ensuring that the telework arrangement does not have a negative impact on the work of other team members. An employee should consider how less supervision may impact his or her performance level. The teleworker is responsible for communicating with his or her supervisor, coworkers, and customers and reporting in the office as stated in the agreement and/or as required by the supervisor for unexpected work exigencies. To the extent possible, employees will be given 3 workdays advance notice of a need to report to the office for a meeting, training or other work purposes unless such advanced notice is not feasible. Employees are responsible for accurately recording telework on work reports.

c. Supervisors and Employees. The supervisor and employee are responsible for striking the right balance when work exigencies require a temporary modification (no more than 2 pay periods) to regular telework schedules. Supervisors may judiciously require temporary modifications in unexpected and urgent situations and may provide alternative days/times to replace changes whenever possible. Supervisors should also be flexible when possible in situations where employees need modifications for unexpected or urgent personal matters. Employees are expected to be flexible and accommodate needed temporary modifications.

Supervisors and telework-ready employees are encouraged to have discussions prior to and in preparation for weather events, to assist employees with taking reasonable steps to prepare for closures or changes to operating status. Reasonable steps would include monitoring the weather prior to departing the office to determine whether it would be appropriate to bring home agency files and equipment should there be a closure or unscheduled telework announcement.

d. Telework Managing Officer. The TMO serves as an advisor for Agency leadership, including the Chief Human Capital Officer. He or she should be a senior official of the Agency who has direct access to the head of the Agency. The TMO is responsible for collecting telework data for the annual telework report to Congress. The TMO is an advocate for telework and ensures that the Agency optimizes its mission accomplishment capability through effective use of telework through policy development and implementation of effective telework programs. Further, the TMO is responsible for providing information and/or clarification to employees and supervisors regarding the telework policy and/or telework agreements and is a resource to supervisors and employees in denial and termination of telework agreement situations.

e. Individual supervisor determinations over subjects such as telework eligibility and termination of telework agreements are not subject to bargaining. If the Agency makes changes to telework policies or practices, it agrees to provide notice and bargain consistent with applicable law and the CBA.

2-8 Reporting Requirements

a. Telework Managing Officer. The TMO will collect telework data in accordance with OPM data collection elements and metrics.

b. Employees and Supervisors. Employees and supervisors are required to monitor telework through tools established by the Agency and communicated throughout OPM (e.g., annual telework determination/agreement review initiated by OPM HR, new employee telework determination, telework activity documented on work reports and time and attendance certification) to support implementation of this policy.

SUBCHAPTER 3. Time, Attendance, Pay

- a. Employees who telework are governed by the same policies regarding work schedules, leave and premium pay that apply to non-teleworkers. Employee, supervisors, and timekeepers are responsible for ensuring accurate, complete, and timely reporting of the hours worked in each pay period. This includes the accurate recording of time worked in a telework status, as well as accurately recording leave status to cover periods during our schedule work week when we are not working.
- b. If a situation arises at the employee's telework site that results in the employee being unable to continue working, the supervisor may excuse the employee from duty, reschedule work, authorize leave or require the employee to commute to the office to continue working. If the employee knows in advance of a situation that would preclude working at the telework site, then alternative work schedules, leave or time in the employee's current traditional Federal office must be requested/scheduled.
- c. Teleworkers are an invaluable resource during a time of emergency. The following are requirements for telework eligible employees in accordance with OPM's Washington, DC, Dismissal and Closure Announcements. For employees at OPM facilities outside of DC, local managers may make parallel announcements in coordination with senior leaders. Remote workers are expected to work as scheduled. Mobil workers should follow supervisory instructions.

1. Unscheduled Telework Announcement

- i. Employees who are Unscheduled Telework Eligible or Fully Eligible with approved telework agreements in place are eligible to telework when the Director issues an announcement that authorizes unscheduled telework.
- ii. The employee should not request unscheduled telework if it is known at the time of the request that the emergency adversely affects the ability to accomplish duties at the telework site (e.g., power outage, child care cancellation, etc.); instead the employee must either report to the office or request to use his or her alternative work schedule day off, appropriate paid leave, credit hours, compensatory time off, or leave without pay, in accordance with current policy and procedures.
- iii. If the emergency affects the ability to accomplish duties at the telework site unexpectedly (power goes out later in the day, child care/school has an early dismissal, etc.), a supervisor may excuse a telework employee from duty on a case-by-case basis.

If after the employee opts to telework pursuant to an unscheduled telework announcement and an emergency affects the ability to accomplish duties at the telework site unexpectedly, the types of circumstances that may warrant granting weather and safety leave during an unscheduled telework day include for example power outages that happen later in the day. Supervisors in these unusual circumstances may grant weather and safety leave for the remainder of the day.

2. Delayed Arrival

When a delayed arrival is announced, employees who are scheduled to telework or who are requesting an unscheduled telework day will be required to work their regularly scheduled tour of duty unless the employee's supervisor approves weather and safety leave based on the supervisor's determination that a work or personal/site hardship justifies it (see above).

- i. Teleworkers should contact their supervisors as soon as possible to notify them they plan to take unscheduled telework if the option has been announced.
- ii. Teleworkers must also notify their supervisors of any situation preventing them from working during the day.
- iii. Under circumstances when an employee may have a delayed arrival that does not fall under the criteria for weather and safety leave, a supervisor may authorize administrative leave, subject to the 10-workday calendar year limitation contained in 5 U.S.C. § 6329(c); however, such use is subject to the supervisor's sole and exclusive discretion. It is anticipated that granting of such leave would be rare.

3. Early Departure

- i. If an early departure is announced, employees who are teleworking will continue to work the remainder of their scheduled workday or take leave.
- ii. Employees who are at their official worksite when the announcement is issued and stay until the time of early departure will receive weather and safety leave in accordance with the announcement.
- iii. Telework program participants working in the office when an early departure is announced generally may receive weather and safety leave only for the amount of time required to commute home (excluding the period of time for an unpaid lunch break, if applicable). This means that telework program participants must complete the remaining time (if any) in their workday by either teleworking or taking leave (paid or unpaid) or other paid time off once they arrive home unless one of the exceptions pursuant to law, regulation, and this policy applies.
- iv. An employee who departs earlier than his or her scheduled early departure time is not eligible for weather and safety leave and will be required to make up the hours remaining in the regularly schedule workday with leave, previously earned compensatory time off, or credit hours, as applicable.

4. Federal Offices are Closed

- i. Unscheduled Telework Eligible or Fully Eligible employees with approved telework agreements in place are required to telework when the Director issues an announcement that Federal offices are closed (e.g., major snow storm, hurricane, interruptions in transportation), even if that day is not a regular telework day or a day with specific situational approval.

An agency may approve weather and safety leave only if the employee is prevented from safely traveling to or performing work at an approved location due to— (1) an act of God; (2) a terrorist attack; or (3) another condition that prevents the employee or group of employees from safely traveling to or performing work at an approved location. If, in the supervisor's judgment, the above conditions could not have been reasonably anticipated and the employee took reasonable steps within his or her control, the supervisor may provide weather and safety leave to the extent an employee was not able to prepare for telework and is otherwise unable to perform productive work at the telework site. For example, if a significant snowstorm is predicted, the employee may need to prepare by taking home any equipment (e.g., laptop computer) and work needed for teleworking. To the extent that an employee is unable to perform work at a telework site due to his or her failure to make necessary preparations for reasonably anticipated conditions, a supervisor may not provide weather and safety leave, and the employee would need to use other appropriate paid leave, paid time off, or leave without pay.

On a case-by-case basis, a supervisor may excuse a telework employee from duty during this type of announcement if the emergency adversely affects the employee's ability to accomplish duties at the telework site (e.g., power outage), or if the teleworker's duties are such that he or she cannot continue to work without contact with the regular worksite and/or did not have adequate notice to ensure equipment, files, supplies, etc. were available at the telework site to be productive for the duration of the closure. In these rare situations, employees are expected to accomplish as much as they are able under the limiting circumstances. If a teleworker is unable to telework during a closure because his/her usual child, elder or health care arrangements are unavailable during the closure and the level of care needed prevents work accomplishment, supervisors should approve excused absence for the time they are unavailable to work during the closure.

Teleworkers should contact their supervisors as soon as possible to notify them of the situation preventing them from continuing to work. To the extent that activities such as clearing snow are truly necessary to ensure that the employee can safely travel to or safely perform work at an approved location, the supervisor may provide weather/safety leave at his or her discretion for the period needed. Teleworkers would need to use their annual leave or other time off for activities such as clearing snow on sidewalks or basement water removal that are not necessary to ensure that the teleworkers can safely travel to or perform work at an approved location.

- ii. Teleworkers may also request to use appropriate paid leave, credit hours, compensatory time earned, or leave without pay during emergency closures in accordance with current policy and procedures.

- iii. Employees may not receive weather and safety leave for hours during which they are on other preapproved leave (paid or unpaid) or paid time off. Agencies should not provide weather and safety leave to an employee who, in the agency's judgment, is canceling preapproved leave or paid time off, or changing a regular day off in a flexible or compressed work schedule, for the primary purpose of obtaining weather and safety leave. In the event of a closure, telework-eligible employees with pre-approved leave have the additional option of requesting cancellation of this leave in order to permit them to telework instead.
 - iv. Employees are not permitted to switch their scheduled day off, pursuant to a flexible work schedule ("FWS"), to another workday when, in the agency's judgment, the change is being requested primarily for the purpose of allowing the employee to receive weather and safety leave on the previously scheduled FWS day off. If an employee is not scheduled to work, weather and safety leave is not applicable because the day is a non-work day.
- d. The official worksite for teleworkers remains the place where they would normally work, not their telework site, as long as they are regularly scheduled to be at that regular worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period. If the employee does not work at the regular worksite twice each biweekly pay period, s/he is a remote worker. See 5 CFR 531.605 (d) (2) for exception to the twice-each-biweekly-pay-period requirement in situations of a temporary nature. Requests to work from a remote site are not telework requests within the meaning of this policy and should be handled on a case-by-case basis in consultation with OPM HR and OPM HR Handbook, Chapter 369, Remote Worker.
 - e. Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that teleworkers perform overtime work only on work for which the supervisor intends to compensate by overtime payments or compensatory time off (as appropriate). Employees not covered (exempt) from the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) will be compensated for overtime work only when ordered or approved in advance in writing by the supervisor. If a teleworker works unauthorized overtime under 5 U.S.C. 5542 on a recurring basis, the supervisor should address the matter with the employee. To the extent a supervisor wishes to terminate the agreement or otherwise modify an employees' telework agreement, the supervisor will do so in accordance with this policy.

Similarly, employees designated as FLSA non-exempt (covered) may not perform overtime work while teleworking unless that employee has the express, advance approval of the supervisor. If a teleworker works unauthorized overtime under 5 U.S.C. 5542 on a recurring basis, the supervisor should address the matter with the employee. To the extent a supervisor wishes to terminate the agreement or otherwise modify an employees' telework agreement, the supervisor will do so in accordance with this policy

- f. Teleworkers are responsible for recording the time teleworked on their biweekly work report. Supervisors are responsible for certifying the telework time in the time and attendance system. Telework Codes for the current work report/time and attendance system are:
 - Code 90 – Emergency is used for telework during closures. It is also used for telework when unscheduled telework is announced and it is not the employee's regular telework

- day.
- Code 91 – Situational is for any telework that is not part of a pre-approved schedule for an employee.
 - Code 92 – Routine is regularly scheduled telework.

Subchapter 4. Responsibility for Telework Equipment

- a. To support innovative, effective and secure telework practices, the Office of the CIO has sole discretion to approve and implement uses of telework equipment, telework communications methods, and telework IT procedures whenever needed.
- b. The Government is responsible for maintenance of all Government-furnished equipment (GFE). Employees will be required to bring GFE into the office for maintenance.
 - a. The Government will not be responsible or liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property while the employee is preparing to telework and teleworking, except to the extent the Government is held liable by the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act.
 - b. All files, records, paper and electronic materials created or worked on while teleworking are the property of the Government and must be returned/surrendered upon request. Employees must take appropriate precautions to protect government files, records, paper and electronic materials. Precautions should include locking file cabinets, safes, encrypted media, locked doors, etc.
 - c. Use of any equipment for teleworking is subject to OPM's IT policies as maintained on THEO (<http://theo.opm.gov/policies/ispp/> and <http://theo.opm.gov/References/IT/policies.asp>).
 - d. No individual (including family, friends, house guests, tenants, etc.) other than the teleworking employee is authorized to use GFE.
 - e. If specialized IT equipment (e.g., in addition to lap top) is needed for a teleworking, the employee's supervisor shall request the Office of the CIO to provide that equipment. The OPM program office to which the employee is assigned may be required to fund the equipment. In general, printers should not be issued for teleworking employees *. Supervisors should consider whether or not a teleworking employee will require a printer due to type of work and requirement for printed materials.
 - f. The teleworking employee is responsible for establishing a space at the alternative worksite for performing his or her duties while teleworking (see Section 2-5.k). The alternative worksite must have working Internet access and a phone; OPM is generally not responsible for establishing Internet access or providing a phone/phone service at a teleworking employee's alternative worksite. Exceptions may be approved in extenuating circumstances. Current OPM IT policy recommends a broadband (i.e., >200kbps) connection to the Internet.

I am requesting to telework and will work with my supervisor to complete Part B of the Telework Request/Agreement.

Appendix B
Telework Agreement Supervisor Checklist

Supervisors must use this checklist to ensure that telework requirements are met and that covered employees understand the policies and procedures of the telework program. Telework Agreement is not final until the check list items are complete. After an item is completed, list the date on the line next to it.

CHECKLIST ITEM:	DATE COMPLETED:
1. Telework Guidelines have been explained to the employee and signed by supervisor and employee (Attached).
2. The provisions governing premium pay have been explained to the employee including that he/she must receive the supervisor's approval in advance of working overtime.
3. Performance expectations have been discussed with the employee. Performance Standards are in place and have been signed.
4. Policies and procedures covering classified, secure and privacy data including PII have been explained to the employee.
5. The employee has been given and signed the Safety Checklist , which identifies safety and adequacy issues that employees should consider when working from home (Attached).
6. Equipment issued to the employee has been documented with an OPM Form 4753, "Receipt and Pass for Property."
7. Telework training completed or waived in accordance with OPM HR Handbook Chapter 368, Telework, Section 2-7(a).

Telework Guidelines

Duty Station. All pay and travel entitlements are based on the official worksite.

Voluntary Participation. The employee voluntarily agrees to work at the agency-approved telework site indicated above and agrees to follow all applicable policies and procedures. This is a flexibility that may be used by management to accomplish work needs. However, an employee may not be forced to telework.

Salary and Benefits. Working at a telework site is not a basis for changing the employee's benefits. However, an employee must be scheduled to report to the regular worksite at least twice in biweekly pay period. Alternatively, management may consider approving a change of official worksite to a remote worksite. Full-time remote workers are not teleworkers and are subject to different rules. See OPM HR Handbook Chapter 369 for guidance on remote workers (change of worksite may affect pay, RIF competitive area, travel reimbursement, and/or unemployment compensation.)

Official Worksite. In accordance with 5 CFR 531.605, the official worksite for a teleworker remains the place where he or she would normally work, not the telework location. The employee must be regularly scheduled to be at the regular worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period.

Official Duties. The employee will perform official duties only at the regular worksite or agency-approved telework site. The employee may not conduct personal business while in official duty status at the telework site.

Time and Attendance. The employee will follow established office procedures for requesting and obtaining approval of leave. The supervisor must certify biweekly time and attendance for hours worked at the regular worksite and the telework site.

Overtime. Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that teleworkers perform overtime work only on work for which the supervisor intends to compensate by overtime payments or compensatory time off (as appropriate). Employees not covered (exempt) from the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) will be compensated for overtime work only when ordered or approved in advance in writing by the supervisor. Similarly, employees designated as FLSA non-exempt (covered) may not perform overtime work while teleworking unless that employee has the express, advance approval of the supervisor.

If a teleworker works unauthorized overtime under 5 U.S.C. 5542 on a recurring basis, the supervisor should address the matter with the employee. To the extent a supervisor wishes to terminate the agreement or otherwise modify and employee's telework agreement, the supervisor will do so in accordance with this policy.

Equipment. The employee will protect any Government furnished equipment (GFE) and use of such equipment is governed by the OPM Policy on Personal Use of Government Office Equipment. The Agency will maintain and service GFE. The employee may be required to bring the equipment into the regular worksite for service.

Liability. The Government will not be liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property while the employee is working at the approved alternate worksite, except to the extent the Government is held liable by the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act.

Telework Site. The employee will provide a work area adequate for performance of official duties. The employee agrees to review work space that is located in a personal residence for conformance with the suggested safety checklist. The Government will not be responsible for any operating costs that are associated with the employee using his or her personal residence as a telework site (e.g., home maintenance, insurance, or utilities). However, the employee does not relinquish any entitlement to reimbursement for authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the Government, as provided by statute and implementing regulations. When authorized and approved in advance, the Government will be responsible for costs associated with ordinary and authorized use of a workstation in a telecenter.

Injury Compensation. The employee may file a claim under Federal Employee's Compensation Act if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the official work site or the telework site. The employee must notify the supervisor immediately of any accident or injury that occurs at the telework site. The supervisor will investigate such a report immediately.

Work Assignments. The employee will complete all assigned work according to procedures mutually agreed upon by the employee and the supervisor and according to guidelines and standards in the employee's performance plan. The supervisor and employee will agree on terms of reporting work progress and accomplishments from the telework site in accordance with the guidelines and standards in the employee's performance plan.

Performance. Employees who are performing at less than the Fully Successful level are not eligible to telework. Neither higher nor lower productivity will be expected of the employee as a result of the telework arrangements.

Disclosure. The employee will protect Government records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. 552a.

Classified Information. Classified information may not be taken to telework sites.

Sensitive and Personally Identifiable Information (PII). Privacy Act, PII and sensitive non-classified data may be taken to telework sites only with supervisory approval and if required precautions are taken to protect the data. The employee will protect Privacy Act, PII and sensitive non-classified data from unauthorized disclosure. Specific PII guidance can be found on OPM's Intranet site THEO on <http://theo.opm.gov/references/privacy/pii/index.asp>

Standards of Conduct. The employee agrees he or she is bound by Agency standards of conduct while working at the telework site.

Cancellation. After appropriate notice to the supervisor, the employee may terminate the telework arrangements. After appropriate notice to the employee, the supervisor may terminate the telework arrangements.

Computer Use. All OPM employees using wireless connections to access the OPM network remotely must adhere to the “OPM Wireless Access Policy” posted on the internal THEO website. External wireless access points are not managed, maintained or monitored by OPM and are not considered trustworthy. All communications, transactions or connections to an OPM resource over the internet or through a wireless access point must be conducted via an encrypted method such as Citrix, Cisco AnyConnect or VPN access Transit Subsidy. Telework does not change an employee’s eligibility to participate in the Transit Subsidy Program. Employees must be mindful of the requirements under the transit subsidy program and any impact that reduced commuting costs may have on the amount of subsidy received.

Waste, Fraud, and Abuse. All OPM employees have a responsibility to report waste, fraud and abuse within the Agency to the Office of the Inspector General (OIG).

Safety Checklist for the Home Work Space

Participating employees may use the following checklist to assist them in a survey of the overall safety and adequacy of their telework site. The following are only recommendations, and do not encompass every situation that may be encountered. Employees are encouraged to obtain professional assistance with issues concerning appropriate electrical service and circuit capacity for residential worksites.

- Practice a fire evacuation plan for use in the event of an emergency.
- Check your smoke detectors regularly and replace batteries once a year.
- Always have a working fire extinguisher conveniently located in your home, and check the charge regularly.
- Computers are heavy. Always place them on sturdy, level, well maintained furniture.
- Use a sturdy chair that provides good support and can be adjusted.
- Choose office chairs that provide good supporting backrests and allow adjustments to fit you comfortably.
- Locate your computer to eliminate noticeable glare from windows and lighting. Place computer monitor at height that is comfortable and does not require neck or back strain. Locate computer keyboards at heights that do not require wrist strain or place the keyboard on an adjustable surface.
- Install sufficient lighting in locations that reduce glare at the work surface.
- Arrange file cabinets so that open drawers do not block aisles.
- Be sure to leave aisle space where possible to reduce tripping hazards.
- Always make sure electrical equipment is connected to grounded outlets.
- Avoid fire hazards by never overloading electrical circuits.
- Inspect and repair carpeting with frayed edges or loose seams. Avoid using throw rugs that can cause tripping hazards in your work space.
- Locate computers, phones and other electrical equipment in a manner that keeps power cords out of walkways.
- Always power down computers after the workday is over and always turn off all electrical equipment during thunderstorms.
- Keep your work area clean and avoid clutter, which can cause fire and tripping hazards.
- Do not allow non-government employees to operate or repair government owned equipment.

- Always keep government files and information in a secure place and do not advertise your home office to strangers.
- Always use proper lifting techniques when moving or lifting heavy equipment and furniture.
- Always report accidents and injuries immediately to your supervisor.

MEMORANDUM FOR KIRAN A. AHUJA Director

FROM: TYSHAWN THOMAS
 Director of Human Resources

SUBJECT: Request for Approval of Proposed Revisions to the OPM Human Resources Handbook, Chapter 368 Telework Policy

Executive Summary

The Office of Human Resources (HR) for the U.S. Office of Personnel Management (OPM) recommends the Director of OPM approve the issuance of a revised Chapter 368 Telework policy and workforce communications that provide additional implementation guidance. The purpose of the revised OPM Telework Policy is to incorporate legislative requirements related to weather and safety leave per the Administrative Leave Act (specifically section 6329(c)); OPM Weather and Safety Regulations at 5 CFR Part 630, Subpart P; 83 FR 15291; and the OPM Governmentwide Dismissal and Closure Procedures (November 2018). OPM's Telework Policy was approved in March 2018.

Background

OPM Human Resources Handbook, Chapter 368 Telework policy provides guidance on the establishment, management and maintenance of telework within the U.S. Office of Personnel Management (OPM or Agency). The telework program allows OPM employees to work at alternative/telework sites as part of their regular tour of duty. This may include their homes, satellite telecommuting centers or other approved sites away from the office.

The revisions to the Telework Policy incorporate the required weather and safety leave provisions. A summary of the changes is found in the attached "Summary of Weather and Safety Related Leave Revisions to Chapter 368 Telework Policy."

Conclusion

Pursuant to the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 (Act), Public Law 111-292, the head of each agency must establish and implement a policy under which employees may be authorized to telework, to determine each employee's eligibility to participate under that policy, and to notify each employee of his or her eligibility status. By updating the current OPM Telework Policy, OPM is compliant with legislative requirements related to weather and safety leave per the Administrative Leave Act. Additionally, the implementation of the updated policy will enable OPM to strategically leverage these workplace flexibilities and ensure OPM maintains a world-class workforce to serve the American people.

Decision

Authorize the adoption and issuance of the attached revised Chapter 368 Telework policy and workforce communications for OPM employees.

Subchapter 1. General Provisions

Purpose

The purpose of this policy is to provide information on the Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) arrangement to OPM employees. A DETO arrangement is a workplace flexibility that OPM may approve to allow employees to temporarily perform their duties from an overseas location. Although the DETO is not assigned or detailed to the overseas location, the DETO's duty station will be temporarily changed to reflect the overseas alternate worksite for the duration of the arrangement. OPM employees are not authorized to telework from an overseas location without approval from OPM and the Department of State. OPM will consider DETO arrangements on a case-by-case basis according to the criteria laid out in this policy. Due to a lengthy approval process and security considerations, employees and their supervisors should consult with OPM HR as early as possible in the process.

Types of DETO

There are two types of DETOs: Sponsored and Independent. OPM only permits sponsored DETOs.

- Sponsored DETO – An OPM employee teleworking overseas who is the spouse or domestic partner of a sponsoring employee assigned overseas (i.e., Federal Civil Service employee, Department of Defense Employee, or uniformed service member). The OPM employee must be on the Government orders of the sponsoring employee assigned overseas.
- Independent DETO – An OPM employee not included on the Government orders of the sponsoring employee.

Authority

This policy complies with OPM regulations governing telework as described in 5 CFR 531.605 and Department of State processes for Chief of Mission approval. Chief of Mission (COM) is defined, according to the Foreign Affairs Act of 1980, as the primary officer in charge of a diplomatic mission of the United States or of a United States office abroad which is designated by the Secretary of State as diplomatic in nature. Often the COM is the Ambassador stationed in the host country.

This policy must be used in conjunction with OPM's Delegations of Administrative Authority and Telework Policy, Chapter 368.

Subchapter 2. Coverage

Coverage and Eligibility

In order to be eligible for a DETO arrangement, employees must meet the following criteria:

- Be eligible for telework as described in OPM's Telework Policy, Chapter 368;
- Be Full-time;
- Be serving under a career appointment and have completed the initial probationary period or are not required to serve initial appointment probationary period. Certain non-temporary excepted service appointments may also be eligible;
- Must not require access to handling of classified materials; and
- Cannot be political appointees or employees on Schedule C appointments.

A DETO arrangement is not an employee entitlement; neither is a DETO a reasonable accommodation. An employee with a disability may be granted a reasonable accommodation once the employee reaches the location for their DETO assignment.

Duration of DETO

OPM will only consider DETO arrangements of a year or more. These arrangements require the Department of State's COM approval through the National Security Decision Directive 38 (NSDD 38) process.

OPM does not approve DETO arrangements for an indefinite length of time. An employee's request for a DETO arrangement is approved for the initial dates specified on the Government orders of the sponsoring employee assigned overseas. The DETO arrangement cannot exceed the initial duration of the sponsoring employee's assignment overseas or a maximum of 5 years. If the sponsor's assignment overseas is extended, the OPM employee on a DETO arrangement must request OPM's approval for an extension. OPM reserves the discretion to approve extensions on a case-by-case basis prioritizing the organization's mission critical needs.

- If OPM grants an extension, the DETO Agreement must be amended seeking approval from the COM through the NSDD 38 approval process.
- If OPM does not grant an extension, the OPM employee on a DETO arrangement may not telework from overseas beyond when the DETO Agreement has expired.

Subchapter 3. Security

Due to security services and residential security considerations, approval of a DETO arrangement may or may not be granted based on location of the sponsoring employee assigned overseas.

Subchapter 4. Application Process

An interested employee must first discuss the possibility of a DETO arrangement with their supervisor. DETO opportunities should not be construed as an employee entitlement. While an employee may request a DETO arrangement, management and the organization's Associate Director or Office Head must concur and fully support the employee.

OPM HR will work with the supervisor and assist the employee (i.e., prospective DETO) to draft the DETO Agreement and obtain the required documentation to complete a DETO Agreement request package. The DETO Agreement should not deviate or change language in the standard template. (See Appendix A)

DETO arrangements of one year or more must follow procedures outlined in the National Security Decision Directive 38 (NSDD 38). Prior to submitting the request for approval from the COM in the host country via the NSDD 38 process, the DETO Agreement must be reviewed and signed by the following individuals:

- OPM Employee
- OPM Supervisor
- OPM Associate Director or Office Head
- OPM Human Resources Director or Deputy Director
- State Department Host Regional Bureau
- Department of State Host Post Management Counselor

The prospective DETO is responsible for obtaining the proper documentation, such as passports, visas or any additional work permits required to perform work in the foreign location.

OPM HR will submit the request through the NSDD 38 system which creates a package to track the DETO Agreement approval.

Subchapter 5. Approval Process

The NSDD 38 Team at the Department of State will route the DETO Agreement package through the appropriate approval channel to formally obtain COM approval. The NSDD 38 gives the COM control of the size, make-up, and mandate of overseas full-time mission staffing for all US Government agencies. Once COM approves the request, OPM HR will receive an email notification of the NSDD 38 approval. A copy of the approval notification may also be retrieved via the NDSS38 web application.

Once the NSDD 38 approval has been received, the DETO's supervisor is responsible for working with OCIO to ensure that the information systems provided to the DETO will meet all required security standards for use in the foreign location. The prospective DETO's supervisor should notify OCIO – Cybersecurity Division while the DETO Agreement package is pending COM approval.

Once the agreement is finalized, the DETO must notify their supervisor and OPM HR of the effective commencement date of the DETO arrangement prior to or upon their arrival to the approved overseas location. OPM HR will process an SF-50, Notice of Personnel Action, to document the employee's temporary change in duty station and pay entitlement to overseas locality pay. DETO employees are eligible for location-based comparability pay in accordance with section 9717(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2023 (Public Law 117-263). Under this authority, the DETO will receive the pay that is equal to the lesser of the following:

- The amount of title 5 locality pay the employee would have been paid if the official duty station had not been changed to an overseas location under the DETO arrangement; or
- The amount of overseas locality pay the employee would be paid if the employee were an eligible member of the Foreign Service.

Note 1: An employee covered by a Bargaining Unit whose duty station changes due to a DETO arrangement will remain in a position eligible for Bargaining Unit coverage; however, they will no longer be covered by Local 32 or Local 2450 while on a DETO arrangement. The correct Bargaining Unit Status code is "7777" – block 37 on the SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action.

Note 2: The foreign exemption of the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) of 1938 applies to a DETO who will be paid for overtime hours under title 5 of United States Code rather than under the FLSA. Exempt area means any foreign country, or any territory under the jurisdiction of the United States other than the following locations: a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, the Outer Continental Shelf Lands as defined in the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (67 Stat. 462), American Samoa, Guam, Midway Atoll, Wake Island, Johnston Island, and Palmyra.

Subchapter 6. Responsibilities

DETO's Responsibilities

The DETO (i.e., OPM employee approved as a sponsored DETO) must complete all required overseas personnel security training prior to their travel, in accordance with regulations established by the State Department. Depending on the location, a briefing from Diplomatic Security or successful completion of Foreign Affairs Counterterrorism Training (FACT) is required before the DETO arrives at the DETO location.

The DETO is not allowed to begin to work from an overseas location until all DETO approvals, including COM approval, have been granted.

The DETO must continue to follow OPM policies and procedures for requesting and using leave.

The DETO remains subject to their organization's Alternative Work Schedule (AWS) policy and adjustments to the employee's work schedule will be made within the parameters of the organization's AWS policy.

At the end of the term of the DETO Agreement, the employee must inform their supervisor and OPM HR of the effective date of the termination of the DETO arrangement. OPM HR will process two SF-50s, Notification of Personnel Action:

- SF-50 to document the employee's DETO location-based comparability pay is terminated.
- SF-50 to document the employee will receive locality pay under 5 U.S.C. 5304 effective on the same date the DETO location-based comparability pay is terminated.

When the DETO arrangement ends, the employee is responsible for returning to their previous official duty station in the United States. The employee is responsible for obtaining approval from the organization for any leave, to include leave without pay, required for relocation back to United States.

Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas Policy

DETO's Supervisor Responsibilities

In accordance with applicable OPM regulations, the DETO's supervisor must provide the DETO with work requirements, standard mid-year progress reviews, and appropriate annual performance appraisals.

As required by OPM's Telework Policy, Chapter 368 of the OPM Human Resources Handbook, the supervisor will discuss the employee's telework eligibility and document the decision in HR Links.

Cancellation and Amendment

OPM may cancel or amend the DETO Agreement by providing written justification based on the needs of the office or due to performance issues at any time providing the employee with at least two pay period's notice.

APPENDIX A: Remote Worker Agreement and Guidelines

SUBCHAPTER 1. GENERAL PROVISIONS

1-1. General

- a. This chapter provides guidance on the determination to utilize and/or approve requests for remote workers within the U.S. Office of Personnel Management (OPM or Agency).
- b. Decisions to establish or respond to requests for full time worksites away from OPM brick and mortar worksites are within the discretion of management and must be worked out on a case by case basis. Management must memorialize whatever arrangement is ultimately approved or required on a Remote Worker Agreement and have OPM HR review the Agreement before it is executed. See guidance in Subchapter 2.
- c. Employees requesting to relocate do so for their own convenience and benefit and the Agency is therefore prohibited from paying relocations costs. However, the Agency will pay all other approved costs consistent with laws, rules, regulation, and Agency policy to include travel costs to the Agency for meetings and Training.
- d. A remote worker is not considered a teleworker. However, there may be situations where it could be appropriate to approve an alternative telework site in addition to the remote worksite.
- e. Remote workers must be under a current Remote Worker Agreement. Remote Worker Agreements are subject to annual recertification.
- f. All OPM employees have a responsibility to report waste, fraud and abuse within the Agency to the Office of the Inspector General (OIG). The same principle applies in the context of remote workers.
- g. Home-based, employee owned businesses or independent contracting or consulting arrangements must not conflict with the remote worker's tour of duty and work responsibilities.
- h. The Remote Worker Agreement and Guidelines at Appendix A documents will help OPM supervisors, managers, and executives document remote worker/worksites approval and identify remote worker's responsibilities.

1-2. Definitions

a. Remote Worker.

Remote workers are employees who work from a location other than a “brick and mortar” worksite provided by OPM and who do not report to an OPM-provided worksite on a regular basis of at least two days per pay period.

- b. Official Worksite. The official worksite for a remote worker is the place where he or she is approved to work on a regular basis. If an employee's residence is approved as the official worksite, the city and state of the residence is the official worksite. Changing the official worksite may affect an employee in a number of ways, including rates of pay, Reduction in Force (RIF) competitive area, travel reimbursement, and unemployment compensation.

SUBCHAPTER 2. POLICY

2-1. Approving Establishment of a Remote Workplace or Requests from Employees to Perform Work on a Remote Basis

- a. Remote workers are employees who work from a location other than a “brick and mortar” worksite provided by OPM and who do not report to an OPM-provided worksite on a regular basis of at least two days per pay period. Remote workers are not considered teleworkers, unless they have a separate approved telework agreement that authorizes them to work from a location other than their regular/approved (remote) worksite.
- b. When a manager identifies the need to have an employee work remotely or an employee requests to relocate from an OPM-provided worksite to a remote location, there are several important factors that must be considered. Supervisors must carefully weigh factors such as cost and impact on operations and other employees, and the need to hire or retain the employee, as detailed below
 1. Pay. An employee’s pay is determined by his/her official worksite; therefore, the supervisor should review the locality pay tables to determine the extent to which salary costs may increase or decrease if a change in an employee’s duty station is approved. The employee should similarly be aware of any changes in pay that may result and consider this in any request to change their worksite.

2. Relocation

An employee-requested relocation to a new official worksite is for the employee’s own convenience and benefit. Therefore, pursuant to Federal Travel Regulations, 41 CFR Chapter 302 and Agency policy OPM HR Handbook Chapter 572, Payment of Expenses for pre-Employment Interviews and Permanent Relocation, the Agency is prohibited from paying relocation expenses to the new official worksite.”

- i. Consistent with GSA Federal Travel Regulations and guidance, if approved to work remotely, the employee agrees to waive any rights to moving expenses if directed to return to the regular worksite based on a decline in performance or misconduct.
- ii. If, after approving an employee’s location or relocation to a remote worksite, the Agency later directs the employee’s move to another official worksite outside the employee’s commuting area (e.g., return to an OPM-provided worksite), the Agency may be required to cover the following expenses, as applicable: moving expenses if the employee accepts the directed reassignment, or severance pay/discontinued service retirement if the employee declines reassignment. If the supervisor wishes to avoid such costs in the event of a direction to move to another official worksite that is based upon a decline in performance during the period after the employee has moved to a remote worksite, the Agency must specify that contingency in the Remote Work Agreement

iii. A management established remote worksite generally involves hiring the employee for the specific location and typically does not incur moving expenses. However, guidance on moving approval/expenses can be found in OPM Human Resources Handbook Chapter, 572, Payment of Expenses for Pre-Employment Interviews and Permanent Relocation (link).

3. Temporary Duty Travel. Reimbursement for temporary duty travel expenses is determined by the employee’s official worksite. Therefore, the supervisor must consider the cost of business travel from the employee’s requested remote location to other worksites/locations, as well as any travel to OPM office locations. Depending on the travel distance and frequency of travel, payment of temporary duty travel expenses may increase significantly.

4. Equipment and Supplies. Generally, OPM will provide equipment, connectivity*, and supplies necessary for the employee to do his/her job, whether from the traditional office or from another approved worksite. Decisions should take into consideration the following:

- Is it feasible and economical (including shipping/mailling and repair costs) to provide the employee with equipment (e.g., computer, printer, other peripheral equipment), connectivity(e.g., internet connection, phone), and supplies (e.g., toner cartridges, paper, etc.) necessary to do the work at a remote worksite?
- Is there required office equipment that would not be practicable to replicate at an individual employee’s remote worksite (e.g., a binding machine, high-capacity copier, etc.)?
- In the event that the employee’s job requires greater connectivity than he or she would otherwise have for personal use (e.g., increased internet speed), cost of that additional use should be factored into the decision.

* Public Law 104-52, supplemented by GSA’s FMR Bulletins 2006-B3 and 2007-B1, authorizes but does not require agencies to use funds to install telephone lines in private residences of those authorized to work from home and to pay monthly phone charges for such lines, where appropriate. This authority includes Internet services, broadband access, email services, desktop videoconference equipment, and services the Agency deems needed by employees authorized to work at home.

5. Employee Characteristics and Training Needs. Decisions should take into consideration the following:

- Is the employee self-motivated; able to work independently; and able to work without regular, in-person, monitoring/supervision? Does the employee have strong organizational and time-management skills, and a current rating of Fully Successful or better?
- Is needed training available in the vicinity of/at the remote worksite? Would the Agency incur excessive travel costs for training due to remote location?

- Is any necessary on-the-job training able to be acquired effectively from a remote worksite?
 - Is any face-to-face coaching/training needed?
6. Job-Related Characteristics. Decisions should take into consideration the following:
- Can all essential duties of the position be performed from a remote location?
 - Is technology available to support work responsibilities remotely, including co-worker support and communication with other staff and the supervisor?
 - Can work materials be appropriately secured/safeguarded at the remote location?
7. Impact on Co-Workers. Decisions should take into consideration the following:
- Consider the impact on other employees – for example, will other employees have to absorb additional duties relating to handling walk-in customers, phone calls, or other duties that can only be conducted from the brick and mortar OPM worksite?
 - If one or more other employees requested to work from remote locations, would there be sufficient remaining staff to provide coverage in the OPM worksite? If not, you should consider, at the time you make the decision how you are going to respond to future requests. A request to work remotely from an employee not originally required to work from a remote location to do is an act of discretion by the Agency, akin to an act of clemency or a waiver of a requirement. Determinations will be made on a case-by-case basis. The need to maintain the Agency’s ability to continue to discharge its duties at the current or a higher level is always an appropriate reason for declining such a request. Nevertheless, it is a good practice to be prepared to articulate, if asked, why a further request would unduly interfere with the agency’s ability to manage its work.
8. Cost Savings. Decisions can be informed by the following:
- Will the organization realize any savings by not having to provide office space?
 - Will savings be realized by the discontinuation of transit benefits?

Supervisory Note: If you approve a remote work arrangement for an employee, you should inform the employee about the impact on areas such as pay, RIF competitive area and unemployment benefits.

- c. Supervisors should provide Remote Worker Agreements to OPM HR for review before they are executed.

2-2. Delayed Arrivals, Early Dismissals and Closures

Delayed arrivals, early dismissal and closures generally ensure travel to worksite safety. In most cases these situations will not affect the ability to accomplish work from a remote worksite/residence. Remote employees are expected to work during any regional Federal office closures, delayed arrivals, and early dismissals. Remote employees should be instructed to notify their supervisor immediately when emergencies occur that affect a remote worksite to request leave, excused absence, worksite relocation, etc.

2-3. Performance Management

- a. Work performed by remote workers and non-remote workers is measurable in terms of results and outcomes. The employees' current performance standards will be used to measure performance of remote and non-remote workers.
- b. If a remote worker's performance level has fallen below Fully Successful, improvement efforts will first take place at the remote work location or, if available, at an OPM office location within 50 miles of the remote work site. If efforts to improve performance are unsuccessful the employee may be reassigned to an OPM brick and mortar site. Employees should be given reasonable advanced notification of being required to report back to the office (at least two pay periods) unless such advance notice is not appropriate or feasible.

2-4. Remote Worker Guidelines

- a. All Government records, which may include files, references and databases, should be transferable to the remote worksite or available through some form of technology. The remote agreement must identify specific items (e.g., phone, laptop, monitor, etc.) needed to complete assignments at the remote worksite. In addition, the agreement must include work schedule, means of communication with the employee, work assignment guidance, etc. [NOTE: Classified data may not be taken to remote worksites unless the remote worksite itself is a secure site approved for this purpose. Privacy Act, Personally Identifiable Information (PII), and sensitive non-classified data may be taken to remote worksites with supervisory approval if required precautions are taken to protect the data.]
- b. In cases where an employee is requesting to work from home or from other alternative location due to injury or is a qualified individual with a disability, the employee should follow OPM's reasonable accommodation procedures. OPM's reasonable accommodation policy fully complies with the requirements of the Rehabilitation Act of 1993, as amended,²⁹ U.S.C. § 791, et seq., and Executive Order 13164 and can be found on OPM's Intranet site THEO at <http://theo.opm.gov/handbooks/ch714.asp>
- a. Remote work, either from a residence or other remote worksite, is not a substitute for dependent care services.
- b. Remote workers who work from home must have a specific room or area of a room designated to perform their official duties. An agency may not use appropriated funds to pay for the increased costs of utility services due to an employee working from home.

- c. If deemed necessary, remote workers may be provided with a method for making long distance calls when the employee would otherwise incur work-related costs.

SUBCHAPTER 3. Time, Attendance, Pay

- a. Remote workers are governed by the same policies regarding work schedules, leave and premium pay that apply to non-remote workers. Employee, supervisors, and timekeepers are responsible for ensuring accurate, complete, and timely reporting of the hours worked in each pay period. This includes the accurate recording of time worked in a remote work status, as well as accurately recording leave status to cover periods during the scheduled work week when the employee is not working.
- b. If a situation arises at the employee's remote worksite that results in the employee being unable to continue working, the supervisor may excuse the employee from duty, reschedule work, authorize leave or require the employee to work at an alternate worksite to continue working. If the employee knows in advance of a situation that would preclude working at the remote worksite, then alternative work schedules, leave or time in an alternative worksite must be requested/scheduled.
- c. Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that remote workers perform overtime work only on work for which the supervisor intends to compensate by overtime payments or compensatory time off (as appropriate). Employees not covered (exempt) from the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) will be compensated for overtime work only when ordered or approved in advance in writing by the supervisor. If a remote worker works unauthorized overtime under 5 U.S.C. 5542 on a recurring basis, the supervisor should work with OPM HR to address this issue.
- d. Similarly, an employee designated as FLSA non-exempt (covered) may not perform overtime work while performing remote work unless that employee has the express, advance approval of the supervisor. If a remote worker works unauthorized overtime on a recurring basis, the supervisor should work with OPM HR to address.

Subchapter 4. Responsibility for Government Equipment

- a. OPM will issue remote workers appropriate equipment required to accomplish work assignments.
- b. The Government will not be responsible or liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property while the employee is a remote worker, except to the extent the Government is held liable by the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act (link).
- c. The Government is responsible for maintenance of all Government-furnished equipment (GFE). Employees will be required to bring/send GFE into the office for maintenance.
- d. All files, records, paper and electronic materials created or worked on while remote working are the property of the Government and must be returned/surrendered upon request. Employees must take appropriate precautions to protect government files, records, paper and electronic materials. Precautions should include locking file cabinets, safes, encrypted media, locked doors, etc.
- e. Use of GFE equipment for remote work is subject to OPM's IT policies as maintained on THEO (<http://theo.opm.gov/policies/ispp/> and <http://theo.opm.gov/References/IT/policies.asp>).
- f. No individual (including family, friends, house guests, tenants, etc.) other than the employee performing remote work is authorized to use GFE.
- g. If additional and/or specialized IT equipment is needed for a remote worker, the employee's supervisor shall request the Office of the CIO to provide that equipment. The OPM program office to which the employee is assigned may be required to fund the equipment.
- h. The remote employee is responsible for establishing a space at the remote worksite for performing his or her duties. The remote worksite must have working connectivity, i.e., Internet access and a phone. OPM may pay for Internet access or provide a phone and/or phone service at a remote worker's worksite. Connectivity costs are generally only appropriate when the employee's current connectivity provider would require additional expense to accommodate Agency use. Current OPM IT policy recommends a broadband (i.e., >200kbps) connection to the Internet.

Delayed arrivals, early dismissal and closures generally ensure travel to worksite safety. In most cases these situations will not affect the ability to accomplish work from a remote worksite/residence. Remote employees are expected to work during any regional Federal office closures, delayed arrivals, and early dismissals. Remote employees must notify their supervisor immediately when emergencies occur that affect a remote worksite to request leave, excused absence, worksite relocation, etc.

By signing this remote work agreement, when you request to relocate, you agree to waive any rights to moving expenses when you relocate and if directed to return to the regular worksite based on a decline in performance or misconduct.

Remote Worker Agreement Supervisor Checklist

Supervisors must use this checklist to ensure that remote work requirements are met and that covered employees understand the policies and procedures of the remote work program. A Remote Worker Agreement is not final until the checklist is complete. After an item is completed, list the date on the line next to it.

CHECKLIST ITEM:	DATE COMPLETED:
1. Remote Guidelines have been explained to the employee and signed by supervisor and employee (Attached).
2. The provisions governing premium pay have been explained to the employee including that he/she must receive the supervisor's approval in advance of working overtime.
3. Performance expectations have been discussed with the employee. Performance Standards are in place and have been signed.
4. Policies and procedures covering classified, secure and privacy data including PII have been explained to the employee.
5. The employee has been given and signed the Safety Checklist , which identifies safety and adequacy issues that employee should consider when working from home (Attached).

Remote Worker Guidelines

Applicability. The Remote Worker Policy applies to current and future remote workers including EMDC employees that were relocated. However, the provisions contained in the Memorandum of Understanding, dated April 23, 2015, regarding EMDC Relocation, remain in effect.

Employees engaged in remote work that initiated this work arrangement based on their own request will have a 1 year transition period after which all aspects of this policy will be applicable and at which time employees and supervisors will execute the Remote Worker Agreement (Appendix A).

The Agency will provide notice to and bargain with the union, to the extent required by law, when requiring a bargaining unit employee to relocate from a remote duty location.

Duty Station. All pay and travel entitlements are based on the official worksite.

Salary and Benefits. Approving a remote worksite may affect pay, RIF competitive area, travel reimbursement, and/or unemployment compensation. OPM's internal Human Resource Office can assist employees with questions on these topics.

Official Worksite. In accordance with 5 CFR 531.605, the official worksite is the location where the employee regularly performs his or her duties.

Official Duties. The employee will perform only official duties at the official remote worksite or agency-approved telework site if applicable. The employee may not conduct personal business while in official duty status at the remote site.

Time and Attendance. The employee will follow established office procedures for requesting and obtaining approval of leave. The supervisor must certify biweekly time and attendance for hours worked at the remote worksite.

Work Schedule. Work schedule (AWS or fixed) will follow established Agency/office procedures for setting, requesting and approval of available work schedule options. Identified work schedule ensures supervisor, co-workers, customers, etc., can interact with remote employee during the identified work schedule timeframes.

Overtime. Supervisors are responsible for ensuring that remote workers work overtime only when the supervisor authorizes and intends to make overtime payment (including compensatory time off, as appropriate). Both Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) exempt and non-exempt employees must be paid overtime (or compensatory time, under certain circumstances) when overtime hours are ordered and approved in advance in writing by a supervisor with the authority to authorize overtime. Employees agree that failure to obtain proper prior approval for overtime work may result in supervisor taking appropriate action to address.

Equipment. The employee will protect any Government furnished equipment (GFE) and use of such equipment is governed by the OPM Policy on Personal Use of Government Office Equipment. The Agency will maintain and service GFE.

Liability. The Government will not be liable for damages to an employee's personal or real property while the employee is working at the approved alternate worksite, except to the extent the Government is held liable by the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees Claims Act.

Remote Work Site. The employee will provide a work area adequate for performance of official duties. The employee agrees to review work space that is located in a personal residence for conformance with the suggested safety checklist. The Government will not be responsible for any operating costs that are associated with the employee using his or her personal residence as a remote work site (e.g., home maintenance, insurance, or utilities). However, the employee does not relinquish any entitlement to reimbursement for authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the Government, as provided by statute and implementing regulations.

Note: See HR Handbook Chapter 369, Remote Worker Policy Subchapter 4, Section h. for more information on connectivity.

Injury Compensation. The employee may file a claim under Federal Employee's Compensation Act if injured in the course of actually performing official duties at the official work site. The employee must notify the supervisor immediately of any accident or injury that occurs at the remote work site. The supervisor will investigate such a report immediately.

Work Assignments. The employee will complete all assigned work according to procedures mutually agreed upon by the employee and the supervisor and according to guidelines and standards in the employee's performance plan. The supervisor and employee will agree on terms of reporting work progress and accomplishments from the remote work site in accordance with the guidelines and standards in the employee's performance plan.

Disclosure. The employee will protect Government records from unauthorized disclosure or damage and will comply with requirements of the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. 552a.

Classified Information. Classified information may not be taken to remote work sites unless the remote worksite itself is a secure site approved for this purpose.

Sensitive and Personally Identifiable Information (PII). Privacy Act, PII and sensitive non-classified data may be taken to remote work sites only with supervisory approval and if required precautions are taken to protect the data. The employee will protect Privacy Act, PII and sensitive non-classified data from unauthorized disclosure. Specific PII guidance can be found on OPM's

Intranet site THEO on <http://theo.opm.gov/references/privacy/pii/index.asp>

Standards of Conduct. The employee agrees he or she is bound by Agency standards of conduct while working at the remote work site.

Computer Use. All OPM employees using wireless connections to access the OPM network remotely must adhere to the “OPM Wireless Access Policy” posted on the internal THEO website. External wireless access points are not managed, maintained or monitored by OPM and are not considered trustworthy. All communications, transactions or connections to an OPM resource over the internet or through a wireless access point must be conducted via an encrypted method such as Citrix, Cisco AnyConnect or VPN access.

Delayed arrivals, dismissal and closures. These announcements ensure travel or on-site safety. In most cases these situations will not affect the ability to accomplish work from a remote worksite. Remote employees should notify their supervisor immediately when emergencies occur that affect a remote worksite to request leave, excused absence, worksite relocation, etc.

Waste, Fraud, and Abuse. All OPM employees have a responsibility to report waste, fraud and abuse within the Agency to the Office of the Inspector General (OIG).

Safety Checklist for the Home Work Space

Participating employees may use the following checklist to assist them in a survey of the overall safety and adequacy of their remote work site. The following are only recommendations, and do not encompass every situation that may be encountered. Employees are encouraged to obtain professional assistance with issues concerning appropriate electrical service and circuit capacity for residential worksites.

- Practice a fire evacuation plan for use in the event of an emergency.
- Check your smoke detectors regularly and replace batteries once a year.
- Always have a working fire extinguisher conveniently located in your home, and check the charge regularly.
- Computers are heavy. Always place them on sturdy, level, well maintained furniture.
- Use a sturdy chair that provides good support and can be adjusted.
- Choose office chairs that provide good supporting backrests and allow adjustments to fit you comfortably.
- Locate your computer to eliminate noticeable glare from windows and lighting. Place computer monitor at height that is comfortable and does not require neck or back strain. Locate computer keyboards at heights that do not require wrist strain or place the keyboard on an adjustable surface.
- Install sufficient lighting in locations that reduce glare at the work surface.
- Arrange file cabinets so that open drawers do not block aisles.
- Be sure to leave aisle space where possible to reduce tripping hazards.
- Always make sure electrical equipment is connected to grounded outlets.
- Avoid fire hazards by never overloading electrical circuits.
- Inspect and repair carpeting with frayed edges or loose seams. Avoid using throw rugs that can cause tripping hazards in your work space.
- Locate computers, phones and other electrical equipment in a manner that keeps power cords out of walkways.
- Always power down computers after the workday is over and always turn off all electrical equipment during thunderstorms.
- Keep your work area clean and avoid clutter, which can cause fire and tripping hazards.

- Do not allow non-government employees to operate or repair government owned equipment.
- Always keep government files and information in a secure place and do not advertise your home office to strangers.
- Always use proper lifting techniques when moving or lifting heavy equipment and furniture.
- Always report accidents and injuries immediately to your supervisor.

ARTICLE 24

TELEWORKING PROGRAM

Section 1 - Policy

OPM Human Resources Handbook Chapter 368 contains the agency policy on teleworking, and as such serves as the framework for this article.

The Office of Personnel Management's teleworking program is voluntary and supports a range of teleworking options. It is an option that may be used by bargaining unit employees to assist in the effective and efficient accomplishment of agency business.

Section 2 - Requirements

The general requirements to telework are defined in Chapter 368, subchapter 2-3 of the Human Resources Handbook. The specific application of the guidelines may vary depending upon the type of work performed but in general, employees in a function which can be performed by teleworking will be afforded the opportunity. The teleworking agreement will define any specific requirements that the manager and employee need to follow.

Section 3 - Equipment/Supplies Provided

The general requirements to telework are defined in Chapter 368, subchapter 3-4 of the Human Resources Handbook. Employees will be provided equipment and supplies necessary to perform their duties while teleworking as determined on a case-by-case basis. The teleworking agreement will specify the resources that will be provided.

Section 4 -Policy and Agreements

Each member of the Boyers Teleworking Program must complete and/or review the following:

1. Alternate Worksite Agreement
2. Alternate Worksite Agreement Info Sheet A
3. Alternate Worksite Agreement Info Sheet B
4. Supervisor Checklist
5. Request to Telework

These documents can be obtained by contacting the employee's first-level supervisor or OPM Human Resources. Additionally, managers will prepare agreements specific to participants' workloads and other functions. Managers will determine what days an employee will need to be in the office and what days an employee will be able to telework based upon the operating unit's functional needs, workload management issues and the need to provide office coverage.

Teleworking agreements will be established for review in six-month increments. These agreements will inform participants of their responsibilities and expectations.

Teleworkers must consistently maintain a fully successful performance rating to be permitted to telework.

The teleworking contract can be terminated by management for issues concerning productivity, timeliness, section staffing needs, section phone coverage, customer satisfaction, personal computer (PC) or system related problems at the alternate worksite and other performance or conduct related matters (behavior that is detrimental to the program's integrity); or by the employee at any time.

Section 5 - Scheduling- 8, 9, 10 hour tour of duty

In order to meet the current strategic goals of the agency scheduling will be determined by the needs of the unit for office coverage and to accomplish unit workload. Office coverage and processing times will be monitored to determine if an employee's teleworking days need to be adjusted.

Section 6 - Working at home on days when the road conditions are bad

Occasionally poorly maintained roads may present an obstacle for employees to come to work. If this situation exists and the teleworker has work at home that can be performed, the teleworker may be approved to either work at home or use leave. The teleworker must contact their supervisor, inform him or her of the situation and inform the supervisor of the type and amount of work they have to perform. The teleworker should plan to report to work pursuant to the current alternate worksite agreement.

Section 7 - Emergency Dismissals

One of the major benefits of the teleworking program is the ability of teleworking employees to continue working at their alternative worksites during a disruption of Government operations. In recognition of this a teleworking employee is required to continue to work if the agency closes (or dismisses employees early) on his or her scheduled teleworking day. On a case-by-case basis, a teleworking employee may be excused from duty during an emergency situation if the emergency adversely affects the teleworking site (e.g., disruption of electricity, loss of heat, etc.), if the teleworker faces a personal hardship that prevents him or her from working successfully at the teleworking site, or if the teleworker's duties are such that he/she cannot continue to work without contact with the regular worksite.

Employees who are required to work during their regular tour of duty on a day when their agency is closed (or when other employees are dismissed early) are not entitled to receive overtime pay, credit hours, or compensatory time off for performing work during their regularly scheduled hours.

Section 8 - Working overtime for another section at home

Employees outside of the section will be permitted to work overtime for other sections at the alternative worksite if they are fully trained and proficient on the functions performed in the section that overtime is being offered and the offered work does not conflict with overtime offered in the section to which they are assigned.

Attachments: image001.png

Good afternoon, OMB Colleagues,

Thank you for the continued support and guidance with the whole of government approach to increase meaningful in person presence. On behalf of the SBA's Chief of Staff, Arthur Plews, the below updates provide information on the SBA's actions taken to significantly increase meaningful in-person work.

The SBA has led with and attained an elevated in-person threshold for Senior Executives, Senior Leaders, Political Appointees, and Headquarters staff. At Headquarters, Leaders, and supervisors report in person 5 days a pay period and non-supervisory employees report in person 4 days a pay period.

Beginning March 11, 2024, the following in-office baseline requirements will be in effect for all remaining telework-eligible employees with a field duty station (i.e., non-Headquarters duty station):

- All remaining telework eligible supervisors and managers shall report in person 5 days per pay period.
- All remaining telework eligible non-supervisory employees shall report in person 4 days per pay period.

More days in-office/onsite days may be required based on mission and operation needs. For example, employees supporting the SBA's disaster function report in-person 6 days a pay period (3 days each week).

These work environment changes allow the SBA to achieve a balanced and equitable physical presence across the enterprise to deliver on the agency's priorities while upholding SBA's standards of service. The Agency also continues to keep AFGE Local 228 updated on work environment changes. The appropriate union notification protocols are followed as determined by the workforce segment that will be impacted by the updates. The OHRs Workforce Relations Division and National Labor Relations Division are consistently consulted on all workforce communications.

The SBA's compliance approach for increased in-office presence leverages the leadership performance management system to ensure accountability at all employee levels. The primary mechanisms for tracking compliance is the Timekeeping Dashboard and badge swipe data for HQ requirements. Specific compliance steps include:

- Leadership Performance Management - SES and Supervisor performance plans set and communicate the individual and organizational goals and expectations. Compliance with agency policies and protocols including increased in-office presence is captured within the SES performance element of Leading People and the supervisor mandatory element of leadership.
- Timekeeping Dashboard - The Dashboard is used by the Office of Human Resources Solutions (OHRs) leadership and the Telework Managing Officer to assess work arrangement trends and compliance with increased in-office presence.

Furthermore, the SBA Administrator, Deputy Administrator, and Senior Leaders continue to engage with employees, across the nation, through meaningful in-person town halls at the enterprise and program office levels. Such engagements demonstrate the SBA's commitment and reinforce accountability with increased meaningful in-person presence. Regarding compliance, SBA leaders provide oversight and direction for their respective offices to ensure employees conform with agency standards. Additionally, supervisors work with the employee and labor relations staff to address individual employee compliance issues.

Should you have any questions please connect with me and Yadira Guerrero, Cc'd above.

Thanks,

Elias

U.S. Small Business Administration

SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION STANDARD OPERATING PROCEDURES (SOP)

SOP: 33 59
Revision: 4
Subject: Telework Program
Purpose: To provide requirements and updates related to SBA's Telework Program, to include technical updates and greater flexibilities.

Summary of Changes:

- Streamlined the information concerning the impact of weather and safety leave and unscheduled telework.
- Addition of information about telework requests, agreements, and scheduling being done in WebTA
- Addition of language making interns and volunteers telework eligible on an exceptional basis
- Addition of teleworking and dependent care information
- Updated performance management information
- Addition of designation of duty station for teleworkers for location-based pay purposes

Personnel Concerned:

This SOP applies to all SBA employees, including the Office of Advocacy (OA), except the Chief Counsel for Advocacy is the approving official for telework decisions for OA. The Office of Disaster Assistance (ODA) may issue additional telework guidance for its employees. The Office of Inspector General (OIG) has its own Telework Program directive and is not covered under this policy.

SECTION 1 - PURPOSE

This standard operating procedure (SOP) establishes the policy governing the U.S. Small Business Administration's (SBA) Telework Program, including the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 mandates. It contains definitions, basic information about telework, and the roles and responsibilities of SBA officials and employees.

Telework is a work arrangement that allows an employee to perform work, during any regular, paid hours, at an approved alternative worksite (e.g., home) other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work. Employees must report to the SBA worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular recurring basis to meet the requirements of 5 CFR 531.605.

There are two categories of telework:

1. Routine telework in which telework occurs as part of an ongoing, regular schedule; and
2. Situational telework (often referred to as "ad hoc") in which telework is approved on a case-by-case basis and the hours worked were not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular telework schedule.

Note: A full-time telework arrangement is referred to as 'remote work', and is an arrangement in which an employee performs work activities within or outside the local commuting area of SBA's official location and is not expected to report to the SBA official location at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis as described in 5 CFR 531.605. Remote work is addressed in SOP 33 60 Remote Work.

Some benefits of telework:

1. Provides employees greater flexibility in accomplishing their work while also meeting personal and Agency responsibilities (e.g., reducing commuting time and costs);
2. Helps reduce stress by decreasing commuting time, thereby allowing more time for family and personal matters;
3. Encourages employee engagement and retention in SBA - when employees feel they have greater control over their work environment, they tend to feel more committed to their organizations; and
4. Saves SBA resources (e.g., transit subsidy, facility overhead costs) and supports the Agency's ability to be agile and responsive to evolving mission requirements.

SECTION 2 - SCOPE

This policy applies to all SBA employees, including the Office of Advocacy (OA), except the Chief Counsel for Advocacy is the approving official for telework decisions for OA. The Office of Disaster Assistance (ODA) may issue additional telework guidance for its employees. Employees in the Office of Inspector General (OIG) are excluded from this policy. Pursuant to the Inspector General Act of 1978, as amended (IG Act), the Office of Inspector General has independent personnel authority and has established a separate Telework Program for its employees.

If there is a conflict between SBA's Master Labor Agreement (MLA) and any provision of this policy not required by law or regulation, the MLA shall prevail for covered bargaining unit employees (BUEs), provided negotiated terms conform to Federal law and regulation.

SECTION 4 - FUNCTIONAL RESPONSIBILITIES

A. SBA Administrator

The SBA Administrator or designee's responsibilities include, but are not limited to:

1. Overseeing the overall administration of the SBA Telework Program; and
2. Authorizing telework requests for Senior Executive Service and Senior Leader members.

B. The Chief Human Capital Officer (CHCO)

The Chief Human Capital Officer (CHCO) or designee's responsibilities include, but are not limited to:

1. Establishing and modifying this policy in accordance with current, applicable law, regulation, and SBA practices;
2. Appointing SBA's Telework Program Manager; and
3. Providing advisory services to SBA leaders regarding the use of telework, unscheduled leave, or other flexibilities to facilitate optimal operations during disruptions or emergencies.

C. Program Office Heads

Program Office Heads are the Associate Administrator (AA), Deputy Associate Administrator (DAA), and the Chief Counsel for Advocacy for Office of Advocacy (OA) employees or their designees.

Responsibilities include, but are not limited to:

1. Establishing telework guidelines for its program office to ensure consistency and equity in telework decisions for positions that are deemed eligible for teleworking;
2. Maintaining effective communications among all staff to ensure teleworkers and non-teleworkers are treated equitably;
3. Having awareness and oversight on the telework decisions and number of participants in the Agency's telework program;

4. Ensuring subordinate supervisors and managers enforce this policy in a fair and consistent manner, including completion of required telework training and certifications;
5. Ensuring their subordinate leaders enforce and their employees comply with SBA Computer Security and Use policies; and
6. Completing the required Telework Fundamentals - Manager Training.

D. Supervisors and Managers

Supervisors and managers' responsibilities include, but are not limited to:

1. Approving or disapproving an employee's request to telework within five (5) business days;
2. Implementing program requirements in a fair and consistent manner and in accordance with this policy;
3. Making telework determinations based on the functions and duties of the job, and not mere managerial preference;
4. Treating employees with similar work functions across work units similarly when determining telework eligibility;
5. Ensuring employees adhere to this policy;
6. Ensuring their employees comply with SBA Computer Security and Use policies;
7. Completing the required Telework Fundamentals - Manager Training for managers and supervisors;
8. Identifying "emergency personnel" and communicating such designation and expectations to the employee, appropriate emergency management personnel in the Office of Continuous Risk Management (OCORM), and the Servicing Human Resources Office (SHRO);
9. Identifying positions suitable for telework and reporting such to the Telework Coordinator;
10. When possible, consider restructuring jobs so that all employees, theoretically, could be eligible for at least situational or occasional telework;

11. Managing telework expectations as they relate to the activation of Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP) and health pandemic procedures in accordance with established policies and guidelines;
12. If appropriate, allowing some or all teleworkers to meet emergency operations or COOP duties through telework rather than reporting to the normal or designated COOP site. Encouraging mission essential and non-mission essential employees to practice telework to help the Agency prepare to meet emergency situations;
13. Verifying employee eligibility to telework with designated SHRO staff;
14. Discussing requirements and expectations of teleworking, including training, with employees prior to approving or modifying Telework Agreements;
15. Ensuring telework-eligible employees have completed the required Telework Fundamentals - Employee Training and certification prior to starting telework;
16. Maintaining and updating employees' approved Telework Agreements in the Agency's system of record, WebTA;
17. Ensuring employees who telework are aware of their duties and responsibilities under the agreement;
18. Approving employees' telework schedules;
19. Maintaining effective communications among all subordinates to ensure teleworkers and non-teleworkers are treated equitably;
20. Monitoring work products of teleworkers and non-teleworkers to ensure work product quality, timeliness, and productivity are equivalent. This includes ensuring the productivity of all employees in the organization is not diminished or otherwise adversely affected by any employee's telework status;
21. Continuing to perform normal supervisory duties over teleworkers (for example, appraising teleworkers' performance, responding to leave requests, etc.) in the same manner as with non-teleworking employees;
22. Terminating, temporarily suspending, or modifying employees' participation in the Telework Program for documented performance deficiencies, failure to adhere to the provisions of this policy, failure to adhere to the provisions of the Telework Agreement, violations of the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, or organizational exigencies having a short-term impact on the mission of the organization. For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program is approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305);

23. Providing advance notification, when possible, to employees before modifying, temporarily suspending, or terminating participation in the Telework Program. For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program is approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305);
24. Reviewing and updating, as needed, Telework Agreements for employees at least once per year;
25. Granting excused absences, as deemed appropriate, to teleworking employees, who cannot reasonably report to the office, with unusual circumstances that affect teleworkers' ability to perform duties (e.g., loss of internet connectivity, equipment failure, a power outage, or a natural disaster);
26. Verifying and certifying the accuracy of employees' WebTA time and attendance codes for telework status; and
27. Collaborating with the Office of Chief Information Officer (OCIO) to ensure SBA equipment and other required property are available to employees in accordance with criteria specified in this policy, the Telework Agreement, or any addendum, as part of a reasonable accommodation or other provision (e.g., court order).

For additional guidance, please see Appendix B – Telework Checklists for Supervisors.

E. Telework Managing Officer (TMO)

The SBA Telework Managing Officer (TMO) or designee's responsibilities include, but are not limited to:

1. Ensuring the Telework Program is administered in accordance with relevant laws, regulations, and SBA standard operating procedures;
2. Designating a Telework Coordinator to administer the Telework Program and in the absence of the Telework Coordinator, perform those duties;
3. Overseeing and coordinating the implementation and administration of the Agency's Telework Program;
4. Coordinating and disseminating information on SBA telework initiatives, including telework training opportunities;
5. Ensuring SBA employees, supervisors, and managers receive appropriate training;
6. Advising and consulting with the SHRO policy staff, Agency leadership, employees, the Telework Coordinator, and other Federal agencies (primarily OPM) on all SBA telework program matters and issues;

7. Providing resources for managers, supervisors, the Telework Coordinator, and employees on the Telework Program; and
8. Serving as the primary Agency Telework Program point of contact with other Federal agencies.

F. Telework Coordinator

The SBA Telework Coordinator for employees in Headquarters, Field Operations, non-OIG and non-ODA employees, is OHRS. The Office of Disaster Assistance's (ODA) Telework Coordinator services ODA employees. The Telework Coordinator's responsibilities include, but are not limited to:

1. Providing guidance and advisory services about telework to SBA employees, supervisors, and managers;
2. Maintaining, compiling, and providing statistical data and reports on SBA positions suitable for telework, employee requests, participation, schedules, and the telework status of employees for OPM, Telework Managing Officer, SBA managers and supervisors, as required;
3. Disseminating information regarding the Telework Program, procedures, and requirements;
4. Maintaining and tracking electronic data related to Telework Program activity;
5. Coordinating SBA Agency-wide telework training sessions; and
6. Referring supervisor and employee telework-related reasonable accommodation requests and questions to the Disability Employment Program Manager (DEPM) with the SBA Office of Diversity, Inclusion, and Civil Rights (ODI&CR).

G. The Office of the Chief Information Officer (OCIO)

The Office of the Chief Information Officer's (OCIO) responsibilities include, but are not limited to:

1. Ensuring teleworkers comply with SBA Computer Security and Use policies;
2. Establishing procedures for teleworkers to access work and work-related software applications;
3. Advising telework employees on OCIO system requirements;

4. Providing technical assistance and training to employees working at an official duty station or approved alternate worksite on the access and use of SBA networks; and
5. Issuing and accounting for SBA IT and related SBA property made available to teleworkers.

H. Servicing Human Resources Office (SHRO)

OHRS is the SHRO for employees in Headquarters, Field Operations, non-OIG and non-ODA employees, employees in Headquarters or Field Operations. SHROs are responsible for tracking telework schedules and ensuring proper telework reporting for processing employee time and attendance records. The SHRO for employees in Office of Disaster Assistance (ODA), is ODA's Office of Disaster Personnel (ODP).

I. Employees

Employees who express an interest in teleworking are responsible for:

1. Becoming familiar with and adhering to the guidelines set forth in this policy and other SBA directives, procedures and practices related to the Agency's telework program and requirements;
2. Completing Telework Fundamentals - Employee Training and certificates of completion prior to commencement of telework;
3. Completing and signing a Telework Agreement in WebTA, as well as submitting all other required telework request, modification, or termination documentation to the supervisor for approval or notice as appropriate;
4. Consulting with the supervisor in a timely manner if no response is received on a request to participate in the Telework Program after five (5) business days of submitting required documents, or to initiate the administrative or negotiated grievance process for a telework-related decision;
5. Providing written notification to the supervisor in a timely manner if no response is received on a request to participate in the Telework Program after 15 business days of submitting required documents. (See Section 6.5.3 Telework Approval Process);
6. Modifying transit subsidy benefits, as applicable, based on changes to telework schedules;
7. Reporting to the official duty station, as required, on non-telework days and upon termination or withdrawal from the Telework Program;

8. Providing timely notification to supervisors of the request for unscheduled telework (ad hoc), unscheduled leave, or other available flexibilities during emergencies;
9. Maintaining regular communication with supervisors, SBA colleagues, and other individuals as required in the performance of their assigned duties and responsibilities while teleworking;
10. Following the assigned telework schedule;
11. Being available and accessible for communication with all individuals during telework hours;
12. Performing assigned work and fulfilling assigned duties and responsibilities while teleworking;
13. Not engaging in direct dependent care or any other personal responsibilities while teleworking during work hours;
14. Reporting injuries incurred while teleworking (including injuries sustained in the home) to the supervisor immediately and complying with time frames outlined in SBA Workers' Compensation guidance;
15. Safeguarding at the telework location (including in the home) the privacy and security of SBA data, files, records, and access to SBA and federal information technology from unauthorized users (including family members); adhering to all applicable Federal and SBA directives on information, IT operations, and security;
16. Ensuring any Government-provided property is only used for official Government business and only by authorized Government personnel;
17. Receiving advance approval from supervisors regarding any changes in the Telework arrangement (e.g., location, compliance with safety requirements, etc.);
18. Tracking all telework through the appropriate telework codes in SBA's time and attendance system, WebTA;
19. Providing written notification of any decision to temporarily request modification or termination of the telework schedule or agreement. For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program must be delegated and approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305);

20. Complying with all regulations and policies governing the Telework Program, including the negotiated MLA, as applicable; and
21. Complying with SBA Computer Security and Use policies

For additional guidance, please see the Self-Certification Safety Checklist located under Policies & Procedures on SBA's Telework SharePoint site.

SECTION 5 – DELEGATIONS OF AUTHORITY

The Administrator delegated authority to the CHCO to perform personnel-related functions including telework. In this capacity, the CHCO serves as the Agency's Telework Managing Officer and can further redelegate this role. Managers and supervisors have authority to make decisions concerning telework for their employees. This includes approval or disapproval on requests, modifying, and terminating telework agreements and alternative work arrangements. Any final action with regards to the Telework Program for the Office of Advocacy employees (P.L. 94-305) is approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy.

SECTION 6 – THE SBA TELEWORK PROGRAM

6.1 Policy Overview

It is the policy of SBA to authorize, to the maximum extent possible, telework which enhances the Agency's ability to achieve its mission. SBA recommends all employees meeting eligibility and suitability criteria have, at a minimum, an ad-hoc (situational) Telework Agreement to ensure optimum efficiency and employee safety in the case of an emergency situation affecting normal operations. Supervisors and managers are encouraged to make decisions on all new employees' ad hoc Telework Agreement requests within 10 business days if employees meet eligibility and suitability criteria. For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program is approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305).

Managers and supervisors are required to review, at least annually, all Telework Agreements of employees interested in continuing participation in the program. The review of an agreement does not require any changes in the approved Telework Agreement in WebTA unless there are new factors affecting the employee's eligibility, telework work schedule modifications, or the office's mission requirements. While telework is encouraged, it is neither an employee entitlement nor a job requirement.

This policy prescribes eligibility and suitability criteria for the approval of Telework Agreements. It is the policy of SBA to administer the Telework Program on a fair and equitable basis, without discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, age, gender, national origin, political affiliation, sexual orientation, gender identity, marital or family status including pregnancy, personal favoritism, membership, or non-membership in an employee organization or holding of office in an employee organization.

6.2 Introduction

Telework is a workplace flexibility that is beneficial to both the Agency and the employee. Telework is defined in the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 as "a work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of such employee's position, and other authorized activities, from an approved worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work".

This work alternative is intended to:

1. Promote SBA as an employer of choice by recruiting and retaining high-quality employees who have more flexibility and choices to provide a better work-life balance;
2. Provide a contingency plan for SBA program operations when warranted by emergency situations impacting the Agency's operating status;
3. Assist SBA in achieving its strategic and human capital goals;
4. Enhance SBA's efforts to employ and accommodate people with disabilities, including employees who have temporary or continuing health problems, or who might otherwise separate under disability retirement;
5. Reduce traffic congestion and decrease energy consumption and pollution emissions as a result of commuting to and from the employee's traditional office location; and
6. Reduce office space requirements, parking requirements, and transportation costs, including costs associated with the Agency's payment of the transit subsidy.

6.3 Employee Eligibility to Telework

1. Employee eligibility criteria for participating in the Telework Program include:
 - a. A final performance rating of at least "Meets Expectations", Level 3, on their last SBA appraisal of record;
 - b. Completing the required probationary or trial period (unless waived by the supervisor or manager);
 - i. Not temporarily or permanently serving in a position ineligible for telework; and

- c. Other characteristics relevant to the Telework Program as documented by the supervisor and supported by established ethical standards, organizational requirements, policies, or procedures.
2. Employees are ineligible to participate in the Telework Program when the following conditions exist:
- a. The employee's most recent SBA final rating of record is less than "Meets Expectations", Level 3. The employee must have, and continue to maintain, a performance level of at least "Meets Expectations", Level 3, in order to participate in the program;
 - b. The employee refused to follow established telework program participation procedures and practices;
 - c. The employee does not have access to technological components and equipment when required to perform the work;
 - d. The employee has been officially disciplined¹ (i.e., in receipt of a decision letter or an SF-50 documenting a formal disciplinary or adverse action) for being absent without leave (AWOL) for more than five (5) days² in any calendar year;
 - e. The employee has been officially disciplined for violations of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch (subpart G) for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, while on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties;
 - f. The employee has been officially disciplined for charges related to misuse of a government computer in their eOPF.

Supervisors and managers must terminate telework agreements of employees who are not eligible or lose their eligibility. Employees must go through the administrative or negotiated grievance process to appeal decisions related to denials, terminations, or modifications of telework agreements, including time frames for reinstating employees'

² In defining the term "day" for the purpose of determining when an employee has been absent without permission (AWOP) for more than five (5) days in any calendar year, the term "day" is associated with the employee's tour of duty that is established/approved by the supervisor or manager.

eligibility to participate in the Telework Program. However, employee ineligibility due to violations of statutory requirements are considered final and not eligible for appeal.

6.4 Suitability of Positions for Telework

Positions suitable for telework are primarily those involving portable tasks and work activities; do not depend on the employees being at the SBA official worksite each workday; and are conducive to work performed outside of SBA's official worksite. It is the policy of SBA to make as many positions as appropriate eligible for telework.

1. Tasks and functions generally suited for telework include, but are not limited to:
 - a. Thinking and writing;
 - b. Policy development;
 - c. Research through the Internet and other available information technology resources;
 - d. Analysis (e.g., program analysis, financial analysis);
 - e. Report writing;
 - f. Loan review and processing;
 - g. Telephone-intensive tasks (work that can be accomplished primarily through use of a telephone, such as, setting up a conference, participating in a teleconference, obtaining information, or contacting customers);
 - h. Computer-oriented tasks (e.g., making virtual presentations, hosting customer outreach webinars, data entry, word processing, web page design, Power Point presentation development and IT systems support); and
 - i. Other duties or tasks that are deemed appropriate after the publication of this SOP.
2. Positions not generally suitable for telework include:
 - a. Positions requiring the employee to have daily in-person face-to-face contact with the supervisor, colleagues, customers, or the general public in order to perform the job effectively;
 - b. Positions involving duties which cannot be performed via email, telephone, fax, video conference or similar electronic means; and

- c. Positions requiring daily access to classified information or secure materials.

6.5 Telework Application Process

6.5.1 Telework Arrangement Options

Employees meeting established criteria may telework from their residence, or other approved alternate worksite, within or outside of the geographic location of their official duty station under the following arrangements:

- a. Routine Telework – One-time authorization for the employee to telework on a regular and recurring basis. Occurs as part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular schedule.
- b. Ad-hoc (Situational) – Authorization provided on an occasional, case-by-case, or one-time basis for the employee to telework.

Employees who telework on an ad hoc basis must submit each request for telework dates in WebTA for approval to the supervisor or designee. Approval must be obtained prior to the start of the ad hoc telework day.

- c. Unscheduled Telework – Available to employees, with an approved telework agreement, only in response to a change in operating status such as a dismissal, closure, or emergency situation.

6.5.2 Requesting Telework

Participation in the Telework Program is voluntary. Employees who meet the eligibility and suitability criteria may initiate a formal request to participate in the Telework Program. Instructions and forms to request telework in WebTA are located under the Employee Resources and Policies & Procedures sections on SBA's Telework SharePoint site.

6.5.3 Telework Approval Process

Participating in the Telework Program. An approved Telework Agreement must be in place before an employee can telework. Within five (5) business days of receiving an employee's request to participate in the Telework Program, the supervisor or manager will consult the appropriate SHRO staff and Telework Program Manager on employee eligibility and discuss the arrangement with the employee. If employees have not been contacted by their supervisors within five (5) workdays after submitting their request, they are encouraged to follow up with the supervisor regarding the status. The supervisor should make a determination as soon as possible after receiving notification from the employee following up on the status of their telework request. If approved to participate in the program, specific terms of the Telework Agreement, including any modifications to the employee's requested schedule, will be captured in the agreement and may include an addendum. The supervisor will finalize the agreement and meet with the employee to explain the requirements and expectations of teleworking and will ensure the employee is telework-ready. For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program is approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305).

If the manager or supervisor denies the request or fails to provide a decision after 10 business days, employees may request reconsideration of their telework application in writing, by notifying the Program Office Head within 15 business days. The Program Office Head will provide a written decision within five (5) business days. For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program is approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305).

When the supervisor denies an employee's formal request to participate in the Telework Program, the supervisor must provide written justification for the decision. Common reasons for denying a telework request includes employee's ineligibility, incumbency of a position not meeting suitability criteria, performance deficiencies, or other business-related reasons.

Ad Hoc (Situational) Telework Requests. Employees on ad hoc telework agreements (or on regular telework agreements who wish to deviate from their telework schedules) must receive written approval in advance from the immediate supervisor for each occasion they wish to telework. Employees should submit requests for ad hoc telework, in writing, well in advance, typically five (5) business days prior to the requested telework date or as soon as practicable.

The supervisor should provide the employee with a written decision on the request for ad hoc telework within one (1) business day of receiving the request. Employees are encouraged to consult with the supervisor regarding the status of the request when no response has been provided by the business day before the requested telework date. The employee should forward the request to the second-level supervisor, if applicable, or Program Office Head prior to the requested telework date when the supervisor is not responsive or available. Employees may not proceed with performing ad hoc telework without first receiving approval from the supervisor even if no response was received.

Occasionally, supervisors may deny an ad hoc telework request for business-related reasons. Such denials must be given to the employee in writing with the justification.

6.5.4 Withdrawals, Terminations, Suspensions, and Modification

Employees can voluntarily withdraw or cancel their Telework Agreements at any time, resulting in removal from the Telework Program. Employees and supervisors may informally discuss and initiate a change to an existing telework arrangement at any time. Teleworkers may be called into the office if their presence is required on a telework day. Modifications resulting in permanent changes (i.e., work schedule, scheduled telework day, new location, etc.) are considered formal and require the employee to initiate a new agreement for the supervisor's decision. For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program is approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305)

Employees are permitted to submit formal requests to modify their telework agreement in writing once per quarter (or more often for unusual circumstances or emergencies on a case-by-case basis). All formal modification requests must be in writing and must be approved by the supervisor. Supervisors must provide a decision on an employee's telework modification within 10 business days. If the formal modification is denied by the supervisor, the employee may request to go through the administrative or negotiated grievance process (see Appeals section below). All approved informal and formal modifications of telework agreements must be updated by the employee and approved in WebTA by supervisors.

The manager or supervisor has the authority to modify, suspend, or terminate Telework Agreements when the position's duties materially change, an employee loses eligibility or an employee fails to comply with provisions of this policy, the Telework Agreement, computer security requirements, the Privacy Act, or other SBA directives; the incumbency of a position does not meet suitability criteria for telework; or there is a change in circumstances of the organization requiring employees to report to the official duty station. As much as is reasonably possible, a supervisor's written decision to modify, suspend, or terminate a telework agreement must be provided to employees the later of 10 business days or one full pay period in advance of the effective date of the modification, suspension, or termination date.

The supervisor may want to consult with the SHRO prior to suspending, terminating, or modifying a telework agreement that reduces the number of telework days during the pay period.

The supervisor must provide the employee with a written explanation of the basis for such actions and, when possible, provide at least one full pay period advance notice before the action is effective. However, a supervisor can terminate a telework agreement without advance notice when the employee violates the criteria to participate in SBA's telework program as stated in Section 6.3 herein.

6.5.5 Appeals

Employees may appeal telework-related decisions, such as the denial to participate in telework, denial of ad-hoc telework requests, modification of a telework arrangement, or termination of a Telework Agreement through the administrative or negotiated grievance process.

6.6 Accommodations for Employees with Disabilities

It is important to distinguish between ordinary requests to telework and requests for a reasonable accommodation. The employee, approving officials, and supervisors must consult and follow the Reasonable Accommodation Procedures in the Reasonable Accommodation and Personal Assistance Service Policy and Procedure SOP. Therefore, employees or supervisors must contact the Disability Employment Program Manager (DEPM) with the Office of Diversity, Inclusion and Civil Rights (ODI&CR) and visit their website for reasonable accommodation guidance and requirements under the law.

6.7 Official Worksites for Location-Based Pay Purposes

The official worksite for a General Schedule employee covered by a telework agreement is the location of the SBA worksite for the employee's position (i.e., the place where the employee would normally work absent a telework agreement), as long as the employee is scheduled to report physically at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to the SBA worksite. It is up to SBA to determine how often an employee reports to the SBA worksite. If an employee is not scheduled to report to the SBA worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis (i.e., is a remote worker), the employee's official worksite for location-based pay purposes is the alternative work location under the remote work agreement. Certain temporary exceptions may apply (5 CFR 531.605\(d\), 5 CFR 530.302, 5 CFR 591.201, Handbook on Workplace Flexibilities and Work-Life Programs for Elder Care \(opm.gov\), and OPM's Official Worksite for Location-Based Pay Purposes Fact Sheet). SBA must document an employee's official worksite on the employee's Notification of Personnel Action (Standard Form 50 or equivalent). (See "Duty Station" blocks 38 and 39 of the Standard Form 50 showing the city/county and state in which the official worksite is located.)

SBA must determine and designate the official worksite for an employee covered by a telework agreement on a case-by-case basis using the following criteria:

1. In the case of a telework employee whose work location varies on a recurring basis, the employee need not report at least twice each biweekly pay period to the regular worksite established by SBA as long as the employee is performing work within the same geographic area (established for the purpose of a given pay entitlement) as the employee's regular worksite. For example, if an employee routinely varies their work office or facility locations and performs their duties at least twice each biweekly pay period in the same geographic locality pay area in which the established official worksite is located, the employee need not report at least twice each biweekly pay period to that official worksite to maintain entitlement to the locality payment for that area. However, the employee must select and have the telework location(s) approved in writing and in advance by the supervisor. For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program is approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305). The employee must ensure all required telework agreement requirements (located on SBA's Telework SharePoint site) are approved for each telework location.
2. The official worksite for an employee covered by a telework agreement who is not scheduled to report at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to the regular worksite is the location of the telework site (i.e., home, telework center, or other alternative worksite), except in certain temporary situations, as explained under "Temporary Telework Arrangements" below.

6.7.1 Temporary Telework Arrangements

In certain emergency and temporary situations, SBA may, on a case-by-case basis, approve an exception to the requirement to report to the regular worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period to receive the locality payrate applicable for the regular worksite. The intent of this exception is to address certain situations where the employee is retaining a residence in the commuting area for the regular worksite but is temporarily unable to report to the regular worksite for reasons beyond the employee's control. The fact that an employee may receive lesser pay or benefits if the official worksite is changed to the telework location is not a basis or justification for using this temporary exception. A key consideration is the need to preserve equity between the telework employee and non-telework employees who are working in the same area as the telework location. Also, the temporary exception should generally be used only in cases where:

1. the employee is expected to stop teleworking and return to work at the regular worksite in the near future, or

2. the employee is expected to continue teleworking but will be able to report to the regular worksite at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis in the near future. Examples of appropriate temporary situations include:
 - a. Recovery from an injury or medical condition;
 - b. Emergency situations preventing an employee from regularly commuting to the regular official worksite, such as a severe weather emergency or a pandemic health crisis. (For instance, in the aftermath of a hurricane or flood, an employee may be forced to temporarily relocate, making commuting to the regular worksite twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis not possible. If SBA sets up telework arrangements for the employee, a temporary exception to the twice-a-pay-period requirement would be appropriate);
 - c. An extended period of approved absence from work (e.g., paid leave);
 - d. A period during which the employee is in temporary duty travel status away from the official worksite; or
 - e. A period during which an employee is temporarily detailed to work at a location other than a location covered by a telework agreement.

An exception is not appropriate in all time-limited situations. For example, assuming there are no additional circumstances such as those described above that would make an exception appropriate, SBA would designate the employee's telework site as the official worksite and the employee would be considered a remote worker (refer to Remote SOP 33 60 for guidance) in situations such as the following:

1. SBA hires an employee under a temporary or time-limited appointment and authorizes the employee to work from home, and the employee is never scheduled to work at, or report at least twice each biweekly pay period to, a regular worksite (or expected to do so in the near future);
2. An employee changes his or her place of residence to a distant location where commuting at least twice each biweekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to the regular worksite is not possible (i.e., the employee no longer has a residence in the commuting area for the regular worksite and thus cannot reasonably be viewed as being part of the local labor market for the regular worksite).

6.7.2 Other Benefits

The location of an employee's official worksite may affect other benefits. Employees traveling on official business in circumstances where the official worksite is reassigned to the telework location, trips to the main worksite are "official business" and the employee is entitled to travel reimbursement (5 U.S.C. 5702 and CPM 2021-17: Additional Guidance on Post-Reentry Personnel Policies and Work Environment \(opm.gov\)).

6.7.3 Temporary Agreement for Working in a Different Geographic Location

In certain situations, SBA may grant a temporary exception to the physical reporting requirement, such as for employees to care for elderly family members (Handbook on Workplace Flexibilities and Work-Life Programs for Elder Care \(opm.gov\)) in a different geographic location. For more information, see OPM's telework webpage and the Official Worksite for Location-Based Pay Purposes Fact Sheet.

As is the case for any telework arrangement, telework from a temporary location away from an employee's official worksite should be accompanied by a formal written telework agreement that spells out expectations. If SBA approves a temporary exception to the physical reporting requirement, there is no change to an employee's worksite or location-based pay. Extensions of telework from a temporary location away from an employee's official worksite may be granted on a case-by-case basis.

For additional guidance on the use of telework for Elder Care, please refer to OPM's Handbook on Workplace Flexibilities and Work-Life Programs for Elder Care \(opm.gov\).

6.8 Pay, Leave, and Work Schedules

6.8.1 Pay

Certain location-based pay entitlements (such as locality payments, special rate supplements, and nonforeign area cost-of-living allowances) are based on the location of the employee's official worksite associated with the employee's position of record. The official worksite generally is the physical location where the employee regularly reports to perform their duties.

SBA designates the location of the official worksite (duty station) for employees based on one or more of the following considerations: the position description's duty location, the employee's current SF-50s; the reassignment SF-50s or for new hire employees, the duty location if indicated on the vacancy announcement or stated on SBA's official conditional offer of employment letter. Some SBA employees covered by a telework agreement, may also have their location designated on a case-by-case basis. SBA will use the following criteria:

1. The official worksite for an employee covered by a telework agreement is the location of the regular worksite for the employee's position (i.e., the place where the employee would normally work absent a telework agreement), as long as the employee is scheduled to report physically at least twice each bi-weekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to that regular worksite.
2. The official worksite for an employee covered by a telework agreement who is not scheduled to report at least twice each bi-weekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis to the regular worksite is the location of the telework site (i.e., home, or other alternative worksite), except in certain temporary situations.
3. In the case of a telework employee whose work location varies on a recurring basis, the employee need not report at least twice each bi-weekly pay period to the regular worksite established by SBA as long as the employee is performing work within the same geographic area (established for the purpose of a given pay entitlement) as the employee's regular worksite.

For example, if a telework employee with a varying work location works at least twice each bi-weekly pay period on a regular and recurring basis in the same locality pay area in which the established official worksite is located, the employee need not report at least twice each bi-weekly pay period to that official worksite to maintain entitlement to the locality payment for that area.

6.8.2 Eligibility for Premium Pay While Teleworking

Typically, the same premium pay rules apply to employees who telework as they would to employees who report into their regular worksites.

Holiday premium pay - For each hour of holiday work, employees receive holiday premium pay. Holiday premium pay is equal to an employee's rate of basic pay. Employees who are required to work on a holiday during their tour of duty receive their rate of basic pay, plus holiday premium pay, for each hour of holiday work.

Night pay - Night pay is a 10 percent differential paid to employees for regularly scheduled work performed at night (before 6 a.m. and after 6 p.m. local time). It is computed as a percentage of the employee's rate of basic pay (including any applicable locality payment or special rate supplement). A teleworker may not earn night pay by choosing to work at night. Night pay is paid for regularly scheduled work performed at night. This generally means work scheduled before the beginning of the administrative workweek. However, night pay is also paid for night work on a temporary assignment to a different daily tour of duty during the administrative workweek.

Sunday premium pay - An employee is entitled to Sunday premium pay equal to 25 percent of his or her rate of basic pay for each hour of Sunday work. For this purpose, Sunday work consists of non-overtime work during an employee's regularly scheduled basic tour of duty (not to exceed eight (8) hours) that begins or ends on a Sunday.

6.8.3 Leave and Work Scheduling Flexibilities

Employees are required to follow established SBA practices and policies for requesting and obtaining approval of leave and work scheduling changes when teleworking. Therefore, similar to working at a regular worksite, employees can use leave, time-off awards, compensatory time hours earned, or credit hours earned as needed and subject to supervisory approval. When an early dismissal is authorized, it is applicable to teleworkers as well, unless the employee (regardless of working in the office or teleworking) is required to continue to work to meet exigent mission requirements. NOTE: In instances when a teleworker is able to work safely at an approved telework site during severe weather or other emergency situations, an early dismissal/weather and safety leave will not be authorized.

Telework is work time (hours of duty) and is not to be used for any purposes other than official duties. Human Resources policies remain in effect and are unchanged by being in a telework status. The governing rules, regulations, and policies concerning time and attendance, work schedules, leave, compensatory time, credit hours, time-off awards, hours of work, and overtime apply regardless of whether the employee works at an SBA worksite or at an alternate worksite. Employees participating in the Telework Program must accurately record work hours spent in telework status using the established bi-weekly time and attendance system (WebTA). Employees and supervisors must consult with their timekeepers to ensure the correct telework codes are inputted on employees' WebTA timesheet submissions.

Employees must indicate on their timesheet whether the telework hours worked are routine, ad-hoc, or unscheduled telework, as appropriate.

Management is responsible and accountable for supervising work in accordance with the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) wages and overtime provisions. All employees, teleworking or not, are required to follow established SBA practices and policies for requesting and obtaining approval of leave, overtime, or any change to the work schedule.

6.8.5 Telework and Alternative Work Schedules

Telework Schedule. The supervisor is responsible for determining and approving each subordinate's initial work schedule for "regular/routine" and "situational/ad-hoc" telework days on a case-by-case basis. This includes determining how many days per pay period are appropriate for employees to telework. Telework schedule determinations are not made arbitrarily, but by using business-related criteria. Each request to telework must be considered with regard to impact on the organization, equity and fairness among employees, customers, and achieving SBA's mission. Telework "regular/routine" and the option for both "regular and ad-hoc" scheduled workdays are set up and approved in the WebTA system. Likewise, employees who choose to request only "situational/ad-hoc" telework days must still initially create and have a WebTA telework agreement approved. However, for "situational/ad-hoc" only telework agreements, the employees will not select any days off during the pay period.

Alternative Work Schedules (AWS). AWS are comprised of compressed and flexible work schedules. Compressed work schedules enable full-time employees to complete the basic 80-hour biweekly work requirement in less than 10 workdays. Flexible work schedules are voluntary work schedules where employees may choose their time of arrival and departure, within limits or "time bands," with the approval of supervisors or managers. SBA employees may work approved AWS in combination with telework without restriction to either arrangement (telework/AWS) if consistent with organizational and work team needs.

6.9 Performance Management

Performance standards for teleworking employees are the same as performance standards for non-teleworking employees.

Teleworkers and non-teleworkers are treated the same for purposes of:

1. Periodic appraisals of job performance of employees;

2. Training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees;
3. Work requirements; and
4. Other acts involving managerial discretion.

Management expectations for performance should be clearly addressed in an employee's performance plan, regardless of whether or not the employee is a teleworker. When an employee participates in telework, expectations related to accountability do not differ by virtue of the telework arrangement.

6.10 Telework and Dependent Care

Used appropriately, telework, along with other workplace flexibilities, can facilitate the management of work and dependent care allowing for a better work-life balance and a more engaged and productive employee. As such, the presence of dependents in the household should not be a bar to teleworking. Employees are reminded, however, not to engage in dependent care activities when performing official duties. While an occasional, brief interruption may occur when a dependent is present in the home, teleworkers must be careful to keep interruptions to a minimum to avoid disruptions in work accomplishment. Employees may not telework with the intent of performing dependent care responsibilities during work hours while performing official duties. While performing official duties, teleworkers are expected to arrange for dependent care just as they would if they were working in the office. For example, a self-sufficient child or elderly relative could be at home with the teleworker during work hours, as long as they do not interfere with the employee's official duties.

Additionally, SBA recognizes that there may be unplanned or temporary circumstances (e.g., an unscheduled telework day when schools are closed) and telework may be an appropriate short-term workplace flexibility for employees with caregiving responsibilities. These short-term temporary circumstances must represent the exception and not the rule. In these short-term, temporary telework situations, there can be a dual benefit for both SBA and the employee. If the employee has either a "routine" or "ad-hoc" approved telework agreement, the supervisor may exercise discretion in determining whether an employee can accomplish at least some part of their duties from the telework site in these types of unplanned situations. The employee's focus should remain on the work, while striking a balance with the employee's caregiving responsibilities. In effect, employees could be allowed to telework during the time they are not responsible for dependent care responsibilities and be required to take appropriate leave or other approved time off while performing dependent care responsibilities. In the event the level of care needed for a dependent prevents or significantly disrupts the employee's ability to accomplish work, teleworkers must notify their supervisors as soon as possible about the situation preventing the teleworker from continuing work or a disruption of their work. Teleworkers should then request approval for appropriate leave (e.g., sick leave, annual leave, or leave without pay) or other paid time off (e.g., compensatory time off, earned credit hours, or hours granted as a time-off award) for performing dependent care responsibilities during work hours. Supervisors will decide, after discussion with the employee, whether the unplanned or unique situation will allow the employee to successfully telework without jeopardizing work performance. Failure to comply with the terms of the telework agreement, or diminishment in the employee's performance could result in suspension or even termination of an employee's telework agreement.

Employees are reminded that while teleworking, all workplace policies remain in place, including regular hours of work, telework start/end times, rules regarding time and attendance, and employee expectations concerning performance and conduct. Teleworking employees are expected to account for work and non-work hours during their tour of duty and request to use appropriate leave (paid or unpaid) to account for time spent away from normal work-related duties (e.g., to care for a dependent). Employees are reminded that participation in SBA's Telework Program is discretionary and not a right. Therefore, open communication and good performance management are critical to effectively and successfully participating in SBA's Telework Program.

6.11 Weather and Safety Leave and Unscheduled Telework

6.11.1 Use of Weather and Safety Leave and Telework

During an emergency situation or severe weather, employees will have to decide on a course of action based upon the workplace flexibilities provided under the operating status announcement made for the affected workday.

It is important to note that, as a result of the Administrative Leave Act of 2016, SBA will not be able to provide weather and safety leave to a telework program participant who is not prevented from working safely at an approved telework site during severe weather or other emergency situations. Generally, employees who are telework program participants will not receive "weather and safety" leave, since they are not usually prevented from performing work at an approved location due to a weather or other safety-related emergency.

Under OPM's weather and safety leave regulations, all telework program participants will be ineligible for weather and safety leave when a closure is announced except in rare circumstances when one of the exceptions under Title 5 C.F.R. 630.1605\(a\)\(2\) applies (discussed below). Employees participating in a telework program must telework, take other leave (paid or unpaid) or paid time off (as approved by SBA), or a combination of both, unless an exception applies.

Applicable Exceptions:

Unexpected weather. SBA may provide weather and safety leave to a telework-ready employee who, in SBA’s judgment, could not have reasonably anticipated the severe weather or other emergency condition and therefore did not take home needed equipment or work. (For example, an area weather forecast changes dramatically during the weekend so an employee cannot reasonably be expected to telework on Monday.)

Unsafe telework site. SBA may provide weather and safety leave to a telework-ready employee who is prevented from safely working at the telework site (such as by flooding, a roof collapse, emergency evacuation orders, etc.) as a result of the severe weather or other emergency event. In this case, the home or other approved telework site is also impacted in such a way that work cannot be safely performed.

6.11.2 Unscheduled and Emergency Telework

OPM or SBA authorized officials may announce emergency operating status or an office or building closure that permits unscheduled telework.

In the event that emergency operating status is declared due to weather conditions:

1. Eligible employees who are telework-ready may telework when an operating status announcement includes “unscheduled telework”—if such action would not unduly interfere with mission accomplishment. Employees must notify his or her supervisor of the intent to use unscheduled telework.
2. Employees who have a regularly scheduled telework day will be expected to telework or take unscheduled appropriate leave.
3. Employees who have situational/ad-hoc telework agreements in which they agree to telework in instances of closure due to weather must telework.
4. Telework employees already performing telework when an early departure is announced generally may not receive weather and safety leave. They must account for the entire workday by teleworking, taking unscheduled leave (paid or unpaid) or other paid time off, or a combination, in accordance with law, regulations, Agency policies and procedures, and any applicable collective bargaining requirements.

5. For delayed arrival status announcements, employees who have a regularly scheduled telework day will be expected to telework beginning at their regularly scheduled time.
6. For delayed arrival status announcements with the option for unscheduled leave or unscheduled telework, telework-ready employees must notify their supervisors that they are using the option of unscheduled leave or unscheduled telework instead of reporting to the regular worksite, in which case they will not receive weather and safety leave—and will be responsible for accounting for the entire workday by taking other leave (or paid time off), performing telework, or a combination. If unscheduled telework is chosen, employees must begin work on time.
7. If employees on regularly scheduled telework or with situational/ad-hoc telework agreements that require telework cannot work at the alternative worksite due to weather and unsafe conditions (e.g., loss of power, flooding, roof collapse, etc.), they will be granted weather and safety leave.
8. If SBA or the program office determines that anticipated weather conditions may impact operations, it may notify telework ready employees of office operating procedures to be followed.

If the emergency operating status is due to an emergency closure of a building or office, or evacuation of the local area, the same rules specified in (1) – (4) and (7) – (8) shall apply unless SBA or the program office activates its COOP.

If circumstances occur on a day (i.e., the unusual situation when a teleworker is unprepared to telework because the event could not be readily anticipated) where an otherwise telework-ready employee was required to report to the official duty station location or expected to telework but was prevented from teleworking, (e.g., the normal workplace is rendered unsafe following a fire, earthquake, or flash flood) and the employee does not have equipment or materials needed to perform work, then “weather and safety leave” will be granted.

For more information, please refer to the Weather and Safety Leave Final Rule.

6.12 Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP)

Telework is incorporated into SBA’s COOP. U.S. Department of Homeland Security Federal Emergency Management Agency Federal Continuity Directive (FCD) 1, Federal Executive Branch National Continuity Program & Requirements, U.S. Department of Homeland Security, January 17, 2017 (Federal Continuity Directive 1 - January 17, 2017 \(fema.gov\)), defines COOP as “an effort within the Executive Office of the President and individual departments and agencies to ensure that essential functions continue to be performed during disruption of normal operations”.

There is a direct relationship between an organization’s COOP plan and telework. The two programs share the basic objective of performing and maintaining an organization’s functions from an alternative location. Telework is a core part of SBA’s COOP planning because it allows SBA to retain functionality when emergencies result in employee dismissals, office closures, or disruptions to operations. As a result, to ensure continuity of operations in the case of a health pandemic or an activation of the COOP plan, the requirement for an authorized telework agreement is not applicable during COOP events. However, telework may not be a viable strategy for continuing essential functions during all events (e.g., cyber events, mass power outage). Telework does continue, however, to be required as part of SBA’s contingency planning. Therefore, during a declared COOP event, with the exception of a few case-by-case situations, all affected employees may be required to telework regardless of whether the employees have approved telework agreements.

In COOP situations, employees capable of teleworking will be required to telework even if the employees do not want to telework, are generally ineligible to telework, or if they do not have a telework agreement. If there is a conflict between the COOP plan and this policy with regard to emergencies of this nature, COOP, and its procedures and guidance supersede this policy in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 6504\(d\)\(2\).

When using telework as a strategy to support essential functions during a continuity event, it is imperative for supervisors to identify in advance those employees designated as emergency personnel for COOP situations (i.e., employees on SBA’s various COOP teams) and which functions can be conducted via telework, including evaluating the use of telework for supporting extended continuity operations and use by emergency personnel.

SECTION 7 – SBA PROPERTY (COMPUTERS AND EQUIPMENT)

SBA issues Government-owned property (primarily laptops to all employees regardless of telework status). If an employee does not have access to internet connectivity (Wi-Fi or a hot spot) at the telework site (e.g., the home) and the individual’s duties require computer access, the employee will be required to work at the official duty station. The employee will be considered for teleworking when the employee certifies the required technology is available to telework safely and effectively.

The immediate supervisor may identify equipment requirements for the alternate work site in accordance with SBA Computer Security and Use policies. SBA Information Technology staff may be limited in the support they can provide to teleworkers concerning privately-owned computer equipment. Variations in the installation and configuration of software and hardware components on an employee's personal computing device restrict the advice SBA technicians can safely and accurately provide. Employees are responsible for ensuring system compatibility with SBA networks and compliance with computer and information security standards.

Any Government items provided to an employee remain the property of the U.S. Government and must be managed and handled in accordance with Government-wide and SBA-specific policies and guidance. The general principle is that the Government may not provide items that are used significantly for non-official activity.

SECTION 8 – WORKERS' COMPENSATION AND LIABILITIES

All telework employees performing official duties are covered by the Federal Tort Claims Act or the Federal Employees Compensation Act (FECA) and therefore qualify for workers' compensation for on-the-job injury or occupational illness, whether at the traditional office or the alternate work site in the specified office area. The employee must notify the supervisor immediately of any accident or injury at the alternate duty station, provide details of the accident or injury, and complete appropriate Workers' Compensation forms.

Offices in the home require adequate workspace, light, telephone service, utilities, and temperature control. Employees must self-certify the adequacy of workspace in their homes prior to beginning a telework arrangement. Supervisors may deny an employee the opportunity to telework or may terminate a Telework Agreement based on safety-related issues or suspected hazardous materials in the home. All work-related injuries must also be reported to SBA's Workers' Compensation Specialist.

SECTION 9 – RECORD RETENTION

All SBA Telework Agreements will be created, modified, and stored in WebTA in accordance with the retention schedule for time and attendance records. Also, all telework approval documentation (i.e., emails, written approvals, etc.) must be carefully and consistently collected either manually or electronically for reporting and auditing purposes.

9.1 Reporting

Each year, OPM prepares and submits a report to the Congress that addresses the telework programs of each agency. This annual collaboration between OPM and agency TMOs and Telework Coordinators often begins with a Call for Telework Data from OPM to the agencies and culminates in the Status of Telework in the Federal Government Report to Congress.

APPENDIX A – DEFINITIONS

Ad Hoc Telework – Approved telework performed on an occasional or one-time basis; also referred to as situational, episodic, intermittent, or unscheduled telework.

Administrative Leave/Excused Absence – Status authorized by designated management officials or supervisors permitting employees to be off duty without loss of, or reduction in, pay or accrued leave for a specified period of time.

Alternative Worksite – A place away from the official duty station location officially approved for the performance of assigned duties. Examples include an employee’s home or other approved worksite satisfying safety, security, and other criteria established by this policy; includes a facility established by state, local or county governments, or private sector organizations for use by teleworkers. For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program must be delegated and approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305). This excludes SBA Office of Field Operations locations established under the Alternate Work Sites, SOP 00 80.

Bargaining Unit Employee (BUE) – A non-management employee who holds a position represented by a Local of the exclusive Union representative.

Denial – This option is used by the supervisor, manager, or Program Office Head when documentation shows an individual does not meet established position suitability or employee eligibility criteria for participation in the Telework Program; or by the supervisor to refuse ad hoc telework requests on a case-by-case basis. This is also the default status of formal telework requests when these officials do not approve telework agreements within the prescribed timeframes. For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program is approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305).

Dependent Care – Providing aid, support, help, maintenance, etc. as in the case of providing childcare, elder care, or care of any individual.

Eligible Employee – An employee who meets the statutory, performance, conduct, and attendance criteria as set forth in this SOP.

Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) - A Federal law establishing minimum wage, overtime pay, recordkeeping, and youth employment standards affecting employees in the private sector and in Federal, State, and local governments. In addition, FLSA exempts specified employees or groups of employees from the application of certain of its provisions. As such, every employee is categorized, based on their job, as either exempt or nonexempt. FLSA is published in sections 201-219 of title 29, United States Code (U.S.C.). Additional guidance may be found at OPM.gov.

Mobile Work - Duties characterized by routine and regular travel to conduct work in customer or other worksites as opposed to a single authorized alternate worksite. Examples of mobile work include, but are not limited to, site audits, site inspections, investigations, property management, and work performed while commuting, traveling between worksites, or on temporary duty.

Official Duty Station – The employee’s Federal office or remote work physical location, where an employee would work absent an authorized Telework Agreement. All pay, special rates, taxes, and travel entitlements are based on the official duty station. Employees should refer to their Notification of Personnel Action, SF- 50B, Item No. 39, to identify their official duty station.

For travel purposes, the official duty station is an area defined by the agency that includes the location where the employee regularly performs his or her duties. The area may be a mileage radius around a particular point, a geographic boundary, or any other definite domain, provided no part of the area is more than 50 miles from where the employee regularly performs his or her duties. (See 41 CFR 300-3.1.) The proximity of travel to the employee’s official worksite determines whether an expense is reimbursed as a local transportation expense or as a temporary duty (TDY) travel expense incurred away from the employee’s official station as described in the Federal Travel Regulation (FTR) in 41 CFR parts 301-304.

Participant – An employee who has voluntarily requested a telework arrangement and has an authorized Telework Agreement in place.

Program Office Head – An SBA executive of the office which includes the Associate Administrator (AA) or Deputy Associate Administrator (DAA). For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program is determined by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305).

Regular (Routine) Telework – An approved work schedule where an employee approved to telework works at least one day each pay period on a regular and recurring basis at an alternate worksite. Regular telework is also commonly referred to as “routine” telework.

SBA Administrator – Head of the U. S. Small Business Administration or designated Acting Administrator.

Supervisor - An SBA official who is responsible for making decisions regarding telework for an employee. This includes the approval or denial of employee participation in the Telework Program, temporary suspensions of telework usage, changes to or terminations of Telework Agreements, and case-by-case decisions for ad hoc telework.

Telework (also referred to as “telecommuting”) – A work flexibility arrangement under which an employee performs the official duties and responsibilities of the position, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternate work location site other than the employee’s assigned SBA office. An individual is said to be "teleworking" when performing official duties at an alternate worksite.

Telework does not include:

1. Any work performed while on official travel (travel regulations and policy takes precedence over telework);
2. Work performed while commuting to and from the work site; or
3. Mobile work as defined above (including, but not limited to, site audits, site inspections, investigations, and property management).

Telework Agreement – Official document between employees and their supervisors outlining the terms, conditions, and expectations associated with individual arrangements for working at alternate worksites. The Telework Agreement also outlines the employee’s schedule for regular and recurring teleworking.

Telework Coordinator – An employee in the Office of Human Resources Solutions designated by the Telework Managing Officer (TMO) to act as the key contact for program questions. The Telework Coordinator administers the Telework Program and reports to the Telework Managing Officer on program-related matters.

Telework Managing Officer (TMO) – A senior SBA official, within the Office of Human Resources Solutions, who has direct access to the head of SBA and is directly accountable for the Telework Program.

Telework Ready – The status assigned to an employee who:

1. Meets eligibility, training, and suitability criteria specified in the telework statute and this SOP;
2. Has submitted a request in WebTA and been approved for telework privileges by the supervisor or manager and received a WebTA system approval by the supervisor in lieu of a signed Telework Agreement and any applicable addendums. For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program is approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305);
3. Has been advised of expectations or concerns associated with the Telework Agreement; and
4. Is equipped, in accordance with the OCIO criteria to virtually access SBA’s network and other required Agency-related systems to perform their duties from an alternate duty station.

Termination – The option that may be used by the supervisor when there is a business-related basis for ending a telework arrangement such as the employee’s ineligibility, incumbency of a position not suitable for telework, or failure of the arrangement to be in the best interest of SBA.

Traditional Office – This is the employee’s assigned work site, physical office space, or facility in an SBA leased, rented, or owned facility.

Unscheduled Leave – An option available to employees when the appropriate authorities announce a change in operating status for the Federal government or SBA due to special events, emergencies, activation of COOP, a health pandemic, or other unusual circumstances. Employees using this option must use accrued annual leave, compensatory time off, credit hours, leave without pay (LWOP), or as appropriate, sick leave, and record the appropriate number of hours in this status for time and attendance records.

Unscheduled Telework – An option available to telework-ready employees when the appropriate authorities announce a change in operating status for the Federal government or SBA due to, special events, emergencies, activation of COOP, a health pandemic, or other unusual circumstances. This form of telework is routinely used as part of SBA’s contingency plan and makes it possible for SBA to continue work operations and maintain productivity during disruptions.

Note: When unscheduled telework is authorized for activation of the continuity of operations (COOP) plan or a health pandemic, a telework agreement is not required.

Withdrawal – The option used by an employee to voluntarily cancel a Telework Agreement, resulting in removal from the Telework Program.

APPENDIX B – TELEWORK CHECKLIST FOR SUPERVISORS

If the supervisor has employees interested in participating in the Telework Program, here are some things to consider:

POLICY & PROCEDURES: Know policy and procedures, including applicable collective bargaining agreements.

Be familiar with the SBA's policy and procedures on Telework, SOP 33 59 4;

Review and ensure compliance with SBA Computer Security and Use policies;

Successfully complete the SBA's telework training for managers; and

If supervising Bargaining Unit Employees, be familiar with the SBA's negotiated agreements.

EMPLOYEE ELIGIBILITY: Is the requesting employee eligible to telework? All MUST apply.

The requesting employee has completed the probationary period (The supervisor or manager has discretion to waive), as verified by designated staff in the SHRO;

The requesting employee has signed and submitted all required forms (e.g., Privacy Act and safety certification) and completed required telework training (SBA currently requires electronic requests, submissions and approvals using WebTA; employees and supervisors should maintain an electronic copy of training certifications and safety checklists if a digital copy is available.);

The requesting employee has a performance rating of "meets expectations" or higher;

The requesting employee has access to technological components and equipment when required to perform the work at the alternate work site;

The requesting employee's eOPF does not contain documentation of the employee being officially disciplined (i.e., in receipt of a decision letter or an SF-50 documenting a formal disciplinary or adverse action) for being absent without leave (AWOL) for more than five (5) days in any calendar year;

The requesting employee's eOPF does not contain documentation of the employee being officially disciplined (i.e., receiving a decision letter or SF-50 identifying unacceptable conduct or a disciplinary or adverse action) for violations of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch (subpart G) for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, while on a Federal government computer or while performing official Federal government duties, as verified by designated SHRO staff; and

If the requesting employee is a Bargaining Unit Employee, verify the requesting employee is eligible per any applicable negotiated terms and conditions.

SUITABILITY OF POSITION FOR TELEWORK: Is the requesting employee's position suitable for telework?

The requesting employee's duties do not require full-time on-site presence in an SBA office or facility (as determined by management in consultation with the SHRO if necessary);

The requesting employee's position does not require daily face-to-face contact with the immediate supervisor, other employees, or customers;

The requesting employee has daily access to work materials that are virtually accessible and can be viewed at alternate worksites;

The requesting employee is able to make facilities or equipment available at the alternate duty station to perform the job;

The requesting employee has certified the alternate worksite is safe; and

If covered by a Bargaining Unit, the requesting employee's position is suitable for telework per any applicable negotiated terms and conditions of the Master Labor Agreement.

TELEWORK AGREEMENT: Ensure the requesting employee completes the requirements stated on SBA's Telework SharePoint site.

If covered by a Bargaining Unit, the requesting employee has completed the required documents for telework per any applicable negotiated terms and conditions.

SUPERVISOR'S APPROVAL: Once employee eligibility, position suitability, and documentation requirements have been met, enter into a signed Telework Agreement. If the decision is to approve the telework request (For OA employees, any final action with regards to the Telework Program is approved by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy (P.L. 94-305), take the following steps to complete the requesting employee's "Telework Ready" Status:

Ensure the employee was given a copy of the signed Telework Agreement and relevant documents within five (5) business days of the employee submitting the formal request;

Communicate expectations, schedules, and assignments for the agreed upon telework arrangement and communicate any other related concerns, such as designations as emergency employees and modifications to the employee's requested arrangement;

Coordinate with the SBA helpdesk, itsc@sba.gov, to ensure the employee has remote access capabilities for teleworking; and Verify employee's work hours for telework are coded correctly in the bi-weekly time and attendance record.

☐ SUPERVISOR'S DENIAL: If the decision is to deny the telework request, communicate the basis for the denial within five (5) business days of receiving the request:

Inform the employee of any alternative telework arrangements to the initial request under consideration;

Return the modified or denied Telework Agreement to the employee; and Provide the requesting employee with written justification (business reasons) for the decision.

APPENDIX C – TELEWORK CHECKLIST FOR EMPLOYEES

If the employee is interested in participating in the Telework Program, here are some things to consider:

POLICY & PROCEDURES: Know policy and procedures, including applicable collective bargaining agreements.

Become familiar with SBA’s policy and procedures on Telework, SOP 33 59 4;

Review and ensure compliance with SBA Computer Security and Use policies;

Successfully complete the SBA’s employee telework training; and

If a Bargaining Unit Employee, become familiar with any applicable negotiated terms and conditions (e.g., Article 23, Telework, of the Master Labor Agreement).

EMPLOYEE ELIGIBILITY: Are you eligible to telework? All MUST apply. You must:

Have completed the probationary period (may be waived by the supervisor or manager);

Have a performance rating of "Meets Expectations" or higher;

Have signed and submitted all required forms (e.g., Privacy Act and safety certification) and completed required telework training;

Have access to technological components and equipment when required to perform work at the alternate work site;

Not have documentation of being officially disciplined (i.e., in receipt of a decision letter or an SF-50 documenting a formal disciplinary or adverse action) for being absent without leave (AWOL) for more than five (5) days in any calendar year;

Not have documentation of being officially disciplined for charges related to misuse of a government computer in your eOPF;

Not have documentation of being officially disciplined for violations of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch (subpart G) for reviewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, while on a Federal government computer or while performing official Federal government duties in your eOPF; and

If a Bargaining Unit Employee, verify eligibility per any applicable negotiated terms and conditions should they differ from that referenced above.

SUITABILITY OF POSITION FOR TELEWORK: Is your position suitable for telework (to be determined by management)?

Duties do not require on-site presence in the traditional office;

The position does not require daily face-to-face contact with the immediate supervisor, other employees, or customers;

Have daily access to materials that are accessible by computer and may be viewed at an alternate worksite;

Access to facilities or equipment at the alternate duty station required to perform the job;
Certified the alternate office is safe;

The supervisor has not otherwise identified a valid reason to designate the position as unsuitable; and

If a Bargaining Unit employee, the position is suitable for telework per applicable negotiated terms and conditions should they differ from those referenced above.

TELEWORK AGREEMENT: Once eligibility, position suitability, and training requirements have been met, provide the supervisor with the requirements listed on SBA's Telework SharePoint site.

If a Bargaining Unit Employee, completion of the required documents for telework per any applicable negotiated terms and conditions should they differ from that referenced above.

APPENDIX D – TELEWORK RESOURCES

All relevant information regarding SBA’s Telework Program, such as the telework policy, current forms, training materials, OPM guidance, and other applicable references may be found on SBA’s Telework SharePoint site.

ARTICLE 23
TELEWORK

Section 1. General.

A. Definition.

Telework refers to a work arrangement under which an employee regularly performs the duties and responsibilities of their position, and other authorized activities, from home or another worksite removed from the employee's regular place of employment.

B. General.

Eligible employees of the Agency may participate in telework to the maximum extent possible without diminished employee performance or Agency operations. Telework requires collaboration between management and employees to ensure success. It is the employee's responsibility to apply and gain approval from the Authorizing Agency Official (AAO i.e. – Administrator, Management Board Members, Regional Administrators, District Directors, Center Directors and Area Office Directors) through submitting Telework Agreement SBA Form 2190. An employee meeting eligibility requirements who has an approved Telework Agreement may work one or more days at home or at an approved Alternate Duty Station (ADS) rather than in the traditional office. Such an ADS can include a government or private Telework center, or the employee's home, to name a few. The approved Telework Agreement shall provide the maximum number of days and/or hours that an employee may telework each pay period. Teleworkers and non-teleworkers will be treated the same for the purposes of:

1. Periodic appraisals of job performance of employees;
2. Training, rewarding, reassigning, promoting, reducing in grade, retaining, and removing employees;
3. Work requirements; or
4. Other acts involving managerial discretion.

Section 2. Types of Telework Agreements.

A. Pre-determined (Fixed) Telework Agreements. This describes telework that occurs on a regular, recurring, and ongoing basis on an established schedule of at least one day per week.

1. Long-Term Arrangements. These agreements require a pre-determined schedule including the work days and duty hours that the employee is teleworking. The day(s) designated for telework must be the same day(s) each week. However, with approval from the employee's supervisor, the day(s) may be changed. An employee who has an approved Telework Agreement with a pre-determined fixed schedule may come into the office any day that they are scheduled to telework without affecting their approved Telework Agreement. When employees are requested to report to their Official Duty Station (ODS) for unscheduled events such as training, conferences, meetings that cannot be handled over a teleconference, or other emergent work requirements, they will be provided reasonable advance notice and time to report. Make up days may be worked out between the employee and supervisor.

- B. Intermittent (Ad-Hoc) Telework Agreements. These agreements are suitable for employees who have an occasional need to work at home on projects/assignments having short turnaround times and/or requiring intense concentration for which a pre-determined schedule is not expected because the assignments are usually project driven and do not reoccur on a pre-determined basis. Employees with an approved intermittent Telework Agreement may also telework in response to an Agency emergency situation. With an approved ad-hoc Telework Agreement the employee will use SBA Form 2218 (Appendix H) to request ad hoc telework days from their supervisor.
- C. Short-term telework arrangements occur when:
 - 1. The ODS is not usable, e.g., during office renovations or relocation; or
 - 2. During short-term convalescence from an injury or illness for up to sixty (60) days. If longer than sixty (60) days, the employee's telework status will be reevaluated. Employees requesting telework because of short-term illness or injury must complete and submit a SBA Form 2218 to management official along with appropriate supporting documentation (i.e., an email) for three (3) days or less. Supporting medical documentation for more than three (3) days will be needed. Employees who are approved for telework in these situations are expected to meet the requirements of the Telework Agreement.

Section 3. Eligibility.

No position, other than Wage Grade positions, is excluded from the Telework program. Requests to participate in the telework program will be decided in a fair and equitable manner. AAO's shall not engage in improper discrimination against any employee with respect to the approval/denial to participate in the telecommuting program. Individual employees will be ineligible to telework if any of the following conditions applies:

- A. The employee's current rating of record is less than three (3) "Meets Expectations." The employee must have, and continue to maintain, a performance level of at least (3) "Meets Expectations" in order to participate in the program;
- B. The employee's duties do not lend themselves to being accomplished offsite. Denials on this basis must demonstrate that circumstances directly related to the accomplishment of that work unit's mission prohibit the performance of that position anywhere but in the Agency workplace;
- C. The employee is a trainee or summer hire employee;
- D. The employee is on leave restriction;
- E. The employee has not signed the Self-Certification Safety Checklist for Teleworking (Appendix H);
- F. The employee did not sign the Privacy Act Authorization (Appendix H);
- G. A new employee is within the first year probationary period (An AAO has the option to waive this exception.);

- H. The employee has received a disciplinary action in accordance with Article 37 or adverse action in accordance with Article 38 in the six (6) months immediately preceding their application for telework;
- I. The employee does not have the necessary and appropriate technological components and equipment to perform the work;
- J. The employee's position requires on a daily basis (i.e., every work day), direct handling of secure materials. Secure materials are those materials for which there exists a written policy (at the Government, Agency, or organizational level) restricting the use/access outside of a specific government installation or area within a government installation, and include personally identifiable information (PII). A copy of this written policy will be provided to the employee upon request.

Section 4. Denial of Requests to Telework.

The AAO will act upon the employee's request for Telework Agreement by either approving or denying the request on SBA Form 2190 within ten (10) working days of receipt of the request. A decision by the AAO not to approve the telework request or a decision by the AAO to approve ad-hoc or intermittent telework requests when the employee submitted a request for a pre-determined Telework Agreement will be considered a denial by the AAO and the denial will be provided in writing to the employee on SBA Form 2190. The employee may forward the denied request to the Telework Review Board (TRB) within fifteen (15) calendar days of receiving the AAO decision. The TRB will review the denied request and provide the employee with the Agency's final decision in writing within seven (7) work days of the receipt of the request for review. If the TRB's decision is to deny the request, the Union may invoke arbitration. The expedited arbitration process in Article 40, Section 14 of this Agreement will be used.

Section 5. Telework Agreement.

The Telework Agreement under which an employee will perform work must be clearly set forth in writing and signed by the respective AAO and employee. The employee will be provided with a copy. The approved Telework Agreement will, at a minimum, contain all of the items listed in Appendix H and identify/specify the days and hours the employee is allowed to work away from the office. An employee may submit a written request to change their Telework Agreement once each calendar quarter as specified in Article 15, Section 4\(a\) of this Agreement. The Agency will respond to the employee's request within five (5) working days.

Section 6. Computer and Telecommunications Equipment.

- A. The intent of the Agency is to replace existing desktop computers with Agency issued laptops to be used for official business, including telework. The Agency will be responsible for servicing the SBA issued equipment provided to the employee. The employee will bring the equipment to the ODS for servicing.

Any employee provided with a new Agency issued laptop shall be required to return any excess equipment issued under section 6(b) and will not be eligible for any other excess/extra equipment under section 6(b).

- B. To the degree that the Agency has excess/extra equipment on hand, Management Board Members, District Directors, Regional Administrators, Center Directors, Area Directors, etc., may make such equipment available – with preference to those eligible teleworkers who do not own a desktop or laptop computer. The Agency will be responsible for servicing the equipment provided to the employee. The employee will bring the equipment to the ODS for servicing. Requests for such equipment will be made through the employee’s immediate supervisor.
- C. The employee may opt to be reimbursed for long distance telephone calls approved on the appropriate Agency or Government-wide form.
- D. In accordance with SBA standard procedures, employees may make copies of sensitive material (as distinct from secure material) they need for their work assignments and bring them to ADS.

Section 7. Training.

Employees interested in telework must complete a mandatory tutorial training module which will be provided by the Office of Human Resources Solutions. This training can be web based. Interested employees will be allocated adequate duty time to complete this training.

Section 8. Problems Affecting Work Performance.

- A. Employees will inform managers whenever problems arise at the telework site which adversely affect their ability to perform work. Examples could include situations such as equipment failure, power outages, telecommunications difficulties, etc. In such cases, the employee may engage in the work described in section 8(b), seek technical assistance described in section 8(b) below, request leave in accordance with Articles 17 \(Annual\), and 19 \(Other Leave\) or report to the ODS.
- B. In the event that a teleworking employee is unable to remotely connect to the agency system, the teleworking employee shall work on tasks or projects not requiring remote access to the Agency system network. Such tasks may include, but not limited to, work on physical files the employee brings to their ADS, or work on training that may be completed without remote access to the Agency system network. Employees experiencing technical issues while teleworking shall contact the established OCIO helpdesk.

Section 9. Communication.

Two-way communications between employees and supervisors is essential to a successful telework arrangement. Employees who telework may prepare a report for their supervisor on their activities, under the same conditions as if they were not teleworking.

Section 10. Termination of Telework Agreements.

Participating in the telework program will be voluntary. Employees may terminate their Telework Agreement at any time. If management decides to terminate an employee’s Telework Agreement, management will give the employee and the Regional Vice President or designee five (5) work days advance written notice before termination. This notice shall provide the rationale for management’s decision to terminate the employee’s participation in the program. Employees will not be terminated from participating in the telework program without just cause. The following reasons are justification for terminating and employee's Telework Agreement:

- A. The agreement no longer supports the mission of the organization/office (a written justification explaining the basis for the decision must be provided to the employee).
- B. Performance rating drops to below a level (3) "Meets Expectations." If an employee improves their performance, the AAO may at any time return the employee to regular telework without waiting until the next review cycle. Under these circumstances, the employee will not be required to submit another telework application. E-mail notice to an employee will suffice.
- C. A reassignment/detail causes a change in the nature of the work which prevents the employee from teleworking.
- D. The employee fails to maintain a continuous communication link, via telephone or e-mail with the office.
- E. It is determined that the costs of the agreement have become impractical (a written justification explaining the basis for the decision will be provided to the employee).
- F. Employee has not complied with the terms of the agreement.
- G. Normally, employees will not be removed from participation for a single or minor infraction of the Telework Program requirements; however, employees will be removed if they receive an adverse or disciplinary action based on cause that has a nexus with their ability to telework efficiently and effectively.

Section 11. Information to the Union.

With the employee's approval, a copy of the employee's applications for telework and a copy of the action taken on the applications will be provided to the Council President within seven (7) working days of a request from the Union. On request, the Agency will provide the Union with an annual report on telework participation, describing participation in each office by Department/Division and grade.

Section 12. Hours of Work and Leave.

Employees performing work at the ADS are subject to the same workday requirements as they would be if they were performing work at the ODS. Employees will continue to be covered by all provisions of Article 16 \(Overtime\), Article 17 \(Annual\), Article 18 \(Sick\) & Article 19 \(Other Leave\).

Section 13. Emergency Closing/Late Openings/Early Dismissals.

- A. On a day when an employee is scheduled to work at the ADS and their ODS building is closed for all or part of the day, the employee is normally required to perform work at the ADS.
- B. When the ODS building is closed, the employee may be excused from duty under the following conditions:
 - 1. The employee's ADS is the employee's home an emergency exists there that interferes with the employee's ability to perform work (e.g., distribution of electricity, loss of heat, etc.);

2. An emergency creates a personal hardship that prevents his/her working successfully at the telework site (e.g., related child care, etc.);
 3. The employee's duties are such that he/she cannot continue to work without contact with the ODS.
- C. If the ODS building is closed and the employee is scheduled to work at a telecenter (i.e., not the employee's home), and that telecenter is also closed for any reason, the employee will be granted administrative leave.
 - D. If the ODS building is open and the employee is scheduled to work at a telecenter (i.e., not the employee's home), and that telecenter closes early for any reason, the employee may be granted administrative leave.
 - E. If employees at the ODS are granted early dismissal for a holiday (e.g. Thanksgiving, Christmas Eve, New Year's Eve), the employee working at an ADS will also be dismissed early.
 - F. AAOs should discuss these issues with employees before the employees begin teleworking.

Section 14. Grandfather Clause.

Employees who are teleworking on an approved agreement as of the effective date of this Agreement may remain on telework and will not have to reapply. To the extent any provisions of those Telework Agreements do not conform to this Article, the provisions of this Article will govern.

January 2024 Submission

WORK ENVIRONMENT IMPLEMENTATION DATA CALL

January 18, 2024

OMB issued its Organizational Health and Performance Memorandum (M-23-15) last spring as guidance for agencies as they reevaluate their work environment posture to increase in-person presence while optimizing organizational health and performance. As the White House Chief of Staff and OMB have continued to emphasize in the Cabinet, PMC, and other forums, it is essential for agency leaders to be paying close attention to implementation progress and ensuring that updated Work Environment policies are having the intended impact.

In line with M-23-15, OMB requests that agencies that are still implementing in-person presence goals respond to this implementation data call outlining all remaining steps that the agency will take to reach intended work environment postures.

Agencies should provide:

- (1) Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

We have decided to make a change to our prior Workplace Environment Plan (WEP) to redefine our headquarters and headquarters equivalent offices and increase our onsite presence. We will now include our regional office support components as “headquarters equivalents” and exclude the claims-processing sections of our agency that might be co-located with our larger facilities. We will be making the following changes to our onsite presence:

- Employees in headquarters components, regional offices, and area director offices will increase onsite presence to three days per week.
- Employees in the Office of the Chief Information Officer will report onsite two days per week.
- Employees in the Office of the Commissioner will report onsite four days per week.

This change will ensure that the approximately 10,000 employees now defined as our headquarters and headquarters equivalent components on average complete as many work hours in-person as when teleworking.

Our milestones for implementation are as follows:

- Employees were notified about the change on January 30, 2024.
- Employees will begin their new onsite presence frequency on April 7, 2024.

- (2) Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

To minimize equity and consistency issues, we included all our agency support components in our ten regional offices (e.g., HR, legal, policy, etc.) as “headquarters equivalents” to ensure that they do not telework at a higher rate than our headquarters support staff. We also set our weekly onsite presence requirements at a level consistent with our field offices where we serve the public in person.

We will continue to have some variations in telework levels within our workforce. For example, our teleservice centers, program centers, hearing offices, and other claims-processing components will be allowed to telework more than our headquarters and headquarters equivalent components. Additionally, within our headquarters, our IT employees will be allowed to telework more frequently than other employees.

We intend to continue to assess these changes and any additional steps we may need to take to ensure equity and consistency.

- (3) Description of your agency’s approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.

We have required all affected employees to submit updated telework agreements by February 29, 2024. Any employees who fail to update their telework agreements will be temporarily terminated from the telework program until our next semi-annual telework open period in August when they may reapply.

We track telework hours in our time and attendance system to ensure that telework agreements are followed at the levels allowed. We also monitor our virtual private network (VPN) connections and badging information for headquarters turnstiles to ensure that reported time and attendance information is consistent with logical access from outside of our facilities and physical access to our buildings. We will continue to use these data sources to monitor the changes effective April 7, 2024.

Request. Please send a written update that answers these questions. Agencies may provide additional detail or narrative on top of these answers. Responses are due via email to futureofwork@omb.eop.gov no later than January 26, 2024.

3. LAW AND REGULATION

3.1. Establishing an Agency Telework Policy (See Section 5.)

Each agency shall establish and implement a telework policy.

3.2. Determining Eligibility to Telework (See Section 5.3.)

Each agency shall determine employees' eligibility to telework.

In order to be eligible to participate in telework, employees must:

- Complete agency telework training.
- Enter into a written agreement that outlines the specific work arrangements agreed to, and abide by the agreement.

In addition, employees are not eligible to participate in telework if their official duties require, on a daily basis:

- Handling secure materials determined to be inappropriate for telework; or
- Engaging in onsite activities that cannot be performed at an alternate location.

Also, employees are not eligible to telework and must be terminated and permanently banned from participation in the telework program (see Section 5.11.) if they have been officially disciplined for:

- Being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year; or
- Violations of Subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography on a Federal government computer or while performing official Federal government duties.

3.3. Workers Compensation

Teleworkers are covered under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA) and the agency's policy and procedures concerning workers compensation for injuries sustained while performing their official duties at the Alternate Duty Station (ADS) (see PPM S810_2). Employees will immediately notify their supervisors of any accidents or injuries occurring at the ADS in the course of performing official duties.

3.4. Determining Official Worksite for Locality Pay Purposes (See section 5.7.1.)

SSA must determine the official worksite for locality pay purposes for employees covered by a telework agreement on a case-by-case basis using the following criteria:

- Employees must be scheduled to work twice per pay period at the Official Duty Station (ODS) on a regular and recurring basis to retain the locality pay rate for their ODS location. This requirement applies whether they are on a full-time, part-time, 5/4-9, or 4/10 work schedule. If the work schedule does not meet the requirement, the locality pay will be determined based on the locality pay rate for the Alternate Duty Station (ADS) location rather than the locality pay rate for the ODS. This may result in a change in the employees' overall rate of pay and/or potential eligibility for travel expense reimbursement.
- Exceptions may be made to the twice per pay period ODS requirement if the telework is temporary in nature. This temporary status might include situations such as working at home for medical reasons (See PPM S650_2) or in emergency situations when the employees temporarily cannot commute to work.

4. SSA DELEGATIONS OF AUTHORITY

See delegations of authority

5. SSA POLICY

5.1. Definitions

- Telework, formerly known as flexiplace or work at alternative locations, is a work arrangement in which employees perform officially assigned duties at their home or other worksite geographically convenient (see Call Backs section 5.8.2) to their ODS. Employees may work at their home or other management-approved ADS.
- Official Duty Station (ODS) is the official agency worksite. The official worksite is the location of employees' positions of record where they regularly perform their duties.
- Alternate Duty Station (ADS) is a management-approved worksite that is geographically convenient (see Call Backs section 5.8.2) to employees' ODS. Delegated Approving Officials (DAO) will approve only one ADS per employee. Specifically:
 - An employee's residence as reflected in the Telework Program Request and Agreement; or
 - A Teleworking Center (often called a Telecenter) operated by GSA; or
 - Another SSA facility or office that may be closer to the employee's home and where there is space to accommodate additional agency employees.
- Delegated Approving Official (DAO) is the management official with the delegated authority to approve specific actions related to telework (See Section 4).
- Telework Program Request and Agreement is a written application for participating in the telework program and an agreement between supervisors and employees defining employees' obligations and responsibilities under the telework program. It includes employees' descriptions of the general and specific work assignments they propose to perform at the ADS.
- Core Days refer to day(s) of the week not eligible for telework.
- Virtual Private Network (VPN) is a network that uses a public telecommunication infrastructure, such as the Internet, to provide remote offices or individual users with secure access to their organization's network.

- Call Back is when management requires employees to report to the ODS after they have started their workday at the ADS.
- Suspending Telework is when employees are ordered to report to the ODS to perform work on a short-term basis that cannot otherwise be performed at the ADS or accomplished by telephone or other reasonable alternative methods. Some examples include, but are not limited to, previously scheduled training, conferences, or office coverage as determined by the DAO.
- Terminating Telework refers to when employees are removed, or choose to remove themselves, from the telework program.

5.2. Telework Program Categories

5.2.1. Scheduled Telework

Telework that employees perform on a routine, regular, and recurring basis at a management-approved ADS.

5.2.2. Episodic Telework

Telework that employees perform on an occasional, irregular basis at an ADS. On a case-by-case basis, DAOs may approve episodic telework on a temporary basis for projects, or for routine workloads if due to personal circumstances, including situations where employees may work less than a full day at the ADS. Episodic telework may be performed on core days or non-workdays (e.g., weekends, holidays), following the hours of work and pay rules for such days (e.g., work schedules, overtime, premium pay, credit hours).

Episodic telework will be infrequent, based upon unique workload needs of the agency or due to the personal circumstances of the requesting employee, and limited in duration.

5.2.3. Work at Home by Exception (Temporary Telework for Medical Reasons)

See PPM S650_2, Work at Home by Exception.

5.2.4. Unscheduled Telework (Inclement Weather and Other Safety Reasons)

Telework that employees, with an approved telework agreement, request to perform due to inclement weather (See Exhibit 3) or are required to perform under PPM S630_10, on a non-scheduled telework day at an ADS.

DAOs may offer, assign, and approve unscheduled telework in advance in situations in which the ODS may be open but commuting conditions are likely to be hazardous due to inclement weather (see Section 5.5.3).

5.3. Determining Eligibility to Participate in Telework

5.3.1. Determining Position Eligibility

DAOs must determine which positions are eligible for telework. A position's occupational series (e.g., all GS-2210 IT Specialists) cannot be used to determine telework eligibility. DAOs must review the specific duties of individual positions to determine eligibility. See the note below concerning positions in the Office of Operations.*

5.3.2. Determining Employee Eligibility

In order for employees to be eligible to participate in telework, they must:

- Meet all the conditions in Section 3.2.
- Not currently be on sick leave restriction or have been counseled (see PPM S630_14 section 4.3.1.) for sick leave abuse or placed on sick leave restriction in the 12 months preceding the date of the request to telework.
- Not be in a probationary period, including probationary periods for new supervisors/managers, or formal training status. Excepted service employees serving trial periods will also be restricted from participating during the first year of their trial period. Formal training status does not include the normal progression of employees through a career ladder. Formal training status may include periods when employees need close supervision or regular feedback from management and/or technical mentors that cannot effectively be accomplished at the ADS. Employees who previously completed a probationary period will be considered on a case-by-case basis.
- Sign and abide by the conditions of the Telework Program Request & Agreement (Exhibit 1) form.

- Maintain at least an acceptable level of performance (e.g., successful contribution rating) or not be under review (e.g., increased service observations).
- Not be under an Opportunity to Perform Successfully (OPS) plan or have been on an OPS in the preceding 12 months.
- Have sufficient portable work to be completed at the ADS.
- Use appropriate technology.
- Not have been disciplined within the 12 months preceding the date of the request to telework or while an approved Telework Request and Agreement is effective.
- Not be excluded from participation by law, or by government-wide rule or regulation.
- Watch the required agency telework training, Telework - What You Need to Know

5.4. Determining Telework Days

5.4.1. Number of Telework Days

DAOs will determine the number of scheduled telework days, if any, eligible positions, and percentage of employees permitted to telework.

5.4.2. Core Day

DAOs will have the option to set up to two core days per week (see Delegations of Authority).

5.5. Requesting Approval to Participate in Telework

5.5.1. Scheduled Telework (See Section 5.5.3.)

Deputy Commissioner-level components will solicit telework requests from their employees in February and August. This solicitation should include information about the core day (if applicable) and the allowable number of telework days.

Employees currently not participating in telework may request to participate for the period April through September by submitting written Telework Program Request & Agreement (Exhibit 1) form to the DAOs in February.

Employees desiring to become new participants in telework for the period October through March must submit these documents to the DAOs in August.

Employees should include their preferred telework day(s) with their request. If approved, employees may begin telework the first full pay period in April or October, respectively. Electronic telework request forms may be accepted.

Subject to DAO consideration and approval, employees may also request to change scheduled telework days or participate in scheduled telework outside the normal request times due to emergency and non-emergency needs.

5.5.2. Episodic Telework (See Section 5.5.3.)

Employees may apply, at any time, for episodic telework by submitting written Telework Program Request & Agreement (Exhibit 1) form to work on specific assignments. Employees who have already been approved for scheduled telework do not need to submit new forms; however, they must submit, in advance, a written request to their supervisors with the duration and description of the assignment or circumstances they wish to apply for episodic telework.

5.5.3. Unscheduled Telework

Employees who have submitted Telework Program Request and Agreements (Exhibit 1) and are approved for scheduled, episodic telework, or telework under work at home by exception (WAHBE) may be required to or request to work unscheduled telework.

If the ODS remains open, DAOs may approve employees' requests to telework on an unscheduled day due to hazardous commuting conditions caused by inclement weather.

When hazardous commuting conditions exist caused by inclement weather, employees must call their supervisors or DAOs by the end of the morning flexible band to request unscheduled telework. (See Exhibit 3).

If employees' requests are denied, they must report to the ODS or request leave.

DAOs have the discretion to assign unscheduled telework in advance in situations in which the ODS may be open but commuting conditions are likely to be hazardous (See Exhibit 3). DAOs may also assign unscheduled telework in situations where exposure to unsafe or unhealthy working conditions (e.g., power outage at Agency facility) could result in illness or injury, or for other reasons (e.g., major impact to public highways and infrastructure, such as conventions and large public events).

If the ODS is closed due to inclement weather, see PPM S630_10 concerning employees requirements to telework.

5.6. Approving/Denying Telework Program Requests

5.6.1. Scheduled Telework

DAOs will act on telework requests within 10 working days of the close of the request period for scheduled telework. If DAOs deny participants' requests, they will annotate the reasons for denial on the telework request forms. For AFGE bargaining unit employees only, if the number of requests for a particular day from employees exceeds the coverage requirements, DAOs will approve the telework requests in Service Computation Date (SCD) order.

For non-bargaining unit and unorganized bargaining unit employees, if the number of eligible employees exceeds the coverage requirements, DAOs will approve the telework requests based on their discretion.

Employees will not have to submit future requests during the February and August timeframes, once their original requests are approved, unless they wish to request a change in the number of days or the particular day(s) they telework. Once telework day(s) are approved, employees will keep their day(s) for the remainder of the time they participate in the telework program unless they request a schedule change, are removed from the program, change positions, or are otherwise directed to do so by management.

Any initial approvals or changes to telework schedules, outside the normal request period, will take effect at the beginning of the next pay period.

When affected by a holiday or leave, employees do not receive an "in-lieu of" scheduled telework day.

5.6.2. Episodic Telework

DAOs will act on episodic telework requests no later than 5 working days following receipt of the requests. DAOs may approve employees to work episodic telework up to 5 days per week, which may include a core day, at the ADS depending on the nature of the assignments or circumstances. If DAOs deny participants' requests, they will annotate the specific reasons for the denials on the telework request forms.

5.6.3. Unscheduled Telework

DAOs will normally act on Unscheduled Telework requests received orally or in writing on the same day as the request. If a DAO does not act on a request, it will automatically be considered a denial. DAOs may advise employees in advance if office coverage requirements, staffing issues (e.g., long term leave situations), or existing scheduled telework is likely to preclude the approval of unscheduled telework. See Exhibit 3 for examples of unscheduled telework.

5.6.4. Recordkeeping

Denied telework program requests must be kept in the SSA-7B Extension File for a period of one year. Approved telework program requests must be kept in the SSA-7B Extension File until one year after the telework agreement is terminated. See PPM S293_4, SSA-7B Employee Record Extension File for additional information. Requests for episodic or unscheduled telework and approvals or denials of those requests do not need to be kept in the SSA-7B Extension File.

5.7. Participating in Telework

5.7.1. Locality Pay (See section 3.4.)

If an employee will not be reporting to the ODS at least twice a pay period, the supervisor must contact the servicing personnel office to determine if a change in locality pay is necessary based on the location of the employee's alternative duty station. If a change is needed, the supervisor will be instructed to initiate a change in duty station action in the Federal Personnel/Payroll System (FPPS).

5.7.2. Changes to Telework Day(s) and ADS

Employees are not authorized to change their telework day(s) or their ADS without DAO approval.

5.7.3. Staff Coverage

DAOs have sole discretion to change, reduce, suspend, or eliminate approved telework day(s) due to operational needs or employee performance.

5.7.4. Sharing ODS Work Space

Employees that telework may be required to share space (e.g. shared cubicles, hoteling) with other employees.

5.7.5. Determining IT Equipment

SSA will determine and provide appropriate IT equipment for teleworkers. DAOs may allow employees to use their personal equipment to telework if they do not need VPN access to complete their work remotely. If DAOs believe employees will be handling PII on a regular basis, they must require the employees to use an SSA issued laptop with VPN access. Components should refer to the Information Security Policy \(ISP\) for additional considerations regarding PII and the Administrative Instructions Manual System \(AIMS\) General Administrative Manual \(GAM\) Chapter 15.

SSA retains ownership and control of any agency-furnished hardware, software, and data and is responsible for maintaining, providing support, and repairing the equipment; however, there will be no on-site IT support provided for a home ADS. Employees are not responsible for costs related to maintenance of government-owned equipment. However, they will be responsible for the costs associated to the maintenance of their own equipment.

Employees have a continuing responsibility to safeguard Government property (this includes both equipment and data) and are responsible for the care, security, and effective utilization of the Government property they use. Employees may be required to reimburse SSA for failure to exercise reasonable care of Government property. Failure to exercise these responsibilities may result in termination from telework (See Section 5.11.).

DAOs may require that employees working at approved ADSs obtain (at their own expense) high-speed/broadband internet access.

5.7.6. Accountability and Evaluation of Work

DAOs may require employees provide electronic notification at the beginning and/or end of their workday.

Firstline supervisors will evaluate work performed at the ADS in accordance with the Telework Program Request and Agreement and the normal performance management policies (See PPM S430_1).

To assist with assessing performance, firstline supervisors may require employees who telework to submit a written daily account of the work performed at the ADS. Firstline supervisors will determine the format and required content of the written account.

5.7.7. Employee Conduct at the ADS

All laws, government-wide rules, government-wide regulations, and SSA policies governing employee conduct at the ODS continue to apply at the ADS including, but not limited to, the Privacy Act and the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees in the Executive Branch.

5.7.8. Alternate Duty Station Work Site

If the ADS is located in the employee's residence, it is the responsibility of the employee to maintain the ADS worksite in a manner that is conducive to business and is free of hazards. SSA will provide employees with general office supplies needed to work effectively at the ADS.

If the ADS location is not in an agency facility, employees are required to:

- Have and maintain a broadband connection (e.g., high speed internet) at their own expense, if deemed necessary by the DAOs to perform their work at the ADS;
- Furnish and maintain all equipment (e.g., desk, chair, surge protector, locking file cabinet or similar secure storage device, etc.) deemed necessary by the DAOs to perform their work at the ADS; and
- Have and maintain the ADS work site with adequate workspace, proper lighting, power, other utilities, adequate environmental conditions, a readily accessible and working fire extinguisher, and a working smoke detector.

5.7.9. ADS Home Inspections

Management may inspect the ADS to ensure conformity with the conditions set forth in the Telework Program Request and Agreement. Management may conduct this inspection at any time during the teleworker's regular core hours with twenty-four (24) hours advance notice. Management will not inspect non-work space in the ADS.

5.8. Work Schedules and Availability

In accordance with applicable SSA policy, DAOs will determine whether teleworkers are eligible to work the following in conjunction with telework:

- Credit hours at the ADS
- A 5/4-9 or 4/40 work schedule
- Overtime at the ADS (unless required by FLSA, e.g. late interview or call)
- A part-time schedule
- At the ADS on a non-tour day

Teleworkers' work schedules, breaks and lunch periods will be the same as at the ODS.

Teleworkers are on official duty when teleworking and are expected to have the resources necessary to perform their jobs and concentrate on official duties without interruption. Employees may not use official duty time for any purpose other than performing SSA-assigned work. Employees must not perform union representation activities while teleworking.

Telework is not a substitute for dependent care.

5.8.1. Accessibility/Electronic Communications

- When working at the ADS, employees must be accessible by telephone and email to their supervisors, clients, colleagues, and external customers during working hours, exclusive of the meal break and break periods.
- Management may require that employees use instant messaging, video, or similar technology while working at the ADS. Employees should ensure that the instant messenger or similar technology accurately reflects their work status.
- While at the ADS, employees are responsible for retrieving, and responding in a timely manner to, voice mail, instant messages, and email left at the ADS and ODS.
- Government phone cards will be issued to employees with a need to place long-distance or toll calls for work, upon request. Phone cards must be used for long distance calling. SSA will not reimburse employees for out-of-pocket expenses related to these calls. In addition, SSA will not reimburse employees who choose to use their personal phones for long distance calling. (See Administrative Instructions Manual System, Material Resources, Chapter 05)

5.8.2. Call Backs

DAOs may call employees back to the ODS when warranted. Employees are required to report to their ODS as soon as possible but no more than two hours after notification. Transportation between the ADS and the ODS is considered commuting and does not entitle employees to reimbursement for official travel. However, the time required to report to the ODS will be duty time, unless employees were recalled prior to the beginning of the workday. See Section 5.8.4 regarding duty status due to a disruption at the ADS.

If DAOs suspend telework or call employees back to the ODS, the employees are not guaranteed "replacement time" or an "in lieu of" telework day. However, DAOs may temporarily switch the employees' telework day to another day.

5.8.3. Split Days at the ADS and ODS

Employees may split a work day between the ADS and the ODS with the approval or at the direction of management. The request may be for a regularly scheduled telework day or in addition to the employee's telework schedule (e.g., episodic or unscheduled telework). When employees request to split a workday between the ADS and the ODS, the commute between the ADS and ODS is normal commute time (i.e., the employee is not on duty time).

5.8.4. Alternate Duty Station Problems

Employees will promptly inform their DAOs of any disruptions at the ADS (e.g., equipment failure, power outages, telecommunication difficulties) that impact the employee's ability to perform agency assigned duties. In these situations, DAOs may require the employees to report to the ODS or the employees may request leave. Generally, if a disruption (e.g. loss of electrical service or internet connectivity at the ADS) is through no fault of the Agency, employees will be in a non-duty status from the time of the disruption to the end of the scheduled workday or until arrival at the ODS. Employees may request leave for the non-duty period.

If the employees are required to report to the ODS, the employees are not guaranteed "replacement time" or an "in lieu of" telework day. However, the employees' telework day may be temporarily switched to another day with management's approval.

5.8.5. Office Closure/Early Dismissal/Delayed Opening

Please see PFM 5630_10.

5.9. Suspending Telework

Employees may be required to report to the ODS due to previously scheduled training, conferences, meetings, or operational needs. Employees may resume telework as soon as the suspension of telework is over.

5.10. Terminating Telework

Employees may voluntarily terminate their participation in the telework program at any time by notifying their supervisor and may reapply at the next application period.

DAOs retain the right and are expected to terminate employees' participation in the telework program if:

- The employees no longer meet one or more of the eligibility requirements contained in Section 3.2. (see Section 3.2.) and 5.3. (see Section 5.3.); or
- The employees fail to comply with any of the conditions set forth in the Telework Program Request and Agreement; or
- The employees fail to comply with the provisions of this chapter; or
- There is a diminishment in the employees' performance.

Firstline supervisors will normally counsel employees about specific problems, including a diminishment in performance, before removing employees from the telework program, except in the case of serious violations. When employees' participation in the telework program is terminated, employees will be notified in writing of the reason for termination and the effective date of the termination. Employees who have been removed from the telework program under this section may reapply for telework at the first application cycle following a 1-year termination period, unless prohibited by law, rule, government-wide regulation. DAOs will consider individual circumstances when considering the effective date of removal from the program.

If employees are removed from the telework program for disciplinary reasons and the disciplinary actions are reversed, employees will normally resume telework at the beginning of the first full pay period following the reversal as long as they meet the eligibility requirements.

5.11. Terminating Eligibility to Telework (See Section 3.2.)

DAOs must complete the Notification of Termination from the Telework Program (See Exhibit 2) and provide it to employees who are no longer eligible and must be terminated from participation in the telework program because they have been officially disciplined for:

- Being absent without permission for more than 5 days in any calendar year; or
- Violations of Subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography on a Federal government computer or while performing official Federal government duties.

Employees are expected to sign an acknowledgment of receipt at the bottom of the Notification of Termination from the Telework Program. If an employee refuses to sign the notice, the delegated official will annotate that "The employee declined to sign." Please note that Exhibit 4 provides template notices for bargaining unit employees covered under the AFGE, IFFTE, and NTEU National Agreements, as well as for nonbargaining unit employees and unrepresented bargaining unit employees. Be sure to use the notice that corresponds with employees' bargaining or nonbargaining unit status as indicated in the “subject” line of the document. DAOs who have questions concerning issuing the Notification of Termination from the Telework Program should consult their servicing labor relations office.

Employees who are terminated under this section may never reapply to participate in the telework program as they are permanently ineligible.

DAOs must retain the original Notification of Termination from the Telework Program in the SSA-7B Extension File indefinitely and provide a copy to employees. (See PPM S293_4)

DAOs must notify servicing personnel offices (SPOs) when a disciplinary personnel action terminates employees’ eligibility for telework. SPOs must include on the SF-50 remark ZS9, which states “This suspension permanently disqualifies the employee from telework while employed by the Federal government.”

6. SSA LABOR-MANAGEMENT AGREEMENTS

See the Office of Labor-Management and Employee Relations web site for additional provisions applicable to bargaining unit employees.

Provisions in collective bargaining agreements (CBAs) pertain to the respective bargaining unit employees and govern over the provisions in the SSA Personnel Policy Manual (PPM), unless the provisions of the PPM implement a nondiscretionary mandate of Federal statute or law or a government-wide regulation that predated the execution of the CBA.

7. RECORDS RETENTION

Records must be kept according to the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) General Records Schedule 2.3. Employee Relations Records. This schedule can be accessed through the NARA web site.

 The Deputy Commissioner for Operations is conducting a pilot for bargaining and non-bargaining unit positions to determine whether any positions within that component will be eligible in accordance with section 5.3.1. Telework during the pilot will be conducted in accordance with the PPM and applicable negotiated agreements. There is no guarantee that pilot positions will be determined to be eligible for telework on an ongoing basis.

Outstationing

For bargaining unit employees, see applicable Union/Management Contracts in addition to the Personnel Policy Manual (PPM). Contract provisions take precedence over the PPM (See Section 6).

1. ISSUE DATE – November 2, 2015 (Revised July 2017 and October 2021)

2. EMPLOYEES COVERED – All nonbargaining unit employees.

3. LAW AND REGULATION

3.1. Definitions (See Section 5.1.)

3.1.1. Change in Duty Station

A change in duty station occurs when an employee's work site or station is moved to a new geographic location (a change in city/town, county, or State).

3.1.2. Official Duty Station (See Section 5.1.4.)

The official duty station encompasses the corporate limits of the city or town where employees work, or an established area having definite boundaries within which the official duty station is located, which is not greater than a 50 mile radius.

3.1.3. Official Worksites

Official worksites generally are the locations where employees regularly perform their duties. An agency must document employees' official worksites on the SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, blocks 38 and 39 showing the city, county, and state in which the official worksite is located (e.g., Woodlawn, Baltimore, Maryland).

3.1.4. Positions of Record

Positions of record refers to employees' official positions as documented on their most recent SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, and current SSA-801, Position Descriptions. Positions to which appointing officials detail employees are not positions of record.

3.2. Selecting Employees for Positions (See Section 5.2.)

Delegated officials may select employees for positions to carry out SSA functions.

3.3. Determining Locality Pay (See Section 5.7.4.)

SSA will base employees' locality pay on the location of their official worksites (See Section 3.1.2.) associated with their positions of record (See Section 3.1.3.).

The Office of Personnel Management's website at <http://www.opm.gov/policy-data-oversight/pay-leave/salaries-wages/> contains information on the locality pay rates for each locality pay area.

3.4. Determining Tax Liability

Delegated officials will base employees' tax withholdings on the location of the official worksites (See Section 3.1.2.) associated with employees' positions of record (See Section 3.1.3.).

4. SSA DELEGATIONS OF AUTHORITY

5. SSA POLICY

5.1. Definitions (See Section 3.1.)

5.1.1. Home Component

The home component is the component in which employees are assigned to work.

5.1.2. Host Component

The host component is the SSA Deputy-level component that allows outstationed employees to use their worksite.

5.1.3. Host Locations

SSA worksites where outstationed employees work are commonly referred to as host locations.

5.1.4. Official Duty Stations (See Section 3.1.1.)

The official duty station for employees located in the metropolitan Baltimore area includes the City of Baltimore, and the Maryland Counties of Baltimore, Anne Arundel, Carroll, Harford, and Howard.

The official duty station for employees located in the metropolitan Washington, D.C. area includes the Maryland Counties of Montgomery and Prince George's; the District of Columbia; the Cities of Alexandria, Fairfax, and Falls Church, Virginia; and the Virginia Counties of Loudoun, Fairfax, Prince William, and Arlington.

For all other locations, the official duty station is the greater of the boundaries of the metropolitan area in which employees work or a radius of 30 miles from employees' offices.

5.1.5. Outstationing

Outstationing allows delegated officials (See Section 4.) to change employees' official duty stations (See Sections 3.1.1. and 5.1.4.) and allows employees to perform the duties of their positions at locations outside their home component's normal official duty station due to recruitment, retention, or other needs. Outstationing is not telework.

5.1.6. Softphone

A softphone is a software application that enables a desktop, laptop, workstation computer or other smart device to function as a telephone over the Internet. The software application acts as an interface, allowing employees to carry out normal telephone functions using the screen via a mouse, keypad, or keyboard. Conversations usually occur using a headset or a microphone and computer speakers.

5.1.7. Virtual Private Network (VPN)

VPN is a network that uses a public telecommunication infrastructure, such as the internet, to provide remote offices or individual users with secure access to their organization's network.

5.2. Outstationing Employees (See Section 3.2.)

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) may outstation eligible employees outside their home component's normal official duty station. Delegated officials may not outstation employees within their home components' normal official duty stations (See Sections 3.1.1. and 5.1.4.).

5.3. Determining Outstationing Eligibility

Employees are eligible for outstationing if they:

- Can perform their full range of duties if outstationed;
- Have 10 years of Federal service based on their leave service computation date;
- Are not serving probationary or trial periods (see PPM S315_1 and PPM S315_2);
- Are not in formal training programs, including developmental programs. Formal training status may include periods when employees need close supervision or regular feedback from management and/or technical mentors that cannot effectively be accomplished if outstationed;
- Are not on leave restrictions;
- Have at least an acceptable level of performance (e.g., successful contribution rating—Level 3) at the time outstationing begins (See PPM S430_1);
- Are not on a Performance Assistance Plan or an Opportunity to Perform Successfully Plan, at the time they request outstationing nor have been on one for their current position in the preceding year (See PPM S430_1); and
- Have not been disciplined for any reason in the last 12 months.

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) may make exceptions to the above requirements if the exceptions are in the best interest of SSA and its operational needs. For example, an employee may not have 10 years of service. However, the employee could continue to do the duties of his/her position if outstationed. It may be in the interest of SSA and more cost effective to outstation the employee rather than have the employee resign and SSA hire a new employee. For vacancy announcements, eligibility exceptions must be made prior to the announcement.

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) should maintain written documentation of any exceptions made and the reasons with the outstationing request (See Section 5.6.)

Employees who meet the eligibility requirements do not have a right to outstationing. Rather, delegated officials (See Section 4.) determine whether employees who meet all eligibility criteria will be outstationed.

5.4. Initiating Outstationing Due to Recruitment Needs, Retention Needs, or Other Needs

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) may offer outstationing to eligible employees due to recruitment, retention, or other needs. Generally, delegated officials should outstation no more than 10 percent of their components' workforce at any given time for these needs. Delegated officials should also consider office coverage when determining whether they should offer outstationing.

5.4.1. Recruitment Needs

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) may post merit promotion announcements with an offer of outstationing for employees who are not located at the home components' normal official duty station if they determine the position requires a unique skill set that makes it hard to fill. When recruiting for these positions, the area of consideration for the vacancy announcement must be "SSA nationwide" or available to all employee within a Deputy Commissioner level component. Announcements open to all federal employees may not include an offer of outstationing. Vacancy announcements should indicate: "Outstationing may be available for eligible employees." If components will only be offering outstationing to employees' homes, the vacancy announcement should indicate: "Outstationing may be available to eligible employees' homes." In addition, any eligibility exceptions must be stated in the announcements.

An offer of outstationing in an announcement does not guarantee that the selectee will be outstationed. Outstationing is contingent on eligibility (See section 5.3.) and space availability in the prospective location unless employees will be outstationed to their homes (See Section 5.5.). Normal merit systems rules will apply to selections. The selecting official must consider selecting candidates who are not eligible for outstationing and base selections on his or her judgment as to which of the candidates has the greatest potential for successful performance of the duties and responsibilities of the position being filled.

If a selectee would like to be outstationed, Delegated officials (See Section 4.) must have the selected applicant(s) complete an outstationing request (Exhibit 1) and the applicable outstationing agreement (Exhibit 2 or Exhibit 3) prior to finalizing selection(s).

5.4.2. Retention Issues

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) may offer outstationing to current employees if they determine the unusually high or unique qualifications of the employees or a special need of SSA for the employees' services make it essential to retain the employees and the employees would likely leave Federal service in the absence of outstationing.

5.4.3. Other Needs

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) may consider outstationing requests based on other needs.

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) who offer outstationing to employees due to recruitment, retention, or other needs must have employees complete a Request for Outstationing (Exhibit 1) if they wish to participate.

5.5. Determining Outstationing Locations

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) should first consider outstationing their employees to their component's official worksites. If their component does not have any available worksite space for their employees to be outstationed, delegated officials should consider outstationing employees to other Deputy Commissioner (DC)-level components' worksites that employees have indicated are their preferred outstationing worksites. Employees should include at least three locations on the Request for Outstationing (Exhibit 1).

If no SSA worksites are available or outstationing to other SSA offices is not feasible, delegated officials may consider outstationing employees to their homes.

5.6. Approving Outstationing Requests

Employees who have been offered outstationing due to recruitment, retention, or other needs must complete a Request for Outstationing (Exhibit 1) and forward it to their delegated approving officials. Delegated officials will review employees' requests to determine eligibility for outstationing.

Delegated officials who would like to outstation eligible employees to facilities occupied by other DC-level components must contact the component to determine space availability. In situations where a component has posted an internal vacancy with the option for outstationing, the selecting official should determine space availability prior to finalizing a selection.

When evaluating whether space is available, host components should consider unused workstation space only. Components should not consider common space or specially designated areas such as conference or training rooms. Components should also not consider procuring additional space.

If space is available, the delegated official (See Section 4.) of the host component should provide a point of contact for the new duty station to the delegated official of the requesting component.

If no space is available, delegated officials (See Section 4.) may consider outstationing employees to their homes (See Section 5.9.).

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) should notify employees if they have approved or denied their outstationing requests within 30 workdays. There are no appeal rights for denied requests.

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) should retain copies of the approved/denied outstationing requests in employees' SSA-7B, Employee Record Extension File (See PPM S293_4). Delegated officials should retain approved requests for 1 year after the outstationing ends, and denied requests for 1-year from the date of denial.

5.7. Participating in Outstationing—General Requirements

5.7.1. Obtaining Outstationing Agreement

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) must have employees complete outstationing agreements once they are approved for outstationing to new SSA official worksites (Exhibit 2) or their homes (Exhibit 3).

5.7.2. Updating SSA-801, Position Description

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) should contact their component's servicing personnel office (SPO) if they determine employees will be outstationed and have the new duty location(s) added to the SSA-801, Position Description prior to initiating the SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, changing the official duty stations (See Section 5.7.3.).

5.7.3. Initiating Personnel Actions for Change in Duty Stations

Once the home component's SPO updates the SSA-801, Position Description, the home component must initiate an SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, to change the employee's official duty station effective on the date the employee relocates.

When employees are outstationed to their homes, their official duty station is the city, county and state where their homes are located.

5.7.4. Determining Locality Pay (See Section 3.3.)

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) should inform employees, in writing, that their locality pay will be based on the outstationed location and may result in a change in their locality pay if they are approved for outstationing. For example, if an employee's home component's normal official duty station is Baltimore, Maryland and an employee is outstationed to a host component in Atlanta, Georgia, the employee's locality pay will be based on Atlanta, Georgia.

5.7.5. Paying Relocation Expenses When Outstationing Commences

SSA will not pay relocation expenses for employees who request outstationing since the employee will be choosing the location and any relocation will be primarily in the interest of the employee (See PPM S335_4).

5.7.6. Accounting for Time and Attendance

Outstationed employees must use SSA's automated time and attendance system, if available, to account for their time and attendance. Otherwise, outstationed employees must use the SSA-30, Time and Attendance Roster, to account for their regular tours of duty, and the home component must establish procedures for obtaining employees' SSA-30s and certifying their time and attendance. In addition, outstationed employees must use SSA's automated time and attendance system, if available, to account for overtime and holiday work.

Otherwise, outstationed employees must use the SSA-29, Serial Overtime or Holiday Work Attendance Roster, to account for overtime and holiday work, and the home component must establish procedures for obtaining employees' SSA-29s and certifying their time and attendance.

Employees must request leave (See PPM S630_1) from their leave approving officials in their home components using SSA's automated time and attendance system, if available. Otherwise, outstationed employees must use the SSA-71, Application for Leave, to request leave, and the home component must establish procedures for obtaining the SSA-71's for approving/denying employees' leave requests.

Outstationed employees must notify the host component when using approved leave.

5.7.7. Participating in Training

Home components are responsible for employees' training activities. If outstationed employees cannot complete required training at the outstationed location, home components are responsible for arranging the required training and any additional costs incurred, including travel and overtime costs.

5.7.8. Handling Worksite Problems

Outstationed employees must promptly notify delegated officials (See Section 4.) of any condition(s) that will affect their ability to perform their official duties (e.g., equipment failure, power outages, telecommunication difficulties). Delegated officials will assess the situation and determine the appropriate course of action, including the granting of leave (See PPM S630_1) or excusing employees' absences (See PPM S630_9).

5.7.9. Accounting and Evaluation of Work

Outstationed employees are expected to perform their official duties without interruption. Outstationed employees must not use official duty time for any purpose other than performing their official duties and those activities contained in PPM Chapter S630_9, Section 5.4. Outstationed employees must be accessible by phone, email, and Lync to their supervisors, clients, colleagues, and external customers during working hours, exclusive of the meal and break periods.

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) will assess outstationed employees' performance in accordance with PPM Chapter S430_1. Delegated officials may conduct performance discussions (i.e., initial, mid-cycle, appraisal, etc.) and similar activities via telephone or video. Generally, the home component should not have employees return to their home components' normal official duty stations to conduct performance discussions and related activities. Delegated officials may email unsigned performance documents or signed copies to and from the outstationed employees. Delegated officials should mail performance documents that need to retain the wet signatures within 5 business days of discussing with the employee. Upon receipt, the employee has 5 business days to return the document with the wet signature to the supervisor.

To assist with assessing performance, delegated officials (See Section 4.) may require outstationed employees to submit electronic accounts of the work performed at the outstationed location at whatever intervals are most appropriate for the work the outstationed employees are performing. The delegated official will determine the format and required content of the electronic account.

If the delegated official (See Section 4.) determines outstationing is hindering the employee's performance, the delegated official can terminate outstationing and direct the employee to return to the home component's official duty station. In these situations, relocation expenses will be handled in accordance with PPM Chapter S335_4.

5.7.10. Abiding by Rules of Conduct

Outstationed employees must abide by all laws, governmentwide rules and regulations, and SSA policies governing employee conduct, including the Standards of Conduct for Employees in the Executive Branch, the Privacy Act, and the SSA Annual Personnel Reminders.

Failure to follow these laws, regulations, and policies could result in disciplinary action.

5.7.11. Reporting Accidents or Injuries

Outstationed employees will notify their supervisors immediately of any accidents or injuries that occur in the course of performing their official duties. Employees will timely complete all forms required to process an initial claim under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act, if they chose to file a claim.

5.7.12. Traveling to the Home Component

Home components will pay outstationed employees' travel expenses when they require employees to return to their home components to perform official duties. Home components determine those situations in which outstationed employees must return to the home component's normal official duty station.

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) should advise outstationed employees, in writing, that they are not entitled to periodic trips to the home component.

5.7.13. Relocating After Being Outstationed

Employees' home components will pay outstationed employees' relocation expenses to return to their home components or alternative locations that will become employees' official duty stations only if the relocation is primarily in the interest of the government. SSA will not pay relocation expenses for outstationed employees who request to return and relocate to their home components' locations or alternative locations since SSA considers these relocations in the primary interest of the employees and not in the primary interest of SSA. (See PPM S335_4.)

5.7.14. Position Changes

Outstationed employees may apply for other SSA positions. For area of consideration purposes, they will be considered based on both their outstationed location and the location of their home component. Selectees will need to abide by the requirements of the vacancy announcement and relocate, possibly at their own expense, if the new position was not advertised with an outstationing option.

If outstationed employees change positions outside of a vacancy announcement (e.g., non-competitive reassignment, requested change to lower grade, etc.), outstationing may be terminated, and employees may be required to report to a new duty station. The determination for paying any relocation expenses will be based on PPM Chapter S335_4.

Home components must notify the host component if outstationed employees change positions or are no longer outstationed.

5.7.15. Component Changes

Home components must notify host components if outstationed employees change components.

5.8. Participating in Outstationing at SSA Host Locations

5.8.1. Providing Building Access

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) should contact the host components' contact points to secure the appropriate building access and parking access, if available, for outstationed employees.

5.8.2. Providing Office Equipment and Supplies

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) should contact the host components' contact points to coordinate providing outstationed employees with the appropriate workspace, network connection, IT on-site services, telephone service, office supplies, and other workplace needs.

Home components should provide outstationed employees their normal equipment including a single portable computing device (e.g., laptop) and docking station or desktop computer, monitor, mouse, printer, and scanner for use at the host components' duty locations as well as any other necessary office equipment including computer hardware and software.

5.8.3. Establishing Work Schedules and Regular Working Hours

Normally, outstationed employees will follow their home components' work schedules, e.g., fixed shift, flextime, flexible 5/4-9, flexible 4/10, (See PPM S610_1) and working hours adjusted for differences in time zones. For example, if the maximum limits of the home component's flexible schedule are 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. eastern time, the maximum limits of the flexible schedule for an employee in the pacific time zone would be 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. pacific time.

However, if host components cannot accommodate employees' home components' work schedules and working hours, delegated officials (See Section 4.) will determine employees' working hours based on the host components' working hours.

5.8.4. Establishing Meal Periods and Breaks

Normally, outstationed employees will follow their home components' meal periods and breaks adjusted for differences in time zones. (See PPM S610_1).

However, if host components cannot accommodate employees' home components' meal periods and breaks, delegated officials will determine employees' meal periods and breaks based on the host components' meal periods and breaks.

5.8.5. Working Additional Hours

Normally, outstationed employees will follow SSA policies as well as their home components' policies for working additional hours (e.g., credit hours, overtime). However, home components must ensure that host components can accommodate employees when approving overtime or allowing employees to work additional hours such as credit hours since the hours of operation at the host component may be different from the home component.

5.8.6. Late Openings, Early Dismissals, and Building Closures (See PPM S630_10).

Outstationed employees will follow their host components' announcements regarding late openings, early dismissals, and building closures. Outstationed employees should notify their supervisors when late openings, early dismissals or building closures occur at the time of the occurrence or as soon as possible after an occurrence.

5.8.7. Providing Emergency Contact Information

Outstationed employees must share emergency contact information with the home and host components.

5.8.8. Providing Security Procedures

The host component must review security procedures and the Continuity of Operations Plan procedures with outstationed employees and employees must follow those procedures.

5.8.9. Following Office Protocol

Outstationed employees must familiarize themselves with their host components' office protocol. Outstationed employees should notify their host components when they will not be working at their host components' site because of telework, leave, official travel, etc.

5.8.10. Teleworking

Outstationed employees may telework if approved by their home components (See PPM S650_1). Outstationed employees should notify their host components of the days they are approved to telework.

5.8.11. Terminating Use of Space

If host components can no longer accommodate outstationed employees due to their space needs or other issues, host components should notify home components at least 30 calendar days, but preferably 60 calendar days, prior to the need for the space.

Home components should determine whether they can reassign employees to other SSA duty locations near their host component's official duty station. If no SSA space is available to host outstationed employees, delegated officials may outstation employees to their homes or order them to return to their home component's location. In deciding whether to return employees to their home components, delegated officials should take into consideration the rules concerning payment of relocation expenses for changing the duty station (See PPM S335_4). Employees must be available to return to duty at employees' home component's duty stations or other agency-determined duty stations no later than 60 days after the home component notifies the employees that they will no longer be outstationed at their current location.

5.9. Participating in Outstationing at Employees' Homes

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) may outstation employees to their homes if no SSA host locations are available. When employees are outstationed to their homes, their homes become their permanent official duty station. Outstationing employees to their homes is not telework (See PPM S650_1).

5.9.1. Providing Office Equipment and Supplies

5.9.1.1. Portable Computing Device

Home components should provide outstationed employees their normal equipment including a single portable computing device (e.g., laptop) and docking station or desktop computer, monitor, mouse, printer, and scanner for use at the employee's home as well as any other necessary office equipment including computer hardware and software. Home components should also provide VPN access for employees to use at their homes.

In accordance with the Information Security Policy, Section 3, outstationed employees may connect personal keyboards, monitors/TVs, and mice to their SSA provided portable computing device (e.g., laptop) as long as they do not require the interactive installation of drivers or other software.

Outstationed employees must have and maintain high-speed/broadband internet access at their own expense.

SSA retains ownership and control of any agency-furnished hardware, software, and data and is responsible for maintaining, supporting and repairing the equipment. There will be no onsite information technology support provided in employees' homes.

Outstationed employees are responsible for the care, use, and safeguarding of their Government property, including equipment and data.

Outstationed employees should report problems with their portable computing devices to their supervisors as soon as possible. If the portable computing devices are defective, home components should contact the Laptop Depot to arrange to have new devices shipped to employees as soon as possible. Delegated officials (See Section 4.) may instruct employees to use personal computing devices to accomplish their workload through agency-sponsored, web accessible resources (such as Outlook Web Access) or report to a different location while SSA repairs their equipment or issues new equipment.

5.9.1.2. Other Office Equipment and Supplies

Outstationed employees must furnish and maintain all other equipment deemed necessary by the delegated officials to perform their official duties (e.g., desk, chair, surge protector, locking file cabinet) at their own expense.

Employees should follow their components' procedures for ordering any necessary supplies (e.g., pens, paper).

5.9.2. Providing Phone Service

Outstationed employees must use a softphone or agency phone technology, if available.

If agency phone technology is not available, employees must furnish their own telephone and service.

Employees are responsible for all local calls. Upon request, SSA will issue Government phone cards to employees who need to place long-distance or toll calls for their official duties, as this is the only way SSA will pay for long distance calls. SSA will not reimburse employees who use their personal phones or some other method for long distance calling. (See AIMS, MRM, Chapter 05.)

5.9.3. Handling Technical Problems

Outstationed employees are on official duty time when they cannot perform their duties because they are experiencing technical problems caused by SSA. Employees must request leave if they cannot perform their duties because they are experiencing technical problems not caused by SSA such as an Internet outage. Excused absence/administrative leave is not appropriate for problems not caused by SSA. Employees who are experiencing technical issues and are unsure of the cause, should consult their outstationing delegated approving official (See Section 4.) to determine the appropriate action.

5.9.4. Maintaining Records

Outstationed employees should maintain records in accordance with SSA's records management procedures (See AIMS, MRM, Chapter 07.).

5.9.5. Maintaining Home Worksite

Outstationed employees are responsible for maintaining their home worksites in a manner that is conducive to business and is free of hazards. Employees must have adequate workspace, proper lighting, power, other utilities, adequate environmental conditions, a readily accessible and working fire extinguisher, and a working smoke detector.

SSA is not liable for damages to personal or real property occurring during the performance of official duties except to the extent established by law.

5.9.6. Establishing Regular Working Hours

Normally, outstationed employees will follow their home component's working hours adjusted for differences in time zones. For example, if the maximum limits of the home component's flexible schedule are 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. eastern time, the maximum limits of the flexible schedule for an employee in the pacific time zone would be 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. pacific time.

5.9.7. Establishing Meal Periods and Breaks

Normally, outstationed employees will follow their home components' meal periods and breaks.

5.9.8. Working Additional Hours

Outstationed employees will follow SSA policies as well as their home components' policies for working additional hours (e.g., credit hours, overtime.).

5.9.9. Late Openings, Early Dismissals, and Building Closures

Outstationed employees must complete their entire daily tour of duty when there is a late opening, early dismissal, or full day building closure at their home components' worksites.

5.10. Changing Outstationing Locations and Terminating Outstationing

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) may change outstationing locations (e.g., from one SSA facility to another, from an SSA facility to the employee's home, or from the employee's home to an SSA facility) or terminate outstationing and return employees to their home component's official duty station at SSA's expense when in the best interest of SSA. Delegated officials should take into consideration the rules concerning payment of relocation expenses for changing the duty station as any changes initiated by the agency would be in the government's interest and at SSA's expense. See PPM Chapter S335_4, Section 5.2.

Disciplinary action may result if the delegated official (See Section 4.) directs employees to return to the home component's normal official duty station, and they refuse.

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) may approve employees' requests to return to their home components' official duty stations and terminate outstationing. If approved, employees must pay their own expenses when returning to their home components normal official duty location.

Home components must notify host components if delegated officials terminate outstationing.

5.11. Separating Outstationed Employees

Delegated officials (See Section 4.) must ensure that outstationed employees return all SSA equipment when separating from SSA, using an SSA-approved shipping provider.

6. RECORDS RETENTION

Records must be kept according to the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) General Records Schedule 2.2., Employee Management Records. This schedule can be accessed through the NARA web site.

Domestic Employees Teleworking Overseas

For bargaining unit employees, see applicable Union/Management Contracts in addition to the Personnel Policy Manual (PPM). Contract provisions take precedence over the PPM (See Section 6.).

1. ISSUE DATE – January 17, 2024
2. EMPLOYEES COVERED – All SSA non-bargaining unit employees and unrepresented bargaining unit employees, who are included on orders of a U.S. Government sponsoring employee.
3. LAW AND REGULATION

3.1. Establishing an Agency Domestic Employees Overseas Policy

Section 6202 of the Fiscal Year (FY) 2022 National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA) (Public Law 117–81, December 27, 2021) requires Federal agencies to “establish a policy enumerating the circumstances under which employees may be permitted to temporarily perform work requirements and duties from approved overseas locations where there is a related Foreign Service assignment pursuant to an approved Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) agreement.”

4. SSA DELEGATIONS OF AUTHORITY

See delegations of authority.

5. SSA POLICY

5.1. Definitions

- Change in Duty Station occurs when an employee's worksite or station (the physical work address) is moved to a new geographic location (a change in city/town, county, or state).
- Chief of Mission (COM) means the Department of State (DoS) official overseeing the approval of the DETO and responsible for direction, coordination, and supervision of all U.S. government executive branch employees within the COM's country of assignment.
- Delegated Approving Official (DAO) means the person with the delegated authority to approve a particular action. See the Delegations of Authority in Section 4.
- Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) means a covered employee (see Section 2.) assigned to a domestic position, teleworking from an overseas location for a limited period of time. Although the domestic employee is not assigned or detailed to the overseas location, the DETO's duty station will be temporarily changed to reflect the overseas alternate worksite for the duration of the DETO arrangement.
- DETO Agreement means an official agreement documenting the terms and conditions of the DETO arrangement. See Exhibit 1 - DETO Agreement.
- DETO Coordinator means the SSA Human Resources (HR) official in the Office of Personnel, Center for Policy and Performance Management, responsible for the DETO policy and coordination with other agencies. Normally, the DETO Coordinator will also be the agency Telework Coordinator (See PPM S650_1).
- Employing Agency means the agency and component to which the DETO is officially assigned and where the fulltime equivalent (FTE) is allotted.
- Host Agency, Bureau, or Location means the regional agency, bureau, or location that has authority over the location in a foreign country where the DETO is living.
- International Cooperative Administrative Support Services (ICASS) Costs means costs that cannot be directly attributed to an agency and are distributed via ICASS as either Post-obligated costs or non Post-obligated costs. ICASS costs, if applicable, must be discussed in advance and incorporated into the DETO Agreement.
- Office of Information Security (OIS) means the office within the Office of Systems which will review and approve the systems access and information security requirements and guidelines for each DETO agreement on a case-by-case basis. OIS will determine what security requirements and guidelines apply for any government issued equipment (e.g., cell phone).
- Official Worksites mean the locations (physical address) of an employee's position of record where employees regularly perform their duties. This physical location must be specified in the DETO agreement and may be subject to a security inspection.
- Official Duty Station (ODS) means the corporate limits of the city or town where employees work, or an established area having definite boundaries within which the official worksite is located, which is not greater than a 50-mile radius (using a straight-line distance).
- Overseas Alternate Duty Station (OADS) means an approved overseas location, from which the employee will perform the duties of their domestic position through telework via the DETO arrangement. Classified work will only be permitted from a U.S. government facility or network. In most circumstances, unclassified work also may not be conducted from an overseas residence and SSA will need to pay for workspace at the Embassy, Consulate, or U.S. military base if available. DETO arrangements from a residence will be assessed on a case-by-case basis and must be approved by the employee's home component. The Office of Information Security will also conduct a review and risk assessment. Additionally, SSA has the right to require a separate agreement be signed by the individual or organization paying for the residence regarding security and safety standards.
- Positions of Record refers to employees' official positions as documented on their most recent SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, and current SSA-801, Position Descriptions. Positions to which appointing officials detail employees are not positions of record.
- Sponsored DETO means a covered employee (see Section 2) who is the spouse of a sponsoring employee assigned overseas and is on the U.S. Government orders of this sponsoring employee. An SSA DETO must be on the U.S. Government orders of a sponsoring employee assigned overseas.
- Sponsoring Employee means either a Foreign Service or Civil Service employee who is or will be assigned (not temporary duty travel or TDY) to a U.S. mission abroad under Chief of Mission (COM) authority or an office of the American Institute in Taiwan, or 2) a Department of Defense (DoD) employee or uniformed service member who is or will be assigned (not TDY) to a military base or U.S. mission abroad.

5.2. Overview

5.2.1. Program Overview

A DETO arrangement is not an employee entitlement but rather a limited duration workplace flexibility option that SSA may consider to allow covered employees (see Section 2.) who are assigned to domestic positions to accomplish their duties in an overseas location from an OADS. SSA will only approve sponsored DETO agreements where an SSA employee has been named on the U.S. Government orders of a spouse being ordered overseas.

A DETO arrangement is not a reasonable accommodation. For reasonable accommodations, see PPM S1630_1.

SSA employees with a DETO arrangement must be in compliance with the Department of State's Executive Secretary Memorandum, Policy Requirements for Executive Branch Domestic Employees Teleworking from Overseas, SSA's Information Security Policy, Section 3.1.9.2 International Travel, the agency's Telework Training, and complete a written agreement in Exhibit 1 - DETO Agreement.

DETO arrangements in the Federal Government are different from normal telework due to increased security concerns and costs to employing agencies. SSA will consider requests on a case-by-case basis. SSA employees seeking a DETO arrangement should consult with the SSA DETO Coordinator as early as possible in the process as Department of State (DoS) approval can take anywhere from three to six months.

Before SSA will approve a DETO, the employee must meet overseas training requirements, the agency's international travel requirements, and have proper documentation such as passports, visas, and any additional work permits required to perform work in the foreign location. For sponsored DETOs, normally the sponsoring agency will arrange for visas and work permits. A DETO may entail significant costs to the agency, the employee, or both, including security and administrative support costs. The DETO agreement must clearly explain the costs paid by the component and the costs paid by the employee.

DoS policy requirements apply to all Federal Executive Branch agencies in addition to the requirements of the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010 and SSA policies.

5.3. Eligibility Considerations

- A DETO arrangement cannot begin until all required official approvals have been obtained.
- Employees must be named in the orders of the sponsoring employee (see Section 5.1.) and have proof that the sponsoring employee will be assigned overseas.
- Employees must meet all eligibility requirements for the Telework Program (see PPM Chapter S650_1, Section 5.3.2). In addition, when delegated approving officials (DAO) recommend approval for employees to participate in the DETO program, they are confirming that employees are able to perform their full range of job duties remotely (e.g., in-person interaction with customers and employees is not required, onsite duties are not required, appropriate IT equipment is available for all duties, all workloads are fully portable, reliable high-speed internet is available).
- Employees who are in formal training programs (e.g., considered trainees) may be ineligible for DETO approval.
- DETO agreements and OADS must be assessed on a case-by-case basis for information security guidelines and approval by the DAO.
- A DETO Agreement must be reviewed by the DAO every six months to ensure that it meets the needs of the office and the employee. Depending on the outcome of the review, employees with approved DETO agreements may need to provide updated or additional documentation.

5.3.1. Tiered Approach to Addressing DETO Requests

After proof of the sponsoring employee's assignment has been received, the DAO (see Section 4) should use a tiered approach to evaluate employees' requests to determine if a DETO agreement and arrangement is in the best interest of employees and SSA.

1. If employees can perform their current position's full range of duties from an overseas location, proceed with their DETO request and complete steps in Section 5.3.2. Please note that supervisors should discuss the conditions of employment in Section 5.6, below with employees, including expectations concerning work schedules.

2. If employees cannot perform their current position's full range of duties from an overseas location, use the agency's hardship reassignment procedures to determine if the employee can be reassigned to another position where a DETO agreement could be considered. If a position where a DETO agreement could be approved can be identified, complete the steps in Section 5.3.2.

Generally, when the DETO is terminated, employees will be reassigned back to their original position. DAOs will work with component supervisors and employees to finalize position and necessary personnel actions after DETO completion.

3. If employees cannot be considered for a DETO request under steps 1 and 2 above, DAOs will grant them for leave without pay (LWOP) as described in PPM S630_6 for up to 36 months, provided their sponsoring employee's orders do not exceed this limit. If the sponsoring employee's orders exceed this limit, LWOP must not be approved. Employees are subject to rules concerning outside activities during this period (SSA-520) and must keep their supervisors updated concerning their interest in continued employment with SSA and the anticipated duration of their overseas assignment. Employees should review information on outside employment in the SSA Annual Personnel Reminders.

5.3.2. Establishing a DETO Arrangement

Employees must follow the steps for establishing a DETO arrangement outlined below. For more detailed guidance and requirements, refer to the Information Security Policy, Section 3.1.9.2, International Travel.

1. Employee obtains approval from DAO that their position would be eligible for DETO or that they may be reassigned (see PPM S335_7) to a position eligible for DETO (see Section 5.3.1).

2. Component DAO at the Deputy Commissioner (DC) or Associate Commissioner (AC) level assesses operational risk and confirms space availability.

- Component DAOs are the final approving official within SSA for DETO agreements, so they must be fully aware of the data access, operational risks, and any other risks associated with approving an employee for a DETO assignment. The DAO must consider the nature of the employee's position, the type of systems accessed, the type of data accessed, the location of the assignment, and any other risks associated with granting an employee access from an overseas location.
- If any classified information, global query, or widespread access to SSA programmatic systems, access to HR systems, or other highly sensitive or closely controlled information will be accessed during the course of the assignment, government space and network access must be arranged for the OADS. Component DAOs may contact OIS through the International Travel Device Request Process with any questions concerning systems access or information security. Components must arrange for government facility and network access using the following process:
 - Components should first determine whether SSA has existing workspace through the Office of Earnings and International Operations (OEIO) at a Federal Benefits Unit (FBU) that has already been paid through the ICASS process. Components should contact OEIO at ||OCO OEIO Controls to identify this space.
 - If FBU space is not available, components should ask OEIO to contact DoS through the ICASS process and determine if sufficient space can be made available and the cost. Costs for space may include workstations, desks, chairs, office supplies, and other related items. Components must work with OEIO to obtain additional budget support from the Office of Budget for the additional ICASS costs.
 - If FBU and DoS space are not available, components should work with the agency DETO Coordinator to determine if DoD has space available and the cost for that space.
- In instances where information accessed during the assignment will be limited to typical and normal programmatic access that a front-line technician would have or HR systems will not be accessed, a residence may be considered as the OADS on a case-by-case basis. Information on the residence provided by the mission or the private residence, and the internet provider to be used must be provided to the OIS for assessment in step 4 below. Additional written approval and security agreements may be necessary.

3. Supervisor obtains approval from component DAO for the DETO;

4. In conjunction with supervisor and SSA DETO Coordinator, employee prepares draft DETO Agreement using Exhibit X – DETO Agreement;

5. All DETO Agreements must be reviewed and signed by the following individuals in this order and must attach information concerning the OADS and internet connection proposed:

- (a) The employee;
- (b) The supervisor;
- (c) The component DAO;
- (d) The OIS DAO approving the information security arrangements through the International Travel Device Request Process. See OIS's Information Security Policy for more information.
- (e) The SSA DETO Coordinator at SSA DETO Policy;
- (f) The DoS host bureau Executive Director (after contacting detopolicy@state.gov for the current POC); and
- (g) The Post Management Counselor or their other designated Post management official at the relevant Post.

6. After all required signatures and documents have been obtained for the DETO Agreement, the SSA DETO Coordinator must submit justification and documentation to the Policy and Global Presence Directorate in DoS Office of Management Strategy and Solutions (M/SS) through the NSDD-38 web application for review and process of the NSDD-38 action to Post to formally obtain Chief of Mission approval (for DETO arrangements of 365 days or more). If the employing agency does not have a NSDD-38 account log in, they may request one from the M/SS NSDD-38 team at MSS-NSDD38@state.gov. For DETO arrangements lasting fewer than 365 days the SSA DETO Coordinator must request Chief of Mission approval via eCountry Clearance.

7. A DETO arrangement cannot begin until it has received all required official approvals, including all required signatures for the DETO Agreement and COM approval via NSDD-38 or eCountry Clearance, as applicable.

8. When reporting for duty at the overseas location, the DETO is required to notify their supervisor, timekeeper, HR processing component, and the DETO Coordinator (SSA DETO Policy) of the effective start date of the DETO arrangement for processing the SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, documenting the change in duty station to the overseas location. Requests for personnel action processing and pay setting assistance should be directed to DCHR OOHRS.

5.3.3. Connection Requirements

Outside of the United States (U.S.) or U.S. Territories, DETOs are normally only permitted remote access to SSA Information Systems from a U.S. government facility or network. During the assignment, in instances where information access is required, it will be limited to typical and normal programmatic access that a front-line technician would have. When no HR systems access is available, a residence may be considered as the OADS on a case-by-case basis provided that sufficient information concerning the residence and Internet Service Providers (ISPs) can be established. DETOs must not remotely access SSA Information Systems (i.e., establish a VPN connection) from foreign locations with unknown ISPs (i.e., hotels, Internet cafes, private residences, etc.).

Outside of the U.S. or U.S. Territories, DETOs must not be permitted to remotely access SSA Information Systems using wireless technology including broadband cellular wireless services.

- a. Wireless services must be disabled; and
- b. Wireless cards must be physically removed, where possible.

5.4. Beginning DETO Arrangement

Covered employees (see Section 2.) who have been reassigned to a new position for which they will have a DETO arrangement (see Section 5.3.1.) should be allowed a minimum of two full pay periods to work in the position domestically with the domestic supervisor.

Employees who are approved for DETO arrangements may continue working at their official worksite until travel begins. Alternatively, DETOs may request personal leave or LWOP for any period prior to the start of the DETO arrangement and any necessary travel, in accordance with normal leave policies. Since SSA is not ordering the worksite change, administrative leave will not be provided.

When reporting for duty at the overseas location, the DETO is required to notify the supervisor, timekeeper, HR processing component, and the SSA DETO (^SSA DETO Policy) Coordinator (of the effective start date of the DETO arrangement for processing the SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, documenting the change in duty station to the overseas location. Requests for personnel action processing should be directed to ^DCHR OOHS.

5.5. DETO Requirements for Anti-Nepotism Reviews (ANR)

If the sponsoring employee is an employee of DoS, refer to 3 FAM 8327 for the policy which stipulates that an ANR is required before a DETO candidate is permitted to work at the same Post as his or her sponsoring employee, when the DETO candidate's sponsoring employee is the Chief of Mission, Deputy Chief of Mission, Principal Officer, Deputy Principal Officer, or where any elements of the "Prohibited Conditions" listed in 3 FAM 8326 might appear to potentially exist. This situation will require additional steps and approvals.

5.6. Conditions of Employment

5.6.1. Duty Station Location

Employees with approved DETO agreements remain assigned to their office's organization and position, but unlike normal telework the duty station/location code for the employee must change to reflect the OADS where the employee is physically working abroad. The OADS is the official agency worksite or home residence where employees approved for DETO regularly perform their job duties. The OADS must be documented on the SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action, blocks 38 and 39 showing the city, county, and state in which the ODS is located (e.g., Frankfurt, Germany).

5.6.2. Locality Pay

The DETO locality payment is equal to the lesser of—

- (1) the amount of title 5 locality pay the employee would have been paid if the official duty station of the employee had not been changed to an overseas location under the DETO arrangement; or
- (2) the amount of overseas locality pay the employee would be paid if the employee were an eligible member of the Foreign Service (i.e., designated class 1 or below for purposes of section 403 of the Foreign Service Act), as continued to be authorized under section 9802(c) of the FY 2023 NDAA.

See the OPM guidance for the FY 2023 provisions on DETO locality pay.

A special personnel action must be processed with manual setting of the locality pay.

5.6.3. Processing Personnel Actions

All personnel action processing for DETO arrangements will be handled centrally by ^DCHR OOHS. The overseas duty station (overseas alternate worksite) must be documented on an employee's Form SF-50, Notification of Personnel Action. Locality pay will also need to be set manually (See Section 5.6.2.).

5.6.4. Federal Employee Health Benefits (FEHB)

Employees enrolled in a regional health insurance plan will have the opportunity to change to a health insurance plan that offers coverage in their new duty station area. Additionally, employees that transfer to a duty post outside the U.S. (or vice versa) are allowed an opportunity to change their health insurance plan enrollment regardless of their current coverage. To make changes, employees should complete an SF2809 - Health Benefits Election Form \(opm.gov\) and return to DCHR.OOHS@ssa.gov.

Plan information can be located on the Office of Personnel Management's (OPM) Plan Information pages. Important information regarding international coverage can be found on OPM's Important Facts about Overseas Coverage page.

If enrolling in a health plan covering family members, OPM now requires agencies to verify all family members eligibility for coverage any time a qualifying life event occurs. Employees should return copies of the appropriate FEHB Family Member Eligibility Documents \(opm.gov\) along with their SF-2809 to the email above to ensure prompt processing.

5.6.5. Leave and Holidays

Employees must follow normal leave policies. DETOs are obligated to regularly communicate with their supervisor and timekeeper to assure that leave and regular duty hours are properly reported to avoid over-payments or under-payments. Employees are expected to work during closures at the employees' home office work site and would not be entitled to weather and safety leave. Employees may be entitled to weather and safety leave for events affecting the host country/Post. Please refer to Personnel Policy Manual (PPM) S630_10, Weather and Safety Leave.

Employees with approved DETO agreements are not entitled to Home Leave. See PPM S630_15.

Employees are only entitled to pay for U.S. holidays and are expected to work during local holidays of the host country/Post. In situations where host offices (e.g., U.S. embassies and consulates) are closed due to local holidays, employees will be granted weather and safety leave if they cannot perform work from a residence.

Please refer to PPM S550_6, Holiday Work.

5.6.6. Hours of Work

Employees must work the normal tour of duty for the official worksite of their position of record in the U.S., unadjusted for changes in time zones, to ensure customer service availability unless the component has specifically agreed to a new work schedule in the DETO agreement. If the component will adjust the work schedule for time zone differences (e.g., to allow the employee to work during the day overseas), the component must verify systems availability for their applications. The terms of the current or new work schedule and time zone must be agreed to specifically in the DETO agreement (See Exhibit 1 – DETO Agreement). If the employee cannot agree to this work schedule, hardship reassignment to another position or LWOP should be considered rather than approving a DETO agreement for their current position (See Section 5.3.1.).

If an employee is approved for a DETO agreement and midway through the assignment experiences negative performance impacts or is unable to maintain the agreed upon work schedule, delegated officials (See Section 4.) may terminate the DETO agreement and direct the employee to return to the home component's official worksite. In these situations, the employee expressly waives any right to relocation expenses. If the employee chooses to separate instead of accepting the directed reassignment, the employee acknowledges that they are not entitled to any severance pay.

5.6.7. Performance Management

DETOs must follow normal performance management rules in accordance with PPM Chapter S430_1. If delegated officials (See Section 4.) determine remote work is negatively impacting employee performance, delegated officials should initiate an opportunity to perform successfully (OPS) plan (See PPM S430_1) for the DETO work location instead of requiring employees to return to the home component's official worksite. If an OPS cannot be completed remotely or employee performance does not improve during the OPS, if needed, delegated officials (See Section 4.) may terminate the DETO agreement and direct the employee to return to the home component's official worksite. In these situations, the employee expressly waives any right to relocation expenses. If the employee chooses to separate instead of accepting the directed reassignment, the employee acknowledges that they are not entitled to any severance pay.

5.6.8. Position Changes

DETO agreements should only be approved for employees in permanent positions (e.g., not be in temporary or not-to-exceed positions). If an employee is currently serving on a temporary or not-to-exceed position, the component should assess options for assigning a permanent position or a reassignment (see Section 5.3.1) prior to developing a DETO agreement. Generally, employees serving on DETO agreements will not change positions during their assignment unless part of a previously approved career-ladder position. If necessary, employees may be reassigned or promoted to other positions eligible for DETO agreements, but a new DETO agreement must be approved prior to the position change being processed and taking effect.

5.6.9. Abiding by Rules of Conduct

DETOs must abide by all laws, governmentwide rules and regulations, and SSA policies governing employee conduct, including the Standards of Conduct for Employees in the Executive Branch, the Privacy Act, and the SSA Annual Personnel Reminders. Employees must also follow the agency's Information Security Policy when using SSA-issued equipment and accessing SSA systems.

Failure to follow these laws, regulations, and policies could result in disciplinary action or termination of the DETO agreement. In these situations, the employee expressly waives any right to relocation expenses. If the employee chooses to separate instead of accepting the directed reassignment, the employee acknowledges that they are not entitled to any severance pay. (See Exhibit 1 – DETO Agreement).

5.6.10. Periodic Review and Termination of the DETO Agreement

Component DAOs must review DETO agreements every six months to ensure agency duties are being fully performed and agency security guidelines are being followed. DAOs must submit a new request to OIS every six months through the International Travel Device Request Process to ensure the continued appropriateness of systems access from the host location. DAOs may terminate DETO agreements at will at any time. DAOs (See Section 4.) should take into consideration the rules concerning payment of relocation expenses for changing the duty station as any changes initiated by the agency would be in the government's interest and at SSA's expense. See PPM Chapter S335_4, Section 5.2. Disciplinary action may result if the delegated official (See Section 4.) directs employees to return to the home component's normal official worksite, and they refuse.

Employees will keep DAOs informed and immediately notify them when their DETO will terminate based on corresponding military orders. When someone returns, a personnel action must be processed to return their duty station to the original worksite unless the component will reassign the employee to a new worksite. If the employee's spouse will be assigned to a different location than the original location upon return to the US, components should refer to the hardship reassignment process and consider placement options. Requests for personnel action processing and pay setting assistance should be directed to ^DCHR OOHRS.

5.7. Training and Travel

5.7.1. Training

All personnel preparing to enter a DETO arrangement will complete all required overseas personal security training and certify completion in their DETO agreement prior to their travel, including, when applicable, Foreign Affairs Counterterrorism Training (FACT) and the Counter Threat Awareness Training (CTAT) (previously High Threat Security Overseas Seminar (HTSOS)), in accordance with 13 FAM 301.4-2 and 13 FAM 301.4-3. SSA components must pay for travel and registration for FACT training and provide duty time for completion of the training, since the training is a required part of the DETO telework agreement.

5.7.2. Travel

Employees traveling on official business away from the duty station reflected on their Form SF-50 as part of the DETO position's duties are eligible for TDY travel in the same manner as any other employee. Home components should, whenever possible, minimize TDY travel for employees under DETO agreements. Alternate communication technologies, such as video calls, conference calling, and other appropriate communication technologies, should be used to the greatest extent possible to minimize TDY travel.

Any travel expenses (e.g., per diem) must be documented in an official travel authorization issued by SSA.

Employees will not be guaranteed any travel expenses or trips home during the course of the DETO agreement.

5.8. Workers' Compensation

Employees under DETO agreements may be eligible for Workers' Compensation benefits for disability or death resulting from injury sustained in the performance of duty under the U.S. Department of Labor's Office of Workers' Compensation Programs (OWCP) when qualifying criteria are met under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA). Please see PPM S810_1 and S810_2 for more information on injury, illness, or death of employees at work.

5.9. Costs

The DETO agreement must clearly explain which party will be responsible for which costs during the assignment. Supervisors and employees will need to customize the agreement during the course of approval. Components will be responsible for any costs assumed by the agency from their internal budgets.

5.9.1. Unallowed Items

Generally, SSA will not reimburse employees for initial travel overseas or return at the end of an assignment, movement of goods or furniture, or other travel related costs since the travel is not pursuant to agency business. If the approved OADS is a residence, the employee will assume all costs for internet or phone service, utilities, furniture, and supplies.

5.9.2. Allowed Expenses

SSA will pay for the cost of FACT training, including travel to the FACT training location. If the approved OADS is arranged in a consulate, embassy, or other federal workspace, SSA will pay the costs associated with the workspace.

The DETO agreement should be adjusted to note any other special cost arrangements particular to the assignment.

6. SSA LABOR-MANAGEMENT AGREEMENTS

See the Office of Labor-Management and Employee Relations website for additional provisions applicable to bargaining unit employees.

Provisions in collective bargaining agreements (CBAs) pertain to the respective bargaining unit employees and govern over the provisions in the SSA Personnel Policy Manual (PPM), unless the provisions of the PPM implement a nondiscretionary mandate of Federal statute or law or a government-wide regulation that predated the execution of the CBA.

7. RECORDS RETENTION

Records must be kept according to the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) General Records Schedule 2.3. Employee Relations Records. This schedule can be accessed through the NARA web site.

Records must be kept according to the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) General Records Schedule 2.3. Employee Relations Records. This schedule can be accessed through the NARA web site.

8. QUESTIONS

Employees may direct questions to their supervisors. Supervisors may direct questions to their component Executive Officers (EO). Servicing Personnel Offices (SPO) and EOs may direct policy questions to SSA DETO Policy. SPOs and EOs may direct timekeeping questions to DCHR OPE Payroll.

Collective Bargaining Agreement(s) –
Telework Provisions

Article 41

Telework

Section 1—Purpose

The SSA Telework Program permits eligible AFGE bargaining unit employees to perform Agency-assigned work at a management-approved alternate duty station (ADS). The Agency may offer telework opportunities provided that the technological components and equipment are available and in place and that sensitive materials, including Personally Identifiable Information (PII), can be safeguarded. Management will make telework determinations consistent with the eligibility criteria contained herein, taking into account requirements of the position, performance of the employee, impact on organizational performance, level of service provided to the American public, and availability of appropriate technology.

Section 2—Definitions

- A. Alternate Duty Station (ADS) – a management-approved work site that is geographically convenient to the employee’s official duty station (ODS). Specifically:
 - 1. An employee’s residence as reflected in his/her Telework Program Request and Agreement; or
 - 2. Another SSA facility that may be closer to an employee’s home and where there is space to accommodate additional Agency employees.
- B. Official Duty Station (ODS) – the employee’s official Agency worksite.
- C. Telework Program Request – a written application for participation in the Telework Program in which the employee describes the general and specific work assignments that the employee proposes to perform at the ADS.
- D. Telework Program Request and Agreement – a written agreement contained in PPM S650_1 between the supervisor and the employee defining the employee’s obligations and responsibilities under the Telework Program. If the Agency changes the Telework Program Request and Agreement, the union will be given notice and an opportunity to bargain to the extent required by 5 USC 71.
- E. Portable Work - work normally performed at the employee’s ODS that can be effectively performed at the ADS. This work is part of the employee’s regular work assignment or approved special work assignments.
- F. Non-Portable Work – Assignments that are not portable include those assignments that require face-to-face customer contact or the employee’s physical presence at the ODS.

- G. Core Day(s)–Day(s) of the week not eligible for telework. Core days shall be limited to no more than two core days per week.
- H. Scheduled Telework - An employee with an approved telework agreement teleworks on a routine, regular, and recurring basis at ADS.
- I. Unscheduled Telework - An employee with an approved telework agreement is required to telework on a non-scheduled day at an ADS.
- J. Episodic - Employee may request to work on a temporary project on a case-by-case basis. The request is subject to management approval. It is anticipated that instances of episodic telework will be infrequent, based upon unique workload needs of the agency, and limited in duration.

Section 3—Eligibility

Each Deputy Commissioner will determine the number of scheduled telework days, if any, eligible positions, and percentage of employees permitted to telework.

In accordance with applicable law, each Deputy Commissioner will also determine whether teleworkers are eligible to work the following:

- Credit hours at the ADS
- A 5/4/9 or 4/40 work schedule
- Overtime at the ADS (unless required by FLSA, e.g. late interview or call)
- A part-time schedule
- At the ADS on a non-tour day

Participation will be voluntary and employees may withdraw from the program at any time with notice to their immediate supervisor.

To be eligible to participate in Telework, an employee must meet all of the following conditions:

- A. Not currently on an OPS or have been on an OPS in the 12 months preceding the date of the request to telework;
- B. Not currently on sick leave restriction or have been counseled for sick leave abuse or placed on sick leave restriction in the 12 months preceding the date of the request to telework;
- C. Not in a probationary period or formal training status. Employees who previously completed a probationary period will be considered on a case-by-case basis. Formal training does not include the normal progression of an employee through a career ladder. However, formal training may include periods when an employee needs close supervision or regular feedback from management and/or technical mentors that cannot effectively be accomplished at the ADS.

- D. Complete appropriate Agency Telework training;
- E. Sign and abide by the conditions of the Telework Program Request and Agreement.
Once an employee is approved for participation in the Telework Program, it is understood that management may change the general and specific work assignments set forth in the Telework Program Request and Agreement.
- F. Maintain at least an acceptable level of performance (e.g., successful contribution rating) or not be under review (e.g. increased service observations);
- G. Have sufficient portable work to be completed at the ADS;
- H. Not be excluded from participation by law, or by government-wide rule or regulation;
- I. Use approved appropriate technology;
- J. Not have been disciplined under Article 23 in the 12 months preceding the date of the request to telework or while on an approved telework agreement.

Section 4—ODS Shared Work Space

Employees who telework may be required to share space (e.g. shared cubicles, hoteling) with other employees.

Section 5—Telework Procedures

- A. Work performed under a Telework arrangement may be scheduled, unscheduled, or episodic.
- B. Requests to Participate in Telework

- 1. Scheduled Basis

Employees will request to participate in the Telework program by electronically submitting a Telework Program Request and Agreement consistent with PPM S650_1. Management will act on requests within ten (10) working days of the close of the request period for scheduled telework. If the number of eligible employees exceeds the coverage requirements on a specific day, approval will be made in SCD order starting with the most senior. If the participant's request is denied, management will annotate the reasons for the denial on the telework request form.

During the months of February and August of each year employees may request to participate in scheduled telework. Employees will not have to submit future requests once the original request is approved unless: a schedule change is requested by the employee during the February and August timeframes; the employee needs to revise the telework request and/or agreement; or the employee is otherwise directed by management.

2. Episodic

Employees may request at any time to participate in episodic telework to work on a specific project. Employees not previously approved to telework may request to do so by electronically submitting a Telework Program Request and Agreement consistent with PPM S650_1. Management will act on these requests no later than five (5) working days following receipt of the request. If the participant's request is denied, management will annotate the reasons for the denial on the telework request form. Depending on the nature of the project, employees may be approved to work episodic telework up to five days per week at the ADS.

3. Off Cycle Requests

Management will consider requests, submitted electronically, to change a scheduled telework day or participate in telework outside the normal request times. If approved, employees may begin participating in telework or working the newly approved schedule at the start of the next pay period.

C. Modifications

The parties recognize that Agency assigned functions, the nature of work to be performed and the types of positions can vary significantly from office to office. Management has sole discretion to change, reduce, suspend, or eliminate approved telework day(s) for any employee(s), office, component, or agency-wide due to operational needs. Management also has sole discretion to change, reduce, suspend, or eliminate approved telework day(s) for any employee due to the employee's performance.

Section 6—Hours of Work and Employee Availability

Teleworkers are in a duty status when teleworking and are expected to have the resources necessary to perform their jobs and concentrate on official duties without interruption. Employees may not use duty time for any purpose other than performing Agency-assigned work. Telework is not a substitute for dependent care.

Management is responsible for supervising work in accordance with the Fair Labor Standards Act. Article 10 of the SSA/AFGE National Agreement will apply to those employees who work at an ADS.

Management may require that employees provide electronic notification to their supervisor at the beginning and/or end of their workday.

Requests for leave will be handled in accordance with Article 31 of the SSA/AFGE National Agreement.

A. Office Closure/Early Dismissal/Late Opening

If there is a full day closure at the ODS, all employees with an approved Telework Program Request and Agreement are required to complete a full workday at the ADS, unless the employee requests and has leave approved.

In emergency, office closure, or other unique situations (e.g. facility issues, transit strike, dignitary visit, political convention, etc.), employees with approved telework agreements will telework regardless of whether the emergency, office closure, or unique situation occurs on a scheduled or unscheduled telework day, unless otherwise directed by management (e.g. deployed to another office, etc.). In these situations, employees may also request to use leave.

If there is an early dismissal, or late opening in the ODS, and the employee is scheduled to work at their residence as the ADS, the employee is required to complete a full workday, unless the employee requests and is approved for leave. Employees with approved telework agreements may be required to work a portion of their day at their ADS in instances of early dismissal unless the employee requests and is approved for leave.

If the ADS is in another SSA facility, the employee must abide by the office closure, early dismissal, or late opening rules for that location. The employee may be required to report to their ODS.

B. Alternate Duty Station Problem(s)

Employees will promptly inform management of any disruptions at the ADS, e.g. equipment failure, power outages, telecommunication difficulties etc. that impact the employee's ability to perform Agency assigned duties. In these situations, management may require the employee to report to the ODS or the employee may request leave. If the disruption (e.g. loss of electrical service or internet connectivity at the ADS) is through no fault of the Agency, the employee will be in a non-duty status from the time of the disruption to the end of the scheduled workday or until the employee reports to the ODS. The employee may request leave for the non-duty period. However, if the ODS is closed and the condition(s) creating the disruption make(s) the ADS unsafe, the employee may be granted leave in accordance with Article 31.

The parties recognize that once the ADS is approved, the employee will not change the ADS location without management approval.

C. Split Days at the ADS and ODS

Employees may only split a telework day between the ADS and the ODS at the direction of management.

D. Telephones

- When working at the ADS, an employee must be accessible by telephone to his or her supervisors, clients, colleagues, and external customers during working hours, exclusive of the lunch period and break periods.
- The employee's break and lunch periods will be the same as at the ODS.
- While at the ADS, the employee is responsible for retrieving, and responding in a timely manner, to voice mail left at both the ADS and the ODS.
- Employees will not be reimbursed for out-of-pocket expenses related to telephone calls.

E. Electronic Communications

- Employees must read and respond to emails as if they were at the ODS.
- Management may require that employees use instant messaging, video, or similar technology while working at the ADS.
- Employees should ensure that the instant message or similar technology accurately reflects their work status. Employees are expected to timely respond to instant messages from management.

F. Telework Suspensions

Employee(s) may be required to report to their official duty station for training, conferences, meetings or other operational needs. Employees may resume telework as soon as the suspension of telework is over.

G. Call Backs

Employees may be called back to the ODS when warranted. Employees are required to report to their ODS as soon as possible and no more than two hours after notification. Transportation between the ADS and the ODS is considered commuting and does not entitle the employee to reimbursement for official travel.

H. Replacement Time and In-Lieu-Of Days

If management temporarily suspends telework or calls an employee back to the ODS, the employee is not guaranteed "replacement time" or an "in lieu of" telework day. However, the employee's telework day may be temporarily switched to another day with management's approval.

Employees whose scheduled telework day is affected by a holiday or leave do not receive an in-lieu-of day.

I. To avoid lost productivity due to inclement weather, Management has discretion to approve employee requests to telework on an unscheduled day due to hazardous commuting conditions caused by inclement weather if the ODS remains open. Employees must call their supervisor or other designated management official by the end of the morning flexband to make the request. If the request is denied, then the employee will be expected to report to the ODS or may request leave consistent with Article 31. Based on reasonable weather forecasts, Management also has the discretion to offer optional telework in advance in situations in which the ODS may be open but commuting conditions are likely to be hazardous.

If management reasonably believes that a forecasted inclement weather event could cause the ODS to close for a workday or workdays, management may assign employees with approved telework agreements to work at their ADS on the workday(s) anticipated to be affected by inclement weather. Management will provide employees with timely advance notice of such assignment to allow employees to prepare. Employees will not lose their regularly scheduled telework days if assigned to weather-related telework on a non-scheduled day.

Section 7—Environment and Security

A. Work site

If the ADS location is in the employee's residence, the employee is responsible for maintaining the ADS work site in a manner that is conducive to business and is free of hazards. The ADS work site shall include furniture/equipment deemed necessary by management to perform the employee's duties at the ADS such as a desk, chair, surge protector, locking file cabinet or similar secure storage device, etc.. In addition, there must be proper lighting, power, other utilities, adequate environmental conditions, a readily accessible and working fire extinguisher, and a working smoke detector.

The employee is responsible for all operating costs, home maintenance and any other incidental costs (e.g., utilities, high-speed internet access, mortgage payments, rent, insurance, and taxes, etc.) associated with the use of the ADS. The Agency is not liable for damages to employee's personal or real property occurring during the course of performance of official duties except to the extent established by law.

The employee does not relinquish any entitlement to reimbursement for appropriately authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the employer as provided for by law and regulation.

B. Workers' Compensation

Teleworkers are covered under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA) and the Agency's policy and procedures concerning workers' compensation for injuries sustained while performing their official duties at the ADS. The employee will immediately notify his/her supervisor of any accident or injury occurring at the ADS in the course of performing official duties. FECA claims will be handled in accordance with Article 34 of the SSA/AFGE National Agreement.

C. Federal Tort Claims

For purposes of the Federal Tort Claims Act, the employee's ADS is treated as an extension of the official duty station.

D. Security/Safeguarding Work

Employees working at the ADS are bound by Agency policies and procedures on transporting, safeguarding, disclosure and destruction of Agency information, records and data. This includes policies on protecting Personally Identifiable Information (PII), the Federal Information Security Management Act, the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552 the regulations implementing the Privacy Act, including those at 20 C.F.R. Part 401; 42 U.S.C. § 1306; and all other statutes, regulations, and Agency policies pertaining to the disclosure, retention, and electronic transmission of official records and information.

E. Home Inspections

Management may inspect the ADS to ensure conformity with the conditions set forth in the Telework Program Request and Agreement. Management may inspect the ADS with twenty-four (24) hours advance notice during the teleworker's regular core hours. Management will not inspect non-work space in the ADS.

F. Agency Owned IT Equipment

The Agency will determine the appropriate IT equipment for teleworkers. SSA retains ownership and control of any SSA furnished hardware, software, and data and is responsible for maintaining, providing support and repairing the equipment; however, there will be no on site IT support provided in employees' homes. The employee is not responsible for costs related to maintenance of government owned equipment.

Employees have a continuing responsibility to safeguard Government property and are responsible for the care, security and effective utilization of the Government property they use. In accordance with Agency policy, employees may be required to reimburse the Agency for failure to exercise reasonable care of Government property. Failure to exercise these responsibilities may result in termination from telework in accordance with Section 10 of this Article.

Management may require that employees working at an approved ADS obtain (at their own expense) high-speed/broadband internet access sufficient to support the accomplishment of the employee's assigned duties.

Section 8—Accountability and Evaluation of Work

Management will evaluate work performed at the ADS in accordance with the Telework Program Request and Agreement and in accordance with Article 21 of the SSA/AFGE National Agreement.

Management may require employees on telework to submit a daily accounting of the work performed at the ADS. The format and required content will be determined by management.

Section 9—Employee Conduct at the ADS

All laws, government-wide rules, government-wide regulations, and Agency policies governing employee conduct at the ODS continue to apply at the ADS including, but not limited to, the Privacy Act and the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees in the Executive Branch.

Section 10—Termination from the Telework Program

Employees may voluntarily terminate their participation in the Telework program at any time by notification to their supervisor and may reapply at the next application period.

Management retains the right to terminate an employee's participation in the Telework Program if:

- a. The employee no longer meets one or more of the eligibility requirements contained in Section 3; or
- b. The employee fails to comply with any of the conditions set forth in the Telework Program Request and Agreement; or
- c. The employee fails to comply with the provisions of this article; or
- d. There is a diminishment in the employee's performance.

Management will normally counsel employees about specific problems, including a diminishment in performance, before removing an employee from the Telework Program, except in the case of serious violations. When an employee's participation in the Telework Program is terminated, the employee will be notified in writing of the reason for termination and the effective date of the termination. Management will consider individual circumstances when determining the effective date of removal from the program. An employee, who has been removed from the Telework Program may reapply for Telework at the first application cycle following a 1-year termination period, unless otherwise prohibited by law, rule, or government-wide regulation.

If a disciplinary action is reversed, the employee will normally resume telework at the beginning of the first pay period following the reversal as long as the employee meets the eligibility requirements.

Section 11. AFGE Notification

Should the Agency modify, suspend, or terminate all or a significant part of its telework program, appropriate notice will be provided to the Union.

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING
EPISODIC TELEWORK and SPLIT DAYS

This Memorandum of Understanding (“MOU”) is made by and between the American Federation of Government Employees SSA General Committee (“Union” or “AFGE”) and the Social Security Administration (“SSA” or “Agency”), jointly the “Parties,” regarding episodic telework and split days between the official duty station (“ODS”) and the alternate duty station (“ADS”). By entering into this MOU, neither party waives any rights under 5 U.S.C. 71 or the current SSA-AFGE National Agreement (“National Agreement”). This MOU will be in force through the life of the extended 2019 SSA-AFGE National Agreement.

1. Instead of the existing language in Article 41, Section 2.J of the National Agreement, the parties agree to abide by the following:

“Employees may request to telework on a temporary basis for projects, or on routine workloads if due to personal circumstances, on a case-by-case basis. The request is subject to management approval. Assuming all eligibility criteria are met, denials will only be for bona fide operational needs. It is anticipated that instances of episodic telework will be infrequent, based upon unique workload needs of the agency or due to the personal circumstances of the requesting employee, and limited in duration. Management will provide the employee with a specific reason for any denied request in writing.”

2. Instead of the existing language in Article 41, Section 5.B.2 of the National Agreement, the parties agree to abide by the following:

“Employees may request at any time to participate in episodic telework as described in Section 2. Employees not previously approved to telework may request to do so by electronically submitting a Telework Program Request and Agreement consistent with PPM S650_1. Management will act on these requests no later than five (5) working days following receipt of the request. If the participant’s request is denied, management will annotate the specific reasons for the denial on the telework request form. Depending on the nature of the assignment and employees’ personal circumstances, employees may be approved to work episodic telework up to five days per week at the ADS.”

3. Instead of the existing language in Article 41, Section 6.C of the National Agreement, the parties agree to abide by the following:

“Employees may split a workday between the ADS and the ODS with the approval or at the direction of management. Upon request, management will explain to employees the basis for denying their request(s) to split a workday.

When employees request to split a workday between the ADS and the ODS, the commute between the ADS and ODS is normal commute time (i.e., the employee is not on duty time). If an employee is directed to split a workday by management, the commute between locations will be duty time.”

4. This MOU will be effective upon completion of agency head review as set forth in 5 U.S.C. § 7114(c).

ARTICLE 15

TELEWORK

Section 1 - Purpose

The purpose of this Article is to establish a uniform Telework Program that permits Judges to perform work at an alternate duty station (ADS) other than from the Agency official duty station (ODS). This Telework Program replaces all other telework programs instituted by the Agency with respect to bargaining unit Judges.

Section 2 - Definitions

- A. Official Duty Station (ODS) - the official worksite of the Judge for purposes of pay in accordance with 5 CFR § 531.605(d). For the purposes of this Article, the ODS includes any remote hearing site.
- B. Alternate Duty Station (ADS) - An approved work location other than the Judge's ODS.
 - 1. A Judge is entitled to have a primary ADS and a secondary ADS. A Judge shall notify the Agency if the Judge is teleworking at the secondary ADS. A Judge shall notify the Agency in advance of any changes to a primary or secondary ADS and complete a new Telework Program Agreement.
 - 2. A Judge also may request a temporary ADS with Agency approval. The appropriate management official (e.g., Hearing Office Chief Administrative Law Judge (HOCALJ) or Acting HOCALJ) shall issue a written decision on any requests for a temporary ADS within five working days, or the Judge may elevate the request to the Judge's Regional Chief Administrative Law Judge (RCALJ) for a prompt decision within five working days. If the RCALJ does not provide a written decision within five working days, the Judge may elevate the request to the Chief Administrative Law Judge (CALJ). An approval for a temporary ADS shall not be unreasonably withheld. Any denial of a temporary ADS must specifically identify the reason(s) for the denial. A Judge shall be given the opportunity to address any deficiencies identified in the denial.
 - 3. A Judge's ADS is not restricted by its distance from the ODS. The Agency is not responsible for any per diem or travel costs between a Judge's ADS and ODS (except transit subsidies and travel to remote hearing sites as authorized by Article 19).
 - 4. An ADS is not a remote hearing site for the purpose of this Article.
- C. Telework Program Request and Agreement - A written application for participation in the Telework Program as reflected in Appendix B.
- D. Remote Hearing - A type of hearing (held by technology, including but not limited to online video or telephone) that a Judge can conduct from the Judge's ADS.

- E. Unscheduled Telework - The Agency has the discretion to authorize “unscheduled telework” due to inclement weather or other emergencies consistent with Article 18.

Section 3 - Eligibility and Participation in Telework

All bargaining unit Judges (including part-time Judges) are eligible to participate in telework. A Judge with an approved telework agreement shall be provided ODS office space consistent with Article 29. To telework, a Judge must do the following:

- A. Sign and abide by the Agency approved Telework Program Agreement (Appendix B);
- B. Complete Agency telework training, consistent with 5 U.S.C. § 6503;
- C. Use Agency approved technology to perform the work (except for activities permitted by Article 9);
- D. Not be disciplined for misconduct that has a direct nexus to telework (i.e., but for the Judge teleworking, the misconduct could not have occurred) within the last six months; and,
- E. Not be subject to a limiting condition under the Telework Enhancement Act of 2010, 5 U.S.C. § 6502(a)(2), specifically:
 - 1. Not have been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five days in any calendar year; or
 - 2. Not have been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties.

Section 4 - Agency Action Upon Request to Telework

- A. The appropriate management official shall approve a Judge’s request to participate in telework upon satisfaction of the eligibility criteria in Section 3 of this Article. Any denial of telework must be done in writing and specifically identify the reason(s) for the denial. A Judge shall be given the opportunity to address any deficiencies identified in the denial.
- B. Within 30 days of the implementation of this Agreement, all Judges who wish to telework shall conform with the requirements of this Article. During this 30-day period, Judges shall continue to telework consistent with existing telework agreements.
- C. The appropriate management official shall issue a written decision on any request for telework within five working days, or the Judge may elevate the request to the Judge’s RCALJ for prompt decision within five working days. If the RCALJ does not provide a written decision within five working days, the Judge may elevate the request to the CALJ.

- D. A Judge's telework agreement shall be considered ongoing. A Judge who has been approved to telework under this Article shall not be required to reapply for telework, except as otherwise specified in this Article.
- E. A Judge may elect to stop teleworking at any time upon written notification to the Judge's HOCALJ or Acting HOCALJ. If the Judge wishes to resume teleworking, the Judge must follow the requirements of this Article for applying for telework.

Section 5 - Reporting to the ODS

- A. A Judge shall report to the ODS to hold hearings that cannot be conducted at an ADS. A Judge shall also report to the ODS to attend meetings and trainings that require the Judge to be at the ODS (unless in a hearing or on leave).
- B. A Judge may voluntarily report to the ODS to conduct other hearings, including remote hearings, at the Judge's discretion. A Judge shall typically hold such hearings from the Judge's office so long as the office is fully equipped for such hearings. If the Judge's office is not suitable for holding remote hearings, or the Judge wishes to use other space, the Judge may coordinate with management on the use of an available hearing room or other suitable space for conducting a remote hearing.
- C. A Judge may voluntarily report to the ODS on non-hearing days at the Judge's discretion, unless a local evacuation order necessitates remote work, or the office is closed for other reasons.
- D. A Judge who reports to the ODS can, at the Judge's discretion, work the entire day at the ODS or choose to complete the remainder of the workday at an ADS. Travel time between the ODS and an ADS is non-duty time.
- E. If a Judge is not scheduled to report to the ODS at least twice per pay period on a regular and recurring basis, the Judge's locality pay may be affected consistent with Office of Personnel Management (OPM) guidance and applicable regulations. If the Judge's locality pay must be adjusted, it will be adjusted in accordance with the location of the Judge's primary ADS.
- F. Judges shall hold in-person hearings at the Judge's ODS as part of the Judge's normal hearing schedule. A Judge traveling to a remote hearing site shall be reimbursed travel and per diem in accordance with the Federal Travel Regulation (FTR).
- G. A Judge shall report to the ODS to resolve ID badge/credential or technology issues that cannot be resolved remotely. The Judge and local management team shall arrange a specific date and time for the Judge to come to the ODS, including allowing the Judge sufficient time to make travel arrangements if needed. To the extent practicable, any credential issues shall be addressed on days when the Judge is scheduled to be at the ODS to conduct hearings.

1. A Judge shall promptly inform the HOCALJ or designee whenever problems arise that adversely affect the Judge's ability to perform work at the ADS, such as power outages, internet interruptions, and similar events.
2. For a Judge working from an ADS within two hours of the ODS, the travel time to the ODS to resolve these issues shall be considered duty time.
3. For a Judge working from an ADS that is more than two hours from the ODS, the travel time to the ODS to resolve these issues is not duty time. The Judge may be required to take leave during the time the Judge is unable to work prior to reporting to the ODS.
4. The expectation in these situations is that the Judge shall report to the Judge's ODS to have these issues resolved. If the Judge's ADS is closer to an Agency facility other than the Judge's ODS, at the Agency's sole discretion, the Judge may be directed to report to an alternate Agency facility to resolve these issues, which shall be on duty time, if the alternate Agency facility is within two hours from the ODS.

Section 6 - Performing Telework at an ADS

- A. A Judge may not use privately-owned Information Technology (IT) devices and equipment for telework except those on the approved Agency list or for activities permitted by Article 9.
- B. Agency Owned IT Equipment
 1. For Judges who have an approved telework agreement, the Agency shall provide an additional mouse, headset, and keyboard for use at an ADS. The Agency shall also provide a USB hub in addition to the ODS docking station. A Judge may choose to use the USB hub or the docking station either at an ADS or the ODS.
 2. A Judge may remove one or both of the Judge's monitors from the ODS for use at an ADS.
 3. A Judge is responsible for transporting equipment from the ODS to an ADS. However, a Judge with legitimate transportation needs (e.g., the Judge uses public transportation or has mobility restrictions) may request that the Agency ship all equipment referenced in this Section to the Judge's ADS at the Agency's expense.
 4. All equipment shall be replaced in accordance with the Agency's equipment refreshment schedule.
 5. The Agency retains ownership and control of any Agency furnished hardware, software, and data, and is responsible for maintaining, providing support, and repairing the equipment whether used in an Agency office environment or the Judge's ADS(s).

6. When used appropriately, telework, along with other workplace flexibilities, can facilitate a Judge's ability to manage both work and dependent care. Telework is not meant to be a substitute for dependent care or for leave to care for family members. A Judge may not telework with the intent of or for the sole purpose of meeting dependent care responsibilities while performing official duties. When a Judge is teleworking and a dependent in the house requires care, the Judge must request personal leave, leave without pay (LWOP), or flex-out for time spent providing care. While performing official duties, a teleworking Judge is expected to arrange for dependent care just as if working at an Agency worksite; however, telework may be used as part of a more flexible work arrangement consistent with Article 14.

C. Support for Agency Owned Devices

1. Teleworking Judges shall use Agency configured laptops or other IT devices. The Agency shall provide service, maintenance, and installation of up-to-date anti-virus software and other software updates.
2. Agency IT support personnel shall resolve IT support problems by telephone or remote control of the Agency provided device. When an issue cannot be resolved remotely, the Agency may direct the Judge to bring Agency provided devices to the ODS or other Agency facility consistent with Section 5 of this Article.
3. There shall be no onsite IT support provided at an ADS.

D. Working Area

1. A teleworking Judge is required to have the following at any ADS:
 - a. A broadband connection (high speed internet), or mobile hotspot;
 - b. A surge protector, a working smoke detector, and access to a working fire extinguisher.
2. The designated work area/work site at an ADS must be adequate for the performance of the Judge's official duties.

E. Working Hours

1. Duty hours and leave provisions are equally applicable at the ADS and the ODS, as outlined in Articles 14 and 18. A Judge can earn credit hours and religious compensatory time at an ADS consistent with Article 14.

2. A Judge who reports to the ODS can, at the Judge's own discretion, work the entire day at the worksite or choose to complete the remainder of the workday at the Judge's ADS. Travel time between the ODS and the ADS is non-duty time unless the Judge is directed to work at the ADS (e.g., the hearing office must close) or there is no Judge-available space at the ODS for the Judge to work.
 3. When working at the ADS, Judges must be reasonably accessible and responsive to Agency communication from hearing office management and support staff, and all other Agency employees.
- F. Accountability: The Telework Act states that the Agency's telework program shall ensure that telework does not diminish Judges' performance or Agency operations.
- G. Costs: A Judge is responsible for all operating costs, home maintenance and any other incidental costs (e.g., utilities, etc.) associated with the use of an ADS except as outlined in Subsection B above.

Section 7 - Temporary Telework for Medical Reasons

The Agency may authorize temporary telework for medical reasons for Judges, who because of medical reasons certified by a health care provider, have temporary difficulty commuting to conduct hearings or perform other duties at the ODS but are able to work at an ADS. Requests for temporary telework for medical reasons must be submitted in writing and include a statement of the reason for the Judge working at an ADS including an explanation of the medical condition or disability which makes it difficult for the Judge to commute to work.

Section 8 - Suspending Telework

- A. The Agency may suspend telework or call back an individual Judge or group of Judges when work that must be performed by the Judge(s) cannot be done at an ADS.
- B. A Judge can be suspended from telework due to misconduct that has a direct nexus to telework (i.e., but for the Judge teleworking, the misconduct could not have occurred). The suspension shall be proportionate to the conduct and not to exceed six months unless a petition for removal is pending with the Merit Systems Protection Board (MSPB).
- C. A Judge who is suspended from telework shall be required to report to the ODS for all workdays and shall be provided non-teleworking Judge office space.
- D. After a period of telework suspension, a Judge must complete a new Telework Program Agreement pursuant to Section 3.

ARTICLE 17 Telework

Section 1 Purpose

The OHO Telework Program permits eligible NTEU bargaining unit employees to perform Agency assigned work or other Agency approved activities at a management-approved alternate duty station (ADS). The Agency is committed to offering telework opportunities provided that the technological components and equipment are available and in place and that sensitive materials, including Personally Identifiable Information (PII), can be safeguarded. Management will make telework determinations consistent with the eligibility criteria contained in this Article, taking into account requirements of the position, performance of the employee, impact on organizational performance, and availability of appropriate technology. The agency supports the broadest use of telework by eligible agency employees to the extent that it maintains or enhances employee performance, cost savings and agency operations.

The parties agree that telework requires a collaborative effort between management and employees and that the goals of telework include fostering a positive work culture and environment that will assist OHO in maintaining a productive and high quality workforce. This program may serve as a recruitment and retention tool and allows participants the opportunity to balance work and home life demands, reduce commuting problems and contribute to a cleaner environment, improve productivity and improve employee morale.

Section 2 Definitions

A. Alternate Duty Station (ADS) – an employee requested and management-approved work site that is geographically convenient to the employee’s official duty station (ODS). Specifically:

1. An employee’s residence as reflected in his/her Telework Program Request and Agreement; or
2. Another SSA facility or office that may be closer to an employee’s home and where there is space to accommodate additional agency employees.

Once the ADS is approved, the employee may only change the location of the ADS with prior management approval.

B. Official Duty Station (ODS) – the employee’s official agency worksite.

C. Telework Program Request – a written application for participation in the Telework Program in which the employee describes the general and specific work assignments that the employee proposes to perform at the ADS.

- D. Telework Program Request and Agreement – a written agreement between the supervisor and the employee defining the employee’s obligations and responsibilities under the Telework Program.
- E. Portable Work - work normally performed at the employee’s ODS that can be effectively performed at the ADS. This work is part of the employee’s regular work assignment or approved special work assignments.
- F. Non Portable Work – Assignments that are not portable include those assignments that require face-to-face customer contact or the employee’s physical presence at the ODS.
- G. Core Day(s)–Day(s) of the week not eligible for telework. Core days shall be limited to no more than one core day per week.
- H. Scheduled Telework – An employee with an approved telework agreement teleworks on a routine, regular, and recurring basis at the ADS.
- I. Unscheduled Telework - An employee with an approved telework agreement is required to telework on a non-scheduled telework day at an ADS. Employee-initiated telework is not permitted.
- J. Episodic Telework - The employee teleworks on an occasional irregular basis at an ADS. Episodic telework may include a temporary project, approved on a case-by-case basis, where the employee may work less than a full day at the ADS.

Section 3 Eligibility

Participation in telework will be voluntary and employees may withdraw at any time with advance notice to their immediate supervisor.

To be eligible to participate in Telework, an employee must meet all of the following conditions:

- A. Not be currently on an Opportunity to Perform Successfully (OPS) plan;
- B. Not currently be on sick leave restriction;
- C. Not be in a probationary period, first year of a 2-year trial work period, or formal training status. However, employees in formal training or in a development program will be considered on a case-by-case basis. Formal training status does not include the normal progression of an employee through a career ladder. However, formal training status may include periods when an employee needs close supervision or regular feedback from management and/or technical mentors that cannot effectively be accomplished at the ADS;

- D. Not have been officially disciplined for violations of subpart G of the Standards of Ethical Conduct For Employees of the Executive Branch for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography on a Federal government computer or while performing official government duties, or not have been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for five days in any calendar year;
- E. Complete appropriate agency Telework training;
- F. Is willing to sign and abide by the conditions of the Flexiplace Telework Program Agreement (Appendix 1) and the self-certification safety checklist (Appendix 2). Once an employee is approved for participation in the Telework Program, it is understood that the general and specific work assignments set forth in the Telework Program Agreement may be changed;
- G. Maintain at least an acceptable level of performance (e.g., successful contribution rating);
- H. Has sufficient portable work to be completed at the ADS;
- I. Not be excluded from participation by law, or by government-wide rule or regulation;
- J. Use approved appropriate technology; and
- K. Not have been disciplined within the preceding 12 months for misconduct that has a nexus to Telework. This 12-month period does not apply to employees who were terminated from Telework in accordance with Section 10 of this Article.

Section 4 ODS Shared Work Space

- A. Employees who telework two (2) or less days per week will keep their workstation.
- B. Employees who telework more than two (2) days per week may be required to hotel. Hoteling means employees will select their workspace each day on a first-come, first-served, basis when working at the ODS.
- C. Employees shall be given the opportunity to reduce their telework days to two (2) or less days per week if they wish to keep their designated workspace.
- D. Management will ensure a workspace at the ODS includes a dock for the agency computer, access to an agency phone, or ability to use softphones (or successor technology), and locked storage. In hearing offices where private offices have been and continue to be assigned to bargaining unit employees, management will allow two (2), three (3), or four (4) professional bargaining unit employees (including paralegal specialists) who telework more than two (2) days per week to share a private office when working at the ODS.

- E. Employees who are not required to share space may elect to move to an unoccupied, comparable workspace prior to management designating workspaces that will be used for sharing. Conflicts will be resolved by seniority order according to employee time in their ODS.
- F. Employees may retain their chairs when sharing space.
- G. An employee whose workspace was modified or adjusted due to an approved reasonable accommodation request will not be required to share space unless management can reasonably accommodate the employee in a comparable shared workspace to perform his/her assigned duties.
- H. If an employee is required to report to the ODS, e.g. training, meeting, etc., and management is unable to provide the employee with workspace to use for the remainder of the day, the employee may return to the ADS to complete his/her workday. The employee will receive duty time to commute to the ADS for this purpose.

Section 5 Telework Procedures

- A. Work performed under a Telework arrangement may be scheduled, unscheduled, or episodic.
- B. Requests to Participate in Telework

1. Scheduled Basis

Employees may request to participate in Telework during the months of February and August by electronically submitting a Telework Program Request and Self-Certification. Management will act on requests within ten (10) working days of the close of the request period for scheduled telework. If the participant's request is denied, management will annotate the reasons for the denial on the telework request form.

Employees will not have to submit future requests once the original request is approved unless a schedule change is requested by the employee during the February and August timeframes; the employee needs to revise the telework request and/or agreement; or the employee is otherwise directed by management. Approving officials will re-evaluate existing schedules during the relevant six-month request period, as appropriate.

2. Episodic Basis

Employees may request at any time to participate in episodic telework to work on a specific project. Employees not previously approved to telework may request to do so by electronically submitting a Telework Program Agreement and a Telework

Program Request and Safety Self-Certification (Exhibits 1 and 2). Management will act on these requests no later than five (5) working days following receipt of the request. If the participant's request is denied, management will annotate the reasons for the denial on the telework request form. Depending on the nature of the project, employees may be approved to work episodic telework up to five days per week at the ADS.

3. Emergencies and Other Requests

- A. Employees with a bona fide emergency may request participation in scheduled telework or a change in his/her telework day(s) outside the normal request times. If approved, employees may begin participating in telework or working the newly approved schedule at the start of the next pay period.
- B. Management will consider non-emergency requests submitted electronically to change a scheduled telework day or participate in telework outside the normal request times. If approved, employees may begin participating in telework or working the newly approved schedule at the start of the next pay period.

C. Staff Coverage

If the number of eligible employees requesting to Telework on a given workday exceeds the coverage requirements, approval will be made based on seniority order according to employee time in their ODS.

If coverage problems necessitate suspending scheduled telework agreements, it will be accomplished in inverse seniority order according to employee time in their ODS. The local representative will be notified as soon as practical regarding the suspension.

Section 6 Hours of Work and Employee Availability

Teleworkers are in a duty status when teleworking and are expected to have the resources necessary to perform their jobs and concentrate on official duties without interruption. Employees may not use duty time for any purpose other than performing Agency-assigned work. Union officials may use official time at the ADS in accordance with Article 8.

Management is responsible for supervising work in accordance with the Fair Labor Standards Act. Article 15 of the SSA-NTEU National Agreement will apply to those employees who work at an ADS. Management may require that employees provide electronic notification to their supervisor at the beginning and/or end of their workday.

With prior management approval, employees with an approved telework agreement may earn credit hours and work daily overtime at the ADS if the employee was already working at the ADS when the period of credit or overtime begins. With prior management approval, employees with an approved telework agreement may earn Saturday credit hours and work weekend overtime at the ADS.

Requests for leave will be handled in accordance with Article 16 of the SSA-NTEU National Agreement.

A. Office Closure/Early Dismissal/Late Opening

If there is a full day closure at the ODS, all employees with an approved Telework Program and Request Agreement are required to complete a full workday at the ADS, unless the employee requests and is approved for leave. If the employee is not Telework ready for all or part of the workday when a weather or safety-related condition forces the closure of the ODS, the employee may be granted an equivalent amount of weather and safety leave on a case by case basis.

In emergency, safety-related situations resulting in office closures, employees with approved telework agreements will telework regardless of whether the emergency, office closure occurs on a scheduled or unscheduled telework day, unless otherwise directed by management (e.g. deployed to another office, etc.). In these situations, employees may also request to use leave. Employees required to travel to their approved telework location during regular duty hours will be granted weather and safety leave for the time required to travel home.

If there is an early dismissal, or late opening at the ODS, and the employee is scheduled to work at their residence as the ADS, the employee is required to complete a full workday, unless the employee requests and is approved for leave. Employees with approved telework agreements on a non-scheduled telework day may be required to work all or a portion of their day at their ADS in instances of early dismissal unless the employee requests and is approved for leave.

If the ADS is another SSA facility, the employee must abide by the office closure, early dismissal, or late opening rules for that location. The employee may be required to report to their ODS.

B. Alternate Duty Station Problem(s)

Employees will promptly inform management of any disruptions at the ADS, e.g. equipment failure, power outages, telecommunication difficulties, etc. that impact the employee's ability to perform OHO assigned duties. In these situations, management may require the employee to report to the ODS or the employee may request leave. If directed to travel during regular duty hours, he/she may request administrative time (duty time) to do so.

When a teleworking employee experiences a weather or other safety-related condition that prevents him/ her from safely working at his/her ADS, the employee must contact his/her supervisor as soon as practicable. The employee may be directed to travel to the employee's ODS – provided he/she may safely travel under the circumstances – to complete his/her workday. If directed to travel during regular duty hours, he/she will receive administrative time (duty time) to do so. If the employee is not directed to report to his/her regular worksite, the employee will be granted weather and safety leave. If the ODS is closed and the condition(s) creating the disruption make(s) the ADS unsafe, the employee may be granted weather and safety leave in accordance with Article 16.

C. Split Days at the ADS and ODS

Employees may not split a regularly scheduled telework day between the ADS and the ODS, unless the employee is required to report to the ODS or in accordance with the provisions in Section 4H.

D. Telephones

1. When working at the ADS, an employee must be accessible by telephone to his or her supervisors, clients, colleagues, and external customers during working hours, exclusive of the lunch period and break periods. Employees are only required to provide a personal phone number to their supervisory chain.
2. The employee's break and lunch periods will be defined in the employee's Telework Program Agreement.
3. While at the ADS, the employee is responsible for retrieving, and responding in a timely manner to voice mail left at both the ADS and the ODS.
4. Employees will not be reimbursed for any out-of-pocket expenses related to telephone calls.

E. Additional Communication Methods

Employees must read and respond to emails as if they were at the ODS.

Management may require that employees be signed into Skype or similar technology while working at the ADS. An employee's Skype indicator (or similar technology) should accurately reflect their work status.

Management may also require that employees be available via video while working at the ADS. The Agency agrees that employees will receive reasonable advance notice, normally 30 minutes, of mandatory video calls.

F. Telework Modifications/Suspensions

Reasonable advance notice, normally 24 hours if practicable, will be provided when employee(s) may be required to report to their official duty station for situations such as previously scheduled training, conferences, meetings or to perform work on a short-term basis that cannot otherwise be performed at the ADS or accomplished by telephone or other reasonable alternative methods.

The Agency may temporarily suspend or modify Telework arrangements for entire offices, groups, or classification of employees based on legitimate, demonstrated operational needs. The Agency agrees to provide at least two (2) weeks of advance notice for large scale suspensions of Telework when possible. Examples for a temporary suspension or modification of a Telework arrangement would include:

- A. The employees who otherwise have portable duties are required to provide on-site office coverage;
- B. The employees work is no longer portable;
- C. The employees portable work has been diminished to the extent that they no longer have enough portable work to perform at the ADS. The Agency will consider reducing Telework days, instead of eliminating it all together, when the portable work has been reduced but not eliminated.

Employees may resume telework as soon as the suspension is over.

Employees may voluntarily suspend telework by notifying their supervisor in advance. Employees may resume their telework schedule by notifying their supervisor.

G. Call Backs

Employees may be called back to the ODS in the event work issues arise which cannot be performed at the ADS or accomplished by telephone or other reasonable alternative methods. Employees are required to report to their ODS as soon as possible and no more than two hours after notification. This time is considered duty time.

Transportation between the ADS and the ODS does not entitle the employee to reimbursement for official travel.

H. In-Lieu of Days

If management temporarily suspends telework or calls an employee back to the ODS, the employee is not guaranteed an "in-lieu of" telework day. However, employees will be allowed to schedule an in-lieu of telework day by the end of the following workweek. If an employee is not able to schedule the in-lieu of day by the end of the following workweek due to a holiday or the employee's leave, the employee forfeits the in-lieu of day.

Employees are also not guaranteed replacement time if a telework day falls on a holiday. However, the employee's telework day may be temporarily switched to another day with management's approval.

Section 7 Environment and Security

A. Work site

If the ADS location is in the employee's residence, the employee is responsible for maintaining the ADS work site in a manner that is conducive to business and is free of hazards. The ADS work site shall include furniture/equipment deemed necessary by management to perform the employee's duties at the ADS such as a desk, chair, surge protector, locking file cabinet or similar secure storage device, etc. In addition, there must be proper lighting, power, other utilities, adequate environmental conditions, a readily accessible and working fire extinguisher, and a working smoke detector.

The employee is responsible for all operating costs, home maintenance and any other incidental costs (e.g., utilities, high-speed internet access, mortgage payments, rent, insurance, and taxes, etc.) associated with the use of the ADS. The OHO is not liable for damages to employee's personal or real property occurring during the course of performance of official duties except to the extent established by law.

The employee does not relinquish any entitlement to reimbursement for appropriately authorized expenses incurred while conducting business for the Agency as provided for by law and regulation.

B. Workers' Compensation

Teleworkers are covered under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act (FECA) and the Agency's policy and procedures concerning workers' compensation for injuries sustained while performing their official duties at the ADS. The employee will immediately notify his/her supervisor of any accident or injury occurring at the ADS in the course of performing official duties.

C. Federal Tort Claims

For purposes of the Federal Tort Claims Act, the employee's ADS is treated as an extension of the official duty station.

D. Security/Safeguarding Work

Employees working at the ADS are bound by agency policies and procedures on transporting, safeguarding, disclosure and destruction of Agency information, records and data. This includes policies on protecting Personally Identifiable Information (PII), the Federal Information Security Management Act, the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552 the regulations implementing the Privacy Act, including those at 20 C.F.R. Part 401; 42 U.S.C. § 1306; and all other statutes, regulations, and Agency policies pertaining to the disclosure, retention, and electronic transmission of official records and information.

E. Home Inspections

Management may inspect the ADS prior to approving telework to ensure conformity with the conditions set forth in the Telework Program Request and Agreement.

Management may inspect the ADS with twenty-four (24) hours advance notice during the teleworker's regular core hours. Management will not inspect non-work space in the ADS. The employee may arrange for an NTEU representative to accompany the supervisor at the inspection.

F. Agency Owned IT Equipment

Subject to the availability of resources, the Agency will provide appropriate IT equipment for teleworkers. SSA retains ownership and control of any SSA furnished hardware, software, and data and is responsible for maintaining, providing support and repairing the equipment; however, there will be no on site IT support provided in employees' homes. The employee is not responsible for costs related to maintenance of government owned equipment.

Employees have a continuing responsibility to safeguard Government property and are responsible for the care, security and effective utilization of the Government property they use.

Management may require that employees working at an approved ADS obtain (at their own expense) high-speed/broadband internet access sufficient to support the accomplishment of the employee's assigned duties.

Section 8 Accountability and Evaluation of Work

Management will evaluate work performed at the ADS in accordance with the Telework Program and Request Agreement and in accordance with Article 21 of the 2014 SSA-NTEU National Agreement. Employees are expected to complete their official duties at the ADS in the same manner as at the ODS.

Management may require employees on telework to account for their work performed at the ADS. The format and required content will be will be determined by management.

Section 9 Employee Conduct at the ADS

All laws, government- wide rules, government- wide regulations, and Agency policies governing employee conduct at the ODS continue to apply at the ADS including, but not limited to, the Privacy Act and the Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees in the Executive Branch.

Section 10 Termination from the Telework Program

Employees may voluntarily terminate their participation in the Telework program at any time by notification to their supervisor and may reapply at the next application period.

Management retains the right to terminate an employee's participation in the Telework Program if:

1. The employee no longer meets one or more of the eligibility requirements contained in Section 3; or
2. The employee fails to comply with any of the conditions set forth in the Telework Program and Request Agreement; or
3. The employee fails to comply with the provisions of this article; or
4. There is a consistent diminishment in the employee's performance at the ADS in comparison to performance at the ODS.

Management will normally counsel employees about specific problems, including a diminishment in performance, before removing an employee from the Telework Program. When an employee's participation in the Telework Program is terminated, the employee will be notified in writing of the reason for termination and the effective date of the termination. Management will consider individual circumstances when determining the effective date of removal from the program.

An employee, who has been removed from the Telework Program, may reapply for Telework at the first application cycle following a 6-month termination period unless otherwise prohibited by law, rule, or government-wide regulation. However, employees who successfully complete an OPS may reapply for Telework immediately following the end of the 6-month termination period. Management will consider individual circumstances when considering the effective date of removal from the program.

If a disciplinary action is reversed, the employee will normally resume telework at the beginning of the first pay period following the reversal as long as the employee meets the eligibility requirements.

Employee's statement of proposed work assignments at ADS:

By initialing the boxes below, I certify that I understand each condition required to maintain eligibility in telework:

1. The location of the ADS cannot be changed without prior approval of management. I understand I may have only one ADS.
2. The days I telework cannot be changed without prior approval of management.
3. My hours of duty at the ADS will be the same as my Official Duty Station (ODS).
4. My meal break and rest breaks will be the same as my ODS.
5. I will report my time and attendance in accordance with agency policy and ODS procedures while working at the ADS.
6. I will request leave in accordance with agency policy and any pertinent negotiated agreements.
7. I understand I may be required to use instant messaging, video, softphone, and similar technology while working at the ADS and I will be accessible to supervisors, clients, colleagues, and external customers during working hours, excluding meal breaks and rest breaks. I will retrieve and respond, in a timely manner, to voice and email messages left at the ADS and ODS and ensure that the instant message or similar technology accurately reflects my work status.
8. I understand I may be required to provide my work telephone contact information in my email signature. I will, if determined necessary by management, enable a preprogrammed e-mail reply to be sent in response to all incoming e-mail at the ODS.

9. I will return to my ODS, as soon as possible and no more than two hours after notification, if management determines that work requirements require such action, or I will request appropriate leave. I will not split a telework day between my ADS and ODS unless directed by management.

10. I understand management temporarily may suspend telework when work requirements require such action for training, conferences, meetings, or other operational needs. If management temporarily suspends or alters telework days, in lieu of days will be handled in accordance with Article 17.

11. Pursuant to Article 17 and the Weather and Safety Leave policy in Personnel Policy Manual (PPM) Chapter S630_10, I understand the requirement to perform telework at my approved ADS on a day when the ODS closes due to a hazardous weather or safety event.

12. If my ADS location is my residence, I will maintain the ADS worksite in a manner that is conducive to business and is free of hazards. I will, at a minimum, have workspace that includes a desk; chair; surge protector; and locking file cabinet, locking desk drawer or similar secure storage area for official records and information. I must have and maintain adequate workspace, proper lighting, basic telephone service, power and other utilities, adequate environmental conditions, adequate security, a working smoke detector, and a readily accessible, working fire extinguisher.

13. I understand I am responsible for all operating costs, home maintenance, and any other incidental costs (e.g., utilities, high-speed internet access, mortgage payments, rent, insurance, and taxes).

14. I agree that the agency is not liable for damages to personal or real property occurring during the course of performance of official duties except to the extent established by law.

15. I understand and will follow all agency policies and procedures on transporting, safeguarding, disclosure, and destruction of Agency information, records, and data. This includes policies on protecting Personally Identifiable Information; the Federal Information Security Management Act; the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552, the regulations implementing the Privacy Act, including those at 20 C.F.R. Part 401; 42 U.S.C. § 1306; and all other statutes, regulations, and Agency policies pertaining to the disclosure, retention, and electronic transmission of official records and information.

16. I understand that management has the right to inspect my ADS prior to approving this telework agreement, in accordance with Agency policy and Article 17, to ensure conformity with the provisions set forth in the Telework Program Request and Agreement. Management may also inspect my ADS during core hours, with 24-hours' notice, after I begin teleworking. An employee may arrange for a NTEU representative to accompany the supervisor to the inspection.

17. I understand all laws, rules, regulations, and agency policies concerning conduct at the ODS remain in full force and effect at the ADS.

18. I will notify my supervisor immediately of any accident or injury that occurs to me at the ADS in the course of performing my official duties, and I will timely complete all forms required to process an initial claim under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act.

19. I understand that I will promptly inform management of any disruptions at the ADS, e.g., equipment failure, power outages, telecommunication difficulties, that impact my ability to perform agency assigned duties. I may be required to return to the ODS, or I may request leave.

20. I understand I am in duty status when teleworking. I will read and respond to emails and other forms of communication as if I were at the ODS. I will not use duty time for any purpose other than performing agency-assigned work. I will have resources necessary to perform my job duties and will concentrate on official duties without interruption. Telework is not a substitute for dependent care.

21. I understand I may be required to provide electronic notification to my supervisor at the beginning and/or end of my workday, and that I may be required to provide a written daily account of the work performed at my ADS. Management will determine the method of electronic notification and the format and required content of the written account.

22. Pursuant to Article 17 I understand that management may require employees who telework to share workspace (e.g., desk, cubicle, office) at the ODS.

23. I completed the mandatory agency approved telework training on _____.

I understand that I will not have to submit future requests once the original request is approved unless management initiates a required schedule change, I request a schedule change or a location change, or I change positions.

I understand that management may terminate my participation under the circumstances described in the telework policy or any applicable negotiated agreement. I may voluntarily terminate my participation in the telework program at any time.

I understand that if I do not report to my ODS at least twice per pay period on a regular and recurring basis, any locality pay may be affected.

I certify that I have read and I understand the eligibility conditions and requirements, employee responsibilities, the Telework Program Request and Agreement, and the provisions of the agency's policy (PPM S650_1) and any applicable negotiated agreement. I hereby certify that I will abide by all of these provisions while on telework and that failure to do so may result in my suspension or termination from telework.

Sidebar to Article 17 Telework

1. There will be no diminishment in the number of Telework days that employees represented by NTEU are currently working subject to the provisions of this Article.
2. The Parties agree there will be ongoing discussions and information sharing on telework issues such as expanding the number of telework days.

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING

TELEWORK ELIGIBILITY

This Memorandum of Understanding (“MOU”) is made by and between the American Federation of Government Employees SSA General Committee (“Union” or “AFGE”) and the Social Security Administration (“SSA” or “Agency”), jointly the “Parties,” regarding telework eligibility for AFGE bargaining unit employees at SSA that are in a probationary period or formal training status and the definition of the Alternate Duty Station (“ADS”). By entering into this MOU, neither party waives any rights under 5 U.S.C. 71 or the current SSA-AFGE National Agreement (“National Agreement”). This MOU will expire on October 25, 2029.

1. The Parties agree, consistent with the Parties’ experience with reentry telework, Deputy Commissioners are permitted to modify the eligibility criteria contained in Article 41, Section 3(C) of the National Agreement regarding any probationary employee or employee in a formal trainee status, where their training can be successfully completed remotely; and may modify the eligibility criteria contained in Article 41, Section 3(J) and/or Section 3(B) to permit any employee that received a disciplinary action other than adverse actions covered by Article 23, Section 7 and/or a sick leave restriction or counseling in the previous 12 months to be eligible for telework.
2. The definition contained in Article 41, Section 2(A) of the National Agreement is modified to permit, subject to management approval, an Alternative Duty Station (ADS) to include an employee’s family (or person of affinity) member’s residence that is geographically convenient to the employee’s official duty station. Employees may temporarily change their ADS with prior approval from management. These temporary changes must be submitted in writing and must include the temporary address, telephone number (if different from telework agreement) and dates for the requested temporary change.
3. If the employee does not maintain any hard copy official records and/or hard copy official information at the ADS, the employee is not required to have a locked file cabinet.
4. All other eligibility criteria and provisions of Article 41 remain in effect.

Subject	Work Environment Implementation Data Call

Dear Loren and Jason:

Since instituting a new posture (implemented in September 2023) requiring all staff to work in-person at USAID’s headquarters 3 days per week/6 days per pay period, USAID has consistently exceeded its in-person presence goal of at least 50% occupancy. We are now focused on maintaining our occupancy level and enhancing the in person experience by focusing on crucial elements of our work environment. Please see below the steps we are taking to maintain significant in-person presence, as well as ensuring equitable implementation.

1. Timelines with firm deadlines for your agency to reach its in-person presence objectives (i.e., a steady state where, in general, total work hours for all headquarters and headquarters-equivalent personnel that are eligible for telework are completed, on average, as much in-person as they are in telework environments).

USAID's workforce includes over 13,000 staff, with over 4,300 Direct Hires and over 9,000 contract staff (USPSCs, Foreign Service National PSCs, ISCs). Starting on September 25, 2023, all USAID domestic staff with a telework agreement, regardless of hiring agreement, returned to the office three days a week/six days a pay period as required by our policy. As of January 24, 2024, 85 percent of the U.S. Direct Hire employees who are eligible for telework agreements have one in place. The remainder are on remote work agreements.

USAID’s domestic, in-person presence target is 50 percent. Based on our biweekly data, USAID domestic direct hire and personal service contract staff who have telework agreements have consistently worked in-person well above 50 percent per pay-period. Since September 2023, our occupancy ranges from 56 percent to 59 percent, with some variances accounting for holidays and first amendment related activities like protests that make it difficult to access USAID facilities. As of pay-period 25, which ended December 16, 2023, USAID recorded its highest in-person rate — 59.4 percent — since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic.

2. Updates or additional steps your agency must take to complete execution equitably and consistently across their workforce.

USAID uses a number of tools and policies to ensure that as we welcome increasing numbers of staff back to work primarily from our headquarters (versus majority time from home), we are creating a work environment that ensures equitable treatment and access.

Situational Telework Status Set as Baseline

While participation in USAID's telework program is optional, all employees (of all hiring mechanisms) are encouraged to have, at minimum, a situational telework agreement in place. This provides all employees the flexibility to telework when there are emergencies, such as a national emergency, inclement weather, climate change-related emergencies, or other unforeseen contingencies that might prevent the employee from commuting to the official USAID worksite.

Updated Telework and Remote Work Policy

USAID's Telework and Remote work policy (ADS 405) clearly outlines the rules and responsibilities of supervisors and employees who participate in the telework and remote work program. For staff who participate in the telework program, they and their supervisors have the right to cancel a telework arrangement with prior notice of at least 14 calendar days, which allows sufficient time for both parties to plan for the change in status.

When an employee is temporarily unable to report to the official USAID worksite as scheduled, the supervisor may approve a temporary telework arrangement that allows the employee to telework full-time from the alternative work location. Employees who cannot report to the USAID worksite as designated by their position, and seek to telework or remote work due to a disability or medical condition(s), may request reasonable accommodation for longer periods.

Staff Care Services Available to All Employees

Additionally, USAID staff have access to our Staff Care Service Center, which provides in-person and virtual services to the workforce and their family members. These include: counseling and support groups, as well as assistance with work-life issues, such as parenting, caregiving, legal referrals, financial management, health and wellness, and more. These services can help provide a softer landing and more supportive environment as staff adjust to a different work-life balance and transition to greater in person presence.

Flexible IT-Enabled Space Options

USAID has updated its workspace standards and policies (ADS 517) to enhance space utilization, and achieve a more modern and interactive workplace that supports equitable and consistent access to office space for individuals and teams. In addition to assigned and shared work-stations and GFE Laptops, all USAID in-person staff have access to hoteling workstations at both of USAID's two primary headquarters buildings in Washington DC – open collaborative spaces (kitchens, lunchrooms, team rooms), focus rooms, and conference rooms that can be easily reserved through our calendar invite system. Wifi is available throughout all USAID buildings.

Inclusivity and Space

Staff can also plan ahead for on-site work by going to our 'SpaceMatters' intranet site, where information about building and neighborhood services, in-person collaborative tools, shared space etiquette guidelines, and accessibility services can be found. USAID buildings feature many amenities that support staff psychological safety, such as access to gender-neutral bathrooms, quiet rooms that can also be reserved for prayer, and lactation rooms. USAID DC lactation rooms are equipped with highly efficient hospital-grade pumps, refrigerators, and wifi access. The lactation program provides access to certified lactation specialists via phone, 24/7. USAID's lactation program and Staff Care provides extensive support to new parents returning to the office. USAID's inclusive spaces and programs improve staff ability to work-in office and builds a broader sense of belonging that is important for morale.

Refresher Trainings: Respectful, Inclusive, and Safe Work Environments

We recognize that as USAID staff transition to more in person time in the office, different workstyles and behaviors can lead to difficult interpersonal dynamics. This is particularly true for an agency that hired thousands of new staff during and in the transition out of the COVID-19 Pandemic. Therefore, we offer weekly Respectful, Inclusive, and Safe Environments (RISE) training sessions open to all staff, which cover topics such as civility and respect, unconscious bias, standards of conduct, and bystander intervention.

Exceptions and Escalation Options

The flexibility and resources that USAID provides support equitable implementation of USAID's Work Environment plan and required 3-days weekly/ 6-days per pay period, increased in-person presence posture. Staff seeking an exception to our telework posture must work with their supervisor about their need for flexibility. Staff who disagree with a determination or the denial of an exception, may do so through the agency's established complaint and grievance procedures.

- 3. Description of your agency's approach to tracking and ensuring implementation with policies. Agency responses here should outline how senior leaders are tracking implementation progress and ensuring that staff comply with stated agency policies, to include optimizing in-person and telework time.*

Senior Leader Accountability

USAID utilizes badge swipes, time-and-attendance data, and telework agreement data to analyze and track compliance with our in-person presence objectives. To encourage accountability, we developed an in-person presence dashboard for senior leadership, which is searchable by operating unit (i.e. USAID Bureau/Independent Office). Our Work Environment Team also shares a biweekly BIO report with Agency leaders, in conjunction with our OMB data call submissions.

Supervisor Responsibility

Supervisors at all levels of USAID are also responsible for ensuring that their staff are adhering to their telework agreements, which they can validate as they certify time and attendance data. They are also required to take mandatory refresher training about these responsibilities, which are offered monthly to ensure that new supervisors are brought up to speed quickly.

Organizational Health Check-ins & Actions

Finally, as USAID's Deputy Administrator for Management and Resources, I hold a quarterly Organizational Health check-in with senior leaders/ heads of Bureaus and independent offices to agency leadership to review the performance of their respective operating units against a number of indicators, including their compliance with our required in-person presence posture, and the steps they are taking to ensure that in person time is meaningful for staff, and to ensure equity in application of the posture. All leaders have access to their BIO's performance via our Organizational Health Dashboard.

USAID policies on telework and hours of duty have been updated and an implementation review is planned for the third quarter of FY 2024.

Regards,

Paloma Adams-Allen

USAID Deputy Administrator for Resource and Management

ADS 405 – Telework and Remote Work Program

405.1 OVERVIEW

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

This chapter establishes USAID’s Telework and Remote Work Program, which the Agency implements, in accordance with the Telework Enhancement Act \(the Act\) and subsequent U.S. Office of Personnel Management (OPM) guidance. All USAID Operating Units (OUs) must ensure compliance with the directives and required procedures of this chapter and labor relations obligations. All USAID Overseas Missions and Offices must establish telework policies for personnel at post, adhering to the guidance of the Chief of Mission (COM).

This chapter applies to U.S. Direct Hire (USDH), Civil Service (CS), and Foreign Service (FS) employees assigned to a position in the United States. Employees assigned to an overseas post must follow the relevant post-specific telework policy.

This ADS chapter does not apply to Personal Services Contractors (PSCs) or Institutional Support Contractors (ISCs).

- a. Telework and Remote Work Program options for U.S.-based U.S. PSCs (USPSCs), and certain overseas USPSCs and Third Country National (TCN) PSCs (TCNPSCs) not subject to the Local Compensation Plan (LCP), are governed by ADS 309man, Telework and Remote Work Policy for Personal Service Contracts with Individuals \(PSCs\).
- b. Telework and Remote Work Program options for Cooperating Country National PSCs (CCNPSCs) and TCNPSCs subject to the LCP are governed by the applicable LCP and Mission policy, based on local labor law and other considerations.
- c. Telework and Remote Work Program options for ISCs are governed by the specific personnel policies and procedures of their employer, the institutional contractor, which is their employer.

405.2 PRIMARY RESPONSIBILITIES

j. Bureau Assistant Administrators and Independent Office Directors (or designees) in USAID/Washington (USAID/W) are responsible for:

1. Ensuring the evaluation and/or re-evaluation of position designations, based on changing business requirements and needs;
2. Promoting and ensuring equity in the application of telework and remote work position designations;

3. Ensuring their B/IO supervisors and managers are held accountable for implementing the Telework and Remote Work Program, in accordance with this policy and applicable B/IO implementing procedures;
4. Ensuring all B/IO staff have an approved and current Telework and Remote Work Program agreement in the USAID automated system, prior to starting to work at the alternative work location;
5. Ensuring consistency in the application of Telework and Remote program laws and policies, and implementation and use of the Telework and Remote Work Program;
6. Reviewing and determining approval of Telework and Remote Work Program requests for staff reporting directly to them;
7. Approving remote work requests outside the Washington-Baltimore-Arlington, DC-MD-VA-WV-PA locality pay area, DETO requests, or special consideration telework arrangements of more than 90 consecutive calendar days, per 12-month period;
8. Reviewing and approving all legally required work-related costs associated with remote work and DETO arrangements (e.g., temporary duty travel (TDY), International Cooperative Administrative Support Services (ICASS), etc.);
9. Completing all required Telework and Remote Work Program training; and
10. Ensuring the maintenance of B/IOs' operational readiness to oversee onsite health, safety, emergency management, and continuity of operations for all personnel using the Telework and Remote Work Program for distributive operations and establishing responsive accountability protocols, based on telework and remote work designations.

k. Bureau and Independent Office (B/IO) Administrative Management Services (AMS) Staff are responsible for:

1. Serving as Telework Coordinators for respective B/IOs and points of initial contact for Telework and Remote Work Program inquiries;
2. Appointing alternate/back-up Telework Coordinators, if needed;
3. Coordinating and tracking all Telework and Remote Work Program agreements within their respective B/IOs;
4. Supporting OCR's Reasonable Accommodation Program and facilitating necessary procurements/accommodations that are approved for telework or remote work;
5. Designating and maintaining temporary "hoteling" workspace for Telework and Remote Work Program participants who do not have a permanent workspace;

6. Reviewing an employee's request for remote work outside the Washington-Baltimore-Arlington, DC-MD-VA-WV-PA locality pay area, which includes domestic and DETO requests;
7. Supporting OCR's Reasonable Accommodation Program and facilitating necessary procurements/accommodations that are approved for telework; and
8. Performing logistics, space and administrative management services that are related to Telework and Remote Work Program and DETOs; including identifying and documenting ICASS costs for DETO arrangements, and requesting and ensuring COM approval is received on DETO requests, via the electronic country clearance (eCC) or the National Security Decision Directive 38 \(NSDD-38\) system, prior to employees teleworking overseas.

I. Supervisors are responsible for:

1. Completing the mandatory Telework and Remote Work Program training for supervisors and ensuring employees complete their mandatory Telework and Remote Work Program training prior to approving requests and entering into a Telework and Remote Work Program arrangement (see section 405.3.5);
2. Adhering to the Agency's Diversity, Equity, Inclusion, and Accessibility (DEIA) principles when reviewing telework/remote work requests;
3. Reviewing and approving employee Telework and Remote Work Program agreements in the USAID automated system;
4. Ensuring the benefits and costs to USAID are assessed when reviewing and approving remote work and DETO requests;
5. Ensuring the consistent application and implementation of the Telework and Remote Work Program policies and procedures;
6. Setting and communicating Telework and Remote Work Program expectations to employees (e.g., participation in meetings, work to be performed and delivered, deadlines, signing in and out; work schedules, leave, etc.);
7. Evaluating the impact the Telework and Remote Work Program arrangements have on the work unit's performance and functionality;
8. Monitoring the Telework and Remote Work Program arrangement's impact on employee performance and mission requirements of the B/IO, overseas Mission, or Agency;

9. Disapproving or terminating Telework and Remote Work Program arrangements, if employee performance is not meeting performance objectives;
10. Providing employees with appropriate notice before terminating or modifying a Telework and Remote Work Program Agreement (see section 405.3.7.1);
11. Ensuring employees accurately record time spent in a Telework and Remote Work Program status in the time and attendance system;
12. Serving as a Deciding Official on disability accommodation requests related to telework and remote work, in consultation with OCR and after engaging in the interactive process (see ADS 111.3.1.3); and
13. Adjudicating temporary full-time telework arrangements that are 90 consecutive calendar days or less, per 12-month period.

m. Mission Directors or Principal Officers in USAID Overseas Missions and Offices (or designees) are responsible for:

1. Ensuring that a Mission Order on Telework is developed, implemented, and contains required policies and procedures, to include delays while on travel, for all Mission staff;
2. Developing and implementing telework and DETO arrangements, in close consultation with the COM, the USAID Assistant Administrator (or designee) for the regional Bureau, Regional Security Officer (RSO), Bureau for Management's Office of the Chief Information Officer (M/CIO), the AMS, and HCTM;
3. Reviewing and approving telework requests for in-country telework or for temporary full-time telework in the United States of 90 consecutive calendar days or less to accommodate medical evacuations (MEDEVACs) or other emergency situations; and
4. Ensuring employees complete all required telework training prior to approving or entering into a telework or remote work agreement.

n. The Bureau for Management, Office of the Chief Information Officer (M/CIO) is responsible for:

1. Developing strategies and providing guidance for enterprise information technology capabilities and data security required to support Telework and Remote Work Programs;
2. Overseeing the evaluation of new and emerging technologies that facilitate Telework and Remote Work Programs and approving them for Agency-wide use, as appropriate;

3. Coordinating with relevant offices on inventories of available government furnished equipment (GFE) and other necessary equipment for staff use in the Telework and Remote Work Program;
4. Establishing criteria and guidelines for using and protecting GFE when accessing USAID's information systems and networks to perform work under the Telework and Remote Work Programs; and
5. Approving overseas telework GFE requests.

o. The Bureau for Management, Office of Management Services (M/MS) is responsible for:

1. Issuing Agency Notices on USAID's operating status in each instance of an early departure, emergency closure, delayed arrival, or the option for unscheduled leave or unscheduled telework when such status change is based on a continuity of operations, emergency, or safety incident in domestic facilities;
2. Developing policy and guidance for the designation of workspace within domestic facilities; and
3. Developing policy and guidance for the commuter benefits programs (ADS 515, Transit Benefits \(SmartBenefits®\) Program).

p. The Bureau for Management, Office of Management Services (M/MS) Continuity of Operations (COOP) Coordinator is responsible for ensuring telework and remote work are incorporated into COOP plans, policy, and procedures to ensure USAID's essential functions during any type of threat or disruption from an approved worksite continues (see ADS 531, Continuity of Operations \(COOP\) Program).

q. The Bureau for Management, Office of Management Services Occupant Emergency Coordinator (OEC) is responsible for ensuring a process for evacuation and accountability is in place for all occupants, including telework and remote workers, and ensuring managers, supervisors, and others, as appropriate, understand their responsibilities for the safety of any visitors in the work area if the Occupant Emergency Plan (OEP) is activated (see ADS 524, Emergency Management).

r. The Bureau for Management, Office of Management Policy, Budget, and Performance, Budget Division (M/MPBP/BUD) is responsible for:

1. Reviewing resource implications associated with the Telework and Remote Work Program (Washington-Baltimore-Arlington, DC-MD-VA-WV-PA locality pay area) or DETO requests;

2. Ensuring salary and benefits (S&B), Operating Expense (OE), and Operating Year Budget (OYB) will fund the resource implications of remote work (i.e., outside the Washington-Baltimore-Arlington, DC-MD-VA-WV-PA locality pay area); and
3. Reviewing remote work (outside the Washington-Baltimore-Arlington, DC-MD-VA-WV-PA locality pay area) and DETO requests for budget concerns.

s. Mission Executive Officers (EXO) are responsible for:

1. Serving as the Mission Telework Coordinator and point of initial contact for telework and remote work inquiries;
2. Appointing an alternate/back-up Telework Coordinator, if needed;
3. Coordinating and tracking all telework and remote work agreements within their respective Mission;
4. Ensuring supervisors are aware of the telework and remote work requirements;
5. Coordinating with relevant offices and maintaining inventories of available GFE and other necessary equipment for staff use in the Telework and Remote Work Program;
6. Reporting Telework and Remote Work Program data and information to the TMO and CHCO, as needed;
7. Serving as the Mission liaison with the U.S. Embassy on the development and implementation of post-specific telework policies;
8. Leading the development, implementation, and distribution of a Mission Order on Telework, based on Agency and post-specific policy and guidance;
9. Coordinating with AMS to ensure COM approval is received on DETO requests via either the eCC or NSDD-38 system, prior to employees beginning DETOs at their posts;
10. Providing support, as needed, to facilitate approved DETO arrangements;
11. Adhering to established Telework and Remote Work Program policy and required procedures;
12. Reviewing and clearing on an employee's telework request that is recommended by employee supervisors, whether for in-country telework or for temporary telework of 90 consecutive calendar days or less; and

13. Supporting OCR's Reasonable Accommodation Program and facilitating necessary procurements/accommodations that are approved for telework or remote work.

t. Telework and Remote Work participants are responsible for:

1. Completing all required training, prior to entering into a Telework and Remote Work Program arrangement;
2. Ensuring a Telework or Remote Work Agreement is approved by all required approvers, prior to beginning the telework or remote work arrangement;
3. Adhering to established Telework and Remote Work Program policy and required procedures;
4. Complying with office procedures and protocols, including:
 - Complying with supervisory expectations regarding Telework and Remote Work Program expectations, i.e., availability and accessibility to customers, coworkers, and supervisors; and
 - Adhering to office specific telework and remote work standard operating procedure requirements, as established (e.g., customer service, timeframe for returning calls, messages, and email communication, staff meeting attendance and work schedule).
5. Accurately coding time worked in a Telework and Remote Work Program status in the time and attendance system;
6. Reporting to the official USAID worksite, when requested by the supervisor or B/IO leadership;
7. Ensuring the Telework and Remote Work Program arrangement does not negatively impact their work or the work of other team members;
8. Ensuring the duty station is correctly annotated on the Notification of Personnel Action;
9. Ensuring their alternative worksite has the appropriate resources available to support a Telework and Remote Work Program and meets established safety and data security criteria, as outlined in the Telework and Remote Work Program agreement;
10. Adhering to USAID's rules and regulations (e.g., Agency Rules of Behavior for Users and Acceptable Use Policy for IT Resources) regarding the use of GFE and records management; and

11. Reviewing/updating their Telework and Remote Work Program agreement annually, or as necessary.

405.3 POLICY DIRECTIVES AND REQUIRED PROCEDURES

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

This section establishes the policy and procedures for USAID's Telework and Remote Work Program. These procedures are applicable to Telework and Remote Work Program arrangements for USDH employees.

In implementing a Telework and Remote Work Program, in compliance with the Act and OPM guidelines, USAID:

- a. Establishes policy under which eligible employees are authorized to telework and remote work;
- b. Supports a flexible and agile workforce that is better able to respond to local and national emergencies and events;
- c. Highlights its core values and principles of EEO and DEIA; and
- d. Promotes greater use of the Telework and Remote Work Program during emergency situations, including national emergencies, severe weather conditions, climate change-related emergencies, or other circumstances that disrupt or prevent employees from commuting or reporting to work.

405.3.1 General Provisions

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Participation in the USAID Telework and Remote Work Program is voluntary and approved on a case-by-case basis by the employee's supervisor. Employees electing not to participate in the USAID Telework and Remote Work Program are required to submit a telework agreement that indicates their election to "opt-out" of the program.

Management may modify or terminate a Telework and Remote Work Agreement for business needs, performance, or an employee's failure to comply with policy directives and required procedures and protocols. The following standard provisions apply to USAID's Telework and Remote Work Program:

- a. Supervisors implement a Telework and Remote Work Program while taking into account the needs and work of the organization to maximize productivity and performance;
- b. B/IO leadership may use telework and remote work as a recruitment and retention tool and are required to identify a position's Telework and Remote Work Program eligibility in vacancy announcements;

- c. All employees are encouraged to have, at a minimum, a situational telework agreement in place. This allows employees to have the flexibility to telework when there are emergencies, such as a national emergency, inclement weather, climate change-related emergencies, or other unforeseen contingencies that prevent the employee from commuting to the official USAID worksite;
- d. USAID uses the USAID automated system to record and track all Telework and Remote Work Program arrangements. Telework and Remote Work Agreements remain in effect, up to one year from the date indicated on the approved agreement, although lesser periods may be approved. A revised/new Telework and Remote Work Agreement may be required when there is a change in work requirements, supervisor (on more than a temporary basis), or transfer/reassignment to a new position, B/IO, or overseas Mission;
- e. All employees are required to complete the mandatory online OPM web-based telework training for employees and managers, as applicable;
- f. Employees may be ordered to telework or remote work if the employee is a member of the B/IO's COOP, a pandemic has been declared, or other national and/or local emergency situation occurs. Those employees with assigned duties under the Agency COOP Program must be prepared to work at an alternative worksite, at any time, during an emergency event or a situation that results in a disruption to normal office operations, to ensure the continuation of Agency essential business operations;
- g. Employees in telework-eligible or remote work-eligible positions, who wish to opt-out of the Telework and Remote Work Program, must indicate this on a Telework and Remote Work Agreement. Note: Employees who opt-out of all telework will not have the option to telework in the event of an emergency or in the event of an OPM operating status notification of "unscheduled telework" or "unscheduled leave." The employee will be required to report to the office or submit a Leave Request for the day (see ADS 480, Leave). When an employee notifies the supervisor that they do not want to participate in the Telework and Remote Work Program, regardless of the position designation, the supervisor and the employee should contact the AMS to identify an onsite workspace and perform any logistics coordination requirements.
- h. An employee's participation in the Telework and Remote Work Program may be limited based on the duties encompassed by the position or other aspects of the work environment specific to the position duties. Although many types of positions have work requirements that can be accomplished at an alternative worksite, not all positions are conducive to telework and remote work. The position duties are a primary factor in determining if a position is suitable for telework and remote work;
- i. All employees, regardless of telework and remote work status and alternative worksite, may be called into the official USAID worksite, if their presence is required. Normally, an employee is notified of such a change in advance, but sometimes advance notice is not possible in certain unforeseen circumstances or emergencies. The expectation is that the employee is required to report to the onsite official USAID worksite, when requested, even if that day is a scheduled telework or remote work day;

- j. A Telework and Remote Work Program is not a substitute for dependent care. Employees are not authorized to telework or remote work with the intent of or for the sole purpose of meeting their dependent care or personal responsibilities while performing official duties;
- k. Employee participation in the Telework and Remote Work Program is subject to all workplace requirements, such as time and attendance, performance and conduct, random drug testing, etc.;
- l. Employees seeking to telework or remote work, due to a disability or medical condition, should contact the Office of Civil Rights, Disability Employment Division, Reasonable Accommodation (OCR/DE/RA) at reasonableaccommodations@usaid.gov for guidance; and
- m. Participants in regular/recurring telework and remote work should follow the policy and procedures outlined in ADS 515, Transit Benefits \(SmartBenefits®\) Program regarding public transit benefits.

405.3.2 Types of Telework

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Telework is a work flexibility arrangement in which an employee performs the duties of their position from an approved alternative worksite (e.g., home or other location) other than the official USAID worksite. The three types of telework arrangements are:

- 1. Regular/Recurring: An alternative work arrangement in which telework occurs from an approved alternative worksite, as part of a pre-approved ongoing, regular/recurring basis, for an approved number of days during each pay period.
- 2. Situational/Unscheduled: An alternative work arrangement in which telework occurs from an approved alternative worksite (e.g. home or other location) on an irregular, unscheduled, or case-by-case basis; and the hours worked are not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular telework schedule.
- 3. Temporary Full-Time Situational Telework: When an employee may be temporarily unable to report to the official USAID worksite as scheduled, the supervisor may approve a temporary telework arrangement that allows the employee to telework full-time from the alternative work location. The temporary arrangement should be used only in cases where the employee is expected to return to a regular telework schedule and report to the official USAID worksite in the near future. Supervisors should consult with HCTM for further guidance.

Temporary full-time situational telework requests for employees may be considered on a case-by-case basis. There are two types of temporary full-time telework requests:

- a. Requests for up to 90 consecutive calendar days; and
- b. Requests for more than 90 consecutive calendar days and up to one year.

Temporary telework arrangements for up to 90 consecutive calendar days do not require a change in duty station. However, the employee is required to record all telework days in addition to their scheduled telework days as “situational” telework when reporting their time and attendance for the pay period.

Temporary telework arrangements for more than 90 consecutive calendar days require a change in duty station for the period of approved temporary telework. The employee is required to submit a “Remote Work ” agreement in the USAID automated system to cover the period of time the employee is teleworking full time.

405.3.3 Remote Work

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Remote work is an arrangement in which an employee, under a written remote work agreement, is scheduled to perform their work at an alternative worksite and is not expected to perform work at an Agency worksite on a regular and recurring basis.

405.3.3.1 Domestic Remote Work

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Domestic remote work is remote work that occurs at an approved location within the United States or its territories. Remote work arrangements are for domestically assigned USDH employees that occupy positions designated as remote work-eligible. A remote work arrangement is one in which:

- a. The employee is performing assigned official duties and other authorized activities at an approved alternative worksite, typically the employee’s residence, within or outside of the local commuting area of the official USAID worksite;
- b. The position’s duties do not require the employee to physically report to the USAID worksite on a regular or recurring basis;
- c. The arrangement is subject to budget, business, and operational needs of the B/IO and USAID;
- d. The arrangement is subject to a cost-benefit analysis, whereby the benefits and costs to the Agency are considered when determining approval; and

- e. The employee is eligible for appropriate travel reimbursement for days they travel to the official USAID worksite (see section 405.3.19).

405.3.3.2 Overseas Remote Work

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

A B/IO head or Mission Director may approve a remote work arrangement for a USDH employee's alternative worksite to be located overseas, in accordance with USAID, State, and COM policy and guidance. In certain circumstances, if the employee is sponsored by a Department of Defense (DOD) member, DOD policy applies. Such requests are reviewed on a case-by-case basis, given the unique and varied local conditions that exist from post to post. The following factors, among others, may affect the acceptability of certain telework arrangements abroad: security concerns, the inviolability, or lack thereof, of the remote worker's personal residence, possessions, cost, passport/visa type, and the location and proximity of the alternative worksite to the USAID or U.S. embassy facility in the assigned post.

405.3.3.3 Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO)

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

A DETO is an alternative work arrangement in which an USDH, assigned to a domestic position, works remotely from an overseas location for a limited period of time. There are two different types of DETO work arrangements:

- 1. Sponsored: A USAID USDH employee who is on the government issued permanent change of station (PCS) orders of their sponsoring spouse or domestic partner assigned overseas.
- 2. Independent: A USAID USDH employee assigned to a domestic position and not on government issued PCS orders, who is teleworking from an overseas location for a limited period of time.

Domestic employees are prohibited from working from an alternative worksite (location) outside of the United States (even on a temporary basis) without official approval from USAID and the State COM of the country in which the employee wishes to telework from. COM approval must be documented via ECC (less than one year) or approved NSDD38 (more than one year). Positions with duties or responsibilities that report on or play any role in matters pertaining to the country or Mission in which the DETO duty station is located are not eligible for DETO arrangements.

Employees with approved DETO arrangements are not part of a U.S. embassy's staffing pattern, detailed to the overseas location, or considered part of the post's regular staffing complement. The employee remains on the B/IO staffing pattern, even though the duty station will be changed to reflect the overseas alternative worksite for the duration of the DETO arrangement.

For FS employees, the time spent teleworking overseas on a DETO is not creditable toward meeting the number of years of overseas assignment service required for promotion or tenure in the FS. DETO time is creditable toward the total service time required for tenure and promotion. Time spent on the DETO is considered overseas service in regards to the limitations on continuous overseas and domestic service as prescribed in the Act (see ADS 463, Foreign Service and Senior Foreign Service Promotion Eligibility Requirements and Procedures, and ADS 414mad, The Tenure Policy and Process for Foreign Service Career Candidates).

405.3.3.4 Telework Away From Post

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

There are situations that may call for domestic situational telework while away from post for USDH employees, such as MEDEVACs, Emergency Visitation Travel, being delayed while on travel (e.g., when a travel delay prevents immediate return from the United States at the conclusion of rest and recuperation [R&R] trip). Mission Directors have discretion on whether to allow domestic situational telework up to 90 consecutive calendar days in these and similar circumstances and are encouraged to consider these scenarios in their Post specific policies. The HCTM/FSC Director must approve domestic situational telework beyond 90 consecutive calendar days.

The Director, HCTM/FSC will review requests to telework from a country other than the United States on a case-by-case basis and will rarely be approved. Employees seeking telework from a country other than the United States due to personal medical reasons, including pregnancy, should first contact OCR Reasonable Accommodations (reasonableaccommodations@usaid.gov).

405.3.4 Telework and Remote Work Program Eligibility Requirements

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Participation in the Telework and Remote Work Program is optional and is open to all eligible FS and CS employees, regardless of race, color, religion, sex, including pregnancy, gender identity, sexual orientation, or transgender status, national origin, age, physical or mental disability, genetic information, political affiliation, parental status, marital status, and veteran status, and without regard to prior participation in protected activity.

405.3.4.1 Employee Eligibility

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

In order for an employee to be eligible to enter into a Telework or Remote Work Agreement, the employee must:

- a. Occupy a position designated as telework or remote work eligible;
- b. Have not been officially disciplined for being absent without permission for more than five days in any calendar year;

- c. Have not been officially disciplined for violations of 5 CFR Part 2635, for viewing, downloading, or exchanging pornography, including child pornography, on a Federal Government computer or while performing official Federal Government duties; or
- d. For Foreign Service Officers (FSOs), have attained tenure.

405.3.4.2 Position Eligibility

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

HCTM/HCSC/C (Classification Division) and HCTM/FSS (Foreign Service Staffing) must coordinate with supervisors to determine telework/remote eligibility, based on the duties and responsibilities of the position. Positions may be ineligible for telework or remote work if the official duties of the position require in-person/onsite presence at the USAID worksite on a regular/recurring basis, to include, but not limited to the following reasons:

- a. Direct handling of secure or sensitive information, including Personally Identifiable Information (PII) or classified national security information, that is not authorized for transmission, discussion, or storing at an alternative worksite;
- b. Tasks that require use of specialized equipment;
- c. Frequent face-to-face contact with other internal and/or external customers, supervisors, or trainers; and
- d. Activities that cannot be handled at an alternative worksite.

HCTM has designated all positions occupied by officers assigned to an FS complement as telework eligible. No positions are designated as eligible for remote work due to the requirement for frequent in-person contact with supervisors, instructors, coaches, and others for those on the various complements. FSOs who wish to be considered for remote telework may submit a request with justification to the FS Exceptions Committee. Untenured FSOs are not permitted to remote work while on the complement.

405.3.5 Training

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

The Telework Enhancement Act requires USAID to provide and require completion of interactive telework training for eligible employees, prior to entering into a Telework and Remote Work Program agreement. All employees are required to receive and complete OPM's Telework Fundamentals - Employee Training annually. All managers are required to complete OPM's Telework Fundamentals - Manager Training annually. Management may provide and require additional and subsequent training to support employees entering Telework and Remote Work Agreements.

405.3.6 Agreements

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Employees must have an approved Telework or Remote Work Agreement in the USAID automated system, prior to participation in the Telework and Remote Work Program. Agreements are approved for up to one year.

405.3.6.1 Telework Agreements

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Employees, who occupy telework-eligible positions and wish to telework, must have an approved Telework Agreement in the USAID automated system prior to participation in the Telework and Remote Work Program. Agreements are approved for up to one year.

405.3.6.2 Remote Work Agreements

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Employees, who occupy domestic remote-eligible positions and wish to work remotely, are required to seek Bureau Assistant Administrator or Independent Office Director (or designee) approval for a remote work arrangement. In most cases, the remote work duty location will be the employee's home residence. If an employee wishes to change the alternative worksite, (i.e., they are planning to move to a new location) they must submit a new request.

Once the Bureau Assistant Administrator or Independent Office Director (or designee) has approved the request, the employee is required to submit the remote work agreement in the USAID automated system. USAID employees are strictly prohibited from beginning any remote work arrangement before the Remote Work Agreement is approved in the USAID automated system. Employees are required to renew their Remote Work Agreements annually.

405.3.6.3 Situational Telework Agreements

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Employees who telework irregularly or on a case-by-case basis are required to have a Situational Telework Agreement approved in the USAID automated system. A temporary telework arrangement that is expected to last more than 90 consecutive calendar days requires a change in duty location. Therefore, the employee is required to submit a Remote Work Agreement in the USAID automated system. Once the employee has returned to their originally approved work arrangement, the employee should update their telework agreement in the USAID automated system.

405.3.7 Renewals

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Employees must submit requests to renew their Telework or Remote Work Agreements annually or upon supervisor's request. Upon receipt of the employee's request, the supervisor must review the request.

405.3.8 Denials, Terminations, and Appeals

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

The supervisor determines whether to deny or terminate the telework or remote work requests. Under certain circumstances, an employee may appeal a denial or termination decision.

405.3.8.1 Denials, Modifications, and Terminations

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Supervisors should base the decision to deny, modify, or terminate an employee's telework and remote work arrangement on business needs, in accordance with the requirements of the Act and this policy. Supervisors must provide the decision to deny, modify, or terminate an employee's telework or remote work arrangement in writing. When terminating or modifying a telework agreement, a supervisor must provide the employee with written notice of their decision at least 14 calendar days in advance of its implementation, barring operational need. When terminating a Remote Work Agreement, supervisors must provide the employee with written notice of their decision at least 30 calendar days in advance of its implementation, barring operational need.

Employees may request to terminate or modify their telework and remote work arrangements at any time by providing their supervisor with written notice of their decision at least 14 calendar days in advance of the change. Employees should copy their AMS on any written notification to the supervisor to facilitate workspace planning and other logistical issues that arise. If office space is unavailable, termination or modification of the telework agreement may be delayed until the appropriate physical work arrangements are made available. The employee is required to submit a new Agreement in the USAID automated system.

405.3.8.2 Appeals

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Employees may appeal Agency decisions to deny, terminate, or modify their telework agreements through the Agency's grievance or complaints processes. For additional information related to grievances and complaints, please refer to ADS 486, Grievances - Foreign Service, ADS 490, Agency Administrative Grievance Procedure, the USAID-AFGE Collective Bargaining Agreement, ADS 110, Equal Employment Opportunity Program, and ADS 114, Anti-Harassment Program, as appropriate.

405.3.9 Hours of Duty

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Employees participating in the Telework and Remote Work Program must maintain hours of duty that are consistent with the Agency's policy on work schedules and hours of duty in USAID/W and in USAID Missions. The administrative work week for USAID Missions varies, according to local customs. Management determines the employee's work schedule, consistent with the work requirements and operational office needs (see ADS 479, Hours of Duty). Mission staff must follow the normal business hours at post, unless other hours have been agreed to by the employee, supervisor, and Mission Director.

405.3.10 Pay, Compensation, and Allowances

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Domestic Assignment Salary: All USDH employees' salaries are based on the duty location annotated on their SF 50, Block 39. Employees on approved Remote Work Agreements, or temporary telework arrangements in excess of 90 consecutive calendar days, outside the Washington- Baltimore-Arlington, DC-MD-VA- WV-PA locality pay area, must ensure their duty location is accurate upon beginning to work at the remote worksite. Employees with a duty location that has a lower locality pay than the Washington- Baltimore-Arlington area, must be indebted to the Federal Government for overpayment of locality pay if the duty location is not changed in a timely manner.

Overseas (DETO) Salary: An employee on a DETO agreement must be paid locality pay in an amount that is equal to the lesser of:

- a. The amount of a locality-based comparability payment that the employee would have been, had the official duty station of the employee not been changed to reflect an overseas location under the DETO agreement; or
- b. The amount of a locality-based comparability payment that the employee would be paid if the employee were an eligible member of the FS.

Premium Pay: All USDH employees, regardless of telework or remote work status, are not authorized to work overtime or to receive premium pay without supervisor's prior approval in the time and attendance system (see ADS 472, Premium Compensation).

Allowances: The Department of State Standardized Regulations (DSSR) govern allowances and benefits available to U.S. Government civilians in foreign areas. Under DSSR 031.8, DETOs are not eligible for any allowance benefits or payments in their own right. Any eligibility for allowance benefits or payments is only derived from the sponsoring employee, without exception.

405.3.11 Worker's Compensation

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Employees working in a telework or remote work status are covered by the Federal Employees Compensation Act when injured or suffering from work-related illnesses while conducting official government business at the official or alternative worksite. The Agency's potential exposure to liability is restricted to the designated alternative worksite. Employees may qualify for payment for continuation of pay or worker's compensation for an on-the-job injury or occupational illness that occurs at the agreed upon official or alternative worksite and during designated work hours (see ADS 442, The Workers' Compensation Program).

When injured while working at an alternative worksite, employees must follow the same procedures used at the official worksite. The injured employee must notify their supervisor immediately and submit a ticket to the USAID automated system, requesting HCTM/HCSC's Employee Services and Benefits (ESB) Division's assistance with opening a Worker's Compensation Claim.

405.3.12 Leave

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Employees are required to follow the policy and procedures outlined in ADS 480, Leave Program.

405.3.13 Time and Attendance

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Employees and supervisors are responsible for accurate time and attendance reporting, as described in ADS 626, Payroll and Time and Attendance Transactions. Employees in a telework or remote work status must record their work hours in the automated time and attendance system, as follows:

- a. 01-Regular Duty (time at the USAID official worksite)
- b. 01-Telework-Situational/Unscheduled
- c. 01-Telework-Regular/Recurring
- d. 01-Remote Work
- e. 01-DETO

When an employee is authorized to do temporary telework in addition to their approved telework agreement, the time for those days should be recorded as 01-Telework-Situational/Unscheduled. Employees and their supervisors agree to the work schedule for recurring telework days, which may be a routine schedule or vary, based on the duties and responsibilities.

405.3.14 Government Furnished Equipment (GFE)

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

M/CIO, on behalf of USAID, is responsible for providing a government-furnished laptop computer and, when requested, mobile devices to employees with telework and remote work arrangements (see ADS 549, Telecommunications Management for information on mobile devices). Employees who are issued government-furnished laptops that work in unrestricted space may take their laptops to approved alternative worksites, upon their B/IO approval. Government-furnished network enterprise laptops (GF-NEL) issued in restricted space must always be connected to an Agency network and secured to a desk. These devices must not be removed from the designated restricted space. OUs may request approval to purchase a second device for use by a designated user for use in their alternative worksite (see ADS 547, Property Management of Information Technology \(IT\), ADS 552, Cyber Security for National Security Information \(NSI\) Systems, and ADS 568, National Security Information Program).

Under specific circumstances, the Agency is obligated to provide some assistive technology and devices for an employee's use while in a telework and remote work status as a reasonable accommodation. These determinations are made on a case-by-case basis, as part of the reasonable accommodation approval process (see ADS 111, Procedures for Providing Reasonable Accommodation).

405.3.15 Alternative Worksite Workspace

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Telework and Remote Work Program employees should designate a specific workspace at their alternative worksite for use in performance of their duties. Telework or remote work participants are required to self-certify that their alternative worksite meets the required safety requirements, as part of the Telework/Remote Work Agreement.

The Agency is not responsible for any other incidental costs (e.g., residential utilities, internet fees, insurance, home maintenance, or furniture) associated with the use of the employee's residence, unless otherwise approved, as part of a reasonable accommodation. Employees who participate in the Telework and Remote Work Program may be asked to engage in "hoteling" or sharing office space when they are present at the official worksite.

405.3.16 Security and Safeguarding of Government Information

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Employees are prohibited, under any circumstances, from taking any classified information from the USAID worksite to an alternative worksite. In addition, electronic data files with Sensitive but Unclassified (SBU) information that contain PII must not be transferred outside the Agency's network. Similarly, SBU data must not be transferred outside of .gov or .mil networks.

At USAID, security policies are enforced at the same rigorous level when employees telework or remote work, as when they are at the Agency worksite. Employees must comply with current standards for remote operations while performing their official duties from their alternative worksites. All employees are required to keep USG property and information safe, secure, and separated from their personal property and information (see ADS 545, ADS 545mbd, Rules of Behavior for Users, and ADS 568, National Security Information Program).

Unless circumstances prohibit it, Virtual Private Networks (VPNs) should be used when conducting official government business.

Refer to ADS 502, USAID Records Management Program for more information.

405.3.17 Agency Continuity of Operations (COOP) Plan

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

The Telework and Remote Work Program is an integral part of the Agency's emergency planning. During any period of time when USAID is operating under a COOP activation or deployment, the COOP plan supersedes this policy and the provisions of the Telework and Remote Work Agreement.

In emergency or crisis situations, certain employees with mission-critical or emergency essential duties and those that are designated as Emergency Relocation Group (ERG) members may be required to telework in the case of a COOP event. All ERG members are required to have at least an approved situational telework agreement. This requirement cannot be waived. In the event of an emergency situation, regardless of weather conditions or any other public announcements of dismissal or suspension of activities, ERG members must adhere to the procedures, as outlined in the COOP Plan. Additional information on the Agency's COOP Plan can be found in ADS 531, Continuity of Operations\(COOP\) Program.

405.3.18 Government-wide Dismissal and Closure Procedures

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Agency Notices issued as an Executive Message provide guidance to domestic employees on USAID's operating status in each instance of an early departure, emergency closure, delayed arrival, or the option for unscheduled leave or unscheduled telework, in response to a COOP or emergency incident. In these and other situations that affect the Agency's operating status, USAID follows OPM's guidelines and any guidance issued by or at the request of M/MS.

During inclement weather or an emergency incident when telework is made available, employees with approved Telework or Remote Work Agreements are expected to work their scheduled hours at their alternative or official worksite. Employees on approved Telework and Remote Work Agreements are not eligible for Weather and Safety Leave (WSL), in accordance with 5 CFR 630.1605, unless there are extenuating circumstances that prevent them from working from their alternative or official worksites.

405.3.19 Travel, Transportation, and Relocation Cost

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Employees approved to telework are eligible for the Agency's transit benefits and subsidized parking programs, per ADS 514, Parking Administration Program and ADS 515, Transit Benefits \(SmartBenefits®\) Program. Employees who have been approved to remote work may be required to travel to the USAID worksite, and the B/IO is responsible for the travel costs that are associated with having the employee travel to the USAID worksite. Remote workers in the local commuting area must file a SF 1164 for reimbursement for authorized travel costs, following their respective B/IOs internal guidelines and process for budgeting and vouchering of costs. Employees traveling from outside the local commuting area require a travel authorization. Employees should refer to ADS 522, Performance of Temporary Duty Travel in the United States and Abroad for additional information.

Relocation Cost. USAID incurs no relocation expenses relating to an employee voluntarily relocating while employed at USAID, upon approval of a remote work arrangement. Employees, who voluntarily relocated after receiving approval for a remote work arrangement, are responsible for all costs to relocate back to the commuting area, if the employee’s position designation changes to require their presence in the office on a regular basis, such as a change from remote work eligible to telework eligible.

Although employees on an approved Remote Work Agreement generally are not expected to report in-person/onsite at the official worksite, the supervisor can require the presence of a remote work employee at the official worksite in certain situations and with reasonable notice to the employee. In the event that a remote worker is expected to report to a different official or Agency worksite, the B/IO is responsible for the employee’s travel expenses.

405.3.20 Teleworking While in TDY Status

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Telework or remote work arrangements are suspended when the employee is scheduled for TDY or official training that requires in-person attendance. Employees on official TDY to an overseas post may only telework at the TDY worksite when authorized by the Mission Director, in consultation with COM, generally in response to a continuity of operations, emergency, or safety incident at post.

405.3.21 Reasonable Accommodation

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Aside from the terms and conditions of telework and remote work noted in this chapter, telework and remote work may be provided as a reasonable accommodation that enables an eligible employee with a disability to perform the essential functions of their position. The Office of Civil Rights, Disability Employment Division, Reasonable Accommodation (OCR/DE/RA) Program works with Agency management to ensure determinations for the Telework and Remote Work Program arrangements, as an accommodation for disability, are made in accordance with the provisions of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, The Americans with Disabilities Act Amendments Act of 2008, 29 CFR 1630, and ADS 111, Procedures for Providing Reasonable Accommodation.

For further guidance on the use of telework or remote work arrangements as a form of reasonable accommodation, see the OCR Disability Resource Center and EEOC’s Fact Sheet “Work at Home/Telework as a Reasonable Accommodation.”

405.3.22 Records Management

Effective Date: 07/25/2023

Telework and Remote Work Program employees working from an approved alternative worksite have the same responsibility for managing USAID records, as if they are working at the USAID worksite. Electronic records must be preserved and managed, in accordance with the requirements of ADS 502, The USAID Records Management Program.

405.6 DEFINITIONS
Effective Date: 07/25/2023

See the Glossary of ADS Terms for all ADS terms and definitions.

Alternative Worksite

A location, other than the official worksite of the employee's position of record, that has been approved for the performance of assigned official duties, as designated on the telework or remote work agreement. It may be an employee's home or other approved worksite that is conducive to performing the official duties. (Chapter 405)

Climate-Change Related Emergencies

Acute weather events that prevent access to the worksite or disrupt operations, including intense storms, frequent heavy precipitation, heat waves, drought, extreme flooding, and higher sea levels. (Chapter 405)

Continuity of Operations Plan (COOP)

An effort within individual organizations to ensure they can continue to perform their essential functions during a wide range of emergencies, including localized acts of nature, accidents, and technological or attack-related emergencies. (Chapter 405 and 531)

Disability

A physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of the major life activities of an individual; a record of such an impairment; or being regarded as having such an impairment. (Chapter 111 and 405)

Disciplinary Action

Actions including, but not limited to, reprimand, suspension, demotion, and removal. (Chapters 109, 405, 485, 487)

Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO)

A USAID U.S. direct-hire employee assigned to a domestic position and teleworking from an overseas location for a limited period of time. A DETO can be sponsored or independent. (Chapter 405)

Domestic Employee Teleworking Overseas (DETO) Agreement

An official agreement documenting the terms and conditions of the DETO arrangement. (Chapter 405)

Domestic Partner

An individual who has met all of the criteria listed in, and who is declared to be, a domestic partner of an employee, in accordance with 3 FAM 1612. (Chapter 405)

Emergency Relocation Group (ERG)

Staff assigned responsibility to continue essential functions from an alternative site in the event that their primary operating facilities are threatened or have been incapacitated by an incident. (Chapter 405 and 531)

Hoteling

An arrangement in which employees are not assigned permanent, dedicated office space at a USAID location, but rather are provided office space by reservation, on an as-needed basis. (Chapter 405)

Independent DETO

A USAID U.S. direct hire employee assigned to a domestic position and not on the permanent change of station (PCS) orders of a sponsoring spouse or domestic partner, who is teleworking from an overseas location for a limited period of time. (Chapter 405)

Locality Commuting Area

Commuting area means the geographic area surrounding a work site that encompasses the localities where people live and reasonably can be expected to travel back and forth daily to work, as established by the employing agency based on the generally held expectations of the local community. (Chapter 405)

Occupant Emergency Program

An emergency response program that establishes procedures for safeguarding lives and property during emergencies in a particular facility. (Chapter 405 and 524)

Official Worksite

For purposes of pay and travel, the official worksite is the location of the employee's main reporting office, as long as the employee is regularly scheduled to report physically at least twice each pay period on a regular and recurring basis. Otherwise, the official worksite is the location of the telework site (for example, the location of the employee's home or other alternative worksite) (Chapter 405)

Officially Disciplined

Any disciplinary action that results in the placement of a document in the employee's electronic Official Personnel Folder (eOPF) (e.g., written reprimand, suspension, removal). (Chapter 405 and 487)

Overseas Alternative Worksite:

Also referred to as the overseas duty station. The approved overseas location, which is usually the overseas residence (home), is the site from which the employee will remotely perform the duties of their domestic position through telework via the DETO arrangement. (Chapter 405)

Overseas Remote Work

An alternative work arrangement in which an employee works remotely, under a DETO arrangement, from an approved location outside of the United States. (Chapter 405)

Position of Record

The official location of the position, as defined by grade, occupational series, appointment type, and any other position-related condition, that determined coverage under the classification system. (Chapter 405)

Reasonable Accommodation

Any change in the work environment or application process that enables a person with a disability to enjoy equal employment opportunities. (Chapter 405 and 111)

Regular/Recurring Telework

An alternative work arrangement in which telework occurs from an approved alternative worksite, as part of a pre-approved ongoing, regular/recurring basis for an approved number of days each pay period. (Chapter 405)

Relative

A "relative" is a husband, wife, domestic partner as defined in 3 FAM 1600, father, mother, son, daughter, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, first cousin, nephew, niece, father-in-law, mother-in-law, son-in-law, daughter-in-law, brother-in-law, sister-in-law, stepfather, stepmother, stepson, stepdaughter, stepbrother, stepsister, half-brother, or half-sister. (See 3 FAM 8323.) (Chapter 405)

Remote Work

An alternative work arrangement in which a domestically assigned employee performs the duties of their position of record from an approved alternative worksite on a regular and recurring basis. A remote worker's alternative worksite may be within or outside the local commuting area of the employee's position of record. Some remote work arrangements may have pay-impacting implications. (Chapter 405)

Situational Telework

An alternative work arrangement in which telework occurs from an approved alternative worksite on an irregular, unscheduled, or case-by-case basis; and the hours worked were not part of a previously approved, ongoing, and regular telework schedule. (Chapter 405)

Sponsored DETO

A USAID U.S. direct hire employee who is on the permanent change of station (PCS) orders of their sponsoring spouse or domestic partner assigned overseas. (Chapter 405)

Sponsoring Employee

A Civil or Foreign Service employee who is or will be assigned under PCS orders (i.e., not TDY authorization) to a U.S. Mission abroad under Chief of Mission authority; or a U.S. Government, Department of Defense or uniformed service member who is or will be assigned (not TDY) to a military base or U.S. Mission abroad. (Chapter 405)

Spouse

A partner in any legally recognized marriage, regardless of the employee's state of residency. The term spouse does not include unmarried domestic partners, unless they meet the requirements of being spouses in a common-law marriage in states where such marriages are recognized. (Chapter 405 and 481)

Supervisor

An employee that is responsible for the direction of subordinates within their organization unit and whose supervisory responsibilities meet at least the minimum requirements for coverage under the General Schedule Supervisory Guide. Those directed may be subordinate Federal Civil Service employees; assigned military employees; non-federal workers; unpaid volunteers; student trainees; or others. Supervisors serve as coaches that empower staff to accomplish work. Traditional supervisory duties include evaluating employee performance; selecting or participating with considerable weight in the selection of subordinate employees; reviewing and approving leave requests; hearing and resolving complaints and grievances; and effecting disciplinary measures. (Chapters 113, 405, 413, 462, 508)

Telework

A workplace flexibility arrangement in which an employee performs the duties and responsibilities of the position of record, and other authorized activities, from an approved alternative worksite other than the location from which the employee would otherwise work. (Chapter 405)

Telework and Remote Work Program Agreement

A mandatory written agreement that outlines the terms and conditions of the Telework and Remote Work Program arrangement, as approved by the supervisor. (Chapter 405)

Telework and Remote Work Program-Eligible Position

A position determined by the Bureau Assistant Administrator and Independent Office (B/IO) Director (or designee) in USAID/Washington (USAID/W) with input and advice from supervisors. B/IO heads consider the nature of the work or tasks performed and assess whether permitting Telework and Remote Work Program would diminish the ability of the employee in that position to perform successfully or negatively impact the mission.

(Chapter 405)

Unscheduled Telework

An alternative work arrangement in which telework occurs from an approved alternative worksite on an unscheduled basis, in response to a national emergency, inclement weather, climate change-related emergencies, or other unforeseen contingencies.

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT BETWEEN
U.S. AGENCY FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT
AND AMERICAN FOREIGN SERVICE ASSOCIATION

ADS 405 - Telework and Remote Work Program

I. INTRODUCTION

The parties to this Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) are the U.S. Agency for International Development and the American Foreign Service Association (AFSA).

II. AUTHORITY

This MOA is authorized under the provisions of Chapter 10 of the Foreign Service Act and the Framework Agreement between USAID and AFSA.

III. PURPOSE

The purpose of this MOA is to set forth the negotiated terms and conditions concerning the impact and implementation of ADS 405 - Telework and Remote Work Program.

IV. TERMS AND PROVISIONS OF MOA

- a. Prior to its publication, the Agency will provide a final copy of ADS 405 to AFSA, with tracked changes noting any revisions made subsequent to the effective date of this MOA during final Agency review and formatting. If any of the revisions constitute a change of more than a de minimis nature to the conditions of employment of Foreign Service employees, AFSA reserves the right to require further negotiations over the changes. The published ADS chapter is the policy of record for this MOA.

V. OTHER PROVISIONS

- a. Provisions within this MOA will be interpreted in a manner that will not conflict with provisions contained within the Framework Agreement and any applicable law, to include the procedures for negotiating under Article 7 of the Framework Agreement.
- b. If either party becomes aware of significant unanticipated problems that arise following the implementation of this MOU, the parties will inform each other and the parties will meet and discuss and attempt to resolve them as soon as possible.

VI. DURATION

This agreement and ADS 405 shall remain in effect for one year from the effective date of the MOA, as defined below. If neither party gives notice in accordance with paragraph VIII, below, this agreement and ADS 405 shall rollover annually on the anniversary of the effective date of this MOA.

VII. MODIFICATION

This MOA and ADS 405 may be modified or amended at any time upon the mutual written consent of both parties. In the absence of such consent, either party may request negotiations regarding amendment or termination of ADS 405 by giving written notice of its intent to the other party no earlier than 90 calendar days nor later than 60 calendar days prior to the effective date the MOA (or if the agreement has rolled over, the anniversary of the effective date). The MOA and ADS 405 will remain in effect pending satisfaction of the parties' bargaining obligations.

IX. EFFECTIVE DATE

This MOA, two (2) pages in length, shall become effective upon the date of the final signature below.
